Albert McCoy is eighteen. He has spent the past two years wandering from one part-time job to another—a car wash, a filling station, a market—anything to make enough money so that he, his wife and baby could have a minimum standard of living. Both he and his wife Elizabeth had dropped out of school, probably to get married, and today without an education or skills the promise of better things to come just isn't there. There didn't seem to be any future; the best they could do was hope that each day would bring enough to get through the next.

Last spring, the expression "anti-poverty" to Albert and Liz was little more than a headline at the newsstand. They knew full well that no vast amount of money was going to be left at their doorstep. Anti-poverty seemed little more than a lot of talk. Today the picture has changed for the McCoys. At long last something is being done. It's only a beginning, but to this couple and several hundred others, anti-poverty appears to be the way out of what seemed like an insurmountable oblivion.

What took Los Angeles so long, when so many other major cities in this country had already launched anti-poverty programs? The answer is simply nine months of political squabbling. The dispute appeared to be concerned with the make up of the Youth Opportunities Board that was to administer this program and the amount of power this board was to have. Mayor Yorty felt that the anti-poverty program in Los Angeles should come under the direct or indirect administration of his office. The Mayor's slogan was "A hand up, not a hand out." Said Yorty, "I want minority representation, broad community participation, and I want the end-poverty program to work, but I don't want to turn over control of the agency to people who are not responsible to the taxpayers."

Anti-Poverty's DROPPING INS

by Robbin Ladd

Other factions, in a spirit of generosity, felt the poor should have the final say in government spending. They backed up their argument with the policy of the Office of Economic Opportunity which requires the extensive participation of the poor in the planning of the program.

Actually this policy was established by law in the Economic Opportunity Act of 1964 under Title II. The section outlining the Community Action Programs calls for "maximum feasible participation of the residents of the area and members of the groups served." Most cities in order to cooperate with the "spirit" of the law — and in order to obtain money under the act (not a minor point, to be sure) — chose to set up special boards to administer the program, having representatives of the poor chosen democratically by the poor themselves.

One community, Huntington, West Virginia, organized a wholly separate board to which the mayor's office and the existing city and county departments (welfare, etc.) merely acted as experts and only functioned when called upon.

But most cities did not choose to go as far as Huntington and did not need to in order to qualify for funds. According to the director of the Community Action Programs,

Sargent Shriver, Los Angeles' board was not representative enough so did not comply. Shriver intimated that since local officials couldn't get anti-poverty programs off the ground, it was time for the federal government to take control. Shriver, with all the savoir faire of a man with the federal government behind him, commented, "Los Angeles is the only major city in the United States that does not have a community action program because of the failure of local officials to establish a broad-based community action board representing all segments of the community."

Also Los Angeles lagged far behind the rest of the country because earlier in the year there had been very little cooperation between the public and private agencies.

Mayor Yorty ran into trouble with representatives of minority groups as well who felt that because a board member was non-white that did not necessarily make him a bona-fide spokesman for the poor of our community.

It looked as though everyone wanted to have a hand in doling out government money. Everyone wanted to be the Santa Claus.

While the politicians argued, the poverty-stricken citizens in Watts were smoking. When Watts finally went up in flames, all the Santas got their whiskers burned. Their hands were forced. Something had to be done immediately. President Johnson ordered Governor Leroy Collins to mediate the dispute which resulted in finally setting up a 23-member umbrella-type board, called the Economic and Youth Opportunities Agency.

Meanwhile the Neighborhood Youth Corps had begun to function in Los Angeles. Since it was authorized by Title I of the act and is under the control of the U.S. Department of Labor and was to be administered locally through the California State Department of Employment, the problem raised by the composition of the Local Youth Opportunities Board could be bypassed.

The administrator of the broad Neighborhood Youth Corps program is Dennis Fargas. Robert L. Goe, director of the Mayor's Office of Community Development, is responsible for one segment of the program which is aimed only at jobless and out-of-school youths between the ages of sixteen and twenty-one.

In order to qualify applicants must have an earning power of less than $4000. When accepted, the enrollees receive $1.27 an hour for a 20-hour work week while receiving training in three basic job categories; clerical, maintenance and mechanical aides. Some critics of the program ask why a 20-hour week instead of the usual 40-hour week. They argue that a 20-hour work week would hardly support such persons as Albert McCoy and his family. The answer is simply that N.Y.C. doesn't want to make it more profitable for young people to drop out of school and work in the Corps than to stay in school and get their education and diploma. Hopefully, however, Albert McCoy and others like him will be getting enough training in the 20 hours to eventually find full-time employment.

Five city departments participate in the 25-week training program. Various projects which the city could not afford to have done are now being worked on by youths in N.Y.C. Supervisor ratings indicate that it's good labor, and besides it's prepaid. An example of this type of project can be found in the Department of Recreation and Parks where youths are turning raw land in Griffith Park into picnic grounds by clearing land, pruning trees, and repairing and painting broken picnic tables. One could question the type of job training they are getting, however.

A case where the job training does seem to be providing skill that can be used for later full-time work is that of Antonio Diaz. Anatonio is 19 and has been attempting to support his 12 brothers and sisters since he dropped out of school in the ninth grade. He is now working in the service section of the automotive and construction division of the Department of Water and Power. He feels that with his training here he can get work in a service station and support himself while he returns to school.

The program, while training youth for work, is supposed to place its main emphasis on education. Most of the counseling should be directed towards motivating youths to at least complete their high school education. Jobs both in industry and in the civil service generally require a high school diploma. Educational deprivation has been so severe in some cases that remedial training in simple arithmetic and job communications is necessary.

Some of the young people enrolled in N.Y.C. are from families which have been on the welfare rolls for three generations. Such youths have no concept of such elementary things as getting to work on time or showing respect for their boss. They regard Social Security deductions from their paychecks as an attempt by their employer to rob them of their pay. Sociologists say they must "internalize the values of our work culture." Project coordinator Jeremiah Smith, commented, "Often the mere filling out of a job application poses an almost insurmountable hurdle for these youngsters."

This emphasis on education seemed to work in the case of Irma V. Bates. Irma came to the Corps with no education beyond the 10th grade, no job, no skills, a baby, and no husband. She is eighteen. She was put to work in one of the city's business offices and is now learning to operate simple business machines. While still in the training program she enrolled in adult evening high school and is taking a secretarial course. Whether she will remain in school after finishing her 25 weeks with the N.Y.C. is difficult to say. It is hoped that she will, that the seed has been planted.

It is difficult to evaluate a program such as this, especially after only one month of operation. So far only 542 (the number of enrollees as of September) out of the thousands of jobless poverty-stricken youths in Los Angeles are receiving help from this phase of the anti-poverty program. The directors are requesting funds in order to expand the counseling staff. They also hope to expand the training program to 12 participating departments instead of the present 5. There is also talk of setting up a 'job development center' to aid youths leaving the program and to encourage business and industry in this city to pick up the ball.

A 25-week period of training isn't very much. There will certainly be no "wonder boys" turned out. The best that can be hoped for is that they will learn enough basic skills to get full time employment and will have been encouraged enough to know where to look for a brighter future. The encouragement and help can't stop when they leave the program. The struggle against poverty is just beginning. The city has started a small skirmish, it's now up to the community to continue the war.

If a poll were taken to determine the most popular hobby among FM and FINE ARTS readers, Tape recording would win hands down. All the studies indicate that well over 50% of the magazine's subscribers utilize the publication to plan their home recording in advance. This is understandable. With 13 stations in this area broadcasting over 1,000 hours of FM stereo every week, the opportunity to build an inexpensive tape library is unlimited.

Every year thousands of Southern Californians discover the FM and FINE ARTS Magazine and the pleasures of planning their music listening in advance. It is to these families as well as the owners of tape recorders among our regular readership that the following article is dedicated.

THE RECORDER

Any purchase involving a fairly substantial commitment is bound to be perplexing. The purchase of a recorder is no different. We are dismayed by the gross claims given in advertisements, and equally disturbed by salesmen who push what they have on the floor — the most profitable item — or that for which they receive pm's ("push money"). It is just as true that some recorders consistently exceed the manufacturers performance claims. And there are informed, honest sales people who can be of great service.

So, what's to be done? Whom and what do you believe? For one thing, learn to become a good shopper. Don't buy on impulse. Ply dealers with questions and make notes. Insist on a demonstration. Try to choose a time when there are few customers around (nothing is worse than trying to make your selection while busy clerks are demonstrating tuners, amplifiers, and the boom-boom of speakers all at once). Collect literature; get a feel for features you think are important.

Consider only brand merchandise. You will want a recorder made by someone who intends to stay in business, by someone who has service departments, who will stand behind a warranty. When you have finally decided on a specific machine, then you can shop for price. But do not compromise and buy an off-brand product because you can make a "deal" or because it looks almost like that of the big name manufacturer.

If your goal is high fidelity — good music — then be prepared to spend $250 to $500. The top figure will bring pleasant results. If your goal is voice communications, for example, "tape letters," then you can probably get something for $100 to $200. If you do intend to send tape letters, avoid the very cheap transistorized recorders sold in many drug and discount stores. They are hardly more than toys.

