ALL THE NEWS THAT'S FIT TO BROADCAST

uccessive Arbitron surveys have demonstrated a heightening desire on the part of listeners to seek out news and information via the radio. What we also know is that listeners who seek out news content are generally well-educated people with substantial disposable income and a wide variety of interests.

In a bid to capture the needs of this group and in an effort to identify the changing market conditions pertaining to news radio, Billboard Radio Monitor brought together the news executives who head ABC News Radio, the Associated Press' radio division, CBS Radio News and Fox News Radio for a special round-table session.

Held Feb. 18 at Monitor's world headquarters in New York, the discussion was attended by ABC News Radio VP/GM Steve Jones, AP Broadcast GM Thom Callahan, CBS Radio News VP Harvey Nagler and Fox News Radio senior VP Kevin Magee. (CNN Radio was invited but was unable to participate).

The event was hosted and moderated by Monitor editor-inchief Scott McKenzie, a veteran news correspondent and editor for companies including News Corp., CNN and ABC.

The goal of the session was to produce a white paper based on the round-table discussion.

The participants provided more than 100 combined years of news radio experience at the highest level. The questions, answers, ideas and projections that came from them provided the backbone to the comprehensive 16-page white paper that is delivered free of charge with this issue of Monitor. (Copies will also be available via billboardradiomonitor.com.)

The round-table session was a frank, on-the-record discussion in which Monitor's director of news, music and programming Paul Heine and business editor Tony Sanders also participated.

This year, news radio enters one of its most competitive periods. The stalwarts of the business have been ABC, CBS and AP. But the landscape for news providers is about to change thanks to a deal signed recently between Fox News Radio and Clear Channel.

Fox has had a radio product but it has so far been mostly based on repurposed content from its cable TV outlet, Fox News Channel. The CC-Fox deal changes that and puts significant pressure on ABC, CBS and AP as the providers battle to hold and win new affiliates.

Fox expects to launch a more robust, radio-specific product in the summer that would allow it to capture new stations. The established players are now working non-stop to hold their existing customers and convert new ones.

This news radio special issue and the accompanying white paper, "How News Radio Can Work for Your Station," will help guide programmers and managers through the options, solutions and prospects.

THE PARTICIPANTS

HARVEY NAGLER, CBS RADIO NEWS

Harvey Nagler was named VP of CBS Radio News in January 1998 Based in New York, he is responsible for the company's operations including news gathering and programming, and its relationship with affiliates.

Nagler was director of news and programming for WCBS-AV (Newsradio 88) New York from 1987 to 1997 and has also worked a United Stations Radio Networks and ABC Racio Network.

THOM CALLAHAN, THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Callahan has spent 24 years in radio management and programming. He has held senior management positions at Metro Networks and Standard News Radio Networks, as well as GM positions at the station level.

In his current role as GM of AP Broadcast, he is responsible for the development and growth of AP's radio products and services. He is based in Washington, D.C., at AP's Broadcast News Center.

STEVE JONES, ABC NEWS RADIO

Steve Jones was named VP/GM of ABC News Radio in 2003. He is responsible for overseeing all programming and editorial operations.

Jones was executive producer for abcnews.com from 1999 to 2003. During his tenure there, he launched the first regularly scheduled webcast by a network.

Jones, who is based in New York, joined ABC in 1986.

KEVIN MAGEE, FOX NEWS RADIO

Kevin Magee was promoted to senior VP of Fox News Radio in December 2004. He is responsible for all radio division expansion, including programming and new business.

Magee retains his previous title, VP of news programming for Fox News Channel. In this role, he oversees all news programming, including the network's prime-time lineup.

Magee has also worked for ABC's "Good Morning America." He began his career at KYW radio and TV in Philadelphia.

MUSIC-INTENSIVE FMs STILL HAND LISTENERS TO AM

ne of the biggest areas of discussion during the round-table session was how to inject news into FM music stations. Programmers should not presume that news solutions are just for those programming a news/talk station. One thing that became clear was that PDs—in every format—should be asking news radio providers to at least take a look at their operation and make suggestions.

News doesn't have to be an hourly update from Iraq. For music-based FM stations, news programming is really "information-casting," filled with lifestyle-oriented news that listeners will consider credible and relevant. It can be a one-minute piece on the Michael Jackson trial or a glimpse backstage at Hollywood events.

Each of the radio news providers understands this distinction and during the round table made sure that message could be heard. ABC News Radio VP/GM Steve Jones put it this way: "If you can present information in such a way that there's a component of familiarity to the listener because that's the way they're used to hearing things, then you can, on a certain station, make it more acceptable or interesting."

In most cases, the news or information-casts are delivered only during morning drive. The rest of the day is devoted to playing the music the listeners come to the station to hear.

But when major news events break, many programmers at these FMs will likely hand off their listeners to the market's news or N/T AMs, instead of adopting a brand identity that includes essential information as part of the overall image.

Group owners with large clusters of stations in their markets or with a mix of music-intensive FMs and a N/T AM can afford to send their listeners from FM to AM, as long as that destination on the AM dial is their own, co-owned news or N/T sister.

Rubin is assistant PD/morning jock at Clear Channel's modern rock KTCL Denver. "Our motto is we shut up and play the music, so the less we talk the better," he tells Billboard Radio Monitor.

KTCL's crosstown N/T sister KOA has its own newsroom and staff that Rubin can draw from for produced pieces. "As the APD here, the [KOA] program director will give me the option [to use a produced piece], and if I think it's worthy, I'll stick it in there." He is careful to avoid creating an aural train wreck by preparing his listeners with a quick promotion of the upcoming news item. The elements of that transition might run something like: "Coming out of Green Day's 'Holiday,' we might mention that they won a Grammy and then say, 'Hey, you know what? There's an Amber Alert; we take you to our sister station KOA with an update,' and then I just play it," Rubin says. "An Amber Alert I will always put in. And since it's Colorado, we get heavy storms, so if it's imminent danger, I'm on it."

An example for Rubin of a non-news event was "when Michael Jackson had to go to the hospital but they weren't saying what for, I didn't run that. When we found out it was the flu, I said, 'Screw it, I'm not running that.' Now, if Michael Jackson has to go to jail, we'll run that. I guess it's, just like any good news station, it's a case-by-case [decision]. If the news is pertinent, if it's war breaking out, if it's an Ebola virus that's airborne in Denver, hell yeah."

He adds, "For the first week of the war [with Iraq] we ran war coverage for about two days. I just sat in [the studio] and made sure the commercials played. After about two days, then we did hourly updates."

Depending on the timeliness of the news, Rubin says, he opted to take either the feed of Clear Channel's network news provider in the market or to take KOA's feed, depending on the topic. "We slowly eased out of it" and went back to the music, he says, although KTCL included an hourly, one-minute update for several days. As far as losing listeners, Rubin says the decision was that two days of complete coverage was enough: "Now let's get back to what we do and let the news people handle it."

ABC Radio's adult top 40 WRQX Washington, D.C., built up more of its own brand image as a place to depend on for news.

"Primarily we're banging the hits," station OM Kenny King says. But during the heavy combat phase of the war with Iraq and "the tense times of elevated concern," his station used the opportunity to brand itself with more of a news value. He says, "We actually touted that on the air to inform listeners that, 'Hey, even though we're a music-intensive radio station, we still have our finger on the pulse of what's happening.'"

King says he would stop the music programming altogether if there was something on the magnitude of what happened Sept. 11, 2001, because "we do have a commitment to the community." To him, Amber Alerts, severe weather warnings and other "important issues to the public" also warrant stopping the music for a special newscast.

FMs can create their own news image by drawing on their listeners to be what King calls "the eyes and ears of the station."

ROUND TABLE

When tornadoes touched down in the D.C. area last year, "we allowed listeners to call in . . . and that's something you can't get from straight news."

He notes, "Some people will say that the moment you break in with some kind of big story, [the listeners] are gone. But I think if we do a good job of conditioning the listeners that we have the resources" of a network news organization and a N/T sister station, the listeners will remain loyal. King says that during the period before the invasion of Iraq, "we used a sweeper on the air that said, 'When news breaks out, you can count on us to break in.'" That sweeper isn't used now, King says, because "we don't want to present ourselves as something we're not. We're not a news station."

