Statement of Policy ...

FRILLS and furbelows are mere memories of happier days as this nation plunges into its all-out war effort. Yesterday's necessities already are today's luxuries.

With this issue, therefore, MOVIE-RADIO GUIDE appears in its new, streamlined, for-the-duration dress. MOVIE-RADIO GUIDE is proud to have been able to make this important transition so rapidly. This is a happy occasion for those who have labored earnestly and hard to fulfill a double responsibility—responsibility to country and to readers.

MOVIE-RADIO GUIDE has cut out the frills and furbelows which slow up the production of the average publication. MOVIE-RADIO GUIDE has concentrated on the essentials, the factors which will give every reader maximum service in its most readable form. To do this it has been necessary to change the manner of presentation of much of the material which appears within the pages of this weekly. And, in so doing, it has been possible to add much to the entertainment service it provides.

Above are the pictures of several members of the MOVIE-RADIO GUIDE staff. The names of some of these men already are familiar to regular readers. Others are newcomers. There is no picture of Major Curtis Mitchell, whose reports (see page 10) from Washington will appear as often as his Army duties permit. That is because of war-time regulations. There is no picture of Charles A. Morrison, whose Short-Wave Department (see page 16) has long been a headline feature of this weekly.

On the other hand, meet two newcomers. There is Robert Bagar, whose department on Classical Music (see page 14) makes its debut in this issue. Bagar is a music critic for the New York World-Telegram. He is an associate program annotator for the New York Philharmonic Society.

Dick Dorrance (see Frequency Modulation, page 12) is another newcomer whose work will appear regularly in this publication. He is general manager of FM Broadcasters, Inc., has written for the American Mercury, Colliers and This Week, is considered one of the outstanding authorities on frequency modulation in the country.

For its news coverage on radio, motion pictures and general entertainment, MOVIE-RADIO GUIDE presents Martin Lewis from New York, Evans Plummer from Hollywood, Don Moore from Chicago, and Arthur Miller from New York. Lewis celebrated his tenth year with this publication in December, is widely known among the radio fraternity. Plummer supplements fifteen years of experience and writing in radio with five years in Hollywood among the motion-picture folk. Moore, with MOVIE-RADIO GUIDE for the past four years, numbers every important Chicago radio star among his acquaintances. Miller, a native New Yorker, keeps his finger constantly on the nation's entertainment pulse.

These experts have been given instructions to make their coverage of radio, movies and general entertainment complete. Their services have been added to MOVIE-RADIO GUIDE's comprehensive program listings and Hollywood coverage. Their work will be streamlined, condensed on the following pages.

MOVIE-RADIO GUIDE feels its war-time responsibility. And with this issue, with this staff of experts, MOVIE-RADIO GUIDE makes its war-effort pledge—to give the most complete, authoritative, timely entertainment coverage of any publication in the country.

—The Editors.

WE DON'T say "hello" and "good-by" any more. We say "Keep 'em Flying." That's a War Department slogan, and a good one. It will help to win this war. The old "an apple a day keeps the doctor away" proverb has become "a stamp a day keeps Hitler away." That's a buy-defense-stamps slogan and a good one.

Everyone has his pet slogan, either one he has heard repeated or one he has made up himself. Many of these slogans are important. Some of them also should help our war effort.

With this issue Movie-Radio Guide, therefore, announces a "Buy a Defense Bond or Stamp Slogan Contest." This contest is open to everyone except employees of this organization and their families. Its idea is to find the most impelling selling-slogans possible to aid in the sale of defense bonds and stamps. The winning slogans will be released for use to the four major broadcasting networks and to individual radio stations. They will be heard on the air. They will be sent to agencies handling the sale of defense bonds.

FOR THE BEST DEFENSE BOND SLOGAN MOVIE-RADIO GUIDE WILL AWARD A $25.00 DEFENSE BOND EACH WEEK UNTIL FURTHER NOTICE.

FOR THE BEST STAMP SLOGAN MOVIE-RADIO GUIDE WILL AWARD A $1.00 DEFENSE STAMP EACH WEEK UNTIL FURTHER NOTICE.

Slogan should not be over twenty words in length.

Here are some samples:
"Back up your buck privates with your private bucks."

Each slogan must be accompanied by five reasons why every good American should buy defense bonds and stamps. Preface these reasons "Every good American should buy defense bonds and stamps because . . ."

In case the prize-winning slogan is submitted by more than one contestant, the winner will be chosen on the merit of the five reasons given why defense bonds and stamps should be purchased.

Each contestant may submit as many defense bond and defense stamp slogans as he desires, but no one contestant can win both the bond and stamp prize the same week.

Each week's contest will close on Thursday.

The first week's contest will close on Thursday, February 5. Slogans post-marked later than midnight, February 5, will be considered for the second week's contest, which closes midnight, February 12, etc.

All entries become the property of Movie-Radio Guide and any radio station, newspaper, publication, agency or organization wishing to use them to promote the sale of bonds or stamps.

Announcement of the first winning slogans will be made in Movie-Radio Guide issue of February 14-20. The bond and stamp will be forwarded to the winners during that week. Announcement of winners of succeeding contests will be made on succeeding weeks.

No slogans will be returned. In all cases decisions of judges must be considered as final.

"Movie-Radio Guide is after a defense bond or stamp slogan—and we ain't jokin'!"

(Yours can't be any worse than that!)

SUPER-SALESMEN
"Lum and Abner"

YOU might not think that a couple of old codgers like the pair pictured above would be successful salesmen. But these two are. Not only for their air sponsor's product, either. They are among Uncle Sam's aces as unofficial salesmen of defense bonds.

Four days a week "Lum and Abner" go on the air (NBC) and spin their small-town story. They're a couple of genuine, shrewd young fellows in real life (Lum, seated, is Chet Lauck, Abner is Norris Goff), and they realize the sales force of plain, honest words. They've set a fine example in buying bonds themselves, and they've sent six one-hundred-dollar bonds to six sets of twins that have been named for them. You'll be seeing "Lum and Abner" in RKO's "The Bashful Bachelor," just released. |

HOW TO EXPLAIN THE

WAR TO YOUR CHILD

HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood columnist-commentator

"Give our children something to be proud of instead of scared of . . ."

SIDONIE MATSNER GRUENBERG
Child Study Association of America

Tell them: "We are fighting to keep our freedom . . . to help all people"

DR. ALICE V. KELIHER
New York University

"Children should be told the truth . . . Do not overemphasize bombing"

AND the children—how will they fare in the war?

So far we have been too busy slashing out with bitter invective against the Jap invader, too hypnotized by the chilling prospect of what the war is going to cost in blood and dollars to consider that question.

Yet it is a terribly important question. It concerns the whole future of America. It is a question on the lips of millions of mothers. What should I tell my child about the war? How can I protect him against air raids? How will I explain the bombings which may occur? How far can I trust the school to protect my child? Will my child get the right things to eat?

These are the questions mothers are asking. And now, through many channels, the answers are being given. Mrs. Roosevelt devoted an entire Sunday (NBC) broadcast to children and the war, speaking both as a Civilian Defense official and as a great mother. Hollywood's Hedda Hopper, emphasizing psychological protection of children rather than pure physical defense, broadcast simple but tremendously helpful suggestions. Prominent educators and child experts are devoting much attention to the problem. Taken together, their advice is a blueprint to guide American mothers in the protection of their children.

Children should continue to lead normal lives, says Mrs. Roosevelt. Speaking on her regular Sunday NBC broadcast, the First Lady had as her guest a typical mother of young children. Her suggestions were in the form of answers to questions which had been worrying Mrs. Ernest K. Lindley. First question was this:

"Just how much should I let the present world situation affect my children's lives?"

Answering in broad, general terms, Mrs. Roosevelt said: ". . . Children should continue to live as normal lives as possible. We are fortunate indeed because so far as we can see our children will have the best possible diet. We are going to learn more about it and, for that reason, they should be better fed than ever before in their lives . . . Children should lead regular lives. They should go to school . . .

They are as safe there as they would be at home."

Then Mrs. Lindley asked, "How can I keep my children from being afraid during a blackout?"

This, said Mrs. Roosevelt, must be worked out through certain programs which will be suggested by the Office of Civilian Defense. The main thing is to make the children feel that this is just a precaution, like a fire drill . . . If they are amused and interested they will not be frightened. If you do have an air-raid warning, take them into the room you have chosen as the safest place. Remember that books are valuable in times like these because, if you are really interested in what you are reading, you will forget what is going on around you.

Another question: "What if my children should be lost during a blackout or air-raid test?"

That problem, according to Mrs. Roosevelt, will be solved by metal identification tags. Soon the Civilian Defense Councils will have them available and they'll be so attractive that any child will like to wear them.

ANNA ELEANOR ROOSEVELT

Office of Civilian Defense

"If they are amused and interested they will not be frightened (by blackouts)"

For mothers, as well as for workers, soldiers, sailors, all Americans, Mrs. Roosevelt said, "The first thing each of us has to do is to do the job well which is our own particular job."

QUITE different from Mrs. Roosevelt's broadcast was Hollywood gossip Hedda Hopper's. Miss Hopper was more interested in what American mothers are telling their children about the war, how they should explain all of the ugly things which are so hard to explain to children. Short, wise, simple, her message follows:

"While we are all busy winning this war, let's remember the children. I don't mean their physical protection, because that's the first thing we all think of; but I do mean their psychological care. Remember, today 'little pitchers have big ears.' Don't stop talking about the war. Let's permit them to hear plenty about it, but be extremely careful of the kind of thing we say in the presence of them. Some parents unconsciously frighten their children out of their wits by unthinking criticism of our armed forces. I mean such things as that careless talk about Pearl Harbor. Don't, either by insinuation or complaint, say anything to weaken that beautiful pride children have in the Army and Navy. Don't—by a single syllable—lessen their trust in Uncle Sam. Instead, keep impressing upon them what we are fighting for and what we have to defend. And instead of stressing merely the unfairness of the Japanese attack, why not emphasize the all-embracing fairness for which this country stands! Give our children something to be proud of instead of scared of. And to ourselves—when we are alone with our thoughts—should we ever be tempted to be afraid, let's tell ourselves that the American eagle has just soared screaming out of his nest, and he won't return until he flies back with the flag of the Rising Sun in his beak and the Swastika in his claws."

American educators, especially those interested in child psychology, have been quick to help mothers in their war-time problems. Edna Dean Baker, president of the National College of Education, Evanston, Ill., has this to say about children and the war:

"What we tell children about war should depend upon the age of the child and his emotional reaction as he questions. Children, particularly young children, should be saved as much as possible from accounts of the horrors and cruelties of war which arouse fear, hatred and feelings of revenge. These emotions are disorganizing to the child's personality and hinder a wholesome adjustment to others and to the world in which he lives."

Dr. Alice V. Keliher, education professor at New York University and widely known consultant on child problems, advises:

"WHEN children ask questions about anything, they should be told the truth. This does not mean telling them everything we know. But it does mean being honest . . .

