NOW HE CAN HANG WITH BRENT MUSBURGER:

Jerry Moss, chairman of the board for A&M Records, announced on April 2 that Gil Friesen has resigned from his post as president of the label. Moss also announced that he would be assuming the position of president of A&M, taking on the day-to-day duties of running the national and international business dealings. There are rumors and speculation that the company may be undergoing a major management shake-up, and that others may possibly follow in Friesen's footsteps. His departure came at a time when A&M has only two artists in the Cash Box Top 100 albums chart, and on the same day that PolyGram took over the company's distribution.

INDEPENDENCE

DAY: The inner workings of independent record companies and the career opportunities these labels provide will be the focus of a new six-session UCLA Extension course, "The Role of the Independent Record Company in Today's Music Industry," starting April 17. The program, led by Robert Emmer of Rhino Records, will cover company start-up signing of artists, marketing, promotion and distribution of product. More than 15 guest speakers will share their views, including everybody's favorite mogul, Irving Azoff. This course, an elective in UCLA Extension's Certificate Program in Recording Arts and Sciences, will take place in Room 220, Haines Hall, UCLA, on Tuesday evenings through May 22, 7-10 p.m., for a fee of $175. For more info, call UCLA extension at (213) 825-9064.

JANE SAYS...GET LOST: The former manager of Jane's Addiction, Gary Kurfirst, is suing the band. He claims that they fired him in violation of a three-year contract that does not expire until August, 1991. Kurfirst alleges at the time of the filing date (January 25), lead singer Perry Farrell was enrolled in a Beverly Hills drug rehab center, and lead guitarist Dave Navarro was in a methadone program. He feels that the band members' alleged drug problems resulted in clouded judgement, resulting in his dismissal.

THINK GLOBALLY: Tone Loc will perform in concert at the Ocean Center in Daytona, March 21-22 to benefit Amnesty International. This will take place during Amnesty's first major outreach event of the 1990s, Spring Rights: A Festival of Human Rights. In addition to the benefit concerts, the "Amnesty International Spring Rights Village" will provide visiting students on-site orientations about human rights issues and provide ways of getting students involved.

COMING TO A HOWARD JOHNSONS NEAR YOU:

Frankie Avalon and Annette Funicello will be touring together for the first time in a live stage show. The official tour starts April 13 and 14 at Knott's Berry Farm in Buena Park, California, and runs throughout the summer season. How nice...

TAPE ADHESIVES: Jay Berman, the president of the RIAA, met last Friday with state legislators who are sponsoring bills to mandate album stickering. Berman will try to convince them that the new voluntary labels are all they really need. Better we sticker 'em than you sticker 'em is the feeling. The National Music Publishers' Association, by the way, applauds NARM and the RIAA on the stickering scheme, calling it a "common-sense solution to the record censorship problem."

VIDEO-

SYNCRACIES: Good-Times Home Video is hitting the boards with a pair of new video magazines: Slammin', a rap videomag, and Metalhead, for, you guessed it...metalheads. Each tape costs about 13 bucks and features a magazine-like mix of features, music and other stuff... Picture Vision International just filmed the Highwaymen (you know—Willie, Waylon, Kris and Johnny) live at Nassau Coliseum for an upcoming

Miller London Leaves Motown For RCA

Miller London, Motown's vice president of marketing, sales and distribution for the past 21 years, is leaving that company for RCA. On April 9, London becomes RCA's vice president of product development, Black music, and will report directly to Skip Miller, the label's vice president of Black music.

London's responsibilities will include coordinating RCA's promotion staff and helping develop new acts for RCA. London will also be working with the RCA-distributed Jive Records.

London first joined Motown in 1969 as regional sales manager in his native Detroit, where the label was based until 1972, at which time Miller relocated to Los Angeles with Motown. "After 21 years of experience with and love for Motown," London said, "it's going to be a new challenge. But it's one I'm looking forward to sharing with the RCA/BMG family."

VACATION'SOVER: Putting aside personal differences to help save the planet, the Go-Go's jammed, grooved and sweated (yeah, even Belinda) through all their own hits and more while desperate activists for the California Environmental Protection Initiative tried (mostly in vain) to get various petitions signed, and fans ignored them while snatching up souvenirs. Considering that they'd only been rehearsing for a week, the group was in excellent form, the ragged edges serving to endear them to an already fanatical, near sell-out (at $250 a ticket) Universal Amphitheatre crowd.

Jane Wiedlin showed that she still walks, with enviable finesse, that fine line between cute and cutesy; Charlotte Caffey demured and yielded the limelight to her peers; Gina Schock pounded away as if her life depended on it, the stable backbone allowing everyone else to drift at will; Kathy Valentine, looking like a tomboyish older sister, chased Wiedlin around the stage; and Belinda Carlisle, in one of the evening's most incredible feats, managed to be both the icy, aloof pop goddess and one of the gang. It was an evening of pure delight.

Peppering between-song banter with playful asides and jokes, the band was energetic throughout, smoothly rolling out one gem after another in what quickly turned into a 90-minute singalong. Highlights included a jaw-dropping rendition of the beautiful "Mercenary" (it's true, hushes do descend over wild crowds) and a real oldie ("This is a song we used to do when we were punks," said La Carlisle drily, introducing the song), a thrash version of "Walking in the Sand." At one point, Carlisle lay on the floor while singing; Wiedlin took one look and lay down beside her, playing the whole time; shrugging, Valentine joined them and the crowd roared. A beach ball floated onstage; Carlisle attempted to kick it back into the audience, but sent her shoe sailing as well, then begged for it to be returned—goddess as geek, and we loved her for it.

Backstage, Carlisle, wielding a dangerous pair of eyelashes, announced that the group had had so much fun, they'd taken a vote and decided to play a few select dates this Fall. Hey la, hey la, the Go-Go's are back.

USHERING IN THE NEW YEAR: Okay, I have to come up with bad puns. It's in my job description. In this case, "usher" is the key word. Remember back about six months or so ago (ten points if you do; I don't) when we did a Buzz on a band called House of Usher, one of those melodic, poetic, last-of-the-true-romantics-type bands? The good news is the band has signed a publishing deal with Peer Music here in New York. Congratulations, gentlemen. The other good news is that the first single from ex-Bongo frontman Richard Barone's new MCA solo album is "River to River," a song he co-wrote with House of Usher's frontman George Usher. "River to River" appears on the House of Usher independent release, N-epitone, as well. Expect to hear a lot about Usher in the near future; he's one of those incredibly prolific songwriters who eventually shows up everywhere. I hear that he recently delivered a catalog of 108 songs to Peer, which means that poor old Frank Corrado is going to have to put away the Buddy Holly stuff for a while. Again, congratulations all around.

IT'S ABOUT BLOODY TIME, DO YOU KNOW WHAT I MEAN? New York City has been overrun with rock/metal clubs/nights for so long that I was beginning to think the only refuge was to go out only when bands I like come through town—or just give up, stay home and get a lot of reading done. Then, finally, two energetic and entertaining Brits decided to make use of the massive and interesting Limelight, turning Wednesday nights into Communion. The Limelight is a former church: Communion, geddit? It's described as "a weekly feast of alternative and progressive dance; live bands downstairs, acoustic music in the library." About your hosts: Neville Wells is a Limelight icon and the guy-to-know in the VIP lounge/library, and Tony Fletcher is a music journalist, author (of Never Stop, a biography of Echo and the Bunnymen, and an upcoming R.E.M. book) and all-around nice guy. He gave me stacks of passes. If you're in NYC on a Wednesday, don't miss it. I'm going tomorrow night to see the Blue Aeroplanes.

RENEGADES SET TO INVADE New York, Boston, Chicago, San Francisco and Los Angeles. Renegade Soundwave, that is, the U.K. trio responsible for "Biting My Nails" and other dancefloor-type stuff. While they won't be actually playing live, Renegade Soundwave members Gary Asquith, Danny Briottet and Karl Bonnie will be taking over clubs in the above-mentioned cities to celebrate the release of their Mute/Enigma release, Soundclash. Should be interesting.

Peace.

FEARS FOR TEARS: Were those tears real or were they glycerine? The little cutesy action on those lachrymal ducts, which belong to Sinead O'Connor in the video of "Nothing Compares 2 U," is a matter in great dispute.

I have noticed that most men, journalists included, state blindly, "Such an emotional girl, she really cried." That is because, despite the once-shaven head and her claims never to be manipulated into some young plaything by the record company, despite her no girlie-girlie image here, despite those steel toecaps at the bottom of those skinny legs, despite all of these claims, I say there has been a distinct tendency in O'Connor to use her womanly wiles. Tears mean fragility and vulnerability. Oh, what an added turn-on to the boys to know what a toughie O'Connor once was. To break the back of the beast, to tame the lioness... Now we see her being compared to a gamin, a pussycat, a doe. Didn't they use those words for Audrey Hepburn in Breakfast at Tiffany's?

Interestingly though, in interviews with women journalists always state clearly that those tears were glycerine. After all, O'Connor's a feminist, a sister, got the girls on her side. It's not just a change of management to Steve Fagnoli and a Prince cover version. It's that that half-inch of hair has grown so impishly, so sweetly, that it signifies that O'Connor has changed from an all-out extremist to maybe not so extreme. That half an inch of hair is a significant move towards a compromise. A number-one cut all over and she was the only bald girl in pop. Now she simply sports a trendy crop.

The subtle but significant changes are in her music, too. The Lion and the Cobra, her first Ensign offering (on Chrysalis in the States), was brilliant and angry. The very nature of the statement, I Do Not Want What I Haven't Got—her latest offering—is already less rebellious.

"I've become more emotional," she keeps saying as a cover statement, along with how being a mother was the most important thing in her life.

"Being pregnant was such a powerful experience"—no-compromise O'Connor was producing the first album up to the end of her pregnancy. "Being pregnant made me feel so much in control."

My advice to O'Connor is, of course, to stay pregnant, if this is what is necessary to stay in control.

The second album, at times beautiful, and at times turgid, features her exquisite voice and her even more exquisite phrasing. It's dramatic—she wants to fulfill some acting ambitions soon—rather than raw and passionate. My prediction is that she will be in a dress before the end of the year and wearing wigs. Because, above all else, this album is commercial; which, of course, is not necessarily a bad thing, but it's very irritating when she won't admit to what she's becoming.

SA

IN SOUTH AFRICA, PROTEST SONGS LONG AGO GAVE WAY to songs of resistance. Now the songs are songs of triumph.

The unbanning of the African National Congress (ANC) and the release of that organization's supremo, Nelson Mandela, has inspired an entirely new genre of folk music. Many of the old freedom songs have had to be rewritten. Every song that called for the release of Mandela is now outdated—at least as a call to arms. New songs have been written to celebrate his release, and to call for the struggle to continue, despite the apparent new freedoms.

