Top 25 TV Station Groups

Ranked by FCC coverage, as of April 2004

The Top 25 TV Station Groups are ranked according to the percentage of the 108.4 million U.S. TV homes they reach as calculated by the FCC, which discounts the reach of UHF stations (chs. 14-83) by half. If a group owns or manages other stations in a market, those stations are not counted in its total, nor are low-power and satellite stations and translators.

SOURCES: Broadcasting & Cable, media companies, Nielsen Media Research, Television Bureau of Advertising.

KEY: L = operated under LMA; J = joint marketing and programming agreement; T = operated under time-brokerage agreement; NR = not a Nielsen-ranked market.

The Top 25 Cable/Satellite TV Operators

Ranked by Basic Cable Subscribers

The following ranking appeared in the August 9 issue of Broadcasting & Cable magazine. HSD stands for high-speed data or cable modem. Basic sub penetration is the percentage of all homes within the cable operator's service or franchise areas. Digital, HSD, and phone penetrations are percentages of basic subscribers. This listing was compiled by George Winslow, a Portland, Oregon, freelance writer and editor.

Since taking over the old AT&T systems in October 2002, Philadelphia-based Comcast has improved the operating performance of those systems, which had lost 483,000 subscribers in 2002, while continuing to boost the numbers at its own, older systems. Comcast expects to produce $7.5 billion worth of cable operating cash flow in 2004, an 18% bounce from 2003. In recent quarters, it has enjoyed some impressive operating gains, with digital subscribers increasing by 15.8% from second quarter 2003 to June 30, 2004, and data subscribers spiking by 36.8%. During 2004, Comcast also expects to add as many as 1.6 million high-speed-data customers and up to 1 million digital subscribers. About 600,000 homes currently have HD set-top boxes. Comcast has stopped aggressively marketing its existing phone service until it can roll out VoIP in 2005. After suffering some defections, it expects its basic-subscriber base this year to be about what it was in 2003.

One major reason for cable's slumping basic-subscriber counts and disappointing stock prices can be found at the El Segundo, California, headquarters of DirecTV, where Rupert Murdoch's new management has been aggressively marketing the service, adding new programming, and planning the rollout of advanced set-top boxes with interactive TV and DVR functions. It's also capitalizing on Fox's sports programming, with plans to offer up to 100 HD games on its NFL Sunday Ticket package, and the operator continues to offer more local channels. In June, local stations were available to DirecTV customers in 88 markets. People are noticing: In first quarter 2004, DirecTV added 460,000 customers, but marketing costs to get them were a hefty $645 per head. Some analysts are disappointed by the first-quarter cash flow of $145 million. Second-quarter numbers were being announced just as this report was going to press.

Time Warner Cable lost 21,000 basic subscribers in the second quarter of 2004, but most of its other numbers remained strong. Over the past year, it has added 124,000 digital-TV subscribers, a 13% increase, and 127,000 high-speed-data subscribers, a 24% bounce. A 25% increase in HSD revenues and price hikes for basic packages allowed the company to increase its cable revenues by 10% in the second quarter and improve adjusted operating income before depreciation and amortization by 9%. Average revenue per basic subscriber also increased 10%. Over the year, the company expanded the number of homes with DVRs to 591,000, 18% of its digital-video customers, and the number of VOD homes to 1.3 million, a 28% penetration. And it has expansive plans for telephony. By the end of the year, phone services will be available in all 31 divisions, up from 15 today. Further growth could come through acquisitions, but, during a second-quarter earnings call, Time Warner chairman/CEO Richard Parsons stressed that the company will be tight-fisted.

EchoStar Communications passed the 10 million-subscriber mark in June, more than doubling its subscriber base in four years. It offers less expensive programming packages coupled with aggressive marketing to ethnic subscribers. Also, in the recent JD Power survey of customer satisfaction, EchoStar tied with DirecTV for the top spot with a 71 rating, much higher than the nearest cable competitor, Cox, which had a 63 rating. But EchoStar faces challenges. In the first quarter of 2004, the cost of acquiring new subscribers jumped 26% to $604 per head, and free cash flow declined 20% to $224 million. To compete against DirecTV, EchoStar continues to add local broadcast signals to its offerings and now provides local signals in all 50 states. EchoStar teamed with SBC Communications to provide bundled video and DSL services, and, in the first quarter, that brought EchoStar 40,000 new subscribers.

Big changes are afoot: Recently, Cox Communications announced a $7.9 billion plan to buy out shareholders and take the company private so that Cox won't have to be a slave to its share price. Cox was the first cable operator to aggressively introduce bundling, rolling out a triple play of video, voice and data in its Los Angeles systems in 1997. Good plan: Cox was one of the few cable companies to increase its basic-subscriber counts in the past year, seeing 0.6% growth from second quarter of 2003 to the same period in 2004. And, once again, it got the highest customer-service ranking of any MSO in the J.D. Powers annual survey. The MSO added 97,517 high-speed-data subscribers in second quarter 2004, a 34% increase over a year ago, and 66,265 telephony subscribers, a 35% jump.