Round-table participant Harvey Nagler, VP at CBS Radio News, would probably disagree with King about dropping the sweeper. Nagler believes a layered approach can bring long-term benefits to FM stations that want to raise their news profile.

"You can't have an FM station all of a sudden put on news when the crisis occurs and expect your listeners to stay with that FM station or go to that station," he said. "You need to publicize, you need to brand, you need to promote your station as a station that's going to give you that information, and that's something that I think program directors need to recognize—that this is not just something you can do immediately."

There are other PDs who think news and information can serve as a "lifestyle filter" on their music FM and that this form of information-casting is an important element of the station's brand.

Sammy Simpson is PD for Bonneville's adult top 40 simulcast WWVZ/WWZZ (Z104) Washington, D.C. The primary target demo is women 25-34, a group Simpson says expects the type of news and information Z104 delivers.

Still, even with Z104's emphasis on news, it is used only as an element during morning drive.

"D.C. is one of the biggest news towns in the country," he tells Monitor, adding that he has recently revived the use of a three-or four-minute "lifestyle" newscast delivered by a traditional news personality. There was a period when the morning show did not have any news content, but about six months ago, Simpson says he brought that back to the morning show.

News person Don Morgan "does a great job of looking for stuff that's relevant to the demographic," Simpson says, stressing that the information has to be "credible, local and relevant." He says the information is "not doom and gloom" news but more along the lines of "daily reminders" about important events, such local-government deadlines as tax filings or other issues.

Although this information-cast is deemed important to the format, Simpson says it is limited to morning drive. Traffic reports are part of the afternoon show, along with a fixed-position minute of "Celebrity Scoop" entertainment news and gossip.

Simpson disagrees with the notion that an information-cast will be perceived as an instant turnoff to the music listener. "Programmers have to realize that radio is more than just the music. We have to give listeners a reason not to choose to listen to an iPod or a CD."

Simpson and some of the station staff have created what may be a trend-setting idea for keeping Z104 in the ears of commuting listeners who own iPods or other digital-audio players. Z104 plans to create a 30-minute "daily afternoon podcast" that is tailored to giving subway commuters a new listening experience—and a reason to tune in to the FM the next morning.

Simpson says the afternoon podcast would have "exclusive content," such as his station's "Celebrity Scoop." The project is still in the planning stages, but the podcast might also include some music and other station content.

"It's a great way to cross-promote the station," Simpson

NEWS ON MUSIC FM: THE VIEW FROM THE CONSULTANTS

NEWS AND MUSIC DON'T MIX

Pollack Media chairman/CEO Jeff Pollack thinks music-intensive radio and news don't mix—outside of morning drive. "At this point, the way people use radio, unless there is a gigantic emergency, we haven't found it to be particularly productive" to add news to a rock or music-intensive station. "There's even a question about how much traffic and weather a station should use. It's a question of whether your listeners view you as a news source." Pollacks adds that some formats, such as oldies, country or AC, can use news "outside of morning drive, in other dayparts," but those formats are more the exception than the rule.

"A lot of rock stations will do music news, but I consider that pop-culture information," says Pollack, noting also that the ingrained habits of radio's listeners will send them to an all-news outlet or to a news/talk station for important news. "People listen to the radio with a specific purpose. Morning is a different window, but am I going to keep anybody on the station when I have spent 360 days convincing my listeners that I'm a music station? That's asking me to be two things at once, a music station and a news station."

ROCK FMs

In most markets news is not a regularly scheduled event on rock or top 40 stations, McVay Media VP for rock Dave Lange says. "We do see some news outside of morning drive on country stations, but really that's the only music-intensive format that has news in more markets than anyone else."

Lange thinks FMs will have to develop more on-air personalities—or else become categorized as "an iPod with jingles or sweepers." As for the type of news content these new FM personalities will have, "that's going to be entertainment news, local stuff and the audience getting involved and interacting. But it's going to take an investment in people and a move away from voice-tracking, where the digital studios control the content."

Trying to keep up a news image when in the face of "all-news stations in nearly every market" is a tough assignment, Lange says. "We have so many other images that we simply must own in music intensive-stations. Spending a lot of time on news when it's a losing battle to the all-news stations forces it down on our priority list."

CONTEMPORARY MUSIC FMs

McVay Media's Jerry King doesn't look at news as a negative but "as a positive to build a successful radio station. Looking at our primary building blocks of music, information, personality and promotion, information comes in second right behind the music."

King also makes a distinction between news and "well-targeted information." News, he says, is "a smaller part" of the morning drive shows on contemporary stations. "The best contemporary stations are the information authority for the contemporary crowd, not the news authority." And what makes up that "solid" information? "A good mix of stories is essential to keeping listeners involved, including rewritten local stories that speak to listeners, the top national and regional stories that can be 'brought back' to local listeners, and the top lifestyle stories of interest to the audience that you are targeting."

NEWS/TALK ON FM

McVay Media news/talk consultant Holland Cooke has championed a dramatic change in tactics for FM radio. His theory: Abandon the music and bring the AM-style N/T format over to the FM. "Today's music FMs are mature," Cooke says, calling them "defending at best. Funding that defense denies management, programming and promotional resources to non-music sister AMs that support greater commercial quantity and deliver a better qualitative profile. Why continue this pointless struggle? End the madness. Abandon your music format and simulcast your news/talk/sports AM on FM."

IN A LESS-IS-MORE WORLD, SPONSORSHIP IS MORE

orget trading 30-second ad spots for 60s; look at the opportunity to sell more 10s and 15s. That is one area that music-intensive FMs can use to bring in more revenue. One-minute information-casts may be a perfect chance for an FM to develop a news edge and also to generate more dollars. Another opportunity is to develop sponsorship packages.

That sort of message hasn't been wasted on NPR, said AP Broadcast GM Thom Callahan, who told the round-table panel, "One of the reasons NPR has done so well, in my opinion, is that they focus on that core audience of theirs. They brand themselves extremely well."

Part of that branding includes more news-oriented programming. The reason is simple, according to public-radio commissioned research: Listeners who gravitate to news or information-oriented programming tend to donate more money to their stations than listeners who gravitate to music-oriented programming on noncommercial radio.

Callahan told the round table that commercial FM programmers should "start to understand that they need to program information, as well as music, entertainment and all the other things" that comprise a weekly schedule. "I just think that FM music stations, if they can take a little bit of time in the morning [to create a sponsorable segment], I think the return can be substantial," he said.

Here are some basic radio economics for FM operators to consider: A 10-second sponsorship in morning drive can fetch $150-$200 apiece in Washington, D.C. Call it $150 in middays, a little less if you're willing to deal with a longer-term package. Usually, those 10s are for traffic or weather reports, but they could just as easily be sponsorships for lifestyle reports or other FM-oriented, one-minute segments.

Ten sponsorships per week at $150 apiece is $1,500 per week, or $78,000 per year. Knock off $11,000 for sales commissions, and you're left with $67,000 net, which can certainly cover the costs of a news or lifestyle-oriented reporter.

CBS Radio News VP Harvey Nagler pointed out that "news and information is foreground listening, and so it's a premium buy," a positioning statement that any FM programmer could use for a sponsored news or lifestyle "information-cast." "You've actually got people sitting listening to that information and who want to hear that information, whether it's traffic and weather or news," he said.

Fox News Radio VP Kevin Magee agreed, pointing out that TV newscasts—even late-night newscasts when viewership is down—still command a premium for news sponsorships. "If you're in St. Louis, or San Diego, or Boston, the local television station in their 11 p.m. newscast or their late-evening newscast is getting a premium for every 30-second commercial that they run. FM commercial radio stations could do the same thing, just by programming a little bit of news."

GOLDEN ARCHES

A unique case for sponsorships is the 4-year-old arrangement between McDonald's and Bonneville's adult top 40 simulcast WWVZ/WWZZ (Z104) Washington, D.C.

Put simply, McDonald's is lovin' Z104. The contracts have been for a two-year deal, and September 2005 will mark the end of the second round of a two-year relationship.

