THE YEAR IN REVIEW

TELEVISION, CABLE, VIDEO AND NEW TECHNOLOGIES

1996 started off with the passage of the Telecommunications Act of 1996, a bill that will have wide ranging ramifications for the television, cable and telephone industries. Broadcasters will have access to a portion of the airways reserved for new digital services, but judgement has been reserved on the possible auction of those licenses. Makers of television sets will be required to include a "V-chip" in new televisions, allowing viewers the option of blocking access to material of violent or sexual nature. Companies may now own television stations covering 30 percent of the national population, as compared to the previous limit of 25 percent, and broadcasters are for the first time able to own cable companies. Most cable price regulations in smaller markets were enoed, and cable companies and telephone companies will be allowed to merge. Full price deregulation is to be delayed for three years. Certain provisions of the bill regarding the electronic transmission of obscenity and abortion information were immediately challenged by civil libertarian groups and overturned by a federal judicial review panel.

BROADCAST

NBC won the ratings war for the 1995-96 season with a 11.7 overall rating and a 19% audience share. NBC's Thursday night programming block took the top Nielsen's with "ER" rated the number one program, followed by the perennial hit "Seinfeld", "Friends" and newcomer "Caroline in the City". ABC came in second with an overall 10.6 rating and an 18% share, CBS third with a 9.6 rating and a 12% share, Fox fourth with a 7.3 rating and a 12% share, and new networks UPN and WB with 3.1/5 and 2.4/4 respectively. Overall, the major networks' ratings were down again, due most probably to cable services and the expanding roles of Fox, UPN and WB. The NBC coverage of the 1996 Summer Olympics, held in Atlanta, completely swamped all the other networks in the ratings.

The 1996 Emmy Awards for primetime again showed NBC's dominance as the top network winning 19 Emmys, cable programmer HBO 14, CBS 12, ABC 9 and FOX 5. Other winners were PBS with three Emmys, Showtime, TNT and TBS with 2 apiece, and WB, AMC, A&E and UPN with one apiece. For the complete Emmy Awards see the Awards section of this book.

Capital Cities/ABC, under the new Disney ownership, has become just plain old ABC again and named Jamie Tarses as president of ABC Entertainment, and Ted Harbert chairman of the network's entertainment division. Previously with NBC, Ms. Tarses was involved with the development of some of that network's top situation comedies. David Hill, formerly president of Fox Sports, was named president and CEO of Fox Television.

Digital television is on the way. Legislative bodies and industry groups spent much of 1996 attempting to hammer out compromises, concessions and concensuses regarding the high tech future of America's favorite medium. Although technologically feasible, digital television will require an enormous number of adjustments to take place, not the least of which will be to convince American consumers that their current television sets will soon be obsolete and need to be replaced with new digital receivers.

The spectrum of the airways that the FCC is proposing to reserve for digital television broadcasting is the frequencies between channels 7 through 51. The FCC proposes to auction off channels 60-69 to the wireless telecommunications industry. Broadcasters want all of the spectrum available for television broadcasting. Although single channel High Definition Television (HDTV) transmissions were the basis for the original plan, it has come to light that as many as four channels of standard-quality digital video broadcasts could be squeezed into these frequencies (multiplexing), with two additional non-video channels (text or other data) carried as well. The FCC has approved a digital standard which would allow broadcasters the choice of a single HDTV channel or a multiplexed signal. On a related note, Washington, D.C area NBC affiliate WRC-4 has been awarded the first HDTV test grant, for an experimental HDTV station to be operated by the Sarnoff Research Center.

Broadcasters have requested that each television station be allotted a second "transitional" channel to facilitate the switchover from the old broadcast standard, with no fees imposed and no time frame specified for the transition period. Some politicians and economists have pointed out that these frequencies are a potentially lucrative source of income and that the broadcasters should be willing to pay for the privilege of using these channels (with some estimating that the licenses could be auctioned off for as high as $70 billion). Broadcasters argue that such an auction could spell the end of free TV. The Clinton administration proposed a strict time frame of ten years for the transition between standard broadcast and any enhanced services, with the original broadcast frequencies to revert back to the government at the end of that period. A separate legislative draft proposes that broadcasters be required to pay refundable annual "transition" fees, based on the market value of the digital license, into a non-interest bearing escrow account to reserve their slots in the digital broadcast spectrum. If the transition to digital is accomplished within the allotted time frame, the transition fees will be refunded. In late June, the House and Senate majority leadership demanded that the FCC begin allotting the transitional licenses. The National Association of Broadcasters and proponents of the free allocation plan claim that it is absolutely necessary that broadcasters be given the green light so that consumer electronics manufacturers will feel confident enough to begin developing the new hardware that digital television will require.

In a late development, a group of software and computer companies including Microsoft, Apple and Dreamworks SKG challenged the technical standards for video developed for digital television, claiming that the proposed standards essentially froze out potential computer applications.

In order to head off a government-imposed rating system, the four major networks began developing a voluntary ratings system of their own. Executives from all major broadcasters, the National Association of Broadcasters and the National Cable Television Association met with President Clinton to discuss the ratings plan, which will not take effect until January 1997. Jack Valenti of the MPA, who has had experience with ratings systems with the CARA program, volunteered to help broadcasters come up with a plan. According to the early discussions, programs will be rated by the program distributors rather than a central ratings board and these ratings will trigger the V-chip by means not yet specified. Critics of the plan suggest that programs rated to show adult content, sex or violence will lose advertising dollars and that producers, leery of such financial risk, will be less likely to produce innovative programming. A Canadian experiment in the electronic blockage of rated programs blocks only those portions of the programs which are rated as objectionable, not the entire programs. Canadian broadcasters have also requested that any ratings be applicable to Canadian programming as well, so as not to develop conflicting standards.

The FCC has begun the process of mandating the broadcasting of educational children's programming. FCC Commissioner Reed Hundt has proposed a minimum of three hours per network per week. As usual, broadcasters balked, maintaining that the programs being aired at the current time are sufficiently educational and that government intrusion into programming decisions is unwarranted.

Television stations changed hands at an amazing rate in 1996, most probably as a direct result of the Telecommunications Act's ownership provisions. In late July, Rupert Murdoch's News Corporation, parent company of Fox Broadcasting, purchased station owner and syndicator New World Entertainment. The day the deal was announced, New World President Brandon Tartikoff tendered his resignation. This deal gives Fox, Inc. an additional 10 stations, bringing its total owned and operated station count to 22. The Tribune Company purchased 6 stations from Renaissance Communications in a deal estimated at $1.1 billion. Raycom Media purchased 7 stations owned by Aflac Inc. and agreed to acquire Ellis Communications, owner of 12 stations. In late September, the A. H. Belo Corporation arranged to purchase the Providence Journal, whose 9 stations combined with Belo's 6 TV stations make Belo the 10th largest station owner in the U.S.

In advertising, 1995 spot advertising was up 5% over 1994. Network advertising was up 2%, with syndication down 5%, and local advertising was up by 1%.

A study conducted by the Pew Research Center for the People and the Media found that 42% percent of Americans surveyed watch the networks' news broadcasts on a regular basis, down 5% from a year ago. The same study shows that among Americans under 30, only 22% watch the same network news. Some of the decline may be due to competition from cable news services such as CNN.

CABLE

NBC and Microsoft launched a 24-hour news cable channel, MSNBC on July 15, 1996, which was swapped in for the America's Talking channel (some cable carriers balked at the exchange until NBC threatened to pull all NBC programming from offending systems). MSNBC will reach at least 21 million households and is being carried over the Internet simultaneously. ABC, which had plans for a similar service, originally postponed any developments, then announced a late 1996 launch date. Fox, also planning a 24-hour news channel, reportedly offered to pay cable system operators $10 per subscriber to carry its news channel and entered into a stock-swap deal with TCI which would supply Fox's news channel to TCI's estimated 10 million subscribers in exchange for a 20% stake in the channel. In the same vein, Westinghouse Electric, the parent company of CBS, acquired the 24-hour Spanish-language news service Telenovelas in June. This is the network's first venture into the cable market. It will also position CBS strategically for a move into the potentially lucrative Latin American market. Other start-up cable channels, such as The Love Channel and The Animal Channel, are experiencing difficulties being allotted channels on cable systems. All of these problems are due to the lack of available channel slots on most cable systems, many of which have 70 or fewer channels available, most of which are filled by existing basic services, profitable premium and pay-per-view services, local broadcast channels and required programming. The advent of digital cable boxes, with channel capabilities in the multiple hundreds, in late 1996 may help alleviate this problem. TCI, Cox and Comcast will be the first national cable carriers to offer these converters in limited markets. In addition, third party vendors plan to offer digital converters with enhanced programming features. However, many in the industry believe that a large proportion of the newly available slots will be allotted to lucrative pay-per-view services. As if to illustrate this, Request Television, the nation's largest PPV supplier, will add 30 new PPV channels to its current 5.

