CANADIAN GROWTH

Highlighted by New Private TV Network

By JULES LAROCHELLE

Radio-TV Daily, Canadian Bureau

THE YEAR 1961 was a stupendous one for the Canadian radio and television broadcasting industry, composed of the crown-owned Canadian Broadcasting Corporation on the one hand, and the independent broadcasters on the other.

The major event in industry in 1961 was the start of the privately-owned TV stations in the major cities of Canada (heretofore the monopoly of the CBC). The entry of these stations resulted in the founding of the country's first privately-owned TV network, and the first time that the CBC had rivals, on a network basis.

CTV Television Network, Limited links eight stations. The CBC meanwhile continued to grow, operating two television networks, English-language from Victoria, B.C., to St. John's, Nfld., 4,000 miles, or longest in the world; French-language network which extends from Sturgeon Falls, Ontario, to Moncton, New Brunswick—in every respect the number one French-language network in the world.

In radio, great activity and good results prevailed for both the publicly-owned CBC and private stations. The number of stations grew as both CBC and private interests added other outlets. The pattern of radio broadcasting changed somewhat during the year. Broadcasters, who generally maintained favorable advertising revenue, offered greater variety of "domestic" programs with more and more emphasis on news reports, either local or national and international.

Country-wide coverage of both radio and TV by the CBC and privately-owned stations attained a wider level. The CBC national service is now within reach of 98 per cent of the population for radio, and 90 percent or more for TV. Extension of this coverage to areas not already served is steadily progressing.

The independents also have plans in mind for extending coverage. At recent hearing of the Board of Broadcast Governors, Spencer Caldwell, president of CTV Network, said his eight-station private chain must have more stations if it is to gain revenue needed to produce good Canadian programs.

The independent TV stations, as was expected, operated at a loss despite obtaining substantial advertising. S. M. Finlayson, president of Canadian Marconi (operator of Montreal's CFCF-TV) said that 1962 should see a considerable improvement in operating results and that the firmer establishment of CTV network in the Canadian Scene will take place.

As for color TV, the situation in 1961 remained unchanged and start of color telecasting still seems quite in the distance. The CBC is proceeding with caution on the matter, although keeping in close touch with developments in the U.S.

FM radio made some headway during the year, and many in the industry felt that long-term prognosis for it is excellent. FM with its great possibilities for high fidelity and stereo may enjoy unprecedented popularity in the near future.

LOCAL PRODUCTIONS

Come of Age Through Program Exchange

By DONALD H. McGANNON, President
Westinghouse Broadcasting Company

THE broadcasting industry is watching the coming of age of locally produced television programs. The station manager who simply switches the network on with one hand and old feature films with the other is becoming an antique exhibit useful only for presentation in some electronic museum of the future.

Local stations are seeking out new sources of talent and programs; the search will be successful, I believe. To succeed, television requires vitality and the public demands variety. There are no national programming sources capable of completely fulfilling the needs of viewers, despite the excellence of their service. Other sources are necessary. One of the most important in the years ahead, in my opinion, will be the local station.

There is a national trend beginning in television that will permit program exchanges between stations of the best locally produced programs; of an educational informational, and cultural nature, to begin with, but ultimately involving the whole spectrum of television programming that is local in origin.

The total effect of station exchanges will be a widespread enrichment of the medium.

The word "local" is almost a misnomer. True, many programs are limited in appeal to the immediate area served by the station, but many go far beyond that. What captivates viewers in Baltimore may also often demand their attention in Boston, Cleveland, San Francisco or Pittsburgh. They have regional interests which frequently become national concerns. An exciting program debating the pros and cons of capital punishment in Southern California, though the circumstances may be of local origin, can dramatize a subject of interest to Americans everywhere.

Every community at one time or another has been involved with the crisis in education: adequate classroom facilities, decent salaries for teachers, and the problem of why Johnny can't read. With the exchange of high quality programs and the resultant national dissemination of local experiences, there is every possibility that we Americans will be discovering solutions for each other's problems in a way possible only in an electronic age.

The audience in Westinghouse Broadcasting Company markets possess international interests, and so on numerous occasions the WBC stations have produced international documentaries. The news assignment may be Formosa, Korea, Africa, or West Berlin. A major international news event is generally of national interest. It matters little to the viewer who produced the documentary on South Vietnam or East Berlin. The widespread emergence of station production at the local, regional, and international levels will mean a new programming dimension and enrichment for viewers everywhere.

TOMORROW'S RADIO NEEDS

Are Demanded of Radio Today

By CLIFFORD J. BARBORKA, JR., President
Better Broadcast Bureau, Inc.

NATIONAL spot radio faces an unparalleled opportunity for growth in tomorrow's expanding advertising world. But to capitalize on this challenge its selling needs must be attended to today.

