BUY A POPPY ON POPPY DAY

PERHAPS the one word heard most on the lips of Americans everywhere today is SERVICE, and buying a poppy on Poppy Day is one way of serving which helps not only all war veterans in government hospitals but includes, this year, aid to service men in the present conflict and their families as well.

Adopted as the official flower of the American Legion in 1919, all the flowers sold on Poppy Day are made by disabled veterans in hospitals throughout the nation. This work, for which they are paid, represents their only source of income, and the activity it affords these men has been called invaluable by medical authorities from the standpoint of occupational benefits. The service began back in 1922 when Veterans of Foreign Wars inaugurated the custom of having ex-service men sell Buddy poppies for the benefit of disabled soldiers, with each flower carrying the tag: "Honor the Dead by Helping the Living." The sale of these poppies every year since has become a custom now in most of the forty-eight states as well as in other countries. In America the day is usually observed yearly on the Saturday nearest May 28, which commemorates the capture of Cantigny in 1918, first offensive by American forces on the Western Front in World War I. In some sections of the United States, Poppy Day is referred to as "Buddy Day" or "Flower Day," but the purpose, irrespective of name, is the same—to serve America's war veterans in a vital way.

Digging back into the short history of our present Poppy Day custom, it is heart-warming to know, too, that it was born in the France of yesterday as a service of love, and fostered by her school children, who each year placed flowers on the graves of American soldiers buried in their country.

But it remained for one soldier-poet of World War I to keep alive the tradition of the red poppy as associated with our heroic dead—Lieut. John McCrae, with the medical corps of the First Canadian Contingent, who died in France, January 28, 1918, after four years of service on the Western Front. His poignant verses titled "In Flanders Fields" were written in the trenches during the second battle of Ypres. They finally found their way to London, and were published first in "Punch" on December 9, 1915. Because they represent such a vital link between today's and yesterday's Poppy Days, we quote them here for all those who will serve on Poppy Day this year by buying the symbol of sacrifice that honors America's war dead and helps those who still carry on the fight with the foe in the present world conflict:

"In Flanders Fields the poppies grow
Between the crosses, row on row,
That marks their place; and in the sky
The larks, still bravely singing, fly
Scarce heard amid the guns below.

We are the dead. Short days ago
We lived, felt dawn, saw sunset glow,
Loved and were loved, and now we lie
In Flanders Fields.

Take up our quarrel with the foe;
To you from failing hands we throw
The torch; be yours to hold it high.

If ye break faith with us who die
We shall not sleep, though poppies grow
In Flanders Fields."

So when you buy a poppy this momentous year of 1942, keep in mind that in a small way you, too, are keeping the faith, fighting the fight on the home front that will help our men over there in the struggle for freedom for all men everywhere!

SHIRLEY TEMPLE'S

Secret Hobby

KEEPING a secret in Hollywood is just about as easy as finding the proverbial needle in a haystack; yet now and then some star does manage it until a chance word or a spontaneous gesture gives it away—and completely, as Shirley Temple did recently at CBS rehearsal of “Junior Miss,” airplane show in which she is now starring. Until she spontaneously picked up the hammers of Charlie Price’s xylophone and started playing, no one in radio or movie circles was aware that Shirley had been hiding a musical talent. The ease with which the little star played electrified her impromptu audience, and MOVIE-RADIO GUIDE was the first to get the facts as well as the first picture of Shirley xylophoning, right. Digging into this deep, dark secret, it developed that La Temple has a full-size vibraphone in her special quarters at home which she plays a good deal. Heretofore, those who guard her interests had a “no story, no pictures for publication” ruling on her secret hobby and talent. In fact, those who heard her for the first time were as surprised as the New York college professor who toured out-of-way spots in Europe and the Orient before the war and was astonished to find that the children there were interested in only one famous American—Shirley Temple. A few of them even had Shirley Temple dolls. After that experience, should the good professor peruse the 1942 edition of “Who’s Who” in America, he will probably not be so surprised to find Shirley Temple one of the youngest of the thirty-two thousand notables listed, and rating twenty-six lines in this roster of America’s great. In fact, her biography gets more space than John D. Rockefeller, Jr. About the same time Shirley’s secret hobby came to light, she revealed a secret talent on her fourteenth birthday (April 23) when she entertained two dozen pan-American youngsters, children of nine Central, South American consuls. Everyone had fun at the ice-cream-and-cake feast served at Brittingham’s Columbia Square restaurant, next door to Shirley’s CBS broadcasting studio. Later she played hostess to the group at her “Junior Miss” show, took time to sign autographs for each guest, sever for a red-headed representative from Mexico, who explained, “I got friends at home who are expecting them.” Shirley’s warm friendliness and hospitality marked her as a true ambassador of good-will among our pan-American neighbors. Certainly no young matron twice her age could have shown more charm and grace than little Shirley Temple, who has been a movie star eleven of her fourteen years, and whose secret hobby for the xylophone astonished listeners at “Junior Miss” rehearsal.

