ADVERTS: HOW'D WE GET HERE?

BY CHUCK TAYLOR

IF MUSIC AND TALK are the engine of radio, then advertising is its gasoline.

That explains why, as broadcasters face monstrous competition from a growing number of entertainment pastimes and gizmos, it becomes increasingly important to make commercials count—to keep them relevant to listeners, to maintain quality control so that they blend as seamlessly as possible with primary programming and, perhaps most essentially, to limit their numbers to prevent listeners from tuning out.

A mountain of ink has been spilled regarding Clear Channel's 2004 "less is more" initiative to reduce the number of commercial minutes, encourage the use of 30-second spots and offer premium pricing for positioning. This comes after the group owner's spotload exceeded 16 minutes per hour in some markets.

ADVERTISING: THE BEGINNING

What a difference from the fledgling days of radio, when advertising was a new industry. In 1920, as radio was just beginning to filter into the airwaves, most stations were regarded as a promotional vehicle for their owners.

But operating the stations cost money, and these companies realized that they needed to foster income, despite a number of potential schemes to make radio owners pay a "box office" listening tax or to scramble broadcasts so that only paying customers could tune in.

In fact, Radio Broadcast magazine sponsored a contest—"Who Is to Pay for Broadcasting: And How"—awarding $500 to one of 1,000 entrants. The winner proposed a tax of $2 on each radio tube and 50 cents on each crystal used in a receiver. The funds were to be managed by a Federal Bureau of Broadcasting.

The magazine pointed out that it made sense for listeners to pay, so that advertisers would not influence radio station programming—in a sense, a safeguard against payola before there was such a thing: "To insure [sic] that program directors shall secure the best entertainment possible, untrammled by any commercialism or advertising for the broadcasting station, the operating expense of the station should be paid directly by the radio audience."

TOLL BROADCASTING

But in February 1922, AT&T announced plans to establish a national radio network and to sell airtime. It was called "toll broadcasting."

A national radio conference that same year balked, recommending that "direct advertising in broadcast radio service be absolutely prohibited." Critics compared radio advertising—brace yourself—to "a grotesque, smirking gargoyle set at the very top of America's skyscraping adventure in acquisition ad infinitum."

Then-Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover even declared, "I believe the quickest way to kill broadcasting would be to use it for direct advertising."

Others sided with the corporations. Popular Radio magazine insisted that "broadcasting must be organized as a business." Likewise, the book "Radio for Everybody" stated, "This gratuitous service cannot continue indefinitely."

The first sponsored program is said to have been broadcast Aug. 28, 1922, on AT&T's WEAJ New York, where the owner of an apartment complex in Jackson Heights, N.Y., paid $100 for 10 minutes.

Other reports point to the American Radio & Research station 1XE in Medford Hillside, Mass., which reportedly received payment in late 1921 for reading stories from the Little Folks magazine on Eunice Randall's children's story hour. The station's owner later hired a salesman to sell 30 hours of programming per week—for $1 per minute.

TOO INTIMATE FOR RADIO

Still, the tussle continued. In 1924, more than 400 of the 526 existing radio stations refused to accept sponsors, and those that did were discriminating. It is reported that NBC turned down a lucrative contract from one of America's largest manufacturers of toilet paper, refusing to advertise a product so intimate.

That was due to change, however. In November 1932, Broadcasting magazine ran a headline stating, "Taboo on Delicate Ads Removed by Networks: Ex-Lax Signs With CBS."

Meanwhile, station equipment became exceedingly more expensive as the government began to regulate the airwaves in an effort to improve the quality of transmissions. Then music publishers successfully argued that they were due royalty payments for all copyrighted music that was aired. A source of income was quickly becoming a necessity.

And yet, for every step forward, there were seemingly two steps back. In 1928, the Federal Radio Commission refused to renew one station's license because it "exists chiefly for advertising, which must be objectionable to the listening public." Four other stations were put on probation because their listeners had no alternative to "unwelcome messages entering the walls of their homes." Imagine that.

Nevertheless, NBC sold $10 million in advertising in 1928. Two years later, the figure had more than doubled, to $22 million.

In 1934, the radio industry grossed $72.9 million from commercials and sponsorships, more than 80% of which came from the advertising of drugs, foods and other convenience items.

In a hearing before the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce, William Hedges, president of the National Assn. of Broadcasters (which formed in April 1923), assured that his own station, WMAQ Chicago, limited commercials to one minute per half-hour. At the time, the NAB forbid commercials between 7 p.m. and 11 p.m.

BROKEN BARRIERS

But of course, increasing commercialization on all fronts soon broke down barriers, and by 1945, radio advertising had reached $310.5 million per year, according to the Radio Advertising Bureau. A decade later, it topped $456.5 million, and in 1975, the amount exceeded $1.9 billion.

That figure continued to climb until radio experienced its first dip in 1991 to $8.6 billion, down 2.8% from the previous year.

In 2004, radio revenue topped a record $20 billion with a total increase of 2% over 2003, according to the RAB. Local ad sales were the most robust, exceeded the preceding year by 3%. National ads were flat for the year. Network ad figures grew 5% in 2004 over the previous year.

According to Interep, the top three national radio advertising categories are retail (17.1%), automotive (11%) and telecommunications (10.3%). Media and advertising, financial, medicines, restaurants and insurance follow.

The nation's top 10 radio advertisers in 2004, according to Media Monitors' AirCheck service, respectively, were Verizon Wireless, Geico, McDonald's, ABC TV, Fox TV, Home Depot, Ford Lincoln Mercury, Chrysler Jeep Dodge, Cingular Wireless and Toyota.

An interesting twist is the companies' breakdown by format. Among country stations, the top advertisers in 2004 were Geico, Home Depot, ABC, McDonald's and Chrysler Jeep Dodge.

R&B/hip-hop stations illustrate advertisers' different targeting objectives, with Verizon, McDonald's, Fox, the WB and ABC the leading sponsors.

Hispanic stations' top advertisers last year were Univision, Sears, McDonald's, Verizon and Cingular, while sports stations heard most often from Geico, Avacor, AutoZone, McDonald's and ESPN.

Among restaurants, AirCheck's top five in 2004 were McDonald's, Wendy's, Outback Steakhouse, Dunkin' Donuts and Taco Bell. As for department stores, they were Kohl's, JCPenney, Macy's, Sears and Wal-Mart.

Interep predicts that radio advertising will go nowhere but up in the coming years. According to its research by Veronis Suhler Stevenson, national radio revenue should grow 6% in 2005, 6.8% in 2006, 6.3% in 2007 and 7% in 2008.

Imagine what Herbert Hoover would say. ●●●

SELLING

SEAN HANNITY: HOW A NATIONAL STAR KEEPS IT LOCAL

BY TONY SANDERS ILLUSTRATION BY ROBERT ZAMMARCHI

SALES IS ABOUT BUILDING and developing relationships. And a crucial part of those relationships involves the opportunity to see, touch and feel the product that's for sale.

Syndicated personalities can be a crucial part of a station's success. Ultimately, however, they are intangible. They're not sitting in the studio, and the local advertiser can't walk up to them, shake hands or meet them.

To see how syndicated personalities attempt to bridge that gap and establish a local-market relationship with listeners and affiliate stations, Billboard Radio Monitor spoke to Sean Hannity, who is based at WABC New York, WABC PD Phil Boyce and a host of sales managers at some of Hannity's affiliate stations.

Hannity has more than 450 affiliates. During 2004, he visited as many as 65 cities to promote himself and his local affiliates and to meet his listeners.

Boyce, who is also affiliate-station sales manager at WABC, convinced Hannity to go national. In April he will celebrate 10 years as WABC PD. Before that, he programmed news/talk WJR Detroit for about five years.

Boyce hired Hannity and first put him on at WABC doing nights (11 p.m.-2 a.m.) in 1997. Hannity was already on the Fox News Channel, co-hosting "Hannity & Colmes." In January 1998, Boyce moved Hannity to afternoons. It was in 2001 that Boyce decided to put Hannity into national syndication. His first day in syndication was Sept. 10, 2001.

ERNIE FEARS, GENERAL SALES MANAGER, ABC RADIO'S N/T WMAL WASHINGTON, D.C.

"Washington happens to be a very important city, and Sean comes here often to do his show. He'll do it from our studios or do it from a location here. The ABC network is here. It's easier for him to get to his television show, to record that after he does his radio show.

"One of the things that we've started to do, which really has more of a national standpoint is, just this past December, we invited him to a lunch with buyers and reps from New York. He sat there and had lunch with us and talked to us. Those are the kinds of things that are not necessarily localizing him but putting him where people can touch, see and feel him.

"Sean comes down here . . . and people get a chance to touch him. He does his book signing. He does things from [D.C. think tank] the Heritage Foundation, and those kinds of things localize him.

"I think one of the other things that happened is our sellers started to believe in him. He doesn't fall into that controversial segment, like a Rush [Limbaugh] or a Dr. Laura [Schlessinger] had in the past, and, all of a sudden, his rates are just as strong as our morning-drive rates.

"Sean comes here at least twice a year. He did a book signing at the Borders Books last year when the line was wrapped around the corner. So we certainly have an opportunity to take an intangible and put a face to it. And that has helped us both nationally and locally."

CHRIS REDGRAVE, VP/SALES MANAGER, BONNEVILLE'S N/T KSL SALT LAKE CITY

"Sean will normally come out once a year. He will connect with our community and it is huge appointment listening. We've done a couple of book signings with him. People have just gone nuts for him. He's like a local rock star.

"He has also kicked off the biggest local fireworks show in the state of Utah. It's down in Utah County and it's in Brigham Young University stadium. Sean has done that two years in a row and it has been a sellout. They've had good acts as well, but Sean has done an incredible job.

"The first year that he was brought into Utah County to do this fireworks show, somebody else paid for it, so it wasn't up to us to really capture any of the time. But he graciously said, 'If you guys want to just have a quick book signing, I'll just tell them that I need a few minutes before I go into the stadium.'

"One year when he was out, we organized a last-minute, 'Hey, by the way, KSL listeners, Sean is in town and he's going to do some book signing.' It was in July. There must have been 1,000 people standing in line, in the July heat, on blacktop, waiting for Sean to just sign a couple of their books.

"I have never seen anyone so gracious in my life. Everyone counts to Sean. He'll give the very same thing to the very last person in line, two hours later, as he gave to the very first person that walked up.

"We were one of the first stations to jump onboard with him, and people just feel a personal connection. You feel like Sean's your friend. The way he touches people and the way he makes them feel important is uncanny. I've never seen anything like it. He wouldn't have to be that way and he would still have a big audience."

