And Likewise— JACK BENNY

By Howard Wilcox

If You're Looking for the Secret of Jack Benny's Hold upon His Public, Hippodrome Along with Him and Get His Mastery of Satire

From lingerie buyer to an fame has been Mary Livingstone's jump since she became Mrs. Jack Benny

Jack shows Nancy Carroll and innumerable other attractive femmes in his latest motion picture Transatlantic Merry-Go-Round that Casanova has been outclassed

Picture a fellow at the top of his profession with sponsors begging for his services, whose slogan is "Situation wanted"—and you have Jack Benny.

It's not a job Jack wants. His crying need really is for situations—scenes about which he can build those comedy circumstances which have made him the most beloved of all the jesters of the air.

Puns are not in his line. An occasional play on words necessarily finds its way into his scripts, but the premise upon which this polished performer has built his outstanding popularity is that of the clown of the old Greek hippodrome, the huffoon whose heart bleeds while he smiles and gibes to amuse King Public.

And how that regal audience smiles with him!

Under-dog—that's the Jack Benny of the air. In his program somebody forever is getting ribbed. And that somebody is inevitably Benny himself.

Mary Livingstone, his wife, plagues him; the orchestra leader deserts him in his hour of need; the announcer turns the tables on him, and seemingly everyone on the program conspires to defeat him. But Jack jests bravely on. Sympathy is his by virtue of every human and humane trait, and in that bond of commiseration lies the adoration of a nation.

Of course, it's all make-believe, but in Jack's capable hands it is all so real, so natural in its portrayal, that listeners subconsciously find themselves lined up as supporters in his misery. This is the essence of good comedy. Almost anyone with a flair for snappy presentation can take the comprehensive English language and twist it into the ribald jest or the merry mot, but their mouthings, save to a motonic few, have none of the quality of endurance.

Back of the Benny motif are sweetness and charm, the principles upon which personality and its attendant success are built.

Perhaps it is because Jack many times has needed public sympathy in his personal life, that he knows so well the value of soliciting it for the character which he portrays on the radio.

The Benny of today who names his own weekly salary—and who has been playing tag for two years with a needed vacation but can't run fast enough to escape the would-be sponsors who hem him in—is a far different figure from the disappointed artist who saw eclipse in the decadence of the vaudeville theater, and consequently faced the future with uncertainty.

But in the interim he encountered the kind of experience which mellows evaluations and which, in his case, made him turn from the edged sort of wit to the more subtle field of satire. In short, he had faced situations. Nothing more natural than that he should turn to them as the background for his later comedy efforts. He had learned that to be on the wrong end of a joke and take it gracefully and courageously won him more attention than a shopworn quip which was worth little.

Benny looked about him when radio was presented as an outlet, and quickly determined that a certain group of theatrical stars were trading almost 100 per cent on their prestige from the stage. He knew his safety lay in his material rather than in his name. It had to be different and it had to be instantaneous in its appeal. Radio is the short-order restaurant of entertainment. Listeners will not sit around and wait for a "guy to get good." So his flair for satire was invoked.

An instance of Jack's experience was his first encounter with Goodman Ace. This scintillating quipster was then a columnist on a Kansas City paper.

Benny, not long out of the Navy, and still just a fiddler who gagged as he played, was at a Kansas City vaudeville house, and in his hunt for paragraphic material Ace saw the show. His adverse criticism of Jack wasn't even cleverly subtle.

Following his natural inclination, Jack looked up the columnist. He placed himself in the position of a chap needing a helping hand, and won Ace's sympathy. He sought suggestions and he got them—good ones, too—suggestions that have helped him on his way to success. A friendship was established that still endures, and many a gay quip in Benny's radio acts today is the fruit of Ace's facile ingenuity.

Another sympathetic and guiding influence in Jack's life has been Mary Livingstone, the Pacific coast girl who deserted a lingerie buyer's remunerative job to cast her lot with the tall funny man. Between them they do a deal of bantering, but her complete consideration for him whatever his trials has been just another window through which to admit the sunshine of sympathetic tolerance.

Thus the marvel of Jack Benny's success is dissipated. It rests securely on the Wanegon, Illinois, boy's hard-won knowledge of the world's love for the clown, on the current of concord that flows from the contented to the oppressed—and an Jack's mastery of satire.

Jack Benny is on the air Sundays at 7 p. m. EST or 6 p. m. CST. The network is NBC-WJZ. The makers of Jello are the sponsors.

Father Coughlin Speaks

What Prevents a Just and Living Wage? was the title of Father Coughlin's address delivered from the Shrine of the Little Flower at Royal Oak, Michigan, Sunday afternoon November 25th. In it he outlined the principles upon which his National Union for Social Justice proposes to insure a living wage for all. And he hurled a challenge at the outworn philosophy of the United States Chamber of Commerce.

He said: "We demand that the philosophy of the Chamber of Commerce be changed. Otherwise, goodbye NRA . . . Scuttle this philosophy of production for profit."

Production for profit, he said, must cease. It must be supplanted by production for the common good. 527,000,000 acres of land, potentially productive land, remain idle. There is a deficit of 60,000,000 suits of clothes for men, and of 52,000,000 garments for women, (on the basis of two suits of clothes for each man and two dresses or two ensembles for each woman).

There is also a deficiency of 13,000,000,000 quarts of milk, and similarly staggering deficiencies of other necessities of life. The Almighty has supplied them in abundance. The deficiency exists because men do not have the money to buy them. Therefore the old philosophy, as supported by the United States Chamber of Commerce and the tottering capitalist system, must go.

Father Coughlin outlined seven points in a platform of obstacles which must be overcome before a just and living wage for all is obtained.

The policies of 1929, Father Coughlin said—and the same policies now supported by the Chamber of Commerce, are obstacles to the working man. The effect of this statement was to pose the question: How can men feed and clothe themselves—"one step this side of nature"—when a policy of dollars for the few continues?

He pointed out that a member of the Chamber, in a published article, said that among other things recommended in that article was that President Roosevelt should have the powers of a Dictator, allowing the President to scrap legislation when he thinks it necessary during such times as Congress is not in session. And Father Coughlin added: "We don't want a Mussolini in America!"

Father Coughlin pointed out that he had no personal quarrel with any member of the Chamber but that he and the Union would fight relentlessly to "scuttle" the old, out-worn policy of no-food, and plenty of dollars in the hands of the few—and to replace that policy with a workable plan of production for use of the masses.

While we have been plowing under corn and wheat—and cattle—we have been importing foodstuffs in gigantic quantity. And this is so only because of the "famine of money" made possible by the principles the Chamber of Commerce supports.

The remedy lies, according to Father Coughlin, in abolishing the policy the Chamber of Commerce advocates. And the points that must be abolished are these:

"Bourbons of Wealth Know How to Take Care of Themselves. Your Disunion Is Their Greatest Asset. Famine of Money Which the United States Chamber of Commerce Proposes to Maintain—Must Go"

Capital must cease to employ money and wage-earners' industry for the special advantage of Capital alone.

Economic domination must be taken out of the hands of the privileged few, and so rearranged that "production for general good" will be established.

There are many stockholders on the books of such industries as steel and motors, and such activities as public utilities. Those stockholders are the persons whom much of modern production is aimed to benefit. And, while those stockholders do number thousands of names, they yet are controlled by a precious few—Father Coughlin named "Mellon, Morgan, DuPont"—the control being made possible by dummy listing and representation. These few must not "grasp the soul of production."

The doctrine of the strongest surviving, at the expense of the weak—at the cost of the very lifeblood of the weak—must be changed. This, said Father Coughlin, is the old order of capitalism still existing, still advocated. It is, he said, "a breeder of wars." And he added: "Remember the French Revolution." Before he passed on to another phase of his address, he repeated: "Remember the French Revolution."

Further obstacles in the present economic system that must go, include the grasp for domination. Any system that has for its basis the protection of the privileged classes—and that alone—must go, he said in effect.

International capitalism must pass, as carried out in the lives and careers of "The Warburgs, the Rothchilds, and Morgans"; the falsity of its principle is contained in the Father's words, "My country is where my fortune is."

"The testing hour" for this old economic order has arrived, Father Coughlin said. And he repeated his challenge, "Profits are not to go to the grabbers," he added.

It is not Christianity to support a policy of deficiency of necessities, while a few control wealth.

"I used to preach a doctrine of poverty," he said. And added, in effect, that he told his people what was necessary to support the doctrine. Then he began to inquire into fundamentals. "I asked them to be patient," he said. "What I should have asked is that they be patient with me, for it was a case of the blind leading the blind."

Father Coughlin reviewed several of the principles he laid down for improved earning conditions, in his talk of Sunday, November 18. He added other principles to those. He said:

"There is demanded of the working people a union of effort so perfected that a scale of wages will be set up. Call it a commodity dollar if you like." His thought was that such a dollar would obviate the scarcity of money, and would allow farmers and industrialists and other working people to keep themselves supplied with necessities—in the laud of plenty.

He said further: "Money must no longer be our master" and: "Poverty is the breeder of holdups, lustfulness, vice . . ."

"I contend that it is impossible to have a just and living wage or a price level established for products of the farm and the factory under the system of modern capitalization."

Efforts repeatedly are made to crowd Father Coughlin's talks off the air. He took occasion to thank his loyal friends; for the instantaneous support they gave him in connection with such an attempt made recently to have the talks replaced by the Philharmonic Symphony concerts over Station WCAU in Philadelphia. "One night last week," Father Coughlin said, "as a result of a short announcement made at eleven o'clock, a vote showed 112,110 (listeners) for the continuance of the Golden Hour, 7,004 against it." The talks will continue over WCAU.

A similar attempt was made in St. Louis last Summer, he said, when Station KMOX refused to renew a contract which had expired. And in St. Louis the Radio League for Listeners alleged that St. Louis preferred to listen to the Philharmonic Orchestra.

A plea was made for all to join the National Union for Social Justice. The disunion of workers and farmers and industrialists is the greatest asset of the Bourbons of wealth. He stated clearly that applicants are not called upon for cash. Those who can contribute, will. Others who cannot, are not expected to send cash. And he reassured all that no exploitation would devolve upon those who joined.

He stated that applicants would be listed by states and by congressional districts. The purpose of this was to call upon members to fight for legislation by appealing to their Congressmen, when such appeal should be necessary. Only in this way, in our modern democracy, can individuals have a hand in bringing about legislation through their Congressmen who are in Washington. And only in this way can the valuable assets of the Bourbons of wealth be minimized.

And Mike Habits of Royalty

By Cesar Saerchinger

Personal Contacts with European Monarchs Make Fascinating the Job of Cesar Saerchinger, Who Arranges All Broadcasts Made by Royalty for the Columbia Broadcasting System. He Has Met the Queen Who Suffers Mike Fright—Several Kings Who Love to Broadcast—Others Who Want to But Cannot—the Prince Who Stutters. He Has Spared Nothing in This Intimate Revelation

A cat may look at a king. And what's more, a cat may listen to a king, these days. For royalty has taken up radio with enthusiasm. And in millions of homes, cooks and counts and carpenters can hark to queens.

The average radio fan enjoys listening to kings and their consorts. But perhaps he does not know how much the average king (if there is an average in kings) loves to broadcast to him!

It is my pleasant and exciting task to negotiate European broadcasts—including royal addresses—for the Columbia Broadcasting System. I have traveled all over the continent hunching programs in which my fellow Americans would be interested. Cables suggesting and confirming international broadcasts constantly are flashing across the Atlantic. And thus I have learned how glad kings are to pour accents royal upon the troubled waters of our time. Never before have they enjoyed such a marvelous method—as radio provides—of capturing the ears and hearts of their subjects.

Already a royal radio etiquette is growing, especially in England! And through the courts of Europe, one of the timeliest of topics is the reaction of the local royalty to the microphone. Already, tales of royal eccentricities are going the rounds. For especially does broadcasting slow the human side of sovereigns.

I have in mind that beloved monarch, Queen Wilhelmina of Holland—one of the few regal Europeans who does not like to broadcast. She was heard on the air for the first time this year. The occasion was the opening of the Dutch parliament, a yearly function. The Queen presided—the very acme of royal dignity. No one seeing or hearing her possibly could have sensed that any hidden qualm disturbed her queenly calm as she stepped up to the microphone to speak.

Yet Queen Wilhelmina at that very moment was suffering from a terrific case of mike-fright! A queen with mike-fright—who said there is nothing new under the sun! However, though Her Majesty of Holland will consent to broadcast only on state occasions because of this panic—it is impossible not to admire the queenly courage which makes her conquer her fear of the radio. She knows that the actual voice of a sovereign, speaking to her people in their own homes, is bound to have a soothing and patriotic effect in these times of unrest and economic distress. Noblesse oblige!

Very different are the feelings of King George V. of England. Sovereign of the most powerful monarchy in all human history, King George broadcasts only to the British Empire. But it is not difficult to obtain an official permission for his voice to be relayed to America.

His Britannic Majesty loves to broadcast. The Englishman is a creature of tradition—and there is between George V. and his subjects a traditional bond of sympathy which many Americans cannot understand. Beyond politics—above personal ambition—the King stands to the average Britisher as a symbol of imperial unity and an ideal of personal conduct. Well-informed Britons do not doubt that His Majesty's fondness for broadcasting resides in this bond of sympathy. The King loves to talk to his people.

And here again the human flesh and blood becomes delightfully apparent beneath the royal purple. For King George has a pet peeve about broadcasting!

He will not tolerate the presence of women and children—except of course on state occasions—when he addresses the mike. An occasion for discreetly suppressed amusement occurred when King George was asked if little Princess Elizabeth, his granddaughter, might join him in broadcasting a Christmas message to the Empire. "No women or children around when I'm broadcasting!" was the substance of his kingly reply.