Protest songs, however, are yesterday's news. Resistance songs (like the notorious chant, "Kill the Whites") are out of step with new trends. At the "Welcome Home" rally for Mandela outside Johannesburg after his release, the mood had turned from hate to hope.

The crowd sang many of the songs they had first heard on Radio Freedom, the ANC's radio program, broadcast from Zambia. Composed by exiled musicians, such songs are quickly disseminated through the townships and become the keynotes of political rallies, celebrations and funerals.

On this occasion, a brand new song emerged from the crowd. Sung in Zulu, it called for the intensification of the struggle, but less as a call to arms than as a preparation for the return to South Africa of its exiles.

When Mandela concluded his speech, the crowd sang "Somlandela, Somlandela Mandela" ("We Will Follow, We Will Follow Mandela"). It was a new song, and it was very old. An earlier version went "we will follow, we will follow Luthuli"—a reference to the 1950s ANC president and Nobel Peace Prize winner, Albert Luthuli.

The problem with most of these songs is that they never find their way onto record.

The ever-resourceful Shifty Studios decided last year to do something about the problem—and to do it very differently.

When eight ANC prisoners jailed with Mandela in 1964 were released last October, Shifty recorded their speeches, and got their techno-protest band Kalahari Surfers to give it a special treatment. The Surfers—Warrick Sony and Shaun Naidoo—stirred up two of the speeches with electronic instruments, mixing desks and sampling equipment. What emerged was a startling rap number with a hard-hitting message and a vibrant beat, entitled "Urgent Release."

The speeches, made by ANC chairman Walter Sisulu and fellow released prisoner Ahmed Kathrada, became a highly charged invitation to both dissidence and dance.

It starts with the customary call from a solo cheerleader: "Viva ANC Viva." A chorus of a crowd responds "Viva! Viva! Viva!" as the beat of the music cuts in. The chant fades slowly as Walter Sisulu begins recounting the history of the ANC. In rap style, words are repeated with machine-gun staccato, hammering home crucial points. Originally a somewhat boring monologue, Sisulu's words emerge from "Urgent Release" sounding as if they had been designed with a backbeat in mind. The aging Ahmed Kathrada's carefully measured phrases intensify the impression. One activist, upon hearing the song, quipped: "Ahmed's become quite the rapper in his old age."

Next to get the Kalahari Surfers treatment is Nelson Mandela. His speeches have been recorded; the National Reception Committee, which has handled all his release arrangements, has approved the recording. The Surfers are in the studio, turning it into yet another song of triumph.

NO IT'S NOT A FAMILY PICNIC, but it is Neil and Tim Finn, the former of Crowded House and the later of a hit-and-run solo career, caught backstage at a recent benefit concert they helped organize for the victims of a freak 5.5 earthquake in Newcastle, Australia on January 28 of this year. The Finns were joined by generous corporate underwriters, plus artists like Crowded House, Midnight Oil, the Angels, Johnny Diesel and the Injectors and Spy V Spy, and over 40,000 concertgoers at the Newcastle International Sports Centre, all of whom were witness to a rare Split Enz appearance, reuniting the brothers Finn for some old hits and previews of a promised Neil & Tim Finn record, to be released sometime next year. Concert proceeds, estimated at $900,000, went to the Lord Mayor's Relief Fund to assist Newcastle residents and the families of those who died in the quake. # Bell Biv DeVoe: Newer Than New Edition

BY ALEX HENDERSON

LEAVING HIS POSITION AS LEAD SINGER of New Edition to pursue a solo career, Bobby Brown asserted a harder-edged musical identity of his own on his albums King of Stage and the multi-platinum Don't Be Cruel. Similarly, long-time New Edition members Ricky Bell, Michael "Biv" Bivins and Ronnie DeVoe formed the trio Bell Biv DeVoe (BBD) in order to have the opportunity to embrace music different from that of New Edition, which, unlike Brown, they haven't left.

To be sure, the recently released Poison, BBD's debut album on MCA Records—for which Brown and New Edition also record—is a radical departure from such New Edition hits as "Cool It Now," "Mr. Telephone Man," "Candy Girl" and "A Little Bit of Love." Harder, funkier and much more "street," most of Poison is closer to the new jack swing of Guy and Today than New Edition's often-effervescent R&B/pop, which has fared especially well with teenagers.

Poison is full of African-American street slang and contains more than its share of hip-hop beats and rapping. In fact, rappers Kwame, Kool G Rap, Dana Dane and Dougie D can all be heard on the album, for which MCA's Louil Silas, Jr. acted as executive producer.

"This is our chance to open up peoples' eyes and show what we can really do," Bivins asserts. "People don't expect us to come from this kind of angle, but this is the music we like to listen to and always wanted to do."

Bell delivers most of the lead vocals on the album, a step up from his place in New Edition, for which his vocals are secondary to the lead singing of Johnny Gill (who replaced Brown but didn't give up his solo career). Poison's hip-hop and high-tech new jack swing elements were no doubt encouraged by the album's various producers. The team of Hank and Keith Shocklee and Eric "Vietnam" Sadler, best known for their work with the militant and controversial rap posse Public Enemy, produced the aggressive, danceable cuts "Let Me Know Something?!" "B.B.D. (I Thought It Was Me)" and "Ain't Nut'in' Changed!" The New York-based Dr. Freeze, meanwhile, produced "Dope!" and Poison's forceful title track, which was released as its first single and is rapidly climbing the R&B charts.

The ballads "When Will I See You Smile Again?" (not to be confused with the Three Degrees' Philly-soul classic of 1974, "When Will I See You Again") and "I Do Need You" were produced by Alton "Wokie" Stewart and former-Guy-member-turned-solo-artist Timmy Gatlin. Although Poison is, for the most part, upbeat and dance-oriented, these ballads show that BBD also know how to cool out. BBD even do some producing themselves on "Ronnie, Bobby, Ricky, Mike, Ralph and Johnny (Word to the Mutha)!" and "Do Me," which they produced with Carl E. Bourelly.

Music isn't BBD's only area of interest—the vocalists also fancy basketball. BBD recently went on a week-long promotional tour of the South in which the vocalists competed with employees of radio stations in basketball games.

Proceeds from the games were donated to local charities in Atlanta, Houston, Dallas, New Orleans, Miami and Birmingham, Alabama.

On "Ronnie, Bobby, Ricky, Mike, Ralph and Johnny (Word to the Mutha)!" BBD acknowledges its ties to New Edition—ties that seemingly won't be severed any time soon. In fact, the idea to pursue an outside project wasn't BBD's initially. Backstage at a New Edition concert, former Time members and Minneapolis-based hit producers Jimmy Jam and Terry Lewis—who have worked with New Edition as well as Janet Jackson, Cherrelle, Morris Day, Alexander O'Neal, the S.O.S. Band, Cheryl Lynn and the Human League—suggested that they do something apart from New Edition. In the album's liner notes, the group thanks Jam and Lewis "for coming up with the BBD idea."

"We never would have thought of the idea of the three of us coming out as a group," DeVoe notes. "But once we heard it, we got hyped about it." ○

Grooving Globally: The "World" of Lisa Stansfield

BY ERNEST HARDY

TWO RECORDS HAVE BEEN RELEASED so far this year that have absolutely shattered the rigid, narrow categorization on which this industry thrives. (Unfortunately, the resilience level is high and the damage less than permanent.) The most recent is Sinead O'Connor's Prince-penned "Nothing Compares 2 U," an obvious candidate for alternative-radio play that has also exploded onto pop, urban, adult and even easy-listening formats. The first record, though, quickly became a club favorite via import late last year. Radio then picked up on it and, when finally released domestically, practically every format, excluding metal and classical, leaped on it. That record is, of course, Lisa Stansfield's slice of pop perfection, "All Around the World."

Taken from Stansfield's solo debut, Affection, "World" is a confection of strings, drum machine and exquisite vocals. It's an instant classic, one of those songs that is soothingly familiar the first time you hear it. Nothing else on the album (described by one critic as "the best album Barry White never made") is as immediately riveting as the single—it's merely a phenomenal talent at work. The joy Stansfield gets from singing is palpable.

When reviewers ecstatically hail this latest blue-eyed soul singer, they're praising someone who knows that a whisper can be as powerful as a wail, someone whose voice can travel the length of your spine without a showy run through the scales.

Recently in Los Angeles as part of an international, whirlwind press tour—"All Around the World" has hit number one in a dozen countries and the follow-up single, "Live Together," quickly cracked the Top 20—Stansfield spoke with Cash Box and what follows are excerpts from that conversation.

The Voice: "I didn't have [voice] lessons, no. I just sort of listened to R&B music, soul music. That was the music that really appealed to me most, you know. I liked a lot of music. I liked New Wave and things like that, but soul music was always the predominant thing." Positive Lyrical Outlook: "Well, everyone should think like that. 'Cause if everyone thought like that, the world would be a lot better, you know. There wouldn't be as many bad things going on."

Songwriting: "I didn't know that I could write at all. I met two people I knew from school, Ian Devane and Andy Morris, and they'd been doing projects that were sort of waning and they were a bit bored with doing that and they didn't know what to do. I was doing the same thing. We met up and formed a band called Blue Zone and they said, 'Oh, come on, let's write some songs,' and I said 'Oh, come on, I can't write. I've not written a song in me life.' I just sat down and started writing and I realized I was quite a good songwriter."

Writing Songs and Summoning Creativity: "No! I don't believe in that at all. I think it's ridiculous. The reason is spontaneity, to be quite honest. Things should happen when they're meant to happen. If a melody comes out of you, then it's the right melody. It's spontaneous. A lot of the album is like that."

The U.S. Remixes of "All Around the World": "To tell you the truth, I haven't heard them because I've been all over the place for the last three months. I'm really sorry, but I haven't heard any of them. I've been in Scandinavia, Europe, all over the place."

Her Input Into the Remixing Process: "I'm not very involved in mixes. I'm just basically a songwriter and singer. When we're recording, if I really like something, I'll point it out; if I don't like something, I'll point it out. But I'm not the sort of person who can sit in the studio all day and listen to the same song over and over. I'd go out of me mind. No, Ian and Andy produce the album and they do a lot of the mixing and that sort of thing. I couldn't really answer that. Sorry."

Club-going: "No, I don't really... I don't go out much at all. I sort of go to the local pub around the road from me, just sort of hang out with friends, really. If I do go out to clubs, you know, it's once in a blue moon when I really really feel like it, and I listen to the music, have a look around, and see what's happening. There's a club in Manchester that I go to quite a lot...well, not a lot, but when I do go out, called the Hacienda. If ever you're in England, you've got to go to Manchester. It's gonna be a historical place. It's so brilliant. People are getting trains from London to Manchester on Friday nights and going to the Hacienda, 'cause it's the best club in England."