TONI SNYDER, DIRECTOR OF SALES, AMERICAN GENERAL MEDIA'S TALK KERN BAKERSFIELD, CALIF.

"Numbers are always great to have in your pocket, but they are never going to be your greatest strength when you're selling on a local level. All politics is local, but that doesn't mean it doesn't reach out to a regional and national level.

"We call ourselves 'Bakersfield's hometown news and talk leader.' Now that's going to be more than what's going on in Bakersfield. That's going to be what Sean is going to talk about today and how it affects our lives. He also has a personal relationship with our on-air personalities. He actually knows us and will sometimes mention us on the air.

"We have a 'hanging with Hannity' package that we sell. We have two winners go to New York and go out to dinner with him and we'll send our on-air personalities. So, I'm going to use the line again, all politics is local but that extends into what is going on regionally. I think it's the way you market yourself and how you position yourself with your listeners.

"The other thing I can say is news/talk is such an interactive format. So, whether Hannity is here or wherever, it's as if he's sitting in your living room and you get an opportunity to call him.

"Last year, we had him come into the market and speak. We had a party before, where all of the sponsors had a chance to meet with him, to get their book signed, and then he spoke to the audience. The auditorium was full, at 2,500 people."

TOM INTERRANTE, GENERAL SALES MANAGER, COX RADIO'S TALK WDBO ORLANDO, FLA.

"We position Sean as the hottest person in the country right now. No one is hotter than Sean Hannity. Sales-wise, everybody wants him, because there are no objections. The only objection you would get is if it's a highly liberal person, saying, 'I don't want to be part of Sean's show.' Then they'll say, 'You know what, the ratings are so good, I have to be a part of Sean's show.' It's the easiest show for us to sell because it's so mass appeal. People love him, and people love to hate him too.

"Orlando is a unique town because we tend to think of him as one of our hometown guys. He visits a lot and we do a lot of events with him, so we position him as being a part of our radio station. He gets down here three or four times a year.

"We do an event called Meeting of the Mouths. We do it in the fall and we have Neal Boortz, Sean Hannity and Clark Howard. They all come down and it's a fireside chat, and we bring in about 8,000 people. We had Sean down in March in 2004. We had him at the Millennium Mall, it's a new mall, and he had

You're a national personality but one thing I keep hearing from your affiliates is that you try to establish a local relationship with your stations and your listeners. How do you do that—how do you keep it local?

I've traveled a lot and I can tell you nothing substitutes for meeting your listeners. I was in 65 cities last year with the Hannitization of America tour, 10 for the elections, 40 for my book and 15 other cities. That's a lot of traveling, and I stayed on the air all through that. We'll be doing some of that again this year.

How much time do you spend cutting spots for local affiliates in a given week?

Talking about when I sit down and do production, I'd say a good hour, hour-and-a-half per week. There's a vetting process [for the advertised products] but we all realize that this is a business, for all of us. I think one of the biggest fears stations have when they take syndicated product is that they're going to lose that local flavor. Well, when we talk to them we tell them we're going to give them higher ratings. Generally, we've done that, but we also say, "We understand what your issues are," and we try to accommodate them.

Some advertisers, who are new to a station but are also a perfect fit, can turn into long-term clients when they hear that local spot cut by a national voice.

We've closed deals like that. These stations are your partners. You've got to be able to do things to help them.

You also take an active role in tracking your ratings performance. You've developed real relationships with some of your affiliate PDs around the country.

I could pretty much tell you how I'm doing in all of my markets.

2,500 people waiting in line, at 6 p.m. on a Monday night, waiting to sign books and just to see him.

"Sean has the knack for making the person he's signing the book for feel like they're the only person in the world. I've witnessed that, and that's a truly unique talent. He looks them right in the eye and they feel like, 'He's my best friend.' He's a true entertainer."

PHIL BOYCE, PD, ABC RADIO'S TALK WABC NEW YORK

"By around 2000 to 2001, Sean had become Rush's No. 1 substitute host. He had substituted for Rush a dozen times the year we decided to syndicate him. The first time I suggested going national to him, he said, 'I don't really want to do that. I just want to be No. 1 in New York. I don't want to change my show.' I convinced him that he could be No. 1 here and across the country and not change his show.

"We did modify it a bit to change it for the network clock, but that's about it. We didn't change his staff, didn't change his crew, didn't change his studio, his work habits or his routine. We just flipped the switch and went national. And we happened to do that on Sept. 10, 2001.

"If you look at the afternoon-drive landscape across the country, no one was really syndicating in afternoon drive, until we did it. The thinking

That's probably pretty sick, I know, but as the ratings are rolling out, I know when everything is going to be delivered and I try to call or I have a way of getting the numbers so I can see how we're doing.

Well, for example, you're on all over the state of Georgia, from WSB Atlanta to WDUN Gainesville.

We're on in Savannah, too. I think we're on, pretty much, in every state. It's something like 475 affiliates right now and by the end of the year we hope to have 500.

How about new stations that might be considering taking your show? When senior VP of affiliate relations John Rosso tells you about a new station does he ask you to get involved?

Usually I tell him [about a prospective station]. Really, it was easier when there were fewer stations but you do what you can. I am very active in my relationship with our stations. Even when there are some stations that are offering us, you know, busloads of money to take the show, we try to be loyal to the ones that brought us on first. That's important. Sometimes we do switch stations but we at least give [the original affiliates] the chance to try to keep the show.

You're talking to hundreds of GMs and PDs in this interview. Is there anything else you would like to say?

I think it's very important to try and be involved with my affiliate stations, to try and get out there and to see them, even when we're in a down-revenue market, because this is a business. Obviously, I can't visit everybody, but I try.

Anything else?

Just that if any of the stations ask for liners, they'll get them. It may take a couple of weeks, but they'll get them.

was, Rush Limbaugh proved that you can syndicate in the middle of the day, but most stations want to be live in afternoon drive. They want to have their host and traffic and weather and news and all of those things. Certainly, that's true, but we felt like a great, strong host—especially on stations that had Rush—somebody like Sean could hold Rush's audience. And he proved he could do that. And if you could do that in New York, the most competitive market in America, then you can probably do it in San Diego and Salt Lake City and Atlanta and other cities.

"Sometimes people get confused when they talk about local versus national issues. It doesn't really matter. What matters is if you are talking about something that relates to them. I'll give you an example.

"We decided, well before last year, that we were going to take possession of the presidential election. And we cut liners that said, 'The most comprehensive election coverage on radio is right here.' Sean pushed it and pushed it all year. And he ended up having great ratings in almost every market. And his numbers in New York were just gigantic.

"Now think about that. We're in a blue state. So what's going on? We're talking about something that matters to a lot of people. You have to be relevant to the listeners. Well, they all cared about what was going on, and he did a great job making you care about it and helping you understand how important it was." ●●●

ILLUSTRATION BY SUPERCORN

TIRED OF TAKING IT ON THE CHIN, RADIO MOVES AGGRESSIVELY TO REBRAND ITSELF

The boiling point came at last year's National Assn. of Broadcasters Radio Show. Maybe it was all the talk about new competitors sounding the death knell for radio, just as high-definition digital broadcasting was finally becoming a reality. Perhaps it was the cumulative effect of all the bad press, with reporters dressing down the medium for perceived homogeneity and lifeless programming instead of glorifying its community response to recent hurricanes, wildfires, flooding and terrorism. Maybe it was the Howard Stern bombshell.

Whatever it was, the sentiment among industry leaders last fall in San Diego was that the time had come for radio to go on the offensive. To defuse the medium's bad rap. To turn around public perceptions tainted by negative media coverage. To set the record straight on satellite radio subscriber churn. To put the hipness back into the medium.

At that point, Entercom had already used its own airwaves to block and tackle satellite radio. But attack ads weren't what the industry at large was looking for now. Rather than bash the competition, Entercom CEO David Field and other group execs embarked on a mission to exploit music star power to extol radio's virtues.

"It sort of bubbled up from the industry as opposed to down from the top," NAB VP of corporate communications Dennis Wharton says about the genesis of the ads now airing on thousands of stations. "It is not an anti-satellite radio campaign, it is a pro-radio campaign. We thought the best people to tell the story are the artists themselves, vouching for the fact that they wouldn't be where they are without the benefit of local radio airplay. Who better than the LeAnn Rimeses and Nellys of the world to validate what radio has done for their careers?"

But not everyone agrees that the artists-as-radio-cheerleaders effort, produced by New York-based advertising agency DeVito/Verdi, has the teeth to turn public perceptions around. Observers wonder: Is the campaign strong enough? Or are the testimonials too soft to convey any lasting perceptible impression? What message is the campaign trying to convey? And against what medium is radio attempting to position itself?

One of the criticisms of "Radio. You hear it here first" is that it ignores radio's strongest attributes, namely that it is free, easy, local and ubiquitous. That the campaign shies away from making bold statements that define the differences between terrestrial and satellite radio. That it doesn't dazzle listeners with radio's largess, diversity and breadth.

As one observer suggests: "Imagine calculating the number of hours of original programming radio cranks out in a day, a week, a year and using that as a talking point."

The answer from the campaign's ringleaders appears to be, quoting BTO, "Baby, you ain't seen nothin' yet."

INFINITY CAMPAIGN TARGETS AD COMMUNITY

WHILE THE RADIO INDUSTRY STRIVES to spruce up its image with testimonials from chart-toppers like Brad Paisley and Avril Lavigne, Infinity has teed up a campaign to brand itself in the buying community. So far, "How Far Will You Go?" involves print ads in trades read by media buyers, such as Mediaweek and Advertising Age. But the effort will expand to include direct mail and strategically selected outdoor kiosks. The goal: put the ads right under the noses of ad buyers en route to and from their New York offices.

"It's pretty dramatic," Infinity president/CEO Joel Hollander says. "There haven't been too many companies that have made a business-to-business commitment like this, but it's very important to do so to position your company."

Hollander says he employed a similar tactic when he ran Westwood One, using direct mail to target network radio advertisers.

After an initial run lasting "a few months," the Infinity campaign will take some time off before resuming toward the end of the year. Monster.com and Chrysler are serving as poster-children for the campaign. The former invested a large percentage of its budget in Infinity, something it hasn't done before. The latter placed a buy with Infinity involving an Internet component that Hollander terms as "very successful."

The way Hollander sees it, radio is "being flanked and attacked . . . and we thought it would be a good time, over the next year, to market what we do best, which is move products for advertisers . . . We're trying to brand Infinity in the media community, to put our best foot forward to position radio against other media."