Perhaps it is natural that a monarch who has been called a "sailor king" should command that the women and children be removed first.

Even to some Britishers who regard their king as a mere—though admirable—figurehead, the knowledge may come as a surprise that His Majesty insists upon preparing his own radio addresses. And furthermore, no studio official is permitted to read so much as a sentence of any one of them before it is delivered!

Queen Mary of England has been heard only once—and that briefly—in the United States. The King was on the same "program"—which was occasioned by the recent christening of that great British merchant ship, the Queen's namesake. Incidentally, Queen Mary spoke only half as long as the King. Why? Ask any English wife!

As I have mentioned, a tradition of royal etiquette already is growing in England—and this is rooted naturally in the Englishman's fondness for custom. I everybody is familiar with the story that expatriate English gentlemen dress for dinner, even when in the jungle. And around the world has gone the yarn about the typical traveling Englishman, carrying his canvas bath with him, to make sure always of having his morning tub. The English believe that there always is one right way of doing a thing, consequently even with such a new development as royal broadcasts, the national trend towards tradition-making already is giving the British a royal radio usage.

For instance, do you know that no microphone used by any member of the British royal family ever is used again? To one who isn't aware of the reasons behind it, this convention may seem silly. As a matter of fact, the basic idea is by no means new.

It comes from an old British custom of glass-smashing! To this day many ultra-loyal Britishers drink a toast to the King then smash their drinking glasses. Such a glass—says tradition—ceases to be a mere drinking utensil when the royal toast is drunk. It becomes a sort of secular chalice, and to put it to ordinary use would be a profanation.

So it is with microphones used in royal broadcasts. But they are not broken. Instead, they are saved carefully by the British Broadcasting Company in a special cabinet. And each microphone thus saved is marked with a gold plate, noting the date and occasion of its use.

The Prince of Wales, who is expected to be the next occupant of the British throne, is a very popular broadcaster. He uses the mike frequently, and is the most democratic member of his royal family. His manner is direct and informal, his speeches are pleasant and usually simple. His voice has no trace of the Oxford accent which occasionally, in the United States, emanates from New York studios.

Prince George, Wales' brother, avoids the microphone because of a slight stutter.

Behind the human side of royal broadcasts, however, is a great historical significance. Americans who have come to take President Roosevelt's radio addresses for granted, may find it hard to realize that it is one thing for a president to broadcast—and quite another for a king.

There was a time when kings did not seek the sympathy and co-operation of their subjects. Instead, they remained aloof from their people as possible. In those days, a king was considered to reign by divine right. His powers came from the Deity, not from the people—was the theory. And his exclusiveness was part of a tradition of almost-divine mystery. To disobey the king was considered both unlawful and sinful.

But not long before Columbus discovered America, men were beginning to seek natural, rather than supernatural, explanations of the things around them—including governments. Then it was that they began to decide that any government or ruler derived power, not directly from Heaven, but from the consent of the governed.

From then on, increasingly, kings have sought to please their people. Royal radio addresses are just the latest of a long line of royal concessions to public will.

A clear example of this new spirit of kingly co-operation recently was furnished by King Leopold of Belgium, who endeared himself further to his subjects by a single radio speech. The occasion was his coronation—when King Leopold's voice was relayed to America.

To the amazement of all Belgium, the young King spoke both in French and Flemish. Hitherto the royal family had spoken only in French, which for generations has been the polite or court language of Europe. But prior to his coronation Leopold mastered Flemish, and spoke fluently over the radio in both languages.

Diplomatic considerations often weigh every bit as heavily as court etiquette and national custom in arranging a royal broadcast. There's no telling when a negotiator is apt to run into snags, for though many European monarchs personally would like to step up to the mike for an informal chat with their subjects and the world at large, your modern king is often a political puppet who has his official life mapped out for him by trained advisors—or by tradition.

Consider the case of King Alfonso of Spain. When the exiled ex-king took refuge in the land of his cousin, King George of England, I attempted to arrange a broadcast for Columbia. It proved to be impossible. Though no longer a king, Alfonso could not talk because of the possibility of a protest from the Republican government in Madrid.

How different was the attitude of King Christian

Cesar Saerchinger, man of many accomplishments, not the least of which was recognizing the Welsh strain in a lap dog—at the appropriate moment

The Prince of Wales is a frequent user of the microphone. Always his manner is direct and informal, his speeches marked with the virtue of simplicity

King George V. and Queen Mary once broadcast on the same "program." The Queen's allotted time was exactly half of the King's—but she made the most of it. The King is especially enthused about his radio appearances of Denmark, when this popular and democratic monarch was approached to make his air debut. Cutting through red tape and diplomatic jitters, he addressed his remarks to the thousands of American citizens of Danish descent, via the Columbia network.

Such an arrangement would have been possible only on American airwaves, for King Christian—like many other European monarchs—feels differently toward the United States than toward any other foreign country. This, of course, is because America is peopled by immigrants from all nations.

It is rumored that the ex-Kaiser confesses to an unrelenting grudge against radio. He refuses, in any event, to have anything to do with it. This, they say, traces back to an unfortunately distorted set which was presented to him. The set was connected, turned on, and the former Kaiser tuned in expectantly. He had heard of this radio, now he was going to hear from it.

And what he did hear from it was such an ungodly series of grunts and squeals and roars that the distinguished listener turned off the set and condemned radio thenceforth and forever. Nor will he broadcast.

King Carol of Roumania is another royal radio will-o-the-wisp who has not yet been heard on the airwaves in America. I journeyed 1,000 miles in an endeavor to arrange for a broadcast from Bucharest, on the anniversary of his coronation. All negotiations were completed, the lines were in the Palace. Then a cabinet crisis developed, and the King became so distracted and worried that he called off the broadcast. He will certainly be heard before long.

Among the eminent women who have been heard on international broadcasts, aside from Queen Mary and Queen Wilhelmina, are Isabel MacDonald, daughter of Premier MacDonald; Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen, Megan Lloyd George, Lady Rhondda (who is one of the few peeresses in her own right—most titled women are titled through marriage); Viscountess Snowden, Mary Agnes Hamilton, Mary Wilkinson, and Lady Astor.

One of my jobs was to arrange for charming Isabel MacDonald to make her debut at the microphone. She confessed that the prospect of broadcasting frightened her, and she was afraid that her talk would not be sufficiently significant to warrant international interest! Moreover, she said that when she journeyed to London to broadcast, she would be lost without her afternoon tea. I promised her that we would give her tea at BBC.

Needless to say, the young Miss MacDonald's talk on settlement work was delivered with forceful simplicity, and she tackled it like a veteran. Afterwards, a specially-hired maid served tea in the studio, and the guest seemed to recover rapidly. She has spoken many times since, for her first experience proved quite thrilling to her, and she actually received fan mail from America.

Megan Lloyd George, an enthusiastic radio speaker, was heard in a special broadcast over Columbia. She spoke not on Parliament, of which she is a member, but on her beloved country, Wales. She is an ardent patriot, and is often accused of believing that every remarkable person must possess a bit of Welsh blood.

After the broadcast, Miss Lloyd George offered to give me a lift home in her limousine. Waiting for her in the car was a beautiful show dog.

"Isn't he gorgeous?" she asked me. "He must be Welsh," I replied. "Of course!" And the breadth of her smile matched my own.

King Carol is one ruler who welcomed the chance to broadcast—but crises in affairs of state had to receive his attention above all else

Betty Winkler, NBC dramatic star of Grand Hotel, and Lights Out over WENR, heard Sundays and Wednesdays respectively

They always ask it. Far be it from me to stoop to carping criticism of the great brother-(and sister-) hood of interview writers. I bow to no man in my respect for those who make their living by the pen. They don't use pens, anyhow. I'm part-writer myself. But as a fifth-rate minor celebrity (cries of No! No!) I've had my share of being interviewed. I've never been an interviewer, and if I were I suppose I'd use the jolly age-old devices—

Standing By—

With Ray Perkins

I wishtagosh no interviewer, writer, publicity-popper or paragraph digger-upper ever would ask me: "What do you do in your leisure time?" They always ask it. It gripes. You'd think a law had been passed making it a statutory requirement upon any and every approach of a news-gatherer to his prey. I'll bet when Moses got that historic interview with the Lord on the mountain top, the first question he asked was what the Creator did in his spare time. It isn't that there's anything inherently insulting or offensive in the question per se. It's an innocent question invariably put with bland friendliness. But it does presuppose that you have all sorts of merry hours open for growing roses, collecting butterflies, tating, cooking fudge and other sundry activities that come under the heading of hobbies.

Drat it all, a man or woman in this radio business hasn't any leisure time. If you are trying to make a life work of projecting your art, whatever its quality, on a fundamentally indifferent Public, you have no time for playing with paper dolls. You have to live and breathe your work twenty-four hours a day net. If you indulge in some hobby, because the psychologists tell you it relieves and revitalizes the mind, you'll do your indulging restlessly and with half your mind on your work-problems. Singing, playing, acting—all the arts—are projects quite different from business. A business man can leave at least part of his working life in his office, close the door, and that's that. But an artist, or performer if you prefer, carries his job around with him even to the point of going to bed with it.

So your radio performer, be he network or local, sustaining or commercial, big-shot or small-fry, is busy scurrying around trying to cram all the doin's and thinking he'd like to do and think into a meagre day. There are new songs to be tried, learned, filed away; there are managers to be seen, hopefully; there are new ideas to be worked out; pictures to be taken; publicity to be obtained; mail to be written; mail to be answered; mothers and less important relatives to be seen, to say nothing of friends; program material to be dug up and written; auditions, rehearsals; trade papers to be read; meals to be eaten; exercise to be taken; and finally if possible, sleep to be wowed.

With that in mind, the next person, friend or foe, who asks me what I do in my leisure time is going to be treated to the loudest, juiciest most full-blown raspberry this frail body can deliver. And all my fellow radio-hounds are invited to join me in this worm-turning movement.

LANNY ROSS caused considerable commotion last week in an apartment house in the well known Sutton Place district of Manhattan when it became known he was establishing bachelor quarters therein. The doormen, elevator boys, and most of the tenants were all a flutter, as special interior decorators sailed in to pretty up Lanny's place. I got all this from my Mother, Personal Radio Fan Number One, who lives in the same building. I'll have to see that you two meet each other, Ma.

Success Story in the Making: BILL WHITLEY came to America from his native Scotland a decade ago with a professional soccer team. He was injured and lay in a hospital long after his team-mates returned home. For eight years he eked a living doing odd jobs and playing pro-soccer, while furtively appearing in amateur and semi-amateur shows as a very crude but very hopeful free-for-all singer.

About two years ago he won an amateur contest in Jersey City at a theater in which VAUGHN DE LEATH was playing. One of the judges was C. J. INGRAM, radio editor of the Jersey Journal, who obtained Bill a sustaining spot on WAAT. Ingram forgot Whitley until one night JIMMIE BRIERLY, then a protegee of his, was taken ill and unable to sing on a WAAT commercial. He coaxed the sponsor to let Bill substitute, and Bill came through big. Shortly afterward the ex-soccer player got his own commercial.

Next Ingram brought him to NBC, where they gave him seven spots a week, sustaining. It went to Bill's head. He started hitting the high spots and slipped badly. Ingram cornered him and talked to him like six Dutch uncles. Bill saw the light, but lost his NBC drag, so Ingram got him some vaudeville. Now Bill has commercial programs on WAAT, WHBI (Newark) and is the Romantic Trapper on WJZ Tuesdays at 7:15. Ingram (the radio girls and boys call him "C. J.") smiles.

Plums and Prunes

By Evans Plummer

One of radio's more famous showmen hurled a cruel barb the other day on the occasion of a gathering of ether scribes for the purpose of launching a network series.

"We have to get you together like this to be sure you listen to our programs," he said. "If I ever discover a radio writer who listens to the radio, I'll drop dead."

It not being our intention to make radio showmen drop dead (not all of them, anyway), we shall probably continue to listen to the radio like any normal human being, tuning in only such programs as strike our fancy, others ballyhooing some new idea or perhaps those with special guest stars.

During one week there are more than four hundred hours of programs heard over the three major networks of NBC and CBS alone! And two-thirds of these hours conflict with the other third. If a listener spent eighty hours a week at his loudspeaker, he would require five weeks to cover the four hundred hours!

No sir, being a member of the NRA, we refuse to slay any radio showmen.

OFF A LIVE MIKE: If Clara, Lu 'n' Em are not going to retire early next year, why is the agency that handles their sponsor's account so busy hearing auditions of shows to fill their spot? . . . BESS JOHNSON, your Lady Esther, is going to tell it to the judge. Her husband, a dentist, seems to have had trouble chewing the powder.

PLUMMER'S PLATFORM FOR CHILDREN'S PROGRAMS: (1) More fantasy, imagination and good music . . . (2) Less gore, nerve-wracking suspense and bad grammar.

It is this column's opinion that too many advertisers are taking advantage of the tiny folk as back-door entrances into the homes with their product. Just how this unfair process may be checked is a problem for discussion. There is no doubt in our mind that the condition exists and is increasing.

Must we have a law against the commercialization of children's programs in order to prevent manufacturers from exploiting the child?

IF YOUR DAILY PAPER still carries any radio news, you'll be reading before long that San Francisco has sold another radio show. Crazy Water Crystals will assume monetary obligations for that other exceptionally plumful West Coast NBC production, the CAREFREE CARNIVAL. The spot selected is Mondays, 8:30 to 9 p. m. EST, starting December 31.

We trust that you do not think our promotion to the front half of this book as too "forward" . . . We can look up to RAY PERKINS, associate with TONY WONS, but look what we have to face—MIKE PORTER! . . . So, in order to keep the proper orientation, we shall oppose him on everything.

