DOJ Blesses Clear Channel-AMFM Merger

■ Cumulus changes Clear Channel deal ... again

By WALTER STARLING
R&R WASHINGTON BUREAU
wstarling@rroonline.com

The Department of Justice has given its blessing to Clear Channel Communications' merger with AMFM Inc. The companies will become unified by around Labor Day.

To accomplish the merger, which will create a behemoth comprising 985 stations (a number that is subject to change by the hour), Clear Channel disposed of 107 stations in two dozen markets. But even that deal netted the company $3.1 billion in cash and major station swaps with Regent Communications and Cumulus Media.

After all the math is done, Clear Channel ends up with a market capitalization of $44 billion — a long way from the $175,000 that Lowry Mays invested in his first property, KAJA-FM/San Antonio.

Executives from competitive superpower Infinity Broadcasting did not comment on the merger approval, despite being the beneficiary of 18 spinoff stations. Other major purchasers included Radio One (12 stations), Regent (10), Inner City (nine), Cox Radio (seven) and Chase Partners (six). Even Emmis, which was snubbed in the initial round of spinoffs, picked up a few stations when Clear Channel was told it could not sell any stations to Hispanic Broadcasting, in which Clear Channel has a sizeable investment.

Cumulus Shuffle

In the meantime, Cumulus announced this week that it has amended its deal involving Clear Channel spinoffs for a second time. Back in March, when Clear Channel first announced its spinoffs, Cumulus was to give up five Chattanooga, TN stations and $159 million in exchange for 11 Clear Channel stations. The deal was amended in May, whereby Cumulus would increase the number of stations

Arbitron Kids With Diaries

■ Preteens get diaries for first time

By ROS ROZENCUS

About 1,300 kids under 12 years old were Arbitron diary-keepers earlier this year. The results of their listening will be used with the hope of tapping into the billions of dollars spent on advertising and nonspot marketing targeted to preteens.

Arbitron measured the young listeners at the behest of radio stations belonging to Clear Channel Communications, AMFM Inc. and Emmis Communications. The measurements were done in New York, Los Angeles and Minneapolis.

Specific listening figures haven't been released yet, but Arbitron did share some insight it had gleaned from the diaries. Most importantly: Kids did a fairly

Mays: 'We Must Bring Minorities Into The Loop'

His company was busy getting DOJ approval on the AMFM merger, but Clear Channel Chairman/CEO Lowry Mays made time last week (7/20) for the seventh annual Minority Media & Telecommunications Council Awards Luncheon in Washington, DC.

"The industry must go out of its way to bring minorities into the loop," he said, asking the MMTC to "fight for tax certificates" for selling to minorities. About 40 Clear Channel-AMFM spinoffs are going to minority buyers, including Radio One, which is paying $1.3 billion for 12 stations.

Houston Legend Rosenfeld Dies At 77

'The Padnah' managed KILT-AM & FM for 35 years

Houston radio legend Dickie Rosenfeld, who spent 35 years as President/GM of KILT-AM & FM, died July 19 of congestive heart failure. He was 77.

"The Padnah," as he was affectionately known, was GM of KIKK-AM & KILT-AM for five years before his recent retirement, when his son John took over the position. He had been an integral part of the Houston radio and advertising scene since 1950.

"Dickie was one of America's great broadcasters," Infinity Radio President Dan Mason said. "I am fortunate to have had the opportunity to work with and learn from him over the past 20 years. 'The Padnah' has long been recognized for his leadership and for his ability to foster talent."

During his tenure as President/GM of KILT, Rosenfeld received numerous accolades and awards, including the Silver Medal from the American Advertising Assn. He was Ex-Officio Director of the Houston Livestock Show & Rodeo, Past Director of the Variety Boys Club and chief fund-raiser for KTSU, the campus radio station of Texas Southern University.

He is survived by his wife, Denise, two sons, two daughters and five grandchildren. In lieu of flowers, the family requests that donations be made to the national Kidney Foundation of Southwest Texas, 2400 Augusta Dr., Houston, TX 77057.

Agler Now OM At KOTK & KWJJ/Portland

Boesen set to become PD at WJJ on Aug. 21

KOTK/Portland PD Bruce Agler has been elevated to the newly created position of OM for the Fisher Talk outlet and its FM Country sister, KWJJ. Concurrently, KSKS/Fresno PD Ken Boesen has been hired as KWJJ's new PD, effective Aug. 21. He succeeds Robin Mitchell, who left last month to start an Internet company.

"I expect the team of Bruce and Ken will dramatically impact our future in a positive way," KOTK & KWJJ VP/GM Ron Carter commented. "Both guys are double-smart. They shoot up on radio. They know Country. And they're not afraid to get their hands dirty to win."

Agler joined KOTK as PD in November '97. His background includes programming and operations experience at Country outlets KAKT/Medford, OR; KUGN/Eugene, OR; KRST/Albuquerque; and KIIM/Tucson. "Working with KOTK, Fisher Broadcasting and Ron Carter has been the best gig of my career," Agler commented. "Now it gets even better, as I will be involved with country music once again, while working with one of the most respected and successful Country

Cox Turns In Stellar Q2 Report

■ Saga, Tribune, Gaylord also release earnings numbers

By Ron Roubicek
ronr@rromline.com

Washington — One need only look at the bottom line to see just how well the radio industry is doing. Cox Radio Inc. (Nasdaq: CXR) reported an 18% gain in same-station revenues and a 28% increase in same-station cash flow for the second quarter. The company's per-share earnings of 15 cents easily beat street expectations of 10 cents.

Cox's earnings in the same quarter last year were 38 cents per share, but that included a $23 million gain on the sale of stations in Syracuse, Cox's financial picture was superb in just about every other category as well. Its net revenues ballooned to $95 million from $79 million in Q2 '99, thanks in part to acquisitions in Honolulu, Tampa, Jacksonville, Louisville, Miami and elsewhere. Broadcast cash flow on a groupwide basis rose from $30.7 million to $37.9 million. Cox's BCF margins on a same-station basis increased from 35.3% to 38.4%.

In the first half of 2000 Cox's revenues were $171.5 million, compared to $139 million in the first six months of 1999. BCF increased 28% to $64.6 million, and net income per share was 53 cents vs. 42 cents a year earlier. In its financial filing Cox announced it had terminated an LMA for WCNN-AM/Atlanta on April 2 of this year.

More second-quarter numbers:

• Saga Communications (Nasdaq: SGA) revenues increased 11.6% to $26.2 million (7% on a same-station basis). Broadcast cash flow jumped 18% overall and 15% same-station to $10.7 million. Net income fell from $2.6 million (16 cents per share) to $2.1 million (13 cents) due to a non-recurring $1.3 million charge associated with the sale of Saga's investment in six FM stations in Iceland.

• In its first earnings report since buying Times Mirror Co. for $8 billion, Tribune (NYSE: TRB) said Q2 earnings rose 14% to $119 million (44 cents per share), two cents ahead of First Call analysts' expectations. Tribune's broadcasting and entertainment sector, which includes WGN-AM/Chicago and KEZW, KKHK & KOSI/Denver, reported operating profit rose 34% to a record $142 million, up from $106 million in Q2 '99. Operating revenues increased 20% to $418 million.

• Gaylord Entertainment (NYSE: GET) reported Q2 revenues of $128.7 million, 11.3% higher than in the same quarter in 1999. Operating cash flow was a negative $400,000, compared to a positive $11.4 million the previous year. The company posted a loss of $14.2 million for the quarter (43 cents per share) compared to net income of $700,000 (2 cents) in '99. The company said its numbers were impacted by its investments in two new Opryland Hotel operations in Florida and Texas, as well as a record label and Internet initiatives. Gaylord also owns WWTN-AM and WSM-AM & FM/Nashville.

The Cox results spurred three analysts to reiterate their positive ratings on the issue. Merrill Lynch's Keith Fawcett reiterated his long-term "buy" rating, with a 12- to 18-month target price of $35 per share. First Union's James Boyle and Bear Stearns' Victor Miller both reiterated their "buy" ratings on the issue; Boyle's 12-month target price is $33, while Miller's is $28. Also, Boyle reiterated his "buy" rating on Saga with a $26 target.

Bloomberg BUSINESS BRIEFS

Clear Channel Buys 13 Sunburst Stations

Clear Channel Communications will pay Indianapolis-based Sunburst Media $57 million for KGMV-AM & FM, KGBX-FM, KTOZ-FM & KKUS-FM/Springfield, MO; KAGY-FM & KKYS-FM/Bryan-College Station, TX; and KBBA-AM, KEAN-AM & FM, KEYJ-FM, KHYS-FM & KULL-FM/Arlene, TX. This deal, including all other pending acquisitions, lifts Clear Channel's radio holdings to about 874 stations.

Clear Channel To Sell $3 Billion In Securities

Clear Channel has filed a shelf registration with the SEC to allow it to sell $3 billion in securities. The company would be able to sell any combination of debt securities, preferred and common stock and trust-preferred securities over a two-year period. Clear Channel could also sell warrants and stock purchase contracts and units. The terms of the securities will be available at the time of sale. Clear Channel wasn't specific in stating the reason for the shelf registration, saying only that the proceeds would go toward "general corporate purposes."

Entercom Completes Kansas City Deals

Entercom Communications has closed on its acquisition of KCFX-FM, KCIY-FM, KQRC-FM & KXTR-FM/Kansas City from Sinclair Communications for $126.6 million. At the same time Entercom finalized its divestiture of KCMO-AM & FM and KCFX to Susquehanna for $113 million. Before the Sinclair purchase Entercom owned seven stations in the market; it is now at the FCC maximum of eight in Kansas City.

Cumulus Buys WKQB/Fayetteville, NC

Cumulus Media has purchased Fairfield Broadcasting's Classic Rock WKQB (B107)/Kansas City for $16.5 million. Cumulus, which will begin programming the station under an LMA once the FCC approves the deal, also LMAs WFNC-AM & FM, WQSM-FM & WRCO-FM in the market and awaits closure on those stations.

FCC Begins Implementing 'CORES'

Conducting some business with the FCC will be easier, thanks to the Internet and the commission's CORES system. CORES stands for "Commission Registration System," a web-based, password-protected program that assigns the user a 10-digit registration number for doing business with the FCC. Once CORES is fully implemented, every entity filing an application or paying a fee will be able to identify itself with a registration number. However, the registration number will not replace call signs, license numbers or certification numbers. The FCC says use of the registration number is voluntary, although the commission will consider making it mandatory in the future, and it strongly recommends that people and organizations start using their numbers with all payments. To register online, visit www.fcc.gov and click on the CORES link. A public forum on the matter will be held July 31 at the commission.

Radio One Completes Bank Financing

Radio One has completed a $750 million senior credit facility, used primarily to finance the $1.3 billion acquisition of 12 Clear Channel-AM/FM spinoffs. Including pending deals, Radio One owns or operates 50 stations.

SBS Announces $150 Million Credit Facility

Spanish Broadcasting System has secured a senior credit facility that includes $125 million in term loans to fund acquisitions, including the pending purchase of Rodriguez Communications, and a six-year, $25 million revolving credit facility to fund working capital. Lehman Brothers handled the paper.

Moody's Confirms Ceridian Ratings

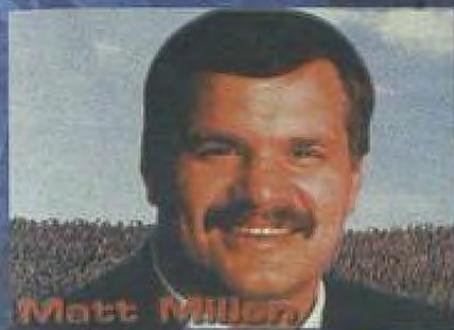

Ceridian's announcement last week that it would become a separate company from Arbitron prompted Moody's to confirm the "Baa3" rating on Ceridian's senior unsecured debt. The outlook remains stable. Moody's

Why Buckets Beat Thimbles.

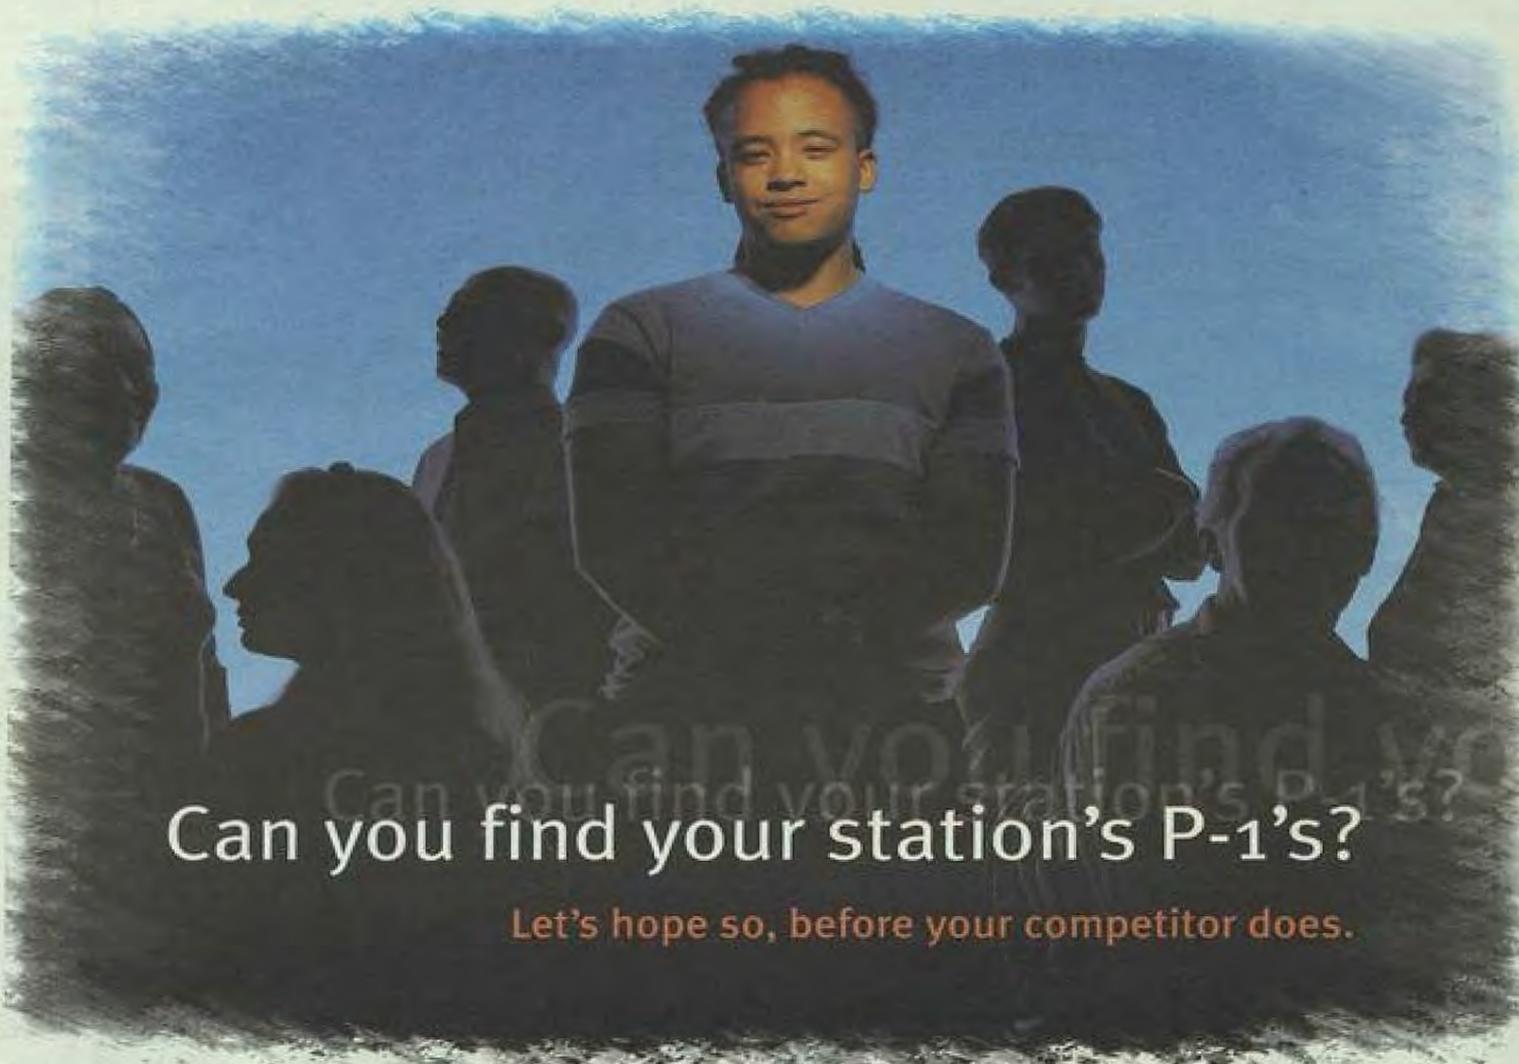

The web-based RFP. A message to media buyers and sellers. The bigger your pool of options, the better. By fully converting the Request For Proposal process onto the Internet, we've created a bigger, better tool for collecting and managing options in media, leading the way to a truly functional media e-marketplace. Buyers get more choices. Sellers get more buyers. Both get a pool of options that's anything but small. All with real technology, no vaporware. In fact, we're the only site today where you can buy media, from the RFP through negotiation to the invoice, without ever leaving the Internet. It's exactly how you buy and sell media now. Only better.

Can you find your station's P-1's?

Can you find your station's P-1's?

Let's hope so, before your competitor does.

Oldies, Rock or Hip Hop. Can you pick your own listeners out of the crowd?

Successful stations can. They use DMR's sophisticated targeting tools that include Arbitron's PD Advantage, MapMaker, Cluster Coding, Block Group targeting, and At Work profiles. These stations know the importance of P-1 listening. They also know the unnecessary cost of reaching people who simply don't count.

DMR helps these stations create the right marketing strategy, message and tactics to motivate their P-1's and potential P-1's. And DMR has the tools, including e-marketing and fax programs, to keep those P-1's loyal. From direct mail and telemarketing to the hottest e-marketing tactics, DMR does your target marketing from start to finish.

If you still think every person counts and mass marketing still works, you need to sit down with Arbitron's PD Advantage. And maybe a beer.

believes Ceridian's current credit profile will remain substantially unchanged until the transaction closes and that all existing rated debt will be repaid at that time.

Moody's Rates Infinity Securities

Infinity's $3.25 billion commercial paper program received a "Prime-2" short-term rating from Moody's, which says the rating is based on Infinity's ability to generate significant free cash flow, as well as the company's size, geographic diversity and low ongoing capital requirements. The outlook for the short-term rating is "stable." Moody's noted that the scope of Infinity's operations allows the company to tap into the national advertising market, making it more competitive with other ad media and less dependent on local and regional ad spending. Still, Moody's said, Infinity's complete dependence on radio and outdoor for ad revenues exposes the company to national economic cycles.

USARadio.com Closes Ansel Project Merger

Last November USARadio.com, then a private company known as USA Radio Network, announced it would acquire Colorado-based, publicly held Ansel Project Corp. in a tax-free reverse merger. At the time a source close to the transaction said Ansel was set up as a public shell company that sought a private company to merge with in order to speed up the process of going public. Since then USARadio.com's shareholders have approved a proposal to move the company's incorporation from Texas to Delaware. USARadio.com's Tim Maddoux tells R&R the company isn't currently trading its stock, but it is "actively seeking investment capital. We hope to have a significant portion of what we want to raise by the end of the year. Our goal is to bypass the OTC bulletin board and go straight to Nasdaq." Maddoux adds that the company plans to expand its network programming and Internet presence and will also look into radio station acquisitions.

Capital Radio To Bid On U.K. Digital Licenses

Capital Radio, the United Kingdom's largest commercial radio operator, has joined forces with two radio consortiums to secure digital radio licenses throughout the U.K. Capital will work with XMR (which includes Chrysalis Radio, Jazz fm and Guardian Media Group) and Switchdigital (comprising Clear Channel Communications, Wireless Group, SMG and Carphone Warehouse). Both consortiums have already won digital licenses in London and other areas within the U.K.

SALES & MARKETING

THE BEHIND-THE-SCENES WIZARDS

Meet some of radio's most successful marketing professionals

By Pam Baker

Sales & Marketing Editor
pambaker@ronline.com

In celebration of the R&R Marketing theme issue, I thought I'd introduce you to some of the country's most innovative marketing and promotion executives. I've asked this year's R&R Industry Achievement Award nominees for Marketing Director of the Year to share some background and words of wisdom.

PAM BAKER

Theresa Beyer
VP/Creative Marketing
AMFM, New York

Theresa Beyer served as Director/Marketing & Advertising for WHITZ (Z100)/New York before being promoted six months ago to VP/Creative Marketing for AMFM, New York. Her career includes stops at WOR, WLIR and WRCN in Long Island, NY. She was also Jim Kerr's first morning show producer at WPLJ and developed promotional campaigns for the ABC Radio Networks, WCBS-FM/New York, Old World Bakeries and Harley-Davidson. Beyer's first job in radio was as Creative Services Supervisor for the RKO Radio Networks in New York. "I was part of the original team that launched the network," she says.

What attracted you to radio?

"I remember, as a young girl living in Japan, tucking my little transistor radio under my pillow to listen to Armed Forces Radio, the only English-language broadcaster at the time. As a child, hearing the music, news and information in English that I knew my friends were listening to back home in the States meant the world to me. Television, magazines and newspapers were all in Japanese. I felt very alienated. For me, radio became a critical bridge between two very different cultures."

What is the biggest challenge a marketing/promotion director faces today?

"The first is to develop the ability to look beyond 'industry standards' to find solutions to your station's marketing challenges. It's easy to get very myopic when it comes to marketing solutions. I did direct mail at my last station, and it was great, so that's what we should do here." With all the new technologies that become available daily, there are so many options that didn't exist last year, or even last quarter.

"Another challenge that keeps me up is, how do we achieve integration and synchronicity across all of our platforms? It used to be that stations had to concern themselves only with providing the best experience for their listeners, clients, staff and shareholders. With all of the multiplatform opportunities that exist today, it's a virtual smorgasbord for marketing, programming and sales. The possibilities are endless. How can we get our entire treasure trove of properties — outdoor, the SFX facilities and span of services, the radio network, our Internet capabilities and our radio stations — working in tandem to achieve all of our programming and revenue goals?"

What event or project was your most successful, and why?

"Immediately Z100's Jingle Ball comes to mind. Every station worth its cume does events, particularly live station concerts. Jingle Ball's success really comes from continually looking to raise the bar. How can we make it bigger, better, more interactive? We continually break Jingle Ball so that we can go beyond the norm and traditional to make P1s out of everyone in the metro, including clients."

Do you have a mentor? If so, who is it, and how have they been inspirational?

"John Fullam [AMFM Regional VP and GM of Z100] is certainly someone I respect and look up to tremendously. He's a natural-born leader and has a real understanding of marketing, positioning, business systems, customer service and human dynamics that I think really makes him unique among his peers. Another mentor for me has been Gerry Tabio, who runs Chancellor Marketing Group and Creative Resources for AMFM. He can take the most complex situations and help you map out the solutions. He is the greatest detangler of knots that I've ever seen, and he always does it with a grace and humor that makes any challenge fun and exciting."

John O'Brien
Promotion Director
KISW-FM/Seattle

"My first job in radio was at KQMQ/Honolulu as Traffic Manager," explains John O'Brien. "I had just moved to Honolulu from Boston and was trying to get my foot in the door at a radio station. I was hired when the regular traffic manager went on emergency maternity leave with twins. She was ordered to stay in bed and essentially trained me over the phone."

"Within a week I had a three-page spot-bump sheet, and I was having nightmares that the station would deduct the cost of the spots from my paycheck. I would wake up in a cold sweat, dreaming that I owed the station thousands of dollars!"

In 1994 O'Brien moved to Boston, where he joined WAAF as Marketing Director before joining KISW/Seattle in 1997.

What attracted you to radio?

"At 13 years old I won a complete catalog of Beatles albums on The Dale Dorman Show on WRKO/Boston. I went to the station to claim a stack of albums that I couldn't even lift. The WRKO folks took me on a tour of the station and even introduced me to Dale. From that day on I was hooked on radio. 'Uncle Dale' is still working his magic in Boston."

What event or project was your most successful, and why?

"I'd have to say the first CD project I was involved in, the WAAF Unusual Suspects CD. These days station compilation CDs are turnkey projects, but five years ago we didn't have a success model to borrow from a sister station.

"The project worked on many different levels. We created a product that reinforced the station's image. We generated NTR with sponsored CD-signing parties. We raised a huge amount of money for our charity. We received a great deal of positive press and ended up selling over 30,000 copies of the CD. It was a kick to check out the weekly Boston Soundscan and see that Unusual Suspects was outselling Pearl Jam and other mega-artists."

What event or project was the biggest failure, and why?

"Back at KQMQ in the early 90's we ran a TSL contest that was doomed from the start. 'Win Whatever You Need' was basically Let's Make a Deal on the radio, with listeners calling in to choose the prize behind door number one, two or three. In the promo we teased a slew of fabulous prizes like trips, cars, cash, computers, etc. We were certain that our clients would jump at the chance to be part of this high-profile promotion.

"We were wrong. After a week we had given away the few big prizes we had. The AEs were still trying to convince clients to jump on board, but with no luck. By week three we were scraping the bottom of the prize closet and giving away 'a year's supply of CDs' as a grand prize. I remember begging the PD to kill the contest, but to no avail.

"By week four the competition was running an attack promo mocking our contest and lack of prizes. It was only then that 'Win Whatever You Need' came to its ignominious end. It was a good lesson in Promotion Director 101: Line up the prizes before you go on the air with the contest!"

Marie Tolson-Perry
Director/Marketing & Promotions
WDAS AM & FM/
Philadelphia

In 1991 Marie Tolson-Perry started her broadcasting career in cable advertising sales and special-event marketing. She joined WDAS/Philadelphia in 1993. Over the past seven years the station has changed ownership several times, going from Unity Broadcasting to "family owned" Beasley Broadcasting to Evergreen-turned-Chancellor Media to current owner AMFM, soon to be Clear Channel. Whew!

What is the biggest challenge a marketing/promotion director faces today?

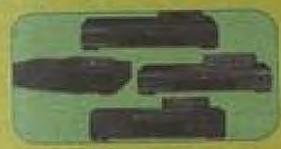

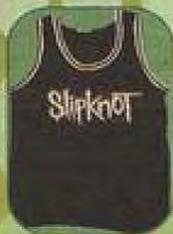

"Cutbacks in our budgets and still having the challenge of producing results and outperforming your previous success."

What event or project was your most successful, and why?

"Unity Week Day, a weeklong celebration of cultural activities produced by the radio station that culminates with Unity Day, the largest outdoor, radio-driven event in the country. Each year the event attracts upward of a half a million attendees on Philadelphia's historic Ben Franklin Parkway.

"This is an event where people can come together and enjoy a day with their family without incident. We have six stages of live entertainment, over 200 vendors, hundreds of community organizations and a host of pavilions that offer meaningful information. This year we will have Patti LaBelle on our Main Stage and Kirk Franklin performing on our Gospel Stage."

Do you have a mentor? If so, who is it, and how have they been inspirational?

"I have several. However, I would say that the one who stands out most is Kermie Anderson, who drilled the following phrase into my head: 'Good, better, best, never let it rest until your good is better and your better is best.'"

Von Freeman VP/Marketing Clear Channel, Los Angeles

As the winner of R&R's Industry Achievement Award for Marketing Director of the Year for the past three years, Von Freeman has proven to be one of the industry's most innovative and creative marketing executives. He's worked at KBEQ (Q104)/Kansas City, XTRA-AM & FM (91X) in San Diego, WKRQ (Q102)/Cincinnati and, for the past three years, in Los Angeles at KHS-FM, XTRA and KACD & KBCD (Channel 103.1).

What attracted you to radio?

"My love of music, first and foremost. I loved when my family was in the car, singing along with the radio. The DJ would make us laugh, and the music would bring us together. Those were the happiest times of my childhood. The radio was always a good friend."

What event or project was your most successful and why?