Z104's local sales manager, Michael Space, tells Billboard Radio Monitor the station offers a "clean" morning show that is family-friendly and that fits with the image McDonald's likes to convey. As part of the ad campaign, Z104 has branded its morning show as the "McDonald's Morning Drive."

"The sponsorships that you hear in the morning are part of a one-of-a-kind partnership that McDonald's has not been able to emulate in any other markets," Space says.

The way it works is, every time the mic is open, the jock should mention the "McDonald's Morning Drive." As Space describes it, "They have the sponsorship of the entire morning show. Every time a jock opens his or her mouth to identify the show, he or she should say, 'The McDonald's Morning Drive.' The top-of-the-hour IDs all have the McDonald's name. Traffic is also identified as the 'McDonald's Morning Drive.' "

One example recently ran as "You're listening to McDonald's Morning Drive," followed immediately by a traffic report, which included a 10-second billboard for a different advertiser, followed by McDonald's own 60-second spot broken into two piggybacked 30s.

In total, McDonald's has a schedule of 35 60-second units every week, along with complete sponsorship of the morning show. Fully 10 of those 35 spots run in fixed positions, as 30-30s, during morning drive, two per weekday. The remaining 25 spots are available as a "bank" to run in other dayparts and to promote other food products, rather than the breakfast menu touted during mornings.

At ABC Radio's adult top 40 WRQX Washington, D.C., OM Kenny King says sponsorship should definitely include the information newscasts his station runs: "I've never been a fan of just giving it away. Once you give it away, the advertising community expects that." The key for programmers is to "be more savvy about putting a price tag on different elements."

WRQX's crosstown smooth jazz sister WJZW airs news updates twice per hour and typically include a lifestyle-oriented information-cast lasting about 90 seconds. "We provide sponsorship opportunity" for these news updates, King says, "as we do with the traffic. It's a 10-second billboard most times conducted within the body of the report, at the end. You have the opportunity to sell those sponsorships outright, and you have the opportunity to package those for someone who wants to make a major financial commitment to the station."

And if more stations accept the notion that a 10-second sponsorship of a lifestyle newscast can work as part of the programming, those outlets stand a better chance of boosting their revenue. "Let's face it, [Clear Channel's] 'less is more' concept is catching on," King says, "and you'll see the advertising community have a stronger demand for a 10-second sponsorship that can achieve their goals."

If programmers can provide more programming elements, such as brief, one-minute information-casts, "the advertising community can start to see the value and say, 'I just might be able to accomplish the goal of my marketing strategy by purchasing 10s or 15s or 30s.'"

FOX HUNT:

BY TONY SANDERS

STALKING NEWS/TALK'S AFFLUENT DEMC

THE TYPICAL NEWS/TALK LISTENERS tend to be white males who are married and have either graduated college or possess a higher academic degree, according to Scarborough Research. They also tend to have higher household incomes (above $75,000), own their own home and enjoy bicycling, hiking, golf, skiing and tennis.

That is a key demographic for upscale brands. If a network can reach the younger end of that population, the network stands a better chance of convincing advertisers to use it to reach those valuable consumers.

During a round-table discussion hosted by Billboard Radio Monitor Feb. 18 in New York, Fox News Radio senior VP Kevin Magee said the typical N/T listener is also a Fox News Channel viewer.

"The fact of the matter is, if you're programming a talk radio station and you have the choice between CBS, Fox News and ABC, there is a greater chance that your listeners are watching the Fox News Channel," he said. "And we hope to take advantage of that."

Magee isn't the only one who expects good things to happen when Fox fully launches into radio later this year, when it will serve as the news network for Clear Channel. Last December, The New York Times quoted Zenith Media's senior VP for radio as saying that the CC opportunity for Fox was "gigantic."

According to Scarborough, 23% of N/T listeners are between ages 45 and 54. Nineteen percent are a bit younger, ages 35-44, and 18% are somewhat older, ages 55-64.

Most often, this older demographic can be found tuning in to the AM band. But if that same programming is brought over to the FM band, a curious thing happens. The age level drops significantly, with more younger demos tuning in as the percentage of older listeners shrinks.

However, the other characteristics of a N/T listener—above-average education, affluence and enthusiasm for sports—stay the same.

CBS Radio News VP Harvey Nagler made this point during the Monitor round table. Nagler offered Bonneville's all-news WTOP Washington, D.C., as an example. WTOP simulcasts on two AM signals, one full-power FM and an FM translator, thereby reaching the entire metro area.

"WTOP in Washington, when they bought an FM station, their demographics—they're doing the same news, covering the same stories—went down 10 years, just because they were on an FM station," Nagler said. "So, the AM product [is] transferred to an FM, [and] all of a sudden, the demos go down. The stories remain the same, but [they are reaching] a different audience."

ABC News Radio VP Steve Jones said his network targets the younger end of the N/T demo, too. And there is a convergence in the targeting of these younger news consumers because they use radio and the Internet to consume their news.

"We know that the average age of the abenews.com audience is 41 years old. We know that N/T stations are trying to attract 40-year-olds," Jones said. "So, what we've done is, we have access to the stories that are being read at abenews.com, and we've laced those stories through our editorial processes" to bring the Internet user over to radio.

The trick is to turn the Internet news consumers into radionews consumers—to make these individuals one and the same. That combination would create a marketing synergy that would enable a network to hold onto a consumer across various media platforms. And if that's done successfully, it is a compelling argument for advertisers and agencies to consider placing more of their budgets with a network that can deliver the same consumer across TV. radio and the Internet.

The Scarborough data that was made available to Monitor does not break out specific channels or networks that N/T radio listeners favor. But the data does catalog the types of TV programming these N/T listeners prefer. In descending order of preference, they are:

- News magazines—N/T listeners are 34% more likely than the average person to tune in to such programming.
- National/network news—A N/T listener is 28% more likely than the average person to tune in to these telecasts.
- Documentaries—They are 18% more likely to tune in such a program.
- \bullet Sports—The N/T listener is 14% more likely to watch TV sports than the average person.

Other forms of TV news, such as evening and late-night local news, come in just above the average for these radio listeners, while local morning news programs didn't do as well with N/T listeners.

RADIO AND THE INTERNET: LINKS FOR REVENUE, LINKS FOR INFO INTERCHANGE

NOW, MORE THAN EVER, it is all about choice. The distractions of e-mail, cell phones and the Internet couple with TV, radio and iPods to distract listeners in new and creative ways. Cutting through those barriers has become a primary challenge for radio programmers.

The best way to break through that clutter is to carry your station's brand identity across to other media. That was Fox News' vision. During the Billboard Radio Monitor round-table discussion, Fox senior VP Kevin Magee described taking the Fox News Channel brand from cable TV and translating it across to radio.

"We want to be the Fox News Channel in your car," Magee says. "The cable wire doesn't stretch to your car, so you can dial us up on your local radio station and get your fix of Fox News that way."

On a simpler level, individual stations simply need to use their Web site to promote the station and the station to promote the Web site. Some programming consultants suggest this type of cross-promotion should happen on-air no less than once per hour.

AP Broadcast GMThom Callahan is a big believer in the power of radio and the Internet working together. So is Infinity's all-news WCBS, which recently developed a completely separate Internet advertising opportunity that could bring in several million dollars in revenue annually.

Callahan pointed out during the round table that Infinity's other New York news outlet, WINS, is "a perfect example" of a radio station that has created a very strong online brand

"Their Web site," Callahan said, "which you would think people would stop listening to radio to look at their Web site, is attracting over half a million UVs [unique visits] every month. That is brand extension that you cannot possibly buy anywhere else."

Callahan described what he believes are the elements for WINS' Web success. "Improved programming, very compell ng programming that's going on, world events that are affecting all of us," he said. "But also, when I'm at the office and I can't hear the radio, I'll go to the Internet. And I've been told as I drive to work to go to 1010 WINS, KYW, wabc.com, whatever. I'll go there, I'll get more information, and all of a sudden I have a brand extension or an information partner in my office, which becomes habit-forming."