RADIO POPULARITY POLLS are interesting if for no other reason than to see how far you disagree with the consensus of opinion. But the one recently concluded by The Milwaukee Journal will find many fans in accord. To wit:

In the comedian division, JACK BENNY ran first, outstripping EDDIE CANTOR, holder of second place, four to one. JOE PENNER was a close third.

WAYNE KING topped the dance orchestra class; JAN GARBER and GUY LOMBARDO were second and third respectively.

Other winners were the Philadelphia Symphony

Orchestra, Bing Crosby, Jessica Dragonette, Ted Husing, Fred Waring's Pennsylvanians, Edwin C. Hill, Deems Taylor, the Mills Brothers, and the First Nighter dramas.

Cab Calloway and Duke Ellington adherents will be provoked to learn that hot jazz was voted the type of program most frequently tuned out.

YOUR EX-GWEN of Myrt and Marge, otherwise Patricia Ann Manners, has sold a dog and cat show to a sponsor for network airing in the near future. When interviewed regarding the rumor, Miss Manners replied that she had found so many cats in radio that she thought she'd cash in on them.

ALEX McQUEEN, the Nothing-but-the-Truth kilocycler, insists that Old King Cole was no myth; that when Alex in his youth acted as a tourist's guide in Colchester, England, he frequently pointed out the old king's castle . . . And Alex, was that Winchell we just heard whispering that Old Maestro Ben Bernie was one of the royal Fiddlers Three?

TAG LINES.—Appearing their first time outside Chicago, the NBC SINCLAIR MINSTRELS drew over 6,000 people to their two recent performances at the Milwaukee (Wis.) Auditorium . . . SINGING LADY Irene Wicker's first volume of children's stories will be off the press December 1 . . . GEORGIE BREAKSTONE, 11-year-old star of movie and radio (Lady Next Door) fame, has been receiving plaudits for his performance as Puck in Max Reinhardt's production of A Midsummer Night's Dream . . . LOU BLAKE, batoneer whose rhythms are CBS-ed, was once drummer with the likewise CBS-ed ART KASSEL'S orchestra—but reformed . . . 'Scuse us now. We gotta go before we run over onto the next page and into Martin Porter's column. Y'see, we're kinda choosy about the company we keep.

There is a difference between kicking and whining. Where there are untruth, injustice, intolerance, superstition, inefficiency, waste, carelessness, everyone has a right to put in a kick and a vigorous one. But to cry and cry over conditions that cannot be helped, like a child over a broken doll, is stupid and childish. When a tough proposition comes up and hits you smack in the face, there is only one thing to do about it. Not sit down and moan and wish you were never born. Not tackle it like a physician tackles a bad case, or an engineer tackles a problem, or a business man tackles a big deal. Lay all the cards on the table. Troubles are somewhat like spooks. You see them on a dark night near a cemetery and they look like hob-goblins coming after you. If you run away shivering, you will never be cured from the fears of them. If you stand there in your boots and shiver, you're liable to get a stroke or faint.

But if you walk over to where they are and examine them, you might find that the spooks are just a lot of underwear banging on a clothes line waving in the breeze.

That's the way with difficulties. Examine them. Every detail. Carefully and without fear. There is a cause for every condition in the world. Find that and trace along until you come to the head of the thing that is troubling you. Often you will find that it is insignificant . . . nothing at all to worry about. Often you will find that it is something for which there is no remedy. In either case it is useless to worry.

Go on to something else that will get you somewhere. Often you will find in running down your difficulties that the thing solves itself . . . or a solution comes to you while you are examining the matter.

You will not whine, nor run away, nor beef. You will take the bull by the horns and do something about it, and go on your way serenely and happy and much more satisfied with yourself than if you had shown a weak streak and cried. Try this method on your troubles . . . great and small, and you'll see how it works out.

While waiting for a job, a good many young boys and girls have a splendid chance to improve their minds. Why not? You have the time. Books you can get for nothing from the library. You will never in your life have a more agreeable job and one that will bring you greater returns than the job of improving your mind will bring you

I would feel safer in the hands of a surgeon who smiles at a patient than in the hands of the man who scowls when he looks me over and stands there with the implement in his hand ready to do his stuff.

Robert Louis Stevenson had tuberculosis. So did Ralph Waldo Emerson. So did Henry Thoreau. Did that make it impossible for them to become great men? No! Theodore Roosevelt was a sick boy, and it looked as if he would stagger through life a useless invalid. If I had the time I could name a hundred men and women who were short on health but who didn't think everything was impossible for them to accomplish.

So that isn't true. Of course, this is not meant to encourage you to go out and get yourself a mess of ill health. You'll live better if you feel well. But if you have lost your health, don't think you have lost all.

Whatever does you good, stick to it.

Some people laugh at success stories and at success magazines and literature. Your test is whether they have done you, personally, any good. If they have helped you, let others laugh. Don't ask anybody what he thinks about it. If your type of religious belief has helped you, don't go around asking others if they think it is all right.

If cutting out meat makes you feel better, that's your answer. It doesn't make any difference what other folks think of vegetarianism. If you like a certain writer and get enjoyment from his writings, don't worry whether Critic Specknoodle ranks his works as in Class A or Class B. Rank them yourself.

This is one curious ailment in the makeup of men. They are eternally seeking someone to agree with them. The judgment of others seems somehow of greater weight than their own.

You see a ragged old tramp on the street and you turn your head away for fear he will approach too near to you. You do not stop to think that his wretched frame holds a heart that beats, that he has feelings just like you have, that life to him is just as precious as to that other fellow all dressed up who sits in a shiny limousine and who smells of perfume. Or you see a wretched old woman picking things out of an ash heap and you do not say, "Poor lady, maybe she has somebody at home she loves." No, how could love be dressed like that and be picking things out of an ash heap?

More of Tony Wons' homey philosophy may be heard by tuning in his program, The House by the Side of the Road, Sunday afternoons at 5:30 p. m. EST over an NBC-WEAF network and at 4:30 p. m. EST over a split network. The program is sponsored by S. C. Johnson & Son.

Whatever became of SINGIN' SAM?

Here is another suggestion to guys who are looking for a novelty: Why not preserve the giggling amusement of all the dialects of America, put them on a record and let one end of America gather an accurate idea of how the other talks?

There must be eighty American dialects, or more. Some folks have kicked about the song Pahdon Mah Suth'n Accent because they think it is phoney, and not the true echo of the sunny South. Folks down in the South kind of snicker at the Harvard accent as they hear it. But do they ever hear it as it is spoken? Some enterprising broadcaster, in the interests of science and American lore, might chase a bunch of field workers around the land gathering up the lingo. The text could be the same in all districts. The comparison, as broadcast, would make an interesting, if brief, series, and the recordings would be an asset to library and literature—or is this a screwy motion?

Whatever became of the crusade by Columbia artists against the gyp radio schools?

The boys in the publicity hooths of the radio temples are rather fond of calling New York the Mecca of Radio. But is it? New York, it seems to me, is pretty much of a hick town when you consider it as a factor in recognizing the true worth of artists.

One Man's Family, among the smartest scripts on the air, came out of Frisco. BING CROSBY had to go back to California to click on the air. WERNER JANSSEN, who recently conducted the Philharmonic, had to go to Europe, as did LUD GLUSKIN, for recognition. GUY LOMBARDO depended on Cleveland and Chicago to give him his proper rating. JACK DENNY pattered around New York for years, but became well known only when he settled in a Montreal Hotel.

The NBC has just hired a professional fault finder, whose job it is to prowls the studios, watch for technical faults, bum broadcasts, lazy control men, bad lighting, and what have you . . . What a radio columnist that guy would make after a bit of practise!

Vividly human is the story of a problem faced, and solved, by the Voice of Experience. In his daily mail was the pitiful plaint of a 12-year-old cripple. The unfortunate lad's pal and pet, Spot, a terrier, had bitten the boy's father as the farmer came into the kitchen one night. Angered and a bit tight the victim had picked up the animal by the scruff of the neck and carried him down the road to a neighbor to whom he gave it. All the boy knew was that his dad had robbed him of his sole friend and he presumed the homeless animal was wandering about unfed and uncared for.

"I guess," the lad wrote the Voice, "if you can get back lost girls and things you can get back my dog, Spot. My Sunday school teacher told me to pray to God. I did but God and my father both turned me down. Maybe God don't listen to kids like me."

Well, that letter floored the Voice. The kid asked him to broadcast at noon and advise him, but for once in his life the Voice double-crossed the kid and addressed his broadcast to the father, at night. He told the old man of his cruelty, of the boy's agony, and that by shattering his faith in prayer he was making an Atheist out of the lad. He told him not to go and get the dog back but to arrange to have the mutt wander home, so that little Joe would think it the answer to his prayer—and discover that God hadn't turned him down.

The next day Joe cried for joy when Spot came galloping home. And then another letter from Joe: "Never mind about Spot," it said. "I have apologized to God. He sent Spot back."

Your Announcer

By Charles Remson

Jimmy Wallington Turned Many Corners in His Merry Game of Tag with Fame, Quitting Lowers and Going Back upon His Uppers Several Times, Before He Found the Berth Where He Could Stay Put and Like It

Jimmy's announcing specialty for some time was aviation broadcasts. His winning the American Academy award for perfect diction in radio for 1933 didn't send him out for head-gear two sizes larger; he's regular as they come

Announcer James (Jimmy) Wallington is an unquestioned master of diction, but in his youth he was a failure at prediction. While still in his teens in his native city, Rochester, N. Y., he made four errors out of five chances to select a career.

When it came time to matriculate at the University of Rochester, he entered the theology class. Within two months he realized he had made a spiritual as well as a typographical error—so he went in for geology. With his roguish eye and winning smile he found he was more sinister than minister.

Earth's structure baffled him so completely that he couldn't differentiate between pints and quartz, and sermons on stones left him colder than an eel on ice. Before detouring again he paused for a mental review and decided that it wasn't a great step from pastor to Pasteur. So medicine knew him next.

But he found a vast spread between the gory and the allegory, and for a few perplexed weeks Jimmy wasn't sure but that the soundest idea would be to chuck it all in favor of a beachcomber's dolce far niente in some remote South Pacific Eden.

The Wallington background, however, didn't support that style of life so once again Jimmy halted at the crossroads to scan the signs. This time better judgment came to his rescue and he followed a path that was to stand him in good stead in the field in which he was to attain riches and renown. He plunged into the study of music and English.

All of this tacking had been done on the Rochester University course before Jimmy reached his junior year. When he had completed his third year he abandoned his original alma mater in favor of Union College, where he was graduated.

By that time he had discovered that he had a voice of saleable quality, so when he arrived back home he found a place awaiting him in the Rochester Opera company. For a year Jimmy ran the gamut of fictional characters, singing in all of the standard operas and adding languages to his store of knowledge. If he didn't do anything else he subconsciously overcame the announcer's most baffling obstacle, the pronunciation of the composers' names and works.

The rover spirit still was strong in Wallington at the conclusion of his operatic experiment, so he decided to do a little slumming in the purlieus of musical comedy and revue. He joined a traveling troupe under the management of a widely known dance instructor, but found shortly that it was all play and no pay. After months in lowers he was again on his uppers.

Then Jimmy heard about radio!

The flair for the technical never completely submerged in Jimmy, urged him to investigate this new medium of entertainment. Soon afterward he was Schenectady-bound for the General Electric Company, at that time making rapid strides in this new field.

He applied for a job as mechanic, and the slow-wittedness of a timekeeper militated in his favor.

When Jimmy came to work next morning he found himself enrolled as announcer. And to the studios he went, there to find himself recruited for the job for which his music and English study had prepared him. But it is to his credit that Jimmy did not rest on his oars. Once thrust before the mike, he applied himself tirelessly to the improvement of his style and diction.

That was all in 1929 when Jimmy, who was born September 15, 1906, was still only 23. In 1930 the National Broadcasting Company, recognizing his talents, moved him to New York, where he first attracted national attention as master of ceremonies on the short-wave broadcasts to the Byrd party in Little America.

He gradually became announcer on NBC's most cherished programs, the "sacred cows" of the air, and as such he handled most of the leading lights of radio. That's how he became the outstanding kilocycle stooge in the Cantor comedy, A Fool There Was.

His first experience in matrimony failed to jell, so the ties were dissolved. In August of 1934 he married again, this time to a youthful dancer successful in a number of revues and movie stage presentations.

Famous Composers

By Mark Herringham

Born six years before the American revolution, at a time when the world was seething with the new wine of idealism, mighty Ludwig van Beethoven lived and died a democrat and a rebel. The finale from his Droica Symphony will be presented during NBC's Music Appreciation Hour, Friday, December 7, at 11 a. m. EST.

And yet, paradoxically, this "mad musician" was treated with reverence by the aristocracy of his time. He was the first musician to be received on a plane of perfect social equality by persons of title.

His life, too, bridged the gap between grime and glory. His father was a drunkard, but a man whose two loves were music and alcohol. He did strive, however, to make his own unfulfilled dreams come true in his son. He wanted young Ludwig to become a second Mozart, and he, with a boon companion, taught the boy music by raining blows on the lad's head when his progress didn't please them. Fortunately, before he was eleven, Ludwig interested a real teacher, and from then on his progress was both sound and rapid.

Of this sublime genius, it was written by W. H. Hadow: ". . . There is no music in the world so difficult to estimate and appraise (as his): it may be that sometimes the message is too sublime for utterance, and we can only catch faint echoes and intimations of its inner meaning, but where we have ears to hear, it gives us melody the like of which man has never known and will never know again . . . there is music which seems to come straight from 'some spiritual world beyond the heavens,' and the thoughts that it arouses in us are too deep for tears."

Although Beethoven was acclaimed a genius in his own lifetime, and enjoyed for the most part a comfortable and secure existence, he—like most geniuses—was not fully appreciated. The revolutionary nature of his music aroused some critics to frenzy. Said an Italian musician to Beethoven: "Surely you do not consider these works to be music?" And replied Beethoven: "Oh, they are not for you, but for a later age." Prophetic words!