Natalie Swed Stone, U.S. director of national radio investments at ad agency OMD, applauds the Infinity campaign. "Infinity has done great, very creative work. And I'm not sure at all that everyone's aware of that," she says.

SUPERSTARS TESTIFY

The unprecedented effort began Jan. 11 with spots targeting 18- to 29-year-olds, voiced by marquee names from hip-hop and rock: Nelly, Ludacris, Avril Lavigne, Ashanti, Alicia Keys, Hoobastank and others. Two weeks later, a second flight of ads voiced by Rimes, Brad Paisley and Lee Ann Womack were made available to country stations.

"You're going to continue to see waves of superstar artists, and artists that have recently been broken by radio and are getting airplay in their local communities around the country, joining the campaign and talking about how terrific this medium is," Entercom's Field promises. "It will keep getting bigger and bigger."

NAB's Wharton says spots for Hispanic and classic rock stations are being developed. "There may be some surprises," he adds.

Virtually every major radio group—from ABC, Beasley and Clear Channel to Radio One and Susquehanna—has volunteered to air the commercials several times per day until the end of February, valuing the initial commitment north of $28 million.

"You're seeing the industry bound together . . . and really step up the efforts to position ourselves against other media," new Infinity president/CEO Joel Hollander says.

The multimedia campaign will expand to include the Web, viral marketing and print, including ads slated to run in Entertainment Weekly, Vibe, Spin and other titles with music-loving readerships. Wharton says there will be synergy between the radio ads and the print and online components.

And while stations initially committed to run the spots in January and February, Field says there is no definitive end-date for the campaign and that it's likely to run well beyond the first of March.

"The truth is that historically, we have not been an industry of self-promoters," Field says. "There's a disconnect between the perception of radio and the reality of radio. When I see what our program directors at stations like [KQMT] the Mountain in Denver, [KNDD] the End in Seattle, KNRK in Portland [Ore.], WAAF in Boston and at many other stations are doing to break local music, discover new unsigned artists and to provide the most compelling music—local, national and international—to their audiences, candidly I think many of the critics just don't get that. And it's a shame, because they misrepresent and distort what this medium is all about . . . We've allowed others to reposition and distort what we're all about. There are a lot of people out there excited to see radio stepping up and defending its virtues."

One of them is radio analyst Bishop Cheen, who covers the industry as a director for Wachovia Securities. "It's difficult to fault ads that are not edgy, dissonant, attacking or disseminating erroneous information, when good solid superstars are involved," he says. "It is a very good thing that the terrestrial radio industry got out from this 'What do we do?' posture to this positive, look-at-us posture. It is going to make terrestrial radio feel good about itself and the advertising community feel good about the fact that terrestrial radio is not a wimp, that it remains an important force. When you see a high growth medium come along, it's easy to forget that the incumbent is the one that reaches 100 million-plus come weekly, not the startup."

Radio realized it was time to spiff up its image, rebrand itself and reromance Madison Avenue, Cheen says. "Radio used to be the darling of growth, and all the growth is gone. And many complain, both on Madison Avenue and on Wall Street, that radio has oversold its airwaves. Too much clutter, too many spots, for less and less dollars . . . Madison Avenue is falling out of love with [radio], which makes Wall Street almost hate it."

SATELLITE RADIO REACTS

Although Field, Hollander and Wharton insist the ads have nothing to do with satellite radio, Cheen says the advertising and investment communities believe otherwise. That feeling is apparently shared by XM Satellite Radio, which reacted to the campaign one week after it was announced.

Mounting a parallel publicity push on its Web site, XM retorted: "Hear it here best: 100% commercial-free!" XM's Web site further tossed mud in terrestrial radio's eye by featuring pictures of the very artists featured in the terrestrial campaign whooping it up in the XM studios. Quotes are also offered from the likes of Alicia Keys, Willie Nelson, Moby and Melissa Etheridge declaring XM "a revolution."

Why did XM react? Were its feathers ruffled by Entercom's attack ads? Does the campaign challenge XM's goal to "own the music"? Or did it just want to have some fun?

XM VP of corporate affairs Chance Patterson says that terrestrial's campaign suggests it is the only radio medium debuting new artists and breaking bands. "The fact is, they're not," Patterson says. "We viewed it as important to clarify that many artists that local radio ignores altogether get lots of exposure on XM. Lots of artists who have become popular in the last few years were played heavily on XM. We also felt it was a bit ironic that many of the artists who were featured in the ads are artists that we have close relationships with or are even XM subscribers."

Entercom's Field says the ads aren't intended as an attack on satellite radio, but to "reassert our virtues and not allow the industry to be misrepresented and falsely repositioned by others. Why they're being so defensive about it I find sort of remarkable. This is strictly a pro-free-radio campaign and their reaction is curious."