"If they ask why we are fighting the war, we can tell them in simple terms that it is because some military machines in the world want to take our freedoms away from us as they have so many other peoples—freedom to play, to go to our own church, to go to our own schools, to live happily in our family."

Here is what Sidonie Matsner Gruenberg, director of Child Study Association of America, would tell children about the war:

"In this country, and in some others, people are trying to find ways of giving everybody a chance to live and to share in all that is necessary. In a few countries, however, they still think that the powerful ones should control everything. The leaders of those countries are trying to run the whole world that way. The United States and our allies do not want to be run by masters. We are fighting to keep our own freedom and to help all the people of the world get the same freedom."

From these and many other leaders, American mothers may be sure they will get sound, helpful advice. And American mothers may also be sure, thus aided and depending on their own inherent wisdom, that they will be able to see their children through this war safe and sound.

RECOMMENDS:

“Woman of the Year”

STARRING Katharine Hepburn and Spencer Tracy together is something new, but it works beautifully in M-G-M's "Woman of the Year." Tracy, in this, is a sports columnist whose interest begins and ends with baseball, football and boxing. Hepburn is a sophisticate columnist of international affairs (for the same newspaper) who knows all the answers. Tracy thinks the international set is phony, frivolous and unimportant until he meets Hepburn. Hepburn has never seen a baseball game until she meets Tracy. A columnist feud brings them together; they fall in love; they get married; they quarrel. Finally comes the happy ending.

Carole Lombard

TRIBUTE TO "A VERY FINE LADY"—BY NOVELIST JAMES STREET

James Street knew Carole Lombard well. He wrote "Nothing Sacred," a hilarious, screwball story in which she appeared with Fredric March. Later he made a special trip to Hollywood to meet the Gables, wrote their love story for this publication. Significantly enough, it was titled "Two Happy People." Following the tragedy of January 16, when Miss Lombard and her mother and others lost their lives, we asked James Street to paint a word-picture of this great actress-patriot as he saw her. Here it is.—The Editors.

THE Carole Lombard legend of hijinks and capers is entrenched so firmly in the public's mind that she will go into America's memories as a harum-scarum person, the firecracker girl. She was a natural comedienne, but never forget that the jester often is more intelligent than the court he entertains. When I called her "The Firecracker Girl" in a MOVIE-RADIO GUIDE story she was amused but a bit irked and said, "I wish somebody sometime would write that acting a screwball is only an act with me. I wish somebody would realize that I can be serious."

Actually, Mrs. Clark Gable was a serious-minded woman, a liberal thinker who heaped scorn on bigotry and lashed pomposity with a forked tongue. Her slang (and at times her slang was broad and lusty and earthy) was subject of much comment. Some called it profanity. That's a matter of opinion. There was a bit of the minx about her, and she was proud of it. There was also a gentility about her. She was a complex person and her complexes made her one of the most interesting personalities of our times. She was more than just an actress. She was a very fine lady.

Once we were talking and she said, "The world is in a mess. I don't know exactly what it's all about. But I can see and feel that we are not worthy of ourselves. We used to poke fun at the hackneyed clichés. But they are true. There is an American destiny. We have fallen down on our jobs. The mess we are in is largely our fault. We have neglected to take the American revolution to the world and have been content to sit back and wax fat while the world brought its vicious ideas to us. We've got to rededicate ourselves to the spirit of our own revolution and take it out and sell it.

If we can't give it away, we've got to make the world take it. We've got to hold the world's nose and pour some medicine down its throat. But first let's be worthy of our traditions."

That's not a comic talking. That was a woman who had done some thinking.

One time we saw some Okies in California and she said, "You know, we cannot call ourselves civilized until every man has an opportunity to work. I've seen oranges burned out here to keep the market up. I know some kids in New York need orange juice. We are not worthy of ourselves until every child in America, in the world, has all the orange juice he needs."

It's silly to call Carole Lombard the first heroine of the war. To be a heroine, one must take chances knowingly. It also is silly to say our greatest loss in that tragedy was death of those flyers. You can't measure and balance tragedy.

No, I couldn't call her a heroine. It wasn't necessary for her to be one. Had her country or friends needed her for a heroine, she would have accepted that role, too. For she was a sterling person, genuine and gentle in a deep way.

The Movie Front

Complete Coverage of the Hollywood Week! Ciro's Closes; Hayworth and Lamour Upset Defense Plants; Donald Duck Helps Uncle Sam Collect Taxes

By EVANS PLUMMER

THE war is putting the squeeze play on Hollywood night-spots. First to feel the pinch of lessened night-abouting was Ciro's, which has closed indefinitely. And Ciro's being closed any night except Monday—when it never was open anyway, unless for special parties or charity—is certainly tough on the far-ballyhooed glamour of this tinseltown. Yes, Ciro's, last mirrored and super-plush-quilted denizen of the ruby and diamond upper-crust, played host to but eighty ladies and gentlemen on Sunday, January 11, all of whom applauded guest star Gene Autry most politely (he wasn't on his horse) and then quit for the duration, or at least until people start attending the bright spots again . . .

Ciro's decision to stay dark momentarily has not as yet greatly influenced the other night-spots. The Mocambo is still struggling successfully to continue and may get away with it, what with its highbrow rival off the competition list. Slapsie Maxie's is reported to be unhappy about the war situation, but the Florentine Gardens had its best night January 16 since war was declared, and Earl Carroll, keeping his turnstile clicking with a patriotic girly-girly bargain show at his theater restaurant, should make out all right without too many salary cuts. Then, the Biltmore Bowl downtown, now that it has Phil Harris and band ensconced at its microphone, is packing in the paying customers, war or no war, just as if Los Angeles were Washington, D. C. . . .

There's one other spot on the Sunset Strip that's practically uncloseable

except at 2 a.m., and that's "Pop's" Maxime's Cafe just west of Doheny. Pop specializes in three features—an entertaining but low-cost floor show, the best liquor and brandies that money can buy, which he sells at fair prices, and Pop's own special war predictions. Strangely enough, Pop, a Greek by birth and an American for many years, has been calling the turns right, even Russia, for the past two and a half years.

The war has affected Hollywood in still other ways. The studios, for example, have hung their "No Visitors Allowed" signs on their gates once more, but this time they mean it. Taking no chances with spies, fifth-columnists or saboteurs. That's that, they say. And they mean it this time.

"HELLZAPOPPIN" premiere: Olsen & Johnson, with Barrymore, Edna May Oliver impersonators

Every studio has installed bomb shelters and is having air-raid drills. Out at Warner Bros., which first angered der flopping, turntail Fuehrer with its "Confessions of a Nazi Spy" and therefore is eligible for one of the first bombs, the employees refuse to take the situation too seriously and have burlesqued the precautions signs with their own versions, one of which reads: IF THE VICTIM OF A DIRECT HIT, DON'T GO EVERYWHERE AT ONCE . . .

Santa Anita's race-track's failure to get the Army's okay to reopen is the saddest chapter of the sunkist winter in southern California. Despite the Constitution's guarantee of freedom of assembly, Gen. William Orr Ryan, boss of the Fourth Interceptor Command, has declared, "No assemblies of over 5,000," and is sticking to his order. That shuts out the track, of course, which has a bad day unless ten times that many folk turn out. Indirectly, the Santa Anita blow and the no-Rose-Bowl-game edict hurt California hotels and resorts intensely. The Palm Springs chamber of commerce is figuring on a plan for selling the town back to the Indlans, and a good many expensive hotels there wouldn't mind being turned into military or naval hospitals for the duration. At least, they'd have guests who'd have to stay whether they liked the climate or not . . .

Going back to Santa Anita (in thought only), there is talk of compensating the track somewhat for its losses by making the plant into barracks or perhaps a manufacturing plant. Just what anyone could make there besides suckers has not been announced. Matter of fact, Bob Hope has just suggested to Boss Nelson that he go ahead and keep Bing Crosby's nags at the track and turn it into a glue factory. We have our own personal beef at Santa Anita and at General Ryan more specifically. This was the year that Lunn, of "Lum and Abner," who had entered a stable of bangtails there, had promised to give me at least one sure thing so that we could pay our income tax and have enough left over to invest in a few more defense bonds . . .

Frankly speaking, the hysteria of the East over conditions on the West Coast worries us here greatly. We have yet to see a Setting Sun plane, and the only subs which operated along the Pacific Coast are now reposing peacefully at the bottom. There appears to be a sub or two on the eastern seaboard, too, so we in southern California are supposed to get excited, we suppose, but we just can't seem to work up the lather. We are a tough bunch out here and getting tougher every day. Don't worry about us. And if you want a nice, peaceful vacation, southern California is still a nice place to visit! . . .

More worrisome and interesting to us is the ill effect of sex and glamour on defense-plant workers. It came to light in Baltimore, Maryland, when Dorothy Lamour visited the Glenn Martin plane factory there and the executives refused to let Dotty tour the plant while the men were at work because of her distraction nuisance value. The execs figured the sarong champ would cost them the production of one-half less bomber for the day if the lads saw her and rubber-necked a bit . . .

Out at the Lockheed and its sister Vega plant here, the "no girls in the shop" rule has long been invoked. It started when a time-study engineer learned that production time lost cost Lockheed $800 every time a reasonably personable young lady walked past the assembly line. In the case of Rita Hayworth, who got in by mistake one day, the plant figured its production was $22,000 lower in Hudson bombers for the day. A bit of long division will prove that Miss Hayworth is twenty-seven and one-half times as destructive to the male emotions as the average pretty girl! . . .

Incidentally, we have a tip-off from the editors of this weekly that readers soon will meet a typical aircrafter, a Joe Smith, American, who puts PY-38s together. He's quite an interesting chap . . .

Then there's the delightful story about "Junior" Carl Laemmle, scion of the fortune built by his late father, Carl Laemmle, who was said to be afraid to go to war. Facts of the case, as brought out on January 20, are these: Carl went to Terry Hunt's health club where he took a strenuous course designed to build up his body and increase his height. He also learned to box. When he took his selectee physical exam, he passed it without a condition! Chances are now, with all his money, he'll be in the next call. Courage breaks out in unexpected spots when Uncle Sam goes to war . . .

Raucous-voiced Donald Duck isn't the easiest screen personality in the world to think of as being a patriot. But that's just what he's turning out to be. The United States Treasury Department recently handed him the staggering assignment of convincing 131,000,000 of us that we can—and should—pay our income taxes with a grin! Donald is tackling the job in an especially created film titled "The New Spirit," with Walt Disney himself and a staff of top technicians working overtime on it. Secretary Morgenthau has okayed the idea, the Treasury Department has placed an order for one thousand Technicolor prints, the largest print order in Technicolor history, so there you have it all—except what the film is all about. Disney won't talk, neither will Donald. So we'll wait and see—and hope Donald does a job! . . .

