Drama Chief Of NBC Answers The headquarters of radio drama is Chicago. We turned to the Midwest City and the production head of the National Broadcasting Company to discuss the RADIO GUIDE campaign for better dramatic presentations. Clarence L. Menser, the responsible and directing head of this division, gives a very clear, academic and expert analysis of radio drama in this answer:

I have been asked to prepare a statement in answer to two recent editorials in RADIO GUIDE lamenting the present state of radio drama. The request for an answer to these editorials is to me somewhat embarrassing because, in my opinion, the statements are more or less true. It becomes very difficult to answer a statement with which you generally agree. However, I offer the following comments which I think are pertinent to the discussion:

There has been a great deal of discussion about the tripe and drivel which is broadcast under the head of original radio drama. It must be admitted that a great deal of poor material is broadcast. This fact, in and of itself, does not state the whole proposition, however. I believe that the general average of dramatic material is no lower in radio than it is in pictures or on the stage. The idea that both the stage and screen are putting out a constant stream of literary gems is, of course mistaken. It is true that both the stage and the pictures do put out productions of high merit, but along with these comes a constant flow of tripe and drivel in their own fields.

To insist that nothing good comes out of the air in the way of dramatic productions is to plead ignorance of what is being broadcast.

Dramatic material of a high standard is being broadcast on many programs. Our Radio Guild has for many years presented standard and classic plays. My own Miniature Theater for years brought to the air the best material available from short plays. The sponsored Radio Theater at the present time is using standard Broadway successes. The Beauty Box Revue is using musical comedies of the same high grade. As for the suggestion that O. Henry stories should be presented, the reason they are not being done in 1935 by the National Broadcasting Company is that they were done so many times before that they are practically worn out.

Not Tripe And Drivel The Sherlock Holmes stories provided what many people thought was a high grade dramatic series. Listeners to a Bible series — Immortal Dramas — which we presented from our Chicago studios thought it anything but tripe and drivel. Several years ago I produced in New York and in Chicago a series called Over Jordan for which the basic material was taken from Roark Bradford's book, which happens also to be the source of the greatest dramatic success in our generation, The Green Pastures. This is a casual list which I have noted on the spur of the moment. I am sure investigation would reveal it to be but a very small part of what actually is broadcast under the head of standard or classic drama.

It is common for critics of radio to sigh for the good old days. They seem to imply that merely because a piece of writing is old, it is therefore a classic. Anyone who has devoted much time to the study of dramatic literature knows that this is not true, and anyone who has worked seriously in radio knows that much of the stuff that has been classic in one form is simply not to be considered for radio until it has been changed greatly by a rewrite man. In many instances rewrite men soon have discovered that they might as well start from scratch and write the whole thing as to try to adapt to radio one of the so-called classics.

I disagree definitely with the statement that the field of contemporary writers is barren. I think the work of Paul Rhymer in Vic and Sade, for instance, is of a quality which is beyond question. There are many others in radio doing comparable work.

Clarence L. Menser: He agrees to disagree

It is traditional in the theater and in the movies, as well as in radio, that high grade performance often makes a poor play stand out as a success. In the same way, many a play which seems mediocre on paper has been lifted to a higher level by expert direction and production. This leads to a point which is a pet of mine. It is that we have yet to scratch the surface on the possibilities of production for radio. In a few isolated instances we have pointed the way. The series of Biblical dramas is a definite example.

Being Held Back I disagree genuinely with the editorial paragraph stating that program directors have contributed to the sorry state of radio drama by not knowing their business; that they know that the material is poor but do not seem to know how to correct it. I state definitely that program directors in radio are qualified to make changes if they are allowed to do so. I personally know of a great many things that can be done to improve our programs but they probably will not be done until everybody connected with radio becomes fully aware of the fact that our product is the program, and that no matter how far-flung our lines may be or what an array of stations we have, if we put out a poor product we are in error.

The mere fact that a fifteen-minute show can be produced with an hour's rehearsal has nothing to do with whether this should be done. When or if radio reaches the point where as much time and thought and energy is given to the production of a radio program which is going to entertain ten million people, as would be given to a theatrical production which would be a success if it played to a hundred thousand people, then radio will avoid a great deal of criticism. This probably will come in time. If it were thrust full blown upon the industry now the result would definitely upset too many people.

Since I have been associated with the National Broadcasting Company I have noted a great increase in willingness on the part of advertisers to believe that it takes money and time to produce good shows. That attitude will go farther, undoubtedly. I believe we eventually will come to the realization that the next big development in radio, and the one thing which will bring our programs up to a state of perfection comparable to our physical outlay, is proper emphasis upon production. I believe it is fundamental to the industry.

Time, Tide and Radio

It should be noted, in passing, that the radio production director's job is much more intense than that of either the theater or movie director. We work to a definite time pattern. We haven't the opportunity, as the movie directors have, of perfecting a series of scenes on successive days and then combining them to make one sequence, or of playing the show several times, as the theater directors do, and of perfecting the production as the run continues. This merely emphasizes the fact that we should take greater care with our preparations before the broadcast than is necessary in either the movies or the theater.

One other element should be mentioned. That is the audience. We have done much in the last five or six years to educate our audience to listen to radio drama. Much more needs to be done, and undoubtedly will be done in the future. I say this because there is a great difference in listening to radio drama or to music. Music always has appealed to the ear, and almost solely to the ear. Although many people have enjoyed seeing an orchestra or a singer in action, at least ninety percent of their enjoyment has come from what they heard. This has not been true of drama. In many cases the greater part of the enjoyment from a show has come from what the audience has seen while it was hearing the lines. In radio we have been forced to turn this whole thing upside down and to teach the audience to listen only. This is not to be done in a day. It involves the whole matter of establishing a body of traditions which are accepted generally, and which mean the same thing to the audience as to the actors.

Creating New Traditions

In the Chinese theater a great body of traditions has grown up through thousands of years. If a man comes on the stage carrying a certain type of flag, for example, the audience accepts the fact that he is not a man at all, but that the man is dead and that this is his spirit moving across the stage. There are many others. Without these traditions the Chinese theater could not exist. With these traditions it gives great enjoyment to the Chinese people.

Much the same thing is true of radio drama, and indeed a great deal of the criticism against radio drama may be accounted for by the fact that we are so young in the business we have been unable to build up a great body of traditions on which we can get general audience acceptance. In other words, there still is a tremendous job to be done in the matter of educating the audience to listen to radio drama. This undoubtedly will be done. Radio must realize that we will get around to this normally.

The statement that radio producers should study the renaissance of the movies in order to solve their own problems, learning to depend upon stories by the masters, is to me lacking in foundation. I have no figures before me, but I am sure that thorough investigation would reveal that the percentage of photoplays based upon Dickens, Dumas, Thackeray, Stevenson and other writers of yesteryear is very small compared to the total output of the movies. The statement that "most of these (writers) would lend themselves to dramatization for radio" seems to me to have no bearing in the discussion because most of these writers already have lent themselves to dramatizations without number which have been produced on the air.

Fibber's Molly Tells the Truth

Caught Out of Character, Molly McGee — Marian Jordan to Her Husband and Children — Tells the Inside Story of Her Career

By Harry Steele

SO'S YOUR old Aunt Kate," may be the flippest crack in the world on the ready lips of our current youth—but unless you're particularly interested in the exact meaning of "a sock on the button," don't ever say it to Marian Jordan, the Molly of NBC's Fibber McGee sketches.

Because her own Aunt Kate is almost a sacred figure, not alone to Marian but also to Jim Jordan, Marian's husband. It was through Jim that Marian acquired Aunt Kate. She really is his aunt so that Marian set up the relationship by marriage. But were she Marian's own mother, the comedienne could not hold her in greater reverence. Time was when Aunt Kate was the master key to Marian's future, and neither of the Jordans ever has forgotten how their beloved kin unlocked the door that blocked the way to the career they craved.

Naturally the tale reverts to an earlier day when Jim helped his Dad farm a big acreage near Peoria, Illinois, and Marian, unaware that Destiny was stalking the furrows of the Jordan farm, was going to school in the hustling town. Before strange circumstances brought about a climax in the affairs of these neighbors who knew nothing of each other, there was to develop a reversal of the traditional saga, a story in which the principals were the traveling farmer and the salesman's daughter.

THAT would be Marian who, about the time she quit public school to enter St. John's Parochial school began to manifest a deep-rooted interest in the arts. She studied violin, piano and voice, achieving a success that prepared her for the four years of teaching by which she earned a comfortable living after her schooling was concluded.

While Marian was sharpening up her talents by participating in all sorts of civic, church and semi-professional musical and theatrical ventures, the boy from the farm outside of town was pursuing an almost parallel path. The family had moved to town and Jim, too, studied voice and found his footsteps automatically pointed toward the stage.

Various jobs sustained him during that training period and he served as machinist, clerk or whatever offered itself when the previous job slipped out from under. Then came the bold venture. Jim migrated to Chicago to find his place on the stage. Meanwhile Marian varied her teaching enterprise by playing the organ at motion-picture theaters and other places where a professional was desired. So far there had been no hint of a Jim or an Aunt Kate. They were of the fabric of her life but to date the pattern had failed to show through.

IN CHICAGO Jim had a variety of theatrical experiences. But the war was each day a more certain menace, and knowing he would want to go in the event hostilities took actual shape, he decided to return to Peoria so that he might depart from home. It was a while before the call came and Jim utilized part of his spare time by joining the choir of St. John's Church. The Mrs. Jordan-to-be already was a member and thus, against a sanctified background of harmony, was launched the acquaintance so shortly to be interrupted by the Four Horsemen—but not before it had ripened into love and culminated in marriage.

Jim joined up, was one of a khaki-clad mob herded into a liner at a mysterious port, and reached St.-Nazaire eager to do his part but already rendered hors-de-combat by a serious illness. While he was in the hospital it became known that he was too good an entertainer to offer up as a target. So he was drafted into an entertainment unit which traveled up and down the lines trying to save morales shattered by the vicious revelations of 20th Century warfare.

Marian Jordan, according to husband Jim—Fibber himself—is more attractive now than she was when they married, years ago

BACK at home young Marian Jordan continued with her choir work and teaching, never doubting her man would be returned to her whole, and endlessly dreaming of the pursuits they would follow when he had put the tragedies of conflict behind him. Close to her was Jim's Aunt Kate offering the encouragement that is needed when one's new helpmate is off to the wars, and counseling her on the sort of advice to tender her spouse about his future career.

There was no end, she said, to the opportunities which business held out for ambitious young men. Farming, too, had its possibilities if a city-bred girl could turn her mind to the exacting and exhausting duties of husbandry. Marian listened and didn't cross Aunt Kate by confessing her hope that Jim's theatrical experience, coupled with her own, offered a ready-made chance, an opportunity that would be enhanced by the nation's need for levity as a panacea for the pessimism bred of international struggle.

"I'll see that you get the financing for whatever

And here's proof that the McGees' pest business you and Jim decide he should go into," the thrifty Aunt Kate promised. "I've saved my money carefully and I want Jim to have what he needs."

It was a relief to the young bride to know that the way was being made easier for her returning man, but it smote her conscience to let Aunt Kate plan while she knew only too well that Jim yearned for a stage career, an ambition which she secretly supported. She even ventured the comment that perhaps Jim would return to his interrupted stage life when he returned.

BOSH!" parried Aunt Kate. "What kind of people go on the stage? Jim doesn't want to be a big sissy, does he? Both of you ought to know that I'll never give him a cent to help him waste his time that way." That was as Marian thought, and she returned wistfully to the prospects of Jim's opening a machine shop or launching into some similar enterprise with which he would be totally out of sympathy.