In related cable news, Time Warner Cable in New York came under fire (and investigation) for its refusal to carry the new Fox News Channel. The mayor of New York, Rudolph Giuliani, offered to allow the cable system to replace one of the city's public access channels with the Fox channel, but the cable operator refused. The city then began retransmitting the new channel commercial free as an "educational" service on one of four municipal channels. Bloomberg News, another cable news channel not carried by Time Warner in New York, immediately requested (and got) similar retransmission. Critics of these actions included political opponents who claimed that the mayor's actions were intended only to curry favor with a major political supporter (Fox News is owned by Rupert Murdoch's News Corp., which also owns The New York Post, one of the major tabloids in New York and an editorial supporter of Giuliani, and local broadcaster WNYW) and members of the National Cable Television Association who criticized the deal as an attempt by a government agency to wield editorial influence over a cable franchise's choice of programming. The bottom line is that such a dispute points up the lack of enough cable channels in some major markets to support all the new programming choices available.

In mid-July the FTC finally dropped any resistance to the proposed purchase of the Turner Broadcasting System by Time-Warner, after Time-Warner successfully blocked a lawsuit brought by investment partner U.S. West. The major sticking point for FTC approval was the minority share in Turner held by the largest company in the cable industry, Tele-Communications Inc. (TCI), which critics maintained would create a noncompetitive force in the cable industry. To head off any problems caused by this, TCI accepted a 10% non-voting share in the stock of the combined company. In a related matter of concern for the FTC, the Time Warner cable companies agreed to carry CNN's competition, in the first instance the fledgling 24-hour news channel MSNBC, forestalling any claims of noncompetitive programming. Ted Turner, chairman of Turner was named to head HBO, CNN and other Time Warner/Turner cable networks. Shareholder approval of the merger came October 10, 1996. This merger has made Time-Warner the world's biggest entertainment company.

MCA disputed the launch of Viacom's new cable channel, TV Land, saying that the joint development deal regarding the USA Network between the two companies precluded the development of any new cable channels by either without the assent of the other. Viacom responded that the new service was merely a spin-off of Nickelodeon's Nick at Nite programming. In related news, Viacom's plans to spinoff its cable operations to TCI were approved by the IRS and the sale was finalized at an estimated price of $2.3 billion.

The WB Network, which is having a difficult time getting its programming into distribution around the country, has developed a system by which local cable operators can carry WB programming and insert their own ads. A hardware device allows stored digitized commercials to be synchronized with the transmission of WB signals. The FCC adopted new rules allowing telephone companies to begin offering television programming (Open Video Systems or OVS).

Cable customers were hit with large basic rate increases in the first quarter of 1996, averaging 9% among the top 5 cable corporations, with a 13% increase being imposed by TCI, the nation's largest cable provider. In late February, the Supreme Court agreed to review the 1992 cable "must-carry" rule, a provision of the Cable Television Consumer Protection and Competition Act that requires cable television companies to carry local broadcast stations. In early October, a skeptical Court began hearing arguments. Several of the justices seemed to question broadcasters' assertion that cable systems function as a "gate-keeper" of the broadcast spectrum, and noted that since the inception of cable only 31 broadcasters out of 1600 had closed up shop. No final decision has been reached as of October 8th. Provisions of the new Telecommunications Act require that providers of adult programming completely scramble both video and audio signals so that they cannot be viewed or heard by minors. Playboy Enterprises has estimated that upgrading the scrambling technology to satisfy these requirements will cost nearly $5 million. In June, the Supreme Court ruled that cable operators could exercise "editorial" control over which programs could appear on the public access and leased-time access channels (both of which cable operators are required to carry), but disallowed the requirement for scrambling the signals of programming deemed "indecent".

SATELLITE BROADCASTING

Although direct satellite broadcasts are currently received by only a small percentage of television households satellite dishes are being touted by advertisers as an alternative to traditional cable services and consumer acceptance is growing. DirecTV is the nation's largest DBS provider, with 1.5 million subscribers, followed closely by PrimeStar and EchoStar. AT&T acquired a 2.5% share in DirecTV and began offering a 175-channel satellite service to its customers and satellite dishes through retail outlets such as The Sharper Image and Tower Records. MCI & Rupert Murdoch's News Corporation agreed to jointly develop a satellite broadcasting service, to be named American Sky Broadcasting (or ASkyB), and a telephone and data transmission service, to be named SkyMCI. Service should first be available in the Fall of 1997. The News Corporation also owns a 40 percent share in the European satellite service British Sky Broadcasting (or BSKyB). Cable giant TCI created a separate corporation for its DBS company PrimeStar Partners., which will go public in the fourth quarter of 1996. PrimeStar boasts some 1.2 million subscribers and 100 channels. However, the FCC denied an application by TCI to use Canadian satellites to broadcast to American households, ostensibly for satellite licensing problems, but also citing the Canadian government's restrictive quotas on American programming.

If plans by the major media companies in Europe continue, the entire continental European Union will be served by digital satellite broadcasts in the next year, putting the E.U. ahead of the U.S. in digital TV. (For more on the the European plan, see the World Market section of this book.)

VIDEO

Bill Fields, former chief executive at Wal-Mart stores was hired as president of Blockbuster Video, a subsidiary of Viacom. It was estimated that a third of all of Viacom's income would come from Blockbuster. Golden Book Video purchased the family program library of Broadway Video Entertainment.

Looking forward to a digital future, Jack Valenti of the MPAA and Gary Shapiro of CEMA asked Congress to pass legislation that would preserve the rights of consumers to make recordings of broadcast, basic cable and certain pay-TV programs for their own use while protecting copyright holders by restricting home taping of pay-per-view programs and prerecorded media.

The roll-out of the new video platform, the DVD (Digital Video Disk) is scheduled for late 1996. Although the MPAA and CEMA have approved copyright protections and standards for this new medium, both the Recording Industry Association of America and the software industry's Information Technologies Industry Council have objected to certain of the provisions. The current standard for the DVD calls for a single-sided disk that should be able to store nearly 4.7 gigabytes of information (the equivalent of one 133 minute movie) with two layers of information storage material and with a playback rate of an astounding 11 million bits of information per second that would partially replace the standard VHS videocassette and CD-ROM, and quite possibly the audio CD (priority has been given to the development of DVD playback machines which will allow the playback of current CDs). The two-layer (two-substrate) process will allow a much denser packing of data onto the disks, and improved lasers with smaller wavelengths will allow the encoding of data into smaller physical areas on the substrates. In order for movies to be stored on the DVD, all visual and audio data must be compressed. A variable-rate compression system called MPEG2 (the acronym stands for Motion Picture Engineering Group) will be utilized, allowing the playback of the film at different rates of data density according to the complexity of the scene without any degradation of the image and will allow the user to choose between a picture in the standard TV aspect ratio of 4:3 or in the letterbox format of 16:9. Dolby AC-3 has been chosen as the sound standard for the DVD and will allow CD-quality audio playback. Initially, DVD players will retail in the high end of the consumer component price range (ranging between $700 to $1200), although prices are expected to drop within several years. DVD recorders and DVD-RAM (an erasable medium) are due by 1998. If the platform gains widespread acceptance, the implications for all of the facets of information technology are incredible. Future versions of the DVD could allow entire written libraries to be stored on one disk, and a DVD-RAM drive could be used across the entire spectrum of consumer electronic equipment, from TV, to audio, to game systems and to home computers. An important question remains whether consumers will embrace the new platform, and it may be useful to remember that the audio industry has attempted to introduce two new standard platforms in recent years, the MiniDisc and the DCC, neither of which has met with widespread consumer acceptance. Manufacturers planned to begin offering the DVD player for sale in the Fall of 1996, even though no movies were yet available.