The Next Import Single: "Well the next single after 'Live Together' is [actually] going to be an EP of three new tracks that are not on the album. So you'll have to rush right out and buy it."

The British Soul Scene: "Well, let's get it right—it's Britain, not London. There's a big scene going on in Manchester—like the Stone Roses, Happy Mondays, State 808, and...I don't know, it's like...a big energy. There were things happening before that sort of died down, and now the door is open for everyone else, and we're sort of rushing in there. I mean, the soul scene's been going on for quite a long time in England, but nobody's really sort of gone overboard about it."

The Evolution of Her Sound: "Well, we [Stansfield and producers Devane and Morris] have always been making this sort of music. We've gone off and veered in different directions sometimes, like with the Blue Zone album, which was quite diverse from what we're doing now, but all along the line we've been doing similar music to this. We're really not part of the club scene because we don't involve ourselves in that. We just get on with it, do what we feel."

Politics in Music: "I don't know enough about politics to say that I'm a political person. You know, I have my views... Well, you could call some of the things on the album politics because they're politics of humanity."

The Music Industry: "I'm quite ignorant [about what's going on in the industry]. I should have my hands slapped at least twice a day for that."

Favorite Bands: "Have you heard of a band called the Chimes? They're gonna be so big. I love the Chimes. They're brilliant. The last person's album I bought was Neneh Cherry. I think she's just a brilliant person. Soul II Soul, I've got their album. The Stone Roses I really like. But the Chimes, I love."

Maintaining Freshness and Spontaneity: "Mmm. It's getting more difficult because obviously when you do an interview, you have to be... I think if you're going to have an interview with someone, you should be natural and not have rehearsed every answer, which becomes a task, really, because people tend to ask you similar questions. So, you just have answers that you've said to other people and you think, 'Well, that's the best way of explaining it.' Sometimes I have days where I have fifteen, eighteen interviews. I should really say, I'm really sorry, but I'm not going to do this interview because you're just not going to get the interview that you want and I'll have to do it another time. I might have to start doing that soon. I might upset a few people, but at least, you know, those people won't have been disappointed and said, 'You know that Lisa Stansfield? She's a real sh—, and was just really bored throughout the interview.' I don't want people to think that about me because that's not the way I am. But you can't say the same thing to fifteen people and still remain joyously happy." ○

Taking a Chance With the Rave-Ups

BY KAREN WOODS

THE LAST RAVE-UPS RECORD, Book of Your Regrets (Epic), reached a lot more people than anything this Southern California band had ever done before, due mostly to the fact that it was their first major-label release. It also, sort of unfortunately, established them as another one of them doggone jangle/angst bands, a reputation that is really hard to justify with the band itself. Sitting down and talking to wordman and guitarist Jimmer Podrasky and drummer Tim Jimenez is, a two-box-of-kleenex affair, to be certain, but the tears come from laughing rather than crying. I'll never be able to look at Michael Bolton in the same way again.

The new record, Chance, is a little more in line with the Rave-Ups as we know them: sly analogies, self-deprecating humor and gleeful wordplay intact, the likes of which first hooked me about five years ago, with a song called "Positively Lost Me," as in "you lost a lot when you lost me / six paperback books and a dying tree." This time out, we have classic lines like "if apathy were honesty, then none of us could lie" or "if you were a car, you'd have thought I sold you"—maybe not the most upbeat stuff in the world, but definitely on a lighter note.

A great deal of Podrasky's newfound, or *re*found, optimism has to do with a small, somewhat bald person who goes by the name of Chance. This Chance is Podrasky's son, and the inspiration behind several of the songs on the new album.

Especially, he says, a song called "Hamlet Meets John Doe." "One of the reasons I wrote it was because I thought for a long time that I gotta get out of L.A.—I don't want to raise my son here," he explains. "Then I thought, well, where the hell am I going to go in this country? It's bad everywhere. I run every bit as much risk having my child kidnapped, molested, exposed to drugs in the middle of America as I do in Los Angeles. Of course, it might be a little more concentrated in L.A., but the problem doesn't go away by moving."

This gets us on the subject of L.A. "Los Angeles," Podrasky says, "really is one of those cities where you're driving around and you can see just breathtakingly beautiful women. But your first thought isn't 'Oh, my God, that's a really beautiful woman,' you think..."

"Where did she get that done," Jimenez finishes.

Then there is the current mini-mall war. If you haven't been to L.A. lately, you should know that there is a mini-mall springing up about every 100 feet, both in the city and in the Valley.

"The worst part about it is that they don't make any effort to make them architecturally attractive," Podrasky complains. "There's no architectural drama."

"I think the whole idea is just to serve a purpose," Jimenez says, perfectly serious. "If you don't have enough mousse to make it through the night, you can always stop at the mini-mall and pick some up."

I have another theory, which has more to do with cars than big hair. The traffic is usually so heavy in L.A. that it becomes almost impossible to make a left-hand turn. Say you're dying of thirst, or you're out of cigarettes, and you can't make a left-hand turn because you know you'll back up traffic to San Francisco and someone will no doubt drive by and shoot you. So you keep going until you find a mini-mall on the right-hand side of the road.

"Great," Podrasky says. "They built a whole city for people with no left-hand turn-signals. Pretty soon, it's going to get to the point where you go to register your car and get insurance, they're just going to remove the left-hand turn signal, because you won't need it anymore. There will be mini-malls everywhere."

But let us get back to Chances, both child and record. Chance, the child, is "quite the little boy," according to both his father and to Jimenez, who says "He's in the video [for "Respectfully King of Rain"]. He came out performing, man. We were shooting it, and they'd say camera's rolling, and he'd walk right out onto the set. And if you said 'Chance, you can't be in this one,' he'd pout. So we'd go 'Okay, okay, you're in.' When we were playing, he'd just be walking around, doing whatever he felt like doing, then when they said 'Cut,' he'd stop, walk over to the little table, get some fruit, get some water, 'How's my make-up?'"

You have to realize that Chance is all of about two, 20 months to be exact. "He's a sophisticated little guy," Podrasky says. This is funny. Another one of my theories is that men dote on their offspring more than women do, they just don't get as much opportunity to do so. When they do get the opportunity, they make up for lost time, sort of revelling in the concept that this miniature human is, well, theirs. Podrasky is a perfect example. He talks about children's music, he sings children's songs, he talks about diapers, he talks about his kid. Jimenez talks about Podrasky's kid, as well.

"I'm really spending a lot of time watching Sesame Street lately, too," Podrasky says. "It's on around breakfast time, so we sit there and watch Sesame Street while we eat breakfast. It really is an amazing show, you know? I don't remember it growing up"—they didn't have it when we were kids—"and I really sort of enjoy it."

On parenthood in general: "There is really nothing that prepares you for parenthood. Cats and dogs and fish don't quite cut it. It can be very scary, but it can also be the most wonderful thing in the world. What's wild is that it can be both at the same time. You know, it can be really the most beautiful, wonderful thing, and at the same time, just...whew, this is scary. This is really scary. Me, Dad. Geez. What, what what? Give me a clue here, even at his age. I can only imagine when he gets older and starts asking questions like 'Who is God?,' 'What is love?'"

That's when you send him to school. About Chance, the record: if you're a Rave-Ups fan already, you're going to be blissfully happy listening to it over and over again. If you're not a Rave-Ups fan already, I predict you may soon become one, and will be blissfully happy listening to it over and over again. Even though, as Podrasky readily admits, there really isn't anything particularly new about it. It's just an exceptionally well-done rendition of the same old stuff.

"It's difficult to write anything that's even remotely original," he shrugs. "If you think you're going to, you may as well forget about it. What you have to do is write something that's personal, and use what you know about rock and roll. Because there really are only X number of chords and X number of melody lines, and you've heard it all before. That's why it's very difficult to say 'I heard this song, and I've never heard anything like it, ever before, ever.' I can't remember the last time that happened."

"I guess the thing to do, since everybody rips off from everybody else, is to try and do it with some class," he adds, "and then to make that rip-off a little bit your own, twist it enough to call it your own. Because if you have this attitude like Milli Vanilli, like 'We are the greatest talent in the world. We are better than Elvis. We are better than Dylan. And don't we have nice hair?,' what are you gonna do?"

He pauses. "We have to go on record saying that we think we are better than Milli Vanilli."

I have to go on record saying that I agree completely.

"Thank you. You just made that a lot easier."

No, thank you. ○

THE HEAVY METALS

BY C.J. WEADICK

HAVE YOU EVER HAD ONE OF THOSE DAYS in which nothing is going as you had planned? Well, Sunday was one of those days that if anything could go wrong, it would.

At first, it looked to be turning out pretty dull. But then, as fate would have it, the grayness was altered, and greeting me at my door was Cash Box chart king Scotty Salisbury, bearing gifts. He held two tickets for the Cult at the Universal Amphitheatre, the last show of the Sonic Temple tour. The bad luck had changed into good, so this story has a happy ending.

Tora Tora were just finishing up when we arrived. Regrettably, we missed them. Those crazy Texans Dangerous Toys were the next to take the stage. The Toys are a strong live band, and ripped right through their set with lots of ad-lib from vocalist Jason McMaster.

Even though it took 45 minutes until the lights went down once again, a cartel of screams and applause from the sold-out crowd rushed through the Amphitheatre. It was now time for the Cult. When these headliners came into view, there was no mistaking they meant business. Ian Astbury, a man who needs no introduction, strutted his stuff like only he can do and had the audience eating right out of his hands. Guitarist Billy Duffy, riffing it out in style, was the epitome of cool. Jamie Stuart and Matt Sorum performed a most interesting duel of instruments between the bass and the kettle drums, which lead to the intro of "Sun King." Pulling material from all three albums, the Cult played a non-stop set-list of everyone's favorites, including "She Sells Sanctuary" and "Lil' Devil." Quite a few celebrities were also on hand for this exciting occasion, including Poison's Rikki Rocket, Julian Lennon, Duff and Slash from GN'R and every rocker's choice babe, Christina Applegate.