Although Donald Duck isn't the easiest personality in the world to imagine as a patriot, there's one whom no one can think of in any other light. That's General William Mitchell, recently posthumously honored by the Senate after a court martial. Mitchell, who was reduced in rank in 1926, was the chief of the air corps and a prophet unhonored in his own country during his lifetime. Now that war has come and his far-sightedness and patriotism have been recognized at last, his life-story will also come to the screen. Howard Hawks,

PERFECT CASTING: Walter Pidgeon with Maureen O'Hara in Fox' "How Green Was My Valley"

MOVIE REVIEW

"How Green Was My Valley"

CAST: Walter Pidgeon, Maureen O'Hara, Donald Crisp, Anna Lee, Roddy McDowall, John Loder, Sara Allgood, Barry Fitzgerald, Patric Knowles, Rhys Williams, Morton Lowry, Arthur Shields, Ann Todd, et al. A 20th Century-Fox picture produced by Darryl Zanuck and directed by John Ford. Screen play by Philip Dunne from the best-seller novel by Richard Llewellyn. Music by Alfred Newman and chorals by the Welsh Singers.

Type of Picture: This is the educational and historical description of a people and an industry—the Welsh coal-miners and their families, how they lived and worked. It follows almost to a T the novel itself.

This Is the Story: So many people read the book, it seems a waste of time to set down in brief its fine, picturesque narrative and plot. Really, the plot is simple; the descriptive matter important. And it is an actor's picture, exceedingly well cast by Zanuck and Ford and most skillfully directed by the latter. For non-readers (and readers as well as non-readers will enjoy seeing the screen play), be it said that this is the story of the Morgan family, traditional Welsh coal-miners, and now presided over by "Mr." Morgan (Donald Crisp), with the cooking-department aid of "Mrs." Morgan (Sara Allgood). Five of their sons, Ianto (John Loder), Ivor (Pat Knowles), Davy (Dick Fraser), Gwilym (Evan Evans) and Owen (James Monks), all work in the mine, too, and their daughter, Angharad (Maureen O'Hara), helps her mother to run the big family. It is the fate of Angharad to become moon-eyed over the valley's minister, Mr. Gruffydd (Walter Pidgeon), and then, when he refuses to bring her down to his peniless way of living, to be married off—unhappily—to the son of the mine-owner. The story is partially told in first-person narrative form by Huw (Roddy McDowall), youngest son of the Morgans, who describes "his valley" and what he saw there as a youth, how his family lived, grew, fared and suffered.

The Verdict: This is a great picture for everyone to see—a sort of Welsh "Gone With the Wind," and just as good. This is mighty fine film fare. Take the youngsters, too.

HAPPY MARRIED COUPLE: Barbara Stanwyck gives hubby Bob Taylor tips on new dance step who directed "Sergeant York," will direct "General Billy Mitchell" for RKO release, and what a thrilling story it should be! . . .

One of the mysteries around town, if you like mysteries, is just what Alfred Hitchcock's new picture, "Saboteur," is all about. The thriller-director, making this film for Universal, worked out the plot himself, and he's guarded it with so much secrecy that even the writers working on the screen play don't know how it all ends! They'll get the information only when they need it—and that goes for the cast, too. Inside informants, who profess to know as much as anybody does, say the action starts in an airplane factory and winds up in New York harbor—which is covering quite a bit of distance, at that . . .

Over at the M-G-M lot, everyone is rightly broken up over the sad catastrophe to Carole Lombard, her mother and Otto Winkler, studio press representative who went along on the trip to act as a "bumper" for Carole and help her do her job. Reams will be written about Miss Lombard, America's first war heroine, but a word about Otto. We of the press had come to respect Winkler very highly. He always played square even though it sometimes put him behind the eight ball with his bosses. That is the test of a good press-agent. Winkler was all that, and a good friend, too. Without exception, every man and woman covering the Hollywood beat feels the same way. They'll all miss Otto . . .

On the strictly personal side: Today in Hollywood, Mr. and Mrs. George Brent (remember her? She was Oomp Grl Ann Sheridan) returned in slacks from a rainy Florida to Hollywood; M-G-M actress Ruth Hussey admitted that she and W. Lincoln Fogarty, Kansas City insurance man, would marry as soon as they can set the date (and he'd better wipe his feet clean before he comes in onto the carpet, too) . . .

That about wraps up Hollywood today. Except that everyone is buying more than their limit of defense bonds and stamps. How about you?

MEET ELMER

KATHY MARSH (portrayed by Marjorie Anderson) is Portia's best friend, sympathizes with her troubles, her ideals. Kathy works in a research laboratory, is practical, efficient

DICKIE (Raymond Ives) is Portia's small son, a typical American boy. They have lived by themselves in the tiny Blake cottage since the tragic death of Portia's husband, Richard

ARLINE MANNING (Joan Banks), Portia's bitter enemy, is selfish, cold-hearted. She tricked Walter Manning into marriage; now she knows Walter really loves Portia, is madly jealous

KIRK RODER (Carleton Young), sleek front man for Parkerstown crooked politicians, is the first casualty in Portia's drive to rid Parkerstown of its slum section

PORTIA FACES LIFE

Walter Manning's Entry into Portia Blake's Life Should Have Brought Happiness, But—Here Is the Radio Drama of One Woman's Life!

This is the story of the radio program "Portia Faces Life," fictionized by Wiley Maloney, broadcast Monday through Friday over NBC (5:15 p.m. EST) under the sponsorship of General Foods for Post's Bran Flakes.
—The Editors.

THE judge's gavel banged peremptorily, but its authority was disregarded in the wave of whispers that spread across the crowded courtroom. Portia Blake's testimony, delivered in crisp, calm tones, had been a bombshell. The case of Kirk Roder vs. the Harrison estate had reached its climax.

The testimony had been a simple statement of fact. Portia Blake testified that she and Walter Manning (co-administrator for the estate and husband of beautiful, wilful Arline Harrison, the sole heir) had found that $6,985 had been spent for repairs on the decrepit Railroad Avenue tenements. But no repairs, according to Portia, had been made. Roder had pocketed the money and certain politicians had closed their eyes to the fact that health and fire ordinances had been violated.

This last fact was what made the case sensational and which also meant everything to Portia Blake. She had sworn that the slums around Railroad Avenue in Parkerstown must go and the Roder case was her first shot in the fight against Boss Connelly's and Mayor Bartlett's political machine. The shot, if the tension in the courtroom was a gauge, had found its mark.

The district attorney leaned back in his chair with a smile of satisfaction on his face. Sleek Kirk Roder, the defendant, leaned over the shoulder of Warren Stevenson, his high-powered counsel, and conferred in a hoarse, frightened voice. Stevenson held up a silencing hand.

"Let me handle this my way. Roder," Stevenson said. "Before I'm through with her, Portia Blake will be looking for a hole to crawl into."

Portia, looking from the witness stand with wide, fearless eyes, saw Stevenson's gesture and sensed his words. She steeled herself against the coming ordeal. Of all the battles she had fought in the past, this would be the hardest. Strange, she thought, how it all seemed to stem from her relations with tall, dark Walter Manning.

Manning had been her husband Richard's best friend, and when Richard had died, Walter became the one rock to which Portia and her little son, Dickie, could cling in a world that suddenly had become lonely and cold.

Portia had decided then to take up where her husband had left off. She had been admitted to the bar, although she never had practised law after her marriage. She had believed—still believed—in her heart that a woman's real place is in her home. There she found that home without a husband or a father was only a compromise. Walter's friendship in the months that followed Richard's tragic death was a relationship that grew into something sweet and precious.

But there had been pain—even tragedy. Walter, through his work on the Parkerstown Herald, was thrown constantly into the company of Arline Harrison, daughter of the newspaper's owner. Selfishly, Arline had set her cap to catch Walter, and after that frightening automobile accident in which both Walter and Arline almost lost their lives, Arline tricked Walter into marriage. Even now, Portia remembered the bleakness of the moment when friends told her the news that meant Walter was lost to her.

CEREALS

Cereals are as old as the Greek goddess of agriculture, Ceres. But until the advent of modern food-processing, cereals, to the average man, meant merely grain—wheat, barley, rice, oats. Then some enterprising men began to make easy-to-serve cereal products. Others used cereals to develop health foods—one of the first of which was called "Elijah's Manna." Soon cereals became popular as "breakfast foods." Today "breakfast foods" are a must on any housewife's shopping list.

WALTER MANNING (Myron McCormick), although married to Arline, has actually been in love with Portia ever since her husband's death. Portia discouraged him after he married Arline

PORTIA BLAKE (Lucille Wall), tiny, resolute, brave, is steeling herself for two ordeals: Forgetting Walter Manning and fighting the corrupt interests which menace the welfare of her home town

Portia had tried to forget—forget in the only way she knew how—through hard work. She'd tried to avoid Walter, tried to deny to herself that she still loved him. Things might have worked out all right if she and Walter had not been appointed co-administrators of the Harrison estate when Arline's father died.

Because of that court appointment, Walter and Portia were compelled to see each other. They had tried—how bitterly they had tried!—to keep their minds on business. But the love they bore for each other was bigger than themselves, though they still denied it. It became plain to Arline, however, that Walter still loved Portia, and her blind jealousy lashed out unjustly to accuse her husband and Portia of things that were not true.

Arline's jealousy was a living thing that led her far beyond the point of simple accusations. She listened to Kirk Roder's story that Walter and Portia were plotting to rob her of her inheritance and then run away together. It was then that Arline decided Portia must be driven from Parkerstown.

Roder, who had taken great pains to win Arline to his side, proposed a plan that would rid him forever of Portia Blake. Roder had every reason in the world to want Portia's reputation ruined. And Arline believed Roder's story that Portia was accusing him of embezzlement simply to cover up her own defalcations.

Roder's plan was simple. He and Arline would bribe Jack Kearney, Arline's chauffeur, to swear that he was with Duke Hawthorne on the night Duke was accused of committing a fur theft. Portia, who knew Kearney, would believe his story and would take Duke's case, building her defense plan upon the false alibi.

Portia, who honestly had believed Duke had a good case, took it to court and won. It was then that Kearney gave Roder and Arline a written false confession that Portia had paid him $500 for the alibi testimony. It was upon this false confession that Arline had brought charges before the bar association to have Portia disbarred. Portia knew some of the truth behind these charges, but could not prove her innocence without Kearney's testimony.

Kearney, whose son had been acquitted of murder charges through Portia's help some years before, was completely in the power of Roder. Roder had told Kearney he would bring up the old scandal and Kearney's son would be ruined in his new and successful life in another city.

Portia knew the full truth of this plot. Kearney had come to her and told her the whole story, and also told her that he could not risk going into court because it would ruin his boy. Portia promised to fight the disbarment proceedings without his aid, but she knew in her heart that her hands were tied.