Ludwig van Beethoven bridged the gap between grime and glory. And before the end of his professional career he suffered the greatest tragedy a musician can know—he went totally deaf

Of musical forms, the rondo, the scherzo and the sonata owe much to Beethoven. He changed and moulded the orchestra.

His social acceptance was largely in spite of, rather than because of, his appearance and personality. When he arrived in Vienna at 22, "he was small, thin, pock-marked, unkempt, morose-looking . . . His only assets were a strong personality . . . a few letters of introduction . . . and genius."

He was a fighter, both with words and fists. "Quick-tempered, over-sensitive, bad-mannered and abrupt," he antagonized many who admired and respected him. But he was both kind and great of heart, and his friends loved him. Later in life he suffered the colossal misfortune, for a musician, of becoming deaf. His musical enemies belittled his compositions on the allegation that his deafness prevented him from knowing what he was writing.

Many women loved this genius. Most of his works were dedicated to his friends, both male and female.

Although fairly well-to-do, Beethoven was notoriously grasping—partly through fear of poverty and partly through the desire to leave a fortune to a beloved nephew.

One statement of great significance to musicians and other artists was made by Beethoven. In his later years he read voluminously. Of this he said: "Without pretending to be really learned I have always endeavored from my childhood to grasp the thoughts of the better and wiser men of every age. Shame to the artist who does not feel obliged to go at least thus far."

When this titan died in 1827, he was buried with great pomp. Schubert was one of 36 torch bearers. Twenty thousand people followed the hearse. All Europe realized its loss.

Will Rogers, expert with the subtle barb, and Walter Winchell, master of the flip crack, at the microphone

Rogers as the "County Chairman" in the forthcoming Fox film of that title, ruminates on a typical comment

Will Rogers —Prairie Plato

By Harry Steele

The Serious Side of Will Rogers, That Took Him into Politics and Aviation and a Score of Other Activities, Makes of Him Another Man Nobody Knows

If it hadn't been for the influence and aid of Betty Blake, who ceased teaching school to become Mrs. Will Rogers, the career of the great comedian and commentator would have taken a vastly different tack than that known to the world. In the third instalment of his life story, presented herewith, intimate facts concerning the beginning of his professional life are revealed.

Who can deny that if Will had learned to play one of his string instruments he might have turned into a hillbilly, thereby robbing the world of a combined comedian, actor and statesman? He has a nasal tenor voice which he discreetly keeps secret except at odd moments in the saddle or while ruminating over a proposed manuscript. Loosed, it has been known to stampede cattle, cow tigers and curdle milk. It's his only weapon against his children. Mostly he permits them to run the shack, but when their domination gets too unbearable he threatens to sing and they grant him temporary regency.

Many thought that his vocalizing in the picture David Harum was dubbed in. But that was the Rogers voice in the raw. Knowledge of this fact will help to explain the intermittent periods when he is Lord of the Rancho.

One visit to the Rogers menage will dispel the fallacy that Will is never without a wad of gum in his mouth. He doesn't use it at home. He first fell back on it as a salivary stimulant making speech easier. It also had the effect of minimizing his self-consciousness when he first added speech to his roping act and eventually served to help him stop smoking. It since has become so fixed a tradition that he would as soon appear without it as without his shirt.

It was Gene Buck, Ziegfeld's first lieutenant, who helped to convert chewing gum into part of the Rogers legend. After the "ropin' fool" had enlarged his act to include some of his blunt ironies, he found no trouble obtaining theatrical bookings. Theater patrons were alert to realize that a new sage had arisen among them—and Rogers was in demand.

It was while Rogers played a New York theater that Buck marked him as Follies material. His toughest job was to sell the cowboy to Mr. Ziegfeld. Ziggy was an avowed hater of comedians, and when the Cherokee puncher was presented to him as a fellow who could make the public titter, it set up a subconscious barrier. But Buck had uncovered other talent which had helped to aggrandize the Ziegfeld exchequer, so the roper was inducted into the select company which comprised the standard for a type of American theatrical enterprise. Will received a salary of $175 a week under the terms of his first contract. And Buck insisted that the gum be part of the act.

Rogers' style of delivery represented a new chapter in entertainment. In no way a fool, he rushed in with biting candor where angels had feared to tread. Politics and personalities caused him no inhibitions. He threw his barbs like he did his lariat, with grace and skill, but with deadly accuracy.

Because of what has happened to the adjective, whimsical, under the aegis of such contemporaries as Barrie, Milne and Alexander Woollcott, one applies it cautiously to Will Rogers, brusque critic of most of the sacred institutions. But it must be said that he is whimsical in a salty, masculine sense. It's his stock in trade, the very peg upon which he hangs observations which otherwise would be counted indefensible.

An instance in point is what happened on the night that word was brought back to Will that Sir Eric Geddes of Great Britain, First Lord of the Admiralty, was in the Follies audience. Without more than three minutes in which to prepare a timely discourse, Rogers fell back upon the caustic while sparring for a topic.

In his characteristic fashion, hemming and hanging his head, he apologized to the titled guest for the absence of one of this country's best known rear-admirals, whom he mentioned by name.

"You'll have to excuse the admiral," he said slyly. "He went over to Hoboken on the ferry this afternoon and he's so sea-sick that he couldn't get here tonight." Only the Rogers manner saved it from being a grave affront—and, since it was war-time, the sort of affront that might have caused the perpetrator serious embarrassment.

But the nation at large has granted Will Rogers carte blanche in his speech. Any attempt to discipline him, to harness his tongue, would precipitate a near revolution. Amnesty is his by the will of the people. For those made mute by the restrictions of position and circumstance, he is both spokesman and mentor. He gives the big-wigs their come-uppance with the vehement approval of his followers.

That he could be elected President of the United States is an accepted fact in a million or more minds. That he has toyed seriously with the idea himself is equally well-known. When his name was proposed in 1928 and again in 1932, he found it good business to make light of the suggestion, but his intimates know that he came close to making the plunge in the most recent national campaign.

Had it not been for his unswerving loyalty to the Democratic party and the resultant fear of a repetition of the G.O.P. split of 1912, in all likelihood he would have put his name on the ballot.

There would be nothing presumptuous about Will Rogers' aspiring to the presidential chair. It could be his by every requirement in the constitution. The writers of that document might well have had him in mind when they set forth the specifications for our chief executives.

He is fanatically nationalistic, and there can be no challenging his Americanism. To the socially conscious who boast that their ancestors were among those who took advantage of our early lack of immigration laws and came here in the Mayflower, Rogers has a ready rejoinder:

"Their ancestors might 'a' come over in the Mayflower, but mine was already here waitin' for 'em."

Which is an incontrovertible fact, as this master of lariat and lampoon is a direct descendant of the noblest braves of the Cherokees, a tribe that stood high in the red-skin aristocracy of the southwestern plains.

Just so you won't be too completely misled by Will Rogers' self-charged lack of education, a canny device to put him on a level with his mass listeners, here he is as a student at Kemper Military Academy, Booneville, Mo., in his early teens

Along the Airialto

By Martin Lewis

The postman always has been a good friend of mine, for whenever he stops at my desk he never fails to leave some interesting letters. Let's take a peek at my mail together:

Dear Marty: I'm writing this so that you may have an opportunity to correct the impression you gave your readers regarding the friendly controversy between GEORGE GIVOT and myself.

Obviously you have been misinformed. George and I did not even "almost" come to blows. The truth of the matter is that we made a friendly bet as to the origin of the name Park-Johnson which as has since been proven, was created by one Harry Einstein long before Givot took up the Greek dialect.

I have recently returned the money wagered by Givot, with a note reading: "I never bet on a sure thing."

There you have it. Sincerely,
EDDIE CANTOR

Next, here's a note from RALPH KIRBERY. The other day he was interviewed by my dear friend NELLIE REAVEL over NBC. In the course of the interview, Nellie asked Ralph if he was engaged. He stuttered a moment, then replied: "Er—maybe." His throng of female admirers were quite disturbed—letters poured in asking why I had not mentioned it. The truth of the matter is, the last time I saw the Dream Singer he definitely and decidedly was not engaged. Now the mystery clears. In reply to my query comes a note from Ralph:

Dear Marty: I'm surprised at you. Do you believe in Santa, and ghosts? Do you believe everything you hear? I had to follow the prepared script Nellie gave me. You know Nellie—you know what she'd have said (and possibly done) if I hadn't. But the real answer is NO—whether I said "maybe" or not. Definitely no! I haven't as yet found a girl who answers "yes" to these: (1) Broadminded; (2) Intellectual; (3) Attractive; (4) Fond of outdoor life; (5) Can see two sides to a story. Sincerely,

RALPH
Doesn't she have to know how to cook, Ralph?

Frome on the Range

Here's one, from a dear friend, that sheds an interesting light on how an up-and-at-'em artist and his manager stir public opinion when a commercial looms on the horizon. It's a tip, incidentally, to other stars on what to do with your old fan mail lists:

Dear Marty: I noticed you mentioned ANTHONY FROME in your column just before he resumed his program. I had a note from him, asking me to send in a list of names to help him get back on the air. He mentioned that his mother had died, and that during the time he was with her he had lost his spot on the air. Soon after that I read that he had a commercial. I also received a card from Mr. Frome's business manager later on, asking me to write a word to his sponsors.

The Voice of the RADIO GUIDE listener has been heard. Letters directed to VOL asking for the appearance of JESSICA DRAGONETTE and LANNY ROSS on this year's special Christmas Seal program have not gone unheeded by the network moguls.

A motormaker plots something new in programs—an all-afternoon parade of big names over CBS on Christmas Day, and another one on New Year's Day, said to be the biggest gala program yet planned for the air. LIONEL BARRYMORE and GRACE MOORE are among the big names being lined up for the show.

Enos Crime Pays

Starting early in January the Eno Crime Clues will present a complete mystery play on Tuesday nights dispensing with the Wednesday instalment which will be replaced by an entirely new show featuring Columnist MARK HELLINGER with his gorgeous wife GLADYS GLAD, and the musical comedy star, PEGGY FLYNN, supported by EMIL COLEMAN'S orchestra.

If you happen to notice a change in the Showboat and the Beauty Box Theater programs, there's a reason. BILL BACHER, who produced the shows, has left the agency to join up with the one that produces the Gibson Family—which may mean that this show will get an additional jacking-up.

The Breakfast Club is one organization on the air (NBC-WJZ daily except Sundays at 9 a. m. EST) that does what its name says it does—as can be seen above. From left, Jack Rose, guitarist; Bill Krenz, pianist; Jack Owens, tenor; Don McNeil, m. c.; Walter Blaufuss, conductor PROGRAM NOTES: PHIL BAKER and his sponsor, who were feuding so definitely that Phil had decided to accept another offer when his present contract expired, are making up. All, I believe, will be forgiven—on both sides. . . . Despite rumors, JIMMY WALLINGTON will not switch networks to continue as EDDIE CANTOR'S stooge, when the goggle-eyed comic starts his new CBS series. . . . LESLIE HOWARD, one of my favorite stage and screen actors, returned to the U. S. A. from London, and no less than three dramatic air programs are trying to grab him. . . . After his program of December 9, TITO GUTZAR leaves for a few weeks of vaudeville. The romantic tenor returns to the show on January 13. . . . ALEXANDER WOOLLCOTT, the Town Crier, will be heard at a new time on and after January 6—whether the move is a good one is questionable, for he will then be competing with JACK BENNY, and the vast following of that comic isn't questionable. . . . I'm told that TOM CURTIN, who wrote those thrillers for Lucky Strike, is doing the scripts for the Scaramouche stories which may bring JOHN BARRYMORE to the air. . . . WALTER O'KEEFE'S Hatfield-Carstairs hillbilly feud burlesque are drawing the Broadway hillbilly a flock of fan letters from the West Virginia hills, offering him all sorts of facts about historical feuds. Says he has enough material now to qualify him as a feud expert. In other words, Walter is getting plenty feud for thought. Are you reading ED WYNN? . . . The femme trio that performs unbilled as a unit of the ANDRE KOSTELANETZ Variety Singers is really the GERSDORF SISTERS, heard on Vallee's show several times.

RUDY VALLEE is going to try to sell his sponsor on the idea of taking a vacation from the airways so that he may take a trip to Europe. If successful, he will be absent from the kilocycles for the first time during live years of broadcasting.

My congratulations to Kentucky Winners who certainly picked a winner when they decided to sponsor One Man's Family—radio's most human dramatic show. And an extra doff of the hat for their broad-mindedness in permitting HENRY BARBOUR to admit he is yet to smoke his first cigaret.

BANDSTAND AND BAITON: Scoop! The Navy and the Marines have declared war—But don't be alarmed! All they're fighting for is the listeners' attention on Tuesday mornings when their respective bands are on the air at the same time over different networks. Fooled yuh!

For the past month rumors were rife and heavy to the effect that JOLLY COBURN'S orchestra was scheduled to leave the Rainbow Room in Radio City. However, the malicious rumor mongers were silenced completely when a statement was issued by the Rockefeller Center powers-that-be to the effect that Coburn's band remains until April.

Several columns ago I mentioned that LITTLE JACKIE HELLER was angling to take over the BUDDY ROGERS band when Buddy embarked for Europe. I'm happy to report that the deal has gone through and the little songster becomes a bandleader. His first spot is likely to be a St. Louis hotel. Good luck, Jackie.