Recorder specifications. It is always helpful to compare specifications — if they are valid. Articles have been published stating what to look for in frequency response, signal-to-noise ratio, distortion, speed variation, etc. Fine — the authors give excellent guide-lines. But where do you derive this data? From advertisements? From brochures?

Often a frequency response is stated as "30 to 15,000 cps." That says nothing at all! You must know the deviation from flat response in terms of db (decibels). Furthermore, is the response given that for playback or for record-playback? (The latter is much more meaningful.)

Signal-to-noise ratio only means something if you know the recording reference level. The same is true for distortion figures. Speed variation should be less than 0.25% in a quality machine, but, again, a single advertised figure tells little about long term variations.

The number of motors has no more bearing than the number of loudspeakers in a high fidelity console. Some excellent recorders use only one motor. It's the quality that counts, not the number.

Another common mistake is made by assuming that a recorder is a good one because it has VU meters for level indicators. Yes, all professional audio recorders have VU meters. But the requirements of the broadcast and record pressing industries are different from yours. It takes considerable skill to estimate peak level when using a VU meter, because the pointer lags on sharp transients. The magic eye level indicator is electronic and responds instantly to transients.

How many heads should a recorder have? Some have two, an erase head and a combination record-playback head. Three heads are much better, that is, an erase head, and separate record and playback heads.

All professional recorders and a majority of the best home recorders will use separate heads for the recording and playback functions. For good reasons. Optimum head designs are different for these operations. Playback requires a narrower gap head than that needed for recording. This becomes even more important at the shorter wavelengths, that is, high frequencies and lower speeds. Therefore, whenever a single head is used for both recording and playback, the net design has to be a compromise.

Revere-Wollensak's M-4, the world's first automatic tape changing system plays up to 15 hours of stereophonic music.

Aside from optimizing design, a recorder with separate record and playback heads has yet another possibility. That is, it is possible to monitor the recording as it is being made (provided there are separate preamplifiers for each head). This is a very great advantage. Most of today's power amplifiers permit interconnections to and from the recorder and other components (FM tuner, record player), and have a front panel switch, so instant A-B comparisons can be made between the program source and the recording. Any differences in quality are immediately discernable and corrections can be made.

Some recorders have even more heads. The cross-field head reduces bias erase effects and helps to extend fidelity at slower speeds. In a standard recorder the record head current is a combination of both the ultrasonic bias and audio signals. The bias signal, necessary for recorded fidelity, produces the secondary defect on an erasing action most pronounced at high frequencies. The cross-field head is an extra head which is used solely to apply bias to the tape in such a way that the erasing tendency is substantially reduced.

Additional heads on certain recorders allow automatic reversal of the tape during recording, a convenience to be sure. On some machines, the Concord, for example, front panel controls permit instant playback in either direction. Others have switches which automatically reverse the tape direction when an electrically conductive tab is reached. One recorder (Ampex) adds a subsonic (19 cps) signal at any desired point for automatic reverse.

TAPE

There are three important elements to recording — the recorder, the magnetic tape, and technique. Each should receive more than passing attention if quality recordings are to be made. Keep this in mind; throughout the years you may acquire additional recorders, or exchange one for a better machine, but your recording tapes will bridge all these.

In essence, magnetic recording tape consists of a plastic film coated with a magnetic oxide. The latter is a carefully compounded formulation of magnetic iron oxide, uniformly dispersed in a plastic binder, together with other agents to increase conductivity and lubricity.

Film types. Magnetic tapes are manufactured from three basic types of film materials: PVC (polyvinyl chloride), polyester (polyethylene terephthalate), and cellulose acetate. PVC has been used widely in Europe due to availability of raw materials and low cost. In the United States this base was first introduced on tape intended for the audio-visual departments of our schools. Because of several problems however, it has now been replaced with polyester.

Polyester film is produced by du Pont ("Mylar"*) and Celanese ("Celanar"***). Recording tape bases, accordingly, may be designated as being "Mylar," "Celanar," or simply "polyester." They all mean the same thing. One big advantage of polyester film is its stability under widely varying conditions of temperature and humidity. There are no liquid plasticizers to dry out, so it remains permanently flexible (important for archival storage). Polyester is definitely the choice for thin tapes, particularly 1/2 and 3/4 mil. It is the most expensive of the base materials.

Acetate film is made by a solvent casting process. It is an inherent feature of this process to produce a surface of excellent integrity. Of consequence, cellulose acetate has the best surface of all films used in the recording field.

Tape should have a fair degree of "limpness" so that it conforms to the shape of the reels, the guides, tape heads, pressure pads, etc. Most especially, tape should make good physical contact with the heads. If it does not, there will be inadequate erasing and/or dropouts upon recording or playback.

Polyester and acetate tapes are readily distinguishable from one another by holding the reels up to a strong light. Some light passes through the layers of acetate tape, but practically none will penetrate the layers of polyester tape.

Tape thickness has a bearing on a number of physical and magnetic properties — strength, available length on the reel, ease of handling by the transport, print-through—to mention a few. Thickness is usually expressed in mils, (thousandths of an inch). Furthermore, this dimension refers to the thickness of the film, rounded off to the nearest 1/2 mil, not the over-all thickness of the magnetic tape. To illustrate, standard "1 1/2 mil acetate" tape is made with a film 1.42 mils thick, on which is coated 0.40 mils of oxide, yielding a total dimension of 1.82 mils.

We say audio tape is "quarter inch," implying that it is 0.250 inches wide, yet all reputable manufacturers slit to the government specified dimension of 0.246, plus or minus 0.002. Thus tape width should be between 0.244 and 0.248 inches. Later we will discuss reject computer tape and learn that it is often, of necessity, smaller than this. And off-brand, so-called "white box" tape, varies widely from these tolerances. Let's dwell on these substandard width variations, for just a moment, and see what it means in actual recording terms.

In even the best recorders, with the very best quality magnetic tape, some wear must inevitably occur, causing a slight groove to be worn into the heads and other contacting metal parts such as the guides. Given sufficient playing time any recorder must have its heads replaced. But with high quality magnetic tape, with a tape that contains an internal lubricant, and with a mechanically well-adjusted recorder, head replacement should not be necessary for years.

**Celanese Corporation of America registered trademark.

Suppose tape wider than the industry standard is threaded and played on a slightly worn head. It will not fit the groove, head contact will be poor, and the high frequency signals will be sharply attenuated.

TAPE TIME CHART

Footage	Tape Speed (Inches Per Second)
	15/16	1 1/2	3/4	7/2
150	32 min.	16 min.	8 min.	4 min.
225	48 min.	24 min.	12 min.	6 min.
300	64 min.	32 min.	16 min.	8 min.
600	128 min.	64 min.	32 min.	16 min.
900	192 min.	96 min.	48 min.	24 min.
1,200	256 min.	128 min.	64 min.	32 min.
1,500	320 min.	160 min.	80 min.	40 min.
1,800	384 min.	192 min.	96 min.	48 min.
2,000	427 min.	213 min.	107 min.	53 min.
2,400	512 min.	256 min.	128 min.	64 min.
3,000	640 min.	320 min.	160 min.	80 min.
3,600	768 min.	384 min.	192 min.	96 min.

Now take the case of tape slit narrower than the standard. It will fit down within the groove satisfactorily but will commence to wear another groove narrower than the first. Unfortunately, tapes that are substandard in width have usually had corners cut elsewhere too. This is to say the coating is probably significantly more abrasive than quality tape. (Some white box tapes have been known to ruin recorder heads in a week!) Suppose you go back to a quality product after using the narrow tape? The good tape now rides on the edges of the narrow groove and, again, treble notes are lost.

Length of tape on a reel is determined by the over-all thickness of the tape and the size of the reel. For any given reel two dimensions are important — the outside diameter and the diameter of the hub. With these fixed, only so much tape of a given thickness can be wound on a reel without spilling.

Home recorders accept reels from three to seven inches in diameter. As a convenient rule-of-thumb, a 5 inch reel has a capacity half that of a 7 inch, a 4 inch half that of a 5 inch, and a 3 inch half that of a 4 inch. Be sure that the take-up and supply reels are of the same diameter. Winding tensions are thrown off if they are not. Some operating problems, such as wow, stretched tape, failure to rewind, can be solved simply by following this advice. If you do much recording, keep a few empty reels on hand. Before every recording session check the take-up reel for warpage. A warped reel will stretch the tape edge and ruin the recording.

A few years ago the research department of Greentree Electronics Corporation, manufacturer of the American brand tape, discovered new ways to increase the magnetic coating density which made possible a reduced over-all thickness for any given film base. Associated advancement in the mechanics of coating enhanced coating uniformity.

They marketed a series of "professional length" tapes and in a short time several other manufacturers followed their lead.

A tape time chart for standard, as well as professional length tapes is given for your convenience. From this you can calculate the total time for 2-track or 4-track, monaural or stereo recordings.

Some recorders, and very good ones too, have difficulty in handling the thinnest tapes such as 2400 feet of 1/2 mil polyester. Recognizing this, both American and Scotch introduced new Double Duty tapes which provide 2400 feet with a 3/4 mil tensilized polyester film. This tape has virtually eliminated all the problems experienced by certain recorders, and, of course, the 50 per cent greater strength is a decided advantage on any machine.