Portia knew more than these things. If all this old scandal were resurrected in the present trial against Roder, it might completely discredit her own testimony in the eyes of the jury. Worse than that, Roder might win acquittal and Portia's fight for slum clearance on Railroad Avenue would be lost before it had barely begun. For Portia was after the men behind Roder—mostly Boss Connelly.

Throughout the trial Portia kept a tight grip on herself—even though she was on the point of breaking.

SHE looked over the courtroom, searching out the friendly faces. She saw Kathie Marsh, her best friend. She also saw Walter Manning, whose jaw was taut and tense. The man, she saw, was furious with suppressed anger. Portia was frightened that he was on the point of doing something impulsive. She hoped he would leave. This was no place for forthright Walter, who never had been one to control righteous anger. Portia turned from Walter and saw the smiling, taunting face of Arline, Walter's wife.

In the hushed courtroom, Stevenson's smooth voice cut like a knife.

"Why did Mrs. Manning testify before the disbarment committee that you, Portia Blake, and Mr. Manning had connived to get control of her fortune and then go off together?"

Walter Manning could stand it no longer. Before Portia could speak, he was on his feet, his face red with anger.

"That's a lie!" he shouted. "Portia and I—"

Bedlam broke loose in the courtroom. The judge pounded for order and shouted in vain for bailiffs. Above the noise and the hubbub came Portia's tired voice—begging, pleading.

"Walter . . . stop it . . . please! You're only making it worse!"

But Walter had gone too far to stop. And, while spectators craned to catch his words and to savor the sensation of the moment, he kept shouting.

"I'll keep still when I've finished. Portia isn't going to be torn to pieces up there on that witness stand just because of my wife's insane jealousy! This is all her doing! This talk of disbarment . . . the scandal and the lies! Not a word of it's true . . . and Stevenson isn't going to twist it into proof that Kirk Roder isn't guilty."

Bailiffs rushed to take Walter from the court. Order was restored and the courtroom suddenly became hushed again. Portia felt faint. She was still on the witness stand looking into

Introducing Radio's Most Complete Coverage of Inside News—
by Experts in Washington, New York, Hollywood and Chicago

WASHINGTON

By MAJOR CURTIS MITCHELL

Unique among all American cities, Washington of today is a roaring, muscular monster. Its voice is heard round the world and its power is felt in Libya and Malaya and Oskaloosa. Today's Washington is two distinct cities. The first is the city in which one lives with rents higher than in New York or Chicago, with rooming-houses packed with men and women from every state in the Union, with each street jammed with writhing lines of automobiles tagged from California and South Carolina and Kansas. Sugar purchases must be of five pounds or less. Filling-stations are mostly closed at night, ever since the gasoline shortage. Sentry-boxes have appeared about the White House and its long yard on which thousands of children rolled Easter eggs last spring, and long-coated soldiers with bayoneted rifles guard all bridges. Often, turning a corner, one comes unexpectedly upon a sentry wrapped to the ears against bitter winter air, but keen-eyed and alert . . .

The second Washington is the city of offices in New Deal palaces and thin-walled temporary buildings, where thousands of men are joining together in a single holy crusade. In these offices one discovers a tautness and determination that cannot be noted in clubs or restaurants. In a thousand crowded cubicles presidents of corporations and labor leaders and drug-store clerks are working elbow to elbow. They are dollar-a-year men, or civil service clerks, or new recruits in the Government's great army of specialists, and they are packed like sardines around desks and tables and ringing telephones, learning their new jobs and about each other and the give-and-take of teamwork. This Washington which hums with resolve and industry has become, since Churchill's visit, the center of gravity of the entire United Nations, and from the arsenal which it creates will come the power to bring peace again to all people . . .

Paragraphs which I shall write in Washington may not always have much to do with radio and movies or glamorous personalities, but they will have to do with the history-in-the-making, which must affect all persons, both listeners and performers, in the future. For in this very city our life is being fashioned each hour of the day. This week just passed, for example, gave to Americans their greatest single blessing since Pearl Harbor. It is in the news that Donald Nelson, Sears-Roebuck's gift to defense, has been made production czar with full authority and responsibility, while the Army gets a full-time production genius of its own in Lieutenant General William Knudsen . . .

Note: You can stop worrying about new stations coming into the empty spots on your dial to jam your present good listening. It is anticipated that the Federal Communications Commission will presently freeze the station set-up and refuse to grant permits to additional broadcasters until after the war. It seems the materials for towers and transmitters are needed by the Government . . .

Americans like their news in the raw, without deletions and distortions. We have proved that we can take it, bad or good. We are likely to resent any move which cheats this most news-conscious race in the world of complete information. Which is another basic Yankee concept that must undergo a major overhaul immediately. Since the President appointed Byron Price as censor, he has been perfecting his plans to prevent any useful information reaching our enemies. Now those plans have been announced. Radio stations have been served a list of "don'ts."

Among the orders issued to radio stations is the one banning man-on-the-street broadcasts. At first glance, this may seem to be a silly whim. Actually, an open microphone on a street corner could be used to signal a submarine lurking just behind Montauk Point. An apparently innocent man or woman could attract the attention of an announcer and say a code phrase, such as "I'm from Arizona," and a sub commander would understand that a battleship of the Arizona class had just left the harbor headed seaward . . .

In conclusion, radio censorship will not change greatly the structure of our broadcasts. Our listening, whether it be to baseball games or serials, is already protected, for it is a part of the philosophy of defense of the rights of freedom for which we fight that our habits of listening to news or entertainment shall be abridged as little as possible.

By GLEN ANDERSON

The "biggest thing" happening in Hollywood this past fortnight didn't happen there at all but at March Field, whence Jack Benny and his stormy troupe had gone to entertain the flyers and enlisted personnel bivouacked there. And the big thing's name is Staff Sergeant August Stackwell, weight 385 pounds! August, whom you may have heard on the air, is the largest, heaviest man in the U. S. Army Air Corps, where he has served for nineteen years and continuously gained weight. He was a mere feather of 200 pounds when he joined up. The added 185 pounds he attributes to "good Army chow." He really doesn't ride around in planes (especially a modern pursuit ship, into which he couldn't even fit), so don't duck into a bomb shelter. In fact, they kid him at the field about the danger of his tonnage putting "runs" in a silk parachute. Sergeant Stackwell's duties are in the supply division, where he is adept at pushing things around. May he soon be pushing the Japs! . . .

Right now we are packing our other collar into our brief-case for an overnight hop to Stockton, Calif., where we expect to watch Sergt. Jimmy Stewart (who'll be a second lieutenant as soon as they can find him a uniform long enough) defend Charlie McCarthy in "court-martial" charges that the Bergen dummy joined two branches of the service—Marines when he was in the Air Corps—at one time. A full report will be coming to you next week, but meantime the most interesting point is that the Army and NBC have been publicizing this radio event to take place at Moffett Field, Calif. It never would, never was intended to go on from Moffett, and didn't. This strategy was for the purpose of fooling the Japanese, who might be audacious enough to try to run the Pacific Coast blockade with a plane-carrier and drop "eggs" on Moffett while the McCarthy-Costello show was on the air. In fact, the Army was hoping the Japs would try some such raid, for Moffett was armed to the teeth, waiting . . .

Sotto voce: Ventriloquist Bergen's very latest and very special flame is the lovely Adelaide Norris, New York society girl. They met at the Stork Club . . .

Kay Jordan, or McGee if you prefer, since she is the daughter of Fibber and Molly McGee, is a personable brunette colleen but as independent as the Irish make 'em. Through school, Kay wanted to get a job—but without the help of Jim or Marian (her father's and mother's real names). So

Then she proudly told Fibber and Molly, who of course are even more proud . . .

Al Pearce remembered the wild western celluloid operas and the rustlers therein, but never thought, in this modern day, those varmints would tangle with him and his 1,700-acre cattle ranch near Los Banoz, Calif. But they did. One of his pokes discovered a roll of steer hides crammed into a culvert adjoining his land. An inventory round-up disclosed that many head had been stolen by the thieves, who evidently were skinning the cattle at the road and taking the meat away for quick sale. But since one of Pearce's cowhands winged one of the rustlers, the marauding has stopped . . . Japs, probably.

NEW YORK

By MARTIN LEWIS

War-time restrictions got under way with a bang as the Government clamped down on ad-lib programs, asked broadcasters to ban "any quiz program originating remotely, wherein the group is small and wherein no arrangement exists for investigating the background of participants." This includes man-in-the-street, request and spot programs, which might be used by Axis agents to communicate with their headquarters, as well as interviews at stations and airline terminals. A rigid censorship has been imposed on scripts, and many subjects are tabu. The National Broadcasting Company stated that they did not anticipate that this censorship would cancel any of the quiz programs they now have on the air. However, masters of ceremonies have been instructed to keep away from all tabu subjects, and an alert watch is kept by men behind the scenes to cut off a program at a split second's notice . . .

Other signs of patriotism along Radio Row: All major broadcasting studios in New York display large American flags. Studio audiences of programs that have orchestras stand up and sing "The Star-Spangled Banner" before leaving. Radio station WOV in New York, which used to sign off with "WOV—Fifth Avenue," now uses "WOV for Victory" as its signature. The telephone there is answered the same way . . . An impromptu auction following the broadcast of "Hobby Lobby" netted Uncle Sam $2,300. The idea started when a guest hobbyist, a manufacturer of ladies' novelties, offered some of his items for auction in behalf of defense. "Hobby Lobby's" Dave Elman arranged to have $100 worth of defense stamps brought into the studio for the informal auction. To his delight, the idea caught on. Now Dave's seriously considering adding the auction as a weekly after-broadcast feature, to help sell bonds . . .

banned from the air by English military censors. Their reasons are vague—mainly that Brown's outlook is too gloomy and that since his broadcasts are heard in Singapore as well as in the States, they have a bad effect on morale. Brown, who climaxed a career of scoops by being present on the Repulse when she was sunk by the Japanese, is one of CBS' ace correspondents. CBS is appealing to high authorities on both sides of the Atlantic to get him reinstated. This ban, incidentally, applies only to Brown's broadcasts. He still can, and does, cable messages to the United States, also to William Dunn, CBS correspondent in Batavia, who passes them on to U. S. listeners. Interesting side-note: Brown, a real guy and a he-man through and through, is called "Ces-sie" by his wife . . .

Little do loudspeaker eavesdroppers know about the sizzling undercover feud that's going on between Fred Allen and Eddie Cantor. It all began when they started to compete for listening attention Wednesday nights at 9:00 p.m. EST. Allen hired Vick Knight, Cantor's producer. With Knight went Sidney Fields, better known to listeners as Mr. Guffy. Two weeks ago Cantor's praise agent left him also to join Allen. Climax was reached when Buddy Baer was announced as F. A.'s guest star for the Wednesday night after his fight with Louis, and the Cantor camp went to work and grabbed up heavyweight champ Louis for the same night. Special permission had to be granted by Camp Upton, where patriotic Joe is stationed as a private in the United States Army. Best quip put into Joe's mouth was "Now that I'm through with the Baers—I'm going after the snakes." But the biggest laugh in the story is Baer's remark after he was knocked out by Louis. Buddy advised listeners over a Mutual mike that he would tell all about it next Wednesday on Fred Allen's program. 'Tis said that Buddy rehearsed that line for days preceding the bout and that he concentrated so much on it that he forgot to duck! . . .