1-2-3, Shift

CLYDE McCOY'S orchestra is supplying the dance music currently for the diners at the Lowry Hotel in St. Paul. . . . HARRY SOSNIK has left the coast and is heading back to Chicago playing in various cities en route—HENRY KING has succeeded GUY LOMBARDO at the Waldorf-Astoria, the latter starting on a tour of theaters and dance halls for an oil company. . . . CLYDE LUCAS departs from the Edgewater Beach Hotel December 15 and will be replaced by HERBIE KAY. . . . The Waltz of Love you've been hearing lately was written by ork pilot ISHAM JONES. . . . DON BESTOR goes into the Hotel Roosevelt, the spot were BEN BERNIE and GUY LOMBARDO rose to radio fame. They had CBS wires, but Don's circuit will belong to NBC. He says he isn't under contract to the older chain, but that things just work out better with them. . . . the LANDT

TRIO and WHITE, veteran radio vocal trio and pianist, have formed their own orchestra and will be on the NBC networks soon. . . . JACK BENNY is in Boston this week putting on his stage show, Bring on the Girls, Sounds like a musical comedy, but isn't. Jack plays the part of a banker. . . . Both ROXY'S and LAWRENCE TIBBETT'S radio contracts come up for renewal any one of these days. Incidentally, the baritone had to cancel two concert dates in Texas last week. . . . DONALD NOVIS' signing for that 45 Minutes in Hollywood program means that there will be no more Hollywood guest stars on the show. . . . Congrats to MR. and MRS. MORTON DOWNEY, who were paid another visit by Sir Stork, leaving a little dotter. . . . MARK WARNOW'S musicians lowered their eyes and turned crimson at a recent rehearsal when Maestro Smark asked for the next selection, thus: "Stay as Sweet as You Are, please, boys". . . . Whoops! . . . RICHARD LEIBERT has completed his new organ suite named, appropriately enough, Radio City. In it he has endeavored to portray musically the hustle of the broadcast studios, and various programs may be recognized by their theme songs, excerpts from which Leibert includes in his suite. . . . The newsreels of DAVE FREEDMAN'S "cantankerous men" publicity gag were very funny, but the applicants used in it were radio actors. Stooges, stooges everywhere!

Gobblers'll Get You

Speaking of stooges reminds me that WALTER O'KEEFE gathered together all his satellites to pose in costume for a burlesque Thanksgiving newsreel, and one of the stooges—a live turkey—was responsible for several retakes of the reel. The gobbler, among other unorthodox antics, was scared by the lights and flew into an elaborate chandelier, with considerable damage to both.

Those after-broadcast Story of My Life chats with which ED WYNN entertains visitors in NBC's big Auditorium Studio, and which were going to be shorter this year, Graham—are increasing in length rapidly. As an added attraction the Fire Chief teams with bandleader EDDY DUCHIN to give a two-piano concert. He is good, too.

Announcer MILTON CROSS is requesting the studio guests at the NBC General Motors Sunday night concerts to cut short their applause. Radio listeners have protested and demand less applause, more concert.

The Three Boys from California, heard with KATE SMITH over CBS, is the same trio that can be heard Friday nights with PHIL HARRIS as the Three Ambassadors on NBC. The boys really are from California.

MOTHER SCHUMANN HEINK is on her way back from the west coast to prepare for a new air show starting in mid-December in which she will present famous operatic stars. The program will be sponsored by a Midwest brewer.

Calling All Cars

By Arthur Kent

Guilty of Every Crime on the Calendar Except Arson, This Seventeen-Year-Old Youth Terrorized a Section of a Large Metropolitan City—Until Radio, Defender of Law, Was Set upon His Trail

That chuckle was both funny and horrible. It made the few people who passed the lad walk faster; for it tinged the mild November night with madness. A tang of wood-smoke hung in the air. He was walking at a frenzied pace, gloating to himself.

"They can't touch me!" he mumbled ecstatically. "Because I'm crazy! They said so themselves!" Again he chuckled. "I'll take what I want," he exulted, "and they can't touch me! Yeah, I'm crazy—like a fox!"

He strode through a cone of light cast by a street lamp. For an instant this transformed a shadow into a muscular body in a tight blue sweater. The light shone on an adolescent face with small eyes, a sharp nose, a sneer. Then the youth vanished into the night again.

He kept his right hand in his pocket.

On the dark Chicago street a block or so ahead, this late evening of November, 1932, a roadster was parked. In it, a man and a woman sat in silence.

They didn't seem to have to talk. Once the girl glanced up at the elm trees which joined the dark street to the lighter sky, and sighed, a half-sad sigh of contentment. Then the man spoke:

"Now make up your mind, Emma," he said good-naturedly, "do you want to go to a show or don't you?" Emma Dahnke smiled back at him. She liked Frank Jordan. He was witty, full of life, and his work as a salesman of automobile accessories brought him many funny and interesting experiences—things that Emma, whose job as stenographer was humdrum routine, loved to hear about.

"Oh, I don't know, Frank," she said. He had called earlier in the evening to take her to a show. They had driven to a movie theater, only to find that the girl had seen the feature before. On their way to another theater, Emma suddenly had decided that she didn't care whether she went to a show. So they had parked on a side-street, to let her make up her mind.

"I don't know," she repeated. "It's getting pretty late for a show."

With mock patience Jordan leaned back, extracted a cigaret, lighted a match. Emma giggled. "Oh, wait," she said, "let's go visit—"

"Don't move, either of you!"

Jordan and Miss Dahnke turned, startled. For an instant the girl didn't know whether to laugh or scream. For it was a boy's face that leered at them above a small gun. But there was an expression on that face . . .

"Put 'em up!" It was a boy's voice, too, but it had a snarl. For an instant Jordan hesitated, puzzled.

And then the youthful gunman laughed. It was a strange, gloating laugh—a laugh of conscious power—full of contempt.

"The hell you say!" roared Jordan. He pushed open the car door. He'd show this punk kid!

"Don't! Frank!" the girl screamed.

The flash—the crack of the little pistol—the sound of the slug hitting the seat beside the girl, all came at the same instant.

Again Emma Dahnke screamed. Jordan was half out of the car now. The adolescent gunman cursed, then fired again. Jordan twisted with a jerk. He coughed, swayed and fell.

Lillian Henry, who suffered untold tortures through a killer on a rampage

Frank Jordan paid with his life for one moment of skepticism

Cursing, his voice a whining snarl, the young gunman ran down the sidewalk. Miss Dahnke sat stunned for a moment, unable to move. Automatically she noted the thug's receding footfalls. Then she climbed out of the car and crouched, horror-stricken, beside Jordan.

He was lying very still, with a little blood flowing from his mouth. When people came running his half-open eyes reflected the lights they carried. Frank Jordan, whom Emma Dahnke liked because he was so full of life, was full of life no more.

Note James Ignatius Varecha's eyes, the breadth of his forehead, the nose, the lips—and decide whether this youth is a genius, average, or moron

Soon, like a cry for vengeance, the voice of Chicago's police radio broadcaster flashed throughout the dark city:

"Attention all cars . . . attention all cars . . . Man reported shot and killed in a robbery at 64th and Lincoln Streets . . . Attention all cars . . . Man reported shot and killed in a robbery at 64th and . . ."

And like wailing cries of mourning for the dead, the shrieks of radio cars converged upon the scene of the slaying.

One . . . two . . . three . . . six . . . a dozen patrol cars, scores of police and gathering crowds of people turned the quiet street into a sort of ghastly carnival.

From the girl, whose sobs had drawn a knot of morbid spectators, police pieced together a description of the killer. As a dozen or more patrol cars set off on a search of the neighborhood, radio squads throughout the city—waiting for the message they knew would come—heard:

"Attention all cars . . . attention all cars . . . Be on the lookout for a boy, about sixteen or seventeen, armed with a small black automatic . . . He is wanted for the murder of Frank Jordan in an attempted robbery at 64th and Lincoln Streets . . . Height about five feet six inches . . . Weight, around 140 . . . Was wearing a gray cap and dark blue pullover sweater . . . Has small, peggish eyes and sharp nose . . . All cars be on the lookout for . . ."

In an amazingly short time every street on Chicago's southwest side was being patrolled by radio cars. It seemed impossible that the killer had had time to escape from the neighborhood.

And he hadn't!

Cruising detectives scanned the walks and the dense blackness of alleys. But keen as they were, their eyes could not penetrate the shielding depths of a thickness of shrubbery in front of a house half a mile away down the street.

Here the adolescent murderer crouched. He smiled in glee, and chuckled softly as a police car rolled whisperingly past and faded down the street.

"Damn, dumb flat-foot!" he gloated. "Yeah, I'm crazy—like a fox!"

"They can't touch me! . . . I'll take what I want and they can't touch me! . . . I'm crazy!"

With precocious cunning he had hurried far enough away from the scene of (Continued on Page 15)

The Face of a Solemn Ex-Judge Reveals Quite the Reverse to One Who Knows

Colonel Stoopnagle denies the sternness of his countenance Sundays on CBS net

It arrives. His high invention and extreme vigilance to danger would have made him a good safety engineer, while an overwhelming sense of humor and a disposition to search for the ridiculous probably kept him out of manufacturing.

This man's mouth shows intensive friendships, mild sociability, fair aspirations but little tendency toward religious confidence or orthodoxy. The powerful chin has enough strength, endurance and even flexibility to make him an athlete or a constitutional strong man; but there was too much physical exertion needed in these lines, so he turned to mental gesture and a display of muscularity on a very celebrated "pipe organ" of his own invention.

The width of his head tells of physical strength with a forty-six inch chest and the shoulder of a wheat-thrower. The width of his cheeks fails to tell what he does to keep his avoirdupois within reasonable limits.

The Colonel, whose real name is F. Chase Taylor, was born in Buffalo, New York, thirty-six years ago. He might have continued in the lumber business, as two generations of his family before him, had he not become interested in radio in a small way . . . just for the fun of it. After a few broadcasts over WMAK he began to take the thing seriously, and embraced it as a career. He is a husband and the father of a thirteen-year-old boy.

Colonel Stoopnagle and Budd are on a CBS-WABC network every Sunday night at 9:30 EST in a program sponsored by the Gulf Oil Co.

Open Door to Beauty

By Countess Olga Albani

Eyes, Lashes and Lids Receive the Attention of One of Radio's Most Beautiful Stars

In treating the subject of the care of the eyes, I suggested last week that a quick pick-up for the all-important date could best be accomplished with hot and cold compresses. I wish to add now that the most advantageous way to take these compresses is lying down.

Have close at hand two bowls—one with very hot water—the other with ice and water. Put two cotton pads in each. Take the pads from the hot water and gently lay them on the eyes. Then the cold pads. Alternate about every two or three minutes. For the final pad pour some witch hazel in the bowl with the ice and cold water. Leave the cold pads in there for several minutes and then apply to the eyes. It is a fine astringent. You will be amazed, after this treatment, at the wide awake look with which you will dine.

And now that full care has been given the eyes, we turn our attention to their setting.

Eyelashes! I think every one of us utters faithful prayers for their growth. There is a sure way to bring this about, although it does require time and tireless patience: Take some white vaseline and carefully rub it on the lids each night—and be sure not to miss a single application. Then, for exercise, gently pull the lashes. Within a month or two you should notice very satisfactory results.

Eyes, like the rest of the body, must be exercised properly if they are to be healthy. Try these simple orb calisthenics about three times a day. Try them on your trip downtown to the office—or when you have a moment to spare during business hours.

The simplest and most effective one is blinking. Just about twenty times. Next, roll your eyes. This should be easy and interesting, too. First to the left—then up—then to the right—now down. Start slowly and gradually increase the speed. This exercise also will make you accustomed to using your eyes more. And what is as alluring as expressive eyes? These exercises will prove very helpful for those sad little lines beneath the eyes—those lines that worry us so.

Countess Albani will be very glad to answer all questions pertaining to beauty and make-up. Address her in care of RADIO GUIDE, 731 Plymouth Court, Chicago.

Countess Olga Albani sings with the Silken Strings program every Sunday evening over an NBC-WJZ network at 9 p. m. EST, under the sponsorship of the Real Silk Hosiery Company; and later the same night, over a split network—11 p. m. CST—for the West Coast.

Radio Road to Health

By Shirley W. Wynne, M. D.

Little Is Known of What Science and Education Are Doing to Stamp Out Disease. Here Are the Facts

The Twentieth Century marks a new phase in the history of medicine, an awakened consciousness of the importance of public work. Private happiness depends upon public health. Slowly throughout the years the forces of disease have been pushed back. Cures have been found for many maladies which formerly were fatal.

The infectious diseases once so dangerous to childhood now can be handled. Many can be prevented by immunization. Others, such as measles and whooping cough, for which no effective method of immunization has as yet been developed are receiving the attention of able scientists and research workers. Tuberculosis once called the white plague, no longer threatens the crowded population of cities as it formerly did. The death rate of infants and women in childbirth has been cut down enormously, and the health level of the general population is correspondingly higher. Preventive medicine has been carried to the tropics where it has accomplished wonders in combating malaria, yellow fever and other ills.

Much of this progress can be traced to public education. Cities now are planned with a view to the health of citizens. Sanitation and the disposal of sewage are regulated by law. The importance of wholesome food is stressed. Thanks to sanitary legislation, supplies of pure water and pure food are assured, thus decreasing in large measure the danger of typhoid epidemics.

Most important of all, the school curriculum now includes a program of health education. Children are given physical examinations and are taught the rudiments of health knowledge. The younger generation today enters life with its eyes wide open to the dangers of ill health. Even those bugbears, the so-called social diseases, are being overcome by treatment and by the still more effective method of educating youth to an appreciation of their dangers.

With the advancing knowledge of which mankind's physical wellbeing may be maintained, there has been corresponding progress along the lines of mental hygiene. The Viennese psychiatrist, Freud, and others have made huge contributions to science's understanding of man's mental processes in sickness and in health. The present efficiently organized institutions for the care of the mentally sick show a wide gap from the days when Defoe, the author of Robinson Crusoe, wrote a pamphlet for the humane treatment of the insane. The importance of checking tendencies toward nervous disorders early is now realized.