"I've worked hard over the past 10 years to develop the position of marketing director into more of a creative role, a role that positively affects ratings and revenue. It's extremely important to me that I continually push myself to come up with more creative ways to expose radio to my target audience. I've done that through developing TV commercials and stunts in a more unique fashion. I also take great pains in being a student of popular culture. Some of the successful projects that I'm very proud of include:

- Co-creator and co-Executive Producer, with Paul Joseph and Anthony Eaton, of the upcoming Radio Music Awards on ABC. In its second year, the show will air this Nov. 4 or 11 on ABC.

- Created and produced the extremely successful concert series Wango Tango in 1998, 1999 and 2000.

- Created and produced two of the most successful event series in Cincinnati history, 'The One Earth Parties' and 'Party at Sawyer Point.'

- In 1990 I arranged for 10,000 White Castle sliders to be delivered to U.S. troops during the war in Panama.

My personal motto is: "Be creative, be interesting, be anything but normal, and you'll get noticed!"

What event or project was the biggest failure, and why?

"It was an event in Cincinnati called 'The World's Largest Frat Party.' We hired The Romantics and Otis Day & The Knights to create an Animal House-like feel for our event. It was the beginning of the college school year, and we thought we'd throw a party for the University of Cincinnati and Xavier. The station was Q102, and I had just moved to Cincinnati from San Diego.

"For some reason I thought we'd be all right doing a huge event in an outdoor venue on Oct. 3 with no pre-sale. It snowed and rained, and no one showed up. I remember having a box of 25,000 unsold tickets. The event remains one of the biggest embarrassments at Q102. However, it was fun watching Otis Day smoke a joint in the trailer while we got drunk. I kept saying, 'Otis, my man.' Needless to say, that was my last show with Otis."

Do you have a mentor? If so, who is it, and how have they been inspirational?

"My first GM in Dodge City, KS, Bob Kirby. Randy Miller for showing me that fearlessness works and helping me get started in promotions. Randy Michaels, the genius of radio. Tom Owens, who has a brilliant radio mind and lets his staff get it done. The staff of 91X in the early '90s for showing me how image works. Dan Kieley, who understands radio better than anyone I know. Jimmy Steal, who let me grow into what I am today. Jim Bryant for his event-style marketing.

"Rick Dees, who consistently has competitors come at him and still stands on top of the mountain. Roy Laughlin for his relentless will to win. Charlie Rahilly, a sales god. Paul Joseph for his personal power and creative partnership. And, finally, Amy Freeman, who amazes me every day with her detailed yet creative nature and her ability to sell like no one else I've ever met."

Paul Williams Promotion Director KPLX-FM (99.5 The Wolf)/ Dallas

During Paul Williams' high school and college years he worked at WTAL, WBGW and WGLF (Gulf 104) in Tallahassee, FL. "My first job in broadcasting was Sunday mornings at WTAL, playing Power Line, Master Control, Billy Graham and music for a couple of hours," Williams says.

His resume includes stops at WSSX (95SX)/Charleston, WBJW (KJ105)/Orlando, KDWB/Minneapolis, WAPW (Power 99)/Atlanta and WEGX (Eagle 106)/Philadelphia. He also spent six years at Universal Studios Florida in the promotions and marketing department. He's been part of The Wolf team for the past year and a half.

What attracted you to radio?

"It beats having a real job! Actually, I was an accounting major in college while I worked on the air, and I fell in love with the business. I switched to a marketing major my senior year and saw how perfectly every course fit in with the radio business. I haven't been able to get it out of my system."

What is the biggest challenge a marketing/promotions director faces today?

"Creating new and innovative promotions on a limited budget. The biggest challenge is that you not only manage your own promotion staff, but, in many ways, the sales staff and the programming staff as well. You have to promote your department within the company while you're promoting the station's product. It takes a good juggler to keep all those balls in the air."

What event was your most successful, and why?

"We do a Memorial Day weekend concert with all Texas acts called Wolf Dance. We had over 30,000 listeners in the Fort Worth stockyards for a paid concert featuring performances by Robert Earl Keen, Pat Green, Charlie Robison and seven other bands."

What event was the biggest failure, and why?
"We did a gas giveaway the day the Fort Worth tornados hit. Needless to say, we received zero press coverage."

Sue Muzzin Marketing Director KGO/San Francisco

"My first job in broadcasting was as a receptionist at Meyers Muldoon and Ketchum advertising agency," remembers Sue Muzzin. She then joined KGO/San Francisco as Executive Assistant to the GSM and LSM. In her spare time Muzzin created the station's first-ever Sunday-morning kids call-in show, which helped earn her a promotion into the marketing department.

Muzzin then jumped at the chance to manage the Walt Disney Attractions office in San Francisco for over 10 years, marketing the Disneyland and Walt Disney World theme parks throughout Northern California, Nevada, Las Vegas and Portland. She rejoined KGO in February 1998 as Director of Marketing.

What attracted you to radio?

"Free-thinking, entrepreneurial spirits. I have found the most amazing, talented and creative individuals (nonmainstream types) in the radio business, both onstage and behind the scenes. Radio is fast-paced, dynamic and exciting — truly a inspiring environment."

What is the biggest challenge a marketing/promotions director faces today?

"The industry is much more competitive than ever before. The need to stay on top of the competition is critical. The challenge is to execute a strategic, fully integrated marketing plan with a limited staff and budget, focusing on branding, come/TSL-building and revenue-generating programs (special events, publicity, NTR, promotions, community programs, advertising, web and alliance marketing). In addition, this plan must also always include a look toward the future with attention to the changes that new technologies bring."

What event was your most successful, and why?

"KGO Radio Celebrates 75 Years of Broadcasting at EXPO KGO. This station-produced event was full reflective of KGO radio: talks and seminars with the likes of Paul Harvey, Bob Brinker and 49ers Coach Steve Mariucci [KGO is the official radio broadcaster home of the San Francisco 49ers].

"In addition to the main stage, EXPO KGO featured four client-sponsored zones: the Health Fitness and Sports Court; the KGO Cafe; the Financial Exchange; and the Family Fun Zone hosted by KMKY, Radio Disney. The event attracted over 8,000 listeners. Booth space was sold to clients, and we raised a record-breaking $576,600 during the 20th annual KGO Leukemia Care-athon for the Leukemia & Lymphoma Society of America."

Do you have a mentor? If so, who is it, and how have they been inspirational?

"I do not have one mentor, but I am always in a place where I am learning and being inspired by bosses, colleagues, my staff and family. I have been extremely lucky to have people around me who have taken the time to share and teach. That is the reason I have taken the positions that I have had. My hires are no exception to the rule. I learn a great deal from these young, bright and enthusiastic up-and-coming talents. Guaranteed, one of them will someday be signing my paychecks."

R&R GM spotlight

KIM GUTHRIE
VP/GM — WBAB-FM, WBLI-FM &
WHFM-FM/Long Island, NY (Cox Radio)

■ From TV weathergirl to Long Island head honcho

In this week's GM Spotlight, we acknowledge Cox Radio's Kim Guthrie. With more than 18 years of broadcasting experience, this dynamic leader "motivates and keeps the staffs pushing to do things bigger and better," comments one R&R reader. "Besides being a hard worker, she's a lot of fun," adds another colleague. Congratulations!

I decided to enter the world of broadcasting because:

"I was already working in television news when I met my future husband (who was a Hot AC program director in Minnesota at the time). After hanging out with his friends, I realized that radio people were a real hoot compared to television people — and that was that."

First job in broadcasting:

"My first three paid (if you can call it that) jobs in broadcasting were as a television news reporter. First at WQAD-TV8 in the Quad Cities [Moline, IL], then at WOI-TV5 in Des Moines and KAAL-TV6 in Austin. I went on to work as an AE for WLXR-AM & FM in LaCrosse, WI and WLUM/Milwaukee. I was promoted to LSM and then GSM at WLUM (while working for Green Bay Packer Willie Davis). I then became GSM at WMYX, WEMP and WEZW in Milwaukee, then GSM for KSTP-FM in Minneapolis/St. Paul."

Career highlights:

"I'd have to say I'm happiest about how our Cox Radio Long Island team has pulled together to grow two heritage radio stations to the next level. We've really put WBLI on the map as one of the leaders in CHR radio. It regularly beats the CHR behemoth, Z100 [WHTZ/New York], right here in its own backyard. This spring we rebuilt our mainstream Rock station, WBAB, with an entirely new staff. The spring Arbitron was recently released, and both stations posted their highest ratings in nearly 10 years. We had to make some really tough decisions with personnel, and it totally paid off."

The most challenging aspect of being a GM:

"Helping people see that it's insanity to do the same thing over and over and expect different (or better) results."

My most unforgettable moment at a radio station:

"I wish I could bottle the incredible pride I had for my staff at WBLI's sold-out Summer Jam Concert in 1999, held for the first time at the world-famous Jones Beach Amphitheater, a beautiful venue overlooking the Atlantic Ocean. The show sold out in five days, and our promotional staff had completely papered Jones Beach with our new 'BLI logo. That, and hearing a packed house of 'BLI fans scream "BLI" over and over at the top of their lungs — we all had goose bumps. It was the single biggest thing 'BLI had ever done, and it showed what fabulous unity we had as a team."

I'm most proud of:

"The unique decision my husband, Todd, and I made 10 years ago to have him quit his job in the radio business to become a full-time dad and raise our three daughters, now 10, 7 and 4. Back then some people thought we were nuts, when we were really blazing a new trail. Then again, see me in a few years, and we'll probably have one hell of a therapy bill. Ha!"

The best words of advice I've ever received were:

"I like the Platinum Rule, which is altogether different from the Golden Rule. It's not about treating others as you would like to be treated; it means treating them as they would like to be treated. It's tailoring your management style to suit each individual. I think if you treat people as though they make a difference, they will."

You'd be surprised to know that...

"I worked for two years as a television weathergirl before I left TV for radio."

The GM Spotlight is selected by your nominations. Acknowledge the GM who made a difference in your career! E-mail nominations to pambaker@rtronline.com.

MANAGEMENT

PROTECTING OURSELVES AGAINST WORKPLACE VIOLENCE

By Linda Madonna Recently, we have all been affected to some degree by outbursts of violence in our nation's streets, schools and workplaces. Each time such an incident occurs, the ensuing media coverage chips away at our sense of safety and security.

Unfortunately, statistics reinforce the idea that we must now exercise more caution in our daily lives, including in our places of business. The Justice Department estimates that 1 million violent crimes occur in the workplace each year. We are all vulnerable. However, being cognizant of and prepared for any potential threat can go a long way toward protecting the physical and psychological well-being of your company.

THREATS FROM THE OUTSIDE

First, while danger can come from internal or external sources, over two-thirds of workplace attacks come from strangers, visitors or customers. Your company should take these basic security precautions to protect employees.

- Have security on the premises before and after office hours.
- Install "panic buttons" in the reception area and at other entry points.
- Use closed-circuit TV in elevators, stairwells and lobbies.
- Limit access to the workplace, and provide badges for employees and visitors.

THREATS FROM THE INSIDE

Perhaps even more difficult to control are threats to a company's safety from within. While there are no foolproof methods of preventing outbreaks, these steps may lessen the likelihood of such an occurrence.

- Enact a "zero tolerance" policy for violent or threatening behavior, with clear consequences.
- Screen all job applicants carefully, and do not finalize hiring until all screening is complete.
- Encourage employees to confidentially report any signs of potentially violent behavior.
- When terminating an employee, always give him or her a fair warning period and offer additional counseling through an Employee Assistance Program or other program run by a trained professional.

You may also wish to establish a "crisis team" to go into action in the event of an emergency. Assign individuals specific tasks, such as calling 911 or leading others from the scene.

IDENTIFYING POTENTIALLY DANGEROUS PERSONALITIES

While personality conflict is cited as the leading cause of workplace violence, clearly the use of violence to resolve a workplace issue is the sign of a troubled individual. Such a person has often shown clues that the violent episode was imminent. While there are no sure ways to predict a person's future behavior, the following characteristics have been linked to potentially violent personalities.

- A history of violence.
- A migratory job history.
- Poor interpersonal skills and a tendency to be withdrawn or a "loner."
- Emotional problems, including any form of substance abuse.
- Antagonistic relationships with others.
- An obsession or zealotry, whether in regard to weapons, sexuality, religion or the job itself.

On top of these general characteristics, look for any significant change in behavior, whether it's a deteriorating appearance, a change in emotional state or a sudden change in work patterns. All could be signs that a person with violent tendencies may be at the "end of the rope."

It is important to recognize that someone in this mind-set could be particularly sensitive to triggering events — being fired or laid off, passed over for a promotion or criticized for job performance. Events in an individual's personal life could also serve as a trigger — for instance, a benchmark anniversary or birthday, a divorce or the death of a loved one.

If faced with confronting a hostile person whom you feel may become violent, gently try to defuse his or her anger. Allow the person to fully express the grievance. Actively listen, and attempt to fully understand without agreeing. Always be courteous, and never attack or respond with anger. Allow the person to suggest a solution, and if he or she allows it, suggest calling in a counselor.

Workplace violence is a serious problem. If you suspect that you may be working with someone prone to violence, you should not hesitate to share your feelings with management, in addition to someone from your Employee Assistance Program or other trained professional. As always, preventing violence before it occurs is the best solution.

RADIO GETS RESULTS

SUCCESS STORIES FROM THE RAB

PUSHING THAT 'HOT BUTTON'

When local retail clients are faced with battling the mega-retailer, it's radio to the rescue! Instead of being gobble up by the competition, a retailer can fight back by zooming in on the "hot buttons" that grab a consumer's attention. WBDK/Algoma, WI worked closely with Bay Pharmacy to reinforce the store's slogan, "Your health is our concern" by instituting a policy where the store would no longer sell tobacco products. The community responded positively to the campaign with a huge increase in first-time customers. Find out what separates your client from their competition, and use your marketing expertise to help redirect your client's strategy.

Category: Pharmacy
Market: Sturgeon Bay, WI (including Door and Kewaunee)
Submitted by: WBDK
Client: Bay Pharmacy

SITUATION: Bay Pharmacy, in Sturgeon Bay, WI, needed a prescription to cure a case of declining sales. Not unlike many local retailers across the country, it felt the sting of competition when Wal-Mart came to the 10,000-resident area. The pharmacy, a 33-year-old local business, sells everything from medical supplies to arts and crafts to jewelry and other gifts, but it distinguishes itself from the competition by stocking a wide variety of generic drugs. To further compete with the mega-retailers, Bay Pharmacy also wanted to capitalize on its strong heritage in the community as a home-grown, and therefore trustworthy, business. The pharmacy was also struggling to overcome an image as upscale and expensive.

OBJECTIVE: Bay Pharmacy wanted to increase overall sales — sales which were going to Wal-Mart — while also boosting its name recognition. The retailer needed to shake the upscale perception and connect with a larger segment of the community than it was reaching. Rather than go away quietly, this hometown retailer was going to dig in and fight.

CAMPAIGN: The annual campaign featured spots written by WBDK. The creative highlighted Bay Pharmacy's mission statement: "Your health is our concern." The campaign ran in a typical Total Audience Plan model, with commercials running in all dayparts. The pharmacy also launched an effective public relations campaign that ran concurrently and featured the store's general manager, who went on the air to announce that his store would no longer sell tobacco products. The sacrifice meant losing up to 8% of the pharmacy's monthly sales but it was a gamble that would create a greater sense of responsible corporate citizenship.

RESULTS: Forty-seven percent of first-time customers attracted by radio in the campaign's first year returned to the store to have prescriptions refilled. Bay Pharmacy enjoyed its record month in business after just six months of strong radio use. During that month the pharmacy filled more than 750 prescriptions, and 128 of those came from former Wal-Mart customers. The client is so pleased with the radio campaign that it has cut its newspaper budget by 30%, devoting $5,000 per month to radio and annual campaigns running on three stations.

FROM THE RAB'S INSTANT BACKGROUND REPORT

Most important reasons for shopping at a specific pharmacy (more than one answer possible): Location, 90%; pharmacy will accept an insurance card without problems, 70%; ease of getting a prescription filled, 50%; ability to get a prescription filled over the phone, 50%. (CareData Reports Int'l 1999)

Prescription drug sales in 1998, by percentage of dollars attributed to each retail channel: Traditional chain drug stores, 40.3%; independent drug stores, 25.7%; mail order, 12.8%; food stores, 11.1%; mass merchandisers, 10.1%. (National Association of Chain Drug Stores, 1999)

FROM THE RAB'S RADIO MARKETING GUIDE AND FACT BOOK

"Competitive test scores from the PreTesting Company underscored radio's powerful brand imagery capabilities. Respondents recalled the 40 messages conveyed by radio commercials 51% of the time, compared to just 38% of TV key messages. An updated study by the PreTesting Company using 84 pairs of radio and TV commercials in a real-life setting has found that radio executions often outperform those on television. Unaware of the purpose of the test, target audience participants were asked to recall specific main messages after their selection of either, choosing from three different television programs or four different radio stations (they could change channels at will throughout the 45-minute presentation)."

The Digital Video People

MANAGEMENT

BECOMING A GREAT LISTENER

By Dick Kazan Would you like to know one of the most powerful secrets of success? It's so simple, yet it could dramatically advance your career and make you far more popular. It's also the key to becoming the brilliant conversationalist you've always wanted to be, even if you're an introvert. What is it? It's being a great listener.

Why is it so powerful? When you listen attentively, you're telling the speaker, "I'm so interested in what you say that I'm going to give it the respect it deserves and tune out any distractions. You have my undivided attention." That makes that individual feel important, something we all desire. You can then respond intelligently to what is said, which is the essence of brilliant conversation.

Sigmund Freud was renowned for his willingness to listen. How to Win Friends and Influence People author Dale Carnegie quotes a man who was deeply moved by Freud's listening capability. "Never had I seen such concentrated attention. There was none of that piercing, 'soul penetrating' gaze business. His eyes were mild and genial. His voice was low and kind. His gestures were few. But the attention he gave me, his appreciation of what I said, even when I said it badly, was extraordinary. You've no idea what it meant to be listened to like that."

Think of how highly people would regard you if you followed Freud's practice and listened that attentively. But instead, what often occurs is described here with humor by writer Sharon Bradshaw: "Recently, I telephoned my doctor's office to make an appointment. When the receptionist answered the phone, I stated succinctly, 'Good morning. This is Sharon Bradshaw, and I'd like to make an appointment with Dr. Deering about a sinus infection.'

"Without pause or pleasure, she asked, 'Who's calling?' In my ever-so-clever way I queried, 'Does the name Sharon Bradshaw ring a bell?' The answer to which was, 'What?' I knew immediately that I would be entertaining no one but myself by continuing with my particular version of sparkling banter, so I simply said, 'My name is Sharon Bradshaw.'

"Which doctor do you want to see?" Of course I was tempted, but I decided to take the high road: 'I'd like to see Dr. Deering, the ear, nose and throat specialist. I think I may have a sinus infection.' 'Dr. Deering's next available appointment is May 20 at 9am,' she offered. 'That will be fine, thank you,' I said. By now my patience was returning, and I felt compassion for this young woman who must receive hundreds of calls a week and must find it difficult to remain even mildly interested in each and every caller. 'Patience is a virtue,' I was thinking when this young woman I was just beginning to like interrupted my thoughts by asking, 'What will you be seeing the doctor for?'

"I'm hoping that Dr. Deering, as an ear, nose and throat specialist, can explain the correlation between the ability to hear and the willingness to listen. At least as it relates to his own front office."

Like that receptionist, the temptation we all face is to tune out because we're so busy, or, instead of listening, to think about what we want to say while absorbing little or nothing of what is said. The next time you feel that urge, put your index finger across your lips, which will make it impossible to speak, and consider the nearly 2,000-year-old words of the Greek philosopher Epictetus, who said, "Nature has given to men one tongue but two ears that we may hear from others twice as much as we speak."

Dick Kazan is a successful entrepreneur who founded one of the largest computer leasing corporations in the United States and is a successful Southern California real estate investor. E-mail your comments or questions to him at rkazan@ix.netcom.com.

THE ROAD TO SUCCESS

$SALES TIP of the WEEK

Chris Stonick
President, Stonick Recruitment
FL. Lauderdale, FL

Recruitment advertising is one of the hottest revenue areas in radio today. It is an absolute gold mine. You will find that recruitment advertising is money that can be had today, tomorrow, next week, next month and next year.

One of the big mistakes that many AEs make when they get at recruitment marketing is to only go after the newspaper dollars. Well, you know what, folks? That's just a small, small amount of the money that's available to you.

Sure, in most cities in America more money is spent in the classified section of the newspaper than on all of the radio stations combined. How much money? There are reports that it's up to a billion annually. You need to get a piece of this money for yourself, or you're missing a big chance.

But where else is recruitment money spent? Well, it's not just the newspaper. You have to expand your mind a little bit. You have to ask enough questions on the first call.

You should be talking to clients about headhunters, search firms, trade magazines, job fairs, student recruitment, websites, job recruitment, clinical research laboratories, unions and placement agencies, because the money is spent in all these different areas. Don't limit yourself to just the newspaper.

The mistake many AEs make at the beginning is that they tell the client, "How much did this ad cost you last weekend?" The client may say, "That ad cost me $500."

If they're in a top-10 market, the AE at that point may think, "Oh my gosh, this is someone who spends only $500 a week, and my commercials are going for $800 apiece. I have no shot. This is the wrong client for me."

What you really need to do is keep asking questions. Dig a little bit and find out what their budgets really are. The question to ask with every first call is: "What is your total annual recruiting budget?" If you know the answer to that question, you are half home.

Radio Recruitment Marketing with Chris Stonick is available as a four-video program. Call the RAB at (800) 232-3131 for more information.

MARKETING YOUR OWN RADIO PRODUCT

By Christa Mallick Dahlander

Marketing: We in radio do it so well for our clients. Countless businesses and products have been built on a solid foundation of radio marketing — Motel 6, Metabolife and Amazon.com, to name just a few. But how do we fare when it comes to marketing ourselves? Is marketing your radio station a priority for you, or do the shoemaker's children go barefoot?

Right now, in these heady times of continually increasing radio revenues and sold-out inventory, it is extremely easy to become lazy and fail to devote the necessary time and energy to marketing your station. Don't make that costly mistake. In this age of increasing competition for consumers' attention, we must not only come up with better ways to market our clients, but also, just as importantly, to market ourselves.

Remember those companies I mentioned above? Their radio campaigns succeeded because they established a clear brand identity for the client. Our medium's power to build brand identity is well established, as demonstrated by the RAB's interactive CD-ROM, Blueprint for Results: Building Your Business With Radio. Although Blueprint is targeted to a station's advertisers, its lessons are just as applicable to the station itself. So how can you promote your station's identity — its brand — to your market?

Enter the marketing director. The marketing (or promotion) director at a radio station is no longer a flunky who drives the van and hands out prizes during live broadcasts at local car dealerships. The marketing director must be an analytical thinker and have a strategic plan to market the station to existing as well as prospective listeners. Of course, the flip side of this is that a marketing director must bring more to the table than just two hands and a driver's license; he or she must have the skills necessary to function as an integral part of the management team.

The marketing department of any organization is often mistakenly thought of as a money pit — a department that spends tons of money with no measurable return on investment. That couldn't be further from the truth. While marketing may not generate a direct revenue stream, the benefits of a solid marketing effort contribute greatly to overall station revenue. How? By raising the station's profile, which attracts listeners, which in turn makes the station more attractive to advertisers.

Just knowing who your listeners are — knowing your demo — isn't enough. A marketing director should be able to easily identify with how and why your core listeners behave the way they do, anticipating their needs and wants. The marketing director must obtain superior knowledge of the station's listeners and what they care about most in their daily lives. With that knowledge in hand, he or she can develop marketing messages tailored to the listeners rather than simply shoved at them. Ultimately, this kind of targeted marketing will boost the station's personality and thus build station loyalty and attract new listeners.

The good news is, marketing your radio station does not have to cost a fortune. In today's networked world, a solid, consistent marketing effort need no longer mean spending a lot of money. A resourceful marketing director will find ways to work within his or her budget and use less-expensive marketing tools, such as the Internet and e-mail, when necessary. Hire a great marketing director, and your investment will be returned exponentially.

You must market your station on a consistent basis, and you must rely on a savvy marketing director to accomplish the station's goals. It will mean more success for your station, more success for your clients and more success for you. Remember, it may be the program director who's responsible for Time Spent Listening, but it's the marketing director who's responsible for new come — and what radio station is not going profit from new come?

Napster, Gnutella And MP3: The Rapidly Changing Face Of The Music Industry

■ A frequent RAIN contributor gives his views on the music-sharing controversy

By Kurt Hanson

RAIN: Radio And Internet Newsletter

KURT
HANSON

For the past few months in RAIN we've been keeping an eye on the entire MP3, Napster and RIAA issue for a couple of reasons. First, the health of the American record industry is, of course, important to the health of the radio industry. And second, if today's younger generation gets hooked on making their own MP3 playlists instead of listening to radio, that's not good for the radio industry, either.

Among RAIN's more thoughtful and articulate readers is former WMMS/Cleveland and WROQ/Greenville, SC VP/GM Bob Bellin. He contributes the following two-part guest essay on the situation that the record industry faces today.

Your comments are also invited. Visit RAIN at www.kurthanson.com to access RAIN's "Reader Feedback" form, and I'll publish several of the comments in R&R over the course of the next couple of weeks.

When Bruce Springsteen made the cover of Newsweek in the fall of 1975, it validated his transformation from cult figure to mass-appeal phenomenon. Newsweek has now inducted music-sharing software maker Napster into the mainstream hall of fame by

Napster's route from obscurity to the cover of Newsweek was much shorter than Springsteen's, but it was also much rockier. That rocky road has included discussion at a recent Senate Judiciary Committee hearing.

Soon after his Newsweek cover Springsteen became part of a lawsuit that revolved around who owned what, how revenue should be distributed and what was fair to whom. A lawsuit that deals with similar issues will also determine the future of the more recent Newsweek cover boy. But the stakes are much higher than they were in the Springsteen case. While the lawsuit will probably decide Napster's fate, bigger issues are also at stake, issues that probably can't be resolved in court. In fact, the future of the entire music industry as we know it hangs in the balance. No kidding.

What is MP3? MP3 is a compression technology that was developed for the motion picture industry for digital editing of the audio portion of films. It's very efficient. It can provide CD-quality using far less space than other popular formats — including .wav, the format that's used for CDs. The MP3 format also allows users to make an infinite number of perfect copies. These features make Check out RAIN: Radio And Internet Newsletter at www.kurthanson.com for daily updates on what's happening in the world of Internet radio.

RAIN, published by Strategic Media Research founder Kurt Hanson, is a web-based daily newsletter that covers the various aspects of radio and its relationship to the Internet — both the new potential competitors it creates and the many opportunities it offers.

Starting this week, a team of seven interns has been helping produce each day's issue and adding new features to the RAIN site. (One marketing/finance internship was still available at press time; see the site for details.)

Classic Rock Site Right On Target

By Paul Maloney
for RAIN: Radio And Internet Newsletter

This time the Site of the Week points its browser to ABC's Classic Rock property in Chicago, WXCD (www.cd947.com). CD 94.7 is a pretty good example of a broadcaster that knows how to speak to its audience via the Internet — even if it doesn't necessarily give the site visitor exactly what he or she wants.

Good marks for navigation on this site. As has become customary, the station's logo is in the upper left corner, and clicking on it brings visitors back to the homepage from elsewhere in the site. A quick link to "Contests" is right at the top. The menu on the left side gets you to nearly everywhere else on the site, with links that are, thankfully, clearly and logically named. (We've seen a lot of sites with buttons obliquely labeled "Inside Stuff" or "Here's What's Hot." What do those mean?)

Exceptions to the generally good navigation are the links to "Station Info," which, instead of pertinent phone, fax and address info (that's under "Station Contacts"), shows the viewer last week's "Artist of the Week." Also, the "Game Room" link features sports commentary instead of (as one might expect) a chance to play a couple of rounds of "Revive the Dead Rock Star" or "Guess the Combined Weight of Bachman-Turner-Overdrive."

The link to CD 94.7's high-profile morning host, Kevin Matthews, is near the top, as it should be — but it's under the undoubtedly less-clicked "Photo Album" link.

One good way to keep listeners returning to a site is to offer dynamic and original information on the homepage, and CD 94.7 is right on target. Listeners want details on contests, music news, weather info and the current "Artist of the Week," and it's all right there, along with a photo of the DJ currently on the air. The page also gives visitors plenty of opportunity to interact. They can vote for songs for the station's "707" feature, volunteer for a music test, express their opinions in a listener poll (currently a Survivor-style contest among the morning show members) and enter station contests.