CHICAGO

By DON MOORE

As you may know by now, a new network, the Blue Network Co., Inc., took its first few independent steps through a series of conferences in Chicago recently. The Radio Corporation of America has split its Red and Blue NBC networks, looking toward sale of the Blue, as per FCC orders. There is much legal and commercial smoke rolling around the current status of the broadcasting trade, with the Government suing NBC and CBS, MBS suing NBC, NBC challenging the FCC in the courts, and NBC splitting its networks. What signposts are visible to the average listener? Unless he is particularly law-and-business conscious, he asks only, "What does it all (Continued on Page 32)

Frequency Modulation

A Department for the Rapidly Growing Audience of FM Listeners and for Thousands Who Want to Know About FM. It's Authentic and Newsy!

By DICK DORRANCE

Dick Dorrance, general manager of FM Broadcasters, Inc., is also a well-known writer. After graduating from Dartmouth in 1936, he worked for such newspapers as the Boston Herald-Traveler and the Rutland Herald, also for the Associated Press. He has written for The American Mercury, Sportsman Pilot, Colliers, This Week. He is already familiar to MOVIE-RADIO GUIDE readers for stories which have appeared in past issues.—The Editors.

RECENTLY, within the last twelve months or so, a new abbreviation has come into the vocabulary of thousands of radio listeners. Written cryptically as the two letters "FM," it means a new method of radio broadcasting which has been introduced to many important sections of the country. FM has won the acclaim of a small but swiftly growing audience because of several unique advantages the usual type of broadcasting does not possess.

FM stands for "frequency modulation." These words have a strong technical flavor that may frighten off the average radio fan, so we hasten to explain that they are merely an academic way of describing the new system. The letters "FM" are less formidable and have been quickly seized upon by a public already used to meeting the alphabet in everything from soup to the designations of Government agencies. In contrast to "frequency modulation," ordinary broadcasting is called "amplitude modulation" or—using the alphabet again—"AM."

What is FM and how does it work? We can answer the first half of that question easily enough. It's a new way of getting radio programs from the studio to your home without a trace of interference. A drawback, of course, is the fact that the broadcaster must install a different type of transmitter and you must have a receiver equipped for FM tuning.

You can't hear FM stations on your regular AM broadcast band because FM has a broadcast band all of its own.

The second part of that question—how does it work?—is a tough proposition to put into words. We can't tell you much about the technical innards of an FM receiver unless you know a good bit of radio science. The chances are you haven't studied the electronic principles of your present receiver—and without a grasp of these fundamentals, a description of how FM works would be sheer Sanskrit to you. After all, when you bought the set you have now it's unlikely you asked the man behind the counter for a technical explanation. Results were what you wanted—not an engineering lecture. However, on this page from week to week we expect to outline some of the workings of FM, making its intricacies clearer as we go along.

More important to you, as a radio listener, is an explanation of the ways FM can contribute to your listening enjoyment—an explanation of what it does rather than how it does it.

Offhand, we could list quite an array of FM's virtues that have combined to win it the title of "better broadcasting." There are three outstanding ones, however, which are the most important for the listener.

The first of these is FM's tonal fidelity. FM can make music, voices and sound-effects seem so real that you can't believe you aren't hearing the real thing. The miles between you and the broadcasting station just vanish. You might as well be right in the studio, and when the announcer speaks you think he's in your very living-room. FM can reproduce with crystal clarity every tone of the musical scale that the normal human ear can detect and appreciate (30 to 15,000 cycles).

This backdrop of silence means that FM must not be bothered by static and man-made interference. Thus we have its second major advantage. Static can really be divided into two kinds—the type produced by lightning and so familiar on summery night, and the variety you get from electric razors, ice-box motors, neon signs, leaky power lines and a hundred start of 1941 there were only eighteen low-power and experimental stations in the whole country using FM. They had limited ranges and, except for three of them, were all grouped in the northeastern United States.

It was not until March 1, 1941, that the first commercial FM station, W47NV in Nashville, Tenn., went on the air. A half-dozen more followed in quick order, and up to the present time sixty-three commercial FM stations in eighteen different states have been authorized by the Federal Communications Commission. Twenty-four are already on the air with regular program schedules, ranging from six to twenty-four hours a day. The thirty-nine others are busy completing installation of their transmitters, antennas and other equipment as fast as war-time exigencies will permit. There are also eleven experimental stations, most of which will shortly become commercial.

One year ago, if a radio listener took it into his head that he wanted to buy an FM receiver, he could make his choice from among the wares of about six manufacturers actually building such sets. Not all of them were very good sets. There was a tendency, as a matter of fact, for the stations to drift across the dial as the tubes warmed up. Quickly, however, these technical troubles were spiked one after another, and when the new 1942 models came out last fall they were, for the most part, excellent sets.

Today approximately twenty-five different manufacturers offer more than 125 varied models to the prospective FM listener. You'll find among them FM-AM table sets, console models, phonograph combinations with automatic record-changers, short-wave, and period furniture cabinets.

Although ninety-five percent of all FM sets are now equipped for reception of AM broadcast stations as well as FM, simply at the turn of a switch, it is also possible to buy adapter units which permit FM reception on regular AM receivers now in use. These adapter devices are not always satisfactory, since obviously the fine tonal reproduction of FM is limited by the loudspeaker on the AM set with which they are being used.

This weekly column of FM news and discussion has been inaugurated to serve the swiftly growing FM audience. There is much about FM which bears further explanation, there are mistaken notions that should be corrected, and a continual progress which must be reported. Letters from readers are always welcome. We shall be glad to answer your questions, and if you do not yet have FM service in your locality, advise you whether any is in prospect.

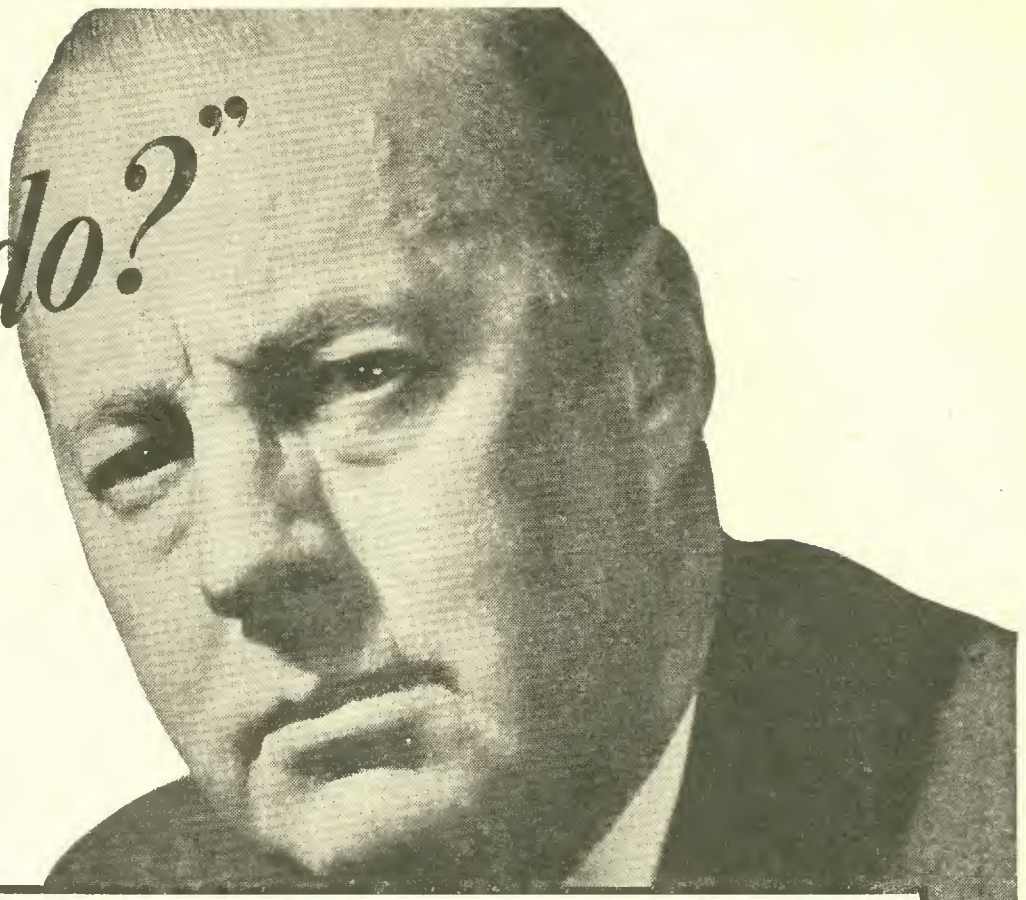

other man-made sources. Properly designed FM sets have a gadget called a "limiter," which strains out these noises and lets only the pure sound go through.

The third FM benefit is most noticeable to listeners who live in smaller towns and are bothered by cross-talk, fading stations, squeals (called "heterodynes") and stations that are constantly being bothered by other stations hundreds of miles away. With FM this doesn't happen. Another gadget called the "discriminator" lets you hear only the loudest station at any given spot on the dial. Distant signals can't wreck or break up your local reception. This, incidentally, makes it possible for hundreds and even thousands of FM stations to be built across the country, spaced quite closely, and each serving its own area without interference. And in a given locality there can be from three to eleven FM transmitters operating simultaneously.

The past twelve months, during which FM has gained so much momentum, prove rather plainly that the public appreciates and is enthusiastic about the sharp fidelity and crystal clarity of frequency-modulation broadcasting. As we have already pointed out, the total of sets in use rose from 15,000 to 250,000. At the

“What can I do?”

“LIKE millions of other Americans, I’ve asked myself one question repeatedly ever since these fateful words popped out of my radio:

“‘Japanese planes have bombed Hawaii!’

“Daily, nightly, I’ve turned this question over and over in my mind—with the reading of every news bulletin on the air and the appearance of every epic headline.

“What can I do—here at home?

“What can I do — while Americans are fighting and dying in the far reaches of the Pacific for freedom and for me?”

“What can I do?

“I’ve looked in my shaving mirror for an answer —and found none.

“I’ve seen only the perplexed face of a middle-aged man—a man too old to bear arms.

“I’ve glanced at my hands, too, a thousand times, only to learn a brutal truth.

“They are soft and white — strangers to the production line where only skilled hands are wanted now.”

“What can I do?

“Only last night I found the answer as my eyes fell on my wife’s knitting bag and my ears caught the click of her knitting needles.

“I could give to the Red Cross. I could answer its urgent call for funds, now so sorely needed.