Eventually the soldier-minstrel marched in his last parade, completed his final grimace for the delight of his fellow warriors—and there he was, back in Peoria, a full-fledged actor and entertainer if one ever existed. He didn't possess Marian's fine tact for wheedling. When Aunt Kate asked him what plans he had for the immediate future, he didn't equivocate for a moment.

"I'd like to organize a road company of my own with Marian and myself, both of us acting and singing and carrying other performers to make up a complete variety show," he excitedly told her.

Let Florida tell of its devastating tempests; let California report its terrestrial upheavals; let Max Baer recount the ferocity of Young Black Joe. All of these are pastoral diversions before the unleashed objections of Aunt Kate.

NO IS a short word almost universally expressed with brevity. But Marian reports the wordage consumed by Aunt Kate before she finally voiced that negative syllable, already have been laid end to end in Webster's, Funk and Wagnall's and their appendices. Then she characteristically relented and advanced them $500 which eventually proved their passport to radio by dint of some experience-building detours.

THE majority of radio listeners, the terms Jazz and Popular Music are synonymous. Actually they must be thought distinct and separate. But even the initiate has difficulty in explaining the distinction satisfactorily. The ordinary person who likes something with a tune is as much outraged by true jazz as is the person to whom all composers since Brahms are anathema. The tune-lovers, however, quite possibly will care for the popular music of the moment, while the Brahms lovers necessarily will continue to be outraged.

An acute description of jazz comes, oddly enough, from the staid and stodgy London Times. "It is not an orgy," said that worthy journal, "but a scientific application of measured and dangerous stimuli." Which is rather neat but still wouldn't fit one for going out into the world unaided and recognizing jazz in the raw. The same description might be applied to Stravinsky, Schoenberg, or even Richard Strauss, and no one would dream of associating them with jazz as moderns know it! And the most wildly improbable of moderns quite frequently writes music which is purely a scientific application of measured and dangerous stimuli. So that alone is not enough of a definition.

Actually, it is virtually impossible to define jazz per se, because invariably some portion of the definition applies to rag-time, popular music as we know it today; and when discussing tone color and harmonies, the same definition, with very little stretching, applies to the work of certain very serious moderns in music.

SO PERHAPS a brief history of jazz can define it better than so many words. It is generally reckoned, as the revered Mr. Gilbert has it, to have begun about 1910. Naturally in the South; in the Rampart Street section of New Orleans, the story says, wild notes issued from the cornet of one Buddy Bolden, notes which were at least unlikely. In fact, they had no place in the score. This is perhaps the most distinctive element of true jazz. The spontaneous interpolations of some virtuoso in the band, produced in moments of frenzy closely bordering a condition of intoxication. It is an improvisation of considerable, sometimes incredible, technical brilliance. The immortal W. C. Handy of St. Louis produced such jazz classics as St. Louis Blues, Memphis Blues, and a host of other efforts not so well known, sometime during the second decade of this Century. The Original Dixieland Jazz-band appeared in New York in 1916, but jazz already had been in San Francisco. It was Le Rocca, of this band, who gave the college proms of all time his Tiger Rag. It is a far cry from the one-steps and the rag-time which had spread over the nation shortly before. Two other classics which defy description are Milenberg Joys, and Copenhagen.

After the War jazz began taking form, if the phrase is not too self-contradictory, and its heroes began to be known. The trumpet supplanted the cornet, and produced such virtuosos as Bix Biederbecke, Red Nichols, and the Negro sensation, Louis Armstrong, who makes up in vigor what the others possess in finesse. Nichols gathered about him the original Five Pennies, whose true jazz recordings are cherished as collectors' items today. As indeed they are. This was after the turn of the third decade, and jazz had reached a point of great refinement.

JACK TEAGARDEN, trombonist, was of this group, and some of his dark, sweet interruptions bring tears to the eyes of the initiate to this day, when heard on the old recordings. Many of them did not have the benefit of electrical transcription, and lose much as a result. Other notables in this stellar aggregation include pianists Joe Sullivan and Art Schutt, clarinetists Benny Goodman and Jimmy Dorsey, guitarist Eddie Lang, one of the first practitioners on the bass saxophone named Adrian Rollini, and another virtuoso of the trombone with the slightly doubtful name of Mill Mole. All, at one time or another, helped constitute the Red Nichols and His Five Pennies band which made jazz history.

Jazz may be torrid, fast and furious, or it may be slow, deliberate, swinging. Swing jazz is perhaps the most comprehensible, having a pleasant melodic line, rather distinctive intervals and harmonies, and an uncomplicated rhythm underlying the various instrumental excursions which typify all jazz. The manner may be forthright and direct, as in Nichols' arrangement of Ida, or achieved with the merest quaver of three or four instruments as in Ellington's interpretation of his own Mood Indigo. It may be loud and raucous—which is usually thought of it—or it may be soft and sweet. It may be—but seldom is—merely a manner of treating a popular tune of the moment, but this is not usually successful. Nor does it bear resemblance to the over-tuffed symphonic effect achieved by certain of the current maestros.

Ted Fiorito, perennially favorite piano-playing maestro with distinctive style

Jazz—"Scientific application of measured and dangerous stimuli"

Jazz has a language of its own just as has horse racing, or the practice of medicine, or stamp collecting. Corny is the description of music a la Rudy Vallee. Licks are the impromptu embroidery added by an instrumentalist, although they may also mean the nonsense syllables sung by the singers known as scat; i. e., Cab Calloway. Go to Church means to play it soft and sweet and in unison.

To jam is the expression which, roughly, means "every man for himself" and "give it all you've got." Jam sessions are indulged by many musicians now playing straight with some dance orchestra, but who feel an urge to get back to first principles in jazz. Several may get together after working hours; the pianist may commence in E flat, the others get in swing, until one of them is taken with an inspiration. There ensues a spontaneous exhibition of virtuosity which never may be repeated. It is quite likely to be so good that "It's way out of this world!" as an admiring listener will exclaim. Each player in turn may be similarly taken, add his bit, and go back to doing the usual thing. The effort may be totally spontaneous, never recaptured, or it may be some standard number which at best is written in skeleton only. Get Off may be the caption on a score which is merely chorded or vaguely sketched in. And get off they do, frequently each instrumentalist in turn. It is practically synonymous with jam.

THE leading practitioner of jazz today is beyond question Edward Kennedy—Duke—Ellington, a Negro piano virtuoso who has gathered about him a group of musicians playing together as one man, in a manner at times uncanny. In personal appearance he reminds one definitely of Paul Robeson, exhibits the same high intelligence and, in his field, is certainly as eminent.

He is one of the few who have not compromised with commercial music, as distinct from jazz. He has admirers in all parts of the world, has made phenomenal successes in England and on the Continent, and stands supreme as the chief purveyor of jazz in this country. If you hear his music it is quite likely to be authentic.

The current leader among white jazz experts is Benny Goodman, whose orchestra became increasingly prominent on the air as one of three on the Let's Dance program. He still blows one of the hottest clarinets in the business, and in addition is a remarkably sound musician.

The Dorsey brothers, formerly virtuosos in their own right, already have gone commercial with their orchestra, although you still hear fine clarinet and trombone with that band. Red Nichols long since has gone back on his first love, and save for his own superb trumpet playing his orchestra today is just like any other. The negro trumpeter, Louis Armstrong, continues to blow his horn as legitimate trumpeters say it cannot be blown. Each one of his recordings ends in a veritable spasm of high C's after much beating about the bush getting there. It is a phenomenal performance.

ANOTHER phenomenon, of course, is Cab Calloway, whose utterly incredible vocalizing in the seat tradition is something uniquely his own. He may have imitators, but none attain the heights he does. Primarily a showman, his dynamic appearance on the stage has the fascination of a tiger about to break out of his cage. His band lacks the polish which Ellington's has, and the arrangements usually are a far cry from the ingenious things produced by the Duke; but what they lack in individuality they make up in noise. In Aldous Huxley's words, "What songs! What gongs! What blasts of Banru melody!"

In marked distinction from all this is the greatest part of what the radio listener hears incessantly over the air. All the really important name bands, as they are known, are comprised of remarkably competent musicians, men of considerable versatility and musical background. Many are of symphony caliber, which is particularly true of the Whiteman organization. Thoroughly trained musically, they have chosen the dance bands largely because they pay well. One frequently hears amazingly fine performances by some instrumentalist or other in the course of a dance program broadcast from one of the more prominent hotels or dance spots.

The better organizations are pretty much confined to the East where they find playing more profitable once the name is established. But they have a habit of beginning under quite modest circumstances in the Midwest or on the Pacific Coast and, because of radio, soon being in demand in New York—sight unseen. The fame may be short-lived. All are eclipsed more or less permanently at some time or other. They have their ups and downs in the public fancy and may, like Whiteman has, come back to popularity repeatedly.

This type of music has a deadly sameness about it which is its chief fault. It is turned out in mass quantities for public consumption. Sheet music royalties on the usual popular ditty no longer amount to anything, and even so singular hits (Continued on Page 26)

Fiddling for a Million

(Part Three)

By Henry Bentinck

FOLLOWING that ten-week tryout, with his option taken up by the bookers, Ben Ancel found himself launched as an actor, officially. There was a $5 increase in the weekly salary check, and as Ben viewed his new status he decided that perhaps his mantle of dignity demanded a name that would click more readily with audiences. It must be noted in connection with this reflection that ability as a violinist and a flair for polite clowning were not the fiddling boy's only stock in trade. He was possessed of an intuitive understanding of stage requirement, plus a youthful sagacity that has been a steadfast ally in his saga of struggle and accomplishment.

He sought euphony in a name. Many were the combinations he put together before he concluded that Ben Bernie, with its brevity and touch of alliteration, was the only one by which he desired to be known in the profession. Today, the surviving members of the family are called by the familiar Bernie, although officially they still are known as Ancel, the name inscribed on the headstones which mark the graves of Ben's father who died in 1925—and of his devoted mother whose death occurred in the Spring of 1932. Sturdy Julius, the father, lived to see only the dawn of his son's success, but Anna Ancel entered the promised land which overflowed with the milk and honey that can spring only from the bottomless well of an adoring son's achievements.

BUT in that raw era which found the boy playing in second-rate houses, trying out the dreary routines with which he varied a non-too-intriguing fiddling act, little of his later success was indicated. In the first months of his rounds of New York and suburban theaters, the newness of his experiences was sufficient to nourish his interest in his activities. But novelty soon was succeeded by a mounting sense of the sordidness of his life. More often than not Ben's fiddle was in hock. Those were the weeks between engagements, and rescuing his instrument meant obtaining an advance of his week's salary. While he appeared in New York this exigency never existed, but his engagements took him out of town frequently; and the thirty dollars began to loom as pitifully inadequate.

This phase of theatrical struggle robbed Ben of much of his spontaneity. He abandoned most of his patter and developed into a straight violinist. Fortunately there was magic in his touch, and his growing skill as a musician compensated for the lack of his former monologue. And for two years Ben wandered on in this uncertain orbit, increasing his earnings but always sensing the difference between his accomplished mediocrity and his hoped-for headline status.

It was in Philadelphia that the inevitable occurred. In a cheap theatrical hotel there during a week at an unimportant showhouse, he met another disgruntled fiddler, Charles Klass. As is traditional in the theater, their acquaintance led to the discussion of the possibilities of a team, and from that chance contact there emerged a duo which endured for two years and was known as Klass and Bernie, the Fiddle Up Boys. It is no charge of Ben's but that of all who knew him in those days—that the team had more Bernie than Klass.