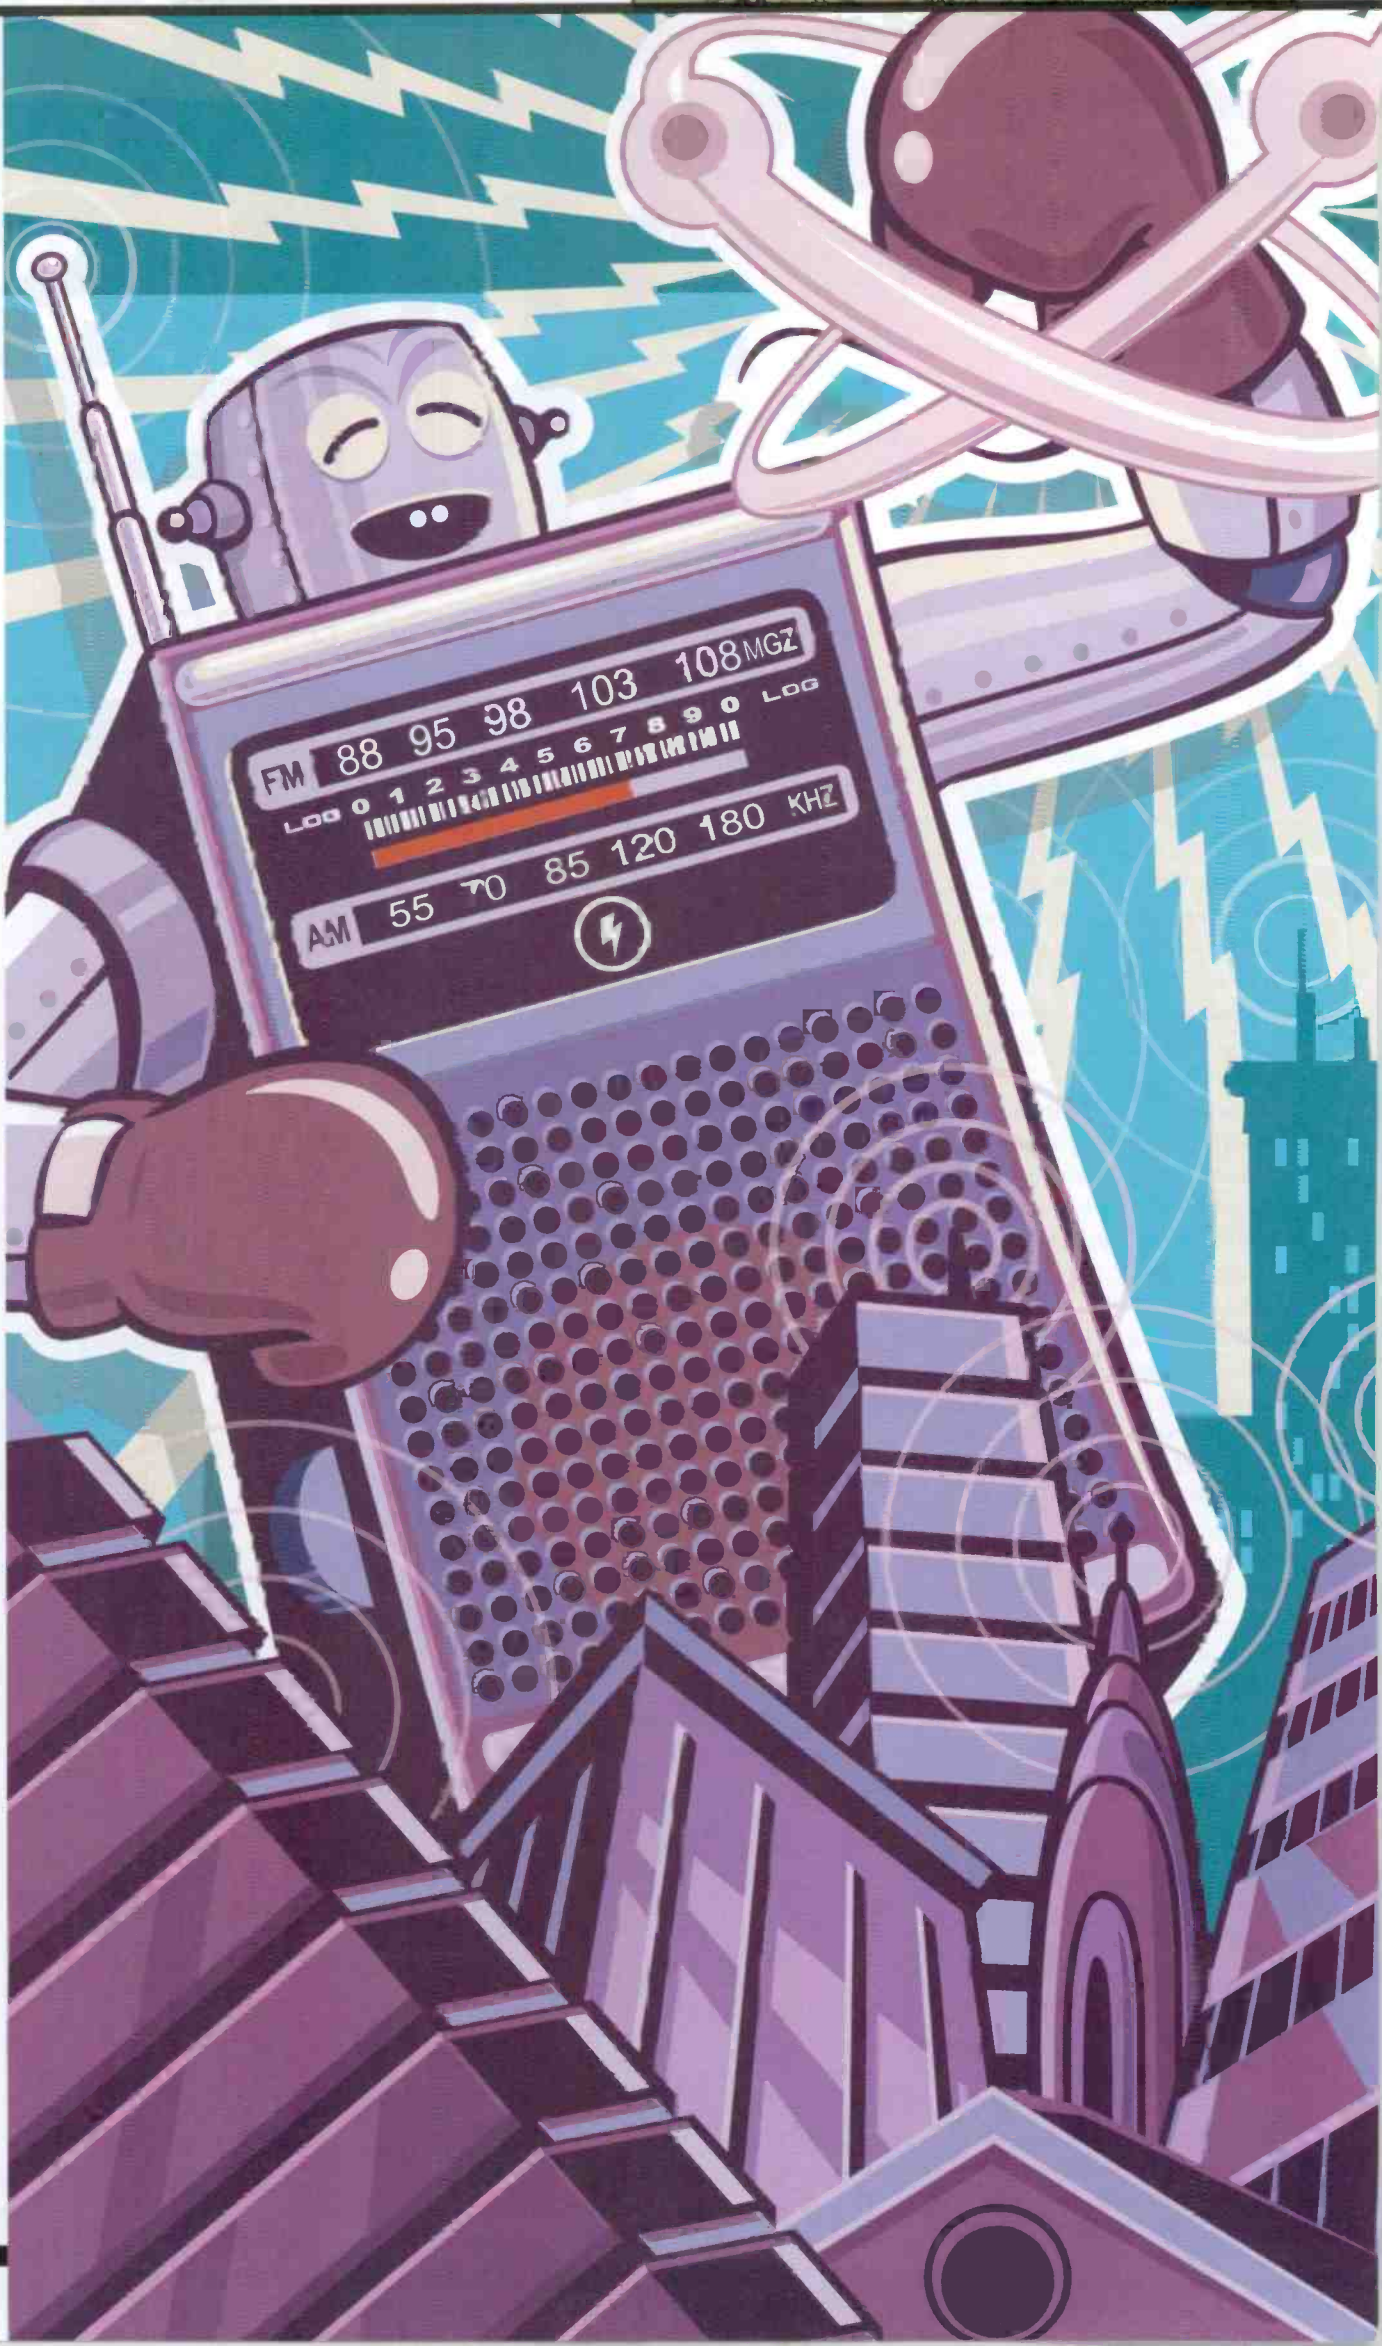

Not everyone sees the campaign as mission accomplished. Natalie Swed Stone, U.S. director of national radio investments at ad agency OMD, says it was time for radio to get aggressive. "But the attempt to use celebrities to convey to listeners that radio is the place for first-time airplay isn't going to resonate very powerfully," she says.

Instead of looking in the rear-view mirror, reminding listeners of artists it introduced in the past, the campaign should look ahead, Swed Stone says. "We don't necessarily want to think of radio as a past medium. We want to think of radio as a current and future place. It needs to talk about what it's doing now and what's coming up. It could also benefit from promoting the diversity of formats available on the AM and FM dial."

Swed Stone also believes that radio is out of step with younger listeners. "There's a sense among young people that individual station programming isn't diverse enough, that it doesn't offer any surprises, and that all of the channels sound alike. What we're finding is that listener tastes in music are more diverse than programmers think. They tend to be more eclectic than top 20, top 30." There's a difference between the way listeners consume and the way broadcasters program, Swed Stone says.

Despite the suggestions, Field says, "For now we're going to stay with this message. But I wouldn't preclude anything in the future."

WHERE PROGRAMMING AND SALES INTERSECT

BY BRAM TEITELMAN PHOTOGRAPH BY ROBERT SPENCER / RETNA LTD.