“I could give to the limit of my means to aid and comfort those who are giving so much more.

“Yes — I could do something. Not much — but something.

“And I have — today.”

Introducing a New Department to Help Listeners Enjoy Fine Music. Here Is News, Background and Color, Interpretation, Complete Program Service

By ROBERT BAGAR

Robert Bagar's father wanted him to go into law or medicine, but after studying both, he turned to music. Under such noted teachers as Cesare Sodero and Gaetano Merola, he studied piano from the age of nine to twenty-five. In the early days of radio he played popular and classical music on many programs. Seven years ago he became Pitts Sanborn's assistant on the New York World-Telegram. He is an associate program annotator for the New York Philharmonic Society, has contributed to many newspapers and magazines.

THE Metropolitan Opera Company's broadcast of Verdi's "Rigoletto" brings to mind some half-forgotten facts about this work, one of the most securely established in the entire operatic repertory.

When it was first produced, at the Teatro la Fenice, Venice, March 11, 1851, it had an enthusiastic reception. Today, some ninety years later, it can be still exciting, emotionally, as well as interesting as a piece of dramatic construction, and the chances are that the same may be said about it many years from now.

Verdi had already put to his credit sixteen operas before "Rigoletto," all of which, however, had served merely to earn him a reputation scarcely higher than that of the popular composer—and within the borders of his own Italy at that. With "Rigoletto" his fame flew across the frontiers. A new operatic genius had suddenly arisen, a composer whose vigorous and positive and individualistic music could break through the hallowed conventions of his time and bring something new to Italian opera.

"Rigoletto" is in three acts, libretto by Francesco Maria Piave, based on Victor Hugo's drama "Le Roi s'amuse." The story centers around Rigoletto, court-jester to the Duke of Mantua, a dissolute young monarch, ever on the alert for a fresh love. Besides providing laughs for his lord, Rigoletto is his indispensable assistant in amatory intrigue.

Early in the first act Rigoletto and his employer are cursed by old Count Monterone, whose daughter has fallen victim to the combined villainies of the Duke and Rigoletto. The curse lingers in the jester's mind as he repairs to his own home, where his daughter Gilda is kept hidden from prying eyes. On the way he is accosted by Sparafucile, a professional murderer, who offers his services—at a price—should they ever be needed.

The Duke, however, has fallen in love with Gilda, entirely unaware that she is his jester's daughter. Through a ruse, engineered by several of the court's profligate noblemen, Gilda is abducted and brought to the Duke's palace. Rigoletto discovers her absence and knows full well what has transpired. He takes Gilda back to his arms, vowing vengeance against the Duke.

The murderer, Sparafucile, is pressed into service, but his sister Maddalena becomes enamored of the Duke and prevails on her brother to slay, instead, the next stranger who enters their tavern. Gilda knows her father's homicidal intentions. She also is aware of Sparafucile's new scheme. So, dressed as a man, she seeks admission to the murderer's abode and is run through by his sword, making the supreme sacrifice for the sake of an unattainable love. Rigoletto, of course, discovers the horrifying truth.

Verdi's opera originally ran a close parallel to Hugo's drama. It was first called "La Maledizione" ("The Curse"), but it ran afoul of the censorship laws imposed by the Austrian military governor. The idea of assassination was utterly repugnant to this high authority and placing royalty in an unfavorable light also caused him much concern. Matters were arranged, nevertheless, with some alterations among the "dramatis personae" and still others with respect to the plot.

But for a stroke of great good luck, Schubert's "Unfinished Symphony" (No. 8 in B minor) might never have been brought to the light. The piece, which is scheduled for the Philharmonic-Symphony broadcast, was written in 1822, six years before Schubert's death. The composer dedicated it to the Musikverein of Graz in gratitude for an honor bestowed upon him. However, he sent the manuscript to his friend Anselm Huetterbrenner for delivery to the Musikverein, but it never reached its destination. It lay, yellowing with age, in the possession of the aforementioned Anselm, for no reasons that can be imagined, and not until 1865 was it "discovered" by Johann Herbeck, conductor of the Vienna Musikfreunde concerts.

—Ray Lee Jackson

In order to obtain it, though, Herbeck was obliged to recourse to some superior strategy. He promised Anselm Huetterbrenner that he would like to play one of his works at some concert of the Musikfreunde. The latter agreed with alacrity and so genial and responsive did he become that when Herbeck inquired casually about unproduced Schubert compositions a drawer was opened with speed of light and out of it came the prize. The "Unfinished" was given its first performance at a concert of the Gesellschaft der Musikfreunde in Vienna on December 17, 1865.

Someone has had the bright idea that Schubert left his symphony unfinished deliberately, as a sort of tribute to the "Glory of the Incomplete." In opposition to that theory, however, is the hard and cold and unromantic fact that Schubert had actually sketched part of a third movement and had even gone so far as to orchestrate nine bars of it.

Fritz Busch, who will conduct the Philharmonic-Symphony in the program referred to, is a member of what may loosely be called a dynastic family of musicians. His brother Adolf is a noted violinist and conductor, his son Hans is a well-known stage director, his father Carl was an established organist and conductor. Mr. Busch himself was, in great measure, responsible for a Verdi revival in Germany some two decades ago. He has recently conducted performances of the New Opera Company in New York, and he is also known through his directorship of the Glyndebourne Festival opera shows in Sussex, England. He has conducted several orchestras in this country during previous visits.

I notice that several excerpts from a composition by a talented American composer are scheduled for the CBS "Milestones in American Music" program. They are from Robert Russell Bennett's "Sketches from an American Theater," which he wrote some ten years ago. The piece has an interesting background, having to do with Mr. Bennett's reactions to certain work he was doing at the time, namely, orchestrating the scores of Broadway musical shows.

"Sketches from an American Theater" is an ironic, amusing commentary on the scene, constructed in the form of a Concerto Grosso for Dance Band and Symphony Orchestra, as sly a piece of originality as you can think of. The titles of the movements are comical enough and they give the tip-off on the composer's intentions. They are, "Dialogue: Ingenue and Juvenile," "Theme Song," "Comedy Scene and Blackout" and "Finale with Flags." For his third section Mr. Bennett devised a "swing" fugato, which isn't too easy to play, and "Theme Song" harpoons the idea of saccharine melody in an immensely saccharine manner.

Mr. Bennett has few illusions. He admits he did the Broadway thing be-

Australians Ask Aid

LIKE the Australians! I like their straightforward honesty; their sincerity. A key to the Australian character may be derived from their short-wave broadcasts of late. They are asking for military help. Although they have a continent larger than the whole United States, they have a population of only seven million people. They are willing but just don't have enough man power, enough equipment. The speaker the other morning put it this way: "We have the largest land forces in our history, but you must realize that we require not only military forces but must provide for home defense and for man power to run our essential industries. We need help and we are looking to our mighty allies. We who have always done our share in helping the allies even to sending our troops over ten thousand miles from home to fight in Libya, in Greece, in Syria, do not apologize now for asking for your help. We ask it not for ourselves alone but for the cause of freedom, for the sake of every free man on this earth." I hope that Australia gets this help. Australia can act as a vast supply and raw-material supply for the democracies. We need Australia as bad as she needs us.

Predicts Hitler's Downfall

Louis de Wohl, distinguished historian, author and astrologer, talked the other day to England on WRUL's famous "Friendship Bridge" program. Among other things he spoke of the fact that Hitler studies the stars. Said De Wohl: "Astrology is not new—nor is its deep penetrating study. It is one of the oldest scientific pursuits in the world. It has little to do with what the general public conceives it to be. I have studied this science for twelve years, and frankly am still many light years away from knowing all there is to know about it. I do know, however, from personal contact and experience that Hitler follows the advice of some of the most-learned astrologers in Europe. I know who they are. I have some of their correspondence on the subject. It must be admitted that their knowledge has helped Hitler a great deal, and when he has acted against it, he has failed, as in Russia. But the end is approaching. The time is coming nearer and nearer when the stars will not help him anymore. Hitler's astrologers know it, too. They will have to lie flatly if they want to paint a rosy picture to the former house-painter. Hitler's stars are setting, and the 'Rising Sun' in the Orient will set also. Let us work for that day, and as sure as the stars are moving in their rightful courses, the time will come when the two great democracies will stand on 'Friendship Bridge' and watch the dawn together."

Manila Invaders Irked

Officials of WRUL, Boston, are chuckling inwardly over the news that General MacArthur has conveyed that the Japanese are attempting to wreck all radios in the islands, saying that the Japanese are convinced that a good deal of damage is being done them by broadcasts that are coming through from America.

WRUL was the first station to broadcast in Tagalog—the official language of the Philippines—together with English. Twice each week over station WRUL an appropriate broadcast in Tagalog is given from the Boston studios. The commentator is a citizen of the Philippines who is studying in this country. Since members of his family are still in the islands, he protects them by using the name Andres Bonifacio. The original Andres Bonifacio was known as "the scourge of the Spaniards" during the Philippine revolutions of the late 1890's.

Despite the seizure of Manila and other parts of the islands by the Japanese, it is felt by the staff of WRUL that a considerable listening audience still exists in the islands and it is assumed that broadcasts in their native language will be a potent factor in the building and maintaining of morale in the Philippines.

KGEI Speeds Programs to Asia

I have mentioned several times in this department the urgent need for more West Coast short-wave transmitters to supplement our heretofore inadequate program and news service to Asia. KGEI, San Francisco, sole short-wave outlet west of the Mississippi, had been doing a splendid job considering the one 50,000-watt transmitter at its disposal. Realizing that something must be done, and that immediately, to give a better reception coverage in Asia and the South Seas, the extensive facilities of the huge commercial transmitting layout of Radio Corporation of America Communications, at Bolinas, California, were engaged to supplement the equipment at KGEI. Now the General Electric station at San Francisco is broadcasting on as many as four transmitters in addition to its own. The following Bolinas frequencies have been used in addition to KGEI's own channels of 15.33 and 9.67 megs: KEN (6.845), KEL (6.86), KEB (6.89), KEE (7.715), KEJ (9.01), KKQ (11.95), KLL (13.72), KQG (18.00).

Few Amateurs on Air

Prior to the beginning of the world war it was possible to receive amateur transmissions from over one hundred countries. Immediately after war was declared all amateurs in the British Empire, France and Germany were ordered to dismantle their equipment. As country after country was embroiled in the whirlpool, the list of active amateurs became smaller and smaller until finally only those of the Americas and the outlying possessions of the United States were left. When the United States entered the war our own amateurs ceased to operate. Several Latin countries declared war against the Axis almost at once and more hams silenced their transmitters. During the past month amateur stations in Costa Rica, Chile, Colombia and Venezuela closed down. At the time of writing, amateurs in Cuba, Mexico, Argentina, Uruguay, Brazil, Peru and Ecuador are still transmitting rather half-heartedly, but very likely before long even these will be ordered to leave the air, and the once populous and jolly amateur bands will have become as silent and deserted as the proverbial graveyard.