Callahan cited a recent Few Internet Project study that chronicles a dramatic jump in Internet use for news gathering by individuals. "But yet, radio has not lost any audience as a result, or market share," he said.

The Pew study reported that, in 2000, 19 million Americans used the Internet on a daily basis to get news. In 2004, that number had jumped 84%, to 35 million Americans.

"What I'm trying to pain the picture of is a multimedia world," Callahan said. "I may come to the radio station for some information, I'll go to the Web site for another, I may want to listen to satellite for something else. I may even pick up a newspaper and read a more in-depth article. I think the choices, the consumers' choices, the people that we're ultimately trying to serve, have a lot more resources to go to for information."

ABC News Radio VP Steve Jones said he thought the typical radio news consumer and the typical Internet news consumer was probably not the same person, "but they should be. And by that I mean we are using the Internet at ABC News Radio because people that go to abcnews.com are the precise demographic that news/talk radio is trying to attract."

CAN YOU HEAR ME NOW? WELCOME TO LISTENER APPRECIATION DAY

COMMENTARY BY SCOTT MCKENZIE, EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

THEY WERE FOUR WHITE MEN IN SUITS, seated around an antique wooden table in a plush corporate boardroom, their drinks resting on coasters.

ABC News Radio VP/GM Steve Jones summed up the scene succinctly: "You could look at the four of us and feel that we're the representation of stodgy, corporate media, and yet, what I think you hear today is there's incredible flexibility in the approach that we have. That's how you stay competitive."

The three others nodded in agreement. They are his peers and his competitors—old and new. The group had gathered to spend two hours addressing the business of news radio. It's the first time the four have had this opportunity together, and there's the distinctive smell of healthy competition in the air.

The new competitor is Fox News Radio senior VP Kevin Magee, a man in full sprint who crosses the start line—not the finish line—in July. Between now and then, ABC, the Associated Press and CBS will be doing all they can to capture new affiliates and hold the ones they have against Fox, whose new news radio offerings will become available in the summer.

To further set the scene, Fox announced a partnership in December with Clear Channel with a deal that applies to more than 160 stations. It's instant access to the market, and it's cheaper than the competition. Though there are other components, it's a lower-priced deal with a cash component in a world of barter payments. CC's "less is more" campaign of course means there is also less advertising inventory to barter. That said, the choice of news provider will remain with individual CC stations.

"'Less is more' has clearly had a major impact on the business that we're doing, and all of us at this table are adjusting to it. There's no question about that," CBS Radio News VP Harvey Nagler said.

Jones agreed. "If there's one thing to be said about 'less is more,' it's that there is an abundance of commercials that are not being listened to and the desire to do something about it. Whether it works right away or not, I think it's exciting that someone has decided to address that."

Welcome to the brand-new world of news radio, where longtime players ABC, CBS and AP face Magee and his Fox brand as the newest entrant in the race to win affiliate loyalty.

CNN is also in the race, but it is already in the rearview mirror for Fox as a competitor in the cable TV news space, and CNN Radio has not shown any significant signs so far of offering a robust challenge.

But the Big Three of news radio—ABC, CBS and AP's broadcast division—are taking on the changing competitive set with strategies of their own.

Billboard Radio Monitor secured the leaders of each of the radio news divisions for an exclusive round-table session Feb. 18 to explore the challenges news radio faces and to also examine the opportunities that spring from having a new kid on the block.

For stations, the news is good. The news networks have never been more ready to offer custom solutions. This competitive inspiration also runs parallel with an appetite for news and information that has never been greater.

The latest Arbitron data from the fall survey shows that information radio hit an all-time high for quarter-hour share—a strong 18.3—(persons 12-plus, Monday-Sunday, 6 a.m.-midnight) for the continuously measured markets.

That 18.3 share outpaces the 17.6 the format reached in fall 2001 and represents a 0.8 point gain over the 17.5 share posted in summer 2004.

Virtually all of the subformats Arbitron tracks also showed significant gains.

If you're in the radio news business, these figures, though probably boosted by the election season, represent terrific news—listeners want more of what they offer.

The tougher part is figuring out which "bits" of news they want. A recurring theme throughout the round-table session was that the term "news" can sometimes represent a barrier. Many people tend to think of news as updates from the war in Iraq and stock market trading patterns. Not so. News is, of course, everything from the trial of Michael Jackson to trend and fashion pieces. It does include updates from Iraq, but there's more to it than that, particularly for radio.

The four representatives of news radio are pushing very hard to spread the message that news can be many different things and that they have an à la carte menu of offerings.

AP Broadcast GM Thom Callahan is adamant that news is information that can be told and delivered in all sorts of ways.

"The traditional radio listener is miles ahead of where they were 10 or 15 years ago ... Keeping their attention and getting them to listen to the station's newscast, the network's newscast ... becomes more and more of a challenge," he said. "How do we keep it relevant?"

CBS' Nagler agreed but stressed that it must be made relatable to the listener at every turn. Fox's Magee and ABC's Jones were also in lock step with the concept of giving listeners what they want.

"You can't do a joke [and go to a news report of] five dead in Iraq or three car bombings," Jones said. "It's got to be different, but I think all of us have the capacity, and most of us offer different information products. I think it comes down to the lack of familiarity of what FM programmers have that we offer. It's there. We have softer news programs."

Magee was even more direct: "Our audience has been waiting for us all their life."

In a world where traditional network TV newscasts have insisted viewers stick to their forced schedule of news and paid the price with a declining audience, radio appears determined not to make the same mistake.

DELIVERY DELIVERY

IN CANADA, IT ISN'T THE MAILMAN or an overnight delivery service or even the local record rep that delivers new music first to radio. It's the Internet.

On a typical day at a current-based music station in Canada, the PD or music director will receive around five e-mails alerting him to a new song that has just been uploaded to the station's digital repository. The e-mail contains basic information about the track, and the programmer can preview the song by streaming it off the Internet or by securely downloading it into a folder on a designated hard drive.

"When we have our music meeting, the folder is wide open," says Chris Duncombe, PD/music director at active rock CFOX Vancouver. "It's another way to quickly access things. It saves you from having to worry about a library or when a track is missing or left in the studio. It's really handy."

When Duncombe (or Dunner, as he is better-known) decides to add a song, he simply assigns it a number for the station's broadcast system.

While secure digital delivery of music to radio is happening in the United States, it is replacing the physical promo CD in Canada.

"It absolutely is the new promo CD," says Danny Kingsbury, PD at adult top 40 CISS Ottawa. "It has virtually replaced that in Canada"—so much so that Warner Music Group and Capitol EMI rarely send promo CDs to Canadian radio stations.

"Our policy here is we will send a CD [promo] to radio on the first single from a new record from a domestic priority—a Canadian act signed to the Canadian label," says Steve Coady, Warner Music Canada VP of radio promotion. "Virtually exclusively, everything gets [digitally] delivered."

"We send out a promo compilation CD once every two months," adds Derrick Ross, VP of national promotion for media and artist relations at Capitol EMI Canada. "We still send the full-length CDs to radio but send hardly any promo CDs anymore."

The Big Three of Canadian radio—Corus Radio, Rogers Media Broadcasting and Standard Radio—routinely use the service to receive music from Canada's Big Four label groups: Sony BMG, Universal Music Group, WMG and Capitol EMI.

The company facilitating all this cyber shipping is Vancouverbased Musicrypt, which has patented a technology and a process known as the Digital Music Distribution System. Developed to streamline radio promotion and music delivery for record companies, the digital file transfer system sends broadcast-quality music tracks, coupled with related promotional materials, directly to authorized media outlets.

BIOMETRIC PASSWORD REQUIRED

To safeguard against piracy, DMDS requires authorized users to log in with their own biometric password. In addition to preventing password sharing, this allows users to access the system from any Web-enabled computer.

The first time authorized end-users register, they type their user ID and password eight different times. The software takes a snapshot of the average speed and rhythm of the person's typing, so when that person logs in again, the system recognizes his or her unique keyboard cadence.

DMDS also employs encryption and watermarking. As a music file is uploaded from the record company to the Musicrypt server, the software digitizes and scrambles the file.