But the merger somehow inspired both of its principals. Their week in Philadelphia concluded, they went back to New York where Ben disclosed the union to Schenck and Williams. By now the Ancel family had achieved a devout interest in the false glamour of the theater, and they cheered the boys' ambition to put 'em in the aisles at every appearance. When Ben announced his bookers had scheduled a Los Angeles opening for the team, it was as momentous an occasion as when the elder Anzelevitz had stalked into the hovel back in Russia and announced that the family shortly was embarking for America.

PROUDLY big Julius went to work on a suit-case for his boy. It was to be a piece of luggage that would dwarf all other traveling equipment yet devised, yet it must be practical, an economically constructed one that would obviate for some time the need to purchase another. Roomy and stout it would be. Who knows how much of love went into the creation of that bag of bags, with what proud precision every rivet was made fast? Only the happy father who, on the day of its completion, carried it home with pardonable arrogance over its creation.

Ben accepted it with the fine show of sincerity which already had endeared him to audiences, and which ever since has been the keynote of his ability to foster love and loyalty. If, when he lifted it, he sensed the effort that had been wasted in his behalf, he did not betray his discovery to any of those loved ones. To all of the Ancels who shared pride in the prowess of the head of the house, Ben exhibited an excitement that was infectious.

When he took the suit-case to his room to pack his few belongings—then he shook his head in tolerant reali-

Ben's smashing success in the motion picture Stolen Harmony, from which the above camera study was taken, put the finishing touches upon that million begun by his first iron suit-case journey across the continent zation while his eyes gleamed with tears over the love and care which had gone into the gift. To insure permanence Papa Ancel, the blacksmith, had made the case of sheet iron!

It weighed almost as much as did the frail boy who would have to carry it away without a sign other than of appreciation and gratitude. Ben didn't falter. As he and Klass started for the railroad station to launch their migratory adventure, the overlaid boy toted his gift bag with a show of pride equalled only by his father's in the hand-wrought monstrosity.

The moment was at hand. Grouped around one of the guarded iron gates of the Grand Central Terminal was a ringed circle of Ancels, all with tear-stained faces while two happy but unknowing youths set forth for what seemed another side of the universe. Their transportation had been arranged through the booking office and Ben, as spokesman for the act, handled the fluttering badges of passage.

"Yours is the second Pullman," advised the gateman.

"That's right," declared Ben, more willing to adopt a yes-man attitude than ask that strange and awesome dignity what he meant. And seizing Klass by the hand, he led the way to what, so far as either knew, was the only vehicle ever created for railway travel, the day coach!

WHEN the conductor glimpsed their tickets he smiled in tolerant understanding and informed the travelers that they were out of their element. "You belong in a Pullman several cars forward," he told them. "These are sleeper tickets. You boys go on up ahead and I'll have the porter bring your things up."

"The word Pullman didn't mean a thing to me," Ben relates. "I had done mighty little traveling, but when I got in that coach and saw the other passengers taking off their shoes and shucking bananas, I knew I was in the sort of train I was accustomed to. So I decided to dig in for the remainder of the trip."

They were two travel-worn youths that stepped off the train in Los Angeles to begin a career which was to return one of the boys to mediocrity while it projected the other into one of the most brilliant courses ever to be recorded in the long history of theatrical enterprises.

The team of Klass and Bernie was ill-starred from the beginning. Patently Klass was not of the caliber of his partner, and he suffered by the reflection of Ben's growing popularity. Most performers' lives in the theater are not so marked by audience reception as they are by the way they are received by theater attaches. Popularity inevitably begins back of the wings.

The characteristics that make Ben Bernie the beloved Maestro today, began to show through the thin covering of inexperience the moment he and Klass began their work on the Coast. The lowliest scene-shifter and the most adamant house-treasurer (inevitably the tiger in the theatrical menagerie) immediately knew him as friend, not actor. Inadequate as his salary was, Ben always had a dollar or two with which to reward some special favor; his capacity for listening to the other fellow's troubles and giving sage advice, kept him in touch with all the domestic trivia that beset stage hands and their buddies from Los Angeles to Long Island.

It would be pleasant to be able to record that Ben Bernie, because he's the sort of a fellow he is, had smooth going from the day he ventured forth a full-fledged vaudevillian. But he was to know adversity in its most terrorizing shapes, to feel the nipping clutch of poverty just when success seemed assured; to plumb the most remote depths of despair—and emerge from the experience richer in understanding, and with his every charm heightened and any negligible shortcomings forced into hazy obscurity.

IT WAS early in 1916 that the mismatched Fiddle Up Boys came to the end of their joint trail. They had toured the country for two years. It was Ben who suggested the dissolution.

He was home again—just a vaudeville fiddler with prospects which seemed to confirm his parents' original contention that engineering was a solid, practical profession—the theater a mirage that was limned in beauty and promise but cruel in its fulfillments. Ben was a forlorn listener to their comments. He was imbued with the notion that it took two to make a successful musical act, but tryouts with a variety of partners availed little. He was just about stranded in his search for a teammate when there occurred one of those strange coincidences that baffle the tyranny of Fate!

What was that strange quirk of Fate? How was the means of skyrocketing to fame and the big money delivered into his lap? And did Ben miss seeing that big chance when it came? It's all in next week's RADIO GUIDE.

Ben Bernie's Pabst Blue Ribbon program may be heard every Tuesday at 9 p. m. EST (8 CST; 7 MST; 6 PST) over an NBC-WEAF net.

NO ROMAN HOLIDAY

Italy has crossed Ethiopia's border. Hostilities are on. Whither the invasion will lead, as concerns other nations, remains to be seen. But whether the conflict is confined to East Africa or embroils all Europe, there will be no ringside seats for radio listeners. The Utopian dream that broadcasting will follow the controversy as it does a golf tournament or a world series' baseball game, definitely is shattered. Mixed up in the collapse of that hope are prohibitive costs, the physical difficulties that must naturally be encountered and the inadequacy of radio to cover the vast front on which competing armies operate. The obstacles to broadcasting war are discussed herewith by an announcer who has had recent experience at following military maneuvers.

By George Hicks

IT'S one thing to talk about war—but quite a different matter to participate in one, even if the war is nothing more than the elaborate maneuvers of the United States Army at Pine Camp this Fall.

The twenty-three engineers, announcers and observers assigned to cover the Army war games, thought it to be just another routine job.

True, it was unusual for NBC to assign that many men to two broadcasts, one thirty minutes and the second an hour, and it was unusual to move seventeen tons of equipment, valued at more than $50,000, some 300 miles—just for a broadcast.

These maneuvers developed to be strenuous training for both announcers and engineers, with plenty of new problems to be solved on short order. We had no precedent by which to judge our actions. Most of us were of the younger generation—with little or no actual war training.

Because of our lack of knowledge, announcers and engineers alike spent more than two weeks before leaving the Radio City studios for camp, studying up on military formation, vernacular, and other pertinent details.

Our study did not stop with our arrival at Pine Camp. The hour and a half of broadcast time devoted to descriptions and sounds of the battles between the Red and Blue armies caused us many hours of preparation to find the solution of new war broadcast problems.

Our work bore fruit. Experiments by engineers proved that it was possible to deliver a clear broadcast from the battle zone through the use of an intricate system of short-wave and ultra-high frequency relays—despite intense interference from more than 268 short-wave transmitters being utilized by the Army Signal Corps for official business in the same sector.

IT WAS also demonstrated that, in the event of a real war, the cost of broadcasting from a wide battlefield would be prohibitive. Several thousands of dollars were spent to bring you a description from an approximately ten-mile battlefield. To cover an engagement, such as the World War lines between France and Germany for an extended period of time, would cost an amount almost as great as some of the smaller nations' war debts.

We went to the battlefield equipped with the latest in short-wave and ultra-high wave transmission paraphernalia. There were thirteen engineers manning the technical end of the experiments, and ten announcers and observers handling the actual broadcast portion of the programs.

All of us had had experience in special event broadcasts, which include such programs as football games, the City Voices series, and other similar broadcasts. But all of our previous experiences proved to be tame when it came to covering the Army maneuvers, which entailed the movements of some 36,000 troops in the sand dunes of Northern New York.

Announcers—believe it or not—shed their dignity to lift trucks from sand pits. With engineers and observers we worked alongside the enlisted men to sweat and labor in the activities of simulated warfare, which at times seemed very real.

One of our first lessons was that you couldn't always count on a battle taking place within the vicinity of your mobile transmitter at a given broadcast period.

Such an emergency proved the value of our mobile equipment. Twenty-five minutes before Nelson Case and I were scheduled to go on a coast-to-coast network on Saturday, we found ourselves in a desolate region, with both the Red and Blue Armies at ease.

If You're Expecting the War on the Air, Consider What It Took to Broadcast One Sham Battle

William Lundell, NBC's Director of Special Events, advised us by short-wave radio that an engagement, a tank and smoke-screen attack, was to take place five miles away, five minutes before we were due to take the network.

The trails through the sand dunes were crowded with regiments of the Blue Army advancing to the front. It was impossible to use the road. Our light-built mobile unit No. 5 went the five miles across country, arriving at Hill 300, the scene of the attack, three minutes before the broadcast was to start. Nine minutes later we were on the air.

This is just one example of the mobility of rolling equipment. Of course there was the time that Dan Russell, announcer, was stalled with unit No. 3, from 4 p. m. until almost midnight. The heavy truck became mired in the soft sand, and it was necessary to deflate the huge halloon tires to get out.

WE OPERATED under realistic war conditions for the tests and broadcast of our program on Friday from Pine Camp. The Red and Blue Armies were actively engaged along almost the entire ten-mile front.

We broadcast from seven positions. I carried a 25-pound pack transmitter on my back, and was assigned to the infantry. Shortly behind me, in a mobile unit, was Nelson Case. At Doolin's tower, four miles away, were Frank Healey and Fred Ripley, who commanded a view of much of the battlefield. Their position would compare with that of an observation balloon in real war. Dan Russell was with an artillery unit and Charles Wall, a Lieutenant in the Reserve Corps and the network's Budget Officer, was at the Intelligence Headquarters. Captain J. K. De Armond, of the U. S. Air Corps, Mitchell Field, who was assigned to radio duty, reported activities from an Army observation plane. Lundell manned the microphone at General Headquarters, and Barry Holloway was the observer and liaison officer.

With this set-up we started to make our first broadcast from the war zone. Shortly before the time we were to take the air, interference from several of the Army Signal Corps short-wave sets almost destroyed our signal. Immediate action was necessary if we were to go on with our program.

Walter R. Brown, engineer in charge of the Pine Camp technical staff, devised a means of relays which eliminated most of the interference. This was attained through the use of ultra-high frequencies and ordinary short-wave transmission.

I was equipped with a one-watt pack set, operating on 37.6 megacycles. My signal was received by a mobile unit equipped with a 15-watt set operating on 31.1 megacycles, and retransmitted to a seven-and-a-half-watt transmitting set operating on 2020 kilocycles, situated on a 70-foot tower several miles away. The signal then was picked up at the receiving station located at Pine Camp and transmitted by Signal Corps circuits to the central control at General Headquarters at Great Bend, N. Y., whence it was put on a special telephone circuit to New York, and the network.

BY USING the different wave lengths we were able to avoid concentration of the interference on any one broadcast channel, and receive a comparatively clear signal.

Will radio broadcasts be practical in the event of a real war? Well that is something with which broadcasters will have to experiment. What was done at the Pine Camp sham battles were the first experiments of their kind in radio history.