Health authorities are concentrating on the problem of effectively preventing and curing the diseases of the forties and the fifties. Among these diseases are arterio-sclerosis, Bright's disease, diabetes, chronic valvular heart disease, chronic myocarditis, and cancer. These take a huge toll of life each year.

The Child's Hour

By Nila Mack

Mothers May Not Agree with Miss Mack's Recommendation for Scrappy Youngsters, But It Works

Whenever a group of boys play together, a fight usually starts. Every normal boy inherits the impulse to fight; therefore it is impossible to prevent this scrapping by exhorting them to be gentle with one another. Since prehistoric times it has been the male instinct to settle his grievances by indulging in physical combat.

Fathers, of course, understand this impulse in their sons, and while they normally do not encourage their boys to engage in fist-cuffs, they do little to prevent it. "Oh, let him go ahead," says Dad, "the experience will be good for him, and he'll learn how to take care of himself."

It is difficult for mothers to understand this. Naturally, they do not feel the inherent impulse to scrap which is born in all males, and therefore they look with repugnance on fighting boys. Quite often a mother will drag her boy away from a fight, and when she gets him home she gives him a whipping.

Neither Mother nor Dad is entirely right in their attitude. It is wrong for a boy to stage a street-corner or play-yard bare-knuckle duel, and it is equally wrong for Mother to spank her boy for indulging in occasional affairs of honor. The happy medium involves the Marquis of Queensbury rules and boxing gloves.

I have had occasion to deal with large groups of growing boys, and I know by experience whereof I speak. When the first fight broke loose in the studio I was horrified, and hastily summoned one of my pupils for assistance. I scolded the boys severely after they had been separated, and told them that they would be dismissed without warning if they ever dared to repeat the incident.

It was an official of the studio who gave me the advice which finally ended the feud between the lads. "Let them fight it out with boxing gloves," he said.

Accordingly, I bought a set of boxing gloves and allowed the two young gamecocks to settle their grudge under Queensbury rules. After the fight the youngsters had a good cry, embraced each other, and today they are firm friends.

Nila Mack is director of all children's programs for CBS. Her program, Sunday Morning at Aunt Susan's, may be heard over a CBS-WABC network every Sunday at 9 a. m. EST.

Says Dad: "Let him fight. He'll learn to take care of himself"

Flashes of Fun

Fred Allen: I've been challenged to a duel, but I haven't the time to fight.

Portland: You only need a couple of seconds for a duel, Mr. Allen!

—Town Hall Tonight

Cantor: Well, Parkyourcarcass, you say you walked all the way from Boston?

Parkyourcarrass: Sure—I would have been here much sooner but I was limping on my niece and uncle!

Cantor: What do you mean limping on your niece and uncle!

Parkyourcarrass: Well, I fell on my niece and sprained my uncle!

—Chase and Sanborn

Graham: And how is your aunt, Chief?

Wynn: Oh, she's a mess, Graham! She met a famous actress yesterday and the actress said her heart ached whenever she thought of the old days in the Ballet. And my aunt said, "Oh, a sort of ballet ache, eh?"

—Texaco Program

Jack Benny: Here's a picture I had taken with my nurse when I was only two years old.

Don Wilson: Why, Jack, the nurse is sitting on your lap!

Benny: Well, that shows you how smart I was as a kid!

—Jello Program

Gracie: My brother took his car down piece by piece in thirty seconds!

George: In a repair shop?

Gracie: No! At a railroad crossing!

George: Oh, yeah! I suppose the motor died and he lived happily ever afterward!

—Adventures of Gracie

Joe Penner: So Adagio marries little Gas Jet—they named her Gas Jet because everyone turned her down. Her uncle was a motion picture producer and the name of his new picture was called Ten Thousand Horses.

Monk: Ten Thousand Horses?

Penner: Yes. It will take him eight years to finish it, because to make a horse picture you must make it bit by bit!

—Bakers Broadcast

Gene: Fritz, you don't look so well this evening.

Fritz: No, Gene, and I owe my rundown condition to soup.

Gene: To eating soup?

Fritz: No, spilling it on my wife's dress.

—Sinclair Greater Minstrels

Prof: The great mountain chain of South America is called Andy's Mountains.

Tony: Oh, Teech, if Andy's got mountains, why don't Amos have 'em?

—Kaltenmeyer's Kindergarten

Gene: What were you telling Bill Childs just now?

Cliff: I told him his wife asked me how to get a wart off her hands.

Gene: What did you tell her?

Cliff: I told her to shoot him.

—Sinclair Greater Minstrels

Izzy: My papa made me take a bath in cold water.

Prof: Why should he make you bathe in cold water?

Izzy: Just on purpose so I could catch cold. My papa cured his own cold and had a box of cough drops left over.

—Kaltenmeyer's Kindergarten

Hits of Week

The fickle radio maestros, in the unending search for variety, last week nominated the darkest dark horse among the popular songs as the hit song of the week—The Difference a Day Makes. This number, which never before occupied a place of honor in the weekly consensus, now roots proudly as hit leader.

Stay as Sweet as You Are, a favorite tune of the past few months, swept the network airways of all competition, to lead the song hits played most frequently.

Following is Radio Guide's weekly tabulation:

SONG HITS PLAYED MOST OFTEN ON THE AIR:

Song	Times
Stay as Sweet as You Are	30
The Continental	28
Out in the Cold Again	25
The Difference a Day Makes	22
Pop Goes Your Heart	21
Hands Across the Table	20
Flirtation Walk	18
Sweetie Pie	15
Lost in a Fog	10
Wild Honey	7

BANDLEADERS' PICK OF OUTSTANDING HITS:

Song	Points
The Difference a Day Makes	30
If I Had a Million	29
The Continental	25
Rain	23
Hands Across the Table	21
Must We Say Goodnight	18
Winter in Wonderland	17
Sweetie Pie	16
Lost in a Fog	14
One Night of Love	11

Song hits requested most frequently from a few of the maestros last week were:

Casa Loma Orchestra: An Earful of Music, The Difference a Day Makes, Pop Goes Your Heart.

Joe Haymes: Flirtation Walk, Stay as Sweet as You Are, Out in the Cold Again.

Guy Lombardo: The Difference a Day Makes, Wild Honey, Lost in a Fog.

Coming Events

Time Shown is Eastern Standard

Sunday, Dec. 2

MAY SINGH BREEN and PETER DIE ROSE will begin a new series of four-a-week broadcasts over an NBC-WEAF network for fifteen minutes each Sunday, Monday, Wednesday and Friday at 10:30 a. m. They will be assisted by Big Brother BOB EMERY, radio philosopher and entertainer.

JOSEPH GALLICCHIO'S orchestra now is featured in a weekly program of concert music called Command Performance. The imagined setting is a king's court, and a king commands the orchestra to play royal musical favorites. The hour is 1 p. m. each Sunday over an NBC-WEAF network.

SIGURD NILSEN, basso, will join QUEENA MARIO, Metropolitan Opera soprano, on the American Radiator Program at 7:30 p. m., over an NBC-WEAF network.

GRACE MOORE, concert soprano and star of the motion picture, One Night of Love, will sing with the Ford Symphony Orchestra on the Sunday Evening Hour program from 8 to 9 p. m. over the WABC-Columbia network.

Chase and Sanborn Opera Guild offers grand opera in English condensed into a full hour program. DEEMS TAYLOR, noted composer, will be the narrator; WILFRED PELLÉTIER, Metropolitan Opera conductor, will direct the symphonic orchestra and chorus of forty voices. Outstanding opera singers of the world will be cast in the grand operas which will be heard in the new series beginning tonight at 8 p. m. over an NBC-WEAF network.

JESSICA DRAGONETTE, LANNY ROSS, and RENAISSANCE ENSEMBLE, and other NBC headliners will be featured in the Christmas Seal program over an NBC-WJZ network at 10 p. m. Solos and a duet by Miss Dragonette and Ross, a cello solo by ROSARIO BOURDON, conductor of the Cities Service orchestra, a piano duet by FRANK BANTA and MILTON RITTENBERG, and two numbers by the Renaissance Ensemble, played on olden-time string instruments, will comprise the program.

Monday, Dec. 3

GUS VAN, comedy song and patter artist, will be heard again over an NBC-WEAF network beginning today at 10:05 a. m. and each Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday morning.

Iggy Gone Wild

the crime—but had not tried to escape from the district entirely.

"And now," the piggy-eyed youth said to himself as the police car vanished, "to make my getaway. I'll take a car."

Down the street he saw a parked coupe. Keeping a sharp lookout for the sight of slow-moving headlights that might mean more police cruisers, he moved stealthily toward the car—then noticed that it contained two persons.

"Good!" murmured this utterly cold-blooded young killer. "This means I'll get some dough, too."

Inside the car sat Miss Lillian Henry, 20 years old, a niece of Deputy Police Commissioner John Alcock; and James Gusinger, a young railroad clerk. They had just returned from a neighborhood movie, and Gusinger had pulled up his car in front of her home at No. 5720 South Lincoln Street, where they sat and chatted for a few moments.

Closer and closer crept the cold-eyed youth with the gun.

"Well, Jim," said Lillian gaily, "it's getting late. I think I'd better say good-night."

She half-opened the coupe door, started to get out.

Like a frightened jack-in-the-box, a leering face popped up at the door.

"Get back in there! And put 'em up! This is a stickup!"

Roughly Lillian was thrust back into the car. Then slowly, carefully, keeping that small black automatic trained on Gusinger, the youth in the peaked cap clumbed in beside the girl.

"I'm a tough guy!" was the amazingly boyish boast of this strange youth. "So don't start nothing, see?" The little piggy eyes were boring into those of the angry Gusinger. "Get going!" snapped the young desperado. "Drive where I tell you."

Boasts of Murder

For an instant Gusinger hesitated. At this the skin on the gun-boy's face tightened, lips curled back from his mouth. He looked oddly like a cat, laying back its ears before striking. The finger tightened slightly upon the gun's trigger.

For a moment, a second life hung in the balance. One added spasm of rage in the gunman—one added traction of an ounce's pressure on the trigger . . .

But the boy's anger faded slightly. The self-satisfied leer returned to his face.

"You better drive, fellah," he gloated in a flat tone. "I just killed one guy . . ."

Gusinger started the car.

"I stuck up this fellow and his girl back at 64th and Lincoln," continued the killer boastfully as they drove away from the curb. "The guy tried to jump out of the car when I told him it was a stickup, and I let him have it. So keep your mouth shut! And keep your eyes away from me or I'll plug you, too!"

GLAMOUR! ROMANCE!
GOOD MONEY!

BROADCASTING offers these and more

BROADCASTING offers remarkable opportunities to talented men and women if they are trained in broadcasting technique. It isn't necessary to be a star to make good money in Broadcasting. There are hundreds of people in Broadcasting who are practically unknown—but they easily make $1,000 to $5,000 a year. Of course, the stars often make $15,000 to $50,000 a year.

New method of practical training, developed by Floyd Gibbons, its talented people far good pay Broadcasting jobs. If you have a good speaking voice, can sing, act, write, direct or sell, the Floyd Gibbons School will train you—right in your own home in your spare time—for the job you want.

Our free book, "How to Find Your Place in Broadcasting," tells you the whole fascinating story of Broadcasting—and how you can turn your hidden talents into money. Send the coupon today for free book. No obligation.

On Short Waves

Time Shown Is Eastern Standard

One way of keeping track of what the other countries are saying about the United States—and also learning what they are trying to do inside their own boundaries—is by listening in to their short wavel world news reviews which are not "setups" for exchange broadcasts by this and other countries.

Set your alarm for 8:30 a. m. and tune in Pontoise, France (15.243 megacycles), for the first newscast. Follow at 8:45 a. m. with your choice of GSI, Daventry, England (15.13 meg.), or DJB, Zeesen, Germany (15.20 meg.).

All the periods quoted bring broadcasts in English.

Reception Review

FOR PERIOD of November 15-23, as reported by Charles A. Morrison, International DXers Alliance, Bloomington, Ill.: The period under review has been about average with three very poor days when even the best stations failed to show up. In general, GSI, Daventry, England, has been the outstanding signal on 19 meters.

The 25-meter band has improved considerably and GSE, Daventry, England (11.86 meg.), is usually good at the beginning of the 9:15 a. m. transmission. Try for P111, Huizen, Holland, on 11.725 meg. at the same time. You'd also better have an ear cocked for RNE, Moscow (12.00 meg.). They have been testing around this time of the morning. RNE may be heard regularly on Sunday mornings, 6 to 7 and 10 to 11 a. m.

The 25-meter band is best in the early afternoon with GSD, Daventry, England (11.75 meg.), the star performer. The 31-meter band is fair in the afternoons with PRF5, Rio de Janeiro (95.00 meg.) reliable from 5:30 to 6:15 p. m. GSB, Daventry, England (95.10 meg.), is best in the middle of the afternoon. EAQ, Madrid, Spain, the old reliable, is loudest at the beginning of their 5:15-7 p. m. schedule.

The 49-meter band has improved de-

SIR JOSIAH STAMP

The former British cabinet member, now director of the Bank of England, is an international authority on economics. He will be heard Friday, December 7, at 5 p. m. EST on short-wave and via an NBC-WEAF network, as speaker on the Causes of War exchange program series

*more strength
less noise*
... on all-wave
sets with new RCA
Noise Reducing Antenna

Here's the greatest aid to satisfactory short-wave reception . . . a perfected antenna that lets you hear foreign stations as free from noise as domestic programs! Specially designed to cut down man-made interference—autos, electric motors, etc. Brings up weak stations. Higher efficiency because parts are perfectly matched; more uniform response because of new "double-doublet". Attractive appearance—easily installed.