"It never leaves the content provider's computer in any form that can be pirated," says Peter Diemer, Musicrypt VP of marketing and sales. "When somebody downloads it from our server, it remains encrypted until it hits his or her desktop."

Watermarking involves assigning a digital code to each registered user and then encoding each file sent to that person with a unique watermark. This discourages users from illegally distributing songs.

In Canadian radio, DMDS has become as popular an acronym as CRTC (though it's probably thought of more fondly than the Canadian Radio-television Commission). After completing more than 250,000 deliveries as the country's only digital music delivery service for radio, Musicrypt has set its sights on the United States, where it competes with Orlando, Fla.-based Promo Only MPE (music protected by encryption) (Billboard Radio Monitor, Oct. 8, 2004).

Sony BMG has its own digital distribution system for U.S. radio.

On Jan. 10, Musicrypt announced a partnership with Monitor to market its service stateside.

"We're trying to create one destination with Billboard Radio Monitor where you can get your news, your information, your charts and your music," Diemer says. "Every chart will have an option to listen and download every single song. The back end will be powered by Musicrypt."

On March 1, Musicrypt received an endorsement from Clear Channel, which will use the system to preview, download and access new music for airplay and review at current-based outlets in its 1,200-station portfolio.

"We recognize that music labels need an efficient but secure way to distribute music to our programmers," Jeff Littlejohn, executive VP of distribution development for Clear Channel Radio, said in a statement. Because DMDS interfaces with the company's Prophet audio storage system, Littlejohn says CC stations "can be assured of receiving the highest quality of audio as soon as it becomes available."

Diemer says he is in "deep conversations" with other U.S. broadcasters and getting a warm reception, and that every major label "is well-aware of our software, and has asked us to show that it works without any question in Canada."

'IT LEVELS THE PLAYING FIELD AT RADIO'

Musicrypt began testing its system in Canada with Capitol EMI in fall 2002. The following January, the label's promotion head sent a file to the music director and PD at one of Standard's Toronto stations. On Sept. 15, 2003, Capitol EMI became its first paying customer.

"We worked very closely with the broadcasters, and we built a very simple interface," Diemer says. "When you deal with programmers that work with fairly sophisticated scheduling software, this is actually easier than most of that."

The system's main interface lists the label, artist, title and delivery date. More detail is a click away. From there, users click either a "preview" or "download" button. Once DMDS software has been installed on a radio station desktop, the user can download the song. Music can also be downloaded remotely to the station, using any computer with Internet access.

Making the cultural transition from CDs to digital downloads took a little more than a year in Canada. There was some initial resistance.

"There were a number of stations that thought this may be a little bit too early," Diemer says. "But when we explained how it worked, why it was being done like this and the fact that there were so many tools that we built into the software application, they ultimately understood that, money-saving and time-saving aside, it actually made it much easier for them to manage, preview and ultimately download their music."

The tipping point came when the record companies saw that a majority of Canadian stations had connected with DMDS. By last fall, Diemer says, 100% of Canada's chart-monitored stations were on the system. (Nonmonitored stations also use it.)

"To be able to access the tracks I need right away and not have to worry about mail or a rep driving across the city is a huge plus," CFOX's Dunner says. "Whether it's constructing a world album premiere or getting a track to air as soon as we can get our hands on it, those things are really important for stations that appeal to young demos."

CISS' Kingsbury has been using the system for more than 18 months. "It levels the playing field at radio so that all stations have access to music at the same time, instead of some stations getting music ahead of others," he says. "It is quite convenient. These days, stations are transferring all of their music to hard drives to play them on the air. It's a very simple process to download the song, then immediately rip it into the Scott system or whatever you're using. The quality is amazing."

Kingsbury claims any computer-savvy user "would have no issues getting right up to speed. It's no more complicated than downloading off a shared-file site. In fact, it's less complicated."

DMDS offers other advantages, Dunner says. "It allows me a quick way to check into artists that aren't the No. 1 priority for us. All the baby bands and independent artists are now delivering by DMDS. It's a great opportunity for me to just go through a folder and listen to tracks."

Programmers can also download material for their own review, move it directly into their iPod and take it with them.

Downloading a broadcast-quality compressed wave file from DMDS on the average DSL line takes less than a minute, Diemer says. There's an option to download uncompressed files-identical to CD quality and preferable for digital broadcasting—but download times are three to four times longer.

Diemer says early adopters were ready for digital delivery. Without it, a station had to upload songs from CDs, rip the tracks and move them to a server. Now the songs reside on the DMDS server. Stations leave them there until they need to download them, and then it's just a click and drag into their server. Gone are massive CD libraries. No more frantic calls to the label asking them to rush a misplaced CD to the station. No more "We couldn't find it at the last minute, so we couldn't add it this week."

"Most of the labels have staffing in the major markets, but they don't have them in all the smaller tertiary markets," Diemer continues. "This allows them to deliver a file at the exact same time, securely and with accountability, to Toronto, Montreal and Vancouver as well as Prince George, [British Columbia], or somewhere in Newfoundland."

STARTS IN THE RECORDING STUDIO

Since the content owner decides who has access and when, the artist could start the DMDS process right in the recording studio as a way to safeguard a high-security release. The music could be digitally passed around to the manager, the publisher and senior label executives, all within a secure environment. Later, the file could be securely forwarded to everybody within the record label-without making any physical copies.

"They have the option to create only a 30-second piece or the full song," Diemer says. "They can restrict the previews and downloads to a certain date. They can change that on the fly." During a conference call, a label could direct its staff to take a 10-minute break, make the song available for the staff to preview during that time and then reconvene on the phone after everyone had listened to the track.

"The software isn't just a record-company-to-radio solution—this is an entire enterprise solution," Diemer adds. "We start in the studio, move it to the collaborative internal creative part and then move it forward to the external delivery phase. Because of the security and the accountability built into it, we can do that in a prerelease environment."

When a label is ready to make a song available as a preview or download to radio, stations get an automatic e-mail notification. For a highly anticipated major release, such as recent projects by U2 and Rob Thomas, the station receives an e-mail alert several days in advance of the airplay date, including a 30-second preview and the exact time and date the song will be available for radio download.

"Currently it's used mainly for new releases, but moving forward, we absolutely view this as a deep-catalog resource," Diemer says. In that scenario, a station could download an entire music library (good for helping keep a lid on format flips) or even commercials.

The prospect of saving money, increasing security and delivering a track to radio at a precise moment (with the ability to change that time at will) is welcome news for label executives.

"We're all about new technology and want to embrace it," says Monte Lipman, president of Universal Records. "Programmers have become so computer-savvy, I think it's becoming more and more a preference that you send music to them digitally."

Universal Records VP of pop promotion Dave Reynolds adds, "It's forcing us to go down a route of digital delivery just like our consumers are . . . I want to be as fluent as the consumer on how to go in, get the music I need and move it around legally."

DESPERATELY

YES, THERE IS A LIFE AFTER MUSIC BY PHYLLIS STARK

AS CONSOLIDATION CONTINUES TO ROCK

the record industry, and as independent promotion falls under increasing scrutiny, an increasing number of veteran record promotion executives are choosing to get out of the business altogether.

Many once-prominent country promotion professionals are among those who have gravitated to other lines of work. Former Mercury and Virgin VP of promotion Larry Hughes, former Capitol VP of promotion Terry Stevens and longtime country indies Susan Turner and Tari Laes are all now working in real estate.

Veteran country promoter Bobby Young is a stockbroker. Denny Mosesman, the former head of promotion at Asylum and Giant Records, is a social worker. And while he's still in the music business, longtime indie Skip Stevens has moved away from promotion and is in the process of launching a music publishing company:

So is there life after record promotion? These longtime industryites say absolutely! Tellingly, though, several say privately that they keep their eyes open for opportunities to return to the business, and a few still work with an occasional music client on a per-project basis.

WHERE ARE THEY NOW?

After many years working in radio, followed by more than a decade on the record promotion side, Terry Stevens says real estate appealed to him because of the opportunity to be his own boss. He is now an affiliate broker with Fridrich & Clark Realty in Nashville.

Real estate held the same appeal for Hughes, who says, "I left the music business to experience owning my business and working for myself."