RICHARD KENT, the Blue Network's "Traveling Cook," is in a dither these days trying to keep abreast of the food-import situation. Kent is restricting his radio recipes to dishes whose ingredients may be easily purchased in war-time. Already he has struck over two hundred of his masterpieces from his list and most of his spare time is spent in constantly checking the nation's import companies.

CHARLES LAUGHTON'S interest in the theater dates back to his early childhood. At an age when most boys are wearing out the knees of their breeches playing marbles, he had already become adept at sneaking off to see the Pierrots (blackface troupes). He laughed then, and he laughs now at the memory of the dire admonition his family voiced at the time: "You'd better watch out or you'll end up on the stage, young man!"

Streamlined martial music will keep the soldiers swinging as well as singing during the war, in the opinion of BILLY MILLS. The NBC maestro, a bandleader in the last conflict, says, "There'll be no holding down all the young swing musicians who are joining the Army. When swing comes up against tradition, tradition can't win."

GARRY MOORE. "Service With a Smile" m.c., recalls the day he toiled up a mountain-side in Switzerland thinking happy thoughts about the unspoiled wilderness. His bliss was rudely shattered when he reached the top and walked smack into a neat and busy tea-room, which was reached by tourists from a cog railway running a hundred yards or so from the primitive trail Garry followed.

Add honors for CHARITA BAUER, Henry's charming sister Mary in NBC's "The Aldrich Family": A scroll designating her as "The Sweetheart of the Twin City Bowling Club, Inc." for appearing in a Red Cross benefit stage revue at Tonawanda, New York.

Star Sparkles

NORMAN CORWIN'S many activities do not limit his yen to play with sound-effects, the director-producer constantly endeavoring to create new ones. On the Coast recently he sought the true sound of hammer on anvil. The weighty anvil was moved from backdrop to footlights of studio stage, to wings, sides, etc., without satisfaction. When Harry Essman, engineer, carried it to the center of the studio, row ten, center, it proved the perfect spot. Corwin admitted, however, it might be a bit difficult to use when audiences were present.

Stevenson's rock-like face.

The attorney for the defense had achieved a greater effect than he had planned. But he knew the value of a dramatic moment and he waited until the courtroom had become so silent that the ticking of the court clock could be heard. Then, in a quiet, flat tone, he said, "That will be all, Mrs. Blake."

Portia felt beaten to her knees. She had no chance to defend herself. She had no way to disprove the lies that now were public scandal. The world had never looked so black. She'd lost her job as attorney for the bank because of this thing already, and now, she felt, she was on the point of losing something closer to her heart—the fight for slum clearance. Who would listen to her now?

With bowed head, she walked from the courtroom. Outside she saw Walter and felt sorry for him. The thing he had done was motivated only by his own generous nature. True, it had harmed her more than it had helped, for after all Walter still was married to Arline. But Walter had meant well. Portia walked over to him.

"I understand," was all she said.

"But, Portia, I was such a fool. After that outburst of mine, all the rotten gossip that is circulating around town will be accepted as truth."

Portia clenched her fists and struck out her pretty chin.

"Don't talk like that, Walter. Anybody can believe in and fight for something when the ultimate victory is a cinch. It's the lost causes that take courage. I've started this fight . . . and I'll see it through. After all, it isn't you and I that matter, it's the conviction of Roder that's at stake."

It was only a moment afterward that word came from the courtroom that Roder had been found guilty!

"You see, Walter. That proves my statement about his payment of graft. My word is vindicated."

"Sure," said Walter, "but what good will that do now? Who'll believe you after this?"

Walter wanted to know what Portia would do next, advised her to drop the whole fight for slum clearance.

"You're bucking something too big for you, Portia, and the quicker you realize it and get out, the better off you'll be."

The events of the afternoon had left Portia too tired now to argue, too tired to think. She told Walter he should try to patch things up with Arline.

"She's only doing this to me because she loves you, Walter. Can't you see that? What might have been for you and me is a thing of the past. Please go back to Arline."

Portia returned to her office and tried to still her ears against the cries of the newsboys, who were shouting of the "scandal" that involved Parkerstown's leading woman attorney.

Meanwhile, at the office of Boss Connelly, there was a quiet air of satisfaction despite the fidgets of Mayor Bartlett.

"That Stevenson was quick to get back to Chicago," the Mayor said. "It's too bad after we paid him so much that he balled up that case. Roder never should have been convicted. This Blake woman is getting too close to us."

"Forget Roder, Bartlett. Stevenson was worth every cent we paid him—and more."

"But Roder was convicted, and the conviction is proof that Roder did steal that money instead of putting it into repairs for the tenement."

Connelly laughed and bit the tip off a corona.

"Roder," he said, "is the least of our worries. Let him stay in the pen and rot. As far as the 'next question' is concerned, nobody'll ask it. Thanks to the nice job the Chronicle is doing, everybody's attention is on Mrs. Blake's love-life. Nobody'll believe a woman like that!"

Portia was tired and left her office early that night.

Kathie Marsh, her best friend, who worked in a research laboratory, was waiting on the front porch of the little Blake cottage. She was ready to offer Portia sympathy, but Portia brushed her off.

"Bein' licked once just makes you fight harder," she said cryptically, and went in to make a telephone call. Kathie listened with amazement when she heard Portia ask for Arline Manning and make an appointment to meet Arline for the following evening.

Arline kept Portia waiting when she called the next night. Finally, when she did come down, she greeted Portia with great coolness.

"After all, Mrs. Blake," she said, "I gave you the chance to get out of town before bringing this disbarment charge. You didn't take that chance. Why come whining to me now?"

"I'm not whining. I've just started to fight, Mrs. Manning. Everything that's been said about Walter and me, you know in your heart, is untrue. I've tried to send him back to you. I think you both could be happy if you'd just forget about me."

"Is that what you've come to tell me? Or did you come about the disbarment case? Well, you've taken quite a beating, Mrs. Blake, and I'm prepared to see that the whole case before the bar committee is dropped if you will leave town."

"I didn't come to bargain or beg," Portia said coolly. "I'm fully prepared to take care of myself. I want no favors."

"Then what do you want?" Arline looked at her long, tapering fingers and rubbed the blood-red nails against the smooth palm of her hand.

Portia tried to explain that the reason she went into this whole thing—the charges she had brought against Roder and everything else were only her first step in trying to get a break for the people in the slums.

"Now," said Portia, "the only way I can make myself heard is to clear my name. Therefore, I'm charging you, Mrs. Manning, and Kirk Roder, with suborning perjury. I think that I can prove it, too."

Arline frowned, then smiled quickly in her hard, smooth way. Her white teeth gleamed in the lamplight.

"Isn't it enough, Mrs. Blake, that you've taken my husband? Must you try to get me involved in the same scandal and disgrace? Why don't you forget the whole thing?"

"I've tried to tell you, Mrs. Manning, and you won't listen. I came here today to warn you. I fight fair, but when I fight I promise you that I fight hard. Good-by, Mrs. Manning."

(To be continued next week)

The Radio Front

mean to my listening?" The answer is: It means nothing revolutionary to what comes out the loudspeaker except that you'll hear announcers say now and then, "This is the Blue Network," and you'll hear programs over four distinct rival networks instead of the former three, one of which was Siamese twins.

Important Chicago programs that go with the Blue Network's emergence to independence and presumably with its ultimate sale are the following: "Breakfast Club," "National Farm and Home Hour," "Quiz Kids," "Club Matinee," "Service With a Smile," "Tom Mix," "Musical Millwheel," "In Care of Aggie Horn," "Secret City" and "Flying Patrol" . . .

Among the programs wiped out by war conditions, are "Treet Time," starring Buddy Clark, and the Wayne King show, both on CBS. Because of the scarcity of material for manufacture of the sponsors' products, the Wayne King program will close February 14, and "Treet Time" will ring down the curtain February 20. Wayne and his orchestra have a theater tour through the Southwest lined up. The bandleader, long a private pilot and known for his interest in aviation, has joined four other Chicago air enthusiasts to form the Aviation Cadet Council, which will help recruiting officer Lieutenant Colonel J. L. Bachus promote air-corps enlistments in this area . . .

It looks as if Franklyn MacCormack, announcer-poetry-reader of the cosmetics program featuring Wayne's band, may go along on the tour as part of the theater act. King and MacCormack are not only close friends, they've developed into a unique team of words-and-music artists. The recently released Victor record on which Wayne's orchestra plays a musical background for Mac's reading of two romantic poems looks like a real hit. Over 100,000 of the novel platters were sold in the first month. If you listen to any of the local stations that play records, you'll hear this one repeatedly. One recording-program emcee met MacCormack the other day and said to him jokingly, "I'm glad the Navy is getting me so I can get away from that so-and-so record of yours. The fans are driving me nuts with requests for it" . . .

The Art Institute has been featuring an exhibit of brush drawings done by "Quiz Kid" Cynthia Cline to illustrate a nature column written for newspapers by "Quiz Kid" Gerard Darrow, and they're classy . . . Larry Larsen, well-known radio organist for a decade, died January 18 of a heart ailment. Rotund, likeable Larry was a native Chicagoan. He had been heard recently on Tony Wons' "Scrap Book" program and the transcribed "Songs of a Dreamer" series . . . Mutual's "Spotlight Bands" program made its first visit to Chicago with a series of dance-band broadcasts between January 19 and January 29. Bands which brought Chicago fans flocking to the Civic Theater were those of Les Brown, Art Jarrett, Eddy Howard, Jack Teagarden, Art Kassel, Xavier Cugat, Dick Jurgens and Griff Williams . . .

Irony of the week: Owen Vinson, producer of "That Brewster Boy," parked his car near the Loop to visit the tire-rationing offices. He needed a new tire badly. When he got back to his car without the permit to buy even one tire, he found it didn't matter, for by then he needed four. Tire thieves.

GENERAL ENTERTAINMENT

By ARTHUR MILLER

Easterners who had heard so much about the prospering Hollywood night-spot, Ciro's, were shocked to hear that the favorite rendezvous of the wealthiest motion-picture and radio stars had closed. Said Tom Seward, the manager: "Business in the high-class night-clubs is simply shot."

Why?

Among several reasons advanced are that the stars are too busy entertaining at war-relief benefits to spend time at night-clubs. Also that celebrities feel a sense of guilt night-clubbing at such a serious time.

Yet those night-life pictures of Londoners, so prominently displayed in the American press in the earlier days of the war when London was being subjected to unmerciful bombings, transmitted a feeling of security; the people could sling and dance and make the most of their existence although the Nazis were apt to drop high-explosive bombs right into their whisky-and-soda.

In New York, the clubs are coming back into their own after a lull the first few weeks of the war . . .