MAGNETIC PROPERTIES

Most recording enthusiasts classify magnetic tape only as to the type of film used, cellulose acetate or polyester Mylar, and length. Tapes are also manufactured to meet varying magnetic functions. For example, high output tape is available for those who want a gain in signal-to-noise ratio. Special low print tapes will reduce the effects of "print-through" (layer-to-layer signal transfer) by as much as 8 db, all other things being equal. You can do much to reduce print-through with any type, standard or low-print, by recording at proper levels, rewinding after recording, and avoiding excessive temperatures.

One of the industry's most exciting new developments is the low noise ("slow speed") tape. This product incorporates a special formulation of small particle magnetic oxides, greater density of the media, and new manufacturing techniques for surface treatment.

Many factors can contribute to tape noise. Tape noise can be defined in a rather limited way, but any unwanted audible signal is an element of noise. The most noticeable quality of low noise tape is the extremely low hiss level. Tape hiss is caused by the randomly oriented magnetized particles (domains). Maximum hiss occurs in the range of 3000 to 5000 cps, a portion of the audio spectrum to which the human ear is particularly sensitive. Any tape has a fundamental hiss level, but, for a specific tape, this level can be substantially raised by magnetized guides and heads.

Someday you may wish to borrow another recorder to copy a recording. You should know that each generation of copies adds about 3 db additional noise. If, however, low noise tape is used for both the master and the copy, fidelity can be maintained. Lower noise tapes have permitted a two-for-one reduction in recording speed without significant loss in fidelity. This is the reason low noise tapes are often called "slow speed." Capitol Records feels so strongly about the quality and advantages of tapes duplicated on low noise tape that the bulk of Capitol's new releases are at 3 3/4 ips instead of 7 1/2. Several low noise tapes are now available to the public such as American OC-9, Audio #1257, and Scotch 201.

WHITE BOX TAPE

Are there bargains in tape? Of course. How do you find them? Well, all you need is a laboratory full of electronic and physical testing equipment. Not even an expert can look at a reel of tape, spend a few minutes recording with it, and say that the tape is good.

It is true that all manufacturers of quality audio tapes have some over-runs that find their way into the white box and private labels. If you can find them, these really are bargains. But, regrettably, there are some small, regional manufacturers who produce tapes exclusively for the "price" market — and the quality is worse than low. Such tape yields inferior recordings and may ruin the recorder heads in a very short time.

Much of the white box tape these days is converted from rejected computer tape. The base is polyester. Since computers require a tape with an error-free surface, it is very difficult to manufacture and is priced accordingly. At first pale it would certainly seem that any audio tape converted from sub-par computer tape would be a very fine medium indeed. This does not follow. Just as audio tape is manufactured to the specific requirements of the audio spectrum, so is computer tape optimized to the particular requirements of digital recording technology. Computer tape often has a thin magnetic coating that would cause distortion of bass notes in an audio recorder. Lubricants used in computer tapes, which run at high speeds, are ineffectual at the speeds of home recorders. Finally, although computer tape must be slit to the highest standards of the tape industry, audio tape converted from this tape is quite another matter. The nature of the conversion process results in a tape narrower than the audio standards.

So, it's your money. Rather than chance destruction of your recorder — or a valuable recording — reflect a bit. It is simple economics. Quality products cost more to manufacture than junk. "You lays down your money and takes your choice."

If you want quality tape and value received, buy brand — American, Scotch, Audio — any of the nationally advertised tapes. Certain private labels manufactured for reliable companies such as Sears, Roebuck or Allied Radio always offer a quality product, reasonably priced. Frankly, the competition among first-line manufacturers is so keen you are assured of a bargain. For proof, compare prices today against those of five years ago!

Remember — tape is to your recorder what food is to your body. Feed your recorder a quality product if you want first-class recordings.

EQUIPMENT MAINTENANCE

Don't be surprised to learn that a tape recorder occasionally needs service and that not all of it can be done by you in your home. Like television, it sometimes requires the services of an expert, a specialist in audio equipment. Service problems with recorders are unique because there are many mechanical features as well as electronic.

Cleaning the heads. Refer to the manual accompanying your recorder. It will tell where the heads are located and how to get at them. Usually it is a matter of loosening a couple of hand screws and lifting off the head dust cover.

My advice is to use "Q-Tips" slightly wet with ordinary rubbing alcohol. Use no stronger solvent. Never use carbon tetrachloride, a household cleaner, or denatured alcohol (which may contain acetone). Be sure the alcohol has evaporated before you start to play or record a tape. Also clean the capstan and the tape guides. The rubber pressure roller is a special case. Rub it gently with the cotton and then immediately wipe off the excess with a dry "Q-tip."

Every part contacted by the tape should be cleaned frequently depending upon how often and how long the recorder is in operation; the quality of tape used; the environment (dusty?), how often the fast forward and rewind are used, and so on. Any foreign matter can seriously affect the quality of recording. At least fifty per cent of the recorders I have serviced needed only a good head cleaning to restore them to full fidelity operation.

If your recorder has one or more pressure pads, examine them for dirt and glazing. These are best cleaned by slight roughing up with a finger-nail emery stick. Put something (paper, etc.) over the heads to protect them while you are doing this. Eventually all pressure pads have to be replaced. Standard replacements are available in most electronic supply houses.

Tape head demagnetization. One of the last accessories purchased — if at all — is a tape head demagnetizer (sometimes be called a "degausser"). If you own a recorder you should have a head demagnetizer if you are at all interested in high fidelity.

Under normal circumstances it is probably sufficient to demagnetize the heads after every 6 to 10 hours of machine time. Why do you need to demagnetize? For one thing, in normal use the recorder heads become magnetized. Though very slight, this magnetization causes a partial erasure of of the recorded signals. The higher the frequency (shorter the recorded wavelength), the greater this erasing effect. Magnetized heads also raise the distortion and noise level.

"How many club owners could distinguish between Miles Davis, a glockenspiel and a C clef?"

This question was raised about five years ago in an article by the poet Kenneth Rexroth who maintained that a jazz club is no place for a musician who considers himself a creative artist. Rexroth's comments on jazz clubs were critical and very caustic, but with rather good justification. Jazz clubs have had a difficult time getting away from their speakeasy traditions.

At approximately the same time that Rexroth was writing about what's wrong with jazz clubs, plans were being made to open a new one in Hollywood. Drummer Shelly Manne was behind this effort, and his success can be measured partially by the fact that it is the club's fifth anniversary. Few jazz clubs manage to keep their doors open that long in Southern California.