NEW TECHNOLOGIES

The Telecommunications Bill of 1996 passed in February promised stiff regulations on material containing obscenity distributed on the Internet. A provision of the bill based on the 1873 Comstock Act would also prohibit the distribution of abortion information. These provisions were overturned by a Federal appellate court. The Encrypted Communications Privacy Act of 1996 outlines the standards by which electronic privacy and security can be assured. Without such encryption, financial services are unlikely to be appropriate for the Internet and the World Wide Web, and copyright protection cannot be applied. However, the Clinton administration insists that a "back door" escrow decryption key to such encryption technology be provided to law enforcement. Industry professionals claim that such technology will not be saleable overseas.

Germany restricted access to Internet sites featuring sexual material and Neo-Nazism, forcing American company CompuServe to block access to such areas for the entire German nation. In late February, H & R Block spun off its consumer on-line service, CompuServe. IBM and Sears, Roebuck & Company sold the on-line service Prodigy to a team of Prodigy managers and an investment company headed by former Viacom executive, Edward Bennett. In early March AT & T offered its customers low cost access to the Internet and World Wide Web, with MCI quickly following suit. However, with the proliferation of low-cost and/or flat rate Internet service providers (ISPs), commercial on-line services are finding it difficult to hold on to customers. America Online announced a discount for heavy users in late June to stem the erosion of its customer base. Some cable companies are entering the ISP business, albeit in a limited way. Both Time Warner and TCI cable companies have offered regional customers such service. PBS entered a joint venture with the Williams Companies to provide business education via the Internet. The planned venture will be called The Business Channel. In early August, a software failure closed down the online giant America On-Line for 19 hours.

Despite the commercial success of the Internet and the World Wide Web, even Bill Gates of Microsoft conceded that it was unlikely that full length films would be available via the Internet in the near future.

A Nielsen Media Research/ Commercenet report estimating Internet usage at 22 million Americans, 16 or older, was disputed by a number of academics, who suggested that Internet traffic was perhaps 20-25% lower than Nielsen reports had originally suggested. Nielsen's revised report shows that it is still apparent that nearly 20 million Americans utilize these new electronic means of communications regularly.

Sun Microsystems developed a prototype of a dedicated Internet access computer, planned to retail at less than $500. Oracle Systems also plans to market such a device. These stripped-down machines would have no internal hard drive, very little memory and restricted operating software, but would feature state-of-the-art networking capabilities. Software for these machines would be downloaded from the Internet or a local host computer. Microsoft introduced a new operating system, Windows CE, for communications, entertainment and portable computing devices.

Game industry giant Acclaim announced in April that they would no longer be developing cartridge-based games, citing the success of CD-based game titles. On the same front, Nintendo delayed the launch of its long-awaited 64-bit game player until September of 1996. The Sony PlayStation became the best-selling game system on the market, and a mid-year price reduction could assure the platform's dominance through the 1996 holiday season. Perhaps due to the growing predominance of the PlayStation, Sega's sales of its 32-bit game machine have been disappointing and Sega's chief executive Thomas J. Kalinske resigned. The 3DO game player neared the end of its life cycle and 3DO announced that they would focus on software production for other platforms. Increased competition for the big 3 video game manufacturers may come from multiple player games played on the Internet. Several game systems already feature modems for this purpose and the Apple Pippin developed for the Japanese market can function both as a low-cost Internet access device and a game playing platform.

CORPORATE HISTORIES OF THE NETWORKS

ABC, INC.

ABC's predecessor, the Radio Corporation of America (RCA) owned two radio networks, the Blue and the Red. In 1941, the FCC decreed that the same company could not own two networks, so RCA incorporated the Blue under the name of American Broadcasting System and established it as an independent subsidiary. RCA then sold this network to Edward J. Noble, and in 1944, the name was changed to the American Broadcasting Company. ABC's first television broadcast was on April 19, 1948 with "On the Corner". Later in the year, ABC scored two "firsts": the live broadcast of an opera (Verdi's "Otello") from the Metropolitan Opera House in New York and a TV documentary, "The Marshall Plan." ABC merged with United Paramount Theatres in 1952. This merger was engineered by Leonard H. Goldenson, then the president of UPT. The new company was called American Broadcasting-Paramount Theatres, Inc. During the 1950's, ABC began to operate at a profit although it had to struggle fiercely to acquire new affiliates. In 1954, ABC made a deal with Walt Disney to acquire a 35% interest in Disneyland and all TV programs produced by Disney. The following year, ABC signed an exclusive rights contract with Warner Bros. for TV programming.

In the Fall of 1962, ABC introduced color programming for the fall season which was expanded in 1966 to include full color broadcasting. In 1965, AB-PT's name was changed to American Broadcasting Companies, Inc. The 1960's also introduced blockbuster theatrical movies to TV with spectacular rating results when "The Bridge on the River Kwai" was viewed (in 1966) by 60 million Americans. In 1967, the ABC evening news was expanded from 15 minutes to a half-hour, and Joey Bishop inaugurated ABC's late-night talk show programming.

In 1972, ABC was able to operate at a profit for the first time in ten years. In the 1976-77 season, ABC took first place in the ratings race for the first time. In 1976, Barbara Walters joined ABC, becoming the first anchorwoman in television history. The mini-series "Roots" appeared on ABC in 1977 and became the highest-rated program of all time. This helped immensely in the ratings race, and credit must go in large part to Fred Silverman who, two years before, had joined the company as president of ABC International. He left in 1978 to go to NBC.

The decade of the Eighties was a turbulent one for the networks as cable and home video began whittling away their audiences. In 1985, ABC agreed to be purchased by Capital Cities Communications. The merged company's name was changed to Capital Cities/ABC, Inc. ABC held second place in the ratings from 1979 to 1983 when it dropped to third position. It was unable to rise from third until 1987-88 when it displaced CBS in second place, primarily because of the World Series and the Superbowl. It remained second in 1988-89 and 1989-90. In the latter season, ABC had the distinction of broadcasting the most talked-about new series of the period, "Twin Peaks," and the highest-rated new series, "America's Funniest Home Videos." Daniel B. Burke replaced Frederick J. Pierce as president and chief operating officer. There were also sweeping reductions in personnel in the interests of economy and streamlining. Budget cuts notwithstanding, Capital Cities/ABC chairman Thomas Murphy pledged ABC would not scrimp on programming.

Profits at the end of 1990 rose about $70 million. Of the three networks, ABC won the ratings battle in news coverage of the war in the Persian Gulf. For two seasons in a row the network could boast having the only new series in the top ten: "America's Funniest People" (1990-91) and "Home Improvement" (1991-92). Capital Cities/ABC is a partner in ESPN, the highly successful cable TV sports channel and two other cable TV services—Arts & Entertainment and Lifetime. ABC was the only network in the 1992-93 season to gain ground, moving into second place behind CBS, from its previous third place standing. During the season, Robert A. Iger became the new network president. The network was the first to sign a deal with a cable operator (in this case Continental Cablevision) allowing its stations to be carried on cable without paying a fee. In 1994, the company signed an affiliation deal with E.W.Scripps Company to switch several of their stations over to ABC. The big event of 1995 was the $19 billion acquisition of Capital Cities/ABC by the Walt Disney Company, said to be the second largest corporate takeover in history.

COLUMBIA BROADCASTING SYSTEM, INC.

CBS began in 1927 as a radio network with 16 stations, United Independent Broadcasters, Inc., founded by Arthur Judson, a concert tour manager and backed by Louis Sterling, president of the Columbia Phonograph Company. Later other investors were invited in, the most prominent of whom was William S. Paley. On September 26, 1928, at the age of 27, Paley became president of the firm whose name was changed to the Columbia Broadcasting System. Paley introduced many innovations to radio broadcasting, the most significant of which was the signing of an agreement in 1931 with Paramount Pictures whereby film stars were heard on radio for the first time. This laid the groundwork for the CBS policy in television from the outset to feature shows built around stars (Ed Sullivan, Lucille Ball, Arthur Godfrey, Jack Benny, Burns & Allen, Garry Moore, etc.).