"ONLY UNCLE SAM is big enough to sponsor it," said Bob Burns. Here's one sample of the kind of casts that present "Command Performance" for our fighters abroad: L. to r., conductor Gordon Jenkins, Lou Costello, producer Vick Knight, writer Glenn Wheaton, Shirley Temple, announcer Paul Douglas, Bud Abbott, Fanny ("Snooks") Brice, Hanley ("Daddy") Stafford

For SOLDIERS Only

In "Command Performance" All the Stars "Give" for the Boys Abroad

PROBABLY you haven't heard it at all. Certainly you haven't heard much about it. Hardly a penny has been spent on it. But undoubtedly "Command Performance" is broadcasting's most pretentious piece of entertainment. It's produced by the War Department exclusively for short-wave broadcasting to America's armed forces abroad, and nothing's too good for our fighters. "Command Performance" draws upon the talents of America's top-flight entertainers. Not one star has declined. All work without pay. So does radio's ace producer, Vick Knight, who gave up lucrative commercial work to give full time to the project. So do originator-writer Glenn Wheaton and all others connected with the show. The show gets its title from the fact that performers appear in response to requests from service men abroad, making each broadcast actually a command performance. Not all the "commands" are for celebrities. One grease-monkey in Trinidad was lonesome for the birds that used to wake him up on the farm back home in Indiana. Engineers recorded the songs of the birds. Fred Allen played the record, then thoughtfully added the traditional Bronx "bird" for New Yorkers who might be homesick for it, and especially for Herr Hitler, in case he might have been listening! A sergeant in North Ireland wanted to hear his dog bark. Queenie was brought to the mike and barked her greetings to her master at the behest of Kate Smith. Important link in the production of these shows is the Hollywood Victory Committee, which presents letters from the service men to the stars, delivers hard-to-get names, including some who never before have appeared before a microphone. The first series of the shows originated in New York, now come from Hollywood. It is released on eleven short-wave outlets, seventeen different beams. Although times of broadcast are in general carefully chosen to suit the listening convenience of the variously located armed forces, here is a partial working schedule for "Command Performance" broadcasts: Sunday, 11:30 a.m. EWT—WCBX and WCRC (beamed toward Europe); Sunday, 9:15 p.m. EWT—WCBX, WCRC and WCDA (beamed toward Canal Zone, West Indies, points south); Sunday, 10:00 a.m. EWT—WRCA, WNBI and WBOS.

BONITA + JACKIE = WORRY

Co-Starred in "Syncopation," Sweethearts off the Screen Wonder How Their Love-Scenes Will Register

ONE big reason Jackie Cooper and Bonita Granville are on pins and needles about their love-scenes in RKO's "Syncopation" is due to director William Dieterle's ruling that no player may see himself in one of his productions until the picture is ready for release. Being off-screen sweethearts, too, they're especially anxious to see themselves in their first truly grown-up love-scenes before the cameras. Says Bonita: "In a case like this, one wonders about so many things. But I'm glad it's Jackie I play those scenes with. I'm not so timid with him." Jackie echoes Bonita on all points except he doesn't admit he's timid, having played mildly romantic scenes with other lovelies in pictures. In "Syncopation," a jazz-music film, pair plays man-and-wife roles over period of twenty years. Which is quite a stretch for a couple of eighteen-year-olds like Jackie and Bonita to tackle. Because they were so worried over problem of love-scenes for picture, they went to Mr. Dieterle, asked him how they were doing in the romantic sequences. "Terrific!" he said genially, and walked away chuckling to himself. That was comforting, but Bonita and Jackie are going to worry until they see themselves as others will see them!