Improves standard broadcast reception—special switch to turn from short-wave to standard. Price $6.00 plus installation. Give your all-wave receiver a chance—ask your dealer or service engineer today to make a CERTIFIED INSTALLATION—or write for folder EM 5. RCA Parts Div., Camden, N. J.

MONDAY 8:00 Eastern P.M. Standard Time
NBC — including WSAI — WTAM — and Coast to Coast Network

Music in the Air

By Carleton Smith

Time Shown is Eastern Standard

During this week BRUNO WALTER begins his fourth consecutive winter as a conductor of the New York Philharmonic Symphony. This beloved friend of music lovers has taken a place in their hearts second only to Toscanini's. With every reappearance he has strengthened his hold upon those who know how to value that catholicity of taste, that unassailable artistic integrity, that happy blend of insight and sympathy which are Mr. Walter's outstanding characteristics as an artist.

Bruno Walter's value as an interpreter rests in part upon the completeness and authenticity with which he represents what one might call, for want of a more sharply indicative term, the great central tradition of German musical culture.

In the words of LAWRENCE GILMAN, "It is easy to recognize the influence of that tradition upon an artist as it is perilous to limit its nature by definition, and foolish to imply that it is all-sufficing. It is not specifically operative, for example, upon certain rare interpreters who need not now be named."

"But Mr. Walter's . . . warm and rich expansiveness, breadth and gravity of conception are relevant to an interpreter's account of that mighty flowering of the musical spirit in central Europe, which began with Beethoven and has found its end, apparently, in Strauss. It is of this great tradition that Mr. Walter is peculiarly the mouthpiece."

Walter's Programs

THE PROGRAMS Mr. Walter has chosen for the first four of his six broadcasts this season have been announced. For his opening program he will do Gluck's "Orpheus and Eurydice," in concert form, and then, sensing the popularity of the greater Richard and the need to have his music performed by a superlative body of orchestra men, Mr. Walter has wisely chosen lengthy excerpts from "The Flying Dutchman," "Lohengrin," "Die Walkuere," "Siegfried," and "Parsifal." The complete broadcasts as now scheduled over Columbia (Sundays at 3 p. m.) include:

DECEMBER 9

1. "Orpheus and Eurydice," with Maria Olszewska, contralto, as Orpheus.

DECEMBER 16

1. Prelude and Good Friday Spell from "Parsifal," with Paul Althouse and Emanuel List.
2. Act I, Scene 4, from "Siegfried" with Paul Althouse and Marek Windheim.

DECEMBER 23

1. Overture and Act II, Scenes 4 and 5, from "The Flying Dutchman," with Gertrude Kappel, Frederick Schorr, and Emanuel List.

BETTY WORTH

Always a bad girl, never a pride, at least in the radio sketches in which she appears, is this former Follies girl. In private life she is of exemplary behavior and neither smokes, drinks nor plays cards. She is featured in the CBS-WABC "Court of Human Relations" Fridays at 8:30 p. m. EST

2. Act III, Final Scene from "Die Walkuere," with Gertrude Kappel and Frederick Schorr.

DECEMBER 30

1. A "Faust" Overture.
2. Preludes to Act I and Act III from "Lohengrin."
3. Act I from "Die Walkuere," with Lotte Lehmann, Paul Althouse and Emanuel List.

"Orpheus and Eurydice"

TRAVELERS TO SALZBURG have brought back glowing tales about the wonders Mr. Walter has wrought with Gluck's version of the classic drama, about his sensitive handling of the orchestra, his delicate phrasing and his just balancing between the passionateness of the music's content and the perfect symmetry of its form. To all this I can bear testimony.

We will hear Mme. Maria Olszewska as the Greek poet, and the chorus will be from the Metropolitan Opera. In Salzburg, Sigrid Onegin always sang the title role, but when she disappointed Mr. Walter and did not come for her scheduled performance in this opera, presumably at Herr Hitler's request, the conductor in indignation vowed he would never direct for her again.

The story concerns the Greek poet Orpheus who is so distraught over the death of his wife, Eurydice, that he goes to search for her in the realms of Pluto. We hear the famous orchestral interludes as Orpheus descends toward the River Styx. The God of Love promises to aid him on condition that when he has found Eurydice he will return to earth without once looking at her. His mission finally accomplished, Orpheus returns from the underworld with Eurydice. The latter, however, failing to understand his averted face, upbraids him for his coldness. Despite the fact that he knows that to cast a single glance at his loved one will mean death, Orpheus is unable to endure her reproaches and takes her in his arms, only to see her sink down lifeless. This scene contains the famous "Che faro senza Eurydice." Orpheus is then about to kill himself when Love appears and miraculously restores Eurydice to life.

London String Quartet

DON'T MISS YOUR last chance to hear the London String Quartet! That famous organization is about to disband after 25 years of playing together. Since the swan song of the new legendary Honza group a few years ago, this has been the ranking string quartet. They will play on NBC's Music Guild series Monday (December 3 at 1:45 p. m.) and a week later on Tuesday (December 11 at 1:30 p. m.).

Adieu Yvonne Gall!

THE MOST ENJOYABLE minutes on PAUL WHITEMAN'S MUSIC HALL these past weeks have been those when YVONNE GALL sang. She offers a refreshing breath of contrast to the decidedly American features of the program, and demonstrates that she is no less an artist of recital than of opera. Her visits with us have shown her resourcefulness in diverse styles and moods. She has had a persuasive interpretation for them all, aristocracy for the old, forthrightness for the new, charm for every one. She knows how, and she does it.

To hear her fine singing—a beautiful quality of mezzo voice, phrases etched with French clarity, and an intonation that is always in the middle of the note—these and a keen intelligence have made Mme. Gall a most welcome visitor. She returns to France to sing at a special anniversary at the Paris Opera on Christmas Eve. Let us hope she will not be long away.

Alfredo Casella

THE OUTSTANDING performances of the recent Berkshire Festival of Chamber Music (parts of which were broadcast) were given by the Casella-Poltronieri-Bonucci Trio, which is now touring this country. The ensemble's perfection was a revelation and this organization should have been heard frequently on the air before its return to Rome. Its residing genius, ALFREDO CASELLA, is known here as composer, pianist, and conductor. His newest orchestral composition will be broadcast by Stokowski December 7 (CBS at 3 p. m.).

Sibelian Music

THERE ARE two broadcasts containing music by JAN SIBELIUS this coming week. ARTUR RODZINSKI concludes his stay with the Philharmonic-Symphony December 2 (CBS at 3 p. m.) and plays the famous Finnish tone poem for orchestra, "Tapiola." Unlike the greatest Sibelius symphonies, the potentialities of this score are not locked deep beneath its surface. Nevertheless, they are not so obviously stated as in "Lindlandia."

America's best-loved Radio Family

Now Sponsors
Kentucky Winners
... the milder cigarette that can't get stale

Here's welcome news to millions of radio fans! "One Man's Family"—that interesting, lovable, human drama of American life—is now on the air from coast to coast for Kentucky Winners... the milder cigarette that CAN'T get stale.
To millions of men and women "One Man's Family" means an evening of entertainment and heart warming drama.
And to millions of men and women, Kentucky Winners mean perfect enjoyment and smoking pleasure. To begin with, Winners are the mildest, freshest cigarettes you ever smoked. They're made of the finest tobaccos. But in addition—and this is mighty important—each individual cigarette is made with moisture-proof paper. This remarkable paper SEALS IN the full flavor of the fine tobaccos. That means they can't dry out—can't become "dusty" and cause coughing. The tobacco remains moist and pliant. Made of the finest tobaccos. They can't stick to the lips or cause ugly yellow finger stains. For a fair trial—get a carton or at least three packs.

Your Ambassador to Radio

By Orville Revelle

The Girl On The Flying Trapeze! Dear O. R. JANE BISHOP and JACK WOODS send word that the Tower Radio Theater of WSMK will vacate from the waves after sixty consecutive performances. It will reopen after the holidays with a new cast and method of presentation. What Jane forgot to mention was that she may return as Mrs. Jack Woods!

I THINK YOU'LL enjoy reading the next item . . . BILL HALEY is back in ether circulation again . . . He's a member of WCKY's "band without a name," which goes into rehearsals this week . . . BOB KEYS, HAPPY WEBSTER, EMIL DOBIS and EARL CLARK are included in its personnel . . . By the way, ELMER DRESSMAN wants you to know that Emil and Earl, between them, play 35 different instruments—though not all at the same time!

TOM REILLY, who left WAVE to vacation in the Southland, will be replaced by RUSSELL PIRKEY, a graduate of the University of Louisville . . . Pirkey will act in the capacity of continuity writer and announcer the same as he did in Lexington, when he was with WLAP . . . HARRY SULLIVAN says you should remember Pirkey as the chap who presented those delightful plays for the Little Theater Company last year.

BOB BENTLEY PHONED . . . KAY THOMPSON the concert pianist who just recently discovered she had the perfect radio voice will become a WFBE asset! . . . Miss Thompson is slated to appear on the Rhythm Boys program . . . If I'm allowed a guess I believe she's the same Kay Thompson who was trying to make a go of it out in Hollywood this past Spring when who should come along but Burt McMurtrie of ABS and offer her a contract!

CHUCK WISE salutes JOHN McCORMICK with a "Hiya Mackie Waxie!" and John calls Chuck—Cluckie Waxie . . . HARRY (spell the name right) HARTMAN may divorce himself from WFBE, the early part of 1935, to tackle the Madison Square Garden announcing job! . . . STANLEY PEYTON is another who will trek eastward in search of opportunity next year.

ACCORDING TO GEORGE CASE, we should not expect too much of the year 1935. His argument against a prosperous new year is, musically speaking, this: Back in 1929 we were singing "I've Found A Million Dollar Baby" . . . then we slipped down a few bucks and commenced whistling "I've Got Five Dollars," . . . a year later found us humming "Here It Is Monday, and I've Still Got A Dollar," . . . later it was "Brother Can You Spare A Dime?" . . . and then we graduated into "Out In The Cold Again!" . . . I've added "Time On Our Hands" for next year's favorite theme! Which happens not to be a plug for any certain wrist watch manufacturer (GAG!).

Many artists have phoned or written their appreciation of your untiring efforts in getting the listeners to write to them. Write Your Favorite Artist Week was a great success and they hope for a near future encore.

MANY RUMORS ARE rumbling hereabouts that certain stations will pull down their high-priced corrugated shutters next year! The owners tossed caution to the winds when they grabbed network—commercial and sustaining, the former at a big loss the latter at a high price—and forgot the local sponsor who was prepared to buy radio hours but refused the time that the large concerns also turned down. If you use correct addition it amounts up to this: too many outlets in the same locality are carrying duplicate programs and only the fittest (big stations) can survive! The smaller ether parlors should be able to spar with oblivion by devoting more time to local talent with the hope

BECKY CRUTE

This petite singer's name sounds like an adventure in baby talk but the shrewd Roxy corralled her for radio because of her charming voice as well as for her personal attractiveness. She is heard as a member of Roxy's chorus Saturdays at 8 p. m., EST, on the CBS-WABC network that their home town sponsors will ignore the station's past mistakes!

THOSE FEW FLURRIES of snow the other afternoon brought to mind that its nearing the "gifts you can't use" time . . . I'm jotting down a few items for certain stars: GEORGE CASE needs a new "date-book," the old one's filled—PETER

GRANT, a hat, but try and make him wear it—GEORGE GIVON could use a new jokebook . . . And many a station could use a few sponsors! . . . Also while you're Santaing, see to it that a sponsor is dropped into the Carefree Carnival's stocking.

Few people know NORMAN SYMONDS—WAVE baritone heard each Thursday evening—was at one time a member of the Pacific Coast Opera Company . . . It was here, under the direction of Arturo Casigha, that Symonds achieved his greatest success.

MME. NINON VALLIN, famous French soprano, should be a welcome guest in the homes Nov. 30—when she will sing the role of Marguerite, the heroine of the opera "Faust" . . . WCKY will be the outlet.

IN AN EPISTLE from JACK SNOW, he states that its very interesting to watch the new WSMK—Journal Herald studios materialize in the Loew Theater Building. Years ago builders of studios followed the theory that echo, resonance and reverberation were enemies of good broadcasting, so ordered thick carpets on the floor and drapes hung everywhere. The new parlors in Dayton will sport the latest in materials, such as was used in Radio City—which will result in the correct echo period.

MARGUERITE HITZEMAN makes me a WOWO customer in the future.

DICK CHANN and TOM LIDDINGTON are budding into radio stars at this moment . . . They "stole the show" while making a personal appearance in Lexington—at the National Lurimen's Association Banquet . . . LAWRENCE TIBBETT dropped ROLF VONN a line of advice—told the WSMK songster to continue with his studies and then try another crack at New York!

In closing I'm dropping the radio angle and letting you in on something that all Cincinnatians should know . . . JIM TULLY, Hollywoodian writer and actor, also champion for a night over JOHN GILBERT, was once a bus boy in the Hotel Gibson (this should make LEE JOHNSON feel a bit better!)

Music in the Air

We will hear Sibelius' choral music sung from Chicago December 6 (NBC at 4:30 p. m.). EDWIN KARIHU leads a group of Sibelius enthusiasts and gives us a rare opportunity to hear unfamiliar music that is great and powerful and one of the richest mines of choral expression as yet unexplored in our country.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE— WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rinin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, but late and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute. 25c at drug stores. © 1931 C. M. C.