METAL NOTES: PolyGram's Cinderella, who are starting work on their third LP this month, will be taking a unique approach to the recording of this album. The band have made the decision to record their next effort in different cities, according to the mood of each song. The album will be produced by John Jansen and looks to have a September release date. Already released is Cinderella's new home video, Tales From the Gypsy Road, which follows them from the club days to their first headlining tour. It will also contain the videos from Long Cold Winter. The group's vocalist/guitarist Tom Keifer (busy as he is) is going to be performing a couple of numbers at this year's Farm Aid. He will do Janis Joplin's "Move Over" with John Cougar Mellencamp's band and a duet of Nazareth's "Love Hurts" with Bad Romance's Joanna Dean... L.A. glamsters Pretty Boy Floyd have finished filming the video for their second single, "I Wanna Be With You," which was released on March 30. The video has a "realistic storyline" combined with performance footage and was directed by Jeff Stien, who also did "Rock N' Roll (Set the Night on Fire)"... Atlantic recording stars Winger are back in the studio, working on their second album, In the Heart of the Young, which is being produced by Beau Hill. The album is slated for an early June release and is sure to contain a few hits like the ones we've come to expect from this band... Also in the studio are those heavenly head-bangers, Stryper. They are presently recording their fifth album, Against the Law, to be released in July. Stryper have recruited Tom Werman to do the producing and will be ditching the clean sound of their last album in pursuit of something rougher...

A SHOT OF GOSSIP: Rikki Rocket had a run-in with the law while in Canada recording Flesh and Blood, the upcoming Poison album. The drummer was on his way through customs at the Vancouver airport when he was jerked aside by the police, who told him that he had been seen coming out of the bathroom stoned on a flight from Vancouver to Los Angeles prior to this one. Rikki answered the authorities with "Not true," but was ignored and immediately taken to a room where he was forced to undergo a strip-search. "The whole thing was a *%&! joke," stated Rockett. "Someone at the Vancouver airport probably thought, 'Oh, it's time to ruin another rock star—we haven't had a good bust in Canada since Keith Richards'"... Johnny Crash, while out on the concert trail, have grabbed ahold of the very coveted opening slot for Motley Crue. The boys in J-Crash have secured eight East Coast dates, beginning June 24 in Portland, Maine, and moving on down the coast.

ROCK &amp; ROOTS

BY LEE JESKE

LES BLANK AND CHRIS STRACHWITZ WOULD, on paper, seem like the right guys to make the first full-length documentary about Cajun and zydeco music. The former is the witty documentarian whose films on American folklife include Hot Pepper, about Clifton Chenier; Always for Pleasure, about Mardi Gras Indians; and Garlic Is as Good as Ten Mothers, about garlic. The latter is the founder of Arhoolie Records, which began recording Cajun and zydeco music back in the early '60s, when it was largely a regional music for a regional audience.

Well, J'ai Ete au Bal (I Went to the Dance), their bubbly, foot-stomping new documentary, which just opened a run of weekend midnights at Greenwich Village's Angelika Film Center (look for it on video soon), is just what you'd expect: an hour-and-a-half of pure, unadulterated pleasure.

If you've been resistant to Cajun music and zydeco before, this'll rope you in. If you love it, you'll just melt into this film, which incorporates an impressive number of the music's movers and shakers—Michael Doucet, Dennis McGee (filmed before his death last year), Rockin' Dopsie, Dewey Balfa, D.L. Menard, John Delafosse, Marc Savoy, Wayne Toups, Canray Fontenot, Bois Sec Ardoin, the Hackberry Ramblers, Queen Ida, Rockin' Sidney, etc.—and mixes in footage, stills and old recordings of such deceased pioneers as Clifton Chenier, Nathan Abshire, Iry Lejeune, Joe & Cleoma Falcon, Harry Choates, Amade Ardoin, etc.

J'ai Ete au Bal smoothly gives you history—the history of the music, as well as a soupcou of the story behind the Cajuns ending up in Louisiana in the first place—with first-hand accounts and anecdotes and an unobtrusive narration by Michael Doucet and Barry Ancelet, two of the most steadfast chroniclers of the music. They touch on the various influences that turned the French folk songs that make up the basis of this music into Cajun music and zydeco, and explain the hows and whys of the music's two most important instruments, the fiddle and the accordion.

But this isn't a stuffy, educational film. Most of the screen time is filled with music: heady, bittersweet dance music that sweeps you away with its plaintiveness, its charm, and its insistent beat. As is usually the case with Blank's films, J'ai Ete au Bal is filled with humanity: the music so wonderfully reflects the people, and the people stick with you—strong, proud, hard-working, hard-playing people who have a wonderful sense of who they are; people with which you're delighted to spend 90 minutes of your life.

RIP IT UP: "Our aim here was to find a middle ground which would enable us to take a respectful, dignified, historical, even scholarly look at Richard's years at Specialty Records, and still put out a record that was fun and would be listened to over and over."

So says a note in Little Richard: The Specialty Sessions, the stunning boxed set chronicling one of the rock era's most influential cornerstones: Richard Penniman's recordings, including all his hits, for Art Rupe's Specialty Records.

Rock music, now that it's digging into its history, has to figure out which way to go: comprehensive, like those enormous jazz boxed sets of the complete Charlie Parker, et al, or selective. Jazz, being improvised music, works somewhat better with five takes in a row of the same song, although monotony invariably sets in. Rock, it seems, works best in the more selective, but historically comprehensive, approach—the kind of approach Andy McKaie takes for his fine MCA boxed sets, the kind of approach Specialty takes here. But Specialty goes one better: they've licensed the Little Richard sessions to England's Ace Records, so if three CDs (five LPs) aren't enough for you, you can find every take of every song available as a five-CD (eight LP) import.

The U.S. issue should give you all the Little Richard you'll ever need, and it's all splendid. Where one or two takes were drastically different from the master (in some cases the tempo changed radically from take to take), several takes are included. At least one take of every song Richard recorded for Specialty is included, as is his two-song demo, bits of studio chatter, and some hair cream commercials. There's a wonderful book included in the box, with insightful essays by Rob Finn and Rick Coleman and terrific photos, and a separate essay, by Ray Topping, in each CD. The sound is marvelous, and one is left with renewed admiration for the incredible New Orleans studio band that backed most of the sessions.

SINGLES

JUNGLE BROTHERS: "What U Waitin' 4" b/w "J. Beez Comin' Through" (Warner Bros. 21477-0)

The JB's are back with aims no higher than to get you on the dancefloor. Fans of their House anthem, "I'll House You," should be all over this, a smoldering House track that should propel the JB's to the heights they deserve.

PICK O' THE WEEK

DIGITAL UNDERGROUND: Sex Packets (Tommy Boy TBC 1026)

Though George Clinton, Bootsy Collins, and their various offshoots/side projects have been sampled, imitated and ripped off shamelessly, few of the offenders have grasped the essence of those original sources. Digital Underground not only grasp that essence, but fly with it. Belonging to the eclectic/experimental school of hip-hop, DU take the same rabid libido that is threatening to be the ruin of Two Live Crew and funnel it through a laugh-out-loud, skewed perspective. Like Clinton, Collins, etc., you don't merely listen to DU, you experience them. You feel as if you're eavesdropping on an entirely different universe where silliness has been elevated to the level of the profound. The tracks are not only lyric comic-fests, but musically rich jams with carefully chosen, strategically placed samples. I'm reluctant to call them this year's De La Soul, simply because I've heard and seen that comparison too many times already, but...

Find it. Buy it. Live it.

BOO YAA TRIBE: New Funky Nation (4th & B'WAY BWAY 4017)

Samoan rappers with hard beats and snarling raps offer the Samoan perspective which, except for a few instances (like "Psyko Funk" where Ganxsta R?DD, the lead rapper, tells of being harassed at a club because of the color of his skin—and it's a black club) don't really offer anything new. A rock-solid effort that will undoubtedly garner initial press and public interest because of the group's ethnic background.

THE DOGS: The Dogs (Joey Boy Records 2003)

Written on the back cover: "Take note that this album is true based on 3 subjects sex, politics, and violence. That is real life on the streets of Miami and LA."

Tracks include "F—k the President," "F—k You All" and "Who Gives a F—k," as well as the soon-to-be-classics "Take It Off," "Lick It" and "Take It Baby."

This is not "hardcore"; it's not "angry"; it is sophomoric and, considering the climate in which we live, a foolish baiting of powers that be with absolutely no substance to back it up.

Tragic.

BY LEE JESKE

WEIN, WOMEN & SONG: Two days after he announces the latest installment of the JVC Jazz Festival/New York on Monday (more on that next week), George Wein, jazz impresario extraordinaire and a not-half-bad swing-style pianist, will be saluted at Carnegie Hall, in a benefit for Newark's WBGO-FM, the 24-hour-a-day NPR affiliate that plays jazz, real jazz. Wein, who is more used to presenting things at Carnegie Hall than being feted at Carnegie Hall, will be serenaded by George Benson, Wynton Marsalis, Michel Camilo, Billy Taylor, Joe Williams, David Sanborn, Dianne Reeves, Tito Puente, Kenny G and many others who have been employed by Wein and his Festival Productions over the years. He'll even tickle the ivories a little himself with his Newport All-Stars.

Speaking of 'BGO, they've just appointed a new program director, Thurston Briscoe, who, aside from having a very cool name, has just finished nine years with NPR; before that he was a jazz programmer and public affairs producer at Eugene, Oregon's KLCC-FM.

M-BASE M-ISCUE: I was thinking about George Wein recently, after attending a poorly organized press conference given by M-Base, that still undefinable bunch of players who live in Brooklyn and get more press coverage than the Trumps. M-Base's honchos—Steve Coleman, Greg Osby and Cassandra Wilson (Geri Allen seems to be divorcing herself from this party)—were aligned on a dais to face the press but there was hardly any press there. There was hardly anybody there at all. The press conference, held at the enormous Kilimanjaro, was, ostensibly, to announce a self-produced M-Base music festival in New York from May 31 to June 3, but not only did nobody come, nothing was announced (details, they said, are to follow). Why did nobody come? Whoever did the inviting didn't do the inviting of the right invitees. Why didn't they announce what they were supposed to announce? Who knows?

See, this is what got me to thinking about George Wein. For decades, jazz musicians have been ragging on ol' George—he's jazz's perennial scapegoat—as they've ragged on many of the other important behind-the-scenes people, like Norman Granz, John Hammond, etc. The thing is, these people are (were) important—jazz enthusiasts with a love for the music and a talent for getting things done. Where are the Weins, Granzes and Hammonds of the M-Base generation? Where are the young promoters, producers, instigators with a personal vision to somehow help grease the wheels, to get things done? There are some (the guys at the Knitting Factory are the two most obvious examples), but there are too few. This could develop into a major problem over the next decade or so.

Musicians have always wanted to do things themselves—release their own records, produce their own concerts and festivals, manage themselves—but, ultimately, their talents lie elsewhere, not to mention the fact that creating serious music is enough of a burden on one's time and energy. Jazz needs a fresh supply of young, non-musician professionals.