CBS was in TV as early as 1931 when it began regularly scheduled TV programming over experimental station W2XAB in New York City. In 1941, CBS began weekly broadcasts of black-and-white TV programming over WCBS-TV in New York. By 1948, it had 30 affiliated stations.

In 1951, CBS broadcast the first live coast-to-coast TV transmission between New York and San Francisco. 1951 was also the year that Bill Gordon designed the CBS Eye which was destined to become one of the most famous logos in the world.

In 1952, CBS opened Television City in Hollywood—the industry's first self-contained TV production facility. "Playhouse 90" made its debut in 1956, but the big event of the decade was the 1951 debut of "I Love Lucy", a series regarded as the progenitor of the situation-comedy. In the field of soap operas, CBS was both leader and winner, virtually monopolizing that market from 1951 to 1956. In 1951, it introduced "Search for Tomorrow," which was to become the longest-running show in that genre. This was followed by "Love of Life" (1951) and "The Guiding Light" (1952), both overnight hits.

In the late '50s and through the 60's and 70's, CBS reigned as king of prime time ratings, maintaining its long-running lead with such successes as "Gunsmoke" (1957), "The Defenders" (1961), "The Beverly Hillbillies" (1962), "All in the Family" (1972) and "Dallas" (1978). Also helping was "60 Minutes" the news-oriented show which, by 1995, had remained in the Top Ten prime time shows for 18 consecutive seasons.

CBS began the turbulent Eighties with a new president, Thomas Wyman (replacing John D. Backe). In 1985, Ted Turner made an unfriendly bid for CBS, forcing the network to buy up 21% of its own stock to thwart the takeover. Laurence A. Tisch, a former theatre chain executive, had become the major stockholder in CBS when, in 1986, he instigated sweeping changes in the interests of cost-cutting and efficiency. 700 jobs were eliminated at the CBS Broadcast Group. Tisch also removed Wyman as president, name himself chief executive officer and induced founder William Paley to return to active duty as acting chairman of the board. It was quite a jolt to the company when, in 1985-86, it slipped to second place and stayed there through the following season. In 1987-88, CBS came in third for the first time in TV history. In 1988, Tisch shuffled executive ranks again, naming Howard Stringer, previously president of CBS News, president of the Broadcasting Group. The network's new management team sought to devise a strategy to pull the network out of its decline in the prime-time ratings. Jeff Sagansky, former head of Tri-Star Pictures, was brought in as president of the entertainment division in 1990.

Starting in 1991-92, CBS became the number one network for three years in a row based on the success of such shows as "60 Minutes" (the number one show for both '91-'92 and '92-'93), "Murphy Brown," "Murder She Wrote," and "Northern Exposure." CBS was hit hard by Fox's 1994 purchase of twelve stations from New World Communications, losing eight affiliates. However, the following summer, Westinghouse Electric Corp. acquired the final independent network for $5.4 billion creating the largest collection of tv and radio stations in America. The 1994-95 season was a low point for the network as it plunged from number one to number three. By season's end, CBS had the dubious distinction of being the first of the three majors to fall into 4th place, coming in below Fox for the last week before the debut of the 1995-96 season. In late 1995, the venerable news program "60 Minutes" and CBS came under fire for refusing to air a controversial segment on the tobacco industry. Critics of CBS alleged that the network capitulated to the threat of legal action, rather than actual litigation. During this season the network placed third again.

FOX BROADCASTING COMPANY

Fox Broadcasting, a subsidiary of Rupert Murdoch's News Company and owner of Twentieth Century-Fox, began broadcasting with the late night "Late Show with Joan Rivers" on October 9, 1986. The next year, on April 5, 1987, the fledgling network began prime-time broadcasts on Sunday nights only. The initial line-up consisted of "Married With Children" and "The Tracey Ullman Show", which featured animated interludes of a dysfunctional cartoon family named the Simpsons. Three new shows were added in the following weeks, including "21 Jump Street", which helped launch the career of actor Johnny Depp. In July of that year, Fox launched a Saturday night prime time line up. From 1989 to 1993, the network steadily added programming and expanded its prime time coverage to a full seven nights a week. Originally the network aimed its programming at a young urban demographic. Particular attention was given to African-American oriented programming, with comedy series such as "Roc", "Martin", "Living Single" and "In Living Color" (a weekly comedy-variety show which showcased not only the talents of Keenan Ivory Wayans and his brother Damon Wayans, but also comedian Jim Carrey). The youth market was provided with its first soap opera with "Beverly Hills 90210", and its successful spin-off "Melrose Place". Fox consistently programmed "risky" shows, even in the face of boycotts, most notably aimed at "Married With Children" and "Beverly Hills 90210". The network, feeling strong about its programming, slotted "The Simpsons" against NBC's top-rated sitcom "The Cosby Show" in 1991.

The network was also actively pursuing sports programming. In 1993, Fox won the rights to NFL football for four years, including the rights to 1997's Super Bowl XXXI. In 1994, Fox acquired the rights to broadcast NHL hockey and in 1995, Fox signed an agreement with Major League Baseball to broadcast weekly games, the 1996, 1998 and 2000 World Series, and 1997 and 1999 All Star Games.

Also in 1994, Fox premiered "The X-Files", a fiction series dedicated to exploring the bizarre, the unusual and the paranormal, all with a slant aimed at conspiracy buffs. It took a season to achieve ratings success, but "The X-Files" has become one of the most popular series on Fox and is fast becoming the most imitated series on television (in 1996, the networks have scheduled at least four new series that are very similar in areas of content). All of these programming decisions and experiments have paid off. In the 1994-95 broadcast season Nielsen ratings, Fox finished ahead of pioneer network CBS. Fox beat CBS yet again in November 1995. On October 7, 1996, Fox launched the new Fox News Channel on cable.

NATIONAL BROADCASTING COMPANY

NBC was an outgrowth of radio operations. Radio Corp. of America, General Electric and Westinghouse jointly launched a network in 1926 with 31 stations; 25 in a network called Red and 6 in a network called Blue. A year later, it was forced to sell the Blue network to ABC (see history of that network), keeping for itself the one known as Red. Television began for NBC in 1928, when on April 4, it acquired from the Federal Communications Commission a permit to operate an experimental station, W2XBS. Actual transmission from the Empire State Building did not begin until October 30, 1931. Eight years later, the network began broadcasting on a regular basis, beginning with the opening of the New York World's Fair on April 30, 1939.

NBC became a TV network on January 12, 1940, when two stations, WNBC-TV, New York, and WRGB-TV, Schenectady, New York, carried the first network programming. In June, 1941, the FCC granted NBC the first commercial TV license and a month later it had four advertisers signed up. After World War II, NBC scored two big "firsts." On June 19, 1946, Gillette became the first advertiser to sponsor a TV network show, the Joe Louis-Billy Conn boxing match. That same year, Bristol-Myers became the first sponsor of a network TV series, "Geographically Speaking."

NBC can also claim to be the first to introduce coast-to-coast network TV coverage. On September 4, 1951, when the U.S.—Japanese peace treaty was signed in San Francisco, NBC cameras were on hand. In 1952, NBC pioneered early morning programming when it introduced "The Today Show." NBC can also claim the first regularly scheduled network color series "The Marriage," launched in 1954. That same year it achieved the first west-to-east TV transmission with the telecast of the Tournament of Roses Parade in color.

At the start of the 1965-66 season, NBC declared it was the "only all-color network." In 1968, NBC introduced new forms of TV programming with "The Name of the Game," a series that incorporated feature-film elements into a 90-minute show. This then spawned the "NBC Mystery Movie."