We learned that radio equipment for broadcasting is mobile. The cost for covering, say an 800-mile battlefield, would be tremendous.

As to casualties—well, figure this out: Healey and Ripley, on the observation tower, were ruled dead nine times by umpire decisions—four during broadcasts and five during test periods. Holloway and I and an engineer were considered killed while preparing to broadcast from a machine-gun nest. They retreated and were wounded, along with Nelson Case and the crew of two engineers of mobile unit No. 5, less than ten minutes later. Dan Russell and his company of two engineers suffered death by an umpire's ruling. Of course, I acknowledge in the event of real war we all would have been much more cautious.

Our broadcasts of the largest peace-time Army maneuvers in the United States would have been impossible without the cooperation of such Army officials as Major General Dennis E. Nolan, Major Stanley Grogan, Major Joseph Dalton, and others, who cleared the way for us. Nor would our field broadcasts have been from the center of action without the aid of Colonel Charles Morrow, of Fort Niagara, who guided our movements on the battlefields.

Reviewing Songs

By Martin J. Porter

Virtually all of these songs cover only eight subjects—Love, Mother, Moon, Memories, Geography, (mostly the South and including rivers and mountains), Patriotic, Spiritual and Comedy.

Nobody seems to be able to dig up a new subject. Love, mother, moon, romance, memory, this state or that river, et cetera, represent all the originality of inspiration over a period of 40 years.

Waltzes, as a rule, endure longer than tunes in other tempos.

If one comic song clicks per year, it is a record.

THE figures for 1935 are not yet compiled, for the simple reason that 1936 is still a couple of months off; but you can get a fair idea of the wear and tear on a popular song by perusing the figures for 1934, which I have dug up in the network archives.

In 1934 there were 85 tunes which seemed to stand out.

You needn't take a grain of salt with the statement that Love in Bloom was played 24,374 times within the year, not including Jack Benny's thwarted violin solos.

The use of hit songs over the radio has cut down their sheet sales by 75 per cent. Ten years ago, instead of selling only half a million copies, Love in Bloom would have sold 1,500,000—maybe.

Despite the fact that songs bring their composers comparatively small return, popular songs are more smartly written than ever. Most of them actually are in good English nowadays. But it is still good form for a writer to rhyme *sig*h with *ti*de. He is well aware of the fact that it's not poetry, but when sung you're not supposed to note the flaw. It's a Tin Pan Alley license.

Because of radio, popular songs are much cleaner than they once were; and nowadays when a song is written for a risqué stage show, it is given a separate set of lyrics for radio.

That is done to prevent the studio patcher-uppers from murdering the tune with a set of hastily rewritten words. Some years ago, in a poll taken by your reporter, I arrived at a list of the ten best songs in ten years. The top song was Old Man River, and it's still tops for technique, though it has a formidable rival in Smoke Gets in Your Eyes, which was written by the same guy—Jerome Kern.

One of the most durable of all songs written in this age is Tea for Two, by Vincent Youmans—who right now is out West trying to regain his health.

It's a paradox that Old Man River, which does not touch on love, mother or the moon, should stand out.

Another practically indestructible song is St. Louis Blues, but its longevity is due to the fact that its author, W. C. Handy, set a new musical pattern with its insinuating rhythm, which has been borrowed for concert as well as all the blues songs which have come after. It has even found its way, in pieces, into opera.

The 85 leading tunes of 1934 were played or sung a total of 1,255,669 times.

You'd imagine that Smoke Gets in Your Eyes was played almost as many times as Leo Robin's Love in Bloom, but next in frequency to Jack Benny's obsession was All I Do Is Dream of You, which was offered 23,910 times. Carioca was third in frequency, having been wafted from microphones 23,754 times. Ray Noble's The Very Thought of You was played 23,604 times; For All We Know, 23,408 times; then came Cocktails for Two, 23,110 times. Smoke Gets in Your Eyes was played a mere 22,929 times.

THE moon definitely is third in song popularity to love and mother songs. Only six about the moon really clicked last year. They were The Moon Was Yellow, Orchids in the Moonlight, Moon of Desire, A New Moon Is Over My Shoulder, Moon Country, and Moon Glow, revealing thus only a comparatively few cases of musical lunacy.

The leading 85 songs of last season included only two that were aged over ten years. They were the perennial Tea for Two and Limchouse Blues. Franz Lehár's Merry Widow Waltz was played only 1,912 times.

You might think that a composer feels great to have his song played often on the air, but as a matter of fact the more frequently it is heard, the quicker it dies, and the less money is collected for it. Yet the publishing houses, who are just as interested in making money from songs, will go to great lengths to get frequent plugs. The practise is a form of musical suicide.

On the other hand the publishers and composers would starve if the composition were not publicized.

The moral of all this is: "Don't write a song."

SOMEWHAT Sad Saga of Songs: Popular songs, according to network statistics, comprise about seventeen per cent of all radio entertainment, and keep most bands and vocalists working, including opera warblers (who lately have shown a weakness for Tin Pan Alley tunes) as well as blues and torch singers.

At the moment, the shelves of the American Society of Composers, which files away all compositions on which royalties are collected, are buckling under the weight of a million old and new songs, all useable for radio.

Plums and Prunes

By Evans Plummer

HAVE you a little short-wave set in your home? If not, you probably will have one very shortly—if the Winchelling Radio Manufacturers' Association is correct. The prognosticating RMA has it all figured out that at the beginning of the year all-wave sets numbering 1,500,000 were in use in the United States and that by the end of 1935 this total will be doubled.

That means that you should get acquainted with a dear friend of ours, a Mr. Megacycle by name, and not nearly as difficult a person as his name suggests.

My frans, Mr. Megacycle is a number. He is just exactly one thousand times as big as Mr. Kilocycle. His chief bid to fame is that he represents the radio telephone number of a short-wave station.

In fact, he is so important to the users of all-wave sets that RADIO GUIDE is now tabbing at the end of its regular program listings of stations carrying certain shows, his number. And, if you own an all-wave set, you will find the dial marked off in megacycles. Savvy? Turn to the number and there's the short-wave station—just as simple as that.

SOME RECEIVERS also have their short-wave dials marked in kilocycles or meters; sometimes both. But megacycle markings are standard on the dials of almost all of the 1934 and 1935 sets.

And for simplicity's sake, get acquainted with megacycles. They are the best way of designating the air roadways upon which to cruise to reach a given short-wave station. What is a megacycle? Well—

A megacycle equals one thousand kilocycles. A kilocycle equals one thousand cycles. A cycle is one radio wave. Imagine that! But seriously again, there is a relation between cycles and meters. It's this:

The METER is the metric yard, a lineal measuring unit. In fact, it's a fraction more than three inches larger than a yard. The number of meters of a station's wave-length is the length of ONE OF ITS WAVES, from crest to crest.

So, inasmuch as radio waves travel at the speed of three hundred million meters per second, if we know the wave-length in meters we can divide it into 300,000,000 and determine the number of waves or cycles radiated per second—or the frequency in cycles. Move the decimal point three places to the left and you have changed the frequency in cycles to the frequency in kilocycles. Move the same decimal point three more places to the left and you have the megacycles.

In other words, Mr. Megacycle is just another way of taking the box-car proportions out of the short-wave telephone numbers and making them practical for use.

And now that Martin Porter has explained television to you (last issue) and Plummer has given you the open sesame to short waves, watch Martin Lewis next week for the lowdown on ether and its effects. It is said that he has been majoring in the subject during a recent short course in the hospital.

AND PRUNES to the guy who got us started on this subject in the first place . . . so back to the unfinished business:

WBT, CBS Southern network key at Charlotte, N. C., will present no more amateur programs, although it pioneered with this type of show. Says Bill Schudt, Jr., WBT manager, "There is now a lack of suitable amateur talent."

Could it be that all the amateurs have gone to New York?

FROM THE SAME city, but Station WSOC this time, comes news of a novel broadcast which deserves plums for its originality. It seems that the Church of God, Reverend W. T. Nelson, pastor, was staging a wholesale baptism at Brier Creek, on the outskirts of Charlotte, and Reverend Nelson decided that broadcasting the event would stimulate church attendance. So, using carbon mikes to lessen the damage in the case of accidental duckings, Remote Operator John Ward of WSOC set up his apparatus on the edge of the creek, and Announcer Dick Richardson waded into the stream, mike in hand, to describe the ceremonies of baptizing 79 converts . . .

It's getting so a man hasn't any privacy from radio.

PODIUM POT-HOOKS: The music of FRANKIE MASTERS is emanating from Houston via KTRH and the Southwestern network stations . . . ACE BRIGODE'S lads and lassie SYLVIA RHODES are airing from Cincinnati over WSAI, WLW and the MBS net . . . GRAY GORDON is in a Louisville spot with WHAS as pickup . . . CLYDE McCOY and DELL COON are in N'Yawk without nikes and GLENN LEE and beautiful KEA REA are WFAA-WBAP high spots.

BEN BYERS, our Pacific Coast editor who swears that it is true, relays the story to us about two middle-aged women who were standing at the rail of a boat in San Francisco Bay taking in the sight of Alcatraz Island, the Federal vacation spot now being inhabited by America's surviving public enemies. But the sightseers couldn't recall the name of the isle until one of them, obviously a tuner-inner of the National Barn Dance, cried out, "Oh yes, now I remember. It's Alka-Seltzer."

Inside Stuff

Along the Airtialto

By Martin Lewis

WE CANNOT report on whether FRANCHOT TONE and JOAN CRAWFORD are married. We can tell you, however, that Miss Crawford attended all of Franchot's rehearsals when he appeared on the Vallee show last week, and that he in turn was the only studio spectator permitted to view her rehearsals and performance on the Radio Theater program when she starred in Within the Law.

TOM HOWARD and GEORGE SHELTON are off the Vallee program, and if you listen to the NTG chorus girl show you probably heard them last week. Here is the story behind that move:

Howard and Shelton established a record-breaking 33-consecutive-week run on Rudy Vallee's show. LOU HOLTZ, with 21 consecutive weeks, and CROSS and DUNN with 12, were closest to this mark. Last week Vallee decided that he no longer would feature the same performers each week, as he felt that he was defeating the variety principle upon which his show is founded. Thus our two comedians found themselves without a job—but not for long. They received their notice from Vallee Tuesday afternoon. An hour or so later they were trying to sell themselves to the sponsor who foots NTG's program bills. These boys never have used a script, and hour after hour that afternoon and evening they put on an act for the sponsor. He finally weakened, and they went on the NTG show that night, unprepared and unrehearsed, and put on a wow of an act. The sponsor liked them so well that he signed them for 13 weeks, with an additional 13-week option.

Here's a bit of news that undoubtedly will surprise you as much as it did your correspondent: After more than four years of broadcasting on one program, one of the oldest acts on the air, JUNE MEREDITH and CHARLES HUGHES, will be off the First Nighter starting October 25. At this writing the reason for their departure has not been determined, nor have we been able to get any information as to who will replace them.

SOME radio stations every now and then do something very constructive and should be commended for it. On the other hand there are others who form bad habits and should be reprimanded. In the first classification we take our hat off to station WENR in Chicago which, many times during the day, before their station announcement, has their word spieler read the following warning: "Automobile drivers, please be careful. Drive slowly." It's a swell idea. In the same breath we wish our colleague, EVANS PLUMMER, would hurl another bunch of prunes at both the NBC stations in the Windy City for coming in at ill-chosen times with station break announcements. On a recent Friday night WENR cut in on the delightful Student Prince drama right in the middle of a dialogue. It was most annoying to a room full of people who were listening. WMAQ did the same thing on a FRED ALLEN broadcast during one of the comic's very funny sketches. The station announcement would be given again a few minutes later at the regular time, upon getting the signal from New York.