National advertisers and their agencies will continue to find it difficult to relate spot radio's many values to their own sales problems as long as they fail to understand the medium's many aspects.

In order for spot radio to be implemented within the concepts of creative advertising, its many parts must be understood and placed in their proper perspective — programming, promotion, production, personalities and community identification. And perhaps the most important feature of all, the great ability of spot radio to operate and function at the local level for a national advertiser.

Now is not the time to make excuses for our poor position in the advertising spectrum. It is the time to take advantage of the advertiser's need to move goods off the shelf at the point of sale as well as his hunger for fresh ideas to accomplish the sales objective. Radio's great responsibility is to demonstrate the power of spot radio as a medium, a marketing tool, a copy vehicle and for its merchandising reliability.

Let's not forget that no one medium is a panacea for product selling ills. The basic ingredients of any medium can serve specific purposes. The demonstrable difference in media selling is not sitting back in confusion over a competitive medium's advantages, but in critically reviewing our own disadvantages and problems. And not to look upon them as problems, but as creative opportunities.

Over the past 20 years, in spite of enormous advertising advances, spot radio has remained a captive of the status quo. Advertising volume has risen from $2 billion in 1940 to $12 billion in 1960, while spot radio's share has decreased from 2.4 to 1.8 percent. Many experts predict a $25 billion ad expenditure by 1970. Let's ask ourselves, "Where will we be then?"

Radio can take heart over one major misconception. It is not true that most agencies or advertisers have little interest in radio. What is true is that radio has not been sold properly nationally. We have found, in fact, that most agencies and advertisers are not only interested in radio, but are seeking new, fresh ways to use the medium. They recognize radio for at least two of its greatest values—cost efficiency and the memorability and impact of sound.

But to move an advertiser and his agency to the dotted line in any important way requires ideas and sales thinking geared to the advertiser's side of the fence, based on his needs. Also, it requires that radio salesmen at all levels hold the line against deals and maintain integrity for their rate card and profession.

In its short history, the BBB has assisted in the development of spot radio as counselors specializing in new and creative uses of the medium on behalf of advertisers, agencies, representatives and stations.

'BEEPER PHONE'

Vital to Negro News Leadership

By HARRY NOVIK, President
Station WLIB

NO aspect of a local news operation is more important to a community radio station than the beeper phone. It not only provides the station with a valuable image, but properly exploited gives vitality and leadership to a news department impossible to achieve through normal use of wire service or rewritten local copy.

At New York City's leading Negro Market station, we invest a considerable part of our annual expenditure for news in beeper coverage. It is the only way to angle a top news story toward the special interests of our community. When independence for the British West Indies was discussed in London, we were able to bring the story to our community by direct beeper phone calls to England. Similarly, the release of the reputed Mau-Mau leader in Kenya gave us special prominence because we interviewed him by beeper phone direct to Africa.

The technique of interviews, as developed by us, involves a system of questioning to connect the person interviewed with the interests of our community. The tape is recorded in "takes" so that portions may be used on various programs during the day. The completed tape is then filed for future reference.

Significantly, the statements obtained in such beeper interviews form the basis of exclusive stories frequently used in newspapers with credit to us as the source. Thus, on occasion, portions of the beeper interview which we are unable to use are nonetheless of important promotional value in establishing our overall operation as a reputable source of news. Many of the tapes are reused in documentaries, as was done in the "WLIB Freedom Ride" program.

Our station has "world-community news reports" every half hour. It is the policy of our news department to include at least one beeper, or on-the-scene interview in each such program. Without this addition, our news would be entirely adequate since it is reliably gathered, both by our own reporters and through the press association. But it would not be leadership news, the quality that distinguishes a station in any market.

Whether sponsored or not, the use of beeper and on-the-scene interpolations carries over into every aspect of station promotion. Thus, top stories are always given highlight promos in our daily schedule during which we call attention to up-coming exclusive stories.

During 1962, we hope to expand our beeper coverage with the additional use of feature material. We are now planning to supplement our United Nations News, in addition to the weekly report of African Nations prepared by our UN correspondent. We also plan a "Quote of the Week" series based on our beeper tapes.

During the past year, we totaled 1,826 beeper interviews with calls throughout the United States, parts of Europe and Africa. The telephone toll costs have been the smallest part of our budget, averaging not more than $250 a week, but the pay-off in prestige, leadership and community impact has been incalculable.

JOURNALISM'S VACUUM

Pubservice Opportunity That Nets $-Return

By ARTHUR PERLES, Editor
Radio-Television Daily

WHAT does it take to jolt most radio and TV station operators out of their complacency — or could it be a fear-induced mental paralysis?

