STRONGLY WEEKLY

For all of its ten plus years Walrus has been a biweekly publication. That pattern was started because it seemed to fit the pattern of album music. Singles, it seemed, moved at a weekly pace.

Our biweekliness influenced the development of the sheet. It led to the addition of the retail section, concertizing, the review section, the whole notion of depth and perspective. That concept has been carried through in the new format with articles, interviews, gossip and profiles.

Now it's time to quicken our pace. This major market update focus' on the stations which make things happen, the big ones. And with it we introduce Quick Starters, a survey of the new releases which are getting out of the box airplay at the major market stations. Quick Starters will appear every week, in the full Walrus and in the update.

As in the case of the larger publication, we speak to these major stations by phone on Tuesday and Wednesday, compile, print and mail the information to you by Friday. The calculation is very simple. It applies 3 points for Heavy Airplay New Additions, 2 points for Moderate Airplay New Additions and 1 point for just plain New Additions. The album with the most points goes to the head of the class.

We have been working out this formula since the beginning of August in order to insure its reliability.

The Quick Starters idea is not particularly a new one, but it does complete the full-service publication circle. At its best Walrus should be a tip sheet with the industry's most trustworthy information and a magazine revealing our industry's most interesting people and trends.

Quick Starters makes us weekly. One week you'll receive Walrus in concentrated Quick Starters form and the next week you receive it full strength. Both weeks we intend to be right on the mark.