Mentioning the Student Prince, we would like to pay our compliments and express our thanks to the sponsor for a most delightful and entertaining hour listening to his program. It's been a long time since a radio show got us as much as this one.

Up to now, authors of radio scripts haven't had much of a break on the air. They usually are shrouded in anonymity.

But CLYDE NORTH, author of the semi-historical scripts for Columbia's Vanished Voices, is breaking down the prejudice. He gets a by-line every show, which is as it should be. STEWART STERLING, author of Crime Clues, is another one of the favored few who get recognition.

They say that in the Spring a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love, which ultimately results in a walk down that well known aisle. So far as HARRIET HILLIARD and OZZIE NELSON are concerned, they decided to SPRING the ceremony in the F-ALL; and personally, we think they AUTUMNmake a good couple. In case you haven't heard, they were married on Tuesday, October 8. The honeymoon will be postponed because as you read this, the new Mrs. is Hollywood-bound to star in a new picture. She will be re-united with Ozzie, and will return to his program some time next month. (You may see them lovey-dovey on the facing page.)

OZZIE NELSON isn't the only ork pilot to cross the matrimonial path. JOE REICHMANN last week promised to love, honor and obey a lass who goes by the name of ELMA BENNETT. Both are now in Boston while hubby is supplying the music for the dancers at the Staller Hotel in the Hub City. In a few weeks we will tell you about our own adventure that Plummer scooped us on.

VISITORS at the NBC studios in Radio City were startled recently to see three elevator doors open, and more than fifty men with cameras in hand come out of the cars.

At first the nearby public thought there were some celebrities in the studios and their photos were to be snapped, so naturally the picture snappers had quite a following. However, they turned out to be amateur photographers attending a photo performance of the Crime Clues program. Each was intent on capturing one of seven prizes offered by the program sponsors for the best camera shots of the program as it was being enacted before the microphone.

One of the most difficult things to do is for an air actor or actress to memorize scripts. It has been tried, but in most cases proved unsuccessful; and sponsors therefore don't encourage it.

Nevertheless, ERNEST TRUEN, who starred in many Broadway shows and who now is master of ceremonies on the Highlights in Harmony program, thought he was going to show everyone up, so he rehearsed his part for many days before the program was to go on the air.

A few minutes after the show got under way Truen boasted that he didn't need a script, and proceeded to tear his continuity into bits. A moment later, about three hundred members were just about panic-stricken when the actor forgot his lines and pathetically started to stumble. Relief came only when, with a sly grin, Truen took a "spare" from his pocket and continued reading from it as though nothing had happened.

No matter how seasoned an artist one is, there is something about that ole debbil mike that gets you—and don't let anyone tell you differently.

Another star of the air who also doubles either on the stage or screen is having her troubles. HELEN HAYES is faced with the trouble of putting on poundage. (She's not the only one—where can we find twenty-nine lost pounds?) She will open soon in Queen Victoria, a biographical drama. Inasmuch as the late Queen of Great Britain was not slim, Miss Hayes, who weighs less than 100 pounds, is indulging in a diet of milk, eggs and other flesh producing foods.

Audrey Marsh, the girl who combines a winsome contralto with fine acting on the Harv and Esther Thursday night shows

AUDREY MARSH, that pretty soprano of the Harv and Esther program featuring TEDDY BERGMAN, has the bluest of blue eyes. She puts so much feeling into the songs she sings that she closes those eyes and gestures dreamily, even during rehearsals.

BUCK ROGERS—Curtis Arnall in real life—hasn't been an active Boy Scout in years. That is, not until last week end when, out riding through the woods in upper New York state, he came upon a deer, wedged between two trees and kicking. Curtis attempted to free the animal.

The poor deer was scared to death and proceeded to kick him. Bruised, but still altruistic, Curtis rode to the next small town, organized a rescue party, and succeeded in unsnarling the animal.

KILOCYCLE CHATTER: October 29 is the date set for Jumbo to replace the current EDDY DUCHIN series for the oil company. The musical show which will open shortly at the New York Hippodrome will not have a Tuesday night performance, due to the radio presentation. . . . The following morning Catholic school children of the United States will be led in a vast, simultaneous recital of the Lord's Prayer and the Apostles Creed and also to hear a message from the Apostolic De'legat in Washington during a special Catholic program over an NBC-WJZ network. . . . America's Town Meetings, an NBC educational feature in which international, political, economic and social problems are discussed, will be resumed on a weekly Thursday evening schedule starting October 31.

If you get up early enough on the morning of November 6 you will be able to hear the broadcast of the wedding of Lady Alice Montagu Douglas Scott to the Duke of Gloucester, third son of King George V of England. Both CBS and NBC will carry the feature.

Dynamic FATHER COUGHLIN returns to the air on November 3 and will be heard on a much larger network. . . . BEN BERNIE will exchange networks with the NTG girl show on October 29, at which time the Ole Maestro can speak about the product of a new sponsor—a can company. . . . SMLIN' ED MCCONNELL packed his bag and baggage and moved to Chicago, from where his broadcasts will come in the future. . . . LAWRENCE TIBBETT will make one of his rare microphone appearances as an actor, when he presents a dramatic scene from his new picture, Metropolitan, on his CBS broadcast of October 29. The next Tibbett broadcast as well as the last came from the Chicago studios. The baritone is in the Windy City on his annual concert tour.

ART TATUM, previously heard as a guest of Ben Bernie while the maestro was in Chicago, has a program of his own in the mornings, daily except Sunday and Monday, replacing CLEO BROWN, who has departed for work in a Hollywood night club. . . . Alois Havrilla, NBC announcing ace, is soon to do a series of film travelogues, entitled The World on Parade. . . . Odette Myrtil, singing violinist, is doing extra good work on the Evening in Paris, NBC Monday night musical show.

Odette Myrtil: She may be heard any Evening in Paris

Music in the Air

By Carleton Smith

IT WAS not possible to take an airplane from Prague to Warsaw. All flights cancelled! "Political difficulties," and a shrug of the shoulders, was the only excuse I could have. To fly via Berlin meant missing Sadko, the first performance of the Moscow Theater Festival. The plane from Berlin to Moscow goes only once a week, on Sunday, and particular precautions are taken concerning the identity of each passenger. The Soviet Union as well as a number of European countries, is not anxious to have foreign planes flying over its territory. Military necessity, they say. In the Soviet Union, shades are drawn on all windows as a train draws near a military flying field.

No country of Europe is satisfied with what it has. The large ones are eager to grab the smaller—and those, like Poland, that profited by the last war, are jittery lest they lose most of their present gains.

Political boundaries will be revised, and with considerable loss of life and suffering. It is unfortunate that artificial economic divisions cannot be wiped out altogether, and an interchange of goods restored. People who are starving can't get fruit that is rotting twenty miles away. And the owners of the fruit can't exchange it for the shoes they need. There is a political boundary between them, and a prohibitive tariff on both sides.

It is impossible to make a United States of Europe. That is evident, when one looks into the faces of the people, listens to their different languages, observes their customs—and reads their newspapers.

For example, in one small area, less than the size of New Jersey, live people who think their neighbors inferior. They are not as clean nor as neat-looking. They speak a different language. They have strange customs. They use different postage stamps and different money. An unimportant matter, the latter, to be sure, but I once heard an American tourist buying laces in Venice say, "How much does it cost in real money?" Everything seems wrong with these neighbors. They have different poets, other songs, other tastes—in general, an inferior culture.

Then, the citizens of one state find it impossible to visit their neighbors. They are not allowed to take money out of their own country. They can learn nothing about the people who live 20 miles away.

And they read embittering things about them in their papers. Each government on the continent of Europe controls its press, some more and some less, and colors all news to suit its purpose. There is no reporting of facts, as we know it in the United States. All is propaganda.

About such a small matter as the Salzburg Festival, comparatively speaking, I read flagrant lies in the Munich paper. The German report stated that the attendance at Salzburg performances did not fill half the house, that foreigners were buying seats at 60 per cent reductions, and, believe it or not, that the Austrian government had purchased 200 foreign automobiles with foreign licenses, and had filled them with any persons who could be induced to drive to Salzburg and sit through the mediocre performances.

As a matter of fact, the ausverkauft sign was displayed for all but one or two festival performances in Salzburg. There was not an empty seat in the theater, and although I know Americans who paid twice the price for tickets, I never heard of one who had a reduction. If one considers the names: TOSCANINI, BRUNO WALTER, REINHARDT, and what they stand for in music in the theater, and remembers at the same time the charming atmosphere of Salzburg, he will understand why the old town was crowded to overflowing.

But how are the German people to know the facts? They are not allowed in Salzburg, though it is only a mile from the German frontier, and until the Nazi prohibitions the Germans always flocked over to Salzburg and to the Austrian Alps. They have forgotten that, however; and, like most readers, they believe what they see in print.

I have crossed 16 frontiers this Summer, on a train of as many coaches. The cars with never more than five or six travellers suddenly would be empty, and other people would get aboard on the other side of the border.

Be on the lookout for 53 more symphony concerts to be added to the National Broadcasting Company's schedules for the current season. The first of these will start November 7, with the extended series to be presented by the Rochester Philharmonic Orchestra.

Calling All Cars

The Four Stickups Who Tried to Rob a Jersey Dress Company Should Have Known Better Than to Fall by the Black-and-Blue Route

By Fred Kelly

advanced towards the treasurer.

"It isn't here!" cried Goldberg, pointing towards the big safe.

"Nuts!" The thug spat out the word. "Open that safe or I'll burn you down!" Goldberg opened his mouth and tried to speak. Words just wouldn't come. The gunman's finger began to tighten on the trigger.

"Oh my God, don't shoot!" cried the frightened treasurer, finding his voice at last. He moved to the big safe, knelt down and began to twirl the knob with shaking hands. He was a man of balances, not bullets. And he was sick with fear for what these irresponsible fiends might do to him when they found the safe empty of money.

Meanwhile, the hum of machines in the back room had stopped dead. One of the bandits had thrust his way through the rear door, and was menacing the fifty girls with his revolver. Another had lined up the office staff. The remaining two kept their guns trained on Goldberg.

BUT they hedged him in eagerly when at last the safe door swung open.

"Empty!" cried the leader, as he thrust the treasurer aside and peered in.

"Come on, you guys!" he almost screamed. "There's something phoney about this! We gotta scam!"

It was ludicrous the way those four tough guys nearly hurt themselves, all trying to get out of the office door at once. But Nathan Goldberg didn't notice the ludicrous side of the situation. He was too busy breathing a little prayer of thanks—thanks that he was still alive.

It was at least a minute or two before he was able to pull himself together. Then he dashed to a telephone—but by that time the holdup men had vanished, leaving no clue to their whereabouts. By that time they had become just four men in a car, speeding through the streets of a little city—apparently as immune to detection as four raindrops that had fallen in the ocean.

But then those little things began to happen which no crook, however clever, can foresee.

"Mr. Goldberg!" screamed one of the office girls who had run to the window. "Those men are in a little car with a New York license! They're headed down the street towards Warinanco Park!"

Over the telephone the stammering Mr. Goldberg relayed this important information. And before he had hung up the receiver, this radio call rang in the loudspeakers of little Roselle's four radio patrol cars:

"Calling all cars . . . All cars . . . Four gunmen in a small car have just tried to hold up the Godof Dress Company at 1107 Chandler Avenue . . . Car has a New York license . . . All Cars . . ."