On every side, they have been explicitly told and advised by experts that:

"They cannot afford not to editorialize" (LeRoy Collins, president, NAB 39th convention).

"Pointing up problems, giving leadership to solutions" is the station's prime role in a community (Daniel W. Kops, WAVZ, June 1, 1960).

" . . . the licensee is required to devote a reasonable percentage of broadcast time to discussion of public issues of interest in the community." (FCC, June 6, 1949).

Precedent and opinion are legion and should long since have propelled every broadcaster into the spectrum of editorialing over his channel. So, you inquire, what's been the net result?

The answer is astounding: practically nothing! As this is being written, there are relatively but a handful of sight or sound outlets that measure up in maturity to their franchise stature.

Some oppose publicly expressing opinions because to do so might cause them to lose advertising revenue — even though their own NAB is prepared to demonstrate that editorials on the air will heighten a station's prestige and, as a consequence, actually increase its revenues.

While license-holders collectively fight off Federal tendencies to regulate them into flaccid submission, the rundown of call-letters in both electronic media is literally loaded with examples of station management which pig-headedly refuses to make a decision that could put them only on the side of the angels.

These reactionaries of broadcasting — still hiding behind the 1941 Mayflower decision — would be doing themselves and their industry a great service and bring it honor if, for example, they examined the effectiveness of editorializing as demonstrated by Harry Novik, WLIB, New York, president.

Catering to a Negro market and audience, he realizes the criminal cruelties in penning multitudes of colored families within the Harlem slums, where avaricious landlords charge enormous rentals for foul dwellings. WLIB has trained its editorial guns on state and municipal indifference to get action on a bill that has been a political football for years. The measure would compel the city to make tenement repairs and, if the owner refused to foot the costs, seize the property.

After the second World War, we experienced a wave of newspaper consolidation. Today, there are fewer than 80 cities in the whole country which have more than one printing-press voice.

Here is the vacuum of journalism that must be filled by station broadcasting. It is an opportunity for unparalleled public service that pays rich dividends in the assurances of service faithfully rendered and—unmistakably, in dollar return.

Mr. Station Owner, what are you going to do about it? Now . . . please.

END OF THE (MASS) WORLD

Rise of the "Specialized Mass Markets"

By RALPH N. WEIL, President
Key Broadcast Management, Inc.

JOHN CROSBY, in a column called "Century of the Uncommon Man", found some memorable language with which to say something that we have insistently been trying to tell the industry and its advertisers since 1959, when Arnold Hartley and I devised the term, "Specialized Mass Markets", to describe the two audiences of WOV in New York—Italian and Negro.

Crosby says we have to stop thinking in ordinary "mass" terms. "Mass movies", he says, "are finished." "Mass magazines are in terrible trouble". "Even in aggression, the very latest thing is the specialized war!"

If for mass we equate the word "undifferentiated", we can join with John Crosby in reciting the obsequies for a day and age in radio that are over. No station today can be "all things to all men", and with the bounty of facilities available in America, there's no reason to try.

But "mass" has another connotation: that of large numbers. It's in this sense that we use the term "Specialized Mass Markets".

San Antonio, Texas, is a city where 53% of the population is of Latin-American origin. Its Spanish traditions are the principal component in the city's charm. Our station, KCOR, is dedicated to serving this Latin majority day and night—in Spanish, because the Latins of San Antonio and South Texas generally, speak Spanish first — learn English later — and proudly continue to think in Spanish all their lives. A specialized radio service, for a mass audience — 53% of the city. Hence: a Specialized Mass Market.

In St. Louis, where we operate KATZ, the Negro population approaches one in three. KATZ is devoted 100% night and day, to Negro programming. The Negro market in the area is evolving rapidly, attaining new high levels of purchasing power and cultural achievement. Since the Negro population is growing at a rate 57% greater than the white, we can look forward to a large, highly developed community whose importance will increasingly be felt in the metropolis as a whole. KATZ's appeal is qualitatively specialized, quantitatively mass.

We could say something similar for our station in Meriden, Connecticut, WMMW, which is specialized in this sense: it is intimately integrated with the day-to-day life of the Meriden - Wallingford - Berlin - Cheshire - Southington enclave in central Connecticut. WMMW stresses alert reporting of everything that goes on in the area. I hesitate to apply the "Specialized Mass Market" nomenclature to WMMW, but it does come back to the theme of John Crosby's column—in a world where a colossal process of "undifferentiation has been going on, men resist by finding ways of declaring their own special interests, and one of these is intensified interest in the locality in which one lives and works, and with which one can identify. It is American individualism reasserting itself in its own way against the onslaught of the deindividualized "mass" concept."

The result is WMMW, a station that lives the lives of its community.