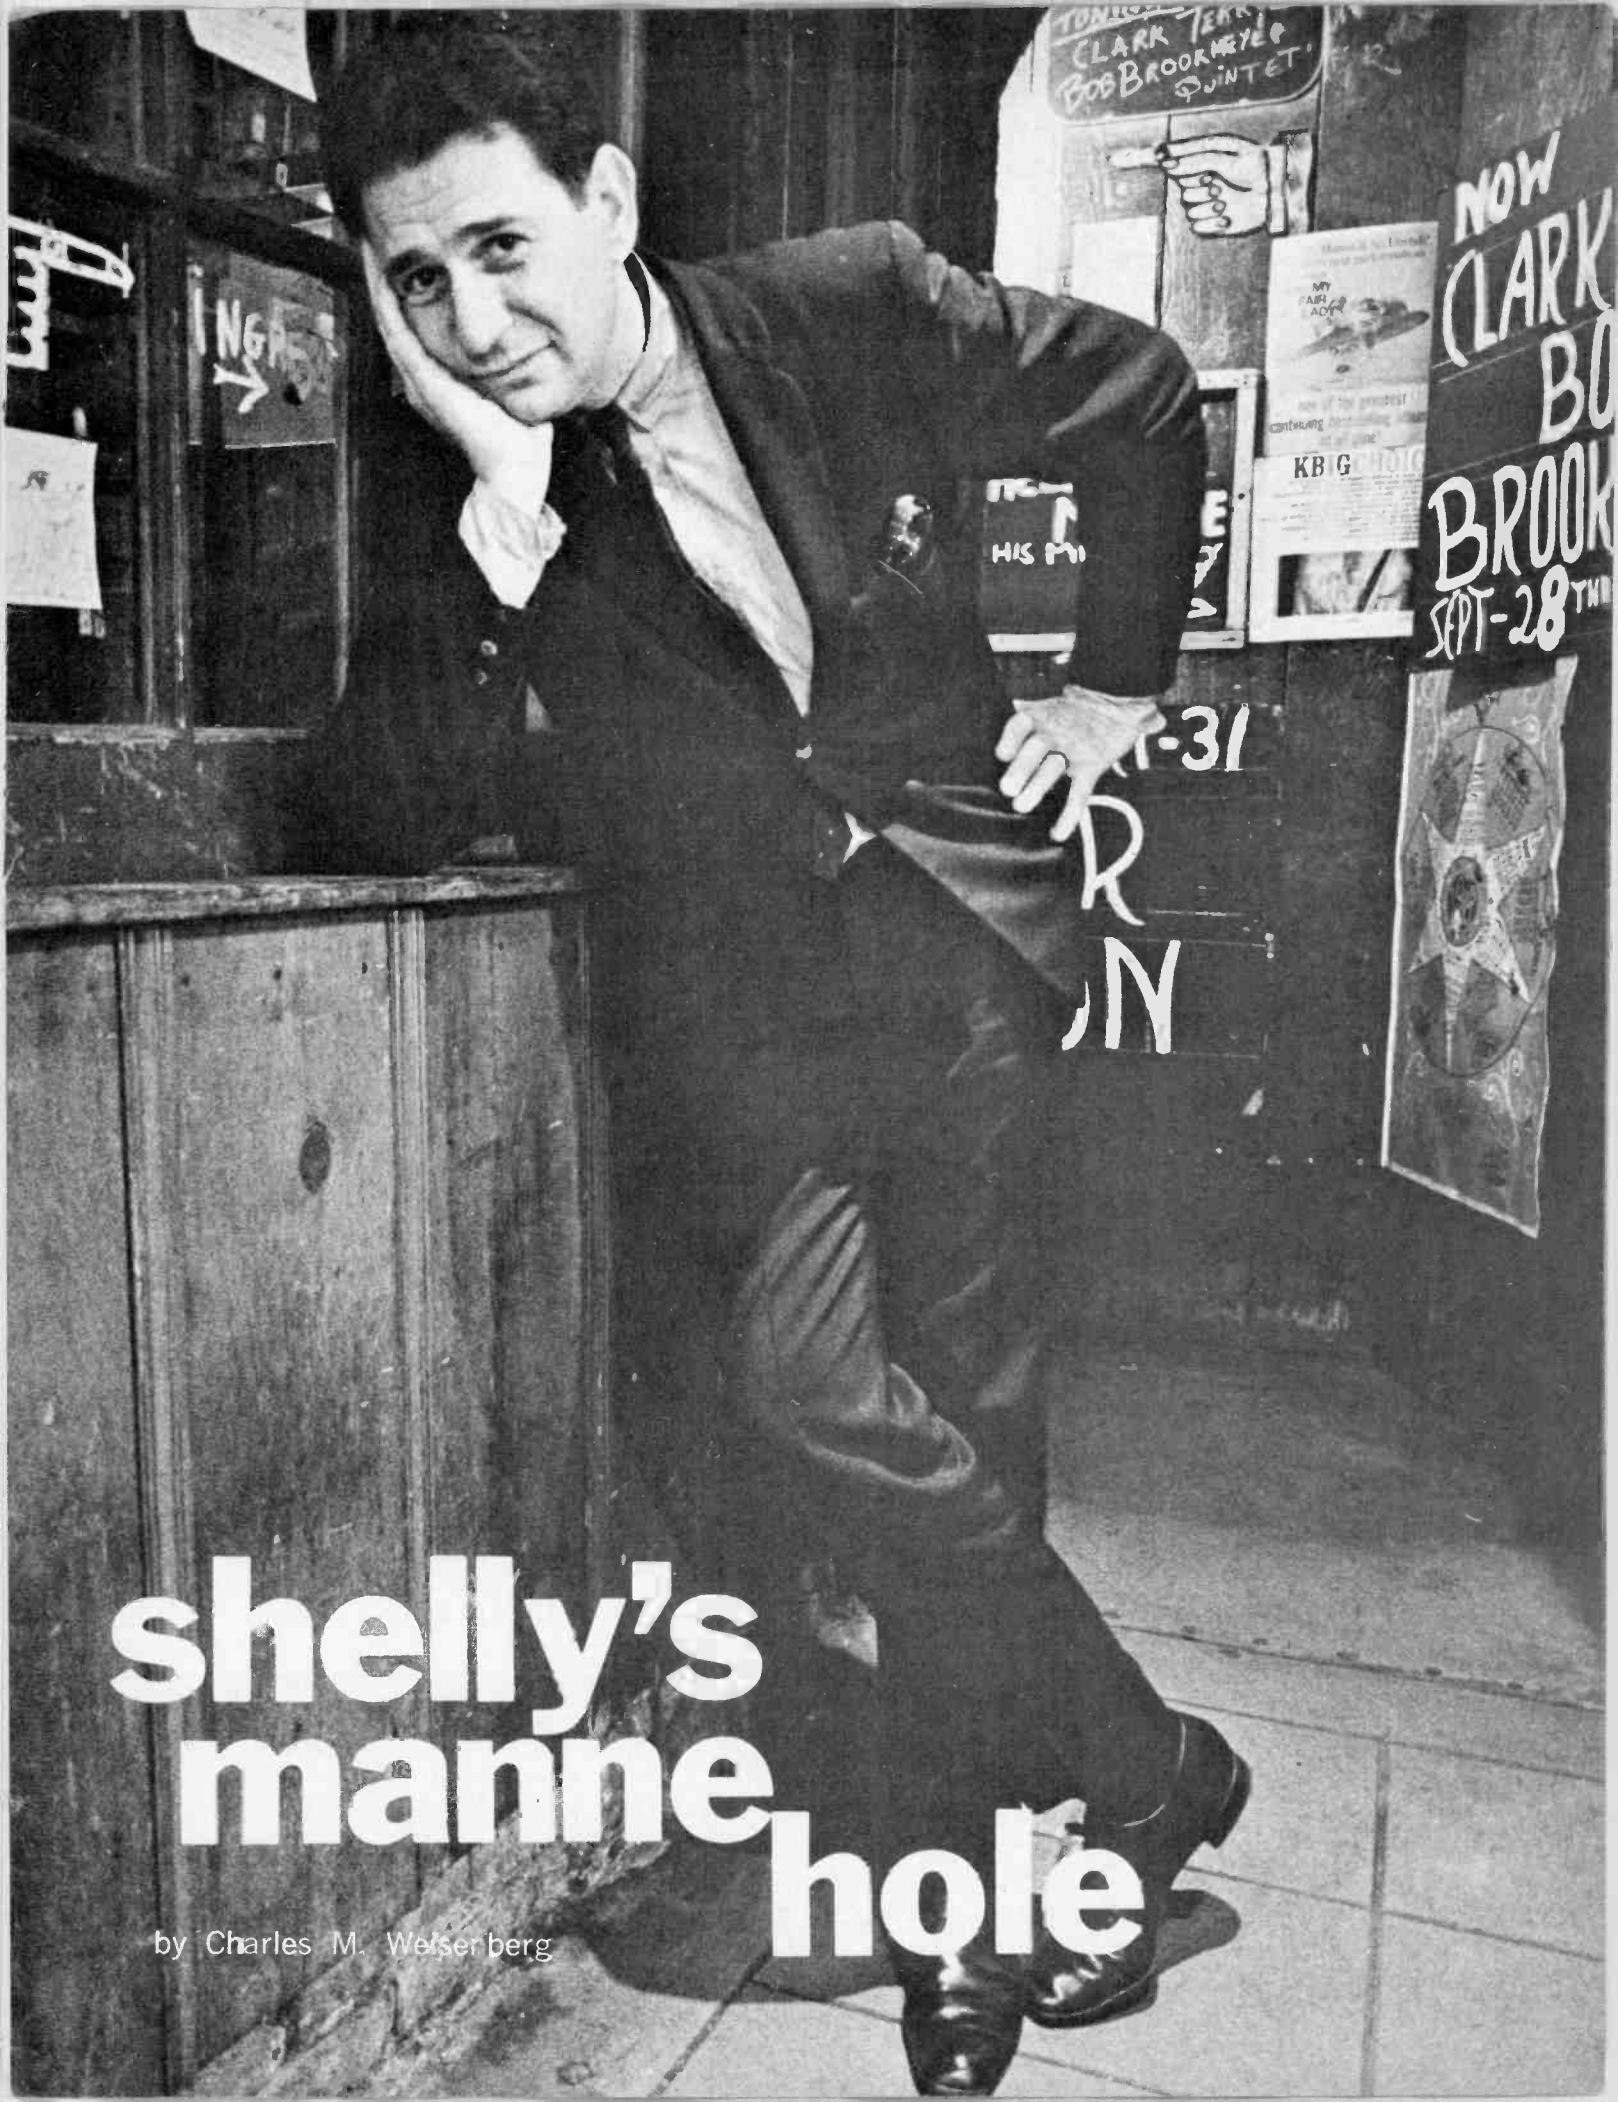

There is a great deal of truth in the thought that jazz clubs have outlived their usefulness to this music and probably in the not too distant future, the jazz club will be found almost exclusively in the history books. Many clubs in our country's leading cities have closed their doors; and I don't think there is an important American city that doesn't have fewer jazz clubs today than it had a decade or two ago. Even New York's famous Birdland has become a rock joint.

There are several obvious and basic reasons why clubs have folded. The biggest one being expense. Musicians are demanding more money each year and if a west coast club wants to bring a man out here from the east he usually has to pay his plane fare. On the other hand, the musicians have become less anxious to play for clubs since they can make more money in a one night concert than six nights in a club. For instance, when Bob Dylan played at the Hollywood Bowl, he made about $35,000 for a one hour performance. Another reason is the audience. Shelly's has a mailing list composed of people who like jazz well enough to fill out a card requesting that coming attractions be sent to them. The list is largest of its kind and it only numbers 12,000. This is a minute percentage of the Los Angeles listening audience.