—Fred Hendrickson
TEAMED as romantic twosome in RKO's "Syncopation," Jackie Cooper, Bonita Granville, very much in love off the screen, too, are definitely worried over how their love-scenes are going to register before the movie cameras

IF SCENE at right can be taken as an example, we should say that romantic sequences are going to be extra-special. Movie-goers will have chance to judge for themselves when the film (released May 22) comes to the theaters CONTEST: Serious about their screen work, Bonita and Jackie are just a couple of kids away from the studio. They swim, loaf on beach (above) at Jackie's Malibu Beach home. Below: Sundae-eating contests on week-ends are one of favorite stunts. "I look forward to Saturday's sundaes," says Bonita at start; but the third pineapple-pistachio sundae tells another story!

SEE HOLLYWOOD WITH ONA MUNSON

AT LONG last, Hollywood has decided to follow MOVIE-RADIO GUIDE's policy of merging the two great entertainment mediums. The town's chamber of commerce has officially appointed Ona Munson—star of both screen and radio—to be its hostess during 1942. The new office was originated by the Hollywood Convention and Tourist Bureau, affiliated with the chamber of commerce, as part of a plan to welcome annual influx of visitors that come to town each summer. At ceremony inducting Ona into office, bureau president said, "In selecting Miss Munson, we have chosen a lady who is representative of both our great entertainment mediums, and whose gracious presence can be counted on to extend personal hospitality to Hollywood visitors." Knowing what a grand person Ona (Lorelei, Belle Watling, Madame Gin-Sling) Munson is, we applaud his words.

A BIG job for a little girl, Ona takes it in stride, points out foot-and hand-prints of famous stars in forecourt of the Chinese Theater

STEPMOTHER

In This Instalment of "Stepmother," Fiction Version of the Exciting Radio Serial, Kay Fairchild Faces a Heart-Breaking Choice

PART 3

"Stepmother," the exciting story of the radio serial, fictionized by Wiley Maloney, is broadcast Monday through Friday over CBS at 10:30 a.m. EWT, under sponsorship of Colgate-Palmolive-Peet Company for Colgate's Tooth Powder. In preceding instalments, Kay Fairchild in her role of stepmother, faces the breaking up of her home because of the unscrupulous scheming of Mrs. Luella Hayworth, a wealthy newcomer to Walnut Grove. Mrs. Hayworth worms her way into the good graces of Mayor John Fairchild through flattery, in order to further her own ambitions politically and financially. Kay sees through her schemes and exposes them in a column she writes for the Grove newspaper, under the name of A. M. Vigilant. To do this, Kay enlists the help of editor David Houseman, an old friend of press days when she was a reporter. Through Peg Fairchild, Kay's stepdaughter who has always resented her as a stepmother, Mrs. Hayworth and John Fairchild learn the identity of A. M. Vigilant. John, furious at the revelation, leaves Kay with two stepchildren, Peg and Bud, and their own small son Billy, moves to his club. Bud, who likes Kay, sticks by her, gets a job as a newsboy. David Houseman also stands by, and even Peg softens and becomes kinder. In time, John Fairchild regrets his hasty move, is on the verge of a nervous breakdown. Returning home unannounced one night, he finds Kay talking over her problems with Houseman, and misunderstands the situation, jumps to the conclusion that they are sweethearts. Before they can explain, he collapses at Kay's feet. When he regains consciousness, he has forgotten everything that's happened during the past three or four years—his marriage to Kay, the fact that they have a son Billy, and that he is mayor of Walnut Grove. Now go on with the story. —The Editors.

JOHN FAIRCHILD lay in his strange trance of forgetfulness and the small world he lived in swirled about him. He recognized Peg and Bud as his children, but Kay, his wife, was a stranger. John's mind had gone back to the time before he met Kay. All his experiences with her had been blotted from his consciousness.

With horror, Kay realized that John didn't know that little Billy was his own son. Kay's own place in the home was explained—had to be explained—by Mother Fairchild. The older woman told her sick son that Kay was a woman who had come in to act as a companion for Peg and Bud and to take charge of the house until John was well again.

Kay couldn't accept the truth at first. She asked the doctor if there was anything that could be done and was told there was nothing.

"To tell him the truth, Kay," said the doctor, "would be—well, it might be very serious. He must under no circumstances realize there is anything abnormal about his condition.