Now it happened that just four blocks away from the Godof Dress Company's establishment Lieutenant Petersen and Patrolman W. M. Personette of the Roselle police force were cruising in a radio car at that very moment. And while in the old days of police work it might take an officer an hour to hear of a crime committed four blocks away from him, radio has changed all that.

GET going!" snapped Petersen, whipping on the car's siren—as Personette kicked the accelerator flat on the floorboards.

Afterwards the bandits frankly admitted that it was the wail of that siren—it seemed only about a block from them—that frightened them out of all sense of direction by the time they had gone scant blocks from the scene of the crime. And indeed it must have filled them with awe, that eerie blare, stabbing at them so soon after their apparently successful getaway. At that moment they were just entering Roselle's beautiful.

PONDEROUS and pompous, the armored car moved down Chandler Avenue. With its rugged steel sides, pierced with loopholes, it dominated that busy, industrial thoroughfare of Roselle, New Jersey. But a scant block behind, matching its mastodonic dignity with furtive impudence, a little car followed slowly. And in that little car were four swarthy, nervous young men with grim faces and quick, dark eyes.

When the big fortress on wheels stopped in the August heat outside the factory of the Godof Dress Company, the little car stopped too. And when armed and uniformed guards removed a big black bag from an opened steel door, four pairs of dark eyes watched that bag unblinkingly as it was carried into the ground-floor office of the factory.

Meanwhile, inside the office of the Godof Dress Company, Treasurer Nathan Goldberg was looking through the window. A pleased smile creased Mr. Goldberg's face as he watched his company's payroll of over $4,000 being delivered. An armored car, he mused, was the right medium to safeguard such a sum. Holdup men hesitated to attack an armored car.

The clock on the office wall—just above the big steel safe—stood at ten minutes to four. From the factory in the rear of the office came the mingled hum of fifty sewing machines. In about an hour and a half the fifty girls who ran those machines would line up to receive the little square pay envelopes containing their share of that $4,000 payroll. And, thanks to the far-sightedness of Mr. Nathan Goldberg, who had engaged the services of the armored car and its guards, it seemed very unlikely that prowling holdup men would stand a ghost of a chance of snatching that money and disappointing those fifty girls. So Mr. Goldberg continued to smile contentedly. But then, of course, he could not see the four swarthy young men who sat in the little car which was parked down the street, waiting like four dark cats watching a rat-hole

THE armed guards tramped into the office. They delivered the payroll cash, and the treasurer signed for it. As they tramped out, Mr. Goldberg took the money and—passing up the big steel safe—carried the payroll upstairs to the second floor where there were more machines, and more employes awaiting their weekly wages. There he deposited the money in a smaller safe, and then marched, with the dignity befitting an efficient and cautious executive, down the stairs to his office on the ground floor. Again he looked out of the window, but by now the big armored car had driven away—taking with it some of the treasurer's feeling of security.

Even so, the blow fell with the suddenness of a thunderbolt.

Four swarthy men with grim faces and quick dark eyes came swiftly through the front door. Mr. Goldberg turned towards them.

"What can I—" he began, and then stopped short. He raised hands that were well-kept and white—raised them high above his head. And they were no whiter than his face, for four guns were pointed at his stomach.

"We want that dough—quick!" Pushing in the swinging gate beside the switchboard, the leader of the mob "Empty!" . . . "It's a trap!" . . . "Come on, you guys. There's something phoney about this. We gotta scam!"

 their own producers, bookers, and managers, the only extraneous attache being the advance man who wended his way through the hinterlands signing up for engagements in anything that boasted a roof. Barns knew them, Chautauqua tents provided them a stage, they played at church affairs, and even an opera house or two sheltered them for their performances. "We had lots of problems with scenery and settings," Marian relates in recalling their rural environs, "but on one occasion we accomplished a sound effect that the movies would give a lot to reproduce. "Rebuffing the despicable villain, I hissed, 'You can't make a silk purse out of a sow's ear!' The stirring remark evidently was overheard by some swine penned behind our temporary stage. And were they sensitive? In unison they launched the loudest barrage of squeals ever heard outside the stockyards."

It was against so colorful a background as this that Marian Jordan built up the experience she displays with such sincerity in her radio characterizations. Her versatility is the fruit of contacts with the very sort of persons she typifies—even to the brash youngsters of Kaltenmyer's Kindergarten and her various roles in Smack Out (which she, assisted by Jim, wrote); the Saturday Jamboree. Mr. Twister, and memorable other programs in which she has been featured.

Between times Marian has found time to have her babies and play an important part in shaping their careers. They are Katherine, 15 years old, and Jim, Junior, who is 11. Jim, Senior, was born November 16, 1896; Marian a year later.

Mrs. Jordan is gentle and soft-spoken and adheres to type so far as the world has come to accept blondes. She is blue-eyed and fair of skin, is five feet, four and one-half inches tall and wavers between 127 and 130 pounds, only attaining the latter figure when pork shanks and sauerkraut are in season.

Fibber McGee and Molly, with Marian and Jim Jordan, are presented every Monday night over an NBC-WJZ network at 8 p. m. EST (7 CST; 6 MST; 5 PST) by S. C. Johnson and Son.

IT IS Irene Wicker, NBC's Singing Lady, the vigorous champion of better programs for children, whose portrait is reproduced on the cover of RADIO GUIDE this week. Irene is well within her rights in sponsoring the children's cause, as she is admittedly the most popular child program artist in radio today.

Her interest in the proper radio material for children originates at her own fireside, and is the fruit of listening to a jumble of broadcasts designed apparently for juvenile hearing but missing the target by literal miles of comprehension value.

So much has been written about Miss Wicker's personal life that no more than mere details are important here. The obtrusive feature is that so slight a person possibly could absorb so much real toil. She is only five feet, two inches tall and weighs slightly more than a hundred pounds, yet her vivacity is a radiant characteristic; and the intelligence that energizes her multiple activities literally glistens through big brown eyes.

Originally Irene Seaton, she exchanged her last name for that of her present co-worker in the studios, Walter Wicker, during her college days. The extra E in her first name is her good-natured concession to a luke-warm faith in numerology. The Wickers have two children, a boy and a girl.

The Kellogg Company presents The Singing Lady, Irene Wicker, daily except Saturdays and Sundays over an NBC-WJZ network at 5:30 p. m. EST (4:30 CST; 3:30 MST; 2:30 PST) and over a split NBC network at 6:30 p. m. EST (5:30 CST; 4:30 MST; 3:30 PST).

Mr. Fairfax
 one-half years. It's the first marital experience for both of them, and from all appearances they'll live happily ever after, together. (R. W. H., Big Springs, Texas.)

When PAUL SULLIVAN of the WLW News Room says "Until tomorrow—it's thirty in the news room," he means the work for that day is done. It's an old phrase also used on newspaper copy to designate the end of the story. (Ralph Snyder, Altoona, Pa.)

ANNETTE HANSHAW is off the air at present. She was born October 18, 1910. (B. S., Tuckaboe, N. Y.)

ART JACOBSEN plays the part of Joe Marlin on the Mary Marlin program. He also is known as Robert Stone in the Monday night Princess Pat dramas. (Mrs. J. D. K., Indianapolis, Ind.)

Man Can Talk With God, Says Noted Psychologist

A new and revolutionary religious teaching based entirely on the misunderstood sayings of the Galilean Carpenter, and designed to show how we may find, understand and use the same identical power which Jesus used in performing His so-called Miracles, is attracting world wide attention to its founder, Dr. Frank B. Robinson, noted psychologist, author and lecturer.

"Psychiana," this new psychological religion, believes and teaches that it is today possible for every normal human being, understanding spiritual law as Christ understood it, to duplicate every work that the Carpenter of Galilee ever did—it believes and teaches that when He said, "the things that I do shall ye do also," He meant what He said and meant it literally to all mankind, through all the ages.

Dr. Robinson has prepared a 6000 word treatise on "Psychiana," in which he tells about his long search for the Truth, how he finally came to the full realization of an Unseen Power or force so dynamic in itself that all other powers and forces fade into insignificance beside it—how he learned to commune directly with the Living God, using this mighty, never-failing power to demonstrate health, happiness and financial success, and how any normal being may find and use it as Jesus did. He is now offering this treatise free to every reader of this magazine who writes him.

If you want to read this highly interesting, revolutionary and fascinating story of the discovery of a great Truth, just send your name and address to Dr. Frank B. Robinson, 403 10th Street, Moscow, Idaho. It will be sent free and postpaid without cost or obligation. Write the Doctor today.—Copyright 1935, Dr. Frank B. Robinson.—Advertisement.

Magic Key of RCA ★★★
 Premiere heard Sunday, September 29, at 2 p. m. EST (1 CST; 12 noon MST; 11 a. m. PST) over an NBC-WJZ network. Sponsored by the Radio Corporation of America and affiliates.

Paul Whiteman's orchestra, the Vienna Symphony orchestra, Maria Jertza, David Sarnoff, Doctor Walter Damrosch, Frank Black's Symphony, John B. Kennedy, Mickey Mouse and barnyard aids, and even Amos 'n' Andy were on the roster of this extravaganza which the big radio companies joined hands to bring to Sunday listeners.

Head and shoulders above the high stature of the other attractions on this magnificent presentation were Amos 'n' Andy and Mickey Mouse. The former used their allotted time to twit NBC, then explain why A&A cannot and never will permit a studio audience. Disney's rodent and other pets provided many a chuckle, and then mirthquaked listeners with their version of the quartet from Rigolotto.

Under par was Jertza and the short-wave rebroadcast transmission of the Vienna Symphony.

Jack Benny's Program ★★
 Renewal of program series heard Sunday, September 29, at 7 p. m. EST (6 CST; 5 MST; 4 PST) over an NBC-WJZ network. Sponsored by General Foods, Inc.

With a new orchestra and tenor singer, Jack Benny's company got under way to a very poor start for the 1935-36 season. Michael Bartlett's vibrato was bad radio and ruined his diction; the dramatized commercial was in poor taste and unfunny when compared to previously established standards of this series. And that is that. We shall give Benny, this year's winner of Radio Guru's Star of Stars election, a chance to whip the show back in form and tune in again.

Phil Baker, Tourist ★★★
 Heard on occasion of premiere Sunday, September 29, at 7:30 p. m. EST (6:30 CST; 5:30 MST; 4:30 PST) over a limited CBS-WABC network. Sponsored by Gulf Oil Company. (Short-waved on 11.83 and 9.59 megacycles.)

Talent: Phil Baker and company, assisted by Hal Kemp's orchestra and the Seven G's, new choral septet.

The same old show with better music. The Seven G's were good; Hal Kemp's music was what you expected—excellent. And Baker, Bottle and Beetle swung over their routine from ham-selling to oil-peddling without a hitch.

The worst part of this program is its limited network, but if you've a new all-wave set the tuning-in can be done from anywhere.

Helen Hayes in The New Penny ★★★
 Premiere heard October 1, 9:30 p. m. EST (8:30 CST; 7:30 MST; 6:30 PST) over an NBC-WJZ network. Sponsored by General Foods for Sanka Coffee.

A rare combination of artistry, script and production was introduced on the premiere of The New Penny, Helen Hayes' first radio vehicle.

The story of Penelope Edwards concerns the life of a small-town matron whose matrimonial ship has gone on the rocks after nine years of happy sailing. Miss Hayes as Penny returns to the family homestead to resume life among her friends and to find happiness in the familiar surroundings of her girlhood.