In 1972, NBC broke new ground again when it introduced "The Tomorrow Show" shown from 1:00 a.m. to 2:00 a.m. This was a talk program and it demonstrated that in the early hours of the morning something more than re-runs and old movies could be shown. In 1974, another late-night show called "Weekend" was begun. The 1976 NBC telecast of "Gone with the Wind" drew the largest audience to that date for an entertainment program. In 1978, "Holocaust" attracted 107 million viewers and won 21 major awards. Such programs helped NBC in the ratings, but in 1976-77 it fell to third place, where it stayed until 1983-84.

Along with the other networks, NBC moved into a period of turmoil during the decade of the Eighties, fighting off rising costs and competition from cable TV and home video. In 1986, General Electric Corporation purchased RCA (NBC's parent) for $6.28 billion; GE, it will be remembered, helped launch the radio network in 1926 which led to the development of NBC-TV. This brought personnel changes led by the replacement of Grant A. Tinker as NBC chief executive officer by Robert Wright, although Wright was not given Tinker's chairman title, that being taken by John F. Welch of GE. Instead, Wright was named president as well as chief executive officer. Along with its competition, NBC started cutting staff and budgets in 1986. In 1984-85, NBC edged up to second place, and the following year it was ranked number one in prime-time viewing for the first time in the three decades of Nielsen ratings.

NBC held on to its first place standing for the following five seasons, through 1990-91. Long-time hit series in the five-year period included "The Golden Girls," "Cheers," and "The Cosby Show." Despite the network's number one standing, figures showed a steady decline in viewers. In May of 1991, Brandon Tartikoff, credited with pulling the network up from third place 11 years earlier, departed from NBC to become head of Paramount Pictures. When "The Cosby Show" ran its final first run episode on April 30, 1992, it became NBC's highest-rated series finale episode ever. The 1992 Summer Olympics also gave the network its widest ratings margin of all time. The 1994-95 season found NBC on top with its popular sitcom "Seinfeld" and the two most highly rated new series, "ER" and "Friends", both placing in the top ten. During the 1995-96 season, NBC was again ranked the number one network, with four of its Thursday night shows ranking in the overall top five. In the summer of 1996, NBC, in association with software giant Microsoft, launched a 24 hour cable and Internet news channel.

PUBLIC BROADCASTING SERVICE

In 1948, the FCC stopped issuing new television station licenses. American educators, fearful of the impact of unrestricted commercial broadcasting, pushed for the Commission to hold open channel slots for non-commercial, educational television broadcasts. In 1952, when the FCC freeze was lifted, 242 channels were reserved for educational television. America's first non-commercial educational television station was KUHT in Houston, started in 1953. By 1962, 75 educational stations were broadcasting around the country. As these stations shared roughly the same programming interests, a loose distribution network evolved, allowing locally-produced programs like "Children's Corner" to be circulated among these stations. Most of the programming was produced on a shoestring budget. In 1962, the federal government authorized $32 million in matching funds for the construction of new educational television broadcasting facilities. In 1967, a blue ribbon panel urged local and state governments to increase their financial support of "public television" and recommended that the federal government participate in the production of programming. To this end, the first Public Broadcasting Act was enacted. This law also created the Corporation for Public Broadcasting, a non-profit "steward" of the public funds committed to public broadcasting, and, not incidentally, a barrier against government interference in programming decisions. In 1969, the Public Broadcasting Service's charter was signed, with its main intent the establishment of a nation-wide program distribution service. 1969 saw the premiere of an hour long, daily children's variety show, named "Sesame Street", which targeted preschoolers with fast-paced educational programming and featured live performers, cartoons and Muppets developed exclusively for the show by Jim Henson.

In 1970, PBS' first year as a "network", its programming included series as widely varied as "Washington Week in Review", "Civilisation", "The French Chef" and "Soul!" By 1973, PBS had more than 1 million individual subscribers. PBS and its member stations were responsible for bringing to U.S. audiences critically acclaimed BBC programming under the flag of "Masterpiece Theatre", which included such classics of television as "Upstairs Downstairs" and "I, Claudius". In 1976, PBS began broadcasting closed-captioned programming for the hearing impaired. In 1978, PBS became the first American network to distribute its programs by satellite.

Although some portion of PBS and its member stations' budgets are provided by federal and state government funding and corporate gifts, PBS and its member stations have continued to rely upon the contributions of individual viewers to stay afloat. In the late 1980's and early 1990's, PBS and the CPB suffered an enormous amount of criticism by government officials for an alleged "liberal" bias, and later in the 90's, for not being "self sufficient". Although a notable few PBS series have achieved some financial success in other areas (primarily children's programming in the home video and product licensing fields), it is important to note that the production of most of the all-important local educational and public affairs programming never breaks even. In the face of continuing cuts in government funding, PBS programmers have accepted what may have been inevitable, the inclusion of commercial sponsorship (and actual commercials) in programming. In response to continuing attacks on the alleged "liberal bias" of PBS, an animated series, "Tales from the Book of Virtues", based on conservative William Bennett's writings was aired in September of 1996.

UPN (UNITED PARAMOUNT NETWORKS)

UPN began broadcasting on January 16, 1995 as a joint venture between United Television/Chris Craft Industries, Inc. and Paramount Television/Viacom Inc. The fledgling network's first official hit was the newest entry in the long-lived Star Trek franchise, "Star Trek: Voyager." Paramount TV executive Lucy Salhany was named president of the network. UPN currently broadcasts two nights of prime-time programming weekly, a Saturday afternoon movie, and plans to add an afternoon children's programming block. In the 1995-96 season, UPN debuted 8 new prime time series.

RECENT UPN SERIES

1994-95: Star Trek: Voyager.

1995-96: Moesha, Nowhere Man, Paranormal Borderline.

1996-97: Goode Behavior, An American Family, Homeboys in Outer Space.

BRITISH TELEVISION YEAR IN REVIEW

The major development in the U.K. television industry in 1996 was the awarding by the ITC (Independent Television Commission) of the Channel 5 license to Channel 5 Broadcasting Ltd. The company bid £22 million to secure the contract. It plans a nightly hospital soap, 14 hours per week of children's programs and hourly news bulletins in association with ITN (Independent Television News). Initially, it will cover some 79% of the U.K. population, or 16.4 million of the 22.5 million homes that have television.

In addition to Channel 5, expansion of the commercial television industry has continued apace. ITC maintained the momentum of local delivery service licensing and issued 96 new cable and satellite program licenses. Revenues increased but the pace of growth on advertising revenue was outstripped by that of subscription income, the main source of funding for cable and satellite services. The cable industry passed a major milestone reaching its one millionth subscriber.

The new cable and satellite channels of the last two years include: European Business News, SelecTV and LiveTV, the Disney Channel, the Sci-Fi Channel, the History Channel, Sky Sports Gold and the Racing Channel. An ITC survey of viewing in cable homes indicated that 40% were watching ITV and BBC1. This compared to 35% the previous year. In homes which subscribe to the film channels, those channels were the most watched of cable and satellite channels. The balance of children's viewing is in the other direction: over half the viewing time of 12-15 year olds was devoted to cable and satellite with the Cartoon Network beating BBC1 into second place in share of viewing.

BSkyB remains the dominant satellite player with a record 66% increase in profits to £257 million. The total number of subscribers jumped 16% to 5.5 million while overall turnover increased 30% to £1 billion. At the same time, the group is pressing ahead with a move to digital technology that will allow it to offer up to 500 channels. Commenting on this, Sam Chisolm, Chairman and Chief Executive of BSKyB, said the new digital service will be launched in the second half of 1997 initially with 200 channels. This increase in capacity will allow it to schedule movies at a variety of times and will increase the scope for 'pay-per-view' television.

At the same time as the commercial networks report their success, the British Broadcasting Corporation (BBC) with its new charter claims it has had a "golden" period of programs, is ready to face the digital era, and its attention would now be turned to improving the quality and appeal of early evening entertainment and morning schedules. 95% of households still tune into the BBC for at least two hours every week. A typical home turns to the BBC Television and Radio for over 44 hours each week, maintaining its 45% share of all U.K. viewing and listening. The BBC's annual report shows it to be not only creatively strong, but effectively and professionally managed. Borrowings have been reduced and should be eliminated by the end of 1997. A further £100 million was saved through more efficient working practices and most of this was, in turn, invested in new programs. Net benefit to the BBC from its commercial arm, BBC Worldwide Ltd., rose from £53 million to £77 million.