BOPPING AROUND: Regency Cruises will shape up and ship out its Fifth Annual Jazz Festival at Sea, departing Vancouver for sunny L.A. on September 16. Nat Adderley, Tommy Flanagan, Ernie Andrews and others will be on board, and a call to (212) 972-4499 tells you how you can be too... A New Orleans Jazz Brunch is a new one-hour cooking/travel video tape that takes you into the kitchens of Commander's Palace, Brennan's and other New Orleans eateries that generally serve up a little dixieland jazz with their bananas foster. Al Hirt, who knows a whole lot about both dixieland jazz and breakfast, narrates. It comes with a recipe booklet, and it's available for $19.95 from Great Chefs Television Productions (800-432-3853)... DMP Records is showcasing a hunk of its roster every Monday night this month at New York's Blue Note... In a recent issue of Entertainment Weekly, Gary Giddins referred to Courtney Pine as the first Brit since Tubby Hayes 30 years ago to gain international attention. Somebody must have chopped the word "saxophonist" from the review, but it sure wasn't John McLaughlin or Dave Holland... Al Sears, the broad-toned tenor sax veteran of many big bands, died on March 23 of lung cancer at the age of 80... "The Jazz Idiom: An Instrumental View," a 10-session UCLA Extension course, begins April 12. Call UCLA at (213) 825-9064 for information... You'd think she's covered every jazz pianist around already, wouldn't you? You'd be wrong. Marian McPartland's Piano Jazz, an NPR standby, profiles Stan Tracey, Renee Rosnes, Buddy Montgomery, Alan Clare, Geoff Keezer, Richard Wyands, Ellen Rowe, Onaje Allan Gumbs and others later this Spring.

JAZZ PICKS

CASSANDRA WILSON: Jumpworld (JMT 834 434)

No standards here, but these quietly funky pieces are musically becoming, if at times a bit lyrically overwrought. Soft jazz/funk that gets under your skin, beautifully sung and adorned by nice guest solo spots from the likes of Steve Coleman, Greg Osby and Robin Eubanks.

ORIGINAL BROADWAY CAST: Black and Blue (DRG 19001)

The ebullient Broadway celebration of pre-War jazz and blues works beautifully on album. Ruth Brown, Carrie Smith and Linda Hopkins belt up a storm, of course, but this is also a deserving showcase for Sy Johnson's smooth charts and that fine, fine band (with such soloists as Claude Williams, Jerome Richardson, Roland Hanna and Billy Butler).

TONY WILLIAMS: Native Heart (Blue Note CDP 93170)

Williams still plays the drums like he's tap-dancing on your cranium. He's hard bop's toughest thumper and, with several years of road time under its collective belt, his quintet (Billy Pierce, Wallace Roney, Mulgrew Miller and either Ira Coleman or Bob Hurst) is as tight and ferocious as their boss.

SUCCESSFUL RAP SYMPOSIUM: The Committee for Excellence in Black Music held the first in what is scheduled to become an annual event. In fact, according to Elizabeth Wells, chairperson for the symposium, there is a strong possibility of doing the symposium twice a year. Plans are currently in the works for another gathering later this year.

The Real Deal Rap Symposium, held during the weekend of March 30, 31 and April 1 at the Pacifica Hotel in Los Angeles, was very well received and attended by approximately 500 industry people. The questions and concerns regarding rap music were many; a lot of concerns were not addressed because of the time constraints.

Hats off to Elizabeth Wells, Jerry Davis and the entire committee for having the foresight to bring together so many individuals from so many areas of the entertainment business to address some of the ongoing concerns of rap music. We look forward to and foresee a tremendous growth in participation from all corners of the world regarding the hottest item in the world of entertainment today.

BY TONY SABOURNIN

AT THE RISK OF SOUNDING LIKE ANDY ROONEY, THINK ABOUT THIS: Did you know that in 1989 approximately 11 million counterfeit labels of Hispanic-artists products were seized by the Recording Industry Association of America? And that most of these units were captured in California, Texas, New Mexico, Arizona and Florida? This information crowns the report of the RIAA's Hispanic Music Advisory Committee's February 23 meeting.

"The Hispanic market is affected disproportionately," admits Jesse Abad, assistant general counsel of RIAA's Anti-Piracy Unit, adding that the organization tries as often as possible to secure media coverage of its raids, which, hopefully, results in calls to the number 1-800-BAD-BEAT, providing solid leads for future raids.

The report also points out that California, the leading state in counterfeit captures, has also paved the legislative path, enacting a felony anti-piracy law effective January 1, 1989, with punishment ranging from three to five years in prison terms, to fines in the $100,000-$250,000 range, or both. Texas and Florida quickly followed, introducing similar laws as of September 1 and October 1, respectively. Previously, state piracy laws generally consisted of misdemeanor offenses for illegal sales and distribution whose penalties were only a bit harsher than a traffic ticket.

But let us look at other realities. If, as no one will deny, the 11 million figure mentioned above does not even represent five percent of the total counterfeit universe currently trafficked in the U.S. Hispanic market, what is the resulting 220 million unit/$1 billion bootleg industry doing?

"It's forcing us legal distributors to engage in illegal acts, if we want to remain in business," according to Abelardo Hernandez, owner of the Los Angeles distributor DO-RE-MI. He justifies his anger with two main reasons. One is what Hernandez describes as the sympathetic coverage bestowed upon importers by the Los Angeles Spanish-speaking media, particularly on television, which lauds the street sellers for adjusting their products' prices to the community's low-income needs. The other is that while the demise of his legal operation is prevented by resulting credit holdings, the proliferating piracy and import business continues rampantly and seemingly unimpeded.

"The [profit] margin on a multis' unit is probably one dollar," Hernandez said. "The importers' profit is really on products from small Mexican regional labels, always on heavy demand from U.S. consumers, and available in Mexico at a much cheaper cost." This, in Hernandez's world, makes the two-for-$5 cassettes sales at L.A.'s sidewalks and flea markets a very lucrative business. Now, as last measure, Hernandez has decided to return all orders from multi's products already available in the importation network.

The deduction from all of the above comes to a proverbial Gordian knot—squeezing labels, distributors and institutions alike—and with no Alexander the Great in sight. On one hand, the RIAA's tasks are many, and not limited to piracy, importation, immigration and album-certification issues. Quite logically, the association places the brunt of its understaffed piracy and import efforts in states where felony sentences are applicable. Once, as the RIAA hopes, this punishment is standard in all 50 states, the piracy business will be deemed dangerous by the general public, thus inherently reducing this activity. On the other hand, several of the multi's top executives are sufficiently concerned about this unrealized income to vehemently recommend additional funds allocations to the RIAA for the enhancement of its anti-piracy/imports force.

"More money wouldn't necessarily solve the problem," according to Abad, bringing a counterpoint to what she deemed an unrealistic simplicity. She added that the criminal system in those states where felony charges are applicable could not handle more than they currently do. Unwilling to be a victim of the theory of diminishing returns, Abad mentioned that the RIAA's Anti-Piracy Unit is focusing on additional civil actions against convicted felons as a further punishment measure. "In two years we'll see a drastic reduction of this illegal operation in the Hispanic market."

This span, however, may be too long for festering businesses like Hernandez's. Hence, Cocinando's logic says if the multis are really going to mean what they say, they should go ahead and increase the funding, yet make this allotment large enough to cover, in addition:

1.) The cost of a Spanish-media ad campaign. In those states where felony charges apply, it will focus on educating the general public about the crime to which it may be an unwitting accessory. In those states where felony laws don't exist, the message will abrogate for the passages of laws to be introduced in statewide elections.

2.) The coordination of supporting lobbying efforts for other states—like New York, where additional imports from South America and the Caribbean add to the problem's magnitude—to adopt felony statutes.

3.) The RIAA's solicitation of cooperation from its equivalent Latin American counterparts, particularly Mexico's, as statistics point to California as the area most jaundiced with the import/piracy cancer.

The expenses incurred will be reasonably returned by the subsequent increase in sales figures from the now-unrealized $1 billion pie. This leads us to another question: couldn't las multis act in strong concert to release products in the U.S. first, and thus put importers on a permanent recession?

Answer: No! Latin American label heads have never gone for the idea, and the multis—in their worldwide, don't-rock-the-boat wisdom—don't care if a product is sold in the U.S. or in Mexico, as long as it's paid for in good faith. This philosophy places the burden on the individual country's division to develop and maintain its own artist roster demand, thus constraining the supply, theoretically, to the national territory. This notion's fatal flaw is evinced by the non-stopping, two-way Mexican migration across the California border.

Yet, because of the current strength of the dollar, U.S. divisions are additionally (and often unfairly, as is the case with most rock en español acts) forced to develop a market for artists from Latin American labels' rosters. Conclusion? U.S. divisions have been placed between the proverbial roca and hard place.

If it already hasn't, there is another notion that merits investigation: bonus payments to a particular Latin American division for the anticipated U.S. release rights of one of its products. In this way, the importers' network saturates to the point of worthlessness—with minimal additional administrative minutiae—while the resulting income is re-channeled to the multis' banks. Moreover, because of the aforementioned dollar strength, there will be a minimal chance of a reverse import flow. The bonus' monetary value will be in direct correlation to the length of the anticipated release period.

The best of all worlds will have the West Coast operations mirror its Mexican counterparts, offering the respective labels' Mexican products at a less expensive price than the importers'. This should keep national distributors, like DO-RE-MI, happy, and additionally supplied with los sellos's U.S. products. A fair share of the $1 billion piracy/import pie will then trickle down—in real reflection of Reaganesque rhetoric—to all pertinent levels, and everyone will be reasonably feliz. But until then, the RIAA's job, unlike its Spanish translation, is no laughing matter.

LONG ON GOSPEL

BY BOB LONG

NU COLORS DEBUTS MAN WITHIN:

Twenty years after the first British invasion brought us the simple, bouncing melodies of the Beatles, a new wave sweeps across the Atlantic from the United Kingdom. Its sound emanates from the stone cathedrals and neighborhood churches of London. Percolating with the exhilarating spirit of soul and the unifying force of gospel, it is a sound for and of today, a music that confronts the plagues of humanity—like racism and drug abuse—and pushes listeners to a higher plane of heavenly delight. It is a manifestation of truth through joyous hearts and dancing feet.

At the forefront of this urban contemporary movement is Nu Colors, an offshoot of the famed London Community Gospel Choir (LCGC). Throughout the past six years, the LCGC had established itself as an important contributor to the British music scene. Backing up musical legends like Paul McCartney, Al Green, Eurythmics and the Style Council, the LCGC lent their inspirational power to songs that repeatedly ended up on the charts. They became a hot property for artists and producers looking for majestic voices to spice up their creations.

In early 1988, choir members Wayne Michael Wilson, Mark Beswick and Lawrence Johnson realized there was a need for a new direction—a direction that would negate the easy-listening stereotype that was often attached to the music of a mass choir, and communicate more readily to the ears of the nation. According to choir director Bazil Meade, "It was time for something new. We'd been doing the same thing for five years and the enthusiasm was beginning to wane. At that point the idea of forming a smaller unit began to grow." In October, 1988, the idea became a reality with the birth of Nu Colors.