But, of course, CD 94.7 is a radio station. Let's hear some music already! The "Listen Live" link is an eye-catching graphic, but it's probably situated a little too low on the homepage. Music is the station's product — let's see it front and center! Oddly, clicking the link leads to another page that features little but another "Click Here to Listen" button. Why can't we click just once to hear the station?

Napster, Gnutella And MP3s: The Rapidly Changing Face Of The Music Industry

MP3 files ideal for transfer on the Internet and for saving on a hard drive — a $100 27-gigabyte hard drive can hold roughly 7,500 songs.

Several factors over the last several years have fostered exponential growth in the sharing of MP3s on the Net.

- The almost universal availability of high-speed Internet access on college campuses.
- Free software that enables anyone to encode tracks from CDs to MP3s.
- The fact that almost all college students have PCs — so they have everything they need to make and trade MP3s.

No One's Paying

Finding and trading MP3s used to be slow and cumbersome, and it was limited mostly to the tech-savvy. Then along came Shawn Fanning, who developed Napster to make the process easier. It worked — undoubtedly better than he had imagined — and now over 15 million people are using Napster to share MP3s.

There's only one problem: No one's paying for this shared music. And here's an added wrinkle: The music industry sells very little popular music in downloadable form because it's concerned about widespread piracy. Which, as it turns out, already exists.

10 - The Police - The Police	3:58	The Police	The Police	Rock	7,160

Needless to say, the entire Napster phenomenon has the music industry panic-stricken, and with good reason. After all, as your ex-girlfriend's father used to say, why buy the cow when you can get the milk for free?

Not content to take the threat lying down, the RIAA has sued Napster, and the general consensus seems to be that Napster will lose in court. So Napster goes away, music piracy is once again limited to the geeks, and that will be the end of that, right?

Not so fast! Napster can be held legally accountable and forced out of business because it's a corporation, and it uses a system that requires a central clearinghouse to catalog its files. But there are new forms of file-sharing software, most notably Gnutella, that allow files of all types to be transferred without a central host. That means there's no company to sue. Gnutella will likely replace Napster as the music pirate's software of choice, and it will survive because it can't be shut down like Napster.

The music industry is, at least publicly, pinning its hopes on the courts to uphold its claims that intellectual property is being stolen. Laws against such activity already exist, and there is, theoretically, relief to be had through criminal prosecutions and civil lawsuits. But there's a practical issue: The only way to enforce the law when the piracy originates with Gnutella or similar software is to hunt down and either sue or prosecute individual users. Let's examine what that would mean.

Lawsuits Won't Work

Twelve- to 24-year-olds consume most of the music that is bought or pirated, and, as a rule, those consumers have few or no assets. Suing just 1% of the current crop of Internet music pirates could leave the RIAA with legal bills of upwards of $2 billion and nothing to show for it but warehouses full of used PCs and old Birkenstocks. Clearly, lawsuits won't stop this train.

Neither Will Arrests

Arresting Gnutella users isn't a practical solution, either. There would be little, if any, public support for throwing large numbers of music pirates in the pokey. Prosecuting enough violators to frighten the rest of them would be very expensive, and it's highly unlikely that taxpayers would be willing to fund such prosecutions, particularly if it meant that little Johnny would be going up the river this fall instead of off to college.

Will Encryption Work?

The music industry is counting on encryption technology to make copying and piracy impossible. Every techie I've asked has insisted that encryption will prove to be of no value in enforcing copyrights. First of all, anyone who thinks that any encryption scheme can't or won't be hacked presumably still believes in Santa Claus and the Tooth Fairy. (FYI: My 6-year-old would bet his life on Santa but has serious reservations about the Tooth Fairy). Besides, even if someone could invent the world's first "unhackable" music-encryption system, no one would use it. Why not?

Music consumers are used to being able to make copies. Close off that option, and you really push the envelope as to how much restriction consumers will be willing to accept. Expecting them to give up privileges on a product that they can easily find in a "better" version (that is, a version that can be copied) through Napster or Gnutella seems very risky.

Software companies provide an interesting insight into the potential of encryption: They often don't bother with it. It's ironic that the music industry is reportedly paying the software industry megabucks to develop something that software companies themselves rarely use. Software makers have apparently concluded that those intent on stealing will find encryption cracks, and those who are willing to pay will do so with or without encryption.

Wake Up And Smell The Coffee

I'm not advocating piracy in any way. I'm attempting to outline the harsh realities, not justify their moral underpinnings. I firmly believe the intellectual property is property and that the music industry has the right to sell it or not sell it in any format it chooses at whatever price the market will support. It just doesn't appear that it will be able to exercise that right in today's technological climate, and I feel the industry would be better off if it accepted and responded to that reality.

Magnitude Network To Be Sold, Chicago Office Closed?

■ Global Media reported buyer

According to a report last week in the Chicago-based high-tech newsletter i-Street (www.i-street.com), Magnitude Network, one of the first streaming audio providers to Internet radio stations, will be closing up shop at the end of July. At press time it was rumored that Canadian company Global Media would purchase Magnitude Network's assets for around $5 million in an all-stock deal, although a Global Media spokesperson would not comment to i-Street. i-Street publisher Darcy Evon told R&R this week that she has since received additional confirmation and stands by the story.

Internet operating company CMGI made an initial investment in Magnitude Network in July 1998 and acquired 88% of the firm in January '99. Magnitude Network is down to about 20 employees from as many as 40 earlier this year, employees told i-Street. But because Magnitude was all but giving away streaming audio services to stations to gain market share, it apparently burned through the investment quickly.

Magnitude Network got some good press in the April issue of Wired magazine. In a story about what it called the "hot new medium" of streaming audio, Wired reported that Arbitron had counted "nearly 1 million unique listeners tuned to 240 channels for some 1.3 million hours. Nine of the top 10 Net broadcasters got their streaming audio from Magnitude Network."

While it's true that Magnitude had nine of the top 10 stations in some of the early Arbitron InfoStream reports, that was only in terms of monthly curve. It apparently achieved those positions by having secured good positions on the presets in older versions of RealPlayer (see Internet News & Views 777). Now that Arbitron is factoring in Time Spent Tuning, most of those stations are dropping somewhat lower.

This spring Magnitude Network had been offering stations low-cost streaming packages — as low as $500 per month — under which Magnitude shared revenues from CD sales made through its Music Massive online CD store and retained rights to a "gateway ad" at the start of each stream, which they usually used either for a Microsoft ad or to promote Music Massive. It's entirely possible that the brief, untargeted gateway ads were not big revenue generators, and CD sales certainly haven't been huge home runs for most radio station websites to date.

According to i-Street, "A former manager ... said there was a classic revenue problem. Magnitude charged just $500 a month to provide streaming audio services to radio stations. Many of the stations had few Internet listeners and cost very little to serve, but others, such as KPIG/Freedom, CA, had millions of online listeners and cost Magnitude as much as $10,000 a month for streaming audio bandwidth. The company also offered money-losing web development and other services."

Although this was a good piece of reporting on i-Street's part, KPIG doesn't, of course, have "millions" of online listeners.

The InfoStream AQH Top 50

In last week's R&R we published Arbitron's just-released list of February's top 50 Arbitron-measured webcasts in terms of Aggregate Tuning Hours (ATH). This week we've translated that ATH statistic into a traditional Average Quarter Hour (AQH) statistic. The math is simple — we divide the number of hours of listening the station received in February (ATH) by the number of hours in February (672) to get the number of listeners listening at the average moment. (Remember that a big radio station in New York City might have an AQH of over 100,000 people, while even a polka station in Appleton, WI might have an AQH of 1,000 people. On the other hand, also keep in mind that even a webcast with only 100 AQH listeners has the potential to be a reasonably profitable operation.)

The first time I tried the button I didn't get music, but a RealPlayer download page. At this point probably 80% of potential listeners have given up, but let's trudge on. We can whip out the plastic and pay a fee roughly equivalent to a monthly cable TV bill to get the "premium" RealPlayer, or we can download the beta RealPlayer 7 for free. Come on, it's the Internet — so we download the free player. Player installed, still no stream. Sorry, but we won't be listening to WXCD today. Many other visitors probably don't even get that far.

For a Classic Rock station site, there's precious little song or artist info. (See KCBS-FM/Los Angeles for a clinic on artist info: www.arrowfm.com.) Want to know the name of the Led Zeppelin song you're hearing right now? There's no answer available on the site. Music information on a site lends itself to branding and revenue opportunities. ("Hey, I like that Rolling Stones song I'm hearing right now. I can click here to learn when they recorded it and what album it's on. I think I'll go ahead and order the CD.") This is a missed opportunity to extend the brand for the site visitor and possibly make a buck — the two most important objectives for a station website.

On the technical side, CD 94.7's site loads quickly on a 56K connection. It's not graphically overloaded, but some of the graphics could be a little cleaner — this is a major-market station. The animations, while not cumbersome, seem arbitrary and unnecessary.

Overall, CD 94.7 has created an excellent vehicle for reaching its listeners on the Internet. The site doesn't shoot over the visitor's head on the technology side and has clean and logical navigation. But the payoff most visitors look for — easy access to streaming and artist and song information — isn't quite there.

DIGITAL BITS

Arbitron Ties In With Lariat Software

Lariat Software will license its MediaReports program to Arbitron for use in the collection of data from streaming media servers for Arbitron's InfoStream webcast ratings service. Arbitron Internet Services VP/GM Bill Rose said Lariat's software will help Arbitron manage "the incredibly high volume of Internet tuning we expect to compile." Additionally, on July 18 Arbitron announced it would become a separate entity from its parent company, Centric Corp., by the end of the year.

FTM Media Plans Expansion

Website developer Feed The Monster, which has developed sites for such major-market radio stations as KROQ/Los Angeles and WBCN/Boston, announced that its board of directors has approved plans for the company to add personnel and implement new technology in order to meet station demand. Earlier this month FTM reported that its fiscal year-end net losses grew from $814,646 (13 cents per share) to $21.9 million ($2.90), mostly due to a charge of $13.2 million associated with depreciation of shares issued in conjunction with the January merger of Interactive Radio Group.

The RAB Selects GetMedia For eCom Solutions

The RAB has chosen GetMedia as the source for online music purchasing for stations participating in the RAB's eCom Solutions program. Station website visitors will be able to click on and buy the CD containing the song currently being played on the air, review and purchase songs played earlier in the day or search for a particular title or artist through GetMedia's library.

Broadcast Programming Unveils Web Formats

As part of its new TotalRadio Web Services, Broadcast Programming is developing dozens of web formats, including "Legends of Country," "Power Rock" and "Show Tunes." Radio stations can stream the formats from their websites. BP also said it can help stations go online with starter homepages, and it has partnered with Bob Case's StreamAudio.com to assist stations that need streaming services. Available for barter or cash, BP's TotalRadio Web Services can be found at www.totalradio.net.

InfoStream To Measure One-On-One Sports

Twenty-four-hour national sports network One-On-One, streamed on the Internet through its own website (www.1on1sports.com) as well as through Rivals.com and BroadcastAmerica.com, will now be included in Arbitron's InfoStream webcasting reports.

Mort Crim Signs With Broadcastspots.com

Mort Crim Communications' Mort Crim's Second Thoughts has signed with Broadcastspots.com. The deal allows buyers to purchase time on the syndicated show via the Internet. Broadcastspots.com said the deal with Crim Communications gives it representation in all of the country's top 50 markets.

RCS Unveils New Ad-Insertion Software

RCS has introduced two new ad-insertion programs for use in Internet audio streams. InSert can replace any spot in a stream with an alternate spot, and SplitStream uses a database and profile information to insert ads targeted to each listener.

Can We Handle Choice?

Between halves of my session at MacWorld, I ate lunch with two programmers from Gensetech, the gene-splicing company. One was a former college DJ, and one was not a radio listener. "Hate it," he said. "Commercial pop." We chatted about why they both thought that Internet radio was the next big thing, and, more importantly, why they thought that it was going to kill radio as we know it.

David Lawrence

After spewing the conventional wisdom about unlimited choice and better music and how techno rules, Mr. Commercial Pop wandered back to the show floor. Mr. Former College DJ and I continued the conversation, and it became evident that there is a lot of mythology about what Internet radio stations are capable of, how many people are listening and what "unlimited choice" really means.

Consider the mythical 500-channel cable system. The growth from the 10 or 12 stations originally offered to buildings in urban areas that couldn't get broadcast signals is nothing short of monumental, but despite amazingly small niche programmers like Outdoor Life Network and Speedvision, there is no system in the country that offers 500 channels of truly diverse programming. Seventy to 100 of the channels may have cable network programming, but the rest of the bandwidth carries 100 on-demand movie channels; 100 channels of on-demand sports; the various flavors of HBO, Showtime, Cinemax and their wannabes; and ... 50 channels of highly segmented, commercial-free music radio.

Overwhelmed with choices, viewers return to known brands. Sure, CNN, MTV and ESPN have grown to rival the Big Three, with webcasts like Fox, WB and UPN going at each other for what's left of a fragmented broadcast audience. But what shows are everyone watching and talking about? Who Wants to Be a Millionaire, Survivor, ER, Monday Night Football.

There seems to be a balance between too little and, oddly, too much choice. Presented with 10 dominant stations, radio listeners might look for an alternative. But when wireless IP gives them "Net radio" in their cars and they are presented with more than 20,000 online radio choices (and no TV Guide-like directory or advice to help them decide what's good and what isn't), they will naturally gravitate back to where they can find service from names they are familiar with: terrestrial radio.

What is the right number of choices? Is there a comfort zone? It seems that 50 or so is the right number: five must-haves, 15 more to use on special occasions (Friday-night date music, traffic jam reports, weather emergencies, and 30 to dabble with. Any more choices than that, and that overwhelmed feeling begins to set in and the brands become even more important. And Mr. Former College DJ actually agreed.

IT'S WORTH MORE THAN THE PLASTIC

Let's put to rest once and for all this issue of record companies "overcharging" for CDs. The physical cost (which is always underestimated at 50 cents, while the street price is always overestimated at $20) is only a small part of the value that we receive when we buy an artist's music. We also receive the same thing that we pay for when we buy a painting or a well-designed house in a great location, or when we refuse to accept a lowball bid on a family bathroom. It's not the canvas and paint, the wood and glass, or the few ounces of silver that is valuable. Rather, it's what the music (or painting or house or jewelry) does to our brains and our dancing feet and our souls.

We wouldn't criticize an artist (or a gallery, which is the record label in this analogy) for getting as much money for their work as someone was willing to pay. We marvel at the prices celebrities pay for luxury mansions. And we remember the moment our grandfathers passed on that piece of family memory that has value beyond its material.

Why would we reduce the music that fills our hearts, inspires us and entertains us on all levels to a bit of plastic and ink? And even if we were coldhearted and hypocritical enough to do so, why would we put ourselves, the fans, in the position of replacing record labels as the ripoff artists du jour? Because we can? Because the technology exists to do so? That's hollow and dismissive. We get all nuts about spam and Microsoft and TLDs and porn sites, but a legion of technologists who otherwise take pride in doing the fair and right thing wherever and whenever they can are reduced to common petty thieves by their use of Napster and its ilk.

Capitol Elevates Chernin To Dir./ Rock Promotion

Capitol Records has elevated Jaymi Chernin to Director/Rock Promotion. Based in New York, she reports to Sr. VP/Promotion Burt Baumgartner and VP/Alternative & Rock Promotion Gary Spivack. Chernin will be involved with national promotion, with an emphasis on the East Coast.

Chernin

"Jaymi has been instrumental in many of Capitol's promotional campaigns," Baumgartner said. "Her dedication and enthusiasm make her a vital part of the promotion department."

Spivack noted, "I'm excited to have Jaymi join the national rock department at Capitol. We need an East Coast presence at Capitol to spread our established and developing rock acts to radio and beyond, and Jaymi's experience, knowledge and contacts makes for a perfect fit. We're lucky to have her on board."

Chernin joined Capitol Records as Director/Promotion & Marketing in 1995. Prior to that she served as Promotion/Marketing Manager for Elektra Entertainment. She began her career at Epic Records in the promotion department.

KWJJ

PDs in the business. When I knew we had to find a PD for KWJJ, I knew we had to get Ken Boesen."

Boesen has programmed KSKS for almost six years. Before that he programmed KIZN/Boise, ID and KUAD/Ft. Collins, CO. He stated, "The family atmosphere I've witnessed at KWJJ and Ron Carter's leadership make this not only a natural fit for me, but also a huge opportunity to grow with a great company."

Krizner To Manage Bloomberg's WBBR

Doug Krizner has been named Manager of WBBR/New York and Bloomberg's syndicated radio products. He most recently was the morning anchor for Bloomberg Television.

"My aim is to make WBBR the highest quality all-News radio station in New York City," he said. "We will deliver what listeners have come to expect from Bloomberg while expanding our local news reporting. We will also increase the contributions of three full-time reporters in Washington, DC. The mission is to raise the level of production values, making creative use of sound in the tradition of radio as 'theater of the mind.'"

WBBR, Bloomberg's flagship radio station, will begin broadcasting live from 6am to 6pm this fall. Bloomberg says Krizner plans to revise WBBR's weekend lineup soon.

De La Hoya Greet 'Precious' Posse

All smiles at the recent R&R convention in Los Angeles are new girl group Precious, who are set to make their U.S. debut on Capitol Records this fall, and their labelmate Oscar De La Hoya. The group's first two singles, "Say It Again" and "Rewind," have already made big splashes on the British charts. "Say It Again" will be released in the U.S. this month. Pictured (l-r) are Precious' Jenny Frost and Sophie McDonnell; De La Hoya; and Precious' Louise Ross, Kalli Clark-Stenberg and Anya Lahiri.

EXECUTIVE ACTION

ABC News Radio Taps Gatto, O'Brian For GM Posts

ABC News Radio has elevated Tony Gatto from Director/News & Sports Programming to GM/Radio Operations, responsible for all domestic and international newsgathering, as well as planning and news operations. Concurrently, Kate O'Brian becomes GM/Radio Programming after having spent three years as Manager/Talent Development for ABC News. In her new post O'Brian will be responsible for all ABC News Radio broadcasts and programs, along with affiliate leads and services.

Both Gatto and O'Brian report to ABC News Radio VP Chris Berry, who commented, "Tony's news credentials make him uniquely qualified to fill this key position at ABC News Radio. And Kate's passion for radio news, along with her program and staff development skills, will be an outstanding asset for our organization."

After 18 years at CBS Radio Gatto joined ABC News Radio in 1998. Since then he has overseen the network's daily news coverage and New York newsroom operations. O'Brian has logged two decades with ABC News Radio, holding various positions in New York, London and Washington, DC. She also served as the network's Rome correspondent for three years.

Reese

VP/Promotion for the Work Group. In 1995 he was Local Promotion Manager in Charlotte for Columbia Records, and he held a similar post in Boston between 1993-1995.

Reese noted, "This is a great time to come to Elektra. The label is poised to explode, and I can't wait to be part of the excitement surrounding its great roster. What [Chairman/CEO] Sylvia Rhone has accomplished is nothing short of amazing, and I anticipate learning a great deal from her. I've known Greg Thompson for more than a decade, and I am looking forward to working alongside him on the same team."

Platinum Plaque For Staind's Dysfunction

It's celebration time for Elektra recording artists Staind! Prior to their sold-out show at New York's Irving Plaza as part of MTV's Return of the Rock Tour, they received a platinum plaque for their debut CD, Dysfunction. The CD spawned the hit singles "Mudshovel," "Home" and "Just Go." Pictured (l-r) are Jon Wysocki, Elektra's Jay Perloff, Mike Mushok, WEA N.Y.'s Tony Martinez, Elektra's Dane Venable, Johnny April, Aaron Lewis, Elektra Exec. VP/GM Greg Thompson and Janine Horton.

Wedding Bells For Puffy?

Could be, according to the Globe. The 'zine says that Sean "Puffy" Combs and Jennifer Lopez are getting married this summer, hopefully before Puffy's trial on weapons charges starts in August. The couple have been engaged since Christmas, but their friends feared they'd never tie the knot because of their jealousy over one another's steamy on-camera love scenes with other people.

Now that Bobby Brown has been released from jail, Whitney Houston wants to renew her wedding vows with him — which is making her family furious, says the Star. They blame Brown for turning her on to drugs, and they have been trying to convince her to leave him and seek help for her drug problem. She insists that she doesn't have a drug problem, and he insists he's come home from jail stronger, drug-free and determined to save their marriage.

Belinda Carlisle, recently separated from her husband, is going to take it all off in an upcoming issue of Playboy. Maybe it's her way of reminding him what he'll be missing? (Spin)

Spirit & Emotions

Wyckd Jean tells Vibe that his past relationship with fellow Fugee member Lauryn Hill was tumultuous and driven by passion and music, like that of another famous Motown couple: Tammi Terrell and The Temptations' David Ruffin. Asked in Interview about a recent wild party he threw — complete with lots of drunken strippers, dancers and hookers — Jean says he likes different cultures and loves to throw parties because of all the vibes.

Sinead O'Connor talks about a different vibe — the spiritual kind — in Spin. She says she does most of her Bible study through Rastafarian music and that most of her religious inspiration comes from Bob Dylan, Bob Marley and Van Morrison, whom she claims consider themselves more as priests — like her — than pop singers. On record labels and their marketing strategies, she says, "I don't want to get onstage and have a Seagram's thing behind me, 'cause I don't believe in alcohol, I'm a weedhead." (Interview)

From The Heart

"Sometimes I wish we weren't so damn serious, you know? I'd love to write some party music" — Creed lead singer Scott Stapp on his tendency to write highly dramatic lyrics with lots of Biblical imagery. Told that Blink-182 mock Creed every night in concert, Stapp counters that Creed rag on Blink-182 during soundchecks. (Spin)

OH, MY GOD! THEY KILLED ... MICK? — "It'll be interesting to see how they'll kill me off," says ex-Fleetwood Mac drummer Mick Fleetwood, who will be joining Spinal Tap for a September gig in Los Angeles to promote the theatrical and DVD/VHS release of the 1984 classic This Is Spinal Tap. So far he's avoided the band's exploding-drummer curse. (Rolling Stone)

What's with all the dissing of Creed? Moby, reflecting on what he believes George Gershwin would do if he were a 26-year-old rock star, "I imagined him being the guitar player in some generic modern rock band and having all these innate abilities that get squashed by some A&R person concerned about his job. I just envisioned him playing in Creed or something, and it was very depressing." (Rolling Stone)

Changing Image

In Rolling Stone, Eminem insists that his music has a positive influence: "There's millions of white kids and black kids coming to the tour, throwing their middle fingers up in the air, and all having the common love — and that's hip-hop." But Spin warns fans to be careful when they approach Eminem and ask for an autograph: He may pull his gun.

Maybe what Eminem needs is an image change. It could happen ... Look what it's done for Alice Cooper! The Star says he has already made lots of changes, and his bad-boy days are long gone. He stopped drinking, plays golf and even teaches Bible classes. What he wants to do now, though, is become an actor in horror movies.

Does James Brown see himself as a paramedic? That's what puzzled onlookers wondered after Brown told his chauffeur to stop at a traffic accident scene in San Francisco, then got out and began dancing beside the wreck, shouting, "I am here to help! The Godfather can help!" A cop recognized Brown, who was on his way to a concert, and ushered him back to his limo. (National Enquirer)

Super-Shrewd Marketing Tips

How News/Talk sales pros can help clients get more from their ad dollars

Throughout the pages of this week's R&R you'll read many ideas and ways to help you do a better job when it comes to your station's marketing efforts. And although, in today's radio business, most stations do a pretty good job of training programmers and marketing directors in this critical area, you're still sure to pick up some good tips that will contribute to your station's overall success.

But one group of individuals — those in sales and sales management — is often overlooked when it comes to receiving enough basic training in the art of helping their clients to become better marketers. So this week I called on New Hampshire-based sales, marketing and management trainer Irwin Pollack for some ideas on how those responsible for generating ad revenue at your station can better help their clients get the most from their radio marketing dollars.

Irwin Pollack

I've always found Pollack to be a real meat-and-potatoes kind of guy who doesn't waste time espousing a lot of abstract theories and concepts when it comes to selling. And with the all-important fourth quarter rapidly approaching, there's no time like the present to review some of his field-tested tips that can help you produce better results for yourself and your clients and also help your station post an improved bottom line before the end of this year.

Become Your Client's Marketing Expert

First, let's focus on some concrete ideas that Pollack says you can use with your clients to help them significantly improve their results when advertising on your radio station. What's his No. 1 rule for gaining success for advertisers? "Frequency!" says Pollack. "Advise your advertising clients to worry about frequency before worrying about audience sizes. Even though it may cost the same, reaching a small group of people lots of times results in more sales than reaching huge numbers of people only once."

Looking For Leads In All The Right Places

While helping clients learn to get the most out of their marketing dollars is well worth any account executive's investment of time and energy, first you have to find the clients to help. With that in mind, Irwin Pollack shares these ideas for 30 places to find sales leads.

- The Chase Calendar. This book gives you what's happening each day, week and month of the year and gives you reasons to tell your next prospect to buy.

- Your news department. These are the people who get the press releases of grand openings, special events, etc. While they may not be newsworthy, they might be salesworthy.

- Building directories. The next time you are early for an appointment, check out the directory on the main floor. You'll find a long list of potentially worthy prospects who are right there in the building where you already are.

- Office supply and furniture salespeople. They usually get their biggest orders from new businesses. Network with them and trade leads.

- Trade shows. If it's a business expo or home show, you'll likely find 20 or more businesses all in one spot. It's time-efficient, and you can pass out a lot of business cards in one spot.

- Food brokers. Look for the leads in your yellow pages. This is a group of people that really controls food dollars. If you haven't worked with these people yet, now is the time!

- Printers. They do business card work, letterheads, etc. They know who is new and may get the work before the public finds out.

- Billboards/busboards. Keep a hand-held tape recorder in your car to make notes to yourself as you monitor which advertisers are doing outdoor around town.

- Restaurant supply salespeople. These are the ones who supply glassware and supplies to restaurants and bars. They know who is new and who is hot in town. You can usually find them listed in the yellow pages.

- Direct-mail campaigns. Other than what you might receive at home, you may want to consider going to the direct-mail company and getting the envelopes from each ZIP code. You'll find many more leads that way.

- Regional and district managers. With national companies, most local money is found from the zone, regional or district managers. You may find addresses and phone numbers by starting at the bottom and working your way up the list.

- Commercial real estate salespeople. These individuals specialize in commercial and office space. You'll learn early who is opening a second location or which national players may be sniffing around for space in your market.

- Convention center managers. Get their monthly events roster to find out who's rented large blocks of space.

- Do more commercials over longer days to give the illusion of stronger presence and to make a longer impression. Instead of airing 20-25 commercials per week, try airing all of a client's spots on a Monday-through-Wednesday basis.
- Utilize early evening and late-night commercial time to sell a product that can be used by consumers on a mass level.
- Remember to always write for radio. Never forget that radio is an audio medium.
- All you want to do is sell a product. Creativity alone does not do that. Keep creativity within the confines of solid advertising principles, not in spite of them.