Hughes, who spent nearly 25 years in the music business, is now the owner of Larrick Properties in Nashville. His company is a franchise of HomeVestors, best-known for its ubiquitous "We Buy Ugly Houses" billboards.

"We buy properties that are, most often, in a state of disrepair and either put them back into good condition and sell them retail, or we wholesale them to other investors," says Hughes, who has been in that business for 21/2 years.

After about 20 years in the music business, Mosesman left the industry in 2000 to go back to school and get a master's degree in social work at the University of Tennessee. "I had always done a tremendous amount of volunteer work with children and teens and I loved being an advocate for children needing our help," Mosesman says of his decision.

He worked at the state's Department of Children's Services for a time, concentrating on advocacy and children's rights. He now works at the Oasis Center in Nashville, a facility that helps runaways and teens in trouble.

In addition, Mosesman teaches a course for parents and counselors on "Redirecting Children's Behavior." He became a parent himself since leaving the music industry: Mosesman and his wife, music industry marketing veteran Connie Baer, adopted two little girls.

After logging thousands of hours as a volunteer for such groups as Big Brothers of Middle Tennessee and the Ronald McDonald House, Mosesman decided it was time to "help make a difference. I began to feel like I was doing the same old thing in the music business and thought that it was a perfect opportunity to pursue something else that I was passionate about," he says. "The changes that were taking place [in the music business] were not too exciting either."

In Young's new career as an "investment professional," he manages a branch office near Nashville for an investment firm. Prior to that, he spent most of his adult life working in the music business, including VP positions at Mercury Records in Nashville and at Chicago-based Jeff McClusky and Associates, as well as a turn as a senior partner in Young-Olsen and Associates in Nashville.

So why the career change? "To prove to myself that I could do it," Young says. "Someone had told me it was a very difficult career and that successful brokers had very high incomes. Those two things attracted me to it, and I had always had a fascination with Wall Street. In some ways, it's similar to the record industry. You can get just enough rope to hang yourself."

Skip Stevens spent 26 years in record promotion, and he's been out of it since his last label home, startup SEA Records, closed its doors last year. He has since launched a publishing company, RHS Songs, on what he calls "a very small scale. I am partnering with a very talented writer named Brandy Clark. I am working on helping get her songs cut and extending my education of the inner workings of publishing," he says. "Also, I am trying to figure out how to raise investment capital to operate on a larger scale."

Explaining his decision to get out of record promotion, Skip Stevens says, "Since the Telecommunications Act of 1996, country radio and the country music industry have changed fairly dramatically. The changes were not very well-suited to my style of promoting records. It became less and less about passion for music and your ability to make believers in a song. Consequently, promoting became less and less fulfilling for me as a profession.

"It took several years, but I came to realize that publishing excited me greatly and I wanted to pursue it," he continues. "Taking a promotion job with a startup record company that blew up before it even started was the impetus that motivated me to get out of promotion and move proactively forward with publishing."

MISSING THAT 'ORGANIZED CHAOS'

Asked what they miss about their old jobs, answers mostly center on the relationships.

Terry Stevens misses "the day-to-day contact with some great people."

"I have some good friends on the radio side and on the record side that I miss seeing and talking with, and I miss knowing what's going on with every country record out," Skip Stevens says.

Mosesman says he misses "my close relationships. I would say that I miss the music but, in truth, I still listen to music all of the time. I do miss hearing an artist come into the office to play their brand-new song. That was always a wonderful moment."

Hughes has a laundry list of things he misses about record promotion, including "the feeling of working that hit record, especially from a newer artist. I miss some of my friends at radio and some of the good people in consulting I had the pleasure of working with. I miss being on the ground floor of a new project. I miss working with the superstars of the business. I miss the camaraderie of the regional promotions people. I miss seeing a brand-new artist work their rear ends off to reach their dreams."

Young, meanwhile, says he misses "the organized chaos" of record promotion.

"I miss creating business plans, executing them, directing a promotion staff and working with other creative people," he says. "I also miss the satisfaction you get from hearing an act on the radio or seeing them on TV and knowing that somehow you contributed to their success. Other than that, I don't guess I miss much."

Asked what they don't miss, their answers are even more interesting.

"I don't miss Mondays," Mosesman says. "It is so nice to play on Sunday with my family and not worry about points or conversions or radio excuses. And then on Mondays, I don't miss the agonizing hours of working on chart positions and having my bosses hover around my office."

"I don't miss some of the oversized egos within the business," Hughes says.

Skip Stevens says, "I don't miss being in a profession in which you never catch up and [I don't miss] the stigma associated with indie promoters."

KEEPING UP WITH THE CHANGES

Most say they keep up on the new developments in the record business, and they have some definite opinions about those changes.

Young sees the record industry "evolving [and] going through changes on all levels, not just promotion and marketing. What's happening to distribution is mind-blowing. I think it's incredible. Regardless of changes, I believe that success will continue for industry pros that have persistence, insight and can plug into the next growth curve."

"The business being slow to react to the massive download stealing of music, the combining of all entertainment companies and the high cost of just making the music has put an enormously heavy amount of pressure on everyone to deliver a hit at any cost," Terry Stevens says. "Ironically, the music is no longer the main issue."

Hughes thinks that the "times are ripe for a 'freshening up' of radio's playlists."

Mosesman says he keeps up with the music and with the technological advances, but little else about the music business. "I do think what is happening in the business is very sad," he says. "I started in the business because I was passionate about the music. I don't see much of that passion now."

A DIFFERENT SET OF CHALLENGES

The record promotion business is, of course, changing a lot. Indie promoters are getting banned and blacklisted by some radio chains. Some labels are buying their way up the charts with paid spin programs. And with all the recent focus on new payola investigations, programmers are becoming afraid that going to a showcase or even having a meal with a record rep or independent promoter could get them fired.

Billboard Radio Monitor asked the former promotion executives what they thought specifically about those new developments and—if they were still working in record promotion—how much harder they thought the job would be now. Most said the challenges are just different, but not necessarily harder.

"What people don't necessarily realize is that promoting records for a profession is hard," Mosesman says. "You have to be smart, clever, organized, focused, have vision and passion and have to care about the artists. There have always been obstacles to make the promoter's job difficult. What's different is that the game isn't as much fun as it used to be. The challenges aren't necessarily harder, just not as much fun.

"What is definitely harder is tighter playlists," Mosesman continues. "When I grew up in the business, if a programmer loved your music, they would take it right into the control room and put it on the air. The biggest thrill was to be driving away from the station you just visited and hear your record playing. It isn't that way anymore. The fun of 'selling' the music you are passionate about has taken a back seat."

"As long as there is promotion and marketing, I don't believe the basics will change regardless of headline news, at least not in the lifetime of anyone that might be reading this," Young says.

"The upside is that maybe the playing field will become more level for both radio and record industries, and more reality-based," Skip Stevens says. "I don't know if my job would be easier in those conditions, but I think I would be more competitive."

GETTING A 'DO OVER'

Given all of those challenges, the promotion veterans were asked if they would still choose to go into music if they were just starting their career today. Everyone but Mosesman said they would, but even he remains passionate about music. Hughes says, "I'd do it again in a heartbeat."

Skip Stevens agrees. "The passion is still there," he says.

Young says he would "more than likely" still choose a music career. "Anytime someone told me that something couldn't be done or accomplished, that's what I would gravitate to. The record business, I hope, still invites that kind of mentality. Maybe it's even more so today."

As for Mosesman, "If I had it to do again, I would make helping kids my profession and make music my hobby," he says.

SEEKING INSIGHTS

Finally, after having stepped back from the business, Monitor asked the former promotion pros whether they have gained any perspectives that they didn't have when they were in the record promotion trenches.

"Once you make a move you find out who the b.s.'ers were and who the real professionals were," Terry Stevens says.

"My perspective on music is and has always been that a great song, a great record and a great artist will always rise to the top," Skip Stevens says. "The trenches did distort that perspective, as well as my ears, from time to time."

Mosesman says that while working in the record business "it was too easy to forget about the real world and the responsibilities we all have to help make the world a little kinder and gentler."

