•ROCK ROUNDUP•

by Mark Marone

For two nights this fall, I plan to do something I rarely do: spend two straight nights cuddled up on my couch watching network television. ABC is reportedly premiering what is being touted as the definitive Beatles documentary Nov. 19. Because I was one of the misguided in my generation who sat in front of the TV for the forgettable live coverage of the Bay City Rollers invasion, I draw particular pleasure from family members and older friends recounting their memories of seeing the Beatles on "The Ed Sullivan Show" for the first time. For those of us who weren't yet born, the sparkle in the eyes of those recalling that monumental night and the devotion still held by such a wide cross-section of people reminds me that the Beatles' universal appeal is unparalleled to this day. The sheer excitement stirred up by the Beatles on that one night on TV, from young to old—"My, look how long those boys' hair is!"—may represent the single, crystallizing moment when rock music entered the social consciousness of our culture. The Beatles' 14 albums through seven years made music a permanent thread in the fabric of everyday life.

This year's Beatles-related projects don't end there. Fall begins with a special tribute to John Lennon, via the album "Working Class Hero," which will be released by Hollywood Oct. 10—the day after what would have been the singer's 53rd birthday. The project was conceived by Red Hot Chili Peppers manager Lindy Goetz, who put together the album to benefit the National Spay And Neuter Fund, which provides funding and awareness for the overpopulation problem of dogs and cats who often end up unclaimed and tragically terminated. Goetz first approached the Chili Peppers, who happen to be big Lennon fans and animal lovers, while they were in the studio doing their latest album, and the band rocked through a live, one-take version of "I Found Out." The collection also includes tracks by Blues Traveler, Mad Season, and Cheap Trick and is characterized by spirited interpretations throughout. The impact of the Beatles still ripples through our culture today, from music to fashion to philosophy. I'm sure the documentary will rekindle the magic that was the Beatles and remind us why we originally got into this business. I look forward to seeing my TV transform itself into a musical fireplace to warm my soul on a cold November night.

Records showing an increase in audience over the previous week, regardless of chart movement. Rankings broken down by mainstream and modern formats (on right side of this page) correspond to 40-position charts printed in this week's Monitor and therefore rankings do not exist for recurrants and records below No. 40. Rankings are not listed for triple A because there is no chart yet. Audience computed by cross-referencing exact times of airplay with Arbitron listener data. © 1995, Billboard/BPI Communications.

Records showing an increase in detections over the previous week, regardless of chart movement. A record which has been on either chart for more than 20 weeks will not receive a bullet, even if it registers an increase in detections. Airpower awarded to those records which attain 800 detections for the first time. If two records are tied in number of plays, the record being played on more stations is placed first. Records below the top 20 are removed from the chart after 26 weeks.