Revenue from licensing of television programs such as "People's Century" and "Pride and Prejudice" to other channels showed a 15% increase, excluding sales to the United States. BBC World, the international news and information channel, is now available in more than 40 million homes globally while BBC Prime, the European entertainment channel has four million subscribers. The next challenge for Worldwide Television is to develop its business in the USA. BBC Video's top best-seller was "Pride and Prejudice" with sales of £4 million.

The BBC is the public broadcaster funded by the government imposed license fee on owners of TV sets. Its income has shown a modest growth and now stands at more than £2.4 billion, assisted by reduced license fee evasion and increased revenue from BBC's commercial activities. Sales of licenses have risen to a record 21 million. The license cost is currently £89.50.

The majority of overseas material on the networks still originates in the USA although in recent years, there has been a fall-off in the popularity of bulk American imports such as "Dallas" and "Dynasty" which used to attract audiences of 15 million. Such programs today are bringing about half that audience. This is despite the fact that 80% of money spent by British broadcasters on imports still goes to American shows, they occupy only a small proportion of the peak-time schedules on BBC1 and ITV. Also, Australian series and films continue to succeed in Great Britain.

Furthermore, the government is to relax the rules on ITV ownership. Companies will no longer be limited to holding only 2 ITV licenses. Instead, ownership will be limited to 15% of the total television audience. National newspaper groups will also enjoy greater freedom to enter the TV market since the rule restricting their investment to 20% of a single television license will be abolished. So, as we have repeatedly reported, the British television markets can only become more lucrative, especially with a record 22.5 million television license holders.

BRITISH HOME VIDEO YEAR IN REVIEW

Both the renting and sales of pre-recorded video cassettes continue to grow apace in the British market. With the rental sales (up 4%) and retail (up 11%), the total retail value has been estimated at £1.2 billion. 81.5% of the population have a video recorder and 26% of households have two or more. It has also been estimated that video revenues produce 50% of the total investment in films. "The Lion King" was the best selling video of 1995 which means that Buena Vista has topped the chart every year this decade. They would have taken the top three places had it not been for the remarkable success of "Riverdance." The most successful British film of all time in both the cinemas and on video rental became the best selling film of 1995. "Four Weddings and a Funeral" was released for a limited period at Easter and sold enough to withstand the challenges of the blockbusters, the strongest of which was "Batman Forever." "Jungle Book" remains at the top of the all time chart.

Just over 460 titles were released as rentals in 1995, fewer than in 1994. A quarter of these were dramas. In contrast, comedy accounted for a much higher share of rentals than of releases and was the most rented genre of all, helped by the success of films like "Forrest Gump," "The Mask" and "Dumb and Dumber." According to a BVA (British Videogram Association) survey, Warner Home Entertainment had seven titles in the year's top twenty which helped them to lead the company ranking for the third consecutive year. CIC had been in the lead for most of the year but had to settle for second place when "Batman Forever" propelled Warner back to the top. CIC did gain significantly over prior years as did Buena Vista, Polygram and First Independent. BBC Video's top-seller was "Pride and Prejudice," with sales of almost £4 million. BVA members had a combined share of 90%. The average price paid by the consumer for a video is £10.99.

The Rank Organisation is a leading supplier of products and services to the film and television industries, with exclusive supply contracts with a number of Hollywood studios. Major businesses include video duplication, film processing and cinema exhibition. Over 80 million US households own a video cassette recorder, for which Americans purchased some 730 million cassettes in 1995. Rank reports that demand for pre-recorded videos continues to grow and the group's volume increased by a quarter. It is investing $70 million in expansion of its duplication facilities in North Little Rock, Arkansas.

The Federation Against Copyright Theft (FACT) campaign against video piracy gathered momentum last year with the seizure of illicit VCRs and TVs, rather than just quantities of cassettes. Intelligence is improving and the heavier penalties imposed for piracy by the new Proceeds of Crime Act will be a further deterrent. This new law means that convicted pirates could have their possessions seized by the courts. The number of searches conducted by FACT is leveling off at about 1,400 per year, but the figures for fines and costs, up 30% in 1994, show that searches are becoming increasingly effective.

At the same time, the BBFC (British Board of Film Classification) reported that the number of videos cut due to content has been slightly down despite more strict regulations. The main fall was in '18' category reflecting the recent tendency of British distributors to steer away from the kind of violence that has given rise to so much criticism in recent years.

Founded in 1991, the ITC was created by Parliament under the terms of the Broadcasting Act 1990 to license and regulate all commercially-funded television in the United Kingdom, whether delivered terrestrially (i.e., ITV, Channel 4 and Channel 5) or by cable or satellite, public teletext and certain other text and data services. The ITC regulates these services through license conditions and through its various codes on program content, advertising, sponsorship and technical standards.

PROGRAM SUPPLIERS AND HOME VIDEO
COMPANIES BY COUNTRY

TV & VIDEO WORLD MARKET

The following is a list of companies, associations and organizations by category of service and in alphabetical order by country. All country code and city code numbers appear within parenthesis before the telephone numbers. Estimates of television sets, VCRs cable service and satellite service, when available, are for 1995.

AFRICA

Africa is financially the poorest of all of the continents and the least served by television broadcasters of all sorts (except in notable examples such as South Africa and the Arab nations of the Middle East). Most television stations are state-controlled and subject to government censorship. In addition, many of the states in Africa are predominantly Moslem, and Moslem traditions and customs must be honored by broadcasters.

ASIA

Asia's start-up media companies often begin broadcasting and cable operations without government approval and with disregard for existing copyright laws, occasionally retransmitting Western satellite broadcasts without consent. Many countries will not allow foreign companies to own media companies. The U.S. threatened to hold off any agreement regulating international telecommunications if it was not allowed access to Asian markets. With the transition of Hong Kong's governance to mainland Chinese control scheduled for 1997, other "Young Lions" nations such as Malaysia are poised to enter the lucrative satellite broadcasting market.

THE EUROPEAN UNION

The European television market is growing at a faster pace than any other market in the world. Pay-TV revenues grew to a reported $4.75 billion, while cable revenues rose to $4.6 billion. 98 new channels started up in Europe in 1995.

Citing the need for a fair share of the marketplace and the necessity of preserving "cultural and linguistic diversity", the European Union is standing firm in its stand that at least 51% of all TV programming must be of European production, and extended those protective quotas to emerging technologies for the next ten years. However, Britain, Germany and the Netherlands oppose the quotas. This stance is most probably in response to the fact that American programming may control as much as 70% of the European Union's market.

The "Europe Without Frontiers" project continues apace, with German media conglomerate Bertelsmann, CLT of Luxembourg, BSkyB of Britain, Canal Plus of France and other companies attempting to reach an agreement on technical standards to provide digital pay-TV services via satellite, although such negotiations have been subject to much tension and vacillation between the parties, and by the early Fall of 1996, the German end of the alliance appeared to be falling apart. EU antitrust specialists will most likely be scrutinizing any such agreements. The European pay-TV market is expected to grow by 25% in the next decade. Europe stands to be the first market for digital TV in the world, and such steps will place Europe at least a decade ahead of the United States.

American companies like Viacom's MTV and CNBC are finding that the European market is demanding that services be more customized to local tastes. For example, CNBC has formed an alliance with The Financial Times to provide European business news.

While video piracy still remains a problem, particularly in the former Soviet bloc nations, most European nations have seen an increase in video sales in the past couple of years. This growth seems to be at the expense of the video rental business, which showed an average market-wide decline in the European Union over the past several years. EU technical standards groups are arguing the introduction of the DVD in Europe, citing the maze of differing video standards across the continent.

LATIN AMERICA

American companies, from cable providers and satellite services to programmers and producers, have set their sights on the expanding Latin American market, with the added benefit of being able to offer the same services to America's growing Spanish-speaking population. Westinghouse has purchased Spanish language news service, Teleticinas. TCI has plans to expand into Argentina and the Hearst Group plans to start up a cartoon channel based on some of its popular newspaper comic strip characters.