Since revelations of accounting irregularities hammered Charter Communications' stock in 2002, the St. Louis-based operator has spent two years reorganizing operations. The company hit on a plan to sell "non-strategic" systems serving about 600,000 subscribers. Sales proceeds and improved results gave Charter a negative cash flow of about $70 million in 2003, a substantial reduction from the $1.5 billion a year before. Charter added 437,000 high-speed-data customers in 2003, and the company's policy of offering data services at the same price to non-video customers helped attract another 125,200 in first quarter 2004. Charter reduced its basic-subscriber losses and, in the first quarter, gained 68,800 digital-video subscribers, a big bounce from the comparable quarter in 2003, when it lost 31,500 digital customers. CEO Vogel says 2004 is the year Charter will "regain our operational momentum."

Following the massive accounting scandal at Adelphia Communications that pushed the MSO into bankruptcy protection in June 2002, a new management team led by industry veteran William Schleyer began working to turn around its operations, which were bleeding subscribers. Under his direction, the company has added more than half a million HSD subscribers and upgraded its systems. Today, about 93% of Adelphia customers have access to two-way digital-TV and HSD services, up from only two-thirds in late 2002. But the company continued to lose subscribers—more than 90,000 in 2003—and the prospects of Adelphia's surviving as a separate company remain clouded. If Adelphia is broken up, analysts have valued the systems at $17 billion to $21 billion, with Time Warner, Comcast, and Cox among the possible bidders.

In July, the company took an important step toward spinning off its operations into two companies. If its plan goes through, Cablevision Systems will hold the cable operations and a variety of other assets, and Rainbow Media Enterprises will own Rainbow DBS (called Voom), Rainbow Programming and Rainbow Movies. On the cable side, the company lost 19,600 basic subscribers in 2003 and another 820 in the first quarter of 2004, the most recent data available at press time. But company executives believe basic subscribers will grow slightly in 2004, and the company's other offerings have been growing at a very healthy rate, adding 150,000 digital subscribers, 71,900 high-speed-data subscribers and 42,200 VoIP customers in the first quarter alone. That has boosted monthly revenues per subscriber by 18% between the first quarter of 2003 and the first quarter of 2004 and produced a 17% increase in telecommunications revenues.

As part of the restructuring of Time Warner Entertainment, Advance Newhouse Communications took over management control of 2.1 million cable subscribers in the spring of 2003 and then rebranded the operations as Bright House Networks. The systems cover several large markets, including Tampa/Central Florida systems, which are contiguous and form one of the country's largest cable clusters. Advance/Newhouse increased its basic customers by about 1.5% in 2003. Digital also showed a healthy bounce, growing by 93,400 in 2003. To continue those gains, the company remains committed to rolling out new services. Currently, VOD and high-speed data are available to about 95% of all Bright House customers.

*First quarter

Over the past five quarters, DBS providers have been chipping away at Mediacom's customer base, and the operator lost 59,000 basic customers between the end of 2002 and the first quarter of 2004. Digital subscribers declined by 11,000 in the first quarter of this year, but high-speed-data customers jumped by 42,000 to 302,000. Mediacom is adding local channels and pumping up marketing, and it has introduced a less expensive (but slower) data package. The company hopes to have HD services available in more than 80% of its digital homes by the end of 2004. Sometime late this year, it plans to add phone services to its product mix. Management expects cash flow to increase by 4%-7% to at least $425 million and predicts that Mediacom could lose another 2%-2.5% of its subscriber base this year. Mediacom was releasing second-quarter earnings as this report was being prepared.

By the end of the second quarter of 2004, 97% of Insight Communications' customers were in areas served by a two-way, high-capacity network. That investment helped the company boost its revenues by 12% and its operating cash flow by 13% over last year. While basic subscribers declined over the past year by about 13,400, it saw healthy increases in phone and digital subscribers, and the number of HSD customers spiked by 42%. The company has rolled out HDTV and VOD in most markets and has been one of the most aggressive operators in interactive TV. The company expects to generate about $50 million in free cash flow and 11% or 12% revenue growth this year.

To bolster its flight against satellite, Cable One froze basic rates in 2003 and offered a $1,000 bonus to every employee of systems that gained subscribers. That strategy paid off: The company gained about 2,500 basic subscribers in 2003, a major turnaround from 2002, when its systems lost 36,000. Price hikes earlier this year, however, have slightly reduced basic-subscriber counts, which were down about 2,600 since the second quarter of 2003. The company, which operates in smaller markets, has taken a cautious approach to new technologies; it was the last major MSO to roll out digital-TV and HSD services. Those products are now, however, an essential part of its mix, with HSD subscribers nearly doubling since the end of 2002. The MSO has rolled out HDTV services and began offering DVRs last spring. Telephony's coming, too.

Formerly known as Classic Communications, this fast-growing company is led today by Jerry Kent, the former CEO of Charter Communications. It acquired several Houston-area systems from Shaw Communications in mid 2003. So far this year, it has acquired systems from Alliance Communications Partners, LP (January 2004), Thompson Cablevision (March 2004), and Tele-Media Corp., pushing its subscriber counts up to about 440,000 customers in 18 states. Later this year, the company is scheduled to close on a deal to acquire the assets of USA Media, which would further boost its subscriber count to about 480,000. By the end of 2004, it will have upgraded systems serving about 80% of its customers.