"I've come to the conclusion that the rest of the world doesn't revolve around the record biz—or me for that matter," Young says. "However, with that said, I also feel that anyone that has worked hard, positioned themselves well and been successful in the record industry is very fortunate to be part of a curiously unique culture—a lifestyle and lifetime of experiences that I, for one, wouldn't trade for anything."

While reporting no "earth-shaking revelations," Hughes makes perhaps the most revealing comment of all. "I do consider coming back to the music business," he says, "so it must be a great place to be."

MY TURN

BY TARI LAES

Longtime country independent promoter Tari Laes left Nashville and the music business behind a few years ago. She is now working in real estate and living on Bainbridge Island, Wash., where, she says, "my worries are confined to noises in the woods." Here, Laes reflects on her previous career and the changes taking place in the music business.

WHEN I BEGAN MY CAREER in the music business I was young, sincere, optimistic, fearless and proud of my profession. I took that zeal to Nashville in 1981 when Music Row inhabitants were accessible and the country music community in general was more like a family, albeit a dysfunctional one.

When I left in 1999, the sincerity was still intact.

In between those years, life was exhilarating professionally as well as personally. Both were intertwined, making it difficult to differentiate one from the other. That's how passionate some of us were. There were more rewards than reprimands. More creative exchanges.

We must have done something right because the country music boom happened. The talent was certainly there, and radio programmers actually made their own decisions for their own markets. Wow, what a concept.

Unfortunately, the format's global popularity begat an evolution that brought some new members to our community who arrived with different philosophies on how to conduct the business of independent record promotion. Eventually, the creative crusade for airplay was a concept of the past. Not for everyone, but just enough to turn the tide, and just enough to convince me that it was time to step back and re-evaluate my priorities.

Returning to Bainbridge Island and to my family is a decision I have never regretted. Here I can walk the shoreline, toss stones in the water and ruminate on the ripple effects of my experiences in Nashville.

Since then, I have learned that there is life beyond the music business, but it is much richer because of the people encountered along the way. I was there during the heyday, so I am one of the lucky ones.

Maybe there will be a new generation of independent promoters after the dust settles. I hope they will be able to jump in with sincerity, optimism, enthusiasm and fearlessness. And that they will find and maintain their professional integrity.

nce every decade, country music holds hands with pop radio. The relationship grows cozy, playlists add a little variety, and then—like a Hollywood marriage—it's over, and the players return to their respective corners.

The love affair is currently in full bloom as a number of country's top artists are saturating the AC airwaves. Leading the charge: Martina McBride, Tim McGraw and Keith Urban, all of whom are riding the national top 10 on the AC singles chart.

McBride is on her second recent top four AC record with the sentimental "In My Daughter's Eyes," which follows the uptempo romp "This One's for the Girls" (she also scored a No. 3 AC hit in 1997 with "Valentine," a duet with Jim Brickman); Urban's wistful "You'll Think of Me" hit No. 3 at AC; and McGraw's inspirational "Live Like You Were Dying" recently tipped the top five. All were previously hits at country radio.

"We have to remember that while those well-researched musical recipes are good guidelines, the most popular music styles for a radio station change over time," radio consultant Guy Zapoleon says. "Most of these songs currently hitting at AC radio are really just pop/rock songs with country labels on them. A lot of great pop music is coming from this format."

Zapoleon sticks by his well-trodden theory that as music cycles come and go, formats need to look outside their traditional borders to stamp out "the doldrums."

"Just like the early part of the last few decades, country music is playing a more important role" at AC, he says, adding that the genre has appealed to adult formats throughout the past five years.

Sure enough, Lee Ann Womack's 2000 country crossover hit "I Hope You Dance" remains in robust rotation at a majority of AC reporting stations, garnering as many detections in recurrent status as the No. 11 song on the current chart. Lonestar's "I'm Already There," Faith Hill's "The Way You Love Me" and Shania Twain's "Forever and for Always" are also keeping the country flame burning bright at AC. It is worth noting that each of these songs was remixed for AC before crossing over: This trend is no accident.

Candy O'Terry, assistant PD at WMJX (Magic 106.7) Boston, supports Zapoleon's theory: "Historically, every time new product for AC gets thin, we tend to dip into country. Look at the 'Urban Cowboy' craze, then Juice Newton and Rosanne Cash, then Garth Brooks. There are definite cycles you can point to."

It also makes sense that AC would look toward country music for hits since there are few AC-worthy songs coming from today's mainstream top 40. Current pop music is often polarizing. With few exceptions (Los Lonely Boys, Kelly Clarkson and John Mayer), hits that triumph at top 40—including the likes of Eminem, Usher and Ciara on the R&B/hip-hop side and Linkin Park, Switchfoot and Yellowcard on the rock side—simply do not appeal to AC.

MULTIPLE THEORIES

Programmers have multiple theories regarding the ongoing popularity of country titles at AC.

O'Terry believes a strong appeal of country music is messages.

"The typical AC female listener loves story songs," she says. "That is certainly true of 'In My Daughter's Eyes' and 'Live Like You Were Dying.'"

On the other hand, she adds, "Sometimes a great country song may be about fishing or riding a bull or reading the Good Book. It may be a great lyric, but it's not part of the AC lifestyle. So you really have to pick those crossover records carefully."

Rob Miller, PD of WALK Long Island, N.Y., echoes, "A lot of hit country crossover songs like 'Live Like You Were Dying' and 'I Hope You Dance' have incredible messages that our audience can relate to. It gives them staying power. Women listen to lyrics and love a positive message."

Joe Hann, MD of WRCH (Lite 100.5) Hartford, Conn., suggests that one reason for the popularity of country titles is the simple need for something new at the format.

"We've been playing the same music for 15 years, and our core library is just burned," he says. "Our consultant urged us to try some of the new adult top 40 artists and some of these multiformatted artists, which can work for us as long as it's the right song."

Most programmers contend that while current singles from these artists have garnered heavy rotation, each demands a case-by-case decision.

Tony Coles, regional VP of programming at Clear Channel and PD of KKCW (K103) Portland, Ore., explains, "Right now, these are the spice of K103, not the flavor. If they continue to deliver solid, mass-appeal songs, these artists could become core. However, so far it has really been on a song-by-song basis. It really is about the quality of the song and the familiarity."

"I believe they are loaners," says Louis Kaplan, OM of WLTM (Lite FM 94.9) Atlanta. "Like top 40, AC includes a fair amount of crossover songs that have proved themselves in other formats and can appeal to our audience. But as great as Martina's and Tim's songs are right now, if the next CDs are made up of songs about pickups and 'dawgs,' featuring a pedal steel guitar, I don't think AC will have much room for them."

AC LOVES ADULT TOP 40, TOO

Meanwhile, the AC format has also borrowed titles from adult top 40. The year-end 2004 top five embraced the likes of Dido, Sheryl Crow, Five for Fighting, Train and Matchbox Twenty.

"The format has really shifted from an artist-driven to a songdriven focus," Coles says. "This includes playing great AC records from artists that you might not think of. Our core has children listening to top 40 radio, and therefore they are hearing these songs and becoming familiar with them."

BUT HOW LONG WILL THE RIDE LAST?

BY CHUCK TAYLOR

Hann adds, "Music is always about growth and change. New artists are going to keep coming. If we want to survive, we have to embrace that. Lite is certainly a lot more progressive than we were two years ago."

Kaplan says simply, "Hits are hits. If this month the best tunes are coming from adult top 40 or country, so be it."

CORE REMAINS

Programmers agree that these country artists are not about to take the place of Celine Dion, Elton John or Phil Collins. Most PDs continue to hold a warm place for AC's core.

"No one will replace Celine, Elton, Rod [Stewart] or Phil," says Smokey Rivers, VP of AC programming at Infinity and PD of KVIL Dallas. "Martina may be more of an artist for today than the others, but our format won't throw away 'Because You Loved Me' because 'In My Daughter's Eyes' tests well. Time marches on. Timeless does not."

Hann says, "I still hold a place for Celine, Phil and Elton. These guys still have it. I'm always going to listen to them. The cool thing about AC is that there is still room for everybody."