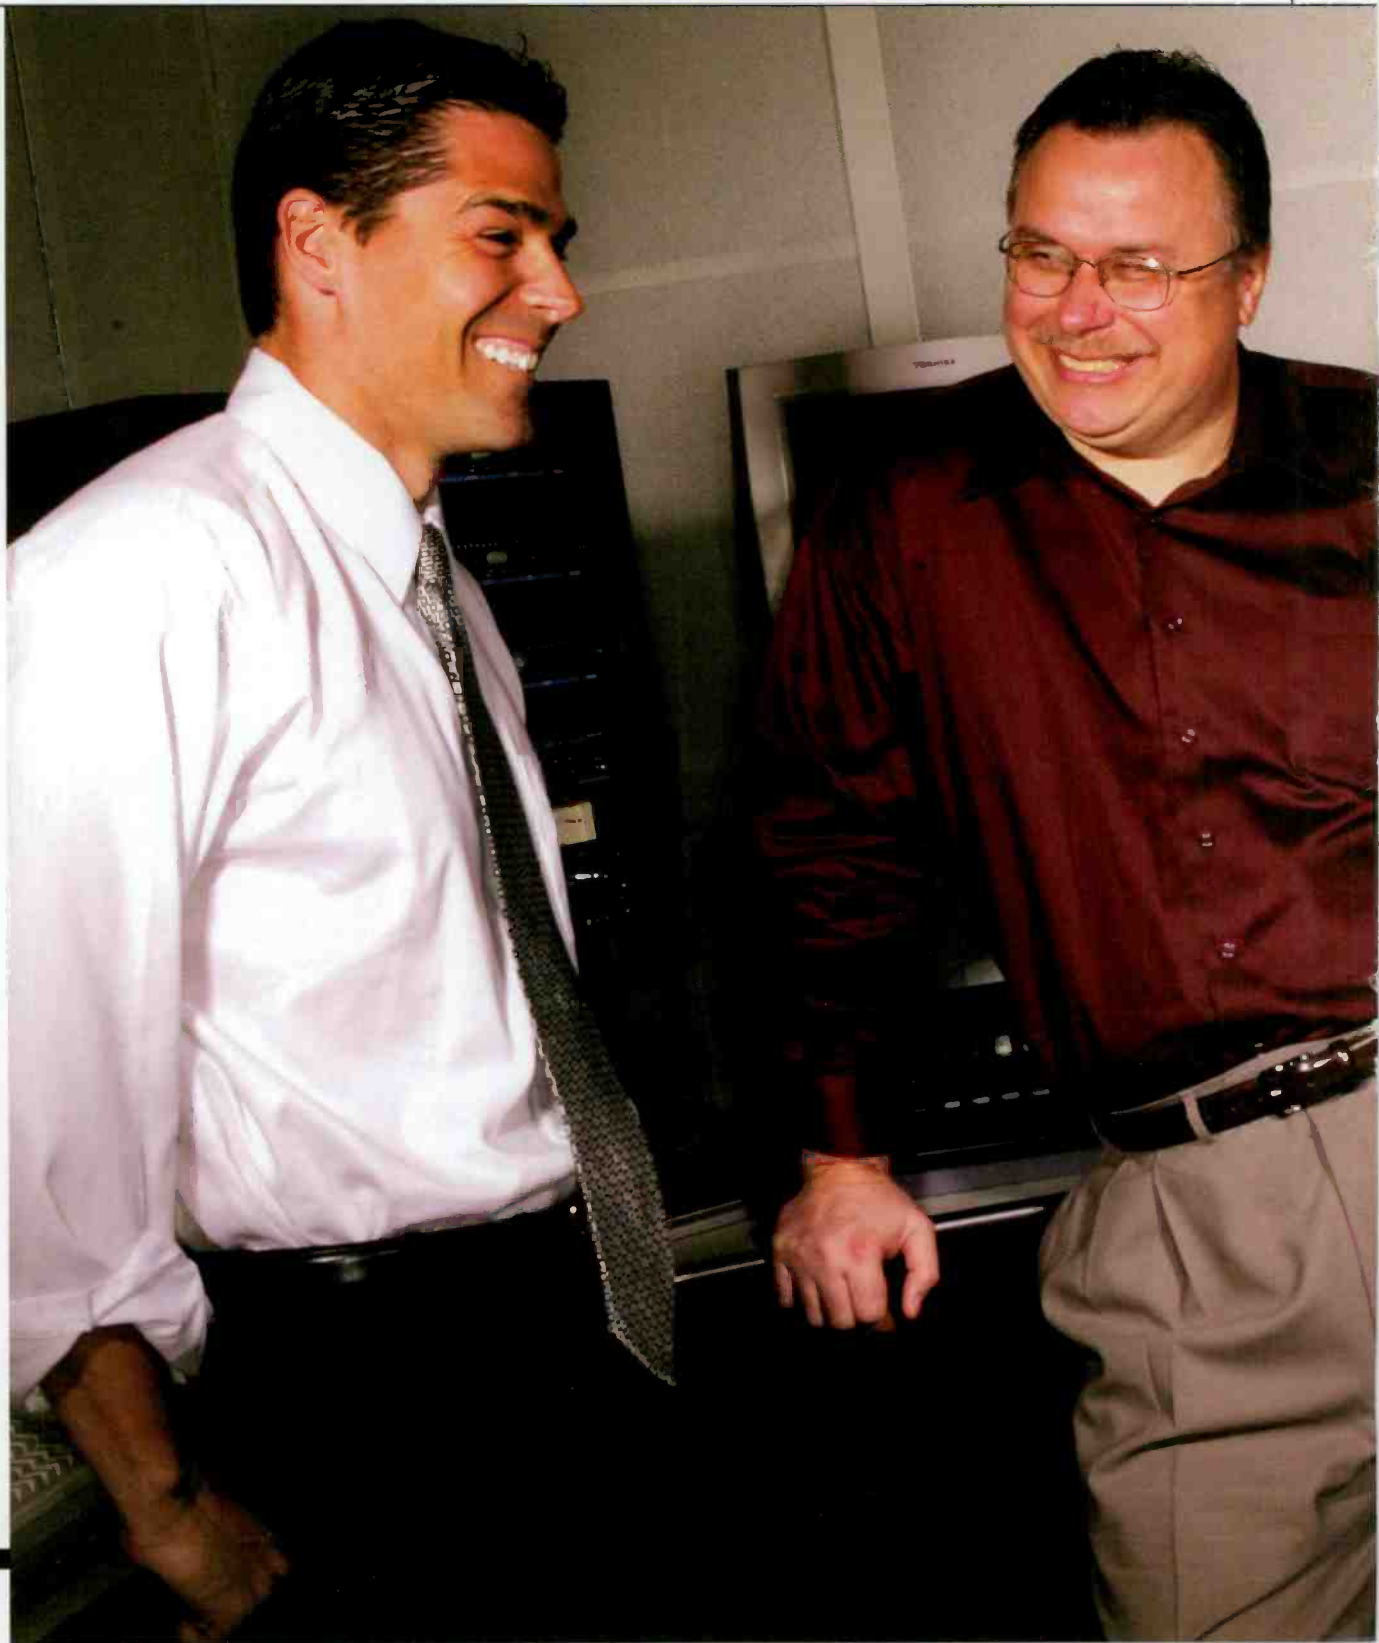

They both make a living selling: One sells music and a lifestyle to listeners, the other sells advertising appealing to those listeners. So in many ways, a radio station's air talent and its sales staff aren't really all that different. With Clear Channel's "less is more" initiative changing the way advertising is done, and other radio groups trying to cut down on clutter, advertising has changed. PDs and even airstaffs are taking notice.

All of the PDs contacted by Billboard Radio Monitor attend at least one sales meeting per month. "The last time I checked, the salespeople basically pay our bills," modern WNFZ (the X) Knoxville, Tenn., PD Anthony Profitt says. "If you're not in tune with what's going on with your sales team and your sales team isn't in tune with what's going on at your station, it's a pretty messed-up mix. You don't want your sales staff going out there and selling a product that they're not familiar with. It's no different than any other sales situation. You can't try to sell a washer and dryer if you've never used it."

Heritage rock WDHA Morristown, N.J., PD Terrie Carr talks to her sales staff much more than just at the monthly sales meeting. "We're a real close-knit group here, and I have more interaction with my sales staff than a lot of PDs I know," she says. "WDHA is a lifestyle station, and we're a suburban radio station, so it's a little different than being a city station that survives on national buys. Everything here is about locality, so we work on a lot of things together. Their job is the revenue, and my job is the ratings, and those are the two things that make the station work. We have to be a united front on that."

Active KQRC (the Rock) Kansas City PD Bob Edwards says his monthly stops at sales meetings are to break down to the account executives what's happening at the station. "I'll give them the latest ratings updates, and make sure that everyone's on the same page with the events we have for the radio station," he says. "It's a good way for the entire staff to hear from my mouth on where we're at on any given project with the radio station, as well as my own interpretation of ratings and competition."

Some, like Clear Channel/Denver director of programming Mike O'Connor, attend weekly sales meetings. O'Connor says his role has changed during the past year, so he goes to sales meetings for active KBPI and modern KTCL. "Since Clear Channel has instituted 'less is more,' we accept far fewer client-driven promotions," he says. "When we do partner with a client, there must be a tangible image or ratings benefit for the station. As a result, we are more proactive in planning in advance, creating opportunities for clients."

STAFF SOMETIMES ON SALES CALLS

Carr says WDHA's airstaff does not attend sales meetings, but they are always available to visit clients on sales calls. "They're heavily involved with imaging clients on the air by doing a lot of testimonials, using the products and getting involved with the sponsors, whether it's a car they drive or dentist they go to, or a cigar bar they go and hang out at," she says. "The jocks are a very big, important part of making the locality of the radio station pop. They know that a big part of this job is being a pitch person."

While some stations will bring their staff out on sales calls, it's usually the PD who is enlisted to go. KBZT (FM 94/9) San Diego PD Garrett Michaels brings jocks on sales calls "occasionally if it's appropriate," he says. "I do a lot more sales calls than anybody. I've got this running agreement with our [general sales manager] that if he thinks bringing me along can make the difference, then bring me along. I don't think there's anyone that can sell the passion and excitement of this radio station other than me."

Profitt has the same agreement with his sales staff. "If a client needs to talk to a jock, it's never a problem, but nine times out of 10, it's the [account executive] coming to me and asking me to come out to discuss the station with the client," he says. "It's more of a program director thing than a jock thing. Sometimes, my appearance is a most like a closer. They've already set it up, and you just come out and sell the deal and talk about what exactly you're going to be able to do. The salespeople can talk all they can, but it's nice to see the guy that's actually going to be responsible to execute the promotion or sale."

Profitt says clients will sometimes request a particular jock for a promotion. "I try to keep that balanced, and we can't do that all the time because it's not fair to other jocks," he says. "But if we can keep it balanced and make sure a client gets their needs fulfilled, then it's absolutely something we do."

Edwards will bring his airstaff to sales calls only if they're requested. "For each jock, that only happens about once a quarter," he says. "Normally, they're not requested to go out and visit the client unless they're doing an endorsement . . . The advertiser will normally request a specific talent for an endorsement."

Michaels doesn't bring his jocks to the sales meetings, but says his airstaff and sales staff get along very well with each other. "Our jocks tend to be as helpful as they can with sales, and sales with the jocks. The bottom line, and I say this all the time to the staff, is that we're all, in a way, in sales. The [account executives] are out there selling air and airtime, and we're selling ourselves, the radio station and music. We have to sell the music to our listeners and sell the benefits of the radio station. So we're all in our own little way selling. So it's important not to look at the sales department as 'us versus them.'"

ADVERTISING IS CHANGING

Clear Channel's "less is more" initiative has changed the way advertising runs on its stations. "Our best ideas fall in the realm of 'conspicuous product placement,' where the client's product becomes part of the promotional story line," O'Connor says. "We try to create as many sponsorable benchmarks involving five-second client impressions as possible. Because we have made a concerted effort to reduce commercial content and promotional clutter, tag lines are no longer incorporated into sponsorships, but products are placed conspicuously. For example, 'Channel 93.3's Backstage Thursday gives you a chance to throw back a Budweiser with Incubus before their show.' That stuff is much more beneficial to the client than the torrid onslaught of bad promotions with cumbersome slug lines that some agencies have tried to force on us. Now, we simply walk away from stuff like that."