Miss Hayes' superb portrayal of the sympathetic Penny was a delightful and realistic bit of acting that firmly establishes the character which promises to be radio's outstanding success of the current drama season.

The supporting cast with Agnes Moorehead as Mrs. Van Alastair Crowder, Ned Wever as Steve Van Brunt, Wilmer Walter as Judge Van Brunt, Fred Uhalvas as John Edwards, left little to be desired.

The Voice of the Listener

The Words—and Music

Dear VOL: This seems to be open season for making war on the little fellow. The Lombardo-Waring-Vallee-Whiteman war on inoffensive small stations is ridiculous. Is it possible that some listeners cannot distinguish between canned music and the fresh variety? If so, they probably are the casual listeners who can't distinguish one orchestra from another and don't care. For those who know the difference and are deprived temporarily of hearing their favorites in person, the recordings are a boon. If I were a station manager and wanted revenge I'd disconcert the few discontented maestros by REFUSING TO PLAY their recordings!

San Francisco, Calif.

Mrs. W. Smith

A Marlin Spike

Dear VOL: Why can't we have Mary Marlin back on NBC? All this country around here can't get CBS until the evening so naturally we miss Mary Marlin.

We were the most wrapped up bunch in radio until the change. Now we feel that there is something lacking in the day.

Please do something about this, for we housewives do like a real life-like every day problem solved as only Mary can solve it.

Big Fork, Mont.

WMAQ Evil Spreads

Dear VOL: A whole carload of prunes to both WENR and WLS for butting into the middle of the Beauty Box Theater program just to say one is leaving the air in favor of the other. Who cares which station is in charge? Tonight, they

This department is solely for the use of the readers as a place in which to voice opinions and exchange views about radio. Address your letters, which MUST NOT exceed 100 words, to VOL, RADIO GUIDE, 731 Plymouth Court, Chicago, Illinois spent almost five minutes making this change, thus cutting out almost all of one of the best selections from an operetta. Why can't this change take place either before or after this program? Yours for less chatter on the air.

Annoyed

Frank Discussion

Dear VOL: Frank Parker's fans finally have been jolted out of their lethargic state and I imagine letters about him are coming in steadily to the department now. I wish to forward the idea that we listeners would prefer to hear him on programs of his own instead of on those headlined by other performers who get all the credit for the success of the broadcast, whereas it is Frank Parker's always welcome presence which insures that success. I am sure the A. and P., the Jello, and the Cities Service programs had a larger group of listeners when Frank Parker's pleasing voice and personality were a part of them than they have now.

Chicago, Ill.

Miss Catherine Mayer

Ax-Sent on Youths

Dear VOL: For many months we have been listening to the Major Bowes Amateur Hour and feel it's about time someone rams out in the open and said something about the unfairness of Major Bowes in regard to giving some poor harp-trying boy or girl the Gong when they sometimes have the stuff to get by with and aren't even given a chance. I refer to the program of September 1, when three lads started to play their instruments and before one had a chance to hear them the Gong was rung. If this is giving the youth of America a chance in life, I'm going to quit listening to this supposed-to-be-fine program.

Wichita Falls, Texas

Pants Supporters

Dear VOL: Answering Cadwell's letter referring to Isham Jones: What kind of fans are those Midwesterners whose support Ish is going to lose because he prefers to wear wash pants and a polo shirt? Very poor I would say. That hasn't any reflection on his playing. His clothes are his concern and only his. If he does lose their support he isn't losing very much as that kind of support isn't worth having.

Isham Jones has the grandest banal of all and I'm for him one hundred per cent. Let's hear from you other Jones fans, you Pal of Atlanta, and others as to what you think. Am I right?

San Francisco, Cal.

Elsie Still

Good 'Till Last Drop

Dear VOL: Why all the hullabaloo about Lanny Ross? His voice has not improved one iota and he can go to the foot of the class as an actor. We think Conrad Thibault has a fine voice and is a good actor. We dialed in the Show Boat program especially to hear his fine voice. Now that Conrad has been dropped and has no part in their program there surely will be no more Maxwell House coffee for our family.

Cincinnati, Ohio

W. C. Taylor

This Settles It

Dear VOL: I assume that most of the remarks against the big name bands (Eddy Duchin and Fred Waring) concerning their musical interpretations, are due to ignorance of popular music. Aside from Duchin's splendid showmanship, his orchestra presents a well balanced program, although the Duchin style is prevalent. Fred Waring, I know, is very well thought of. I'm for the showmen, Duchin and Waring.

The Broken Cast

Dear VOL: I've been a Betty and Bob fan for a good many years and I've been disgusted more than once with things on their program, but this last event is worse than any yet.

Why did they take all the best players out after they built up a good program? Don Ameche had the best voice of the cast, and after his vacation they take him out. Now they follow suit with Jane, George and Robert Drake, Sr.

They took Jane out once before and their program flopped; why try it again? Now they take out the best players.

Come on you Ameche fans. We want Don back out Betty and Bob.

West Hazelton, Pa.

Rus in Urbe

Dear VOL: To L. H. N., of Moorhead, Minnesota: I'm sure farmers and other rural folks really like lullaby music. I've lived on a farm and I know. Not many ever miss the WLS Barn Dance on Saturday night. We don't now and we've lived in the city for the past few years.

What Made 'Em Popular

as Stormy Weather, The Last Round-Up, Smoke Gets In Your Eyes, or The Object of My Affection sell only a few hundred thousand copies. Three O'Clock in the Morning, In a Little Spanish Town, and others of their periods sold into the millions, with thousands of recordings also. Radio has made this sort of thing definitely of the past.

Hits take about two weeks to catch on, are played to death in a month, and in a few more weeks are done for. All of which makes the life of the songwriter no bed of roses. It is amazing that there are not more suits for plagiarism than there are, when one considers how much alike most tunes sound.

So the only thing left for the name bands to do is to develop a style which is so distinctive that no one can fail to recognize it. In addition to which they use the further safeguard of employing a signature melody which is associated with their name and identified readily. Paul Whiteman, who has made a rather good thing out of dance music these twenty years, produced the first symphonic jazz. It was, obviously, neither symphonic nor jazz. Extremely glossy, highly finished, contrapuntal at times, and using snatches of everything from Bach to Tchaikowsky to display erudition, his music probably never has actually found favor with the dancing public since he developed his mannerisms. Admittedly his is a superb stage band.

Waring and Weems

It is still grand entertainment, and so far above the average ensemble that it is unquestionably the Philharmonic among dance bands. The great Jack Teagarden appears with Whiteman currently, and is still allowed to get off in approved jazz fashion; but it lacks the spontaneous touch associated with the old Red Nichols days.

Fred Waring and his Pennsylvanians are another aggregation of long standing. Always a stage band, they also have been in high favor for years among Eastern schools and colleges. Novelties long have been a specialty with this group, culmination in a super-gee club whose arrangements cause longing among many college organizations.

This Waring group, in spite of five shows a day and a stiff broadcasting schedule, can continue to give the impression of youth, freshness and spontaneity, which is a rare thing in this line.

Other old-timers include Ted Weems, who has periods of fame and popularity interspersed with periods of partial eclipse. He, too, is a great specialist in novelties, and his fame mounts as a new one happens to catch on.

The great majority of dance bands are routine in arrangements, following no definite policy in matters of style or manner or treatment.

Band Stylists

Others have happened, largely by chance of course, onto a style which produces a form of hysteria in the dancing and radio listening public. Most spectacular of these bands is the Lombardo group, spectacular because their style is so utterly simple and its effect on the public so complex. They specialize in sugar-watery confections produced by the most wailing saxophones, the most lady-like brasses, and the most tinkling pianos extant. The result is termed the sweetest music this side of Heaven!

It happens to be a very well-schooled group, grown adept through years of playing together. Four of the Lombardo brothers play in it, and most of the other members have been in it since it was organized. Their manner is soft, somehow neurotic and sickly; sobbing saxophones and flutes and muted brass, embellished originally with one piano, recently with two.

Staccato, light and airy, every number is like every other. Their hold on the public is intense, and of long standing. They are the best example of stylists in the playing of dance tunes as they are now assembled on the 'Lin Pan Alley conveyor belt.

Another tremendous success, quite recent, is the Eddy Duchin organization.

Mr. Duchin is a young man with an unusual manner of playing the piano.

The entire orchestra is built around his playing, and the result often is not too happy. His style is predicated upon amazing ambidexterity: he carries the melody thumpingly in either hand, with erratic variations and shifts of rhythmic emphasis which are all the poor drummer can do to beat out in an attempt to maintain the tempo. The rest of the orchestra hang on as best they can, but it is stormy going.

Mr. Duchin, in addition to being a pianist, is a social lion. The radio public, none the less, responds nobly, exhibiting no class consciousness when it comes to dance music. Another specialist of great fame, with an avid public seemingly composed of susceptible high school girls, is Wayne King, also a member of the school of delicacy and quavers. His forte is waltzes, and where he gets them all no one can be quite sure. It may even be that he writes some of them himself. But that there is an unending succession of them is certain.

After the third one they might all be the same, such is the deadly similarity.

Artist Fiorito

Other less obvious piano specialists are of the Ted Fiorito variety, genuine virtuosi on the instrument, who employ their talents to somewhat greater advantage. Mr. Fiorito's embellishments often are diabolically clever, and pianistically brilliant. Further, they do not utterly drown out the orchestra.

Lesser experts on the piano include the perennial Little Jack Little, whose tinkling style is the despair of all beginning piano students, and whose chromatic facility is the envy of many slightly more advanced.

Widely imitated, and for good cause, is Hal Kemp, whose singularly agile brass and saxophones carry out a triple-tongued treatment known as Clip Rhythm. Very danceable, fresh, unburdened with excerpts from the classics, it showed great originality and considerable drilling for a long time.

The astounding rise of Rudy Vallee had little to do with his orchestra. It might almost be said that he succeeded in spite of it, for it had little to recommend it. For a long time he used no brass. The whole group was subdued in a manner fitting to the voice it accompanied, and there was and is nothing distinctive about the background music.

There are dozens of exceedingly competent studio ensembles which purvey music as distinctive as that of the great name bands, but they seldom set a style or gain great fame. There was, of course, the Rubinoff group, which rendered the monstrous creations contrived from simple popular tunes, aided by that famed Stradivarius.

The Jazz Cult

Some of the more lush orchestrations have been originating in San Francisco. The Meredith Willson group has been producing some exceptionally fine things in connection with one network broadcast which is heard over the nation. Gus Arnheim, Abe Lyman, Phil Harris, and others have risen to national prominence from the West Coast also. The final stamp of approval usually comes when they succeed in the East. They have done so.

The final conclusion one can make is that jazz does not pay, while popular music does. That should be definition enough for most, and justification for the opinions of many. Jazz is at a higher level today, however, than at any time, in spite of the fact that it is practiced less. This is because of the technical superiority of those who actually can play it today, over the old-timers who had gusto instead of skill.

There still are members of the cult, a cult as exclusive as that of the collectors of early musical instruments, or that of the stamp specialists who collect imperforates. Many of the cultists live in Europe, which is an odd thing. Another odd thing is that the definitive work on jazz to date was written by a Belgian lawyer, Robert Goffin, Aux Frontières de Jazz. In England and on the Continent there are magazines devoted exclusively to the subject, and the collectors are avid and enthusiastic. And the jazz cult, if a final distinction is necessary, is completely apathetic to popular music, as much so as the Bach man is to Alban Berg.

Jazz is alive and flourishing, but you don't hear it very often over the radio. Very rarely, in fact.