NO THREAT TO COUNTRY

AC PDs also contend that their stations' employment of country artists does nothing to harm crosstown country competitors.

Rivers believes that "AC is not taking listeners from country; maybe some listening but not listeners."

While the audience may spend "a little more time with us because we're playing a country song they like," Kaplan says, "we're not likely to do much damage to the core country listener."

Coles agrees. "As much as I would like to take listeners from country, the answer is no. I'm playing Maroon5, but I'm not expecting to take listeners from [top 40 rival KKRZ] Z100. Yes, we're sharing music with the country stations, but only compelling and entertaining air personalities will ever draw listeners from other formats." Plus, Coles says, "almost always, they are hits in the country format before I ever touch them."

Don Kelley, VP of programming for WMJX, claims that when he borrows country titles, he is more often taking them on because they have already proved to be popular at top 40—not country radio.

"Shania and Faith Hill started crossing over, along with Lonestar, and we started sharing those titles with [mainstream top 40 sister WXKS] Kiss 108," he says. "When people flip Magic on, they want artists they've heard of. If the big top 40 decides to embrace 'You're Still the One' or 'Man! I Feel Like a Woman!,' then our listeners are exposed to them and that carries a lot of weight for us."

In the case of WALK, there is no country competition, giving the station plenty of room to own those titles.

Miller says, "Instead of surrendering a lot of listeners to that format, we have the ability to convert country music listeners that don't have a country station to spend some time with us."

Zapoleon encourages AC programmers to keep their ears open and their options available.

"I've seen country hits tested all along that have had huge scores in callout at AC and adult top 40, but AC radio just refused to play them. Too often, programmers are afraid to take chances on songs that don't fit a musical recipe. It's time for that to change."

Perhaps that change is already happening. Hann says, "AC has always been a little gun-shy of country—you have to be very careful of what you play and how it is produced. But our philosophy here, after 15 years, is that we look at numbers and do tests, but we also try to use our heart and our head. We know if it's a great record that is right for the AC audience, no matter where it comes from."

LEGEND TO CHARTS

Charts are ranked by detections previous week is placed first if except for Latin, Christian and Country charts which are based on audience impressions, computed by cross-referencing exact times of airplay with Arbitron listener data:

Songs showing an increase in detections

A song will also receive a bullet if its percentage loss in detections (audience for Latin, Christian and Country) does not exceed the percentage of monitored station downtime for the format. Exempting the Country the chart for more than 20 weeks will generally not receive a bullet, even if it registers an increase in detections (audience for Latin, Christian and Country). Country titles which decline in audience but increase in detec tions will also receive a bullet if the week does not exceed 3%

Three For 50 Cent

50 Cent is the first artist in the history of the rhythmic top 40 chart to occupy the top three spots on the list. His "Candy Shop" (Interscope) jumps 2-1, knocking the Game's "How We Do" (which includes 50 Cent as a featured vocalist and is also on Interscope) from 1 to 2. Meanwhile his former No. 1, "Disco Inferno," moves up 4-3.

THIS WEEK IN DATA. For complete charts, there's always more at www.BillboardRadioMonitor.com

Since he first debuted on the rhythmic top 40 chart in January 2003 with "Wanksta," 50 Cent has accumulated six No. 1s. The first was "In Da Club," which ruled for nine weeks beginning in May of that year. He is now tied for second place with Nelly for most No. 1s among all artists at the format, trailing only Usher, who has hit the top eight times.

"Candy Shop," which features Olivia, also ascends to the top of the rap chart, giving 50 Cent his fifth No. 1 on that list. This once again ties him with Nelly for the second-most No. 1s, behind Ja Rule and P. Diddy, both of whom have worn the crown six times.

At R&B/hip-hop, "How We Do" garners the Game his first No. 1 at the format, ending the monthlong run at the top by "Lovers and Friends" by Lil Jon & the East Side Boyz Featuring Usher & Ludacris. The Game's follow-up single, "Hate It or Love It," also featuring 50 Cent, climbs 39-33 in its second week on the chart.

CLARKSON BREAKS

Kelly Clarkson earns her first No. 1 at AC as "Breakaway" (Hollywood) moves 2-1, ending the 18-week run at the summit for Los Lonely Boys' "Heaven" (Epic).

Los Lonely Boys have earned some notable achievements with "Heaven," including the honor of having the longest-running No. 1 for either a group or a new artist at the format. With 18 weeks at the top, the song is the fifth-longest-running No. 1 of all time. It trails Uncle Kracker's "Drift Away" (28 weeks), Celine Dion's "A New Day Has Come" (21), and Phil Collins' "You'll Be in My Heart" and Dion's "Because You Loved Me," which both logged 19 weeks.

Of course, given the nature of the AC chart, it is not beyond the realm of possibilities that "Heaven" will reclaim the No. 1 spot and improve its overall ranking.

EXCEPTIONAL GROUP EFFORT FOR RASCAL FLATTS

Rascal Flatts dominates the country chart for a fifth straight week with "Bless the Broken Road" (Lyric Street), which is the longest chart-topping stretch by a group in almost four years.

Not since Lonestar's "I'm Already There" spent six weeks at No. 1 in summer 2001 has a group spent that many weeks in the top slot with a single track.

Meanwhile, three titles crack country's top 10, including eurrent tracks by Kenny Chesney (11-7), Brooks & Dunn (12-8) and Montgomery Gentry (13-9). All three land at higher positions on the audience-based chart than on the Nielsen Broadcast Data Systems detections rankings. On the spin list, Chesney's "Anything but Mine" (BNA) moves 14-9 while Brooks & Dunn's "It's Getting Better All the Time" (Arista Nashville) improves 13-10. Montgomery Gentry's "Gone" (Columbia) rests outside the top 10, slipping 11-12.

The country chart hasn't seen three titles simultaneously clear the top 10 hurdle since last summer, when singles by Keith Urban, Josh Gracin and Terri Clark did so in the July 23, 2004, issue.

Modern Loves Garbage

Garbage picks up its first top 20 modern rock hit in more than six years as "Why Do You Love Me" (Geffen) climbs 39-20 in its second week on the chart.

"Why" is the quartet's first appearance in the upper half of the chart since "Special" reached that level in November 1998 and the third time the group has broke the top 20 in only two weeks. "#1 Crush" debuted at No. 17 in November 1996, and "Push It" reached No. 8 in its second week on the chart in April 1998. "Why Do You Love Me" earms the Greatest Gainer and Most Airplay Adds awards for a second straight week and sews on Airpower stripes as well.

Wow! I freakin' LOVE it!

I took it home and read it cover to cover. What a turnaround. I really, really love the change! - Mike O'Brian, PD, KUSS San Diego

Hit PREDICTOR column

THE BIGGEST stories on this week's HitPredictor charts come from previous adds, with a number of tracks crossing significant thresholds.

50 Cent's "Disco Inferno" is now a top 10 record at mainstream top 40, as predicted. Alicia Keys' "Karma" and Rob Thomas' "Lonely No More" have broken the top 20 barrier in that format. If they hold true to their HitPredictor potential, then they'll soon be joining other previous picks in that format at the top of the charts, like the No. 1 and No. 2 songs, "Boulevard of Broken Dreams" by Green Day and "Since U Been Gone" by Kelly Clarkson. "Lonely No More" is already a top five record at adult top 40, where it debuted on the HitPredictor chart a few weeks ago.

HitPredictor Picks On The Rise

Recent HP Titles By 50 Cent, Keys And Thomas Climb The Charts

At R&B/hip-hop, another previous HitPredictor pick has broken the top 10, T.l.'s "Don't Know Me." The song was added to HitPredictor's rhythmic top 40 chart last week. Ja Rule's "Caught Up" is following a similar pattern. Last week the song scored at R&B/hip-hop. This week it joins T.I. in the rhythmic top 40 column. If Ja Rule's previous success is any indication, then "Caught Up" will will follow in the footsteps of his prior HitPredictor picks.

There is a new addition to the modern rock chart. The Exies' "Ugly" pulls in a score of 73. This is the group's first song to earn HitPredictor status. Judging by the track's high score, it could have the momentum to surpass the band's previous charting singles at