Yet Shelly's Manne Hole has, in the past five years, not only been a successful jazz club but has risen to the head of the list. Perhaps that is because the owner can tell the difference between Miles Davis, a glockenspiel and a C clef, but more probably it is because the club has a sound operating policy.

In an interview shortly before the Manne Hole opened, Shelly said: "If there were no jazz clubs it would have a terrible effect on the music. I feel that's where all the great jazz starts. That's where they learn to play their horns so they'll be ready when the call comes from someplace big. Things are warm and flow naturally and that's when things really happen. This country can't afford to lose its jazz clubs because they will lose a lot of jazz."

There is a lot to argue with here, but there can be no argument that the Manne Hole has accomplished its basic purpose — a warm place where things can flow naturally and where great jazz occasionally happens. Perhaps the decor has something to do with this warm feeling. Shelly's partner, Rudy, says the place is decorated in a Dadaism style. "It has a certain flavor about it and reflects a quiet humor. You can't really explain it, it's just a feeling that kind of grows when you've been there awhile." Stan Kenton commented when he played there recently, "All that seems to be missing is a toilet seat tacked on the wall."

Perhaps the club has succeeded because Shelly has given it a basic aesthetic purpose, or maybe it has succeeded because his partner Rudy knows how to run things smoothly night after night. There may be a dozen or more reasons for the club's success in a period when most jazz clubs have switched to a "topless" show or gone out of business altogether. When Shelly's opened in 1960, there were from 14 to 16 jazz clubs operating. Now there are only three: the Lighthouse, the It Club and Shelly's. In any event, Shelly's Manne Hole has become this city's most important showcase of jazz talent on a year round basis. The schedule for the next several months reads like the Top Ten List in Downbeat. "We always get the best," says Shelly.

Rather than dwell upon the club's history, architecture or changes of policy in entertainment and refreshment, it might be well to observe its fifth anniversary by trying to see just what purpose a jazz club can serve. All jazz clubs today have a certain limiting effect on the jazz audience, and most clubs have a limiting effect on the musicians. Many teenagers have difficulty entering establishments that serve liquor, and many adults who might enjoy jazz don't want to go to the kind of place where this music is performed. The musicians are usually limited by owners who are saloon keepers first and jazz promoters third or fourth. There was a time when jazz was brought in to sell the booze, now booze is brought in to sell jazz. Yet Shelly's Manne Hole does serve a purpose for both listener and performer.

It may sound trite and familiar to say that jazz has become too serious or mature to continue living exclusively in jazz clubs, but there is so much truth in this statement that it must be made. I am speaking only of that brand of jazz that would have the label of high quality or serious (not somber). There is another kind of jazz that we can discuss further on. The jazz that is recognized as an important art form requires audiences that come primarily to listen, which means auditoriums, theaters and the like. Important music requires an appropriate setting, and without trying to be pretentious, we should acknowledge that quality jazz is important music.

This does not mean that high quality jazz can never be presented in a club. It has worked at Shelly's Manne Hole on occasion because most people go there to listen. The club only recently acquired a liquor license, and there is no stand-up bar for serious drinkers. "We had been selling beer and wine," says Rudy, "But people don't want beer and wine. You can't have a dry nightclub, so we brought in liquor. It was an accommodation." There are a minimum number of distractions once you accept the existing interior decorations. The focal point of the club is the music. The club is designed for listening, so people there tend to listen.

Shelly has had to battle with dozens of club owners in his own career. One of the reasons the club was set up was to provide a place where jazzmen could play and have a good time for themselves. This has helped produce good music. The purchase of a good piano, installation of fine sound equipment and the general attitude of the employees all contribute to the good feeling that usually exists on the bandstand. These are things that have made the performance of quality jazz possible at the Manne Hole.

There will be a place for such clubs as long as there are adults who like to listen to jazz in an informal atmosphere. They also provide a relaxing stage for musicians who are becoming more involved in concerts and other formal presentations. Good audience communication has been a problem in jazz for years. More and more musicians have developed what has been called the Miles Davis syndrome: Put in the key, wind him up and he turns his back to the audience. A good jazz club can act as a stimulus to the musician by giving him better contact with the audience and an opportunity to have a good time. Trying new or different things in a formal presentation is difficult while these same approaches will be acceptable in a good club.

The jazz club also serves what might be called "light jazz," which is basically entertainment rather than art. It is not always easy or even possible to distinguish between these two kinds of jazz. Both exist and they are different. Music played primarily for its entertainment value also requires a good platform. The audience may not be as attentive, but it involves another type of appreciation. To try and decide which is better is useless — suffice it to say that they are merely different.

The difficult economical situation surrounding jazz clubs generally means that one club has to serve both types of audiences. There is not enough money being spent on nightclub or night life entertainment to support very many clubs, even in a big city like Los Angeles. Shelly's Manne Hole has been fortunate in that it has been able to attract both audiences and both types of musicians.

Los Angeles jazz clubs have opened and closed in recent years with the frequency of a busy pair of elevator doors. The oldest and best established club remains in Hermosa Beach. Known as The Lighthouse, this club was an important launching pad for West Coast jazz activities in the 1950s. The only other major jazz club is the It Club which has been operating for several years. There are, throughout the area, a number of places where jazz is heard sporadically but none that could be considered a major jazz showcase.

Shelly's Manne Hole has become the city's most important jazz club and rivals anything in other parts of the country. It serves a purpose and serves it well — nothing more need be said ●

BOOK REVIEW

THE MEMOIRS OF AN AMNESIAC by Oscar Levant, Putnam, 320 pp., $5.95.

There is no question but that the publishers are right in heralding this autobiography as unconventional, in fact, that is probably the mildest adjective that could be used under the circumstances. Oscar Levant has written a wild, witty and sometimes completely disconnected account of some of the incidents of his life during the past forty years. It is by no means a mere chronology, for much is left out, but what makes the book so fascinating is what is left in. For Levant is ruthlessly frank, not only about others, but also about himself.

Every page contains at least one of his famous quips, interspersed with reminiscences and anecdotes about the famous and the infamous with whom he has had contact during his life. Some of his most caustic remarks, which may be hilarious to the reader, were probably not considered the least bit funny by the original recipient — but Mr. Levant is the first to admit this. Throughout the book he states that certain remarks would have been better left unsaid, but that he can't help himself because, "my subconscious is always double-crossing me."

Indeed, his subconscious is given quite a workout, or one should say "going-over" as he tells of his obsessions, neuroses, and addictions. He recounts his long battle with drugs, his passionate desire to be in a permanent state of insensibility, the recurrent "visits" to various psychiatric hospitals, and his devious ways of getting hold of the drugs when he was at home.

Eventually, he made some kind of a recovery — at least enough to write this unusual book. You may find some of the events outrageous, but you certainly won't be bored.

JEWS, GOD and HISTORY by Max I. DIMONT, New American Library, 472 pages.

So man created God with no image, made himself his chosen people, and marched through 4000 years of history influencing everything he touched. This fascinating history of the Jewish people, lately reissued in a soft cover edition, reads as smoothly as a novel, yet leaves not one fact uncovered thus retaining its importance as a historical survey.

How have the Jews survived throughout 4000 years of human history? Why has this small band of people continued to exert such influence on so many cultures? With historical and psychological insight, Dimont asks and answers these questions with a passion and personal zeal that follows the wandering Jew from Ur to Modern Israel.

A comparative time line accompanies each of the book's eight sections showing what, when and where events were taking place in the rest of the world during each particular period of Jewish history. The book is also excellently indexed and contains a comprehensive bibliography.

Rarely is a book written about a culture or race that is as complete or compelling as this one.

SONGS OF MAN by Norman Luboff and Winfred Stracke, Prentice-Hall, 368 pp., $12.95.

Readers of FM and Fine Arts will be interested in this book to be published on the 19th of this month. It may be just the thing for your holiday gifts. The collection contains 150 folk songs from around the world (compiled by Luboff and Stracke) with original full color art work and illustration.

The book is large, divided into groupings such as: Drinking Songs; Love Songs; For the Small Fry; Well-Loved Places; Folk Hymns and Spirituals, etc. Along with words and music are included text notes and introductions to the songs, and guitar instructions for all songs.

With the revival of interest in folk music today, it may prove a most interesting collection.

THE AGONY & THE ECSTASY by Stanley Z. Cherry

FIRST: THE AGONY. The life of an artist is not easy. Contrary to those gay left bank tales of mad Bohemian living, it can be rough going for the creative geniuses who delight our eyes with their brilliant efforts.

Perhaps it is the rigors of their trade that so early hails the grim reaper. For centuries the world's great artists have fallen prey to such unusual and terrifying maladies as leprosy, teenie-weenie-legs, instant-missing ear, etc. Once in a while, however, you run across a genius whose life was not only comparatively soft but relatively long. Such a fortunate one was Michaelangelo (hereafter referred to as Mike). While Florence fountain makers were shivering in water up to their chisels and Black Forest wood carvers were freezing their axes off, Mike was taking life easy, flaked out on his back, gently daubing pigment into the wet plaster on the ceiling of a cozy old chapel.