A consortium of investors intends to supply Latin America with a 192 channel satellite broadcast service, to be named Galaxy Latin America. Dick Clark International Cable Ventures plan to build fiber optic cable networks.

THE MIDDLE EAST

Three major companies have been formed to provide satellite broadcasts to the Arab world, Middle Eastern Broadcasting Center (MBC), Arab Radio and Television, and the Saudi-backed Orbit Radio and Television Network. These commercial broadcasters will compete with traditional government broadcasters, such as the Egyptian Satellite Channel (ESC). The News Corporations STARTV signed a last minute agreement with Orbit to provide multichannel services to the Middle East.

American media giant TCI has stated plans to invest in Argentina's telecommunications industry when the country eases state sponsored monopolies in 1997.

A new law was passed levying a 10% tax on video sales and rentals. As Argentina's video industry is in a battle against piracy, this law will help solve problems with the six-month window between theatrical and video release.

Nine Network averaged 38.9% of the national audience in 1995. Seven Network, with a 35.8% share, has completely restructured its management, naming Kerry Stokes as chairman, and overhauled its news programming in the hopes of capturing the lead. Seven also purchased Golden West Network. Seven's profits were up 18% in the last 6 months of 1995. Ten Network showed a solid 13% increase in net profits in the last quarter of 1995 and the first quarter of 1996, but came in third in audience with 25.3%. Foxtel, Australia's largest cable system, won a landmark case allowing it to retransmit broadcast signals. Galaxy, Australia's first pay-TV service more than doubled its subscriber base in 1995 to 82,000.

French TV giant Canal Plus plans to offer digital TV services via cable to the French speaking population of Belgium in 1997. Canal Plus already serves nearly 200,000 Belgian households with its standard format broadcasts. TRL-TV added a second channel in 1995. The Cartoon Network was effectively granted permission to provide its programming when a Belgian appellate court ruled that its programming was within the EU standards for European content. Belgian cable systems were also allowed to carry pay-per-view services and home shopping services.

TELEVISION STATISTICS

Latest information published by Statistics Canada (StatsCan), a federal government agency. All figures are in Canadian dollars.

TV REVENUES

The total revenue of the broadcasting industry (television and radio) in 1994, including the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation (CBC), was $2.61 billion, an increase of 2.6% since 1993. Privately owned television broadcasting reported a $38.4 million profit in 1994 compared to $58.5 million in 1993. Excluding the CBC, there were 110 licensed TV stations, with 108 in operation in 1994.

In 1994, total program expenses of private television broadcasters totalled $621 million, and net profit after tax for private stations declined with a profit of $7.1 million in 1994 compared to $10.3 million in 1993.

The television operating revenues of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation (CBC) were $348,476 million in 1993, and the net cost of CBC operations increased from $1,069 million to $1,122.8 million.

NUMBER OF TV SETS

In 1995 colour televisions were in 11.076 million households, with 5.593 million homes having two or more colour sets. In 1995 the province of Ontario again led with estimates of 2.023 million households owning one television and 2.060 million owning two or more (compared to 1.634 million with one and 2.153 million with two or more in 1994). The province of Québec followed with estimates of 1.398 million owning one television and 1.505 with two or more (compared to 1.178 million owning one television and 1.518 million with two or more in 1994).

TELEVISION VIEWING:

The following data was collected from Canadians two years and over, during a seven-day period, by means of a diary-type questionnaire, recorded at quarter-hour intervals during three separate weeks in November/95.

In 1995 more time was spent watching TV, bringing to a halt the modest decline from 24.2 hours weekly in 1986 to 22.7 hours weekly in 1994. 1995 stats showed an average of 23.2 hours weekly spent watching TV across Canada, up 30 minutes more than the previous year. Much of this increase was due in part to new cable specialty services becoming available in 1995. Viewing by teenagers (12-17) and children (2-11) increased slightly with teens spending 17.5 hours weekly viewing TV in 1995 and children averaging 17.8 hours. Young men (18-24) watched only 15.1 hours a week, and young women in the same age group 19.0 hours a week. Individuals over 50 watched the most television: men (50-59) 24.1 hours a week, (over 60) 33.0 hours a week, with women tuning in more than men - (50-59) 29.4 hours a week, (over 60) 37.2 hours a week. In Québec francophone viewers spent more time in front of the television set than anglophones (26.7 hours vs. 23.0 hours), and viewing among age and sex francophone groups in Québec was usually higher than corresponding groups of citizens across the country. TV viewing increased countrywide in the age groups 50-59 and 60+.

CABLE TV REVENUES/SUBSCRIBERS

[Data based on annual returns from cable television licensees and used to generate information on basic tier services and discretionary and other services of the cable television industry] In 1995 revenues for the entire cable television industry totalled $2,532.3 million, an 8.7% increase over 1994, and basic tier cable revenues were $1,759.1 up 4.9% from 1994. Total revenue from discretionary and other services was $686.2 million, an increase of 20.3% from 1994.

Expenses for the industry were $2,352.3 million in 1995, a 17.6% increase over 1994. Net profit after income taxes for the entire cable television industry was $325.9 million, an increase of 25.6% over 1994. There were 7,231,028 direct subscribers and 560,078 indirect subscribers in 1995 compared to 7,087,013 and 746,178 in 1994, representing an overall decrease of 0.5% from the previous year.

CABLE LICENSEES

In 1995 there were 2,050 cable television systems licensed by the Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission (CRTC) across all the provinces, with 50 of these under development and not operating.

VCRs

Out of a total of 11,243 million responding households sampled in 1995 an estimated 7,423 million owned one VCR, and 1,809 million owned two or more. The province of Ontario led with an estimated 2.775 million households owning one VCR and 716,000 households with two or more, out of 4.143 million responding. As real wages increase and the middle class has more and more access to consumer credit, the rate of VCR ownership will continue to increase, particularly in the Regions. Renting a video cassette is the cheapest and easiest form of entertainment. Video stores are in every barrio, no matter how poor the district may be. The duty rate on the importation of VCRs is a 20% surtax on top of the basic duty rate of 11% on all imported goods. Piracy is estimated at 30% of legitimate sales. The Association of Video Distributors has been very successful in exposing video bootleggers.

Columbia TriStar International Television plans to offer 400 hours of Mandarin programming for the Chinese market. The Chinese aerospace industry suffered a setback in its program of providing launch services for commercial telecommunication satellites when a Long March rocket exploded on take-off. China's thriving piracy industry in videos, CDs and computer software forced American trade negotiators to reconsider China's Most Favored Nation trade status, and nearly impose sanctions against $2 billion in Chinese imports (with Chinese retaliations also threatened). The crisis was averted in mid-Summer 1996, with the Chinese government agreeing to begin policing manufacturers better. Although the Chinese government has made some efforts to stem the illegal practices, it has failed to stop the piracy. Some 31 factories are allegedly engaged in the piracy of copyrighted materials. However, Warner Bros. Home Video and MGM have signed a deal to allow a Chinese company to manufacture licensed copies of movies.

Television advertising increased by 7% with over $3 billion in revenues in 1995. Domestic French television production has also increased and French broadcaster TF1 showed ratings increases for domestically-produced shows, directly competing with U.S. productions. Cable and satellite broadcasting have been gradually eroding the market shares of the major French broadcasters. Satellite broadcasting revenue was up 30% in 1995, and with the growth of the European digital satellite broadcasting industry is expected to service over 1.25 million French homes by the end of 1996.

Sales now dominate the video market, with some estimates showing that sell-through now exceeds rental income by 500%.