Such a shock may result in a complete mental break."

Kay buried her face in her arms and wept. The doctor tried to comfort her and partially succeeded.

"I suppose," Kay told him through her tears, "that I'm selfish, but—I don't see how I can face it. John thinks of me as a companion to the children—a glorified housekeeper. I was at least her stepmother before—now I'm—I'm nothing but a step-wife."

At first Kay wouldn't tell Bud or Peg about their father's real condition. It was too delicate a situation. Not even Mattie knew just what was wrong, and certainly none outside the home guessed that Mayor John Fairchild had lost his memory.

There were those, however, that were interested. Mrs. Luella Hayworth, still stung because John had gone back to his family after spurning her attentions, aligned herself with Boss McKinney. The faction they represented began a campaign to have Mayor John Fairchild recalled from office. The administration had been too tough on the gambling interests. McKinney went to Andy Clayton, publisher of the Morning Journal, and asked the newspaper's help in forcing an investigation that would result in the Mayor's ouster. Clayton and David Houseman, Clayton's editor, refused. McKinney then hinted that the paper's stands down in Turtle Flats might be wrecked "accidentally" if Clayton didn't change his mind. But Clayton, who had been a close friend of Fairchild's, told McKinney to do his worst. It was then that David remembered Bud's newsstand in Turtle Flats. Bud would be in danger—real danger!

David hurried to the Fairchild home. Not even he knew exactly what the mayor's true condition was. He told Kay there was something about John's illness that she was keeping back.

"What makes you think that, David?" she asked, inviting him into the living-room and offering him a chair. David looked at her, saw her nervously straighten a doily on an end-table and flick invisible dust from the mantel.

"You're not a very skilful deceiver, my dear," he said. "In fact, you've never been able to deceive me at all."

"I know that, David. But—"

"Kay, has John lost his mind?"

"Oh, no! That is—oh, David, are people still saying that?"

"Yes," Houseman told her bluntly.

"And it wasn't just Mrs. Hayworth who started that talk. We had a visitor at the Journal office yesterday—a man by the name of McKinney. Do you know him?"

"I don't think so—no."

"He's—oh, I guess you'd call him boss of the Turtle Flats ward. You know his set-up. He owns the bookie joints and runs the mob—"

"Yes? But, David, what's that got to do with John?"

"McKinney wants the paper to start agitation for a special election. Probably wants someone who will play their way. McKinney is apparently acting under orders from someone higher up. I have a hunch that state politics comes into this thing."

"Oh, but, David—"

"I wish I knew who was giving McKinney orders."

"But," Kay said, "I still don't understand how I can help you."

"You can tell me whether the story going the rounds is true or not. Is John mentally—ah, not quite normal?"

"John is not insane."

"But there is something wrong. What is it, Kay?"

"He—oh, David, he's lost his memory. Only partially. He's gone back in his mind to the time before his first wife died."

David was excited. This information meant more to him than just politics. His reaction certainly was not one of dismay. If anything, his face lighted up with something akin to joy.

"You mean to say—he's forgotten you—that he doesn't even know you and he are married?"

"No, David. I tell you he's forgotten everything that's happened to him in the last three or four years."

"Well, Kay, then you're freed! I mean you're morally free. If John doesn't remember marrying you, why, you can go ahead and get a divorce."

"It's not that easy, David, even if I wanted to do that."

"It's not easy, maybe, but it's perfectly natural and logical. You've ceased to be his wife. So make it legal."

Kay refused. She insisted her duty was to John and his family even though the part she was to play would be tragically difficult.

"The whole thing is so strange," she said, "so mixed up—I—I don't know what to do, David. And so—for a while—I'm not going to do anything."

A week passed, and Kay found the routine in her home more difficult than she had expected. Newspapers had to be kept from John lest he find a picture of himself or a story mentioning him. John could not be told he was mayor, for that would be the same as telling him about his sickness, and the shock, according to the doctor, might bring mental blankness for life.

The problem as it concerned little Billy was even more trying. The baby loved his father and toddled into the sick-room at all hours of the day, calling "Da-da, Da-da!" John looked at Billy queerly and it was pathetic to watch them together. There was no recognition in John's eyes. He liked the child, but he didn't know it was his own boy. And Kay couldn't tell him.