AND NOW: (because you waited) THE ECSTASY. As the story goes, the over-all condition of this Cistine Chapel was really something deplorable and the Pope, at the time, was quite concerned. The whole place needed a "white tornado" and unfortunately, Ajax was still about five hundred years away. So in order to get everybody's mind off the floor and walls; he decided to have the ceiling given a nice new coat of paint to sort of dress up the place, you might say.

He called in Mike and told him about the job opportunity. Mike was aghast. After all he was doing pretty well with the stone carving bit (statues, tombs and the like) and had never really thought much about ceiling painting. "You got the job if you want it," said the Pope, "and also if you don't want it." You could have knocked Mike over with a number eight sable brush. I mean, it wasn't like if the Pope had said "Mike we'll break you in easy with the ceiling of the broom closet or maybe even the ladies powder room." No, it was the whole schmear (to use a painting expression) and he expected a first rate, top quality job . . . as good or better than Norman Rockwell if he was available.

"You will paint certain areas with the twelve apostles," said the Pope. "Areas I ain't interested in," said Mike. "Its wall-to-wall or nothing at all." (he was also a fair poet)

So Mike started, and a few wars later when the cardinals dropped by to see how he was doing they were absolutely stunned. "Blasphemy," cried one of them. "Disgusting," said another. You see, Mike dug painting the folks in his frescos al fresco. "Destroy them" shouted the cardinals. "This man was not influenced by Da Vinci, but rather by Playboy."

Mike wasn't too bugged by all this. He slowly turned over on his tummy and shouted down to them "Hey, datsa you body. How come you ashamed on you body." That seemed to do the trick and before you could say Jack Rosenbloom nine million times the job was done. It was sheer ECSTASY.

Charlton Heston plays Mike; Rex Harrison plays the Pope and Carol Reed plays around with one of the great novels of our time.

SOME SHAPES NEVER CHANGE

For example, a spoon, a VW or an 88 Stereo Compact. They are made for a specific purpose and fulfill it so well, the basic design never changes.

Improvements are made though. Spoons are better balanced. VW's have larger tail lights. We've added a pause control to the 88 Stereo Compact. We've improved the automatic stop, included a pilot light and put a push-button on the counter - but we haven't changed the basic design. An 88 is still only 13 x 13 x 7" and fits into most hi fi consoles. 88 Stereo Compacts always deliver smooth tape handling, excellent frequency response, feature off the tape monitoring and separate hyperbolic heads for erase, record and playback.

An 88 Stereo Compact is never obsolete. Ask those who own one - design and quality have endured the test of time. So we didn't change it - we just made improvements.

TAPE RECORDING

Though instructions accompany a head demagnetizer, they are seldom complete enough. Be sure to cover the pole tips of the demagnetizer with pressure-sensitive cellophane tape to avoid scratching head surfaces. Be certain the recorder is turned off. Connect the demagnetizer to an 110 VAC socket. With the head covers removed, bring the instrument slowly up to and in contact with the head being demagnetized. Move the demagnetizer slowly, in a circular fashion, across the front of the head for a second or two. Now, slowly — very slowly — move the demagnetizer away from the head. By "slowly" we mean on the order of 10 or more seconds to go, say, three feet. The closer to the head, the slower the removal should be. At least 5 seconds should be taken in going the first 8 to 10 inches. Please remember that if you hurry this process, you'll accomplish nothing.

Which head should be demagnetized? All of them. You may be surprised to learn that this includes the erase head. Suppose your manual states your recorder has "automatic tape head demagnetization." Fine. This means that additional circuitry provides for self-demagnetization of the record and erase heads. But, if there are separate playback and record heads, you still have to demagnetize the playback head. So, while you are at it, you might just as well do the same to the erase and record heads too, just as extra insurance. What else, if anything, should be demagnetized?

The answer is any metal part — guides, rollers — that is in intimate contact with the tape. By the way, don't leave any tapes lying around the recorder while you are "degaussing" the heads!

Wollensak for '66 new beauty with a soul of stereo

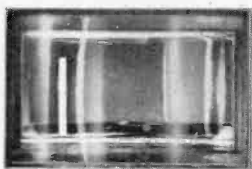

You're looking at over six feet of slim-lined beauty. Seductively clothed in walnut wraps. But underneath lies a soul of powerful stereo sound. A magnificent piece of modern design combined with the traditional excellence of Wollensak . . . this is the beginning of a new era in tape recorders, a new idea in fine sound systems. So let your wife call it beautiful furniture. You call it beautiful sound. And here are some of the reasons why!

WOLLENSAK CONTROL CENTRAL An exclusive new concept in tape recorder control . . . a complete Sound Studio in a hand-span! All controls are centrally grouped for maximum simplicity, more compact construction, more satisfying sound-on-tape performance.

HIGH SPEED SEARCH CONTROL This new tape handling mechanism provides positive control in fast forward or fast rewind operation for extremely accurate program location. Simplifies both program editing and playing.

PRECISION VU METERS Even the most critical recording gain control settings are made precise through these easy-to-read Wollensak VU meters. All Wollensak stereo models feature individual left and right channel meters.

POWER ACTIVATED PUSH BUTTONS For each playing and recording operation, power activated push buttons provide fingertip touch control of tape. Positive locking control mechanism prevents the accidental erasure of tape recordings.

FOUR-DIGIT COUNTER New, push-to-reset four digit tape counter accurately indicates program location on tapes. Essential for recording/playing long uninterrupted material.

4-SPEED OPERATION 7 1/2 - 3 1/4 - 1 1/2 - 15/16 ips. A tape speed for every application and need. From long-play voice at an economical 15/16 ips to highest fidelity at 7 1/2 ips. Allows for the utmost in tape recording and playing versatility; with more musical satisfaction than you've ever had.

SOLID-STATE CIRCUITRY Space age transistors allow replacement of vacuum tubes, reduce heat, provide for compact design and more rugged reliability for trouble-free operation. They also assure instant warm-up.

EXTRA LARGE BALANCED FLY-WHEEL Provides positive, constant speed. Minimizes wow and flutter which provides most exact sound reproduction in both record and playback. An assurance of finest true hi-fidelity.

THE SLEEK LOOK IN SUPERB SOUND—WHAT YOU WANT IS A WOLLENSAK!

If I have harped on the subject of cleaning and demagnetizing, it is only because their importance is seldom realized even by the professional. I have observed technicians, who should know better, spend hours on a recorder, realigning heads and checking electronic circuits to recover the treble response, when all that was really needed was cleaning and degaussing!

ADDITIONAL TIPS

Never leave the recorder turned off with the controls in the "play" or "record" position. This will press the rubber pinch wheel against the capstan. The result? A flat spot in the rubber which may be permanent and cause a once around "bump" or wow that may continue to exist for the life of the recorder. This is easy to do with amateur equipment so watch out.

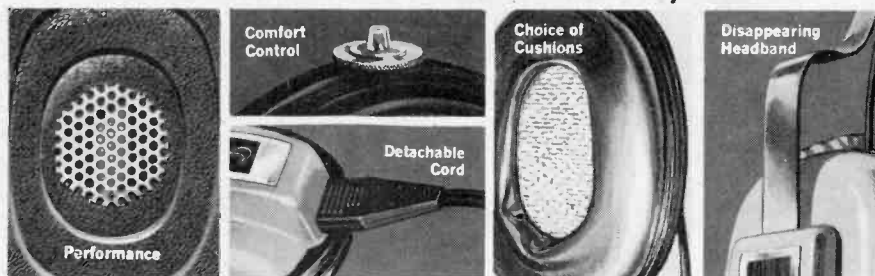

You can improve the signal-to-noise ratio of all your high fidelity equipment by periodically removing every connecting "patch cord," spraying a small amount of TV tuner or contact cleaner on the plugs, and then working them in and out of the sockets. Patch cords are often a source of other problems. They consist of two conductors, a central wire and an outer shield. Often one or the other of these will break, causing the loss of the signal. Sometimes just a loud hum will be heard instead of the music, or the sound will be very faint with the volume full on. Here is good reason to keep a spare patch cord around. Substitute the spare cord for the others, one-by-one, to see if a broken wire is the cause for signal loss.

Lubrication of recorder mechanical parts is seldom required. Be sure to consult your recorder manual for advice on this. If lubrication is required it will say so and tell you what to use. Do not grab an oil can and start lubricating everything in sight in the spirit of preventive maintenance!

Rubber transmission belts, located inside the recorder, require eventual replacement. If you are mechanically minded, there will be no problem. But don't replace a defective belt with just any belt that appears to fit around the pulleys. Get an exact replacement from the manufacturer of your recorder. Probably the largest single source of belt problems comes during changing speeds. Read the manual to see what is recommended. With some recorders speed changes should be made while the transport is running; others are just the reverse.

Features never before offered on a stereo/headset

are standard on the new Telex professional quality . . .

TAPE CARTRIDGE SYSTEMS

Threading magnetic tape from reel-to-reel, through guides, past heads and capstan, is a source of annoyance to some people. This is the age of automation. Many would like to drop a reel of tape in the recorder, press a button, then have "instant music" without the bother of threading.