- Make your ads dominate the medium. Run lots of ads in short time periods. This breaks through the advertising barrage, reaches your prospects and gains top-of-mind awareness.
- Resist spending time and money to simply inform people. Remember: Decisions to buy aren't made because of knowledge and information, but rather because of emotional factors.
- Advertise every week. At any time someone may be in the buy-

- Hotel and TV guide throwaways. These real estate guides, entertainment guides or pages of television listings are filled with leads for the newer salesperson.
- Last year's newspapers. Since most retailers do the same thing each year, here's a way to stay ahead of the competition and work on getting the budget now, before it's placed in the newspaper.
- Inactive leads. Go through your station's historical sales report (you do have one, right?). Who was on the air a year ago, two years ago? Maybe they just slipped through the cracks during transition periods.
- Recruitment section of the newspaper. What national clients are looking for help six months before they enter your market?
- Public records. Check in down at City Hall for filings of new incorporations, sales tax licenses, liquor licenses, elevator and building permits, etc.
- Mail managers. Get to know them and ask for their tenant roster. It will give you a list of each store in the mall, local management contact, etc. It helps to know who to ask for when you are cold-calling. Hint: Be sure to look for those who will want to supplement mall activities or their own national ad campaigns.
- Commerce and industry groups. Someone from your sales staff should join the local Chamber of Commerce. Others ought to be sure they are tied in to local church groups, Rotary Clubs, etc. As a general rule, businesspeople like to do business with people they know.
- Monitor other media. Be careful not to put the bulk of your attention into prime-time slots where national clients and agencies place their spots. Super-achievers fish for leads during the days and times that local retailers advertise — usually during those times when stations package their lower-demand inventory.
- Business to business. Look to share leads with in-office water and coffee suppliers, vending machine providers, etc. They know where some bones are buried.
- Sports Programs. Golf tournaments and school sporting events usually include programs that have sponsorships and advertisements paid for by local advertisers.
- The World Wide Web. Comb through search engines or citywide sites for local advertisers who invest money via the web. They may also have some money for you and your station.
- Yellow pages index. Brainstorm account categories from the index in the yellow pages, which provides you with a list of virtually every type of business, some of which you may not even have thought of before.
- "Recurrent" prospects. Each week select three people who said they wanted to think over your proposal and let you know when they were ready to buy. If they haven't called back, give them another try.
- Construction signs at strip malls. Most shopping developers budget big dollars for grand openings.
- Newly assigned commercial phone number list. Find yourself an inside source at the phone company. It's the best source of new businesses out there, because every new business needs a phone number.
- Well-painted, marketing-focused trucks. Some companies spend thousands of dollars on their fleet. These trucks can indicate companies worth calling on.

Shaking Off That Vacation Hangover

OK, so with at least a month or so of those lazy summer days still ahead of us, no matter how dedicated a sales professional you are, the idea of planning how you are going to improve your fourth quarter isn't likely to be the first thing you're thinking about right now. Even if your body is still in the office, chances are your brain is already moving toward that vacation you've been planning or reviewing the one from which you've just returned.

There's no question that many of us spend weeks or even months planning and preparing for that long-anticipated summer vacation at the beach or other favorite destination. But sooner or later vacation ends, and it's time to get back in the saddle again. Just how much time and effort will you put into getting back up to speed on what's been happening while you were gone? Irwin Pollack offers these solid suggestions for both pre- and post-vacation planning:

- Beware of the squeaky-wheel syndrome. Your e-mail may be screaming to call this or that person or e-mail this or that client. Don't fall for the "squeaky wheel syndrome." Review pending work before deciding which individual demanding attention truly needs it first.
- Lose a day, gain a week. Experts caution against putting too much pressure on yourself to get up to speed the first day back. Give yourself at least a full day to review and organize your work. Remember that Rome wasn't built in a day, it might take some time to get back to it.
- Tackle pending and assignment folders first. The best way to organize work is to set up daily and monthly pending folders. When you return from vacation, peruse these first to help remind you about work due soon.

ing cycle, wanting or needing a product or service you sell. Get that fighting chance for them to buy it from you. The week you don't advertise might be the one when you miss a big sale.

- Don't put too many ideas or thoughts into a single ad. This will only confuse a potential consumer and cause them to tune out your message. If you have many thoughts or concepts to get across to a listener, look to doing an on-going campaign to carry a similar theme, but change the focus slightly to make your new point. (Note: A great example of this strategy is H&R Block's annual ad campaign that tells consumers all of the many different reasons to use the company to prepare their income tax returns. The ads sell the same basic image of H&R Block over and over again, with a slightly varied message inserted in-between.)

- Be sure you're distinguishing the difference between results and response. While one may make people come in (and make the cash register open), the key is making the cash register open. What are you interested in, shoppers or shoplifters?

Matchbox Twenty Sparkling Like Diamonds

Melissa/Lava/Atlantic recording artists Matchbox Twenty are celebrating even more sweet success as they receive the RIAA's prestigious Diamond Award for their 1996 debut album Yoursell Or Someone Like You. The award marks sales in excess of 10 million units. The album has since been certified 11 times platinum. The band received the award during their performance on The Late Show With David Letterman. Pictured on stage outside the Ed Sullivan Theater are (l-r) Atlantic VP A&R/Promotion Kim Stephens, Matchbox Twenty's Brian Yale and Kyle Cook, Atlantic Exec. VP/GM Ron Shapiro, Atlantic Exec. VP Andrea Ganis, Grammy Award-winning producer Matt Serletic, Atlantic Group co-Chairman/co-CEO Val Azzoli, band manager Michael Lippman, Matchbox Twenty's Rob Thomas, Lava Records President Jason Flom and Matchbox Twenty's Adam Guynor and Paul Doucette.

it would deal to Clear Channel to 25 and reduce the cash payment to $37 million. Now Cumulus has said it will sell 55 stations to Clear Channel in return for seven stations and will receive $166 million.

The first part of those deals, the ones announced in May, were approved by the DOJ last week. Cumulus will pick up stations in Cedar Rapids, IA; Shreveport, LA; and Melbourne, FL. Clear Channel will get Cumulus stations in Ann Arbor, MI; Chattanooga; McAllen-Brownsville; Salisbury-Ocean City, MD; and Eau Claire, WI and pay Cumulus about $91 million. The deal is expected to close next week.

Then, later in the year Cumulus will sell an additional 30 stations in Mankato, MN; Rochester, MN; Mason City, IA; Evansville, IN; and Columbus, GA in return for $75 million in cash. Cumulus will use the cash to fund acquisitions.

Cumulus President/CEO Lew Dickey said the additional stations

Cumulus will be selling to Clear Channel were "not critical to our business strategy." Cumulus has also been saddled with a sagging stock price. When the deals were first announced in March, Cumulus stock was selling for $34.50. On Tuesday (7/25) it was selling for $9.50.

scrupulous job of maintaining their diaries and entering comments that included their opinions about music and contest prizes.

Because the kids were under 12 years old, their listening habits were not included in Arbitron's syndicated reports, but Arbitron otherwise treated the young listeners the same as their older counterparts: They were recruited in the same fashion and were subject to the same rules as regular listeners. The only exception was that parents were encouraged to help their kids fill out the diaries if necessary. And, as in a normal situation, the kids and all other members of the household kept diaries (all diaries from these households were excluded from measurement).

Some conclusions:

- There were marked differences in listening patterns between genders. Some 67% of girls age 6-11 gravitated toward the CHR/Pop station, while 71% of boys in the same age bracket expressed a preference for the CHR/Rhythmic station. These numbers are similar to teen listening patterns in the same markets.

- Girls 6-11 listen to the radio about 30% more than boys. Again, that's similar to teenage listening patterns.

- Kids below 12 listen to radio less than older children, and they listen to fewer stations. About 90% of kids 6-11 listen to radio eight to nine hours per week.

- Listenership among kids 6-11 is strongest in the afternoons and early evenings, before school and on the weekends.

Many stations have already had success selling their preteen audiences to advertisers, but they asked Arbitron to conduct this pilot study in order to be able to provide hard numbers to the skeptics. Arbitron intends to continue with this study and perhaps increase the number of markets it uses in the future. It does not, however, have plans to include under-12s in its syndicated reports.

An item in this week's Crain's New York Business has raised the question of whether Arbitron accurately represented Hispanic listening in the spring 2000 survey for New York. The article pointed to a 2-share decline in listening among the top four Spanish-language stations in the market and cited SBS/N.Y. GM Carey Davis as being concerned about whether enough Hispanics were counted in the survey. In response, Arbitron VP Thom Mocarsky told ST that the proper number of Hispanics were counted, but that Arbitron did notice that Spanish-speaking diarykeepers in the third phase were not properly identified with their language preference. However, their diaries were included in the overall market sample and were counted toward the spring numbers. Stations hoping for a change in their fortunes will have to wait until the summer book.

KFWB/L.A. PD Dave Cooke told staffers last weekend that he would exit the Infinity all-News station, which he joined almost two years ago following a stint as PD of crosstown KABC, because of philosophical differences with GM Roger Nadel. In a memo to KFWB staffers obtained by ST, Cooke cites his disagreement with Nadel on "the strategic direction necessary to significantly impact the station's ratings." Cooke noted that he was proud of the staff's work but claimed that KFWB's lack of sustained ratings growth "is exacerbated by factors beyond the control of programming — including lack of marketing, signal problems and a commercial load that is substantially above the industry norm." In response, Nadel told ST, "I believe very strongly in what we do here. 'All news, all the time' is a winning formula, and we're going to get back to the basics of what we do best."

Meanwhile, at KABC Eric Stanger is appointed APD. He previously held the Exec. Producer post at sister Talker WABC/N.Y.

AMFM Sr. VP/Programming Ken Benson has decided to step down. Benson can be reached at (360) 883-0092 or at kenbradio@aol.com. Additionally, AMFM Sr. VP/Sales John Coulter departs. Coulter had been involved with AMFM since joining predecessor company Evergreen Media in 1988.

We Can Talk, But Watch Your Mouth!

It seems WOR/N.Y. talk host and gossip-monger Joan Rivers has been able to say whatever she wanted on her radio show, so long as it's bleeped before it hits the airwaves. A comment Rivers made last Friday on her radio show failed to signal the censors, however, and sailed right onto the airwaves. She received a weeklong suspension for her slip of the tongue. Rivers told the New York Post, "I was talking about a lousy restaurant and said, 'I'll eat shit on a bun, so it really has to be bad for me not to like it!' They didn't catch it because they had a trainee engineer who I don't think they'll use anymore." While Rivers admits that she was told to "be more careful and circumspect" by WOR management, she says her language is "what makes the show fun." When asked by the Post if her suspension was with or without pay, Rivers said, "Considering what I'm making over there, I can't tell the difference. Trust me, I didn't have to call my accountant."

Joan Rivers

Tongues were wagging last weekend about an interview with Broadcast.com founder Mark Cuban that appeared in Net magazine Inside.com. It seems the multimillionaire, who now owns the NBA's Dallas Mavericks, is planning to start a music label in partnership with a major radio station group. While Bloomberg cited Clear Channel as a possibility, a company representative tells ST, "Clear Channel has not had any discussions on the matter." Cuban says he's committing as much as $50 million of his own funds to the label, which would have an online presence and offer unlimited access to an artist library. In an e-mail response to ST's questions, Cuban says the venture is in its infancy and that he has "not finalized agreements with anyone." As for hooking up with broadcasters, Cuban says, "It's about time the radio industry benefited from the demand it is creating for music." As for the kinds of acts Cuban wants to sign, he notes, "We won't be in the new artist development business. We will work only with established artists who have completed their contracts with their labels."

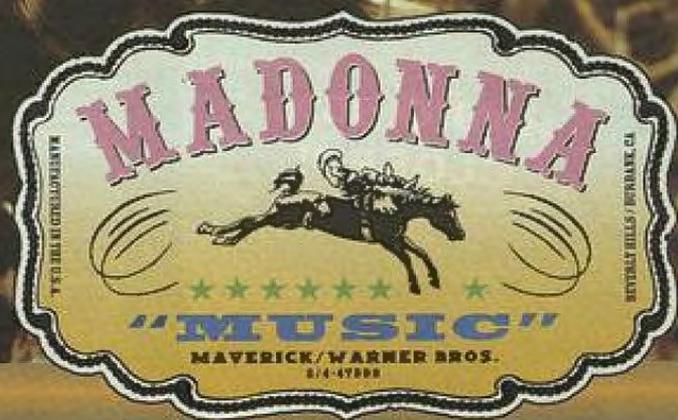

Ron Chapman To Move To KLUV

Ron Chapman has hosted mornings at KVIL/Dallas since 1969 and attracted legions of fans during the last quarter-century. But on last Wednesday's show the 64-year-old Chapman told the world he'll be shifting to Oldies sister KLUV for mornings Sept. 5. According to the Dallas Morning News, Chapman volunteered to move to KLUV in 1998, when research showed that his audience wasn't listening to KVIL's AC format after his show. KVIL middayer Ken Barnett will shift to mornings as Chapman replaces Johnny Stone.

departed KLUV on July 17. Chapman debuted on the North Texas airwaves in 1959 as the legendary KLIF as "Irv Harrigan" and gained that station's morning co-host un-965.

A Toledo grandmother's stolen car was recovered by local police on Monday, thanks to WSPD afternoon talk host Scott Sloan. Sloan seems the woman's grandson produces Sloan's show, and Sloan broadcast a description of the vehicle on the air. Minutes later a caller called "SPD" to say that he was driving right behind the car! Sloan kept the caller on the air to track the vehicle, and Toledo police soon joined the chase after hearing the information on Sloan's show. The thief was arrested, which prompted Sloan to state, "You don't steal an old lady's car in Toledo... not on my watch."

Following orders from your superiors is usually the proper thing to do. However, it got so Traffic/Norfolk reporter Bill Russ a life-ban from Saga-owned Rocker WNOR — 10 years later! It seems that back in 1996 Russ was an employee of crosstown Alternative rival WROX (96X). One day then-PD Darryl Stone sent Russ to an 'NOR T-shirt promotion and asked him to ambush the event by handing out shirts emblazoned with the 96X logo. Russ immediately encountered OR PD Harvey Kojan, who was less than pleased about Russ' presence. Kojan asked Russ to leave, but Russ failed to do so. The whole matter ended up in court and was eventually settled — until last week, when an AM morning show member happened to see the man doing the traffic reports if he was the same Bill Russ who had been at the station. When Russ said he was, Kojan allegedly phoned Metro to have Russ prohibited from ever appearing on 'NOR again. "I was doing a dumb radio stunt. I was just doing what I was told to do," Russ told ST. Kojan did not return ST's calls.

AMFM Stations Sizzle In DC

A fire erupted Monday in a ground-floor restaurant of the Rockville, MD office tower housing the studios of four AMFM properties serving Washington, DC. Luckily, the local fire station is only a half-block away, so the flames were doused almost immediately after the call was made. At WBIG, PD Steve was evacuated the station and placed it on automation. Within minutes, Jerry Lee Lewis' "Great Balls of Fire" hit the airwaves. Meanwhile, sister WASH was also on automation playing Elton John's "Candle in the Wind" while afternoon host Debra Leigh sat in the parking lot, waiting to return to the studio. All four stations returned to the air shortly afterward.

Rumbles

- Randy Bush joins KIOC/Beaumont-Port Arthur, TX as GM.
- KQKO/Omaha PD/morning host Wayne Coy rises to OM. Assuming Coy's programming duties is Darrin Stone, who previously held PD duties at WABB/Mobile.
- Thomas McSweeney becomes GSM for Hispanic Broadcasting's Regional Mexican-Spanish AC combo KLND & KLOV/San Diego. He previously served as VP/GM of WCPX-TV/Chicago.
- WSOC/Charlotte PD Paul Johnson leaves the station he's programmed for 11 of the past 13 years. He can be reached at pjohnson28277@aol.com. MD Rick McCracken takes interim PD duties.
- KYLZ/Albuquerque PD Tom Naylor joins crosstown KKSS for similar duties.
- KLPX/Tucson OM/PD Larry Miles relinquishes his PD duties to midday host Jones Hunter.
- Former KKKX/Bakersfield PD Craig Marshall joins KWWW/San Luis Obispo, CA as PD.
- Another Consolidation Story: KKRZ/Portland overnighter Tim Davis adds MD duties for Clear Channel CHRs KIST/Santa Barbara, CA; KARQ/Boise, ID; and KKJJ/Medford, OR.

KBQI as "The Big 1 107.9" under PD/midday host Tommy Carrera. Carrera arrives from Citadel's KNEV/Reno, but most of the airstaff arrives from another Citadel property: KRST. Furthermore, Clear Channel/Albuquerque VP/GM Cindy Schloss was GM of KRST from 1985-95. Look for a lot of boot-scootin' battles in the next several months between these two stations. Meanwhile, Alternative KTEG shifts down the dial to 104.7 MHz as a result of KBQI's debut.

WUMX/Charlottesville, VA morning personalities Hal Abrams and Naomi Spimoni have decided to move into a new house together. However, this house is fit for a dog: It has no kitchen, no bathroom and not even enough room for a TV. The duo have agreed to reside in a doghouse located at a busy city intersection until they've raised $5,000 for the local SPCA. Abrams and Spimoni move in today.

Congratulations to WHJY-FM/Providence morning hosts Paul Fuller and Al Matthews, who celebrated their 10th anniversary with the Rocker last Thursday. "It's pretty amazing we've lasted 10 years, because radio years are like dog years," Fuller told the Providence Journal. "In radio, if your ratings suck, you're gone. But

Digital Discussions Captivate Capital

■ Artists, top Internet and label execs testify before Congress about the future of downloads

Anyone who took the time to follow a Senate Judiciary Committee hearing on July 11 called "The Future of Digital Music: Is There an Upside to Downloading?" was treated to an excellent one-stop analysis of the forthcoming legal, political and economic showdowns over digital music. Just as importantly, the industry gained an insight into what some of the nation's most powerful legislators think of the current battle over digital music.

Some of the highlights included debates over fair use of copyrighted materials; discussions of the feasibility of developing software to accurately account for the transfer of copyrighted material; and dialogue about the possibility of imposing statutory or compulsory licenses on music if access to record company catalogs is not uniformly granted.

Nearly everyone took some kind of beating, from upstart Internet firms that have been accused of violating copyrights to established record companies that have been chastised for allegedly withholding access to music.

A Glimpse At The Future

Those testifying at the hearings were Napster CEO Hank Berry, Metallica member/co-founder Lars Ulrich, The Byrds member/co-founder Roger McGuinn, MP3.com Chairman/CEO Michael Robertson, Sony Music Entertainment President/New Technology Fred Ehrlich, Emusic.com founder and President/CEO Gene Hoffman Jr., Gnutella developer and InfraSearch founder Gene Kan and Cherry Lane Digital-One-House LLC founder/CEO Jim Griffin, RIAA President/CEO Hilary Rosen was also asked to participate after opening remarks were entered into the Congressional Record.

The hearing was headed by Judiciary Committee Chairman Orrin Hatch and Judiciary Committee Ranking Minority Member Patrick Leahy, both of whom worked on the Digital Millennium Copyright Act of 1998. Also participating was California Democrat Dianne Feinstein and New York Democrat Charles Schumer.

While Hatch and Leahy repeatedly said that they wanted to avoid talking about pending litigation, the two inevitably got to the heart of a few legal matters. That was clear when Hatch asked Rosen — through various scenarios — about making copies of recorded music. That forced Rosen to counter, "Senator, you're leading me down the Napster argument before the Ninth Court, and I can't go there."

To be fair, Hatch did the same thing to Berry, as did Feinstein, prompting the Napster chief at one point to rely on the company's current line of thinking that "first you have to accept the fundamental assumption that what 20 million users are doing on a regular basis is copyright infringement and that all 20 million users are guilty. That's what the position has been in the lawsuit, and we just don't think it's right."

Voluntary Or Compulsory Licenses?

That issue aside, Hatch also questioned participants about licensing music to outside parties. Here's one sound bite from the hearing:

Hatch: Mr. Ehrlich, what is your response that, if companies like MP3.com or Emusic and Napster are put out of business through litigation by failing to grant them licenses for your music, you will greatly empower the Gnutellas and Freenets that do not have a business office when an unauthorized version of "I Disappear" suddenly appears?

Ehrlich: We are in the business of making sure that our music is available in as many places as possible. It's not our intention to stop businesses from succeeding, but we want to make sure that businesses don't unjustly enrich themselves by not getting authorization.

Hatch: But you do license to Emusic?

Ehrlich: To date we have not. We are in active conversations with a tremendous amount of companies, and we have licenses....

Hatch: Do you license to Mr. Robertson's company, MP3.com?

Ehrlich: We are in active conversations with MP3.com.

Hatch: Mr. Ulrich, do you care to comment?

Ulrich: We look forward to dialogue with all of the gentlemen at the table at some point. Mr. Berry reached out to us a few weeks ago. There was a little bit of dialogue, but not much that was close to anything we felt comfortable with. We certainly understand, as I said in my statement, that this is the future. And we have no problems with the Internet. It's just on whose conditions.

Hatch: Tell us how?

Ulrich: We believe that, as the artist, we have the right to control what happens with our music. That choice has clearly been taken away from us. To be fair, Sony and the rest of the major labels continue to zealously protect their valuable copyrights and aren't about to license them willy-nilly.

But the issue of making those copyrights more widely available was repeatedly brought up. Hatch even closed the hearing with a question concerning Judiciary Committee oversight of digital music and the possibility of determining compulsory licenses for Internet music and the need for a clarification of the fair-use doctrine in that area.

In response, Robertson highlighted a few of the enormous hurdles web companies face: "Senator, there needs to be clarification of fair use. When the chairman asked Hilary about copying tapes, and she

"We are in the business of making sure our music is available in as many places as possible. It's not our intention to stop businesses from succeeding, but we want to make sure that businesses don't unjustly enrich themselves by not getting authorization."

cannot or will not answer, that in itself indicates there is a need for clarification for personal use, especially fair use, for property you own. As for compulsory licenses, I detest them, because they're guaranteed to be one of two things: too expensive or too cheap. And that's the dilemma we face.

"However, in this environment, where we have companies at all ends of the spectrum, it's important to get licenses. We have a license from two of the major record labels, but the music publishing side is an absolute disaster, and it's not clear that we will be able to get the publishing licenses required to turn on some of our services. In that light, Congress has to look closely at some sort of input in the future."

Hoffman agreed, noting, "The answer is clear that you need to engage in oversight, as you are today, to determine if licensing is occurring. If there is not an environment that provides for fair and reasonable licensing, then perhaps you will need to take steps to make sure this occurs, for much the same reasons that you did with TV. We can only have these industries created if we have fair and reasonable licensing, and this kind of oversight leads to that."

Leahy also picked up on the licensing dilemma and noted earlier in the hearing that 20 million Napster users, many of whom are of voting age, will begin demanding changes. "If the parties don't quickly move to some voluntary licensing arrangements, then I suspect there is going to be pressure on Congress to create statutory licenses," he said. "There will be pressure from Congress to create a single fee for the performers, writers, the record companies and all concerned. Frankly, I'm not sure everybody's going to be happy if we did that, and I would hope all the parties might continue to work together."

Following The Money

In order to gauge the possibility of that happening, Leahy and Hatch inquired about how both parties could monitor the transfer of copyrights, which would jump-start licensing discussions. Here's another sound bite:

Hatch: Can Napster or Gnutella — peer-to-peer architecture — be made to work with either a counting software that allows for accurate accounting of copyright royalties or access-control software to ensure payment for using it music? And if it can, please explain it.

Berry: Technologically, I think would be extremely difficult, but probably worth the effort.

Kan: It would be extremely difficult. Even if we were to force it upon software developers in this country, if you throw in a few jurisdictions, then that sort of control evaporates. If we were to convince the developer of Napster to include accounting and so on, there would be massive leakage. Everyone would run to Gnutella, the successor technology, which would be even more onerous than Gnutella. The solution is to apply the carrot, not the stick. We need to make people sort of want to stop profiteering on the mass duplication and distribution of intellectual property.

Possibly encouraging Hatch and Leahy's queries into more readily available licensing deals was McGuinn's comments that the 'Net had increased awareness of The Byrds' music and, just as importantly, ticket sales to his concerts. McGuinn noted, "I got e-mail from people all the time who discover The Byrds' music basically from listening to tracks on the Internet. There's a renewed interest in folk music since many of those songs are on the Internet, and in doing that has increased the number of people at my concerts by maybe 15 to 20%."

Nevertheless, both Hatch and Leahy acknowledged that the biggest challenge is balancing the impact of new technology with the rights of copyright holders. Leahy stressed, "I'm looking at software that Shawn Fanning created, and we're talking about technological innovation, whether it's this or anything else. That's what we want to promote, not stifle."

Alternative, Active Rock Warm Up To Sum 41

Island Def Jam Music Group has reached north of the border in its efforts to continue rebuilding its rock roster. Based on early indications, the results look promising for the pop-alternative act Sum 41. The act's debut single, "Makes No Difference," is poised to enter the Alternative top 50 chart.

Stations supporting the track include CIMX/Detroit (the spins leader, according to Mediabase), WPBZ/West Palm Beach, WZPC/Nashville, KWOD/Sacramento, KPNT/St. Louis, WXDX/Pittsburgh, XTRA (91X)/San Diego, WBRU/Providence, WKQX/Chicago and WHFS/Washington. A growing number of Active Rockers are also climbing aboard, including WWDC/Washington, KHTQ/Spokane, WXBE/Wilkes Barre and WXRC/Charlotte.

Sum 41 formed in the Canadian town of Ajax about three years ago, and the quartet eventually befriended Greig Nori, guitarist and vocalist for the rock band Treble Charger. From there things flowed pretty smoothly, recalls Network Management VP Ari Martin, whose company reps both acts. "Sum 41 toured locally and made a lot of demos," he says. "At one point Greig received one of the tapes. The band started coming to Treble Charger shows, and [Sum 41 guitarist/vocalist] Deryck and Greig eventually became really good friends. Greig liked their music and brought them to EMI Publishing Canada. That started them on their career."

Explaining how Network came to manage the band, Martin continues, "We got involved late last year, because that's when we started managing Treble Charger, and Greig was still managing the band on the side. We had heard the buzz on Sum 41, and their homemade electronic press kit was making the rounds; so we volunteered to get involved and co-manage the band with Greig."

On why the group inked with Island, Martin comments, "It's a small, dedicated group of people who are really into breaking rock music. They were incredibly enthusiastic about the band and, more importantly, extremely committed to the band's longevity — not just living and dying by radio, but by doing things like aggressively pricing the album and doing extensive street marketing. You could see they wanted to build the group over time. We were very impressed."

IDJMG Sr. VP/Promotion Ken Lane sees a bright future for Sum 41. "We're really dedicated to breaking this band because we believe their music represents much of the future of this company. These guys have a unique approach and attitude about their music, and that comes through in a lot of ways, especially in their electronic press kit. If you haven't seen it, you should, because it really conveys what the group is all about."

As far as targeting radio, IDJMG naturally set its sights on Alternative and Active Rock, says VP/Promotion Stu

Bergen, who began working with Sum 41 on his first official day in the office, June 1. "The band really connect with their audience because they're in the demographic. The power-punk audience can be very discriminating. They sort out pretenders very quickly. If these guys weren't in a band, they would be listening to bands like Sum 41, which is what ultimately lends a lot of credibility to their music."

While Alternative has been fastest to embrace the group, IDJMG foresees healthy growth at Active. Bergen comments, "We believe the group and its music can exist very comfortably there. And the format is also important to us because we believe the band has strong male appeal."

CIMX PD Murray Brookshaw, whose station last week played "Makes No Difference" 39 times, admits it took a few listens before he "got" Sum 41. He recalls, "We had seen the press kit and listened to the song and thought the band had a refreshing, fun sound and attitude. That was about it."

"But that's the same with a lot of this kind of music. There are a lot of great pop songs out there, so you have to listen to the songs a few times in order to have a better idea of what's going to just lie there and what's going to break out. When we put it on the air, it began to take off. Now it's getting really good phones."

Going forward, IDJMG's Bergen says that the label will continue to build a base at radio and foster as many partnerships as possible between the band and individual stations across the country. Bergen continues, "The band will be doing some Warped tour dates and a few big festivals in Canada, and then they'll come back and tour. We have a handful of radio concerts already lined up and expect to finalize more in the very near future."

Sum 41's debut album, Half Hour of Power, was released June 27.

Ready For Takeoff

"Money in the Bank" might be more than just a song title for Jacksonville-based alternative act Rev-7; it could be their ticket to a major-label deal if the results at Alternative WWVW/Savannah, GA are any indication.

WWVW PD Phil Conn was already familiar with the band, thanks to his work with Rev-7 founder Todd Horn when Horn was with the now-defunct Spider Monkey. A recent WWVW-sponsored Rev-7 show at a Hilton Head venue was a major push along the road the group now travels. Conn recalls, "When I saw them live, I couldn't believe the performance. When I received a demo from the band, I spiked it here and there. I added it a few weeks ago, and we've been getting great phones ever since."

Rev-7 are managed by Just West Entertainment founder Lanny West. Commenting on his short-term plans for the group, West says, "We've pretty much kept a low profile because of Todd's involvement with Spider Monkey. They've been doing 15 to 20 dates a month, concentrating on northern Florida up through Hilton Head. Every time they play, about 150 to 300 people show up. We want to continue building those markets and take it from there. We also plan to press about 200 copies of a seven-song EP and get it into Savannah as soon as possible."

West has also lined up a showcase on Aug. 12 at the Dark Horse Saloon in Atlanta as part of the Atlanta Music Conference. The group have yet to sign a publishing deal. For more information, call West at (404) 261-5537.