Utilizing the cream of British gospel's finest musicians, Nu Colors couples the inspiration and devotion of the LCGC with the pop sensibilities of British soul and R&B. This time out, the band stresses not just their contemporary sound, but also their words of hope and redemption.

Nu Colors originally produced and recorded their debut release Man Within for Swedish recording company Canito Music. It is now available on cassette and compact disc through Sparrow Records, the label that took gospel heavyweights BeBe & CeCe Winans and Deniece Williams to newfound heights of critical and commercial success. Wilson comments, "With Sparrow we have a label that understands how to deal with the gospel message of our music, which is of the utmost importance to us. They have the experience and expertise to package us effectively to the gospel and CBA markets."

From the big, percussive beats of "Only You" to the spacious flight of "Holy Spirit," this music is chock-full of lyrical tidbits of perseverance, perspective and positive spiritual direction. "We wanted to deal with the issues that people are facing," Wilson explains. "In order for them to identify with our music, we need to address their real-life problems and then make them think about the answers that we communicate as well."

Nu Colors understand that the despair and alienation of society's ills can only be overcome through the victory found in Jesus. Ultimately it is this message of hope that the band wants listeners to remember. Says Wilson, "We are a band for the '90s with our own style of music. If people go to the clubs and dance to our music, great. But at the end of the day, we are a gospel band and our primary purpose is to reach out with the message of Christ." Their palette is full of engaging rhythms, irresistible harmonies and unifying words. The canvases of the world are just waiting to be painted with Nu Colors.

GMWA BOARD MEETS: During a recent meeting of the Gospel Music Workshop of America, Gospel Announcers Guild chairperson Al Hobbs, a member of the GMWA board, co-producer of the Gospel Music Excellence Awards, and vice president/general manager of WTLC/WTUX radio in Indianapolis, Indiana, defined the term "Urban Contemporary Gospel": "A musical composition that lyrically expresses good news about Christ through proclamation, revelation and renewal and is musically arranged and produced for compatibility with today's urban radio sound."

Hobbs pointed out that during the last years of the 1980s, many works emerged that were beyond our broad-based definition of contemporary gospel. Hobbs and the GAG submitted the following definitions:

Traditional Gospel Music: works created for specific use in the traditional church worship experience.

Contemporary Gospel Music: works that can be used in the church worship experience but move effectively beyond the Urban Contemporary Gospel is defined above, and according to Hobbs, "obviously is not specifically designed to be used in the traditional worship service, but seeks to minister through various recording formats such as vinyl, tapes, CDs, concert halls, urban and gospel radio. He predicted, "urban contemporary gospel will give urban radio programmers a new tool that can help to broaden their reach and effectiveness, and help listeners achieve a better quality of life."

The 435-member Gospel Announcers Guild will celebrate its 20th anniversary during the week of August 12-18, 1990 at the Washington, D.C. convention center. The event will culminate with the presentation of the Ninth Annual Gospel Music Excellence Awards, Friday August 18, 1990 at the D.C. Convention Center.

ALBUM RELEASE

ALAN JACKSON: Here in the Real World (Arista AL-8623)
 Alan Jackson is an extraordinary artist and songwriter who has written or co-written nine of the ten cuts on this LP—and some pretty strong stuff at that. There's his current single, "Here in the Real World," and his first single release, "Blue Blooded Woman." This project also includes the beautiful "I'd Love You All Over Again"; the story of thousands of hopeful, would-be stars in "Chasin' That Neon Rainbow"; and a couple of great up-tempo toe-tappers, "Dog River Blues" and "Short Sweet Ride." This debut album for Jackson, expertly produced by Keith Stegall and Scott Hendricks, should ride high on the album charts for a long time.

SINGLE RELEASES
 OUT OF THE BOX

RICKY SKAGGS: "Hummingbird" (Epic 34 73312)
 This is one jumpin', feel-good song from Skaggs—a real toe-tappin' up-tempo tune. As always, Skaggs has some top-of-the-line musicians pickin' with him on this one. Expert production by Skaggs and Steve Buckingham and say-something lyrics by Greg Jennings and Tim Dubois are sure to help take this one straight to the top for Skaggs.

COUNTRY FEATURE PICKS

WILD ROSE: "Where Did We Go Wrong" (Capitol 7PRO-79042)
 This one's a real tear-jerker, especially for anyone who's ever been there before, and is one that country radio is sure to love. Strong harmonies and stellar production by James Stroud are sure to garner lots of attention for these gals, who keep releasing stronger material each time out.

TRADER-PRICE: "Karma Road" (Capitol 7PRO-79984)
 This brand new group on Capitol is coming out strong with this tune about life and how "what goes around comes around"—a philosophy we all need to take to heart. These fellows have a sound that's on the cutting edge of country and one that's starting to get some well-deserved attention from radio. We look forward to more from Trader-Price.

RONNA REEVES: "Sadly Mistaken" (Mercury/PolyGram CDP 231)
 Another newcomer, Reeves comes straight out of the gate in strong form. This tune, with a very catchy hook-line, is about a guy who tries to come back to his woman after he's cheated on her and learns it wasn't so great after all. An attention-getting vocal performance by Reeves and great lyrics by Gidget Baird and Byron Gallimore are sure to garner lots of radio play for this one.

JOHNNY LEE: "Heart to Heart Talk" (Curb B-76809)
 This song, written by Lee Ross, brings Johnny Lee into the traditional country and western-swing sound—something that's a little new for the "Urban Cowboy," but seems to fit him well. Stellar production by Mick Lloyd and Mike Daniel, along with Lee's rendition of this "heart to heart," should make this song a winner.

COUNTRY TIDBIT: GEORGE STRAIT, the Country Music Entertainer of the Year, continued his dominance of the Houston Livestock Show & Rodeo with record-setting and record-breaking appearances there this year. Strait, who had already broken Elvis Presley and Dolly Parton's tickets sales records when he sold 95,000 seats in just one day for his two shows there, also set new attendance records.

On his first night, 52,233 crowded into the Dome, a new Wednesday night record. The following night, he not only set a Thursday record, but an all-time Livestock show record for a single artist when 55,580 cheered his performance. In all, the total tally of 1,07,013 set a new Astrodome record for a two-date appearance.

COUNTRY TIDBIT: CONGRATULATIONS to Mercury recording artist Butch Baker and his wife Suzanna, who are the proud parents of Beau Baker, born Friday, March 16 at Baptist Hospital, Nashville, Tennessee. Beau weighed 8 lbs., 1 oz. and was 20 1/2" in length at birth. Mother and child are both home and doing fine.

THE OAK RIDGE BOYS were recently recognized for their participation in public service on both the local and national levels, including their involvement in child-abuse prevention, the United Way, the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Take Pride in America program and the Tennessee State Department of Transportation's Adopt-A-Highway program. The Oaks were named Honorary Sergeants at Arms for the day, while Representative Cain read a resolution on the House floor, which was passed by both the House and Senate unanimously. Pictured (l to r): Department of Transportation Commissioner Jimmy Evans, Representative Randall Stamps, Duane Allen, Richard Sterban, Joe Bonsall, Representative Guy Cain, Steve Sanders and Representative Robb Robinson.

QUICKLY RISING COUNTRY artist Alan Jackson recently visited with one of his heroes, Gene Autry, on the set of Hee Haw. Footage from three early Gene Autry movies are featured in Jackson's video "Here in the Real World," which is in the #1 position on this week's Cash Box Top 100 Country Singles chart.

REPRESENTATIVES OF THE DEDE WALLACE CENTER, the Nashville Songwriters Association International (NSAI) and the Church Street Centre recently gathered to look over the 25 celebrity-decorated eggs for the Celebrity Eggsibition and Great Adult Egg Hunt to benefit Dede Wallace Center, Nashville's oldest private mental-health organization. The eggs will be on display April 6 through 12. Pictured are (l to r): NSAI president Roger Murrah, holding the egg decorated by former President Ronald Reagan and Nancy Reagan; the Easter Bunny; and Dede Wallace Center board member attorney Jim Beckner, holding an egg decorated by George Burns. SINGER/SONGWRITER Paul Overstreet was given the special honor of participating in the Literacy Volunteers of America's "Star Spangled Launch" held in New York. The event launched a two-year LVA Stars for Literacy visibility campaign, and Overstreet capped off the event by performing his song "Billy Can't Read." # Chris LeDoux: He's the Real Thing

BY KAY KNIGHT

"His boots are old and tattered. / His Stetson has seen its better days. / His hands are rough and calloused / and what's left of his hair is turning gray. / He ain't as tall and handsome as cowboys up on the movie screen, or in a magazine. / He ain't no Coca-Cola cowboy—he's the real thing."

These are the kind of lyrics Chris LeDoux writes in his songs about the real West. Like the men he writes about, Chris LeDoux is a "real" cowboy (who also loves to sing).

LeDoux has just released his 22nd album, Rodeo and Radio Hits. His current single, "Wild and Wooly," came into the Cash Box Top 100 Country Singles chart in the #53 slot. He topped many major country music artists—quite an accomplishment for an independent artist.

This cowboy is one of rodeo's own. He got interested in riding as a youngster in Texas and went on to win championship titles in the "Little Britches," Wyoming High School and Intercollegiate rodeo competitions. He was in-involved in the professional rodeo circuit for 15 years and in 1976 won the world title on bareback broncs. LeDoux started writing songs about rodeo and the American West during his first year in college, and as he gained experience, he gathered more background for his songwriting.

LeDoux married Peggy, a Northern Wyoming girl, and soon they were the proud parents of Clay, Ned, Will, Cindi and Beau LeDoux. He finally gave up life on the rodeo circuit and hung up his spurs in 1984 to spend more time on his ranch in Wyoming with his family and to concentrate on his music and his songwriting. When you hear a song written and sung by Chris LeDoux, you know it's real. It's geared more toward the lifestyle of the American West than that of the "Hollywood" cowboys like Roy Rogers and Gene Autry.

"I guess I'm more into real than imaginary," LeDoux explains. "There's a lot of those old ranchers around here who do things the way they always did...even generations that are following them, their kids and grandkids are growing up the same way. My songs are about those guys who work on the ranches and who ride the rodeo circuit...the real people who live our here in this part of the country."

LeDoux says there is a bit of a difference in the rodeo and the ranching ends of being a cowboy. "The rodeo cowboys are a little more outgoing and flamboyant compared to your Nevada buckaroo types," he laughs. "But we're all a bunch of dang proud people."