Back in 1958, RCA introduced their "Instantape" machine. It uses a reel-to-reel cartridge, with automatic shut-off, that contains 600 feet of 1 mil polyester tape. This allows 1 hour of stereo music at 3¾, or 2 hours of 1⅞. Though some of these machines are still being sold, it never really got off the ground.

Then in 1960 the Revere-Wollensak Division of the 3M Co., together with CBS Laboratories, came up with another entirely different concept. The cartridge is 3½ inches square, 5/16

WHAT IS THERE ABOUT THE NEW UHER 9000 TAPE DECK THAT ALLOWS IT TO CARRY ITS OWN PROOF OF PERFORMANCE?

The new Uher 9000 Tape Deck represents the ultimate in precision and craftsmanship. As documentary evidence of his quality a test certificate and an original frequency response curve sheet accompany every Uher 9000 that leaves the factory. Here are some of its sophisticated features that back up this performance:

(a) Exclusive computer-designed modules. Five separate plug-in cards, (record, playback, equalizer, power supply, and push-pull R-C bias oscillator circuit), assures extremely simple servicing... if it ever needs it. (b) Tape tension control—guarantees lowest wow and flutter. (c) Solid State Design (d) Illuminated VU Meters. (e) Verrier adjustment of playback head. (f) 4 track stereo—4 track mono recording and playback with built-in mixer control for both channels. (g) Sound on sound switch. (h) Detachable plexiglass cover.

For the complete immediate report on this great tape deck write for literature or judge for yourself by hearing a demonstration at your local Hi Fi dealer.

inches thick, and plays at  $1\frac{7}{8}$  ips using 450 feet of special tape 0.146 inches wide. Several cartridges can be stacked and played automatically. Here the fidelity is acceptable, and a complete system costs about \$400.

In the past year or two the Fidelipac Viking (endless loop cartridge) has gained a substantial increase in sales due, mainly, to the promotional efforts of Earl ("Mad Man") Muntz. He introduced this unit into automobiles for "highway hi-fi," set up national distributors, and kept the price for a recorder, with installation, close to $100. Muntz Stereo Pak and Auto Stereo offer comparable systems. They are still the major factor in this growing industry although their outstanding success has invited competition.

The Muntz and Auto Stereo sound is as good as reel-to-reel records in the same price class. Besides the ambient noise level in any case is high enough to make these machines sound just great. They are easy to operate and cartridges can be changed even while on the road. Ford Motor Co. has announced that stereo tape machines will be available as optional equipment in their new automobiles. Other auto manufacturers may follow suit.

What kind of music is available for this type of recorder? Most of the developers have made arrangements for a complete library (usually standards and pops) of anywhere from one hundred to over a thousand selections. These are usually priced from $3.95 to $6.95 and can be a source of real listening pleasure for the freeway combatant.

HEADPHONES

Mention of headphones (or "earphones") immediately conjures up the image of crystal sets and radio hams. Present headsets, however, are vastly improved in frequency response and comfort over those of yesteryear. Their obvious and outstanding advantage is that they create a private sonic world. If you are an apartment dweller, or live in a school dormitory, headphones will let you hear what you want, when you want, and as loudly as you want, without becoming a persona non grata. Moreover, your listening is divorced from all ambient noise—barking dogs, vehicular traffic—which is of great advantage to urbanites.

Listening with headphones is an unique experience. There is a feeling of being closer to the sound source. High frequencies seem improved because they are not masked by room noise. But bass notes may seem poorer than they actually are because, though you hear them, they are not felt by our body. There are psychological factors too. As the direction of sound does not change with head movement, there is some disorientation which some people find perplexing.

Regardless, don't let these few reservations keep you from evaluating headphones. It may be your only way to listen at times. The advantage of privacy far outweighs any disadvantages. Extension cords are available, up to 25 feet in length, so you can listen anywhere in a room.

HOME VIDEO RECORDING

Last year (FM & Fine Arts, Nov., 1964) we predicted that the "first video tape recorders offered will probably have a price nearer $1,000 . . ." To date three home video recorders have been introduced.

The first of these was the British

SUPERSCOPE®

250-A

The 250-A is a solid-state 4-track tape machine that is housed in a handsome walnut cabinet base. It includes two professional type V.U. meters, an automatic shut-off and a simple single knob operation for all functions.

WE HAVE A COMPLETE STOCK OF AMPEX PRE-RECORDED AND BLANK TAPE.

Custom System Design by Audio Engineers

Wesgrove VKR-500 supplied as a kit for $392, plus freight. This machine gulps up standard triple-play (1/2 mil) audio tape at the speed of 150 ips. Assembly is difficult, definitely not for the neophyte, and the results — very mediocre — and the picture unstable.

Next to announce a video recorder was Sony. Basic price for their "Videocorder" is $995, without the 9 inch monitor. Price with the monitor, which acts as a regular television receiver also, is $1,250. A video camera is available for $350. The Videocorder uses 7 inch reels, containing 2370 feet of 1/2 inch wide video tape, for one hour of recording. Estimated cost of tape is $40 per reel. A TV program can be watched on the monitor while it is being simultaneously recorded. Both recorder and monitor are transistorized for a system weight of 66 pounds. There are fewer scanning lines than conventional recorders in this country; frequency response is 2.2 megacycles. In demonstrations the picture quality appeared rather good. This is a workable home video recorder.

Ampex has also announced manufacture of a home outfit. This instrument sells for $1,095, operates at 9.6 ips (one hour recording) or 4.8 ips (two hours recording). Frequency response is 3.2 Mc at 9.6 ips and 2.0 Mc at 4.8. A 2900 foot reel of 1 inch wide video tape costs $65. Any TV set can be modified for connection to this video recorder for about $25.

Both the Ampex and the Sony recorders may be available for the 1965 Christmas season. Other manufacturers have announced plans for similar machines but have not demonstrated them as yet.

The prospect of home video recording becoming as common as audio recording makes the problem of purchasing recorded videotapes apparent. Many independents have been taping Broadway plays, travelogues and the like, but most agree, that very little will be available until producers and copyright owners are convinced that there is a market. It can be safely predicted however that educational features such as Twentieth Century and Profiles in Courage will be on videotape for use in colleges and schools next year.

Laurindo Almeida

JOHNNY GUARNIERI
 "Piano Dimensions"
 Dot DLP-3647 (M), DLP-25647 (S)

Guarnieri has been building a private band of aficionados ever since his days with the Artie Shaw Gramercy Five. He is unquestionably one of the top flight jazz pianists, and has in recent years been developing a technique which he calls "stereo piano." More than just a catch phrase, it is a style which not only has its own musical values but which makes a piano (his, at least) legitimately adaptable to stereo recording. He plays not the usual melody-in-the-right-hand rhythm-in-the-left kind of piano but a genuine two-handed piano with an original and highly interesting contrapuntal approach.

Laurindo Almeida
 "Suenos" (Dreams)
 Capitol — T-2345

Almeida's new album is as noteworthy for what it hasn't got as for what it has. No big orchestra, rhythm section, overdubbing or other electronic gimmickry; it's just the single beautiful sound of the Spanish guitar. Almeida's program is varied and challenging, and his performance is its usual non-better-than quality. A thoroughly delightful album.

CHARLES IVES
 "Sonatas for Violin and Piano"
 Folkways — FM 3346 and FM 3347

The renewed and growing interest in one of America's earliest, greatest and most intriguing composers, Charles Ives, has resulted in the release of these four sonatas (two to a set) as recorded last year by Paul Zukofsky (violin) and Gilbert Kalish (piano). The compositions, written between 1902 and 1914, reveal Ives' extraordinary ability to combine endemic Americana with personal and, at the time, avant-garde musical explorations. These are not period pieces for academic study; they are important and rewarding experiences in contemporary American music.

YVONNE PRINTEMPS
 "Les Trois Valses" and others.
 Pathe — FALP 30.320

Yvonne Printemps, actress and chanteuse, was one of the most famous, talented and beloved figures of the French (and international) theatre. This album, a collection of exquisite musical moments, was originally recorded some ten years ago, shortly before her death. She features the music of Oscar Straus, among others, and though most of the songs are solo performances, she is sometimes joined by Pierre Fresnay and Sacha Guitry. A rare and delightful release.

DONNE ("Love Poems")
 Argo RG-403
T. S. ELLIOT ("Four Quartets")
 Argo RG-11

Two new albums in a well-selected and well-produced series of the best in English poetry. The Donne poems, twenty-six of them, are here read by Richard Johnson, Peter Orr and William Squire, while the well-known "Four Quartets" of Eliot are presented by Robert Speaight, prominent English actor and Eliot authority. Other poets represented are Dylan Thomas, Stephen Spender, John Masefield, W. H. Auden, William Blake, William Wordsworth and others. In the case of some of the contemporary poetry, the poets themselves do the interpreting. Worth investigating.