MUSIC NEWS & VIEWS

Napster Good, Says Jupiter

Contrary to the claims of the RIAA, high-tech research firm Jupiter Communications reports that users of song-swapping software such as Napster and Scour are 45% more likely to increase record purchases than nonusers. In a companion survey, Jupiter predicts the online music market will reach $5.4 billion by 2005, spurred largely by online subscription sales.

In regard to the former study, Jupiter analyst Aram Sinnreich said, "When we conducted our consumer survey — controlled for key music-purchasing factors such as existing spending level, age, income, gender and online tenure — we still found that Napster usage is one of the strongest determinants of increased music buying." Sinnreich also called the RIAA's argument flawed because the RIAA survey took place before Napster's launch.

In related news, Chris Blackwell's Palm Entertainment has partnered with Napster to make an MP3 version of Elwood's song "Sundown" available on the Napster website. Blackwell noted, "Our collaboration with Napster reflects our company's belief in the Internet as a vehicle to break new artists. We believe that sharing Elwood's music with the Napster community will result in greater awareness and sales for Elwood. We are confident that once people have a chance to sample and preview his single, they will become fans."

Eminem, 'N Sync Top MTV Awards

The red-hot rapper and the boy band led the field with six nominations each for the 2000 MTV Video Music Awards, set for Sept. 7 in New York. Not far behind were The Red Hot Chili Peppers, Metallica and Sisqo, each of whom picked up five nods. Video Of The Year nods went to Eminem, 'N Sync, The Red Hot Chili Peppers, D'Angelo and Blink-182; Best Male Video nominations went to D'Angelo, Eminem, Kid Rock, Moby and Ricky Martin; Best Female Video nods went to Christina Aguilera, Aaliyah, Britney Spears, Macy Gray and Toni Braxton; and Best Group Video nominations went to Blink-182, Destiny's Child, The Foo Fighters, 'N Sync and The Red Hot Chili Peppers.

Sneak Peek At Newest From U2

As they could with the group's previous album, U2 fans can log on to u2.com to watch the band place the finishing touches on their latest release. The site, a precursor to the official U2 website, will track developments on the new album and includes live, constantly updated images from the band's Dublin studio. U2 frontman Bono told the BBC's Radio One that the first single is expected to be titled "Beautiful Day" and that the track was inspired by his work with Jubilee 2000's "Drop the Third World Debt" effort. The album is expected to be released around Halloween and is being produced by Brian Eno and Daniel Lanois.

This 'n' that: USA Today reports that Paul Simon will release You're the One, his first studio album since 1990, in the fall ... The Los Angeles Times says that John Mellencamp has begun work on his next album, while Adult Alternative staple Old 97's have started recording their third disc ... Loud Records has set Sept. 5 as the release date for its hip-hop/rock compilation Loud Rocks, which features superstar rap and rock acts covering hit rap songs.

Station Concerts Make The Grade

■ Kiss 108, Wild 94.9 stage sellout shows to drive ratings

Regardless of market size, it seems as though just about every CHR station in America is doing at least one station concert a year. In fact, many are doing one in the summer and one in the fall, and a few others are doing even more than that. These days label executives aren't sure if their job is promoting records or promoting concerts.

Just what do these shows mean to the stations? Some use them as non-traditional-revenue centers, making money on everything from tickets and service charges to vending, audio-streaming rights, advertiser packages and more. Others believe in free admission or low ticket prices. Whichever path stations choose, for the amount of time and energy they put into pulling off one of these megashows, the PDs and MDs are ultimately looking for ratings increases.

Two of America's largest and most successful station concerts are produced by WXKS (Kiss 108)/Boston and KYLD (Wild 94.9/San Francisco). This week we take a backstage tour with Wild 94.9 Director/Marketing & Promotions Carlos Pedraza and Kiss 108 Asst. PD/MD Kid David.

Carlos Pedraza
KYLD/San Francisco

R&R: When do you start working on the shows? When do you secure the stadium?

CP: We start soliciting groups

WILD 94.9

Carlos Pedraza

anywhere between three to six months before our shows, depending on what angle we're taking. We work with the arena to make sure we have enough security. The number of security guards is determined by the arena. In some cases it's determined by the number of people you expect, and in some cases it's determined by the type of lineup that you have.

R&R: Do you advertise outside your station?

CP: We really don't. Our shows are designed to appeal to our listeners. Our shows are typically a guaranteed sellout, and they sell out in anywhere between 20 minutes and four hours. We haven't done one show that hasn't sold out. We market these shows to our listeners via on-air contesting and promos.

R&R: Can you walk me through your building process?

CP: We build the show on the national level with the bigger groups, and we work on the smaller groups once we have the bigger groups locked down. Once all the groups are locked down, we get ready to go on the air a minimum of four weeks out from the event date. We start with a tease week, and then we kick off the promotion with a 5pm announcement, typically on a Friday, where we announce the lineup and promote that tickets are going on sale the following Wednesday.

We do donate to charities, but every show is taken on a case-by-case basis. In some cases we can't donate money because the show is too expensive to put together. But then there are some events, like the Cinco De Mayo Bomb, where we do donate money to different charities. We'll donate to teen charities that really affect our teen listeners. We go to the Latino charities that affect our listeners as well. Every show and every scenario is different. We don't work with one particular charity every time we do a show.

R&R: How long have you been doing these shows?

CP: The station's been doing them for over four years now, and typically we do three of them a year. Next year we're going to cut back to just two.

R&R: Do concert promoters help with the shows?

CP: We work with the Radio Events Group. Beyond that, we work with our independent, Greg Lawley at Lawman Promotions. The station makes its revenue selling sponsorships. Technically, we don't make anything on ticket service charges or sales. Between Lawman, PD Michael Martin and APD/MD Jazzy Jim, they line up the talent and work with the labels and the booking.

R&R: What sponsorships do you sell? Do you sell advertising packages with tickets for clients to give away to their employees?

CP: We do have packages with tickets, and every package is different. We have a title sponsor that would be like, "Wild 94.9 and Coca-Cola Present." Then you have lower-tier sponsors, a booth sponsor ... you can have a poster sponsor, and you can have a T-shirt sponsor. There are a lot of different levels of sponsorship, and our sponsorships are determined by what their particular client's needs are.

SUGAR SUGAR

Sugar Ray talks to the press corps backstage at Kiss Concert 2000.

There's a template for a sponsorship package, but that's not to say that we can't pick and choose from different packages to make a package for somebody individually. So every package is really tailor-made for that individual client's needs.

R&R: Does the station get a piece of the vending, T-shirt sales, etc.?

CP: In some cases we do. In some cases we sell T-shirts and posters. It's different for each show.

R&R: What are the dates for this year's shows?

CP: We did one in October, tied around Halloween, called the Boo Boom. Then we did our Cinco De Mayo Bomb, and we did one prior to that in March.

R&R: Do you sell pre-parties and after-parties?

CP: Yes, but they may be free. There are a lot of different scenarios. We've done pre-parties where it was really the nightclub's pre-party, and we were there supporting it. That could be intended as a sponsorship, or we'd sell a sponsorship to a local nightclub, and they can have the right to do the official after-party.

R&R: In the end, is it all worth it?

CP: It's always worth it. Our shows are intended to appeal to our listeners and give something back to our listeners. The satisfaction is almost guaranteed for us because all of our shows sell out and we're guaranteed that we're going to have 18,000 people in that arena. There's a lot of satisfaction that comes out of just seeing an event happen and seeing all the hard work that you put into an event actually surface.

Everything we do up to that point — the planning and making sure that we dotted our i's and crossed our t's and that every area is covered and everything else that needs to be addressed is addressed — when it's show time, that's the result of all your hard work and all the effort that you put into it.

R&R: What's the primary reason for putting on a show?

CP: It's always for ratings. We always hope we can improve our ratings with a show. Revenue is always a factor as well, but more importantly it's to give our listeners an event or something to do, an extension of our station. It's an opportunity for listeners to come out and experience what we do and meet the people they hear every day on their radio station.

Kid David
WXKS/Boston

R&R: Tell me about the legendary Kiss Concert.

KD: It started back in 1979 as our

Kiss 108fm

first event. It was called the Kiss Party back then, and there were maybe three or four acts. Now it's grown into this huge all-day concert at the Tweeter Center which holds about 20,000. We typically have between 20-30 acts that perform nonstop, one after the other all day. The concert is always the first Saturday after Memorial Day, and it's always a sellout show. This year, for Kiss Concert 2000, we had Don Henley, Jennifer Lopez and Bon Jovi. There were 24 acts on the bill.

R&R: How do you get the artists to come and perform?

KD: It's always been just relationships with the labels over the years. It turned into a show where labels and management call us and ask if they can be on the bill each year. We certainly go out and try to get a few of them, but there are some now that come to us and say, "Hey, we'd like to be a part of the Kiss Concert again this year. We were there two or five years ago, and we'd love to come back." This year Bon Jovi was an example of that. They have done a couple of shows for us. They have the new record out, so they're not working it, and they wanted to come and do the show.

R&R: Besides airplay, do the bands play for promotion?

Total sample size is 400 respondents with a +/-5 margin of error. Total average favorability estimates are based on a scale of 1-5 (1 = dislike very much, 5 = like very much). Total familiarity represents the percentage of respondents who recognized the song. Total burn represents the number of respondents who said they are tired of hearing the song. Songs must reach 40% familiarity before they appear in print. HP Potential (HP) represents songs that have yet to chart in the top 25 on R&R's CHR/Pop chart. Sample composition is based on females aged 12-34, who responded favorably to a CHR/Pop musical montage in the following regions of markets: EAST: Baltimore, Boston, Long Island, New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Providence, Washington, DC. SOUTH: Atlanta, Dallas, Houston, Miami, San Antonio, Tampa. MIDWEST: Chicago, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Columbus, Detroit, Kansas City, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, St. Louis. WEST: Los Angeles, Phoenix, Portland, Sacramento, San Diego, San Francisco, Seattle. © 2000, R&R Inc.

CALLOUT AMERICA® Hot Scores

BY TONY NOY

It's another huge Callout America del in No. 1, and this time it belongs: Papa Roach's "Last Resort" (Dream Works). Roach currently hold a top 3 position on the R&R Alternative chart, a after enormous sales, requests and a MTV/TRL buzz. Roach connect big-fis with CHR/Pop females. The first-week tally ranks Roach No. 1 among fem teens and No. 6 with females 18-24.

Is rock the next big wave for CHR? As we continue to see welcome divers with music from Nelly, Destiny's Child, BBMak, Dr. Dre and 'N Sync in the Callout America top 10, it's clear that fem CHR/Pop listeners also want to hear rock-based music. Papa Roach, 3 Doors Down, Creed, Nine Days and Matchbox Two have some of the best-testing songs in the country.

The top five best-testing songs in the demos are:

Teens 12-17: Papa Roach; Destiny Child "Jumpin', Jumpin'" (Columbia); 'N Sync "It's Gonna Be Me" (Jive); Nine Days "Absolutely..." (550 Music/Epic); 3 Doors Down "Kryptonite" (Republic/Universal); Nelly "Country Grammar" (Fo' Reel/Universal) tied with Sisqo "Thong Song" (Dragon/Def Soul/IDJMG); BBMak "Back Here" (Hollywood); Jay-Z "Big Pimpin'" (Roc-A-Fella/IDJMG); Eminem "The Real Slim Shady" (Aftermath/Interscope).

Women 18-24: 3 Doors Down; Eminem; Matchbox Twenty "Bent" (Lava/Atlantic); Creed "Higher" (Wind-up); Dr. Dre "The Next Episode" (Aftermath/Interscope); Papa Roach tied with 'N Sync; Jay-Z; and Joe "I Wanna Know" (Jive) tied with Jessica Simpson "I Think I'm In..." (Columbia).

Women 25-34: 3 Doors Down; Nine Days; Joe; BBMak; Vertical Horizon "Everything You Want" (RCA) tied with Splender "I Think God Can..." (C2/Columbia); Nine Days; Destiny's Child; Dr. Dre.

Most Added is the total number of new adds officially reported to R&R by each reporting station. Songs unreported as adds do not count toward overall total stations playing a song. Most Increased Plays lists the songs with the greatest week-to-week increases in total plays. Weighted chart appears on R&R ONLINE MUSIC TRACKING.

172 CHR/Pop reporters. Monitored airplay data supplied by Mediabase Research, a division of Premiere Radio Networks. Songs ranked by total plays for the airplay week of Sunday 7/16-Saturday 7/22. Bullets appear on songs gaining plays or remaining flat from previous week. If two songs are tied in total plays, the song being played on more stations is placed first. Breaker status is assigned to songs reaching 2500 plays or more for the first time. Songs below No. 20 are moved to recurrent after 20 weeks. Gross Impressions equals Average Quarter Hour Persons times number of plays (times 100). Continued from Page 46

KD: Yes, many of the bands who have played a Kiss show in the past know that you can always find huge stars at our shows, and they just want to come and hang and watch other people play. Sugar Ray came this year and just stood on the side of the stage and watched everybody perform. Many of the labels want their newer artists to play the show because there is a lot of press there.

It's a fun show. They get to see other artists perform, hang and have fun. We treat the artists very well at our show. We really make them feel like they're important. They are VIPs, and that's important to them.

R&R: Do you have a pre-party or a post-party?

KD: We have a Friday-night party, a pre-party, every year and a party that follows the show.

R&R: Do you sell your own tickets? Do you sell sales packages?

KD: Tickets are sold through Ticketmaster. We sell sponsorships to the show to clients, and they pay to be involved in the event. They get a lot of signage on site the day of the show. Many of them also set up booths and sell CDs of artists who are there.

R&R: What's the advantage of putting all of this effort into this type of show?

KD: It's to generate ratings. Our show sells out even before we announce who's coming. This year's show in June sold out in January with no acts announced. After the show sells out, the only way people can get tickets is to listen to the radio station and try to win them. So, when I say ratings, we create forced listening because they can't buy tickets. It's not a moneymaker. The listeners know we do this show every year, and they listen to win tickets.

R&R: So it's not really a revenue-generator?

KD: No, because we spend so much on hotels, limos, production and parties. We don't make money, believe it or not. We don't really pay for any of the artists; it's just more of a ratings thing.

R&R: How many hotel rooms do you book for the show?

KD: We generally use three different hotels. The overall total for the night of the show is about 100 rooms, with just artists. And we pay cash for those rooms.

R&R: I would imagine that it's a project that involves most of the staff.

KD: We have a concert committee of maybe 20 people who meet every week starting in January or February. We're constantly meeting, planning and scheduling things.

R&R: Did you webcast this year's Kiss Concert?

KD: This is the first year that we did. We had a setup backstage, and there was a webcam in the press area so people could log on to our website and watch backstage interviews and chats with some of the artists. Our sister company, AMFMI, did everything.

R&R: How did you advertise the show on side of the station?

KD: When we announce the artists, we always get some pre-press in the newspapers on the local TV stations, as well as on MTV, VH1 and Entertainment Tonight. We really don't need any press to sell out the show; it does that on its own. We will run some ads to promote "listen to win" tickets, but our real press comes the day of the event.

R&R: Who works with the labels to get acts?

KD: PD John Ivey and me. We've already started talking about next year.

R&R: Do you have a person who just deals with talent?

KD: Yes, Lisa Bellino. Beginning in March, her full-time job is just working on the concert. She contacts management and sets up arrival dates and times, production needs, passes at anything that's artist-related for the show. She also handles the venue and sets up everything for the venue catering. We also have two production people who just work on the production of the show itself.

R&R: Do you have promoters that help you pull it off?

KD: No. It's all in-house.

R&R: What is the craziest request you've had to deal with?

KD: During a show two years ago I came back to the dressing room to get Mariah Carey to go onstage. She said, "I need my bottle of Cristal Champagne." I said, "We didn't know that you needed that." She wouldn't go on until she got it, so we had to send somebody to a liquor store. About 30 minutes went by, and there was nothing happening on the stage. When you're that big, I guess you can do whatever you want.

R&R: What is your most memorable Kiss Concert moment?

KD: For me, it was this past year, because I actually performed. I'm recording an album, and I performed a couple of songs at the show.

R&R: What was a moment you'd like to forget?

KD: Probably eight years ago, when Rod Stewart was there. He had arrived early, got upset that somebody was in his dressing room and left. We had to explain to 20,000 people that Rod Stewart was not going to perform.

R&R: Can you pass along a secret that others looking to do this caliber of show can use?

KD: John and I have become pretty adept at predicting what's going to be big at the time of the show. Sometimes we'll book somebody a year in advance — at that time they may not even be famous yet, but you think they might become famous. When it gets close to concert time and you ask for somebody big, it's too late. The trick is trying to predict the next superstars and booking far enough in advance. It's worked well for us each year.

ISN'T SHE LUCKY

After her concert at the Darien Lake Performing Arts Center, Jive recording artist Britney Spears hung out with WKSE/Buffalo Programming Asst./air talent Keith Kelly, PD Dave Universal and Asst. PD/night host Shy Guy Shawn.

Around The World

■ And you thought your show was big!

London's top-ranked CHR, 95.8 Capital FM, recently staged its third annual Prince's Trust Festival. Not even a ton of rain could stop a sellout, as over 100,000 attended this outdoor extravaganza in the city's famous Hyde Park.

As you might guess, Prince Charles is the "Prince" in the Prince's Trust, and the station raised in excess of $1 million for the charity. For that million-plus bucks, Prince Charles did the backstage hang from beginning to end.

This world-class event features around 45 acts and is broadcast live on Capital FM, on the web and on TV. The lineup consisted of British and international stars, including The Backstreet Boys, Elton John, Bon Jovi, Destiny's Child, Lionel Richie, Bryan Adams, Melanie C, Texas, All Saints and Kylie Minogue.

66 CHR/Rhythmic reporters. Monitored airplay data supplied by Mediabase Research, a division of Premiere Radio Networks. Songs ranked by total plays for the airplay week of Sunday 7/16-Saturday 7/22. Bullets appear on songs gaining plays or remaining flat from previous week. If two songs are tied in total plays, the song being played 21 on more stations is placed first. Breaker status is assigned to songs reaching 1000 plays or more for the first time. Songs below No. 20 are moved to recurrent after 20 weeks. Gross Impressions equals Average Quarter Hour Persons times number of plays (times 100). Track: "COUNTRY GRAMMAR"
Label: UNIVERSAL

Hot sh'it! St. Louis rapper Nelly teaches us a lesson in hip-hop as his debut single soars to the no. 1 slot. His new tune "Country Grammar" heats up the charts this summer, as hip-hop fans enjoy cruising to this hit and clubgoers flock to the dance floor. This is a No. 1 record, right up there with Juvenile's "Back That Thang Up" and Jay-Z's "Can I Get A...", which reigned at No. 1 for many consecutive weeks. ● Every once in while you hear a hit at first listen, and that's what this track was to me. I knew months ago that this would be the track that would help boost Nelly's career and get his foot in the door. I had the pleasure to meet this charming young man and view his video before anyone else at one of Los Angeles' upscale restaurants, compliments of Universal Records. And, well, we tried to compose ourselves, but while the video played, we got a little loud. We couldn't help ourselves. This song is the sh'it!

● It's one of those songs that even though you may not understand every word — and it may not even make sense — you can't help but to bounce to it and sing along ● "I'm going down down baby/Crenshaw in a Sentra/Boom boom baby/Ready to let it go!" — Renee's version. ● Never underestimate the power of a newcomer. Though longtime rappers usually dominate the top 10, this song will have a spot reserved on top of all hip-hop, mix show, Rhythmic and Urban charts, you just wait and see.

Make The Connection

Katz Urban Dimensions develops marketing concepts to help advertisers reach the African-American consumer

For this Marketing theme issue I've chosen to talk with Katz Urban Dimensions' VP & Managing Director, Brian Knox. Katz Urban Dimensions is a division of Katz Communications that focuses on reaching the Urban audience, specifically African Americans.

Knox has been in the industry for 12 years, and earlier this month he celebrated his first anniversary with Katz. The most important issue for those who want to sell products to African-American consumers is knowing how to connect with the culture itself. Katz has developed a marketing method that's proven to be effective with black consumers. Knox tells us all about this and provides charts to help reinforce his comments.

Brian Knox

"I wanted to know how Knox and his people suggest that a business looking to get a piece of those dollars should go about doing it. 'If advertisers want to reach this multicultural consumer, they have to show that they understand the cultural nuances of the marketplace,'" he said.

"At Katz Urban Dimensions we have begun to develop marketing concepts that are turnkey and that allow advertisers the ability to tap into, through the use of radio, the African-American consumer market."

More Than A Month

"There are two concepts that we have in place as of now," Knox continued. "One is called the 'African-American First Quarter Millennium Promotion.' That concept was developed as a result of Black History Month and our frustration at seeing advertisers come into Urban radio only during the month of February. Everybody flock to black radio during Black History Month, including advertisers that we haven't traditionally seen advertising on black radio.

"Our idea was to develop a marketing concept that allowed advertisers to stay in Urban radio and use Urban radio from the beginning of the month of December until the end of February. We've done that with a promotion that kicks off this year in December, beginning with Kwanzaa, moves into January 2001 with a Martin Luther King Jr. promotion and then concludes with the traditional dollars that they spend in Black History Month in February.

"This gave us the ability to go to an advertiser and explain the significance of two things: one, that we recognize the presence of advertisers during Black History Month, and two, that we don't see them the rest of the year. We're showing them how they can come in during December and stay with us for three months, which means we're getting three months' worth of activity, and they are getting the benefits of the buying activity of the black consumer market during that time."

"We have been successful in selling this concept to a retailer. At this time I am unable to officially announce who this package was sold to, but it certainly proves that the concept works. This advertiser was very receptive and bought into the program. They now have a simple turnkey method to show their knowledge of the African-American lifestyle, which puts them in a class by themselves.

"I would urge that Urban radio stations develop similar concepts and similar vehicles to deliver to the local market to keep advertisers more involved at a grass-roots level with Urban radio and African-American consumers."

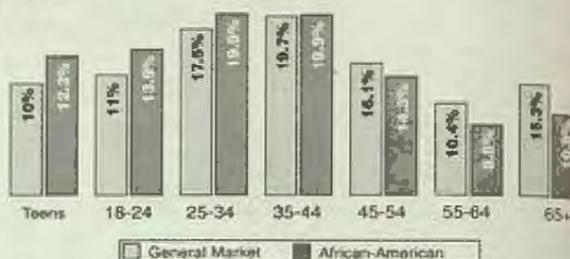

Cultural Nuances

I asked Knox if mainstream advertisers responded to holidays like Mother's Day with Urban radio advertising. Why? Everybody knows of the love black males have for their mothers. Try to think of an NFL or NBA player who hasn't said on national TV during a big game, "Hi, Mom! Cook me something after the game!" You know what I'm saying is true!

Knox replied, "You are absolutely right, but to advertisers, those are general-market holidays, and I haven't seen advertisers zeroing in on that particular holiday. That's what I mean when I talk about cultural nuances. There are things that we African Americans treat differently than the rest of the population does.

"Things like family and religion are

A Piece Of The Pie

"Many mainstream marketers are still overlooking the growth potential and the impact on market share that the multicultural and ethnic audience has," Knox began. "I really want to focus on the African-American segment of the market and how we can have a positive effect on their businesses' bottom lines.

"Mainstream marketers are not making the connection to truly motivate purchasers, and they are not sending out a message or a call to action. Mainstream marketers are still overlooking the growth potential and the impact on market share that the black consumer market can have on their business."

African Americans spent $533 billion dollars in 1999 on goods and services. I wanted to know how Knox and his people suggest that a business looking to get a piece of those dollars should go about doing it. "If advertisers want to reach this multicultural consumer, they have to show that they understand the cultural nuances of the marketplace," he said.

"With family being one of the significant cultural nuances, Mother's Day would and should be a natural. But many advertisers don't take advantage of that, including — I don't want to name any names — card manufacturers. That's a tremendous opportunity."

Win Your Own.Com

Knox then told me about Katz's second marketing concept: "It's called 'Win Your Own.com,'" he said. "We have decided to give away a website, and we're going to do it in the top 20 black-populated markets in the country. We're going to do it in the African-American community. This will give an advertiser the ability to recognize a concern in the black community by helping to bridge the digital divide, which, by the way, is more of an economic divide than any other type.

"This marketing concept includes giving away computers and a dot.com business. Advertisers that get behind this will reap the benefits by showing the black consumer market that they are concerned about this market and want to capture it not later, but now. This is a way that the advertisers can make a connection with the African-American consumer market."

Knox and his company represent a number of Urban radio stations. I asked him how he markets them. "Under the Katz Urban Dimensions umbrella we represent approximately 130 black consumer-targeted radio stations, which is representative of approximately 65 markets across the country," he said.

"One of our largest challenges is the educational process. We go out and educate advertisers and agencies about the viability of the black consumer market. The things that we share with them are facts about education, entertainment, income, home ownership and how African Americans' use of radio is different from the general market's use of radio.

"Marketers need to understand the importance of black radio in America. It is the only full-time, 24/7 electronic medium that is available to African Americans. Black radio is a pillar in African-American communities. Black radio is the main communication device in our communities all over the country. That's a fact.

"We know these things, and we're trying to educate others who don't know and understand this. Black radio is where we go to find out about those things that affect or will have an effect on our lives on a daily basis. When advertisers begin to understand that, that's when they'll begin to turn listeners into consumers of their products."

Knox ended by saying, "During winter 2000 census data was being collected. I believe that as the census information begins to trickle out to the general public, major advertisers and major agencies will begin to understand the importance of marketing to multicultural populations in this country.

"What Katz Urban Dimensions does is help advertisers to establish their brands in the African-American community. We have the ability to reach 96% of the 35 million African-American consumers in this country through the power of black radio."

Most Added is the total number of new adds officially reported to R&R by each reporting station. Songs unreported as adds do not count toward overall total stations playing a song. Most Increased Plays lists the songs with the greatest week-to-week increases in total plays. Weighted chart appears on R&R ONLINE MUSIC TRACKING.

82 Urban reporters. Monitored airplay data supplied by Mediabase Research, a division of Premiere Radio Networks. Songs ranked by total plays for the airplay week of Sunday 7/16-Saturday 7/22. Bullets appear on songs gaining plays or remaining flat from previous week. If two songs are tied in total plays, the song being played on more stations is placed first. Breaker status is assigned to songs reaching 1000 plays or more for the first time. Songs below No. 20 are moved to recurrent after 20 weeks. Gross Impressions equals Average Quarter Hour Persons times number of plays (times 100). ARTIST BREAKDOWN

ARTIST: BEENIE MAN
ALBUM: ART AND LIFE
LABEL: VIRGIN

While preparing for a trip to Seattle (my cousin Damon decided to get hitched. I tried to talk him out of it, but hey, what'cha you do?), I gathered some CDs to listen to on the plane. OK, I got my Next, my girl Amel, my "twin" Nelly and, let's see ... Beenie Man. Though the Beenie Man wasn't mine (what Walt doesn't know won't hurt him), I decided to take it along for the ride. The first three CDs had me going like I knew they would, but when I popped in the Art and Life CD by Beenie Man, my first thought was, "Pass the hatchie!" The vibe of this CD was incredible! I have to admit, I never fell into the grasp of the Beenie Man craze, but once I began to listen to his latest joint, I started pulling out my braids and preparing to dread.

The debut single, "Haters and Fools," which is also the first track on the album, got the party started. Though I did have a hard time understanding what Beenie Man was saying, I didn't care, 'cause these tracks and his sound created a vibe so strong, discernment wasn't a priority. "Fake ass niggas, they could never be my friend," exclaims Beenie Man in this song about the people who wish (and sometimes plan) your downfall simply because they're jealous of you. Not one to wear blinders, Beenie Man knows for whom to be on the lookout: "Haters and fools, treatin' me cool/Pulling me down, don't want them around." (Is this not the reggae version of "Backstabber?")

Talking about getting one's point across, Beenie Man includes two versions of "Love Me Now" on his CD. One track, the Rockwilder remix, features Wyclef Jean and Redman. The second features only Wyclef. But both let you (the world) know that regardless if you love him or hate him, Beenie is still going to get his. The single that is presently gaining airplay is the confectionery "Girls Dem Sugar," which features the tender vocals of Mya. Listening attentively brings me to this conclusion: Beenie Man loves women.