Out of the realm of semi-obscurity into which Chico Marx settled after the famous Marx Brothers act disbanded, he now emerges as a bandleader. His band, called "Chico Marx and His Ravelles," has a good share of musical merit. For the debut, Chico chose the stage of a Brooklyn, New York, theater. After completing an engagement there, the entire country is his field . . .

Rolling your way too may be the "Roller Follies of 1942," the first professional roller-skating show produced in New York. A nineteen-year-old, Gloria Nord, is the prima ballerina. While Miss Nord's finesse on roller skates is being exhibited for the first time professionally, Sonja closed her own Hollywood Ice Revue January 27, after a two-and-a-half-months transcontinental tour. A rumor persists that Sonja, the highest paid sports star, will retire . . .

Neither are the Army men without their own talent in the arts. An art and photograph exhibition sponsored by the Hobby Guild of America, called "Life in the Service," is about to be shown in cities throughout the country. Works from soldiers in thirty-six states, representing sixty-seven camps, are included in the exhibition, which should not be missed by any American . . .

As an added service to its readers MOVIE-RADIO GUIDE introduces this new weekly feature, "What's Cooking!" Guest cooks have been invited to give their favorite recipes and a monthly contest will be run to determine the best recipe of the month. See below for details.—The Editors.

AMERICA is a nation of potato-eaters; I don't know offhand what the figures are but the United States probably consumes more potatoes annually than any other country in the world, population notwithstanding. Since potatoes are a solid, nourishing food and since they originated in this country, that's as it should be. But until recently similar starch foods, such as rice, which is even more economical, richer in vitamins and just as tasty, have been neglected by comparison.

Now with all our brave new knowledge of vitamins, and the necessity for economizing without stinting on essential diet in the face of the national defense effort, rice has come into its own. Not the smooth, white rice with its vitamin content all polished away, but brown rice, wild rice.

It's funny how this strange, super-mechanized civilization of ours sometimes, for all its wonders, just about destroys itself. You've seen those arresting toothpaste ads which picture a debutante gnawing on a bone, pointing out that dental decay is in part due to the fact that modern people eat soft foods, unlike their primitive forebears. It's true that primitives, as a rule, have superior teeth. Be that as it may, there's an even more important point to be made in this connection—the fact that the gradual civilized refinement of many basic foods, such as bread and rice, has resulted in the tossing away of many valuable vitamins. With the demand for whiter bread, for smoother and whiter rice, millers ground away the good parts of the grains. They didn't know it, and neither did the scientists.

WE KNOW it now. And American bakers and millers are now restoring the lost vitamins.

There are so many delicious ways of preparing that staple of the pantry shelf, rice, that it's a good idea to prepare a big pot of it whenever you cook it so that you can use it in other ways.

Jean Dickenson, NBC coloratura soprano star of "American Album of Familiar Music," tells of an excellent and economical recipe for left-overs: "Chop up one or two good-sized onions; fry them in butter until golden brown. To them add any vegetables you may have left over in your refrigerator, such as corn, green peas, etc. Heat this thoroughly; then add sliced, cooked ham, broken up into very small pieces; mix this with the left-over rice. Now make a thin omelet with one egg. Break it apart with a fork and spread over the top."

Thus, with the addition of a green salad and perhaps some fruit for dessert, you have a complete meal—economical, rich in vitamins and tasty.

Cook-of-the-Month Club!

"What's Cooking!" will offer five dollars for the best recipe submitted each month which uses the ingredient suggested by this column. The prize-winning recipe for March must use rice as its prime ingredient. All entries for March must be postmarked no later than February 25 and addressed to "What's Cooking!" Editor, 551 Fifth Avenue, New York, New York. The winning recipe each month will be printed as a feature of this department; all recipes submitted become the property of "What's Cooking!" and will not be returned.

Safe New Way in Feminine Hygiene Gives Continuous Action for Hours

● It is every wife's right to know certain facts. Her greatest happiness, her physical and mental well-being may be at stake. She cannot go by what others tell; she must know. Deodorize—not by temporarily masking—but by destroying odors. Spread greaseless, protective coating to cleanse antiseptically and give continuous medication for hours.

Yet! Zonitors are safe for delicate tissues. Powerful—yet non-poisonous, non-caustic. Even help promote gentle healing. No apparatus; nothing to mix. At all druggists.

FEMININE FORUM
 By ALBERTA NORTH
That Crowning Touch!

A LONG around the middle of winter one's pep and vitality frequently seem to be at a low ebb, and one of the first places to reveal your physical lassitude is your hair. The condition of your hair might almost be called a barometer of your health—a rundown condition, colds or fevers will be almost immediately evident. You'll be smart, therefore, if you'll take a little extra trouble with your hair these days.

You're probably tired of being reminded to brush your hair daily, or possibly you've already become one of those one-hundred-stroke addicts like the little baldheaded man we heard of recently who, suddenly becoming conscience-stricken, whether he was at a bar or in the street, would produce a brush and methodically start brushing his few remaining hairs. Nevertheless, the importance of brushing really can't be stressed too often. Beautiful hair must be healthy hair and, by stimulating circulation, which, in turn, nourishes the scalp cells, brushing will make it so. If your hair feels dry or is unmanageable, it's a good trick to rub a bit of Vaseline hair tonic into it before you brush your hair.

A brush that is curved to conform with the contour of your head is just about the most efficient type you can choose. Pro-Phy-Lac-Tic's Jewelite Roll-Wave brush is designed on this principle, and results in a "rolling brushing" which better accomplishes the massage of the scalp.

And while we're on the subject of brushing, a thought or two would be in order about the care of your brush. If your brushing is going to be one hundred percent effective, it's important that you start with an absolutely clean brush. Make it a part of your shampoo routine to wash your brush in a warm suds water and rinse it as you would your hair.

Just when you shampoo and what you use depends upon the type of hair you have and the condition of your scalp. Whatever type of hair you have, be sure to select a shampoo that is mild and pure. Many women find that the melting down into liquid form of pure Castille bar soap is adequate; others prefer a prepared shampoo like Halo. Some women will be pleased with the new Tussy Soapless Shampoo, which cleans the hair thoroughly without froth.

If your hair is oily you will want to give it two and possibly three good sudsings, even allowing the suds to remain on for a few minutes to clean out every last trace of oiliness. If your hair is dry and your scalp inclined to scaldiness you will lather your hair only once, but completely, and then remove the suds as quickly as possible. And if your hair is oily you should shampoo it every week; every ten days or two weeks, if it is dry.

FORMULA for effective shampooing requires that rinsings be many and thorough. Every last trace of soap and suds must be removed if you want lights and luster in your locks. Further, you'll give your hair an added loveliness if you'll get into the habit of using a prepared coloring rinse. These are not dyes but merely add natural lights to your hair. They wash out with each shampoo and serve to heighten the natural coloring of your hair.

Nestle's Colorinse and Lovalon are both excellent for this purpose. They are inexpensive and the wide variety of shades which they offer enable you to select the one that exactly matches your own hair coloring. If you've never used one, make a point of trying out this idea the very next time you shampoo. We're willing to wager that there'll be compliments handed out in your direction.

Bandstand Notes

By Maurice Granger

AMERICAN soldiers stationed in Iceland were at first accorded frosty glances by Icelandic girls, but thanks to Yankee ingenuity the "stulkas" (Icelandic girls) are "melting." The trick was very simple—the Yanks simply offered to teach the girls "jeeterbugging" at a series of winter dances. The "stulkas" turned out in droves, now kick, twist and gyrate as well as any lass in the States.

Bandata

A letter from the Golden Gate Quartet is signed "Recordially yours" . . . Maxine Sullivan will appear in Orson Welles' next film, which depicts the rise of jazz . . . Patti Andrews will have a romantic part in the next Andrews Sisters flicker . . . Bonnie Baker is finally leaving Orrin Tucker's band . . . The Roseland Ballroom, a New York landmark (and still going strong), has grossed nearly $20,000,000 since 1919, the year it opened . . . Glenn Miller's "Sunset Serenade" program has switched from NBC to MBS. It is dedicated to the men in the military service . . . All the Lombardo band boys have odd nicknames. Guy is no exception. His nickname is "Tempo" . . . The first rule in song-writing is to keep your words simple and pronounceable. Yet Kay Kyser comes up with a tune, "Popocatepetl," which most people can't spell.

RECORD MENDED

DECCA: Andrews Sisters' "The Shrine of St. Cecilia"; Ella Fitzgerald's "You Don't Know What Love Is"; The Three Suns' "William Tell Overture." VICTOR: Lanny Ross' "You Haunt My Heart." BLUEBIRD: Freddy Martin's "Until the Stars Fall Down." COLUMBIA: Horace Heidt's "I Wish I Had a Sweetheart." OKEH: Benny Goodman's "Ev'rything I Love."

SLACKER!

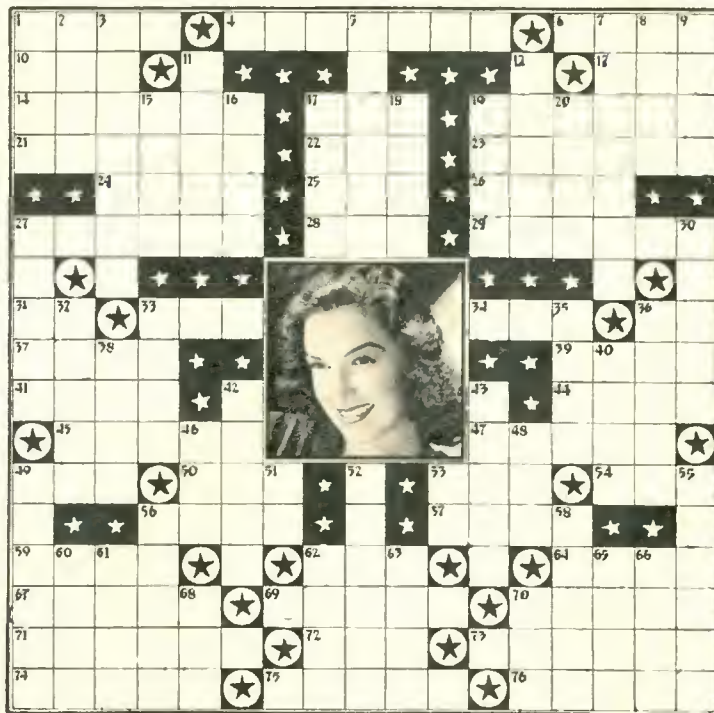

THE MAN who evades his duty to his country is called a "slacker." It's a harsh word.

What about the man who evades his duty to himself, and to his family—by failing to prepare for success in his line of work? What about the man who allows his family to struggle along on a small income, when by a little effort he could achieve promotion and increase his earnings? Isn't that man a "slacker" too?

In any case, it's a fact that today 100,000 ambitious American men are studying I. C. S. Courses in 400 business and technical subjects—getting ready for the bigger jobs, the fatter pay-checks. Any I. C. S. representative will gladly help you arrange your own "preparedness program"—this coupon, mailed today, will bring you complete information.