On the Black and Blue Network

spreading Warinanco Park. As the sound reached them the leader jammed on the brakes, threw open the car's front door and, without a word, ducked into the bushes. The other three followed his example. They scattered.

Meanwhile, radio signals were emanating from the squat police microphone like strands of a web surrounding a spider—and in that web four stupid and pitiful insects of crime soon were flopping feebly.

Tightening the web, a telephone call was put through to the neighboring city of Elizabeth—which immediately dispatched four radio cars to the scene of the crime. And then followed a unique tie-up of two cities and two radio systems. It happened this way: Captain Fenton Keenan personally took the microphone in Roselle. Beside him was a telephone, still connected with the desk of Elizabeth's radio dispatcher, Leonard Mayea. Suddenly, as the patrol cars drew near to the Godof plant, a truck-driver ran out into the road, waved his hands and stopped one of the Elizabeth two-way radio cars.

"I just saw four guys run out of a car in Warinanco Park!" he cried excitedly, as the patrol car squealed to a stop.

Without a moment's pause the sergeant in charge of the car snapped on his sending switch and relayed this information to Dispatcher Mayea. And just as swiftly, Mayea broadcast this message: "Calling Cars One, Two, Three and Four . . . Cars One, Two, Three and Four . . . The Roselle bandits just abandoned their car in Warinanco Park."

With that, he picked up the waiting receiver of the telephone, and shot the same message across the wire to Captain Keenan, in Roselle. Keenan immediately spoke into his microphone:

"All cars . . . The bandits have just left their car in Warinanco Park . . . Bottle up that park, boys! . . . Don't let 'em leave it!"

With eight police cars and two radio stations working in close harmony, those four thugs just didn't have a chance. It was Petersen of the Roselle force who drew first honors in this battle of crime versus the police network.

Just on the edge of the park he saw a small, hook-nosed, dark-haired fellow in a cream-colored suit, trying to slink towards the street without attracting attention.

"Hey, you!" Petersen shouted, stopping his car. The little fellow turned and, rabbitlike, dived into the bushes. Instantly Petersen's gun spoke, and a bullet smacked into a tree.

"Don't shoot!" quavered a voice from the bushes, and the little man crawled out, climbed into Petersen's car, and meekly extended his wrists for the handcuffs. Later he gave his name as Eugene Uricola, 24, and admitted a record.

With Uricola tagged, Petersen—leaving the little man handcuffed to the steering wheel of the radio car—dashed into the bushes again with a police .38 gripped in his right hand. He had a hunch that the same bush might yield more rabbits—and his hunch was a good one. For after a brief search he found one Mike di Maggio—a tiny fellow of five feet two inches—crouching behind a trec-trunk. Little di Maggio was so frightened he tried to fight. Big Petersen merely slapped him across the face with an open palm.

"Be good, tough guy!" Petersen commanded in a bored tone. When he took this fine brace of things into Headquarters, Keenan flashed to his other radio cars—and to Elizabeth via telephone—this message:

"All cars . . . Calling all cars . . . Two of the four holdup men have been captured on the eastern border of the park."

And a moment later, Elizabeth's Dispatcher Mayea said to his men:

"Cars One, Two, Three and Four . . . One, Two, Three and Four . . . Roselle police have caught two of the four holdup men on the eastern border of the park. Cover that park, boys."

As if spurred by the good showing of the Roselle police, the Elizabeth boys scored the next point in this game of radio-go-seek. Near the south boundary of the park, Patrolmen Anton Knakal and Bill Young, cruising very slowly, heard a branch crack somewhere among the trees.

"Me Indian blood," said Young solemnly, "tells me that there's a pale-face in them hills." With which he dashed into the park, gun in hand. As he did so, a tall and swarthy man leaped upon him, swinging a piece of tree-limb.

Young ducked, caught the limb expertly in his left hand, holstered his gun with the right, grinned, and started a right uppercut from way down around his knees.

Plunk! It landed. A moment later, Young emerged from the bushes with a lanky, six-foot thug—later identified as one Charles Marino, petty criminal—draped over his arm like an overcoat. Marino's feet were dragging. He was quite unconscious.

"Ire-land must be heaven-n-n," sang Young happily, "for my Mother-rr-rrr came from ther-r-r-re!" Immediately, Knakal radioed his Headquarters, where Mayea, the dispatcher, relayed news of this capture to the Roselle bureau, which in turn relayed it to the Roselle cars. The police network was working nicely. The score now stood: Cops 3—Crooks 0, and the game was entering the last quarter.

But it ended very suddenly. Elizabeth's radio patrolmen Ihdebrand and Norsk called upon a suspicious-looking youth, walking along Pennington Street near the park, to stop for questioning. Instead he ran. When the two patrolmen caught up with him, he committed the grave social error of taking a swing at one of them . . . He, like his friend Marino, was carried unconscious to the radio car. Later he was identified as James Oddo, also with a record. He and Marino both had black and blue welts to show for their foolish attempts to swap punches with hard-hitting coppers.

Perhaps that is what caused Captain Keenan to say, as he phoned Elizabeth's Dispatcher Mayea: "Thanks for the help, Len. Our police Black-and-Blue Network sure worked fine. I see the judge has sent those lads down for a nice cozy stretch."

And Mayea replied: "Don't mention it. Catching crooks the radio way isn't work at all. Just a swell game. Let's play some more, soon."

Unto Thee I Grant a New Life

If someone were to formally present you with a document granting you a new life—new start—would you accept? Of course you would. Yet, while searching the world at large for new opportunities you have neglected the greatest inheritance you possess for achievement. You need no X-ray to reveal that there is some force within you—something that occasionally does the right thing at the right time. A kernel of corn always brings forth corn, not rye. Why? Because it is governed by natural laws. Is it worth an hour of your time once a week to master the equally dependable laws of self and begin life anew?

Truman Bradley

Your Announcer

TRUMAN BRADLEY played hooky from his job, in 1929, to listen to the World Series. Kansas farmers hadn't taken kindly to the electric light bulbs Truman offered for sale, so he deserted temporarily his efforts at salesmanship, sought refuge in a soda emporium in a small town and listened to Graham McNamee and Ted Husing broadcast the annual baseball classic.

What a job those fellows must have, Bradley mused; sitting in the press box at a stadium, talking into a microphone and getting paid for it! The next day his bulb samples were on their way back to Kansas City and Bradley was bound for California and his first knock on radio's portals.

Much has happened to Truman Bradley since. But until this year, when he was assigned to do the color announcing for the World Series broadcasts over Columbia, he hadn't reached that objective he set for himself back in those canvassing days.

Bradley was born February 8, 1905, on a farm near Sheldon, Missouri. He figured in the high school debating team that won the state championship, and, because of his oratorical ability, his family and friends decided that he should study law. So he attended Missouri State Teachers' College for three years, enrolled in the prelegal course. Then he went to Kansas City to further his law studies.

In Kansas City he went to work for that electric light bulb company. It was there that he met Jane and Goodman Ace. Ace liked the lad's voice and personality, and persuaded Truman to try the stage—even helped him get the lead in a presentation by the Kansas City Little Theater group. But stage fright got the better of the young actor and he fled several days before the opening performance. It was after that experience that he chased light bulbs all over Kansas and finally gave them up in pursuit of a Husing or McNamee role.

Truman made his first bid for radio work at the San Francisco studios of NBC. He walked in, obtained an audition, and walked out again, rated inadequate because of his slight Southern accent. Truman beaded directly for his sister's home in Los Angeles.

There the theatrical bug reappeared, and this time he survived his attack of the jitters. He obtained a part alongside Edmund Breese with the Henry Duffy Players. That lasted for six weeks. For cash he went back to salesmanship—meanwhile hanging around radio stations. Finally he was notified that an audition he had made at a Los Angeles station had proved him acceptable.

Harry von Zell was an announcer at the same station then and when Harry was called to New York by CBS, he sent for Bradley. But Truman couldn't stand the big city, even though he made good at his CBS job. Homesickness got the better of him and he hit the trail for California again.

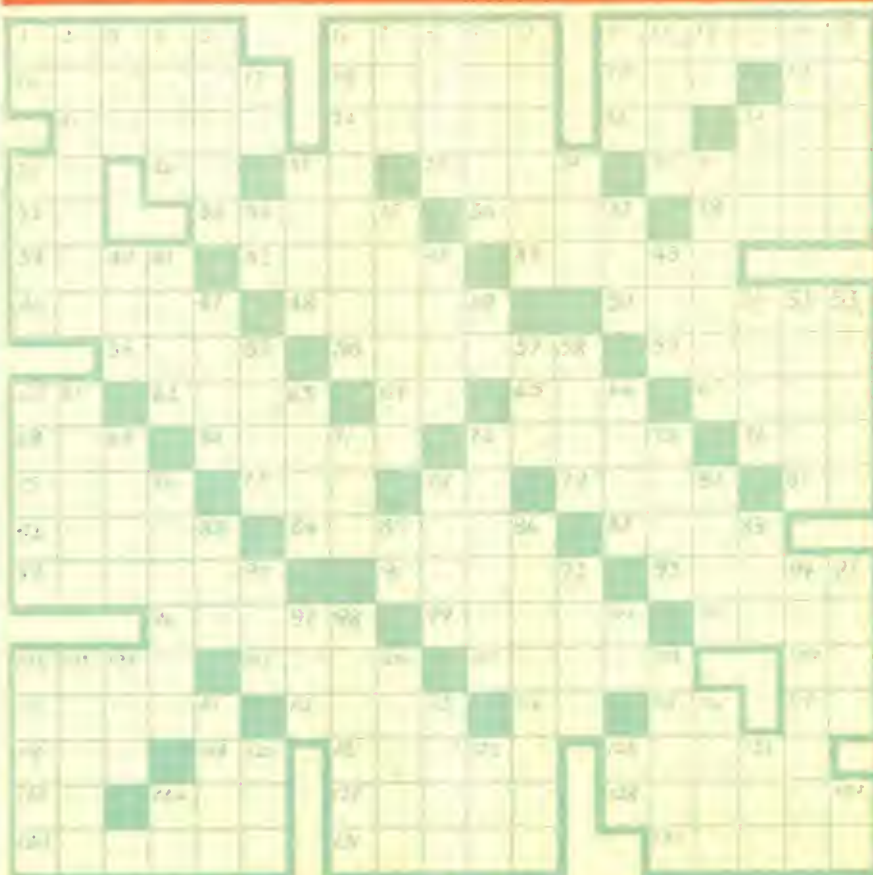

Von Zell was right after him and finally persuaded Truman to give Manhattan another whirl. Goodman Ace met him the day he returned to Broadway, and offered him the part of Brad in the Easy Aces scripts, to be produced in Chicago. In Chicago he took over part-time announcing duties with CBS in addition.

Bradley considers his biggest break was when CBS assigned him to broadcast the Ford Symphony concert at the World's Fair in 1933. Henry Ford heard him and liked his voice. When Ford was putting on his concert programs from Detroit, he summoned Bradley. Since then Truman has become a special announcer for the motor magnate, introducing him when he makes his rare network talks, and doing Ford commercial films. He is 30 years old, six feet tall, with blue-gray eyes and dark brown hair, and still is single.

Truman Bradley announces, among other CBS-WABC programs, the Sunday Evening Hour concerts at 9 p. m. EST (8 CST; 7 MST; 6 PST) and the Story of Mary Marlin, weekdays except Saturdays at 12:30 p. m. EST (11:30 a. m. CST; 10:30 MST; 9:30 PST).