"Crazy Notion" sampled a little Brenda K. Starr "I Still Believe" melody. When I first listened to this song, I believed I understood its message. I then asked a friend to listen to it, and he agreed with me on this tune. If homegirl is seeking lingual pleasuring, Beenie Man is not the guy to be sought. "9 to 5" talks about the stresses of work, relationships and life. There's more of a rhythmic flow added to "The Best That I Got," while the tempo is slowed in "Art and Life." And with Arturo Sandoval assisting in the execution of "Tumble (La Caida)," I found parts of my body I thought had died suddenly gyrating and such to its Jamaican/Latin groove! (Watch out now!)

Reviewing this CD was very similar to reviewing the Les Nubians' CD Princesses Nubiennes. I couldn't understand what they were saying, but the groove of their slammin' tracks combined with those French vocals put me under. Now, after experiencing Beenie Man's joint, I'm stuck. How can I describe a CD whose sound is fantastic, yet for this lyrical fanatic the messages were somewhat cloudy due to an "accent" barrier? Hmmm.... The best way for me to describe Art and Life is this: It's kind of like eating a dish whose ingredients you're uncertain of, yet that tastes sooo good. Peace.

IN MY OPINION

with Doug Davis

Tamia
"I Can't Go For That"
(Elektra/EEG)

APD — WJMZ/Greenville, SC

Quincy Jones' baby girl, Tamia, has really matured, and it looks like she's left home to blossom into the woman she always knew she could be. I always said that once she grew and got a hold of the right material, she'd reach what I call "Diva-dom." Sista girl is on her way with a hot new single titled "I Can't Go For That," which is a well-written song about a woman who's tired of emotional and physical abuse from her man and decides enough is enough.

In "I Can't Go For That" don't expect a Hall and Oates sample (thank God), just a clever interpolation of the classic '80s hook. You'll be singing my favorite part of the song: "Why you tripping? Get your hands off me/Why you illin'? I'm supposed to be your nubian queen!"

Sistas are gonna work it out in the 2000 as the wave of "fight for your right" female records continues to flood the airwaves. Big ups to Missy Elliott and Bink Dog for the super-tight production! And a big, big up to Quincy Jones, who cultivated this lady. Tamia — the Patti Austin of 2000 — do your thing, girl!

Marketing & Promotion Nuggets From The 'Net

A cornucopia of ideas and products at your fingertips

Last week's Internet excursion through research companies' websites led me to follow a similar path this week. This time out, however, our targets are marketing and promotion sites.

Once again the goal was to see how much useful (and, hopefully, free) information I could get by visiting various websites while also searching for new or unique products. And again, as last week, the website guide used was the R&R Ratings Report & Directory.

One of the things I like to do at conventions is to make a complete map of the exhibitors' booths. In just a short time you can get a cursory look at the many tools and products available while staying abreast of the new wrinkles in the very old marketing and promotion game.

The Internet allows you to do this on a regular basis. It also allows you to browse a company's products on your own time and in much greater depth than you usually get in stock lots pieces. In my searches I found some interesting products from a variety of marketers.

Marketing: Ideas And Products

Strategic Media Research's marketing site, www.touchms.com, offers an interesting product called Roll 2, which is designed to reinforce your at-work telemarketing program (in their case, SMR's 180 Call System) with thank-you calls to listeners at their homes.

Seeking maximum recall from copywriters, the calls from celebrities or your personalities go out on Tuesdays. According to SMR, that gives you one more chance to reinforce listeners' recall of your station before Wednesday, which, of course, is the last day of the Arbitron diary week.

Point-to-Point Marketing (www.pointtopointmarketing.com) uses its graphics-loaded site to colorfully display its products. Click on the "Relational Mapping" area to see how the company displays and overlays station information to help you better understand the relationship between your database, your target and diary in-tabs. The site offers a "live" demonstration of how the company visually maps out your targeting strategy. Here, again, is a neat way to get a complete picture of a new product.

Point-to-Point also uses its site to tout its exclusive "E-Art" which allows clients to see their direct mail or other artwork quickly. That helps cut production time, for quicker project turnarounds.

The Nova Marketing Group (www.novamarketing.com) has a unique tool it calls Brand-O-Matic. It's an exclusive computer model designed to measure the power and worth of your radio station's brand. NMG says it is based on work done by noted marketing authors Al Reis and Jack Trout. The model "illustrates strengths, flags trouble areas and helps you develop strategic opportunities and priorities to follow your research effort," according to NMG. Unfortunately, you can't just plug stuff into the Brand-O-Matic to see how you score, but it is free to NMG's clients.

Also posted on NMG's website is a reading list for "the radio professional who's thirsty for new knowledge." Among the original click-and-read articles and pieces from other publications are: "Creating Great Buzz," "What Great Brands Do," "My Positioning Is Killing Me" and "If Your Morning Show Sucks, Here's a Good Reason Why." (The latter is a really good piece, by the way.)

Promotion: From Branding To Banners

A stop by the website of Banners on a Roll (www.bannersonaroll.com) yields a "Hot Tip" and "Hot Branding Idea" in addition to pictures and descriptions of the company's products. When I logged on, it was hawking a little item called "The Super Power Concert Light." A neat giveaway item, it's a light that goes on your key chain. Its design features a place for your logo and a sponsor's logo and space for a message that appears only when the light is illuminated. It's kinda cool ... and will certainly be easier on your listener's fingers than Bic lighters during those big-ballad concert moments.

The website's marketing "Hot Tip" is interesting, if a bit self-serving: It seems that special-event promoters are cutting banner rolls into single-logo sections and giving them to the audience to use to shade their faces or as something to sit on when the ground is wet. They've found that many people are taking them home and hanging them on walls or putting them up in windows.

Banners on a Roll also makes nifty use of its website by having a place where you can select a logo that's similar in shape to yours and then using that logo to give you an idea of what your banner would look like in either a horizontal or wrapped-booth layout.

my interest in unique giveaway gadgets and gizmos. An online search ultimately led me to the Hot Off the Press site (www.hotoffthepress.com), which claims that it offers more than 400,000 promotional items and boasts, "No one offers more promotional products than the 'premium kings.'" How about clear PVC umbrellas or an acrylic key tag? Maybe ice scrapers with your logo or mini sports balls or foam mitts? How about boxers, or even tool kits, emblazoned with your logo? If you want it, and it exists, chances are you'll find it here.

Boomerangs, bubble bath, checkbook covers, chocolate, divot tools, earplugs, spatulas — even spas and snow domes are available. It's kind of fun to browse around and use the items as thought-starters for unique stuff to give away. One of my favorites is the battery-operated "swimming fish aquarium." Your logo goes on the base and screw-top.

The Dr. Is In

Have you ever wondered about some of the stranger promotions you've read about in R&R? You know, the ones where jocks are buried alive, entombed in concrete or encased in a 5,000-pound block of ice for a couple of days? If you've ever wanted to know more about how these things work but didn't want to actually have to ask a human being some of those oh-so-delicate questions, visit Dr. Silkini at www.silkini.com.

This site takes the mystery out of stunt events. It walks you through each step of the promotional process, complete with pictures. It even has archives of stations that have used Dr. Silkini's various promotions along with names and numbers of previous participants you can call for references.

With two weeks' worth of website information behind us, it's fitting to end with a brand new gadget designed to drive people to your website, Impact Target Marketing has just unveiled the cyber-version of a Mr. Froggy's Magic Screen or a Captain America decoder ring. In alliance with Atlanta-based Global Commercial Group, Impact now offers the "WebDecoder." This trademarked device is a clear mylar game piece used to help drive listeners or viewers to a station's website.

Listeners obtain the piece either through direct mail or by picking it up at a participating sponsor. They then go to the station's site and hold the piece up to a "secret decoding area" to determine their prize. This can be an effective and efficient way to create awareness and traffic for your website, particularly if it's just being launched. The combined companies note that the types of sweepstakes and contests can vary from single instant-win games to frequency-based contests designed to drive traffic on a consistent basis.

Search, Shop And Seek The Unique

Finally, I want to emphasize that I just cruised random websites listed in the Marketing & Promotion section of the R&R Ratings Report & Directory. There are 16 pages of folks listed there, many of whom provide services and products similar to those featured this week. You can use our publication and your computer to comparison shop, check out products and see what's new on the promotion and marketing fronts. It's just another way to stay ahead of the competition in a more efficient and expedient manner than you've ever had available to you before.

Checking out research websites is a great way to stay abreast of the latest techniques and trends.

Fan Fair Stays In Nashville

Event heads downtown to football stadium, convention center

Fan Fair is staying put in Nashville, but the focus of the annual event is moving to downtown Nashville.

For Fan Fair 2001, the main stage shows will be taking place at Adelphia Coliseum, home of the Tennessee Titans. The autograph and exhibit booths will be located several blocks away, at the Nashville Convention Center. The decision was announced last Friday (7/21), immediately following the CMA's quarterly board meeting.

For the past 19 years Fan Fair has been held at the Tennessee State Fairgrounds. The CMA seriously began to consider a new location late last year after plans for a $26.8 million renovation of the fairgrounds were dropped. The CMA and the Grand Ole Opry, organizers of Fan Fair, even briefly discussed the possibility of taking the event to another city. However, the ultimate choice was between moving Fan Fair to downtown venues or to the Nashville Superspeedway, a NASCAR track currently being built 35 miles from downtown in neighboring Wilson County.

Taking place June 14-17, 2001, the next Fan Fair marks the event's return to downtown, where it began in 1972 at the Municipal Auditorium. Among those lobbying for Fan Fair to remain in Music City proper were Nashville Mayor Bill Purcell, the Nashville Convention & Visitors Bureau, the Nashville Sports Authority and the Nashville-area Chamber of Commerce.

Use of the 50,000-seat Adelphia Coliseum is expected to be limited to the label-sponsored nighttime concerts. Although the venue is located across the Cumberland River from downtown Nashville, it is convenient to hotels, restaurants, performance halls, clubs and the new Country Music Hall of Fame (set to open next May).

The scheduled completion of the Shelby Street pedestrian bridge will provide a more direct route to downtown. Riverfront Park is also being considered for additional Fan Fair shows, and downtown clubs and restaurants will benefit from fan club parties. This year's Fan Fair resulted in an added $10 million or so to the Nashville economy.

Next year's Fan Fair runs Thursday through Sunday, a change from the weekday focus, in an effort to attract more fans, especially those within comfortable driving distance of Nashville. Fan Fair tickets have been priced at $90 in recent years, but organizers are considering ways to change the price structure, including the possibility of single-day tickets.

"Our vision is to reinvent and reinvigorate this event," says CMA Exec. Director Ed Benson. "We also want to hold on to the traditions and values of this event but enhance the experience for everybody." Fan Fair Committee co-Chairman Tony Conway adds, "Fan Fair 2001 will be an exciting, all-new event and a concept that hasn't happened before. It will give both the fans and the artists the best of both worlds."

Album Notes

Sara Evans and Patty Loveless have each gotten some famous artists to help them record their new albums. Evans wrote six of the 12 songs on her third RCA album, Born to Fly, set for Sept. 26 release. Evans and veteran producer Paul Worley share producer credit on the 12 songs, but the international version of the CD features a bonus track, "You," which was co-produced by Martina McBride. It marks McBride's first production work aside from her own recordings. Born to Fly also features "Every Little Kiss," written by Bruce Hornsby, who also performs on the track.

Loveless enlisted Trisha Yearwood and bluegrass mainstay Claire Lynch to complete a vocal trio for "My Heart Will Never Break This Way Again," a track from her new album. Loveless says she's a huge fan of the Trio albums recorded by Emmylou Harris, Dolly Parton and Linda Ronstadt and comments, "We didn't set out to recreate and capture what Trio did, but I wanted to have something that had the same feel. So I tried to figure out which voice would do what. And while we don't sound like Linda, Dolly and Emmylou, I do think we have that same kind of vocal spark." The new album, Strong Heart, is set for Aug. 29 release.

Cyber Rodeo

Jones Direct Ltd., the Internet development group for Jones International Networks, has launched a new website at www.rodeostars.com. The site includes elements devoted to rodeo history, current news, pro rodeo standings, interviews and chat rooms.

In a tie-in to Jones' country video channel, Great American Country will premiere Chris LeDoux's Ropin' and Ridin' TV special Aug. 4. During the program viewers will be directed to the website, where they will be able to register for a trip to Las Vegas to meet LeDoux, see his concert and attend the National Rodeo Finals. LeDoux, a former rodeo champ, will be featured in an Aug. 3 cyberchat to promote the TV special. His new Capitol/Nashville album, Cowboy, arrives Aug. 1.

Legends Fest

Country Music Hall of Fame members Kitty Wells and Little Jimmy Dickens are among the country veterans on the bill for the first annual Legends Fest, set for this Sunday (7/30) at the Buck Lake Ranch in Angola, IN. The festival, hosted by Ralph Emery, also features Grand Ole Opry stars Jack Greene, Stonewall Jackson, Jeanne Pruett, Charlie Louvin and Johnny Russell,

Final CMA Nominations Due Soon

Lonestar and Lee Ann Womack will announce the final nominees for the 34th annual CMA Awards this Tuesday (Aug. 1), but artists and labels are already courting voters.

One sure sign that awards ballots are looming on the horizon has been an increase in the volume of mail sent from local record labels. Like a well-oiled political machine, they're hoping to gain support for their artists' advance of the CMA show.

Five nominees will be announced in each category, but some of the publicity machines were already running a few weeks ago when a more lengthy preliminary list of nominations made its way onto the streets of Music Row. So far it appears as though the RCA Label Group gets the prize for its promotional efforts with mailings for several acts, including Lonestar, Clint Black, Martina McBride, Andy Griggs and Kenny Chesney. DreamWorks was quick to send cards on behalf of Toby Keith and Jessica Andrews.

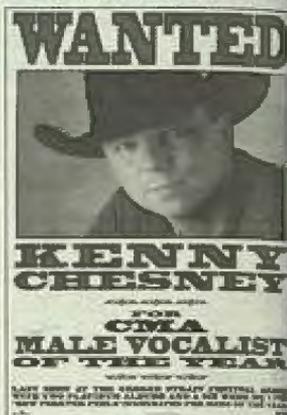

The promotional materials point out the artists' achievements during the past year, including other awards, album sales and chart activity. However, in case you'd somehow forgotten about Martina McBride's worthiness as a Female Vocalist of the Year contender, RCA sent a nine-song compilation of her greatest hits. With Keith Urban a priority at Cape the label serviced a special package containing his current album.

DreamWorks beefed up its campaign for Toby Keith by sending his He Do You Like Me Now? album in a gold cardboard case emphasizing the word "vote." Playing off Chad Brock's first R&R No. 1 single, "Yes," Wark Bros. just mailed campaign buttons with three messages, "Vote Yes! 2000 Chad Brock," "Yes! We Brock Vote" and "Brock the Vote."

However, the most clever promotion thus far may be the posters BNA delivered on behalf of Kenny Chesney. To refresh your memory, Chesney gained notoriety — and publicity — after allegedly stealing a horse at a month's George Strait Country Music Festival stop in Buffalo. By the time the scuffle was over, Chesney, Tim McGraw and McGraw's tour manager were all arrested.

Designed to resemble a "wanted" poster, the promotional item seeking support for Chesney to eventually be named the CMA's Male Vocalist of the Year. At the bottom of the poster is the pitch, "Last seen at the George Strait Festival armed with two platinum albums and a six-week No. 1 for 'How Forever Feels.'" along with the entire Kitty Wells Family Show. This marks the final year of touring for Wells.

You've got to give BNA and Chesney credit for having a sense of humor — and for turning an otherwise bad situation into a promotion bonanza.

Bits 'N' Pieces

• The Dixie Chicks' Fly has received RIAA certification for sales of 6 million copies. The trio's previous release, Wide Open Spaces, is fast approaching sales of 10 million.

• Brad Paisley was presented the Distinguished West Virginian award during a concert at the West Virginia Interstate Fair and Exposition. Gov. Cecil Underwood was there to present the award, which is presented to native West Virginians who have shown a lifetime commitment to community service and excellence in their respective fields. Past award recipients include Kathy Mattea and astronaut John McBride.

• Clay Walker's single "The Chain of Love" has been licensed for use in Space Cowboys, an upcoming Warner Bros. Pictures film produced and directed by Clint Eastwood. Set to open in the next month, the film stars Eastwood and Tommy Lee Jones.

• Billy Gilman has been in studio to complete a Christmas album scheduled for release in late fall.

• If you've logged onto Am Online recently, you were greeted the smiling face of a woman in a pink dress and red sweater. It's Ann Womack, who says she's initially uncomfortable when asked to provide the on-screen welcome AOL users. She says, "It was a strange signing on and seeing self pop up. When you're on Internet, you think it's one of those places you go where you really totally anonymous."

Most Added is the total number of new adds officially reported to R&R by each reporting station. Songs unreported as adds do not count toward overall total stations playing a song. Most Increased Points/Plays lists the songs with the greatest week-to-week increases in total Points/Plays.

150 Country reporters. Monitored airplay data supplied by Mediabase Research, a division of Premiere Radio Networks. Songs ranked by total points for the airplay week of Sunday 7/16-Saturday 7/22. Bullets appear on songs gaining points/plays or remaining flat from previous week. If two songs are tied in total points/plays, the song being played on more stations is placed first. Breaker status is assigned to songs achieving airplay at 60% of reporter base for the first time. Songs that are down in points/plays for three consecutive weeks and below No. 1 are moved to recurrent. Gross Impressions equals Average Quarter Hour Persons times number of plays (times 100). Chris LeDoux

Cowboy (Capitol)

Before Chris LeDoux signed to Capitol/Nashville, he recorded 22 albums of his own, selling the tapes from his pickup truck as he made the rounds on the rodeo circuit. LeDoux was a cowboy who played guitar and wrote songs in his spare time, but he gained greater attention after Garth Brooks mentioned his name in the song, "Much Too Young (To Feel This Damn Old)." A major-label deal provided LeDoux with a wider audience, one that was aware of his past recordings without ever having actually heard the music. LeDoux explains, "Everywhere I go, there's always a handful of fans who ask, 'Where can I get the old stuff?' And I'd have to tell them, 'Well, it's out of print: You can't find it.' I can remember thinking, years ago, that someday, if I got a chance, I should rerecord some of my favorites and try to get them right. So that's what I did." The result is Cowboy, which contains 11 of the old songs newly recorded with producers Mac McAnally and Alan Schulman. The music is a departure from LeDoux's current rowdy, good-time, rocking concert performances. He says, "I got out all the old records and listened to them. I listened to see how well-written the songs were and what they meant to me and where they came from. A lot of years had passed, and I hadn't listened to these songs — or even thought about them — for a long time. Hearing them again really took me back to the time and place where I was when I wrote them." Among the songs on Cowboy, LeDoux's 33rd album, are "He Rides the Wild Horses," "A Cowboy's Got to Ride," "Ten Seconds in the Saddle" and "Hippies in Calgary," but the closing track hits closest to home for LeDoux, who resides on a ranch in Kaycee, WY. He explains, "'Song of Wyoming' fits me a little better now than it did years ago. It's really about a guy who's getting along in years and enjoying the things that are simple. I love being home, doing the simple things and smelling the sagebrush, seeing the blue sky, enjoying the peace and quiet."

Jo Dee Messina

Burn (Curb)

Jo Dee Messina's I'm Alright was a breakthrough album, spawning several huge hits and recently getting double-platinum certification from the RIAA. Referring to the follow-up, Burn, Messina says, "It took us two years to make this record, and I thought — with I'm Alright — 18 months was a long time. It was about finding the songs, because the music is everything. There's a lot of great material out there; it just didn't feel like what we were going for at the time. I'm in a very different place in my life from I'm Alright. So much has happened. My career is working better than ever, and my personal life is in a more secure place. But I had to go through hell to get there." As always, Messina's choice of new material retains a tone of optimism and encouragement. She says, "I want people to lean on these songs the way that I do. Music has always affected me. It gives me energy and helps me keep going. I hope this record can do that for others too." The album includes the first single, "That's the Way," which climbs to No. 7 on this week's R&R Country chart. The album was produced by Messina's usual production team of Byron Gallimore and Tim McGraw — and McGraw joins her for the vocal duet "Bring on the Rain," which closes the CD. Messina says, "It's always important to know that everyone loves the songs when we're in the studio. But Tim loved 'Bring on the Rain' so much, he wanted to sing on it. I think we both gravitated toward that song because we both truly understand what it's saying. I mean, he's been there; I've been there — and it's one of the common bonds we both have. After all, we've always had the same dreams. We had the same struggle in a lot of ways, with relationships and our careers. I've always wanted to sing with him, but obviously for us, love songs weren't going to work. This song seemed to be perfect."

Test Your Marketing IQ

■ Tony Quin on why TV is still a best bet

Even with the advent of so many new and cutting-edge marketing options, many ACs and Hot ACs still depend on a reliable old standby, television. IQ Television Group President Tony Quin was raised in the advertising business. He began his marketing career at ABC in 1981 and launched Atlanta-based IQ in 1995. This week he discusses television's viability as a marketing tool for radio.

R&R: You say that television advertising is still popular among radio stations because nothing better has come along.

TQ: If radio could use radio, that would probably be better. Television is still the only medium where you can give people the emotional experience of the product. Radio is an emotional, rather than an analytical, purchase.

If you're buying a computer, you evaluate RAM, hard drive and many other different things, but it's not a pressing need to change or find the right radio station. It's more a culmination of emotional influences that leads you to make an almost impulsive decision.

R&R: What marketing-related changes have you seen in the last few years?

TQ: In order to have a viable format in a market, you must continue being important to the audience. The Internet, movies, magazines and television are all trying to take a piece of the limited amount of time a person has for leisure activities. Radio needs to keep itself fresh and important.

R&R: What impact, if any, has consolidation had?

TQ: The biggest change is a dawning recognition that stations have to sell the format and have to sell the benefits of their product rather than just selling against the guy across the street. Marketing used to be about two ACs duking it out. It's now about holding onto the pie in general. The audience doesn't care how many stations one group owns in a particular market.

R&R: How do you rate ACs, Hot ACs and Pop/Alternatives in their ability to use television as a marketing tool?

TQ: Marketing for ACs, in general, has always been more important than for other formats. Especially with Soft AC, the nature of the product has tended not to be a driving part of a listener's life. In order to get sufficiently high awareness and be top-of-mind for Arbitron, marketing has been essential.

Viacom was AC's most successful radio group for years. They were also the most aggressive marketers in the country. There was a direct relationship between the two. To some degree, [former Viacom Radio Division President] Bill Figenshu wrote the book on using television for AC marketing.

In the past you could take the last page of a research study and have a spokesperson read it, and that would be sufficient to get results, especially with 400 points a week. It doesn't work these days, however, and 400 points costs an impossible amount of money. The creative environment for television commercials is far more competitive. A radio station advertising on television, in and of itself, won't do the job. The creative, emotional impact of a spot is fundamental to its success.

R&R: What do you do with radio station marketing?

TQ: We try to create a set of emotional influences and, at some point, we'll hit a trigger that causes a change in behavior patterns. We can often artificially create that trigger by tactical marketing, which is usually some form of contesting. You essentially ask for a behavior change, and the reward is something other than the product. That's because the product's benefits aren't immediate or important enough at that particular moment to get someone to make a behavior change.

R&R: Describe your AC "Jan" campaign, which is being used in about 35 markets.

TQ: It's a series of 15 different commercials and is targeted at in-office listening. What we tried to do is deliver a straightforward message with clear music positioning, which is critical in AC. At the same time we wanted to wrap it creatively so it would be memorable and cut through. KOIT/San Francisco was instrumental in developing that campaign and has been using it for years. People turn off mentally to "adspeak," so there isn't any in the scripts.

This commercial was originally designed for WMXV/New York as a counter to crosstown soft AC WLTW. It was a very powerful attack. A woman was having lunch at her desk and saying that she didn't mind lite cheese and lite dressing, but lite radio was really boring. You can't do anything more head-to-head than that. The day it was meant to go on was the day WLTW and WMXV became sister AMFM stations. Guess what got killed immediately? The same approach was used in Chicago by WNNB against WLIT this past book.

R&R: You just mentioned being memorable and the importance of a spot cutting through. How does a spot stand out?

TQ: It's very simple. People think you need the most incredibly expensive special effects. In fact, special effects have hardly any emotional impact. Standing out is about coming from an unexpected place.

Thirty seconds is a very short time to make an impression. If it sounds like you're trying to sell something, people immediately go into resistance mode. Part of the trick is to quickly worm your way into the right place in a viewer's consciousness. I try to avoid saying what I'm selling in the first few seconds. That's the time I have to get people to pay attention. They switch off mentally the moment they know they're being sold something.

"An AC without effective marketing is like a three-legged chair. It may be able to survive a book or two, but it's guaranteed to fall over. It all catches up with you."

The first job for any music station is make sure the audience knows what you do for a living. That's often about defining your music, which can be extraordinarily difficult in AC.

R&R: IQ, Filmhouse, Guerrilla, Chuck Blore, Rosler, Bob Michelson and some others produce great spots for radio stations. How frustrating is

"If it sounds like you're trying to sell something people immediately go into resistance mode. Part of the trick is to quickly worm your way into the right place in a viewer's consciousness. I try to avoid saying what I'm selling in the first few seconds."

it when a station buys your spot but doesn't back it up with sufficient placement and frequency?

TQ: I once was a media buyer at Leo Burnett in Chicago, so I know that side of the business pretty well. Unfortunately, it's out of our control. If people ask us, we'll tell them what we think. Regardless of how many points they put behind it, we get blamed if a campaign doesn't work. But television has become dramatically more expensive and, in many ways, more difficult to buy.

An AC without effective marketing is like a three-legged chair. It may be able to survive a book or two, but it's guaranteed to fall over. It all catches up with you. AC — and any other 25-54 format — needs to be aggressive with marketing. If your station emphasizes 18-24s, you can sometimes get away without it because of the way kids consume life. Stations that target 45+ also do less marketing because of audience dynamics. But that center group is very marketing-driven.

R&R: Understanding that this will be a biased answer, why should stations market with television?

TQ: If you think about it, there really aren't that many terrific choices. Outdoor is wonderful to reinforce other media, but as a medium on its own, it's not particularly intrusive and can't effectively communicate a concept. It's best to act as a trigger. Print has never been much of a medium for radio.

That pretty much leaves direct mail and, to some degree, telemarketing. The blush is a little off the rose with telemarketing. It's limited and terribly expensive — usually around $5 or $6 dollars per captured name.

R&R: Speaking of price, how cost-effective is television?

TQ: Radio people tend to be spoiled. The average national television commercial costs close to $400,000; the average decent local TV commercial is in excess of $100,000. There's a fair amount of equipment, time, effort and people involved in this stuff. Since we syndicate a lot of concepts, we manage to keep costs low, but I don't think many radio people appreciate it. Without the benefit of these options they'd be paying a lot more. If a local radio station doesn't look as good in its advertising as the biggest media option being marketed, it's not in the running for somebody's time.

R&R: What does your typical spot cost?

TQ: Syndicated spots vary by market size, but custom production what it is. There's nothing we can about that. We also try "gang" spots together, where we shoot two three a day. We are able to charge people less that way.

R&R: What does a station get for its package?

TQ: We try to provide at least :30s and a couple of :10s. Everything's licensed for a year, so stations get their money's worth.

R&R: Since it costs less, do more stations lean toward syndication rather than custom spots?

TQ: We have 200 syndicated campaigns in our library and over 2000 cataloged spots in our database. I can go back and use material to make a custom campaign from existing material and sell it at a syndical price. We don't have to bring in 2 person crews.

R&R: What's better, film or videotape?

TQ: We never put any videotape on television. Videotape looks cheap and local. There are distinct differences to the quality of the look, but it's also the way people perceive it.

R&R: Do you do campaigns anything other than radio stations?

TQ: Very little.

R&R: Anything noteworthy? Stations to consider as they plan the fall book?

TQ: There's actually a unique situation with the election and the Olympics. I've been told that there's five to six times more political money ever before to be spent on television. A political advertiser can come in any time and get the lowest rate in the last 45 days and bump out anyone else. The key political weeks are the beginning of October through the first of November.

If a radio station has its 300-point-a-week schedule on, and half of it got bumped to the end of November, might as well destroy what's left. If you're not doing it right, don't do it at all. Be ready to risk the effectiveness of the entire schedule, or pay a premium to have your spots at a nonbumpable rate.