LeDoux says he has always liked the simple, hard-working lifestyle and that John Wayne and some of those early-day cowboys inspired him too. He says he was fascinated by the movie cowboys like Rogers and Hop-Along Cassidy, but that Wayne was always his favorite. He says he has been most influenced musically not by "Hollywood" stars like Rogers and Autry, but by the regular country singers and by some rock and rollers.

"I really like guys who speak their mind in their songs, like Charlie Daniels and Johnny Cash's early stuff. I like Waylon Jennings' brand of music too, as well as Hank Williams, Jr., especially when Williams was trying to break through with his own kind of music," says LeDoux, respectfully. "I also have to say that I've been influenced by and am a big fan of Bruce Springsteen and the Eagles—just a variety of musical styles, but always the kind that has depth to it...more than "my woman's left me" kind of stuff."

Of course LeDoux is a big fan of newcomer Garth Brooks, who pays tribute to LeDoux's music in his debut single, "I'm Much Too Young (To Feel This Damn Old)."

The newly formed Western Music Association is trying to revive "western" music. They feel western music has been ignored far too long and that it is time it made its way back to the airwaves. The WMA is promoting western music through music festivals; Michael Martin Murphy has joined in with his music festivals called the "West Fests," both of which LeDoux says he would love to participate in if invited.

While the "cowboy" music of Rogers, Autry and the Sons of the Pioneers disappeared when the stars disappeared from the silver screen, music of the American West, through artists like LeDoux, has been around all the while, and those "cowboy" songs do still get lots of airplay.

"Some of the radio stations out here [Wyoming] and throughout the West had already been playing my music from time to time, but [Brooks] really brought renewed attention to my music and a lot of people started asking for some of my music, maybe a little out of curiosity, to see what Brooks was singing about.

"I think it's great to see all this rebirth in the interest and acknowledgement of what's going on in music out here," says LeDoux, excitedly. "Right now I think it's pretty much a nostalgia thing...all the Sons of the Pioneers stuff, which is fine, and I think what really started all the interest was the Echo Poetry gatherings. Some of the American West poetry read at those things will just knock your hat off."

Some of the lyrics written by LeDoux will also knock your hat off. In the past, he has described his music as a combination of western soul, sagebrush blues, cowboy folk and rodeo rock and roll. But his latest description pretty well sums it up: "It's just real music. It's about my experiences and things I believe in...you know, stuff like that."

From all the descriptions and from what I learned from this very talented singer/songwriter, it's pretty obvious that Chris LeDoux is a lot like that old cowboy he sings about in "The Real Thing." Chris LeDoux is the real thing. ○

INDIE ALBUM

LORI ANN: *Lori Ann (Sing Me Records SM-CD-100)

This talented young songbird has what it takes to make some serious waves. This project includes a lot of strong material, and Lori Ann's high-energy vocals and her heart-and-soul emotional delivery of a ballad are sure to garner some "major" attention. She's jumpin' on up-tempo songs, like her latest single, "If I'm Gonna Fall," and "Weekend Resurrection," and she can bring a tear to your eye with songs like "Just Because You're Leavin'," and "Down on Market Street." We look forward to hearing more from Lori Ann.

INDIE SPOTLIGHT

CLINTON GREGORY: "Made for Lovin' You" (Step One SOR-415)

A beautiful ballad, written by Sonny Throckmorton and Curley Putman, and one that comes to life with Gregory's heart-felt delivery. He makes you believe that someone can be made for loving that one particular person in life. Expertly produced, this song and Gregory are sure to draw some "major" attention from Music City and from country radio.

INDIE FEATURE PICK

KIM TSOY: "Take the Keys to My Heart" (Master MR-90-1)

This song's a real toe-tapper and is one that's sure to bring you out of your chair and onto the dancefloor. Stellar production by Ray McGinnis and Tsoy's traditional country vocals should warrant this tune plenty of airplay.

One Bad Pig: Bringin' on the Swine Flew

THE CELEBRATION BEGAN in the studio upon completion of recording for One Bad Pig's label debut for Word's own Myrrh label. Billy Smiley, the project's producer, was rewarded with a bonus box of pig cookies delivered from the West Coast by Myrrh label executive Ed Goble. The new recording, scheduled for release in early Summer, is titled Swine Flew.

Myrrh recently turned heads by being the first major Christian recording label to sign a metal act, namely, Holy Soldier. The label's director of A&R responsible for bringing both acts to the West Coast label is Mark Maxwell, who also joined the festivities at Digital Records, a studio in Nashville.

One Bad Pig's sound has defied critics' attempts to pigeonhole it. Swine Flew will be no exception, containing song titles such as "Hey, Punk!," "See My Heart" and "Altar Ego." The project contains a cover of the Petra tune "Judas Kiss" and features solos by guest players Bob Hartman and Phil Keaggy. One Bad Pig's combination of thrash, metal and punk has come to be termed "Pig Music." Critics and fans of the band agree, "Pig Music is fun!" The cookies ain't bad either. Pictured (l to r): Streak Wheeler; Billy Smiley; Carey "Kosher" Womack; Paul Q-pek; Phillip Owens; Mark Maxwell, Myrrh's director of A&R; and Ed Goble, Myrrh's director of marketing. ○

Shirley Caesar Signs Multi-Record Contract With Word, Inc.

GRAMMY-AWARD-WINNING gospel recording artist Shirley Caesar recently inked a multi-record contract with Word, Inc. Caesar, nationally renowned as the First Lady of Gospel Music, has recorded with Word since 1980, consistently producing top-selling albums and sellout concerts.

"We're pleased to continue our relationship with Shirley Caesar," states Tom Ramsey, Word's records & music division executive vice president. "Shirley adds a healthy dimension to our artist roster. She's a substantial recording artist as well as an important minister."

Caesar has earned 10 Dove Awards, three gold records, and a spot in the Gospel Music Hall of Fame. The Raleigh-Durham, North Carolina native serves on the Durham, North Carolina city council; operates Shirley Caesar Outreach, Inc., a non-profit organization providing emergency funds, food, clothing and shelter for the underprivileged and the needy; and spearheads Christian Outreach Ministry, radio broadcasting, revivals, crusades and evangelical meeting services.

Caesar recently released I Remember Mama, her ninth Word, Inc. record project. The project salutes Caesar's mother, who died three years ago. Pictured at the contract signing are: (standing, l-r) Roland Lundy, president/Word, Inc.; Don Cason, vice president/Word Music Group; Loren Balman, vice president of marketing and creative development/Word Record Group; James Bullard, executive director of gospel music/Word Record Group; and (seated, l-r) Tom Ramsey, executive vice president of records and music/Word, Inc.; Shirley Caesar; and Carolyn Sanders, Caesar's manager.

Word Records recording artist the Nelons recently taped performances for Gospel Jubilee, a 30-minute Southern gospel music show on the Nashville Network (TNN). The show began airing March 31. The segment featuring the Nelons plus the Mid-South Boys will be shown on April 28. Pictured are the Nelons performing in front of the live studio audience.

A&M recording artist Russ Taff joined rocker John Hiatt recently to provide background vocals for Hiatt's upcoming album on A&M. Taff sang on five of the ten cuts on the project. Glyn Johns (Led Zeppelin, the Rolling Stones, etc.) produced the project at Ocean Way Studio in Los Angeles. The album is to be released in mid-June. Pictured are Hiatt and Taff.

Star Song Records' artist Tony Melendez, who achieved international acclaim for his performance for Pope John Paul II in Los Angeles in 1987, presents the pontiff with a copy of his Harper & Row biography, A Gift of Hope, and his debut album, Never Be the Same, following a command performance at the Vatican last month. Looking on as Melendez makes his presentation to the Pope are (l to r): Melendez' manager Bob Angelotti and Melendez' mother Sara and brother Jose.

RECORD REVIEW

IDLE CURE: *2nd Avenue
(Frontline C09064)

Rock on...ROCK ON! But don't rock too far out of reach. Just when you do, this foursome will throw a ballad of sincerity at you. Frontline Records' Idle Cure, without a doubt, holds onto a reputation for being hardcore rock and roll Christian, but that description doesn't capture the soul of their music. With lyrics and an overall direction that targets on surrendering to Christ, Idle Cure utilize their ability to punch music with a radical slap, yet at the same time they're also able to slap a firm grip on the listener's heartstrings. 2nd Avenue, produced by Bill Baumgart, flaunts those qualities, plus a for-sure sign of extraordinary musical talent, including gutsy vocals and snappy-finger instrumentation. Ask for some deep-beat metal/rock and 2nd Avenue gives us "It's No Fun Anymore," "Dead or Alive," or "Talk It Out." Then ask for something at a slower pace, yet with heart-reaching lyrics and soul-stirring vocals, and 2nd Avenue presents cuts such as "Contend for the Faith"

Two of Christian music's most distinctive vocalists, Kelly Nelon Thompson and Bruce Carroll, were united in the studio for the first time recently under the guiding hand of producer Gary McSpadden (r). Thompson and Carroll recorded the powerful duet "Don't Stop Prayin' for Me," which will be included on Thompson's debut Benson release, KNT. KNT, which features Thompson's trademark smooth vocals, releases this month.

Silver Slugger Pin Launches Gottlieb/Premier's NewSL Line

CHICAGO—On the opening day of the recently held ACME '90 convention, Gil Pollock, president of Premier Technology, conducted individual interviews with the various members of the trade press, in conjunction with the introduction of Gottlieb's new Silver Slugger pinball machine. "This machine marks the kick-off of our new SL line," he announced. "We have the Gottlieb Premier line which is primarily for arcades and now the Gottlieb SL line is for the street operators."

As he went on to explain, "All of us in the pinball business have tried to build one machine for the entire market. However, the player in the arcade has a different interest and criteria for playing than the player in the street location. So what we have done is address the requirements of the older player (21-50) in the liquor-pouring establishment who wants a game that is simple, quickly understood and fun to play, and the operator who wants a game that is maintenance-free, with as little components as possible," he continued.

cade has a different interest and criteria for playing than the player in the street location. So what we have done is address the requirements of the older player (21-50) in the liquor-pouring establishment who wants a game that is simple, quickly understood and fun to play, and the operator who wants a game that is maintenance-free, with as little components as possible," he continued.

This has been accomplished through improvements in manufacturing and the implementation of a "zero-defects program." The result is Silver Slugger, based on a futuristic sports theme, and designed for the street player as well as the street operator.

Another important factor that Pollock stressed is the price of this machine, which is tagged at between $400 to $600 less than operators are currently paying for competitors' equipment and translates into increased collections along with "an immediate improvement in ROI."

"Operators must have a good return on investment in order to survive," he said. "If the operator isn't around, then there's no need for distributing and manufacturing. This is a three-way industry, and all three parts [operator, distributor, manufacturer] are interdependent upon each other...so we all have to be healthy and that is why we have introduced this line."