Meanwhile, other things were happening. Bud came home one night to report that seven Journal trucks had been tampered with. Someone had put sugar in their gas tanks. The sugar had caramelized, causing expensive repair bills. Kay knew that Boss McKinney was bringing pressure to bear on Andy Clayton to force Mayor Fairchild's resignation. Bud came home with another story. He said he had been talking to "Pop," who ran a cigar store, and they had seen a beer-truck sideswipe a Journal truck.

"It was no accident," Bud said. "They did it a-purpose. They might have hurt the Journal's driver. His name's Ted and he's a friend of mine."

"You must be careful about how you tell these stories, Bud," Kay advised. "It might be dangerous if someone outside the family heard them from you."

BUD told Kay that Pop had said the same thing; in fact, Pop had suggested to Bud to forget they'd seen anything.

So Kay had a new worry. She hardly approved of Bud's working at the news-stand in Turtle Flats, but Bud pointed out that he couldn't run away from trouble. Kay reluctantly agreed, although she knew if McKinney's gang carried out the boss' threats to wreck the stands Bud might be hurt. She didn't dream worse might happen. She didn't dream McKinney dared go further.

But Luella Hayworth was giving McKinney orders. Luella had believed at first that Mayor Fairchild actually had lost his mind. If that were true, she knew his resignation could be forced, but first she had to prove it. To do this, she couldn't go into the Fairchild home herself, so she sent an agent disguised as a book salesman who said he had been sent by John's doctor. The fake book salesman's report was disappointing to Mrs. Hayworth. He told her that John Fairchild was perfectly normal, his mind as sound as a dollar. The spy had not learned that John had lost his memory. It was then that Luella had suggested to McKinney that "something happen to Bud."

"What good will that do?" McKinney had asked.

"John Fairchild will resign as mayor to save the boy, I think you can arrange it."

Kay was the first person to worry about Bud's tardiness the first evening he was late for dinner. She took the car and drove down to Turtle Flats to find out what was keeping him. But Pop, at the cigar stand, told her that Bud had left some time before. Kay drove away disappointed. She couldn't understand what could have happened.

Meanwhile, at home, John Fairchild, too, was worried. Mother Fairchild tried to reassure him.

"But, Mother," John said, "he's already over an hour late. I may be sick but I still can read the face on the clock."

"Of course you can, dear, but—"

"And I can read your face, too. You're just as worried as I am. I don't want to get settled for the night. I can't sleep until the boy is

(Pinch-hitting for the East-visiting Evans Plummer)

WELL over a year ago Brian Donlevy moved over to M-G-M to make a picture with Robert Taylor. It was "Billy the Kid." Under the stipulations of

—Bert Six

ILKA CHASE, cast in Warners' "Now, Voyager," has tea on the set with star Bette Davis, instead of a la Waldorf-Astoria on radio

Brian's contract he was entitled to a co-star's billing, but this ruled the usual dignity of Mr. Taylor, who was all for having none of it. Mr. Donlevy, caring less for the equality of billing and more for the success of the picture, accepted a secondary spot on the cast billing and the picture was made. Now Mr. Donlevy is again going back to Metro to make a picture with Mr. Taylor. This time it is "Cargo of Innocence." Mr. Donlevy's contract still calls for that co-star billing and this time he's getting it without remarks from Robert. It may be that Mr. Taylor has noted the singular success Mr. D. has had these past twelve months, or maybe he has just realized, as so many people have lately, that the real values and important matters in life are not who gets billed above whom or why . . .

It is certainly heart-warming to note how everyone at M-G-M has treated Clark Gable since the Lombard tragedy. All the time he was making his latest picture with Lana Turner they kept his set closed to all comers, and no offstage stills of him and Lana were taken for publicity releases. Reports from the projection- and cutting-rooms tell us that he is still the same Gable. He is still living at home. He hasn't run away from any memories. Just a few of his very closest friends visit him there. And still running about the ranch are Carole's dachshund, "Commissioner," and Clark's bird dog, "Bob" . . .

Frank Loesser and Jimmy McHugh have written a song especially for Victor Mature and his new RKO picture, as yet untitled, which will start in June. It is titled "Great Big Hunk of Man." The same Victor, who is never at a loss for words, was having his Army physical the other day and so were a lot of other fellows. In a group like that you can always count on one wiseacre. This group was no exception. This one, pointing his remarks at the amiable Mature, shot out with a "Gee, it must be great to be an actor." Without hesitation, or even looking to see who said it, Mature answered, "Yeah, wish I was one" . . .