Our answer to that is a direct-mail campaign. Using the same mailing list as Arbitron, and for the same amount of money as a television campaign, we can mail 70% or better of all the people in that database. The direct mail return is 3%-6%; radio direct mail is more like 12%-15%. Q Vid-Packs are getting a 60% return. It's a very powerful tool, and if ever there were a time that it makes sense, it's this fall.

114 AC reporters. Monitored airplay data supplied by Mediabase Research, a division of Premiere Radio Networks. Songs ranked by total plays for the airplay week of Sunday 7/16-Saturday 7/22. Bullets appear on songs gaining plays or remaining flat from previous week. If two songs are tied in total plays, the song being played on more stations is placed first. Breaker status is assigned to songs reaching 875 plays or more for the first time. Songs below No. 20 are moved to recurrent after 20 weeks. Gross Impressions equals Average Quarter Hour Persons times number of plays (times 100). A Clear Vision For Digital Content

Four Eyes Digital offers clients Internet marketing solutions, database management and top-of-mind awareness

After Michael Fischer stepped down as PD of KOAI (The Oasis)/Dallas, industry speculation on the high-profile format veteran's next move ran rampant. Fischer fielded a variety of offers — programming, consulting, publishing and more. He chose instead to launch an endeavor with partner Chris Hensley, Four Eyes Digital, that would connect all his dots: experience, passion and vision.

I first encountered Fischer in 1991 — over a martini — at the urging of my then-boss, Sin-Drome Records Pres. Henry Marx, who insisted, "You gotta meet this guy." My head reeled as I absorbed Fischer's high-torque, baroque rap; how he cut his teeth on radio research with Jack McCoy and at KIFM/San Diego; his fervid confidence in then-nascent NAC/Smooth Jazz's mass appeal; the critical role of marketing in any business; and how new media would revolutionize the world as we knew it. I interviewed him for my first R&R column, "Air Maneuvers: PD's Secret Weapons," in 1994 and have kept tabs on him ever since.

Crystal-Balling

In spring of 1995 Fischer resigned his APD/MD post at WNUA/Chicago to become PD of Sony's SW Networks' Smooth FM format.

Chris Hensley

Soon after, I was in New York on business and paid a visit to SW's tony offices. Fischer was stoked. "Look at this," he exclaimed as he sat me before a computer monitor and launched my maiden voyage on the Internet. We hopped a digital ride to virtual Paris, where I looked in wonderment upon Da Vinci's Mona Lisa.

As though gazing into a crystal ball. Fischer described SW's benefits — and our technological future — with these prescient words: "Because the Internet world is very dry, it's our mission to make it more entertaining for the fan of NAC to learn about what we're doing. We intend to offer local radio stations the ability to extract useful information for disc jockeys on a daily basis. "Advances in hardware and software will produce a more functional, streamlined environment for radio programmers. Faster computers for music scheduling, better ways to build and manage databases, unlimited information for show prep — that's the future."

Hensley, who is the former President of N2K, explains the mind-set that led to the founding of Four Eyes Digital: "Everyone's becoming aware of the efficiencies of the Internet in terms of time and cost, as well as how to use e-mail to deliver messages and build databases, listener lists or whatever you're trying to accomplish. But you have to dig beneath the surface and look at the types, content and quality of e-mails.

"Over the longer term some companies will fall by the wayside because they'll be delivering junk. We've become very aware of that, and we realize how important it is to protect the quality of the content of whatever list you're using."

Targeted Content

"In any industry — and not to exclude radio," Fischer interjects, "top-of-mind awareness is what raises the response rate to your product. The most important thing about using the 'Net for marketing is that its frequency of contact compared to other mass media is by far a much better value. The issues are: What's the trigger to motivate someone to participate? What's the reward? Is there any instant gratification? And how often do you talk to them on the back end?"

"Our company is designed to bring television-quality graphics to the web as a medium to deliver the message. We've chosen to use rich e-mail video. The more the Internet becomes like TV, the more it will be considered a utility and be trusted as a medium of communication. If we can turn your e-mailbox into a personal TV and deliver personal messages, we've done our job. But it has to be relevant information — things people are genuinely interested in — so that it's not spamming.

"I've spoken with countless list-management companies, and it's funny that they only collect data based on tastes. They haven't gotten into ZIP codes yet, or age, gender and other demographic considerations. They are all so happy that someone responded and said they liked magazines or music or art that they didn't think to ask other questions. There are a lot of companies with massive databases that have very broad-stroke information.

"Our goal with Four Eyes Digital is to build databases and deliver content that is as targeted as you can get with radio direct mail. We'll collect information that's meaningful for long-term campaigns. Incredibly, 99% of those Chris and I talk to have no vision for a multiple-phase campaign. They are so happy that they have something out on the Internet, but they don't care how it's measured or what its impact is."

Disappearing Lines Of Distinction

"For the money a major-market station would spend on one direct-mail piece during an Arbitron sweep, they could literally do a year's worth of rich media and develop a database that's much more powerful than their direct mail."

Mike Fischer

adds, "This goes to the issue of how lines of distinction between computers, the Internet and television are beginning to merge."

"For the money a major-market station would spend on one direct-mail piece during an Arbitron sweep, they could literally do a year's worth of rich media and develop a database that's much more powerful than their direct mail," Fischer observes. "A top 10 market

They've just changed their newsletter to HTML-rich e-mail text because they learned that people's database can sustain a high level of graphics. That makes a station's product that much more interesting, and it opens a whole new world of possibilities for programming a personalized message to its audience. KKSJ couldn't have gotten the same 'wow' factor out of just a piece of plain text.

"As a Smooth Jazz programmer I am so lucky to have been involved in a format that was progressive and open to new marketing techniques," Fischer concludes. "By sheer necessity, Smooth Jazz, from Day One has had to find a way to do rich marketing. That experience taught me to communicate with the listener. We were challenged to make our stations top-of-mind with an unfamiliar product. We found those techniques, and the rest of the world is now ready to enter that rich-marketing realm.

"The success of the Internet will be based on full-motion animation and video and database management. Our mission with Four Eyes Digital is to create turnkey solutions for companies that want to create top-of-mind awareness for their products and brands by using high-end video and graphic components by television designers mixed with sensible long-term marketing strategies."

To learn more, visit the Four Eyes Digital website at www.4eydigital.com.

"The most important thing about using the 'Net for marketing is that its frequency of contact compared to other mass media is by far a much better value."

Mike Fischer

might spend $70,000 on one direct-mail campaign, but for the same cost you could do so many more rich e-mail messages and do them repeatedly for frequency.

"The whole game of radio is top-of-mind awareness, because that's what Arbitron measures. KKSJ/San Francisco, which has an impressive database, is a great example.

GREAT DANE

Three female NAC/Smooth Jazz luminaries — KWJZ/Seattle MD Dianne Rose, All That Jazz's Suzy Peters and KIFM/San Diego APD/MD Kelly Cole — take a moment to appreciate Samson artist saxophonist Michael Lington (who was born in Denmark).

37 NAC/Smooth Jazz reporters. Songs ranked by total plays for the airplay week of Sunday 7/16-Saturday 7/22. Bullets appear on songs gaining plays or remaining flat from previous week. If two songs are tied in total plays, the song being played on more stations is placed first. Breaker status is assigned to songs reaching 400 plays or more for the first time. Songs below No. 20 are moved to recurrent after 20 weeks. Gross Impressions equals Average Quarter Hour Persons times number of plays (times 100). NAC notes with Carol Archer

Steve Cole's "Got It Goin' On" (Atlantic) has got it goin' on in a major way. The week's top added track is hot, with seven new adds, including JRN, KWJZ/Seattle and KMGQ/Santa Barbara, CA. Rotation increases are breaking wide as well; Cole's up to 23 plays at KTWV (The Wave) in Los Angeles, 15 at WNUA/Chicago and 13 at WJZZ/Philadelphia.

Brenda Russell's beautiful "Catch On" (Hid-Brah) makes a dynamic move: 14-10*/1st.

Michael Lington's "Twice in a Lifetime" (Samson) is already getting 18 plays on The Wave, and was added this week by WQCD/New York, HD/Denver and KOAZ/Tucson.

Two of strongest new tracks are covers: Dave & Montell Jordan's sultry take on George Michael's "Careless Whisper" (Capitol) and Garth Brooks' "Do It Again" (Samson), on which Jeffery and Warren Hillburn! Both are great records.

Also new and noteworthy: WJZZ/Philadelphia's edit of Jango's "Diamond Drive"

(Samson); Chiell Minocci's "My Girl Sunday" (Shanachie); Urban Knights' "The Gypsy" (Narada); Roger Smith/Peter White's "Uptown" (Miramar); Blue Knights' "Saturday Morning" (1201 Music); Bela Fleck And The Flecktones' "Zona Mona" (Columbia); Michael O'Neill's "Never Too Late" (Independent), which was added by KJZY/Santa Rosa last week; and Jeff Kushiwa's "Hyde Park" (Native Language), an add at WJZZ.

A word about E-Charts, which appear weekly in the news pages of R&R (in the Internet News & Views section): The E-Charts Editor is David Lawrence, whose insights many will remember from the "Tomorrow's Technology Today" panel at R&R Convention 2000. We base the E-Charts on sales and on reports from streaming audio carriers (Netradio, Amazon, Spinner, CDNOW, etc.) that enjoy 99.3% of such traffic on the Internet; E-Charts are weighted by that traffic. Incidentally, Everett, WA-based Sonicnet.com's NAC channel, which is programmed by Scott O'Brien, will likely become an E-Chart reporter in the very near future.

This week Don Henley's "Taking You Home" (Reprise) is No. 1 on the NAC/SJ E-Chart, displacing Boney James & Rick Braun. The majority of programmers are still resisting Henley's track (one notable exception is KYOT/Phoenix PD Nick Francis, who calls it "fucking awesome!"), but the truth is, listeners are seeking out "Taking You Home" and buying Henley's CD on NAC/SJ commerce-enabled sites. In my opinion, those who ignore such data do so at their own peril.

Heads Up

Fourplay
Yes, Please
(Warner Bros.)

The name Fourplay is synonymous with the best in contemporary jazz. Theirs is an exclusive franchise built on the scintillating songs, inspired arrangements and consistently brilliant performances of Bob James, Larry Carlton, Nathan East and Harvey Mason. The supergroup is, quite simply, one of the most respected, successful and enduring of the era. As expected, their latest, Yes, Please (Warner Bros.), showcases their collective gifts to perfection. Impeccable production enhances this impressive song collection — from the appealing and commercial "Free Range" and the funky, uptempo "Robo Bop" to "Save Some Love for Me" and "Go With Your Heart." Masterful.

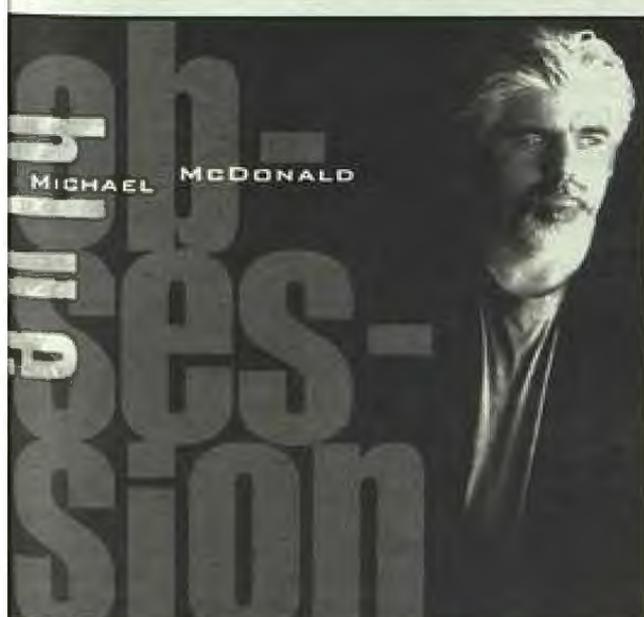

St. Germain
Tourist
Blue Note

For several weeks I've been hearing the import track "So Rute" by St. Germain regularly on Nic Harcourt's KCRW/Santa Monica, CA show, Morning Becomes Eclectic. With each listen I've been more and more intrigued. Finally, I called Blue Note's Tom Evered to wheedle an advance copy for myself and to learn more about the label's plans for domestic release of St. Germain's CD Tourist.

This is St. Germain's second record, the first on Blue Note. The artist is actually named Ludovic Navarre, and he has a lot of experience with the French sound of Air, Delt Punk and Dimitri from Paris. He's been one of the hottest mixers and producers of that sound over the past several years, but he's not really into techno at all; he's into creating incredible soundscapes. The first tune, "Rose Rouge," incorporates a sample of Marlena Shaw live at Montreaux from an old Blue Note record. It's her voice you hear saying, "Put your hands together." ■ Ludovic is this mysterious man behind the scenes who doesn't come out onstage much, but the band — they're nine pieces — just played at Montreaux, and apparently they brought the house down. The album is at over 100,000 in France, and it's still selling. Whoever has gotten the import in the U.S. has loved it, and they are playing the heck out of it. ■ The historical Count de St. Germain was a mysterious figure at the court of Louis XV in the 18th century. He was a shaman who pretended to be a wise man, so Ludovic picked up the name to give an identity to what he was doing musically. St. Germain are an actual, fully functional playing band whose sound Ludovic manipulates onstage. ■ Blue Note's plans include hiring Giant Step and two other companies for club service. We'll service the French 12-inch vinyl to all the clubs and DJs, and we'll get it into nonmusic retailers too. It's got those great, spacey kind of hooks that come and go, and that will make it perfect for restaurants too. We hope to have St. Germain here in October for the CMJ convention in New York. The record creates an atmosphere rather than being one song after another. ■ St. Germain's Tourist is another step for Blue Note. It shows that our music — and the jazz tradition — are endlessly interesting and malleable. From Us 3 to St. Germain, jazz, jazz beats and loop sounds are more acceptable now. This is a gorgeous record that is not a jazz record, but it comes from that inspiration via France.

The Myth Of The 25-54 Demo

■ Programming and sales must understand the generational 'Berlin Wall'

The heart of any marketing plan, whether for a radio station, a record company or an advertiser, is accurate knowledge of the target audience. As time slips away, it's easy to get stuck in the routine of rattling off demographic figures that have "always" been true about one's product without realizing that, in fact, the demo has changed.

One of the people in our business who best understands changing demos is Jacobs Media General Manager Paul Jacobs. Jacobs has a background in sales and was GM of stations in Dallas and Detroit. You might be surprised to hear that he thinks that "25-54 is the single biggest mistake advertisers can make."

percentage of 25-54s is declining and the percentage of 18-49s is increasing."

That's significant, Jacobs recalls. "Ten years ago you couldn't find many advertisers outside soft drinks and beer who would start any demo buy at 18. So this is terrific news for youth-based formats. There is without a doubt a wave of dollars that goes well beyond this moment in dot-com time."

Jacobs has been working to help advertisers understand the differences between people on either side of the divide. "We teach them with examples like this: If you're a baby boomer, you grew up in the '60s. The president who made the biggest impression on you was probably John Kennedy. If you're a Gen-Xer, the president who made the biggest impression on you was Ronald Reagan.

"Boomers grew up watching I Love Lucy, Andy Griffith and The Flintstones. Gen-Xers grew up watching South Park and The Simpsons. Boomers had three television choices: CBS, NBC and ABC. Today's young adults obviously grew up with a lot more choices. As a result, young people use media differently. They're accustomed to being their own program directors, to having choices and niches. With the Internet, MP3 and Napster, they have the ability to literally craft their own radio station."

The advertisers are beginning to catch on, Jacobs says. "While it's still easy to market to boomers, the one-size-fits-all mentality of media buying no longer works. The same sort of niche marketing that we've been doing in radio forever is something the car companies have picked up on. Car companies are so powerful, they really do drive a lot of other products," no pun intended.

Car Talk

By way of example, Jacobs talks about the Ford Focus, which launched "a $100 million ad campaign targeting 16-year-olds. I worked very closely with one of the Ford divisions on its rollout. They had me go around the country and help train the dealers on what to expect when a 16-year-old comes in to buy a car. It was a culture shock to these guys who knew how to sell Acrostars, and it was hard for them to understand what they should do tactically with these consumers."

Jacobs' first piece of advice to the dealers was to tell them to chill. "Stop talking, don't sell. Next, I suggested that music in the environment is very important to a young person, particularly as it relates to their automobile. We know that motivating people to take a test drive

"Advertisers are beginning to realize that while it's still easy to market to boomers, the one-size-fits-all mentality of media buying no longer works."

is a great way to sell a car, so the next time a young person comes in to buy a Focus, don't ask which color they want. Ask what music they'd like to listen to when they take a test drive. Direct them to the CD room. Work with your local radio stations to get all the current CDs, then let the buyer go in and pick out Limp Bizkit or Britney Spears or whatever and create their own environment when they take a test drive."

The Oldsmobile Olero sponsorship of last year's Rockfest is another example Jacobs points to as he exclaims, "Things are really changing, and this bodes extremely well for youth-based formats. One of the reasons why there are significantly fewer Rock and Top 40 stations in markets is that the revenue support has not been there.

"It's quite possible that if this

"I'm seeing traditional 25-54 advertisers decide to go younger and begin to move dollars into Internet promotions and advertising, bypassing Rock and Alternative radio."

revenue shift continues with national dollars, it could spur more competition, but it will certainly lead to more choices and brands of Rock and Top 40 in markets. That's a good thing."

X & Y Outnumber Boomers

The 72 million baby boomers were at one time the biggest generation in history. Gen Xers — perceived of as being whiny, angst-ridden, marginalized and in relatively small numbers — were easy to ignore. But Jacobs says that Gen Y, raised in the '90s, has made a significant difference.

"They're viewed as a relatively optimistic, aren't-things-great sort of generation," he explains. "When you combine Gen X and Gen Y, which you can do because the two generations are fairly similar, you have 101 million people. Every year for the next 10 years there will be 4 million new drivers in this country. Detroit sells 16 million to 17 million new cars a year. That's why you're seeing this product shift, and car companies is just one of the categories shifting."

Jacobs also has an example of what not to do: "Twenty years ago Levi's had a 100% share of the market. They went wrong in the mid-to late '80s when they decided that they had such a lock on boomers that they would ride the boomer train into oblivion. They created Dockers and Savant and larger sizes because their target customer was getting fat and old. They missed one key point: The branding mechanism for jeans kicks in around 12 to 13 years old. Levi's became culturally irrelevant.

"They've been replaced by targeted niche brands such as the Gap and Old Navy, companies that understand the importance of branding people when they're young. Now Levi's is trying hard. They're sponsoring radio station rock festivals like crazy in an attempt to become more relevant to young people. They're spending $15 million this year in Internet promotions. But the fact is, they fell off the radar. They lost sight of how important it is to continually regenerate your brand with young people."

Proper Focus

To help keep a proper focus on young Americans, it's important to know who they are. "One third of Gen Y, about 60 million people, are not Caucasian," Jacobs notes. "The impact on products and on music is significant: 'Livin' La Vida Loca,' Santana, 'Mambo No. 5,' rap rock and so on.

"And while the stereotypical view of Gen X is of baggy pants, backward-turned baseball caps, piercings, tattoos, skateboarding in the parking garage and slacks, here's the reality: Forty percent are over the age of 30, 44% are married, 50% are parents and 58% have 401k plans. They've grown up, and the advertising world is beginning to realize that, in many cases, by ignoring Gen X, they're really making some mistakes.

"It's been difficult for advertisers to understand that a big segment of 25-54s aren't listening to Barbra Streisand and Neil Diamond, but Pearl Jam and Limp Bizkit. That's why this wall is there and why they have to change their image of who their target customer is.

"Also, Rock stations need to do a better job of selling, positioning and profiling their audience for the advertisers as well. Any Rock station trying to generate a better image of their audience with the 18-34-based advertisers needs a campaign hard against 25-54. And by the way, when you tell the story the right way, it works."

Internet Impact

For all the talk about the Internet there's still a lot of "bear market" thinking about it in the industry. Jacobs cautions those who would stick their heads in the sand. "There is no question, when looking at the Edison 12-24 study that Larry Ross presented at the R&R convention that young people are moving quickly to accessing music online. But also, they're just spending time online.

"The scary part from my perspective is that I'm seeing traditional 25-54 advertisers decide to go younger and begin to move dollars into Internet promotions and advertising, bypassing Rock and Alternative radio. That concerns me greatly. The best, or worst, example was last year when Volvo, the 'soccer mom' car, put $30 million in Internet marketing and didn't spend a nickel in radio.

71 Rock reporters. Monitored airplay data supplied by Mediabase Research, a division of Premiere Radio Networks. Songs ranked by total plays for the airplay week of Sunday 7/16-Saturday 7/22. Bullets appear on songs gaining plays or remaining flat from previous week. If two songs are tied in total plays, the song being played on more stations is placed first. Breaker status is assigned to songs reaching 400 plays or more for the first time. Songs below No. 20 are moved to recurrent after 20 weeks. Gross Impressions equals Average Quarter Hour Persons times number of plays (times 100). Average Quarter Hour Persons used herein with permission from The Arbitron Company (Copyright 2000, The Arbitron Company). © 2000, R&R Inc.

The Myth

The luxury car makers are coming with cars priced under $30,000 and are targeted at Gen X, but they're going to Active Rock or Alternative radio. These formats and these stations need to do a much better job recognizing that this shift is happening. Dollars are moving demographically in our direction. It's incumbent on radio stations to not only be in front of these advertisers on the other side, but to create Internet strategies that can be presented to these advertisers as well."

Jacobs refers to what Michael Eisner calls "touch points" and explains, "The Lion King isn't just an animated movie, it's a CD, a videocassette, a website, a Broadway play, stuffed animals and board games. Michael Eisner doesn't care where he gets your money for The Lion King from because he has enough touch points out there that when you're ready to buy, there is a Lion King thing waiting for you.

New Opportunities

"Radio needs to do the same thing, particularly with the Internet," Jacobs continues. "They've done it with festivals and called it brand extension. It's a different way of generating revenue based on the brand position of the radio station. The website is the same thing.

"I realize that today it doesn't appear there'll be a lot of revenue coming in commensurate with the investment made in an Internet program, but if we don't get there from a sales standpoint and create revenue opportunities with websites designed to capture the dollars that are shifting to our direction, we're missing a huge opportunity that's more than a short-term one. If we don't get on the radar screen of these advertisers, and they have success with the Internet, it's going to be doubly difficult to get them back later."

Jacobs is mindful that this is a time of many opportunities. "From a sales standpoint, the time for Active Rock and Alternative has never been better, without question. The revenue has grown, and it's more than dot-com. It's credit unions, banks, mortgage companies, car dealers — the advertiser base has broadened. It was much more difficult five or 10 years ago.

"But it is still an uphill battle. Any time your format starts at 18 or 12, it's more difficult than at 25. These shifts are happening, but they're always slower than we'd like. But there is no question that embracing these demographic shifts, both from the music perspective and the business, marketing and Internet perspectives, is critical as we move forward."

active INSIGHT

The stars at night are big and bright.... Everything's bigger in Texas, right? A foursome from San Antonio are proving that statement to be true. Union Underground are a kick-ass, straight-up rock 'n' roll band who are having a Texas-size impact in the Rock/Active Rock world. Their sound is big, their presence is big, and their plans are big.

Ever since the "playing for free beer days," Union Underground have had an agenda. Lead vocalist/guitarist Bryan Scott "knows we can be a really big band, bigger than your average club-sized, 2,000-seater rock band." That's a mighty bold statement, but he's right. At 13, Scott knew he was going to be a musician and forged that path with partner/friend/guitarist Patrick Kennison beginning in 1997. Drummer Josh Memelo joined in '98, and bassist John Moyer was the last to jump on board.

Knowing that they wouldn't get noticed in San Antonio, Union Underground were fortunate enough to have a friend in L.A. get them a review in a music mag. That review led to offers from indie labels, a manager and Columbia Records. Their debut for Portrait/Columbia, An Education in Rebellion, exemplifies rock 'n' roll at its finest. Powerful vocals and enormous guitars dominate the album from start to finish. There is something strangely familiar about Underground's music — Alice In Chains meets White Zombie. That is no surprise, since Scott names Alice In Chains as his biggest influence in the past 10 years. Union Underground create a sound distinctly separate from their influences, however. Scott's vocals are soulful, erotic, menacing and possibly the biggest presence on the album.

The single, "Turn Me On (Mr. Deadman)," has turned specialty reporters on for weeks and is still hanging on the chart after making a Lone Star State impact at Rock/Active Rock radio. WZTA/Miami MD Kimba enthuses, "'Turn Me On' is doing great on the phones, and the band truly made ZETAfest a jamboree. We were all turned on by their live show."

The Foundation Of Internet Marketing

■ BRS Media's George Bundy on domain names and streaming audio

There's a lot of talk about some fairly sophisticated uses for the Internet in terms of content, sales and marketing, but it is important to note that most of these things are still untested or won't be of benefit for some time.

In essence, the core of any overall Internet strategic plan has to begin with the knowledge that the primary benefit won't be realized until the future. In terms of marketing, there are a few Internet programs that can pay off right now (Fastblast.com banner purchases, e-mail database management), but for the most part the great potential for Internet marketing is just that — potential.

Since so much of what will be of value in the future will be based on the building blocks you put together today, making the right moves from the start is critically important. Recently, I talked with BRS Media's George Bundy about these issues to get his insider's viewpoint.

Changing The Face Of Radio

When I presented my opinions of the Internet and radio, Bundy agreed in part, but felt that radio stations shouldn't just assume that the Internet is all about the future. "You're right that it is more important to the future, but it is also important today," he said. "Not that tra-

"Internet usage is changing the face of not just radio, but the entire business-to-business and business-to-consumer industries. The Internet is thus a very important part of marketing today, a situation that I think is being missed by radio."

ditional radio stations are going to be tearing down their towers and broadcasting over the Internet, but the fact is that Internet usage is changing the face of not just radio, but the entire business-to-business and business-to-consumer industries.

"The Internet is thus a very important part of marketing today, a situation that I think is being missed by radio. Everyone seems to want to make a profit off their presence on the Internet — which is fine and will eventually happen — but the ability to extend your brand online and to recycle your user back to your traditional signal is what is important today and what will benefit you in the future."

Bundy's point is a good one: You have listeners on the Internet; it only makes sense to try to reach them. As Bundy related, it's all about extending your brand to as many media as possible, including, in this instance, the Internet. "In terms of the Internet, the most important thing to do is to extend your brand to better reach your current user base," he said.

"Today there are an awful lot of entertainment choices out there. The traditional radio listener has a lot of choices when they get on the Internet, and they may find some other audio choice that they want to utilize. Stations need to be wherever the end user is and to make them aware that their brand is there as well. It is only by being a choice that they can get what they are used to getting via this new medium."

The First Step

For any station wanting to use the Internet, the first thing it may find is that its preferred brand name is not available. Whether the name was taken by a station across the country, a cybersquatter or a company with the same name in a different industry, it all means the same thing: Your station isn't even on the Internet yet, and it has already received its first setback.

Bundy illustrates the goal nicely: "It's almost become an issue that the first step of extending your brand online is your name via your web address, whether it be your call letters or slogan. That's obviously important. As the Internet becomes an important marketing tool and you want to send your listeners from your airwaves to your website and back, you obviously want to have something with top-of-mind awareness. It should be very easy to remember, the same with any aspect of your branding."

FRAM IS ROASTED

Bundy's company oversees the registration of the ".fm" domain name, which has become a welcome option for stations that want to better relate their on-air brand to their Internet brand extension. Even some companies that have acceptable .com addresses have registered .fm addresses to improve their online branding.

As to concerns about people typing .com by habit, Bundy explained. "The idea that if you're not a .com, you're not going to be on the Internet will not necessarily be the case soon. We will be seeing more new top-level domain names in the future, not less. As things become more broad, stations will have the ability to position themselves in the way that they think is best."

This ability to better link the online brand with the on-air brand will certainly help top-of-mind awareness on both ends of the spectrum, including sending radio listeners to the station's website. "It certainly gives top-of-mind awareness to the end user when mentioned at the top of the hour or in a promo," Bundy said. "You only have a few seconds. If the listener is in the car or doing something at work or at home, and you want to grab their attention, you have to make it as easy as possible to find your website."