On Short Waves

cidedly and GSA, Daventry, England (6.05 meg.) is excellent on its 6-7 p. m. airing. Listen for Big Ben at 6 p. m. DJC, Zeesen, Germany, may often be heard as late as 10 p. m. They are on 6.02 meg. Germany is inaugurating a new series of experimental transmitters. These are:

DJM, 6.079 meg.; DJN, 9.54 meg.; DJO, 11.795 meg.; DJP, 11.855 meg.; DJQ, 15.28 meg.; and DJR, 15.34 meg. DJN may be heard nightly now from 9:15 to 11:40 p. m. in conjunction with DJC.

Try for These

NEW STATIONS for which you will want to try and which come in well are COIL, Vedado, Havana, Cuba, on 9.46 meg., with a mighty entertaining Cuban bill of fare from 6 to 7 p. m. and 9 to 10 p. m. There is also OAX4AD, Lima, Peru ("RADIO DUSA"), on 5.77 meg. Wednesday and Saturday nights from 9 to 11:30 p. m.

THE OUTSTANDING STATION to try for now is 2RO, Rome, with their new 20,000-watt voice. 2RO uses their 48.70 meters, or 6.160 meg. frequency for a series of special broadcasts to the United States. This important series of broadcasts take place on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday nights from 6:30 to 8 p. m. Transmission opens with our National Anthem and Giovinezza, the Fascist song.

Not only are some of the great "Arias" from the State Opera being broadcast but also addresses by such speakers as Gabriele D'Annunzio, S.E., the president of the Italian Chamber of Deputies, and former radio minister Ciano, the Prince Potenziari, the writer Luigi Pirandello, etc. Rome is also carrying out tests to the U. S. on 30.67 meters.

The S. W. Calendar

MONDAY NIGHT, December 3, DJC and DJN, both at Zeesen, Germany, on 49.83 meters and 31.45 meters respectively will broadcast a special program to the short wave listeners of North America from 9:15 to 10:40 p. m. This program was especially arranged by the International Dx'ers Alliance.

Short wave broadcasts scheduled during the week for rebroadcast over the NBC and CBS networks are four in number. On Monday, December 3, at 8:45 p. m., another program comes from the Schooner Seth Parker over an NBC-WJZ network or direct from KNRA, the ship's transmitter, on 48.70, 31.22 or 24.30 meters.

Wednesday, December 5, at 10 p. m. will be heard another of the CBS-WABC two-way programs from Little America. KFZ, the Little America base station, is easily heard direct and frequently tests Mondays, Tuesdays and Wednesdays between 7 and 10 p. m.

On Thursday, December 6, from 4:30 to 5 p. m., the NBC-WJZ network will originate from Chicago and Washington, D. C., a program commemorating the seventeenth anniversary of independence of Finland. The usual NBC transmitters will short wave the program to Finland where it will be rebroadcast. Among those to be heard are Leonard Astron, Finnish minister to the United States; Wilbur Carr, assistant secretary of state of the United States; E. A. Forsberg, Finnish consul in Chicago, and the Chicago Sibelius Choir.

On Friday, December 7, at 5 p. m., Sir Josiah Stamp, director of the Bank of England, and former British cabinet member, will speak from London in another of the exchange programs in the International Causes of War series. An NBC-WJZ network will carry the address which will be transmitted to America by GSD, 25.53 meters, and GSB, 31.55 meters.

Tuning Tips

MANY SHORT WAVE LISTENERS have been enjoying the fine symphony concerts which have been broadcast by the French stations at Pontoise. Tune in these splendid programs on Sundays around 12 noon. The concerts have featured both the Paris Conservatory and the Paris Symphony orchestra.

The attempts of English crooners to sing American cowboy songs have furnished many a good laugh to those who follow the programs of the English stations at Daventry.

COC, HAVANA, CUBA, is stepping out these evenings. Located at 6.01 megacycles, it is comparatively free of interference and has been heard in Europe, New Zealand and South Africa. This station is a great favorite among American listeners because of its frequent announcements in English.

TIEP, San Jose, Costa Rica, has been received with great volume during the past few weeks. As yet its schedule is not definite but it has been heard almost every night recently between 8 and 11 o'clock. You'll find TIEP at 6.71 meg.

SOUTH AMERICAN stations are providing plenty of entertainment. One that is being received regularly and with good volume is HJ3ABD at Bogota, Colombia. It is located at 7.40 meg., and offers some splendid programs for those who like the tango type of music.

STATION CT1AA, Lisbon, Portugal, has moved up the dial a few degrees. Look for it at 9.66 meg., instead of 9.60 as formerly. Programs from CT1AA are identified by frequent groups of three cuckoo calls.

ALTHOUGH A COMMUNICATION from Rome says that its broadcasts to America are being transmitted on a frequency of 9.78 meg., many listeners have found that by dropping down to 9.10 meg., these programs have been heard more clearly. Evidently 12RO is transmitting on two frequencies.

Iggy Gone Wild

On and on they drove. Once they passed a squad car prowling on the lookout for the boy killer. Its nearness tantalized and mocked the terrorized couple. At length they reached a dark and isolated section of the southwest side.

"Pull up here!" Obeying the curt order and the pointing gun, Guisinger jammed on his brakes. "Now both of you—get out!"

The girl and the clerk stepped to the street, their captor following. The gun in his right hand, he went through Guisinger's pockets with his left and found $2.00. Then he snatched Miss Henry's purse from her trembling fingers, went through it, pocketed the bits of change he discovered. There was a ruthless gleam in the small eyes as he looked at her, and the girl shuddered.

Alone With Killer

"Scram, you!" the youth said gutturally, jiggling his pistol into Guisinger's ribs. "You've been a pretty good guy or I'd have killed you like I did that other one. He was coughing blood, so I guess I killed him all right."

Guisinger walked away. And now the youth with the gun smirked at Miss Henry. "You get in and drive!" he commanded. "And you better do what I tell you to, if you know what's good for you. Don't forget, I'm tough. I should've plugged your boy friend. He looks like a flatfoot I know."

Miss Henry obeyed. Now that he was alone in the car with the girl, leaving Guisinger helpless and enraged, the young killer's boasting knew no bounds. His chest swelled. He talked rapidly and without ceasing, while his little pig eyes ran over her. Obviously he was trying to impress her! He leaned toward her, still talking volubly. Lillian shrank away.

Outraged egotism made the boy's face hideous. In his colossal self-conceit he was surprised—insulted. They were driving in a lonely suburb.

"Stop the car!" he rapped. "Get out!" As he led her away from the road, his intentions became clear to the horrified girl.

"Oh, please!" she begged. . . . That was just the beginning of a dreadful ordeal. When they left that spot, the boy made her drive for hours. There were more stops. And between the stops, the killer talked exultantly.

"I'm a hard guy," he boasted. "I've done time in Pontiac, and I've shot up a couple of other guys, besides that one tonight. Once I shot up a half a dozen Mexicans just for fun. I got a brother who was killed in a stick-up, too. But—" whenever he came to this point in his oft-repeated story he would pause, chuckle that horrid cackle of his, and leer at the pale girl.

The Fearful Ordeal

"But they can't do nothing to me because I'm supposed to be crazy! Ha-ha-ha-ha!"

Once, out of the night loomed a pair of headlights. The bandit tensed.

"Looks like a squad," he remarked. "If they stop me I'll have to give it to 'em." He poised his gun for action. The car drew nearer, and the familiar color of a taxicab showed through the gloom. The killer laughed again.

"It's lucky for them it wasn't a squad," he boasted. "I'd 'a' given 'em hell. Say—stop here!"

The unfortunate girl halted the machine in the shadows of a railroad right-of-way. Was he going to let her go this time? She prayed silently, fervently, as she had prayed countless times before during the hours of this horror.

"You've been a pretty good kid," the killer remarked with ridiculous condescension. "I guess I'll let you go home now. I ought to take your car, but it ain't big enough for the jobs I'm gonna pull off. Well, I'll be seein' you!" And with a breezy wave of his hand he vanished in the darkness of the railroad tracks, leaving an hysterical girl sobbing over the wheel of the car.

Meanwhile young Guisinger had found his way to the New City police station. The hunt for the young murderer now was intensified. And when Miss Henry, suffering from shock and terror, hysterically told her story to the police, every available patrol squad was sent into the area.

Through that night and the next morning the search went on. The entire city was aroused. Murmured criticism of the police arose as people realized that the criminal had threaded his way through a part of the city which squads from five police districts were combing.

Commissioner Acts

Commissioner of Police James P. Allman personally took charge of the hunt. From the complete descriptions now supplied the police by the mad youth's victims, and the fact that his forays were confined to a single district, Allman was convinced that the culprit was a neighborhood hoodlum—but who? Police searched their memories to no avail.

But radio reached out its invisible fingers and touched another memory—with surprising results.

The next afternoon, some miles away in the little city of Dixon, Illinois, Dr. W. G. Murray sat listening to the news flashes over his radio. Now Dr. Murray was head of the state hospital for juvenile mental defectives—and chance brought to his ears a piece of news very interesting to him. Said the newscaster:

Police squads are still combing the South Side in search of the boasting boy maniac who spread terror through the Englewood district last night, killing the escort of a girl in one attempted holdup, and abducting and attacking a young girl in another. . . . Believe he is responsible for a number of other shootings and robberies in the neighborhood, descriptions obtained from his latest victims coinciding with those of the perpetrator of the other crimes. . . . Marking him particularly, police say, is his long sharp nose and dark, small, piggish eyes. His detailed appearance, as broadcast by the police, describes him as around seventeen years old. . . .

As Dr. Murray listened, a picture began to form in his mind—a picture of a lad with sharp nose and piggy eyes; a picture, too, of a warped mentality whose dreadful potentialities the doctor's psychiatry identified immediately with the crimes that had been committed. Forgotten were the news reports. Dr. Murray summoned a clerk, despatched him in haste to bring some records.

Radio Tightens Net

"Get me Supervising Captain John Prendergast of the New City Police," the Doctor rapped into his telephone, a few moments later. "And hurry, please."

Crisply, Dr. Murray told Prendergast what was in his mind. "Read me the description of the boy you're looking for," he requested. And as the description came over the wire, he checked it item by item with his hospital record. Dr. Murray nodded grimly.

"Captain," he said, "the boy you're looking for is James Ignatius Varecha. He's known as Iggy. He escaped from the Dixon Hospital on August 3. He is a borderline case with marked criminal tendencies. His mother, Mrs. Anna Varecha, lives at 2054 West 52nd Street."

West 52nd Street! Right in the heart of the sector where the killer had operated! Captain Prendergast had the central radio detail on the wire immediately. And out went this message:

"Attention, cars 17 and 29. . . . Attention cars 17 and 29. . . . Go at once to 2054 West 52nd Street and apprehend James Iggy Varecha, seventeen years old. He is wanted for murder of Frank Jordan, and for robbery and assault. . . . Attention, all cars. . . . Attention, all cars. . . . Be on the lookout for James Iggy Varecha, seventeen years old. He is the man wanted for mur-

Start saving your series now. And watch for another celebrity Under the MIKEroscope in RADIO GUIDE next week.

When the Questions and Answers vogue was epidemic, a Chicago Artists Bureau fathered a set of 34 queries to test the knowledge of radio listeners. It ran the gamut from who made the first radio tour in history, through who has written over one thousand songs with both words and music of his own composition, up to who has been in the music business fifteen years and whose fans have purchased over 21,000,000 music products bearing his name?

The answer to all of the 34 questions was Wendell Hall. Those questions revealed one of the most amazing histories in the story of American entertainment. It is doubtful if any other artist has so many accomplishments deserving superlatives as has this red-headed master of the ukulele.

To many who spend their Summers close to nature the name of Wendell Hall is anathema. That's because he happened to author It Ain't Gonna Rain No More, which became the song, not for just a day, not for just a week, not for just a year, but always. Every lake shore, picnic grounds and campfire echoed its strains the year Hall first etched it upon public consciousness.

His technique with the ukulele brought the Tom Thumb guitars out of Polynesian obscurity and made them the physical symbol of adolescence. No handy reference guide exists, but the record of young people slain by nerve-wracked parents must have exceeded all existing marks during the post-Wendell ukulele era.

Today, under Hall's influence, the instrument has attained adult dignity, but there are still those who mutter darkly and get a hunted look when a ukulele is plunked in the dark or in a passing car. One of the breed, sponsored by the singer, sells for $25, and that automatically entitles it to as much respect as Florida lots.

A popular fallacy is that Hall is a Southerner. On the contrary, he was born in St. George, Kansas, which was not sufficiently remote from the border to prevent some of the typical Missouri drawl from drifting over and getting all tangled up in the natives' speech. Wendell's slurred syllables are the result of this migratory idiom.

Hall started his professional career as The Singing Xylophonist in vaudeville at 21. He was overcome with the martial spirit shortly after his debut, and served throughout the war on French soil with the Fifth Anti-Aircraft Machine Gun corps. This cured him of his taste for percussion instruments, so upon his return to this country he began toying with the stringed ones.

In 1921 he began to scent the potentialities of radio, and made his bow that year over KYW, Chicago. Right then and there the ukulele and chatter song flood began to creep up on the spillgates. It wasn't, however, until a few years later that the inundation set in.

By 1924 Hall had migrated to WEAJ in New York. There he added to his mounting list of firsts by being one of the principals in the grand-daddy of all the radio weddings. With four stations attuned to the rites, he wed Marion Martin of Chicago. They have two sons, Wendell, Junior, aged eight, and Lowell, now just four.

Wendell is tall, lank and a trifle stooped. His genial smile represents a key to his endless popularity on the stage and over the air. He has a weakness for villainous-looking black cigars, of which he smokes about a dozen a day. He is a prolific writer of music and is the perennial god-father. More than 100 boys have been named for him by admiring parents—which somewhat squares up the age of mayhem which he precipitated by "It Ain't Gonna Rain No More."

Wendell Hall may be heard each Sunday at 7:45 p. m. EST or 6:45 p. m. CST over an NBC-WEAJ network, sponsored by F. W. Fitch Co.