For the most part American soldiers are courteous and swell, but one overstepped the bounds of propriety at a Hollywood spot recently when he came up to a well-known actress and cockily chortled, "How about a dance, Toots?"

A bit flabbergasted at this frontal attack, the actress finally got out, "Sorry, I'm not dancing this evening."

"Huh, not patriotic," quipped the soldier.

"Well," fenced the actress, "my husband isn't here and he might not like it."

"Oh," kept up the soldier, "he's not patriotic either."

Just then a detachment of better-mannered buddies came along and gave him the bum's rush . . .

Michele Morgan, the Free French actress who is really going to be a sensation in American films, has a little specialty act of her own for entertaining Uncle Sam's service men. Each week she goes down to the Union Station and picks up two soldiers. She tells them, "Now you're in Hollywood. It's a place you've heard a lot about, wondered a lot about. Now that you are here, what would you like to do and see? I want to do all I can to see that you get your wishes."

Last week her two soldier guests were a coal-miner from Pennsylvania and a cowboy from Wyoming. They had luncheon at one of the Derbys: drove through Beverly Hills and then visited a studio set at Paramount. They met a lot of film celebrities, but outside of "sorta" remembering Ginger Rogers a little from a show

JOHN GARFIELD, Spencer Tracy (with Akim Tamiroff, Hedy Lamarr) bring Steinbeck's "Tortilla Flat" to screen. An M-G-M film

MOVIE REVIEW

"Tortilla Flat"

Cast: Spencer Tracy, Hedy Lamarr, John Garfield, Frank Morgan, Akim Tamiroff, Donald Meek, Allen Jenkins, John Qualen and Henry O'Neill. A Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture; produced by Sam Zimbalist and directed by Victor Fleming. Screen story adapted from John Steinbeck's novel by John Lee Mahin and Benjamin Glazer.

Type of Picture: Comedy drama based on John Steinbeck's famed novel of life among California's carefree Monterey paisanos.

This is the Story: Closely following the book, there is little of plot but rather a succession of incidents which serve to illustrate the charm and gusto, the gargantuan drinking-brawls, the quaint philosophies of these child-like, primitive natives who loaf as they live on the sunny hillside overlooking Monterey Bay. Rarely in literature could you meet a more delightful group of people; the tempestuous Danny, whose inheritance of two ramshackle houses from his grandfather provides the thin line on which the plot is threaded; sly, roguish Pilon; delightful Pablo; Jose, the grimy Portagee Joe; pathetic, wheedling old Pirate and his brood of beloved mongrels. For purposes of romance, a role befitting the fulsome charms and talents of Hedy Lamarr has been written in, virtually the only important deviation from the novel.

Verdict: Perhaps you will like this picture tremendously if you haven't read the novel. If you have read the novel you will undoubtedly have real criticisms to make of the picture. Spencer Tracy, John Garfield, Miss Lamarr, Frank Morgan and the others never quite manage to capture the delicate charm, the laughter and the tears, the music and the warm, clear sunlight that breathed so strongly throughout the book. Notice, however, must be given to an obscure Mexican, unnamed in the program, who contributed the only real moments to a production which otherwise fails to distinguish itself by capturing the "feel" of the book.

Army Sends Col. Darryl Zanuck to London; Tin Pan Alley Complains About "Hit Parade"; Nazis' Victims Bring Real Stories to "Big Town"

WASHINGTON

By LT. COL. CURTIS MITCHELL

Col. Darryl Zanuck, better known in Hollywood as the guiding production genius of 20th Century-Fox Studios, for several months has been commuting back and forth between Washington and the film capital on special assignment, adding his talents to the nation's all-out war effort.

About ten days ago, however, Zanuck added a new leg to his commutation circle when he popped up in London.

According to press reports, Zanuck said he was in London as a "special observer" for the U. S. Army Signal Corps and that his mission was to establish coordination between U. S. and British Army training-films. He also said he hoped to establish similar coordination of training-films with Russia, but whether or not he was going to Moscow he didn't say . . .