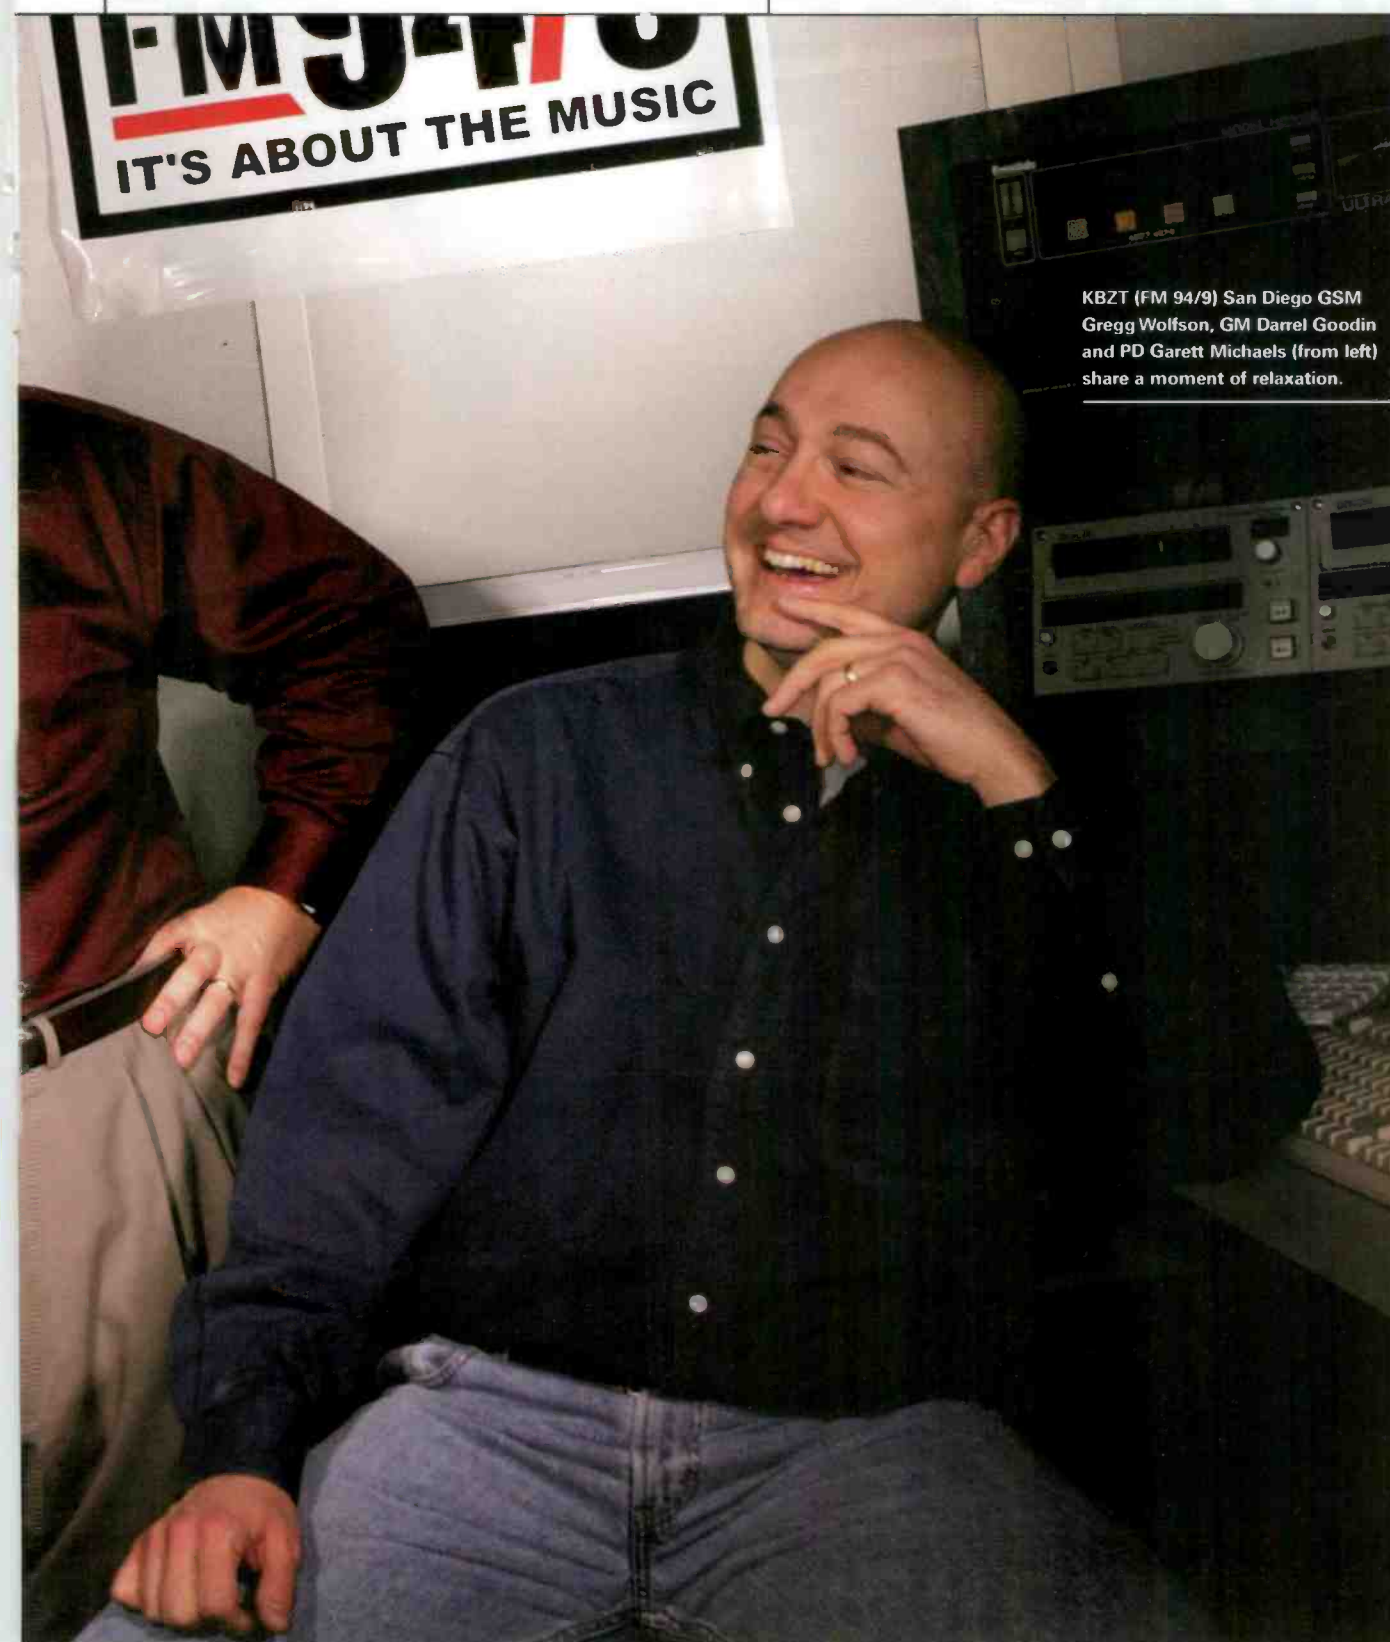

As a station that prides itself on being unconventional, KBZT's style initially took a lot of explaining to clients, Michaels says. "We have some pretty strong philosophical differences with the way the rest of conventional radio operates, and you have to sell that through," he says. "A lot of advertisers didn't get that. They thought they would wear us down until we started doing things like other radio stations."

Among the differences at the station are no live reads or personal endorsements by the airstaff. In addition, special features and dayparts are "supported by" clients as opposed to sponsored. "We'll allow one client per specialty program, so if it's the surf report, Halloran's Daily Dog Dare or the 94/9 member of the day, we'll allow one supporting sponsor per feature," Michaels says. "There's no tag line either. It'll say, 'The FM 94/9 Authentic Surf Report is supported by Miller Beer.' No 'Tastes great, less filling' or anything like that. It's sort of like public radio. We present it a little differently."

But the majority of stations have sponsored features and dayparts. Edwards says most of the features on KBPI are sponsored. WNFZ has a noon request hour, "The All Request Feedbag," sponsored by McDonald's, and another drive-time request show, "Road Rage," sponsored by Scion. The station also has sponsorships for weather and traffic. "It's usually an added-value thing, but sometimes it's just a straight buy," Profitt says. "Sometimes, a sponsor will come to us and say, 'We want to be in this hour and sponsor this actual event.'"

WDHA has sponsored features as well. "We have the 'DHA Coffee Break, which is a high-energy tune we play once a day that's sponsored by Dunkin' Donuts coffee, which is great," Carr says. "All of the sponsorships don't match up like that, though. We have a car dealership that has sponsored the all-request lunch hour for about five years standing. We do have a 10 o'clock news feature, where we feature a lot of new music that's sponsored by a local record store chain."

"My biggest hurdle to climb with the sales staff is that I'm always stressing lifestyle with sales," Carr continues. "Lifestyle means insurance, lifestyle means soft drinks, and lifestyle means cell phone service, it doesn't just mean beer drinking and hell-raising. So I have to give them a vision on how to incorporate what they perceive as a nontraditional lifestyle into an effective win-win situation." ●●●●

SPEAKING OF MUSIC...

IF YOU BELIEVE that selling radio advertising for a talk station is no different from selling for a music station, read no further. Your bubble will burst.

First of all, time spent listening generally differs from music to talk—it's typically higher for talk stations.

Hank McMonigle, general sales manager for country KPLX (the Wolf) Dallas, says sports talk sister KTCK (the Ticket) "will have a higher TSL, which means that you don't need as many commercials to achieve a frequency of three. That's really important because it helps you to drive the rate. If [the client doesn't] need as many spots, you can typically charge more, if you do it right."

McMonigle has seen the talk/music dichotomy from both sides: He previously worked for the Ticket.

Yet music stations have their advantages too: They tend to factor—who the audience is, the age cells, the music and what kind of person that brings to the table." Ficano is familiar with both formats: She joined WLIB in 2004 after years in music radio sales.

One advantage that talk stations, particularly sports talk stations, may have is that the client is often a listener. It makes sense that an ad buyer at a car dealership is also in the target demo of a sports talk station, for example.

But Mike Carpenter, general sales manager for country WSIX and top 40 WRVW Nashville, says that music stations also evoke loyalty from advertisers. "We all have [advertisers] who believe that our station is where you have to be," he says. "Because they listen to it, they feel that's where their audience is listening."

"There are some [advertisers] on WSIX that do not use any other radio station," he says. "They are that passionate about it."

"Urban formats are also very loyal," he adds. "Formats that have loyal listeners tend to do well for advertisers."

Talk formats, whether it be talk or sports talk, lend themselves to product endorsements. "The guys are always talking," McMonigle says of the Ticket's hosts, "so you will typically have more opportunities to sell endorsement campaigns, and endorsement campaigns are premium dollars."

"Not only is [the spot] in drive typically, you're going to pay more to get [a host] on the Ticket to say, 'Yeah, I use this product' or 'I drive this car, you should too,'" McMonigle adds.

There's another reason that endorsements may work better on talk radio, Keegan says. "For program directors, it's more acceptable for talk show hosts to endorse a product because, let's face it, they talk," he says. "That's what they do. When you talk in music, you're breaking format."

HOW WHERE IS THE MONEY?

have larger cume audiences. "The Wolf has two times the audience that the Ticket does, but the Ticket still competes pretty much head up on average quarter hour because their TSL is so high," McMonigle says.

Bill Hutcherson, general sales manager for country WSM-AM-FM Nashville, sees talk as a frequency medium, while music radio might best be described as a reach medium.

"In talk radio it's the same audience hearing the same message time after time after time," he says. "That's still very important in music radio, but you're reaching more raw numbers of people."

"Any top 10 music station in Nashville is typically going to reach 100,000 adults every week," Hutcherson says. "What it comes down to at that point is, how do you become a household word with those music listeners that tend to hop around more?"

Hutcherson says that to reach that music audience, more spots are usually necessary. "You've got to run more of them to brand yourself against that audience, because they're moving around more," he says.

"When you sell music radio, you're selling more of a concept," says Barbara Ficano, an account manager with Air America flagship talk WLIB New York. "You're selling more of the audience

According to rhythmic top 40 WRDW/country WXTU Philadelphia sales manager Rob Keegan, the talk audience views commercials differently.

"Talk radio is a very interactive, foreground format because people tend to listen to it as a source of information," he says. "Theoretically, they're more accustomed to the spoken word, therefore the commercial itself becomes information."

Keegan sold for talk WWDB Philadelphia for 11 years before the station became WRDW in the late '90s.

"Listeners are active in the talk format," Ficano says. "They are listening to every word on that station. They're listening because [the hosts] are talking about what they believe in. They take everything that the hosts say verbatim."

The result, according to Ficano, is that talk listeners respond. "They are more likely to use those advertisers, whether it be a doctor or an attorney or a car dealership," she says.

Yet listener loyalty isn't the sole province of talk radio, according to Keegan. "There are music formats that lend themselves to good time spent listening," he says. "Country music has very loyal listeners. Country music, as far as results are concerned, is music's version of talk radio because of its loyalty."