Germany is the world's third largest industrial superpower and Germany's share of Western Europe's television business is 20.5%, and expected to grow to over 25% in the next decade. TV revenues from all sectors are estimated at $1.7 billion for 1996. Bertelsmann's Ufa and CLT proposed a merger that may take years to clear EU courts. After much discussion, major German satellite broadcasters Kirch, Bertelsmann, Deutsche Telekom, CLT, the two government broadcasters and French pay-TV company Canal Plus have agreed on a single standard for digital television. However, due to disputes regarding the manufacturing rights and formats for home digital decoders, by early October the digital alliance had nearly splintered. The start-up costs for the proposed digital broadcast project are expected to exceed $700 million. The Kirch Group signed a deal with Viacom and MCA for television programming and films, following Kirch's earlier agreement (rumored to be nearly $1 billion) with Columbia TriStar Television. The Kirch Group has also co-produced the Fall '96 television series "Dark Skies" with Columbia TriStar. Meanwhile, The News Corp. was forging a deal with CLT to provide digital TV services to Germany. ARD, Germany's oldest public broadcaster, was spared possible termination when the 11 regional stations who make up ARD's loose network agreed to distribute ARD's programming for at least another year. Despite decreased profits in 1995, RTL, Europe's largest TV network, planned major expansions in the upcoming years, including the launch of satellite broadcasting. RTL planned to cut costs by cutting the number of programs it imports—mostly from American suppliers. This did not stop RTL from agreeing to distribute MCA's products in Germany for 10 years. ZDF signed a deal with Microsoft to offer online programming. Nicklodeon Germany filed a suit claiming that the German cable industry regulatory board preferentially reserved a cable slot for ARD and ZDF's joint venture children's channel, in accordance with Germany's "must carry" law.

The number of TV viewers dropped by 25% in 1996, due to the bad quality of the local TV serials, TV films and many talk shows. In addition, a great number of advertising spots interrupt programming. Fines are levied by the National AudioVisual Council to stations violating the lawful ad time restrictions. Consequently, the total ad income dropped by 20.3% and some channels are in the red. Besides the State Channels, O Hellejiki Teleorassi (ET I, II & III), there are 220 other private channels operating all over the country, of which only 12 are operating legally.

Video piracy is epidemic. It is estimated that American companies are losing about $59 million annually to pirates in Greece. Many TV regional channels are prosecuted every year by the Society of Protection of AudioVisual Works and violators pay heavy fines.

Hong Kong reverts to mainland China's control in 1997. Although the mainland government is aware of Hong Kong's pre-eminence as a provider of broadcast media and programming to the Chinese-speaking population of Southeast Asia, no firm assurances have been given that business will be allowed to continue as before. Public programmer Radio Television Hong Kong (which leases time on TVA & TVB) refused the mainland Chinese government's request for free air-time prior to the reversion. NBC International launched a new English-language channel for the Asian market in April.

Deregulation of Hong Kong's pay TV market was delayed until at least 1998, freezing out many companies who wished entry into the profitable market, including STAR-TV. As a compromise, two video-on-demand channels are expected to be added in 1997. Editor's note: In future editions on the Almanac, Hong Kong will be covered in the China section.

Main broadcasters: TVB Jade (Cantonese), ATV Home (Cantonese), TVB Pearl (English), ATV World (English).

RAI announced that it would allot more than half of its annual $300 million budget to new Italian productions, reversing a trend of increased acquisitions in recent years. RAI has been thwarted in its attempt to enter the pay TV market by the Italian government. Former Prime Minister Silvio Berlusconi's media holding took serious damage in 1995 and 1996, with critics charging that laws were written to Mediaset's benefit, including a law allowing cable carriers to enter the telephone business.
Mediaset, achieving ratings success with Hollywood programming, was threatened by quotas being raised to a proposed 51%. Mediaset and RAI will be subject to legislation forcing each to turn over a land broadcast channel to public broadcasting. TCI, Canal Plus, Bertelsman, BSKyB, and Generale d'Images announced plans to set up an Italian digital pay television service.

The Italian government has set up a new anti-piracy task force to deal with home video counterfeiters who have made Italy the piracy capitol of Western Europe (and who have made an estimated $324 million in 1995). Beotleg videos are estimated to do better than their legitimate counterparts in Italy.

The head of the Tokyo Broadcast System was replaced after a scandal erupted over an unaired documentary about the Aum Shinryku cult.

A Japanese plan to begin 40-channel digital satellite broadcasts in September 1996 was bolstered when major broadcasters and movie distributors joined in the venture. Japanese hardware manufacturers plan to begin offering an entire line of high-quality digital home entertainment machines to take advantage of the new technology.

JVC introduced a digital VCR able to digitize and record digitize analog video broadcasts on a standard VHS cassette.

Malaysian censorship rules may be eased, allowing "adult-oriented" programming to be shown after 10 p.m. Strict Muslim censorship standards forced either the cutting or outright banning of programming that did not meet local standards. Malaysia debuted Mega TV, a five-channel pay TV system, in late 1995. The Malaysian government announced plans to build a satellite center in Kuala Lumpur, positioning Malaysia as a major force in Southeast Asian telecommunications.

All of the five centers of Pakistan Television Corporation Ltd. (PTV) produce and transmit color programs, including foreign films around the clock. Three centers of Shaikmar Television Co., (which is a state-controlled network) are leased out to a private company, NTM, for five hours from 7 to 12 pm. The remaining time is fed by CNN live. One more channel, Shaheen PTV, has started its transmission recently. PTV also exports a good number of its programs to other countries, particularly to those where large numbers of Pakistanis and Indians live.

The main source of income for PTV are commercials and license fees of Rs.250 per year for domestic and Rs.500 per year for commercial sets. All PTV programs are now broadcast via satellite in 38 neighboring countries. The second channel project went on the air in 1995. It is being used mostly for educational purposes and is described as ETC or PTV 2. There are at present two studios for ETC at Islamabad for recording purposes, and an Academy for the training of artists and technicians.

Dish antennas have strongly affected the VCR/VCP business, as the prices of dish technology have gone down considerably—between Rs. 8,000 and Rs.15,000 (the more expensive dishes cover a much larger area). A registration fee of Rs.1000 and Rs.2000 is imposed annually on dish antennae, but few pay. Cable operators charge between Rs. 30 and Rs. 100 per month.

There are two kinds of video shops—one deals in sales, the other in rentals only. The number of video distributors is countless, but there are about a dozen big ones, who 'import' video films from all countries except India. Their main business is Indian films and sexy pictures. Video viewers love to see films full of sex, violence and thrills. Because of strict censorship, moviegoers cannot see such films in cinemas. Therefore pirated, uncensored videos are popular.

A regional broadcaster, CINV, that started out as an illegal pirate operation has become one of Russia's top broadcasters, with an audience of nearly 100 million. Lower advertising rates than major Russian broadcasters have helped the station grow. Turner International set up a distribution deal with TV Network ORT for movies and current Turner programming.

Video piracy is still a major problem in Russia. Editor's note: The listings for companies in the former member states of the USSR have been moved to their individual country's listing.

Saudi-backed Orbit-TV, a satellite broadcaster, became the newest entrant into the Mideast satellite industry, signing a deal to retransmit the News Corp.'s STAR-TV programming in October. As the religious center of the Islamic world, Saudi Arabia will have an enormous amount of influence in programming, and will compete directly with Egypt's giant programming ventures.

The Spanish opposition party Partido Popular plans to privatise the financially troubled public television network RTVE, which has accumulated debt in excess of $3 billion.

The major multimedia conglomerate, Timon, owner of Canal Plus-Spain, film company Sogetel and the Prisa group, received criticism from EU broadcasting officials regarding its cable television deal with the state-controlled telecommunications company, Telefonica. Critics charge that the Spanish government is showing favoritism to Prisa in exchange for preferential editorial treatment by the conglomerate's media holdings. Prisa also plans to offer digital satellite and cable broadcasts by the beginning of 1997. Antena 3 will launch a 20 channel digital satellite service through its subsidiary Cable Antena.

The Spanish government has loosened the regulations allowing regional cable companies to be established. Cable television serves only 6% of Spain's 11.5 million television households, and is expected to become an extremely lucrative market. Telefonica, the state-owned telephone company, was ordered by a Spanish court to suspend cable broadcasting by its subsidiary cable service, Cablevision, pending the resolution of a suit charging unfair competition by Cableuropa.

Video sales increased 22.5% in 1995 to nearly $172 million, while rental income fell to $40 million. Illegal transmission of videos over cable television "communities" and low power television stations reportedly cost the legitimate Spanish video industry nearly $48 million.