WOODY GUTHRIE
 "Bed on the Floor"
 Verve-Folkways FV/FVS9007

A full-up album of heretofore unrelease Guthrie recordings covering a ten year period from the time he came to New York until he became disablingly ill. He proves again what doesn't need proving, that he is one of the real ones, one of the giants, in the American world of words and song. On some of the numbers he is joined by Cisco Houston and Sonny Terry.

PIANO MUSIC OF ALKAN
 Raymond Lewenthal, pianist
 RCA-Victor LM/LSC-2815

Perhaps the most unusual and certainly one of the most gratifying album releases of the year. Charles-Valentin Alkan (1813-1888) has been until recently an almost totally forgotten composer, while Raymond Lewenthal has certainly been among the lesser-known contemporary pianists. Lewenthal, however, has made a major effort of researching Alkan, man and music, and of becoming an interpreter of the composer's immensely difficult but exciting music. The result is the emergence of two major musical figures. The combination of Alkan's compelling and original music plus Lewenthal's almost unbelievable performances make this a truly exciting album.

SCHUMANN

"Konzertstück for Four Horns & Orch."

"Konzertstück for Piano & Orch."

Nonesuch—H-1044 (m), H-71044 (s)

Nonesuch, the enterprising low-priced (list—$2.50 per disk) subsidiary of Elektra Records, would seem to have chosen its trade-mark aptly, for its catalogue is a growing collection of carefully selected repertoire, notable for its refreshing, relative lack of duplication on other labels.

Music lovers like myself, whose diet does not contain enough Schumann in live performance these days, will be nourished by the interesting coupling of seldom heard compositions.

The work for four horns is an attractive product of Schumann's dashing, extroverted "half" of his personality — that part of himself which the composer characterized as "Floreston" in his own writings on musical matters. The two outer movements feature bold leaps for the horns, the last movement being quite breathtaking as the four soloists tumble all over each other in a high-spirited display of brilliant virtuosity.

The overside Konzertstück for Piano and Orchestra, also known as the Introduction and Allegro appassionato, represents Schumann's quieter, more introverted "half" of his nature, which he nick-named "Eusebius." This work is more poetic than that for the horns, and exudes a dreamy romanticism not unlike that of Chopin, whom Schumann greatly admired.

MONTSERRAT CABALLE

"Songs of Rodrigo and Montsalvatge"

Odeon—LALP-668 (m),

ASDL-833 (s)

Soprano Montserrat Caballe (pronounced Ca-bal-jay) electrified both the critics and laity at her New York debut last April in the title role of Donizetti's Lucretia Borgia, presented by the American Opera Society. The

Herald-Tribune reported hers "is one of those spectacular voices which can work miracles on an audience already familiar with the likes of Callas and Sutherland."

On the strength of Caballe's first album — a recital of songs by Rodrigo and Montsalvatge — it is easy to hear what all the oles were about. The voice is truly beautiful, with a kind of clarity and control not unlike those of her great compatriot, Victoria de los Angeles. There is a suggestion of more dramatic power in Saballe's production, however, although the repertoire in this album does not really put this quality to the test.

If you want to "scoop" all of your music-loving friends with an important new voice, from which, undoubtedly, much more will be heard (she debuts at the "Met" this season), you have an exciting opportunity with Senorita Caballe. One slight warning: unless you are a devoted aficionado of the sensuous, somewhat languorous "Spanish" sound, this rather monochromatic collection of songs is best heard in short "takes."

The last reason in the world to buy an ADC 18 speaker is that its price has been cut by $65.00.

(But you must admit it's tempting.)

This is the same ADC 18, newly styled, about which High Fidelity said, "The response of the ADC-18 was extremely clean and smooth throughout its range, which is estimated to extend from below 30 cps to beyond audibility... It is a very smooth, natural-sounding speaker system that strikes us as one of the finest presently available..."

Electronics World reported, "The tone-burst measurements pointed up the excellent transient response and freedom from breakup and ringing of both drivers..."

Audio stated, "The ADC 18... has one of the fullest 'bottom ends' we have experienced... This fine speaker belongs in the top rank of available speakers..."

This is the same ADC 18 that features the first rectangular woofer. You get twice the radiating surface of conventional woofers.

This is the same ADC 18 that is a fine piece of furniture as well as a fine speaker.

Buy it because you can save $65.00??? Why not!

The ADC 18 is also available in contemporary styling at a slightly higher price.

FM NEWS

It was the week that wasn't. Our faces are red and deservedly so. With apologies both to our readers and our participating FM stations, we take full responsibility for the unfortunate goof that occurred in our September issue. For six years and thousands of hours of proofreading we have endeavored to keep our program schedules as accurate as is humanly possible. How we scrambled the five day period starting September 22, no one will ever be sure. We do want to thank the many readers who called out attention to the error, and also those FM stations whose announcements helped to ease the confusion.

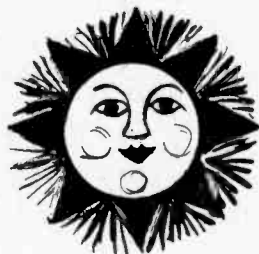

Music schedules for KFMU have not been included for the hours before 2 pm this month due to anticipated program changes for the morning and early afternoon hours. Programing for these hours will appear when specific changes have been made and schedules are firm.

The all-jazz station, KNOB, has added Stevo, long-time jazz personality on KBCA, to its roster of disc jockeys. Stevo will be very much at home at KNOB for he is well known in the Los Angeles area as an authority on jazz.

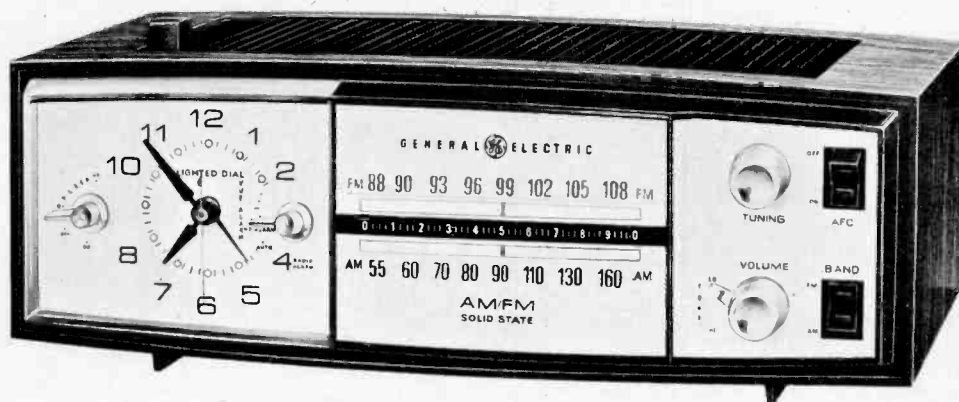

Long Beach FM listeners now have a new station to tune in; its KJLH, 102.3 on the dial. Programing will include contemporary arrangements of popular standards recorded by top selling recording artists. The station is community oriented and will cooperate with all meaningful civic projects with daily news, local sports events and announcements of local activities.

George Burton is the latest addition to the announcing staff of KGGK. Burton, a graduate of Cal State in Los Angeles, produced a weekly college series, Dateline Campus, for four years which was heard on seven major Southern California stations and in Hawaii.

His programing for KGGK will include interviews, a daily serial satire on "The Fugitive" and amusing telephone calls to unsuspecting individuals.

G-E's NEW SOLID-STATE FM/AM CLOCK RADIO

- Graceful low Flair Look — perfect match for today's modern styling.
- New Vue-Alarm — a lot of light tells you the alarm is set.
- Snoze-Alarm® and lighted dial clock, slumber switch.
- Handsome wood-grain finish on polystyrene.
- Solid State - 14 transistors . . . plays instantly, no warm up.
- Attractive lighted dial numbers — red for AM, turquoise for FM.

FM PROGRAM LISTINGS

1. For your convenience, program details are listed each hour alphabetically by station call letters. To determine station frequency, refer to the last page of this section.
2. If a particular station is not listed under a specific hour, check the previous hour's listing. Often the program has been continued from the previous hour.
3. Stereo programs are indicated by a ● within the log listing section, and noted on our special "Stereo Chart" for your convenience.

4. All programming listed in the following pages has been submitted by the stations represented and is subject to change without notice.
5. A list of the stations represented, their frequencies, power, hours of operation, address, and telephone number is available on the last page of this section.
6. Abbreviations used: other than standard abbreviations, a major key is shown in a capital letter, a minor key in a small or lower case letter.

"Okay, we don't start the picnic until we find the Kahlúa"

"A picnic isn't a picnic without Kahlúa."

"Sure, we can fry the fish and the hamburgers. We can broil the steak and the ribs and the chicken. But they just don't taste as good unless basted on both sides with Kahlúa."

"At least the chocolate cake and the brownies we brought were made with butter flavored with Kahlúa. But until we find the bottle there's no sense pouring the hot coffee. Or the hot chocolate."

"It's got to be around here somewhere, it's the first thing we put in the picnic basket and the first thing we opened when we got here. Unless we find that bottle of Kahlúa it might as well rain."

Don't put all your Kahlúa in one basket. Keep an extra bottle at home and then send for your free copy of our astonishingly clever Recipe Book, which tells you the many ways to enjoy Kahlúa. Do it now. Quick. Before it rains.