Over the past year, RCN executives have worked to revamp the heavily indebted overbuilder's balance sheet. Debt was reduced from $2.7 billion in 2001 to $1.7 billion in 2004, and the company put some systems on the block, selling its Princeton, New Jersey, operation for about $245 million and Carmel, New York, system for $120 million. In February, RCN's management began negotiating with bondholders to further reduce its debts. The company expects to emerge from bankruptcy protection in the fourth quarter. Despite its financial troubles, it continues to roll out new services and post reasonably good operating numbers.

William Bresnan, a cable-industry pioneer, got out of the business in 1999 but returned four years later, spending $525 million to acquire Comcast systems in Colorado, Montana, Wyoming, and Utah, a deal that also gave Comcast an equity interest in the company. Since then, Bresnan Communications has been focused on a $200 million rebuild of the systems, which should be about 96% complete in the third quarter, notes Executive VP, Operations, Steve Brookstein: "We're doing in 12 to 18 months what the industry did in four years."

Founded in 1948 by John Walson, Service Electric has the distinction of being the country's first cable system. Today, it's still run by his family, with Margaret Walson serving as CEO and her son as president. Service Electric has rolled out HD service in about two-thirds of its footprint and plans to offer the service in all areas by first quarter 2005. It plans to begin rolling out VoIP in early 2005 and hopes to have DVRs and VODs available in most communities by the middle of next year.

*2003 estimate by Paul Kagan Associates

WOW, which sold its Denver operations in 2003, is an overbuilder offering telecommunications services over the old Ameritech systems in four states. It does not release any data on its subscribers or finances. To lure subscribers away from its main competition, incumbent cable operators, WOW attempts to offer attractive bundles and a wider range of Internet services. It has rolled out HD and DVR services in most of its markets but has no immediate plans to offer telephony.

Founded by cable veterans, David Keefe and Edward Holleran, Atlantic Broadband Finance jumped into the top-25 ranking with a March $765 million deal to purchase systems with 228,000 subscribers from Charter. Since then, the company has been working to rebrand the operations and to roll out new services. Keefe notes that, after rebranding its systems in May, it relaunched its digital package in July. It has also begun offering a slower but less expensive data service and has increased the speed for its main cable-modem offering. In August and September, it will begin rolling out DVRs and hopes to launch VoIP in 2005. By late 2004 or early 2005, it hopes to have upgraded systems serving about 93% of its customers so they can get HD and DVR services.

Susquehanna Communications last year spent $120 million to acquire a 30,000-subscriber system in Carmel, New York, from RCN Corp. That put the company in the voice-over-cable business for the first time, and it plans to test a VoIP system in Williamsport, Pennsylvania, this year, with a launch in 2005. Susquehanna plans to launch DVRs in York, Pennsylvania, in late 2004 and expand those offerings next year. It has big plans for HD and beefed up its HSD offering by adding a tier of Internet content. More acquisitions could be on the way once the company completes construction of a new network-operations center and consolidates its call-center functions. But no deals are imminent.

This efficient cable operator is holding its own. It slightly expanded its subscriber count over the last year, gained market share for high-speed-data products, and attracted 4,250 HD and 3,000 DVR subscribers. Testing for VoIP is set for late 2004, with a launch in 2005.

Midcontinent, which manages systems it jointly owns with Comcast in four states, equaled or exceeded most of its subscriber goals over the past year, adding 15,000 data subscribers, 15,000 digital subscribers, and 10,000 telephony customers. VP of Public Policy Tom Simmons attributes much of that success to better customer service. Over the past year, it has doubled the speed of its high-speed-data product and, in the next two years, plans to expand its rollout to 55 more communities and small towns.

Digital tiers, which were first rolled out in 2001, are now available in more than 90% of Northland's subscriber homes. In 2004, the company has been focusing on the rollout of HSD services. There are no immediate plans to launch VOD services.

DVR services were launched in July 2004, and the company has been adding VOD programming. HD, DVR, and VOD services are now available in most markets, helping boost the company's digital-subscriber numbers by more than 10,000 in the past year. HSD subs have climbed by more than 11,000. It launches VoIP in some markets next year.

Knology vaulted into the top 25 with the acquisition of about 60,000 Verizon Media subscribers in Florida and California. The company is focusing on the South and, in May, announced plans to sell the Cerritos, California, systems for about $14.8 million. Faced with heavy debt, the MSO's predecessor filed a Chapter 11 reorganization plan in September 2002. After emerging from bankruptcy protection, the new Knology went public last December, raising about $56 million in one of the first cable-sector IPOs since the telecom bubble burst in 2001. The company has used most of the IPO money to complete the purchase of systems and to upgrade the Florida systems, an overbuild competing with Bright House.

Although Buckeye lost about 3,000 basic subscribers in the past year, it has posted healthy gains elsewhere as it beefed up its digital offerings, rolling out HD and VOD services. Since the middle of 2003, it added more than 12,000 pay units, more than 7,000 digital subscribers, and more than 8,000 high-speed-data customers.