Marketing Via The Stream

There has been quite a bit of talk about the dollar value of Internet audio streaming, whether through banner ads on a player or special technology that allows exclusive ads to be heard in the Internet stream. Obviously, this is technology geared for the future, when Internet listening gets to more saleable levels. Is there, however, a benefit to streaming audio now? Bundy thinks so, and it relates to his earlier point of putting you brand where the listeners are.

"It is important to note that streaming at this time isn't so much to generate a profit off that Internet stream, but to give the station an opportunity to grab the end listener wherever they may be," he said. "Off a stream you mostly see it during the day when you have a captive audience sitting in front of a computer at a desk for an extended period of time.

"That kind of audience is always of interest to radio, and we now have the opportunity to bring the broadcast directly to them. Through listening you try to recycle them listening in their car. The result that you've extended your brand to the Internet and then back to the station with the benefit being that you've hopefully maintained or increased your market share."

While it would be too simplistic to say that having a good web address and a quality audio stream is all that it takes to market successfully on the Internet, not having those two building blocks can certainly be a problem. Without an easily recognizable web address, how are your listeners going to be expected to find your site? And when radio listeners are at their computers and log on to your site, their expectation is going to be that they actually listen to your station. If that option isn't there, an opportunity synergy will be lost.

Breakers

No Songs Qualified For Breaker Status This Week

80 Alternative reporters. Monitored airplay data supplied by Mediabase Research, a division of Premiere Radio Networks. Songs ranked by total plays for the airplay week of Sunday 7/16-Saturday 7/22. Bullets appear on songs gaining plays or remaining flat from previous week. If two songs are tied in total plays, the song being played on more stations is placed first. Breaker status is assigned to songs reaching 1000 plays or more for the first time. Songs below No. 20 are moved to recurrent after 20 weeks. Gross Impressions equals Average Quarter Hour Persons times number of plays (times 100). Average Quarter Hour Persons used herein with permission from The Arbitron Company (Copyright 2000, The Arbitron Company). © 2000, R&R Inc.

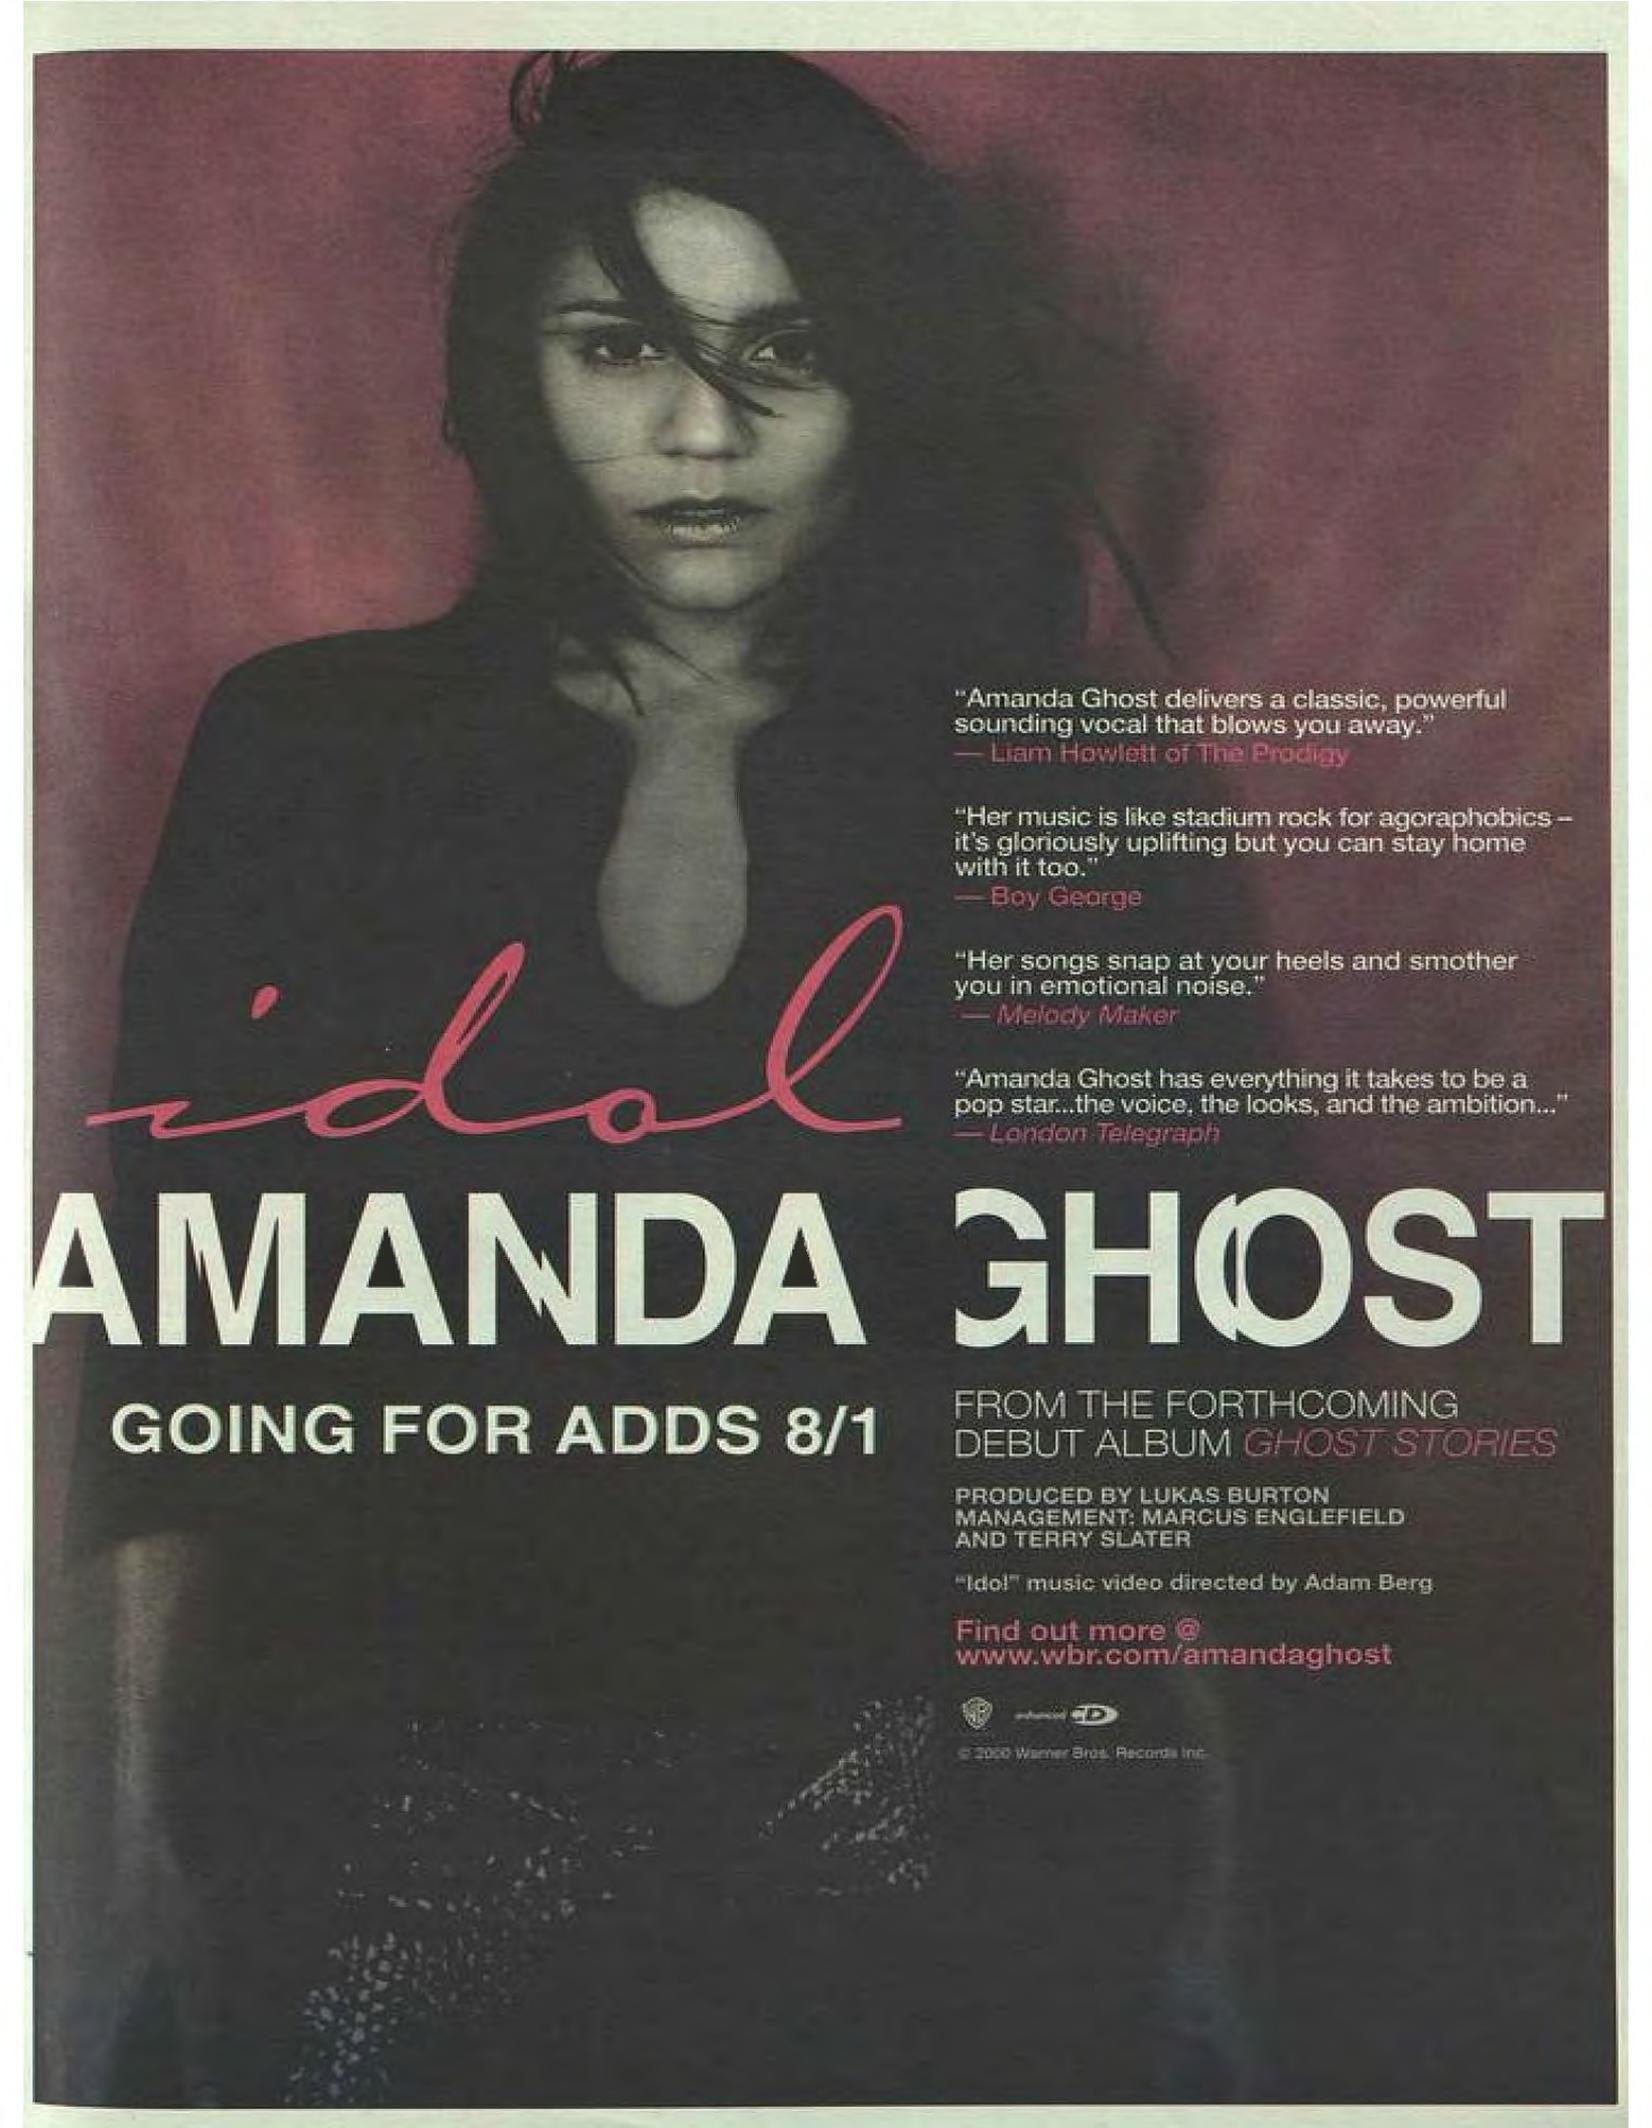

Most Added is the total number of new adds officially reported to R&R by each reporting station. Songs unreported as adds do not count toward overall total stations playing a song. Most Increased Plays lists the songs with the greatest week-to-week increases in total play. Weighted chart appears on R&R ONLINE MUSIC TRACKING.

"Amanda Ghost delivers a classic, powerful sounding vocal that blows you away."

— Liam Howlett of The Prodigy

"Her music is like stadium rock for agoraphobics — it's gloriously uplifting but you can stay home with it too."

— Boy George

"Her songs snap at your heels and smother you in emotional noise."

— Melody Maker

"Amanda Ghost has everything it takes to be a pop star...the voice, the looks, and the ambition..."

LEFTY

Track: "GIRLS"

LP: 4,3,2,1

Label: INTERSCOPE

By Dayna Talley
Asst. Alternative Editor

essentials: Lefty's history goes back to when Dennis Hill (vocals/guitar) and Scott Somers (bass) became close friends in a Southern California grade school. While growing up they shared not only the drama of everyday growing pains, but also an ongoing interest in and love for music. Later in life that same chemistry, mixed with their own musical ability and the talents of guitarist Lorenzo Giovanni and drummer Kenny Livingston, led to the forming of the band we now know as Lefty. The energy that is put out by this quartet plays a major part in their live performances. The band says that they "feed" on the interaction and love to play live.

One such performance, at the EATM conference, held in Las Vegas, Nevada in May of 1999, led to a record deal for this fierce foursome. They managed to catch the eyes and ears of panelist Paul Gomez. With his helping hand and the efforts of Freeze management, Lefty signed a deal with Interscope Records in the fall of that same year. Shortly after, they were put to work on their first label release with engineer/producer Bradley Cook (Foo Fighters, Counting Crows). What came out of this session is a strong, guitar-rich, power-pop, 13-track album entitled 4, 3, 2, 1. The first single from the album, "Girls," is a humorous take on the band's views on women. It's a melodic and catchy tune that is bound to be pumping out of boys' and girls' stereos by summer's end.

Artist POV: Livingston reflects, "We really bonded on a much different level than just music. We were like 'insta-bros,' kind of best friends right away. We're each quirky in our own way too. You've got a conversationalist, a writer, a clown and a deep guy in our band. The best part is that you never know which one is which at any given time. That's what makes it tick."

Kerry Marsico ON THE RECORD

If I were programmer for a day, here's what I'd be playing: A version of Fred Durst's voice message to Taproot's Stephen Richards mixed atop a viscous groove (now that would be a smash!); Incubus' "Stellar," a strong follow-up track that is texturally abundant and hooky as hell; Slipknot's "Spit It Out," an infectious song from a band that is raising dust storms on the Tattoo the Earth tour; and Rage Against The Machine's "Testify." It's chicken soup for the core! ■ Personal favorites right now include Israel Kamakawi'ole's Facing Future. This CD has lived in my car's changer ever since KPOI's Nikki turned me on to it. Others include Black Grape's incredibly overlooked Stupid, Stupid, Stupid and Travis' The Man Who, which is both melodically and lyrically genius. My last is the classic duet recording Francis Albert Sinatra & Antonio Carlos Jobim, a CD I want enclosed in my casket.

The official add date isn't until Aug. 7, but several majors come in early on "Free" by Vast (Elektra/EEG), including WXRK/New York, KROQ/Los Angeles, WKQX (Q101)/Chicago, CIMX (89X)/Detroit, WHFS/Washington and WBRU/Providence ... Following two top 10 tracks, Rage Against The Machine claim Most Added honors with "Testify" (Epic). R&R Asst. Alternative Editor Dayna Talley says Rage's show at the Roxy here in Los Angeles was quite possibly one of the best concerts she's ever seen. Opening for Rage were At The Drive-In on Grand Royal, who top the Specialty Show chart this week ... Mighty Mighty Bosstones (Big Rig/IDJMG) win a fierce battle to become second Most Added with 18, and newcomers Dexter Freebish (Capitol), who put on an entertaining performance, at Club R&R, tie with Marvelous 3 (HIFI/Elektra/EEG) for third place with 17 adds ... The movie may be called Loser, but Elektra/EEG for third place with 17 adds ... The movie may be called Loser, but Elektra/EEG for third place with 17 adds ... "Teenage Dirtbag" by Wheatus (Columbia) is an absolute winner, vaulting 33-21 this week ... OPM are off to a great start for Atlantic, surging 46-38 and scoring solid rotations from KROQ, WHFS and KXTE/Las Vegas, along with a strong double-digit add week ... Talk about an unbelievably deep album. If you haven't yet, check out the next Creed track, "Are You Ready?" It's coming the week of Labor Day. Record of the week: Zebrahead "Playmate of the Year."

R&R's Exclusive Look At The Cutting Edge Of Alternative

Something New

By Dayna Talley
Asst. Alternative Editor

This week I'm going to mix it up a bit. Why? Because among all of the great new music out there, every once in a while there is a jewel in the rough that has yet to be discovered. My precious jewel is an unsigned band based out of Nashville that goes by the name of Swag. Although all veterans of the music industry, Swag's members bring the world a refreshing taste of stellar musicianship. With a sort of old-school '60s rock sound mixed with great vocals, they make up an equation that could only result in a carefully arranged masterpiece of alternative pop music. The bandmembers in this star-studded side project are Ken Coomer (Wilco), Tom Peterson (Cheap Trick), Jerry Dale McFadden and Robert Reynolds (The Mavericks), along with Doug Powell of independent pop fame, as well as other special guests. This is a definite must-hear! For info on the band, contact Kent Marcus at (615) 256-7200. As far as signed bands go, this week I've been listening to The Vandals' Look What I Almost Stepped In... on Nitro. "Behind the Music" and "Kick It (You're Not the Boss of Me)" are both stellar punk songs. "Jackass" is a great single (as this week's chart shows — it takes its place at No. 2), but it is definitely not the only standout song on the album. Speaking of the chart, At The Drive In jumps high atop all the others into the No. 1 position this week (yeah!), while Elastica climb into the No. 3 spot with their catchy new single, "Mad Dog." Debuts this week are made by Sunna at No. 20 and Slipknot with their hard-hitting single "Spit It Out" at No. 7.

29 Adult Alternative reporters. Monitored airplay data supplied by Mediabase Research, a division of Premiere Radio Networks. Songs ranked by total plays for the airplay week of Sunday 7/18-Saturday 7/22. Bullets appear on songs gaining plays or remaining flat from previous week. If two songs are tied in total plays, the song being played on more stations is placed first. Breaker status is assigned to songs reaching 250 plays or more for the first time. Songs below No. 20 are moved to recurrent after 20 weeks. Gross Impressions equals Average Quarter Hour Persons times number of plays (times 100). Average Quarter Hour Persons used herein with permission from The Arbitron Company (Copyright 2000, The Arbitron Company). © 2000, R&R Inc.

Bloomberg is the fastest-growing global multimedia provider of real-time financial information. Our clients rely on us for accurate and detailed information as an invaluable aid to critical business and financial decision-making. We offer an energized atmosphere that fosters creativity and professional growth, and where no two days are ever the same.

In this exciting opportunity, you will handle board duties, production and light on-air anchoring of financial news overnights on weekends and during the week.

Financial knowledge is not necessary and we will train you if you bring the right skills to us. This is a full-time position with excellent benefits.

Please send resume and airtchek newscast to: Bloomberg, Attn: J. Finstenberg, 459 Park Avenue, New York, NY 10022. Fax: 917-369-6163. E-mail: broadcast@bloomberg.com. No phone calls, please. We are an Equal Opportunity Employer.

ARTHUR ASTOR

President, Astor Broadcast Group

Art Astor is a veteran of almost 40 years in Southern California broadcasting. He is owner and President of five stations in the area and recently made news when he flipped his successful Country station of almost 20 years, KIKF-FM, to an AC format.

Astor's tremendous passion for the business carries over into his hobbies. He collects automobiles, and his "radios on wheels" range from Morgans to Packards to a 1940 Cadillac Formal Town Sedan once owned by Howard Hughes. He has created a museum in Anaheim that not only houses his Orange County radio station, but also his cars and the world's largest collection of restored antique radios.

For those with enthusiasm and drive, Astor feels strongly that opportunity still exists in the radio business. In fact, if one is willing to "put in a little extra effort," Astor claims one could even end up owning the place!

Getting into the business: "I've been a radio freak since I was about 8 years old, when I got my first radio in my bedroom. I went to the University of Southern California. They had a pretty good radio and telecommunications school. I went on to do some television shows and film work. I had my own television show in the early '50s, but I thought it was too slow. I heard about a job at KSFO in San Francisco. I went up there, and Alan Torbet hired me. That was my first shot as an account executive.

"They eventually sent me down to Southern California to be their Retail Regional Sales Manager. The national rep decided to hire me. My first opportunity as a Sales Manager was at KPRO/Riverside, CA. After a couple of years Alan Torbet, my rep then, invited me to buy the stock of a guy named Frank Crane when it was Torbet, Alan and Crane. I bought out his stock and became the L.A. manager. Within a year I became the VP & West Coast Manager. In 1965 I got a call from RKO about a new thing happening at KHJ/L.A. I became GSM of KHJ-AM & FM just before they kicked off Boss Radio.

"I spent five or six years there and then became GM at KDAY/L.A. in 1970. We were ranked lower than 45th in the market. Bob Wilson was our PD. I said to Bob, 'We're a poor man's KHJ.' I told him the basic things I felt we should do to be different from the other Top 40 stations. Within a week Wilson said that he had a great idea: take the jingles out, and the dialogue, and just play three in a row. We were playing the best of Top 40 and the best of AOR. We played The Carpenters, Neil Diamond, The Beatles, The Rolling Stones and Led Zeppelin.

"KDAY was the station to break a lot of music. Even with our crummy signal, we were getting 3 and 4 shares. We had the Astor Wilson Company because of the concerts we produced. We also produced The Concert Hour from the Troubadour and supplied it to about 15 stations around the Western states. We had Wolfman Jack on at night. He became a big hit, and we syndicated him."

Starting his company: "I went to Drake Chenault. Gene and Bill offered me 20% of the stock if everything went right and I met my goals. As we went along, we doubled, tripled and quadrupled our business, and I met all my goals. They were reluctant to give up stock. I said, 'I gotta do my thing!'

"I was approached by a consultant about this little station in Orange County that needed a manager. They wanted someone who'd been a manager in L.A. I said, 'If there's no ownership, I'm not interested.' I met with the owners, who knew nothing about broadcasting. They were losing money every month. In January of 1978 I took over with an option of 10%-20%. Within two years I owned 20% of the station. We quadrupled our billing and did very well for two or three years with an AC format.

"A friend of mine was managing KZLA/L.A. They went to a 2-format, and it didn't work. They said, 'We'd better copy Astor — great format, limited signal, and his AC is the best in town.' Within about a month I'm hearing my format on KZLA, song for song. Even the promos were almost the same. I don't mind being a farm club, but that was ridiculous. I hired a new guy by the name of Steve Thomas. He said, 'We've got to do something completely different!' He came back with the call letters KIKF and said, 'We're going to go Country!'

"This was in 1980. At that time there was no FM Country in Los Angeles. I'd sworn I'd never run a suburban station, and I knew I didn't ever want to go Country! As soon as we hit, I knew it was happening. I got a call from a friend who was a buyer for Disneyland. That was a Friday. She told me that KZLA was going to go Country. I bought out the partners at KIKF in 1983."

Goals of the company: "I love Southern California. This is my home. I'm a native. California is a fabulous marketplace because of the out-of-home use of radio. I'm obviously getting offers from companies. Normally it's from secondary groups, because the big guys want the L.A. licenses. I could have retired 10 years ago, but I love the business. It keeps me young and moving. I want to stay. I'm still looking around. In fact, I've got one thing I'm looking at right now."

State of radio: "I'm very bullish on it. It's extremely exciting, very lucrative. I see numbers I never even dreamed of. When I left KHJ and KRTH, we were doing close to $10 million in 1970. That was a lot of money. I knew then that radio had the capability to make money. Our margin was 55%-58%. L.A. radio and radio in general are doing extremely well, and I think radio's hotter than ever."

Biggest challenges: "Facing competition. In our marketplace we have to sound like an L.A. radio station. I try to hire people and develop them. We've got some young people working for us who can't get into L.A. Outside of my PD, my people haven't been in radio that long. We are the gateway to Los Angeles radio. They like to work for the periphery station to see if they can jump into the big time."

On changing formats: "If I had known then what I know now.... We'd been working on this thing for about three or four months. Everything was set, then I heard that KZLA was being bought by Emmis and that they'd supposedly be dumping Country Aug. 1 because they're not making any money. They should be billing $25 million to $30 million. If I didn't bill that much with a facility like that, I would have killed myself. We'll have to take one step at a time. I would not preclude changing formats again."

Thoughts on the Internet: "It's still a little bit early. There are two elements. One is immobility, and one is the fact that it's in its early stages. But, boy, people are just going to it. It's not like pure radio, where you step out the door with a portable or get in your automobile and you get the information and music and entertainment. In every car of mine I've got CDs all over the place, but I listen to radio because I like to hear the voices and people and find out what the heck's going on."

Most influential individual: "Several. I was a national rep for two companies. I talked to a lot of owners. I used to always envy the guys who would come into town for two or three days. They had control, an artistic or aesthetic sense of expression, and they called the shots. This is what I wanted to work toward. Gene Chenault was a mentor. He was an owner, and he showed me a lifestyle. Even in the late '50s he had the money and the wherewithal and the expression. Bill Drake taught me a lot, as did Ron Jacobs. Alan Torbet taught me research, numbers and that every station has a handle and a story, and you can tell it."

Career highlight: "Taking risks, being ballsy. I'm taking one right now. You learn from those things. I want to do better, and if it takes another swing at the ball, I'm going to take it."

Career disappointment: "I wish I'd gone out on my own earlier. When I was at the peak of my corporate career — probably as an executive at RKO — with all the fame and fortune, I should have jumped from there into my own thing, even if it was a Bakersfield station."

Favorite radio format: "I've got varied tastes. If I want to relax, I go to The Wave [KTWV/Los Angeles], light jazz. If I want to be totally disruptive in my thoughts, I go to Classical. If I want to jump a little, I go to the Kisses [KISS/L.A.] or the Powers [KPWR/L.A.]"

Favorite song: "Laura" for a ballad and "In the Mood" for instrumental."

Favorite television show: "I watch a lot of Biography. I like the History Channel."

Favorite movie: "Gone With the Wind."

Favorite restaurant: "Lafayette, a cute little French restaurant in Garden Grove."

Beverage of choice: "I'm a Diet Coke nut."

Stock recommendation: "I'm out of stocks. I have real estate properties and my stations, and I'm happy as hell."

Hobbies: "I'm a car buff. I have 165 classic cars. I prepared myself over the years, so if I retired, I'd have something to do. Now it's overwhelming. The main part of my museum is at my radio station, with an annex across the street. I've got classics from the late '20s through the '50s and muscle cars from the '60s to the '80s."

Favorite car: "A 1940 LaSalle convertible. In much a 1970 Dodge 383 Magnum Charger."

Advice to broadcasters: "It's never too late to start your own business. In today's environment, it's an employee's market. I had never heard of people getting signing bonuses in radio, but a gal I was after said that she got a signing bonus from another company and a big salary. This is a sales commission job. I worked my butt off to get where I am."

"Because of the dearth of good, solid people, the ones who really put their shoulders to the wheel and get a little imagination going and a little spirit and aggressiveness can go out and do their thing. Unfortunately, it can't be in L.A., because that's just too tough. They have to go out to a smaller market and do their thing and be an owner of a station and work their way into a major market by multiplying the small ones."