LOTS OF LOCAL ADS

While all radio stations hope for buys from ad agencies and national clients, talk stations in general frequently rely on a higher percentage of local advertisers.

"Talk radio business will tend to be direct, meaning that it's not nationally driven or agency-driven," Keegan says. "With a talk radio station, demographically speaking, you're looking at people over the age of 35."

"There are not many buys coming down 35-plus," says Keegan, whose responsibilities include seeking nontraditional revenue for the stations he represents. "You're really not competing for the top agency business, so you have to go find revenue in other ways."

"Quite frankly, every radio station should do that," he adds.

Talk also lends itself to nontraditional advertising. Stock brokers, real estate companies, insurance companies and other personal services businesses can typically find a home on talk radio, Keegan says.

McMonigle agrees and says that sports talk's male audience also lends itself to a different clientele. "The Ticket has a 95% male audience," he says. "You can do a lot more with certain

'In talk radio it's the same audience hearing the same message time after time after time. That's still very important in music radio, but you're reaching more raw numbers of people.' —BILL HUTCHERSON products and [appeal to] more business-types of clients that [normally] wouldn't even try radio.

"There's a real lifestyle aspect to it," he adds. "Those guys on the Ticket have created their own lifestyle group. It's guy talk. It's like guys sitting in a bar."

Because of that, McMonigle says that a number of non-spot opportunities are available to advertisers, including sports collectible shows, for example. An upcoming event called Ticketstock expects to draw 30,000 fans.

Keegan sees talk's opportunities for specialty programming as the biggest difference between it and music radio. "Specialty programming allows you to prospect key areas," he points out. "For example, with a food show you can prospect people in the food industry, not just restaurants, but food suppliers."

A real estate show might bring in advertisers that sell everything from windows to title insurance, Keegan says, while a health and fitness show allows a station to attract advertisers that want to reach those interested in health, diet, nutrition and exercise.

"It's more than saying, 'We can reach women 25-54,'" Keegan says. "You're going to have a host who's going to endorse [a particular] product. People will listen and they'll buy."

Several people say talk radio is often sold show by show, as opposed to music radio where the station is frequently sold as a complete package. "Each of the talk shows has a particular audience that it tends to reach more of than anything else," Hutcherson says.

That specific targeting allows advertisers to narrow their focus and still achieve results, Hutcherson believes. "If I want to reach a 50-year-old cigar-smoking male, then my strategy would be to run a couple of commercials on Rush Limbaugh every single day," he says. "If I do that over time I'm going to be a household name [with] that audience."

In the end though, there are definite similarities between selling talk radio and selling music radio.

"The common denominator is that radio should be used to brand," Hutcherson says, "because of the way the brain works and how the human voice enters the brain."

He cites long-running radio advertiser State Farm Insurance and its trademark slogan, "Like a good neighbor, State Farm is there," as an example of a company that uses the human voice to brand their product. "No matter how many times you put that in print nobody would remember it," he says. "Only the human voice can do that. That's radio's biggest strength."

"It's about connecting with the listener with a message that makes the consumer move," Carpenter says. ●●●

FROM BALLOONS AND BANNERS TO

BIG BUCKS

BY PHYLLIS STARK

Two decades ago, the job of a promotions director at most stations primarily involved blowing up balloons, driving the van and hanging banners at station events. Today, promotions directors—now often called marketing directors—play a major role in helping their stations meet and exceed their revenue goals.

In this consolidated radio environment, promotions directors—who often handle that role for several stations in a cluster—work hand in hand with their sales departments, creating and executing ideas that lure new clients and keep existing advertisers happy.

As for the balloons and banners, well, they have interns for that now.

Explaining the balance he must strike in his job, WUBE Cincinnati promotions director Ron James says, “I have always liked to refer to the promotion department as the ampersand between ‘ratings & revenue.’ We tread on the line between garnering ratings through developing creative and compelling content in programming and generating revenue through creative and compelling content that can be sold to advertisers.”

For most promotions directors, a typical day includes the following and more: brainstorming ideas with sales and programming staffers, reviewing client requests, writing promotion proposals, attending client meetings and executing sales promotions. Nearly all promotions directors contacted by Billboard Radio Monitor indicated that their work with the sales department is growing all the time.

“With the increased revenue demands on the sales department, it becomes a very important role of the promotions director to help sales come up with ways to make money beyond just selling spots,” says Angie Summers, promotions director of WSM-FM (the Wolf) Nashville. “The key is to keep the harmony between sales and programming and always be asking the question ‘What’s in it for the listener?’”

WKLB Boston promotions and marketing director Josh Easler says, “The promotions department, along with the MD and PD, play a significant role in generating revenue quite frequently. Often a clever promotion added to a spot schedule will be the difference between being bought and not being bought.”

While this clearly benefits the clients, promotions directors have mixed feelings about advertisers’ quests for this kind of added value, saying it can be a curse and a way to show off their own creativity.

‘A CULTURE SHIFT’

“One of the big challenges with the marketing and promotions departments helping to generate revenue is that many of the clients think they should get our promotions as added value,” says Tony Busekrus, marketing and promotions director at KSHE St. Louis. “We continually have [account executives] coming to us saying, ‘I need a promotion to get this buy.’ This shows that many clients are making their decision as to who they spend with or how much of the share they give us based upon the creativity and possible impact of promotions.

“It is a culture shift, but sales and promotions need to continue to get clients to realize we can be a marketing arm for them, but it will cost more than just running spots,” Busekrus adds.

WMIL Milwaukee’s Enid Parkinson says, “Our goal as the marketing/promotions staff is to assist the sales department in creating packages and opportunities for clients—packages that go above and beyond a spot schedule. However, we need to ensure that these opportunities make sense for the station as well as the client.

“We always hear the words ‘added value,’” Parkinson continues. “Part of our job is to creatively accomplish the client’s objective without giving away the store. It may be that we wrap a client into an existing promotion or create a Web element for them, as opposed to coming up with something brand-new for each added-value request.”

“Typically, there are two ways promotions can generate revenue,” explains WDAF Kansas City director of marketing and promotions Hilary Woods, who says her interaction with the sales department accounts for about 40% of her work week. “The first is by having a brilliant idea that is supported by programming as well as the sales department—meaning programming wants to do it and sales has the perfect client in mind.

“The second is by figuring out a way to tie in sponsors to an already planned station event,” Woods continues. “For instance, our Ultimate Valentine’s Day Giveaway at an area nightclub.” For that event, WDAF invited clients to provide door prizes to give away and to spend a certain amount of ad dollars in the next quarter. In exchange, their company names were included in the promotional announcements.

EVENTS ABOUND

Events like the Valentine’s Day Giveaway abound, and promotions directors say they can be huge money makers for their stations.

Busekrus says events can be “a great way to generate additional revenue without taking additional commercial inventory,” but only if the promotions director can “find ways to sell what has historically been considered ‘added value.’”

At KSHE events, Busekrus says, “we sell booth spaces as well as title sponsorships. [The client gets] exposure in the recorded station promo—which doesn’t come from sales inventory—as well as station Web site postings.”

At WKLB, “we develop all of our events with the sales department in mind,” Easler says. “The event planning is how I am most directly involved with generating revenue, because [they] are major money makers for us. It’s up to us to make sure the sales opportunities are secured.”

“A good marketing director must always look for events that increase ratings or increase revenue,” says Vicki Fiorelli-Starkovich, director of marketing and promotions for Clear Channel’s eight-station Phoenix cluster. “We need to market the station at events that make sense for our listeners’ lifestyle and must try to generate revenue at these events, whether it’s a buy from the promoter or bringing in a third-party sponsor.

“The days of going out to everything [are] long gone,” she continues. “Even with nonprofit, community-oriented events, we need to find a way of getting ‘cause marketing’ dollars to make the event a win-win for the event, the nonprofit and the station.”

Parkinson says CC’s recent “less is more” clutter reduction initative has brought its own set of challenges and, perhaps, increased the importance of added-value events. "We're now dealing with tighter limits on promotion and sales inventory—so it is now more crucial than ever that we are smart about what and how we develop revenue opportunities and use those avails to best effect."

FEEDING THE NTR 'MONSTER'

Asked how their job has changed in recent years, promotions directors point to its increased professionalism, as well as its growing value to station groups. But mostly, they talk about two little words: nontraditional revenue.

"What has changed is the beast we've created—the valued-added monster that must be fed, and it seems to get hungrier every year," James observes.

KUSS/XOCL San Diego promotions director Kristin Ferguson says, "One of the biggest changes in the past couple of years has been our increasing NTR budgets and developing events in which clients have a significant monetary interest . . . Most annual pitches now require a significant amount of added-value to secure the buys."

Lisa Juillerat, marketing/event director for WFMS Indianapolis, says, "In the past three or four years, we [in] promotions/marketing have been held accountable for developing revenue-generating marketing plans for each project that we commit to. Programming, promotions [and] sales often still have different goals and objectives, and it has become the promotions department's role to be the facilitator of constant communication, problem solving and timeliness [among] the three departments."

Juillerat, a 10-year veteran with Susquehanna Radio, has seen her department grow "from worrying about the timeliness of in-house prizes and what the jocks said on-air we didn't know about to protecting both the PD and the station's on-air imaging while generating not just value-added promotions but marketing plans that generate revenue toward monthly, quarterly and yearly sales goals."

WSOC/WFNC/WFNA Charlotte, N.C., promotions director Chele Fassig says, "Not only do promotion and marketing directors have the responsibility to be creative and promote their great stations and their clients, but [they] also are now expected to help develop these great promotions that specifically generate revenue for their station." Now, she adds, "almost all of the promotions that are created, conducted and implemented on the station can only be executed if there is a station revenue opportunity included."

Renee Fonner, promotions/marketing director at KFKF Kansas City, says, "In the 10 years that I have been doing marketing/promotions, the role has increased because stations—and stockholders—are looking more at the bottom line and looking for everyone to contribute."

Lisa Sands, promotions director for WGAR, WMVX and WMJI Cleveland, has also seen her job evolve.

"It feels now that for almost every buy on the station there is an expectation that there will be a promotion," she says. "Often clients have a specific idea in their head from which they refuse to deviate. Many don't or can't value the basic giveaway properly and do not seem to recognize that a radio station morning show does not have to give their [product] away. When the station does put something in the morning show, it seems that this prime-time exposure is undervalued and is not enough. They want a lot of produced promos."

"This situation can be tough, as we are held accountable for managing clutter and keeping the messages clear and concise," Sands adds, "but we understand the significance of getting the buy and the impact on the bottom line."

Easler says, "Budgets are being cut. Fewer stations are getting on the buys than ever before. So, we are having to be more creative more often."