He addressed the time element involved in the development of a new product, in terms of a new electronics package, changes in manufacturing, product design, testing, et al. "Sometimes the operators may think that the factories are not listening," he told us. "Well, we've been listening and we've been working on this project for the past year and I strongly feel that operators will agree it has been well worth the wait."

Pollock noted that his position as president of the American Amusement Machine Association, along with the close relationship that exists between AAMA and AMOA, has provided him the opportunity for a great deal of dialogue with operators, which has produced vital feedback. "As long as we continue to communicate, this business will be healthy."

Silver Slugger is pre-wired for the addition of a ticket dispenser for redemption purposes. This is an operator option. The procedure is simple to perform since all of the necessary elements are contained within the machine. As part of Premier's testing program, various models have been placed in the redemption areas at test locations. The results, however, have not come in as yet.

Sample shipments of Silver Slugger began right after the close of ACME, with full production to follow.

AMOA Expo '90

New Orleans Convention Center

Coin-Operated Amusement, Music &
Vending Industry

BY CAMILLE COMPASIO

NOW THAT THE FINAL FIGURES are in (confirming those that were printed in the March 31, 1990 edition of Cash Box), ACME '90 turned out to be a record convention after all. Attendance (at 5,257) passed the 5,000 mark for the first time in the show's history. As noted by Capcom's Bill Cravens (Show Committee Chairman), "We enjoyed being back in Chicago, but the show has just outgrown the facilities at the Hyatt Regency. ACME '90 was sold out in January, and we had to turn exhibitors away. With exhibit sales up and attendance up, we couldn't ask for anything more..."

ON APRIL 1, BURGER KING kicked off its second wave of Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles promotions with another five million dollars of TV advertising backing up a multi-million unit video-cassette promotion and Turtles movie theater tie-in. Throughout the year there will be a continuous flow of Turtles-related events taking place nationwide (and in some cases worldwide) to provide unlimited marketing back-up for the TMNT phenomenon. When we contacted Konami veepee Stephen Kaufman this past week he said that in about June or July TMNT II will be hitting the consumer market. As for Konami's Aliens kit, which was featured at the ACME convention, it has taken off just beautifully and went into delivery immediately following the close of the show. Make note, Konami has another product on test that "looks extremely promising," according to Kaufman. When you're hot, you're hot...

DATELINE: WEIRTON, WEST VIRGINIA, where we spoke with Hilltop Distributing's Doug Wilson who advised that the distrib just added the Pioneer Laser Entertainment music line to its roster. Among the new pieces he saw at ACME, two of his favorites are Capcom's MERC5 and Midway's Trog. On the minus side, Doug was telling us that area distributors are hurting because of the situation in Pennsylvania where poker games are illegal. He fears that this could result in the loss of possibly 30 percent of the operator customer base over the next six to nine months. Sure hope this doesn't come to pass...

THESE ARE VERY ACTIVE times at the Rock-Ola Manufacturing Corporation factory, with all hands concentrating on deliveries of the new Laser 2000 CD jukebox. The model was well received at ACME; distrib orders are coming in; and Frank Schulz was quick to add, "we couldn't be more pleased about it"...

ON THE TOURNAMENT SCENE: Here's something new in the Chicago area. It's called the Tournament of Power and it could develop into an ongoing event, spanning other parts of the nation. What it involves are three age groups—under 12, under 18, and 18 and over—competing on a variety of games, including coin-op videos, pinballs, darts and air hockey, along with hand-held games and consumer products. The first Tournament of Power took place at Harper College in suburban Palatine, Illinois the weekend of March 24, under sponsorship of the Chicago Tribune, Montgomery Ward's Electric Avenue and Kid's Store. TOP's director Gary Silbar told us that the games provided for the competition ("all state-of-the-art") represented such factories as Williams/Midway/Bally, Atari, Sega, NEC, Nintendo, and Dynamo, among others. The program's present series included events at DePaul Alumni Hall (April 6-8) and the Chicago South Expo Center (April 19-29), with a total of $50,000 in cash and prizes being presented to the winners in the three events...

NICE CHATTING WITH World Wide Distribution prexy Fred Skor. On the subject of ACME '90, he felt it was "a well organized show" at which he saw "a good assortment of products." On the subject of play-pricing, "Operators have to go for increased play-pricing, such as 50 cents on some games and 75 cents or more on pool tables," he said, pointing out that "operators get more money per play in Europe, so why not in America." It's time to take stock and make your adjustments accordingly. He, among other distributors we've spoken with, was quick to make note that "today's operators are very cautious and price-conscious buyers." On the subject of the current business climate at World Wide, Skor told us that "business is holding up very well—in a tough market"...

Bromley Inc.'s Little Pro

At this point you're probably familiar with the name Little Pro, because of all the attention this Bromley, Inc. piece drew at the recent ACME '90 convention. Let us now highlight some of its features.

Little Pro is an electro-mechanical, ticket-dispensing game featuring a miniature golf course within the parameters of a pinball-size cabinet. It has an alligator that opens and closes its mouth, a Dutch windmill that turns round and round, a volcano ramp and a castle with moving drawbridge.

Players use a golfer to aim at the holes, trying to complete the round in as few strokes as possible, and are rewarded along the way with tickets. The final hole (the ninth) offers a jackpot for which the operators may give away either 1, 10, 15, 25 or 50 tickets, depending on how they have chosen to set the game. The golfer is controlled by a knob and the player chooses either of three buttons for a soft, medium or hard stroke.

Little Pro is encased in a 100-percent plywood cabinet, using micro-switches, solid-state electronics and a Deltronic ticket dispenser.

Bromley, Inc. is based in Chicago. Little Pro, as well as two other pieces that are due out this year from the company, have been researched, designed, developed and manufactured in Illinois.

For further information, contact Frank or Joe Bundra at (708) 934-0661; FAX (708) 934-0555. Inquiries from outside of the U.S. should be directed to Lauran Bromley of Bromley, Inc. at (312) 267-6030. FAX is (312) 509-9508.

WOMEN IN COINBIZ:

Taito America's Natalie Kulig

BY CAMILLE COMPASIO

Our ongoing series focuses this week on yet another subject who represents the significant advancements, in terms of position and responsibility, that are being made by women in an industry that traditionally appealed predominantly to men. Now, however, women are finding it appealing. They're joining the coinbiz ranks in growing numbers and are climbing up the ladder with the full encouragement and support of their male counterparts.

Prior to joining Taito America Corporation, Natalie Kulig worked for Quasar Electronics, a division (along with Panasonic and Technics) of Matsushita Electronic Corporation, which is a huge conglomerate. During her eight-year tenure with the company she advanced from technical publications assistant, where her main responsibilities were typesetting service manuals and maintenance of the service subscription program; to the position of marketing coordinator, television division, which involved setting up purchase, sales and inventory analysis (PSI) for the entire television product line. "It was in this position that I gained a great deal of my marketing and computer knowledge," she explained. However, as interesting as the job was, it did not entail the personal contact with outside reps and distribution to which she had grown accustomed and which she enjoyed, so she decided to pursue other avenues of employment.

Next stop, Taito America Corporation. The company was looking for someone to assist in sales and production. A friend of Kulig's at Quasar recommended her for the job and she was hired. "I have been with Taito America for almost three years and was completely new to this business when I started," Kulig told us. "What attracted me most was the opportunity to work for a smaller company—Quasar had well over 300 people on staff when I started—and the chance to learn something completely new, since all I had been exposed to previously was the TV business."

Kulig credits coinbiz veteran (and former Taito America exec) Ben Rochetti with "teaching her the ropes" when she first joined the company. "Until I worked with Ben, I never knew what a harness was, or how a video game got from the PCB stage to a real game," she admitted. Of course, her timing for entering the coinbiz industry, particularly with this company, was just about perfect. Double Dragon was being introduced, which made her feel like she was "starting at the top." As she pointed out, "Things at Taito became so hectic that I began focusing most of my attention on sales, shipping and scheduling of this dynamite game." She now began working closely with Rick Rochetti, vice president of sales.

Natalie Kulig was instrumental in setting up computerized game-tracking reports as well as the sales reports that are part of Taito's tracking system today. "About a year after I started, Taito began looking into a network computer system, which I played a part in selecting," she said. "With the next hit game, Operation Wolf, the workload began to increase, as did my responsibilities. In addition to sales and scheduling, I also became responsible for the department which creates all of the invoicing for equipment and parts."

In March of 1989, after previously serving as sales and marketing assistant, Kulig was promoted to marketing manager, her present position. This meant new responsibilities, which included monitoring current market trends and doing preliminary work on upcoming products. In this regard, she works closely with Joe Dillon (president), Yoshi Suzuki (executive VP) and Rick Rochetti "to adjust our sales plans in accordance with market demands."

Tell us a little about Taito's marketing/testing program, we asked? Kulig explained that the company has a separate department that handles all of the "test" games that come in. "Basically, what I try to focus on, in terms of marketing, is how these new games will fit into the current market," she noted. "I have records for the period of 1986 through 1989 pertaining to the manufacturers and the games they released during those years. I then separate these games by theme to determine the types of games that dominated the market over a given time-period so that I can try to observe a trend. I will say this, however—the coin-op business is unlike any other and a 'trend' is rather difficult to determine. But, thankfully, I have been able to extract a lot of interesting information over the last few years."

Addressing herself to Taito's "very successful" product line, she noted that, "although it is difficult to top such dedicated games as Double Dragon and Operation Wolf, the factory has maintained its continuity in the marketplace with such pieces as Chase H.Q., Operation Thunderbolt and S.C.I." With respect to kits, "a much more competitive line of product is needed, and Taito has brought the best to the market" with the likes of Twin Eagle (released about two years ago), U.S. Classic, Superman and Crime City.

When asked what she likes most about her job, she was quick to stress that Taito provided opportunities that would not have been available anywhere else. "I believe the teamwork at this company is probably the most important factor to its success," she said. "From the shipping department, to the production department, to the sales department, there exists a flow of cooperation that makes Taito a very special place to work and I am especially proud to be part of the sales team. Rick Rochetti, our vice president of sales, has allowed me to take a project and run with it, which gives me the opportunity to not only work on new ideas, but to grow personally, as well," she continued. "I must also say that my day-to-day contact with distribution is one of the favorite parts of my job. I have found that this industry has a lot of very interesting people in it who have helped me to learn more about this business."

Here is a woman who entered the world of coin-op entertainment as a novice, with an impressive business background and a willingness to apply her talent and energy to the fullest degree. In the process, she has gained considerable expertise and a good handle on this industry, by way of her co-workers at the company, her dedication and her active participation at trade shows, distributor meetings and other company functions.