Josh Easler

While Easler and others think challenging times have called for more creativity, some lament a loss of the kind of creativity associated with not always having to tie in clients to promotions.

"We used to be creative first and foremost for the station—determining the goals of the station and creating promotions that drive home that goal. If you [could] tie in clients, great," says Annie Sandor of WPOC, WSMJ and WCAO Baltimore. Today, she says, "we find ourselves doing the complete opposite—finding how to make promotions involving clients fit the station."

POLISHING 'HALF-BAKED' IDEAS

Promotions directors say a key part of their job is going on sales calls, meeting with salespeople to brainstorm ideas and, as Easler puts it, polishing "half-baked ideas" from the account execs.

Fassig says that at WSOC, "85% of my week involves client calls and discussion of revenue-generated promotions and events. Helping the sales department to generate revenue by working closer than ever before with clients has become a mandatory—and often enjoyable—part of the job description. The promotion/marketing directors should know their radio station, audience and audience behavior just as much as the account executive and should be able to paint a terrific picture for the client."

"I'm the idea person for our sales staff," WMZQ Washington, D.C.'s Wendie Vestfall says. "On an everyday basis, I may work with four to five of our salespeople on different projects. My office should have a revolving door with the amount of sales traffic I sometimes see. They come to me with their clients' objectives and goals, and together we put the pieces of the puzzle together until we come up with something that benefits the client and our station. It's like solving several mysteries a day. Through our ideas, we are helping the station increase revenue while protecting the image and objectives of programming."

Ferguson says she works with her station's sales staff one-on-one "when they have a large buy that needs an integrated station promotion or when programming has a sponsorable concept. My time is really split pretty evenly between working with sales and programming," she says. "It's the gray-area stuff that requires some creativity to make all parties happy."

For James, generating revenue is a "huge portion" of his job. "Without revenue, we're a boat without a paddle, and we work daily to turn that paddle into an outboard motor," he says. "My goal each and every day is to challenge the sales department to consider the other half of the ledger when speaking to clients. We never do promotions just for the sake of the dollar."

"Clearly this is a business, and we all need to participate in some capacity in generating that revenue, doing all we can to increase ratings, superior on-the-street presence, executing remotes and events and creating client opportunities," Parkinson says. "All of it goes to help the bottom line."

DEVAUGHN IN DEHOUSE

JUDGE JACKSON

CHARTS

THIS WEEK IN DATA. For complete charts, there's always more at www.BillboardRadioMonitor.com

BY ANTHONY COLOMBO, WADE JESSEN, PATRICK MCGOWAN AND MINAL PATEL

THE SPIN

LEGEND TO CHARTS

Charts are ranked by detections except for Latin, Christian and Country charts which are based on audience impressions, computed by cross-referencing exact times of airplay with Arbitron listener data.

● Songs showing an increase in detections

(audience for Latin, Christian and Country) over the previous week, regardless of chart movement. A song will also receive a bullet if its percentage gain in detections (audience for Latin, Christian and Country) does not exceed the percentage of monitored stations down time for the format. Exempting the Country chart, a song that has been on the chart for more than 20 weeks will generally not receive a bullet even if it registers an increase in detections (audience for Latin, Christian and Country). Country titles which decline in audience but increase in detections will also receive a bullet if the total audience exposure for the week does not exceed 3%.

◎ AIRPOWER: awarded to songs appearing at the top 20 on both the Airplay and Audience charts for the first time with increases in both detections and audience. Airpower awards do not appear on the Latin and Christian charts.

↑ GREATEST GAINER: awarded to the song with the largest increase in detections (audience for Latin, Christian and Country).

⊕ MOST AIRPLAY ADDS: awarded to the song registering six or more detections at the most stations for the first time this week.

TIES: A song with a gain in detections (audience for Latin, Christian and Country) over the previous week is placed first if tied with a song with a decline over the same period. When tied songs are each gaining detections (audience for Latin, Christian and Country) or each losing detections (audience for Latin, Christian and Country), the song being played on more stations is placed first.

RECURRENT RULE: Songs below the top 20 (top 15 for adult top 40, AC, modern AC, adult R&B, heritage rock and dance) become recurrents and are removed from the chart after 26 weeks. Country titles move to recurrent after 20 weeks if they fall below No. 15 and are losing audience.

⊕ Nielsen BDS certification for airplay of 100,000 detections on all monitored stations, including satellite and national networks, across the U.S. and Canada. Numerical following symbol indicates multiple level of 100,000 detections.

★ Indicates title earned Hit Predictor status in research data provided by Promosquad.

Playlists are listed in order of TSA weekly cume, beginning with the highest-cuming station. Cumes are updated twice yearly following the release of the spring and fall Arbitron surveys.

A+ AIRPLAY ADDS denotes songs with 6 or more detections at station for first time this week.

IMPACT! Songs at Airpower level and below with a gain in detections or with a percentage loss in detections equal to or better than the monitored downtime in the format.

★ INITIAL IMPACT: Indicates song's first appearance on the Impact page.

CIARA STEPS TO NO. 1 AT MAINSTREAM WHILE 50 CENT CASHES IN AT RHYTHMIC

After reaching No. 3 in October with her debut single, "Goodies," Ciara takes the next two paces up the mainstream top 40 chart with her second offering, "1, 2 Step" (Zomba). Missy Elliott, who earns her first No. 1 at the format, joins Ciara on the track. Elliott had previously peaked at No. 3 with "Work It" in 2002.

Ciara follows Gavin DeGraw and Mario into the No. 1 slot at mainstream, making it three straight artists in less than two months that are enjoying their inaugural trip to the top of the list. In 2004, six artists celebrated their first No. 1s on the chart.

At rhythmic top 40, 50 Cent takes "Disco Inferno" (Interscope) to No. 1 while jumping 15-9 with the chart's Greatest Gainer, "Candy Shop."

"Disco" is 50 Cent's third No. 1 as a lead artist, following "In Da Club" and "21 Questions," and his fourth overall, since he lent vocals to Lil' Kim's "Magic Stick." "Disco" is also doing well at mainstream top 40, where it picks up Airpower honors and vaults 22-16.

Fantasia Basks In The 'Truth'

Fantasia earns her first No. 1 on the adult R&B chart as "Truth Is" (RMG) moves 3-1. It is propelled by an increase of 119 spins, the second-highest detection gain at the format.

The title also earns the second-highest spin increase (up 480 plays) at R&B/hip-hop and climbs 11-9, giving Fantasia her first top 10 at that format. Further down the R&B/hip-hop list, she has the highest entry as "Baby Mama" bows at No. 33. It also inches 37-36 at adult R&B.

Fantasia is the second straight "American Idol" winner to top the adult R&B chart. Her predecessor, Ruben Studdard, had a four-week run at No. 1 with "Sorry 2004" last March.

'LONELY' LAUNCH FOR THOMAS' SOLO CAREER

After less than a week of airplay, Rob Thomas' first solo effort, "Lonely No More" (Atlantic), bows on the adult top 40 chart at No. 20. Its debut is the highest entry on the chart since Alanis Morissette's "Thank U" came in at No. 13 in the Oct. 2, 1998, issue.

"Lonely" also takes Greatest Gainer and Most Airplay Adds honors as it posts 1,098 detections, with 53 of the 69 stations on the panel spinning the track six or more times this week. Thomas also stakes the Most Airplay Adds claim at mainstream top 40, netting six or more plays on 33 stations.

The song is only the second track in the history of the adult top 40 chart to gain more than 1,000 plays in a week. The sole track to exceed Thomas' spike is "Thank U," which jumped 1,384 plays in its debut week.

Thomas is no stranger to success at adult top 40: His band Matchbox Twenty holds the mark for the most charted singles at the format by a group, most overall top 10s and most overall No. 1s (with four). He was also the vocalist on Santana's 1999 smash "Smooth," which holds the record for most weeks at No. 1 on the chart (with 25).

LONG BUT SWEET JOURNEY FOR SUGARLAND

Although it took a record 31 weeks to make the trip, Sugarland's "Baby Girl" (Mercury) is the first top 10 debut single by a country group in almost three years. The track closes the gap that followed Emerson Drive's "I Should Be Sleeping," which entered that part of the country chart in the April 26, 2002, issue.

Sugarland's 31 chart weeks make it the longest top 10 trek for any group in the 15-year-old Nielsen Broadcast Data Systems era. It is only the sixth top 10 title during that frame to take more than 30 weeks to crack that region of the chart. All six of those lengthy climbs have occurred since September 2000.

"Baby Girl" is also the oldest bulleted title on this week's chart and the second-oldest title overall. With 33 chart weeks, only Darryl Worley's former No. 1 "Awful, Beautiful Life" (DreamWorks) has clocked more weeks on the list.

In the 15 years since Billboard Radio Monitor adopted Nielsen BDS airplay data as the basis for the chart, Diamond Rio is the only group to take its debut single to No. 1. In May 1991, the band ruled for two weeks with "Meet in the Middle."

Songs are blind tested online by PromoSquad using multiple listens and a nationwide sample of carefully profiled music consumers. Songs are rated on a 1-5 scale; final results are based on weighted positives. Songs with a score of 65 or more are judged to have Hit Potential, although that benchmark number can fluctuate per format based on the strength of available music. HitPREDICTOR column
ROB THOMAS TAKES A solo leap and lands at the top of this week's HitPredictor adds. The Matchbox Twenty frontman scores with his first single, "Lonely No More." Jem also debuts this week on the adult top 40 chart with "24."
 Alicia Keys joins Thomas on the mainstream top 40 chart with "Karma." Papa Roach's latest, "Scars," adds to the number of songs other rock bands have recently had added to the HitPredictor mainstream top 40 chart, including Crossfade, Green Day and Jet.
 Lil Jon & the East Side Boyz add another track to their list of HitPredictor picks. This week, "Roll Call" gets counted at rhythmic top 40. And 112 is back with "U Already Know." The song appears on the rhythmic and R&B/hip-hop charts.

Thomas Goes It Alone

Matchbox Twenty Frontman Debuts With First Solo Single, 'Lonely No More'

 There are more big names and a long list of adds at R&B/hip-hop. Usher headed the list of top artists in last year's HitPredictor tables, and he is on track again in 2005. The same can be said of Eminem, whose "Like Toy Soldiers" is the fourth single from "Encore" to earn HitPredictor status. Also added this week at R&B/hip-hop are Marques Houston and Ciara.
 Maroon5 debuts with another potential hit in another format. "Sunday Morning" appears in the Adult Contemporary column this week.