The official War Department communique which was released on Sunday, May 10, made quite a point of the flabbergasted Nipponese radio announcer who interrupted an idyl on the joys of living in Japan to announce hysterically the actual bombing of Tokyo on April 18. While they were flying away, according to the communique, American pilots heard Japanese announcers bleating about heavy casualties and frenziedly exhorting the Japanese people to pray for rain to help bring raging fires under control.

Those fires weren't extinguished for two days, and it wasn't until after that that the hysterical Japs pulled themselves together sufficiently to inform the outer world, via short wave, that only schools and hospitals had been hit.

Interesting indeed was the Japanese reaction to the War Department's official communique of the bombing, released three weeks later. The communique was released nationally at 6 p.m. EWT on Sunday. That same night, or rather the next morning at 2 a.m., the Yaps were on short wave talking about it, calmly, collectedly and even sarcastically.

Certainly is amazing what a difference a few well-aimed bombs can make on the sing-song tune the little yellow devils sing! . . .

What millions of listeners may have thought was static on the "Army Hour" broadcast of Sunday before last, unless they heard the announcer's explanation, in reality was an attempt by the Nazis to jam that portion of the hour picked up from Curacao, Dutch West Indies, by a station located in Amsterdam. According to NBC, some of its programs have been jammed before, but this was the Huns' first attempt to interfere with the "Army Hour," already, in a few short months, one of the most popular programs on the air.

If Mr. Hitler knew how mad it makes Mr. and Mrs. America to have their entertainment interfered with, he'd cut it out. He's just chalking up one more score to be settled in the final accounting . . .

With gas-rationing taking effect along the eastern seaboard on Friday, May 15, Washingtonians, by and large, are taking their allotment of three gallons per week good-naturedly and are inventing all sorts of stories anent the situation. But the story the capital is laughing at most heartily this week, strangely enough, doesn't concern gasoline. It has to do with the tire shortage.

It seems that a D. C. native, on his way back from the Midwest, stops at a crossroads garage in the Pennsylvania hills and asks the attendant for some gasoline.

While the native is shuffling around to the rear of the car, the Washingtonian, seeking conversation, says:

"How did you like the bombing of Tokyo?"

"What bombing?" asks the yokel. "Why, you know, the one the papers have been full of the past few days . . ."

"Why bomb Tokyo?" asks the hill-billy.

"There's a war on, you dope. Didn't you know that?"

The attendant shifts his chewing-tobacco. "Can't say as I did, stranger," he replies.

"You didn't kn . . . Look, never mind the gasoline! Just roll me out four new tires!"

NEW YORK

Some of the tenants of Tin Pan Alley seem to be unhappy about a radio show. They've been turning out hit tunes that bands throughout the nation have been playing with the usual jive enthusiasm. Everybody's singing their songs. But, they complain, "Your Hit Parade" hasn't been giving them due recognition. They maintain that the tunes played on the popular musical broadcast are not fair representations of the top songs. They point out the cases of individual songs that some weeks are heard among the top few tunes and within a week are completely out of the list of ten, despite the fact that they seem to be as popular as ever. Meanwhile, Tin Pan Alley's objections notwithstanding, the public seems to be still generally satisfied with the "Hit Parade" system of selection, for the show continues to rank as one of the most popular musical programs . . .

Some serial scriptists have been known to resort to diabolical means just to rid their scripts of certain characters. There comes a time when a script-writer finds that he has too many characters in his serial—that the listeners are becoming confused. Then the easiest way out is to "kill off" the characters—in car crashes, plane accidents, etc. Dr. Tubby Scott is a character who has been heard on the "Valiant Lady" program for years. He's the script husband of the leading lady. But he's been around too long—so his days are numbered—his fate has been decided . . .

The death of a real, red-blooded American boy—Walter Charles Wicker, Jr., eighteen-year-old son of radio's singing lady, Irene Wicker—came in the line of duty. He was a sergeant in the R. C. A. F. News of her son's death came on the eve of a scheduled lecture by the mother. She was persuaded by her daughter and husband to go on with the program, and she did. The audience, however, was unaware until after the lecture—which was on child study—of Irene Wicker's personal tragedy . . .

Soon you'll be seeing Kate Smith on the screen in a series of short features. She hasn't made a film for ten years, and the reason she decided to go before the cameras again is that all proceeds of the films will be turned over to the USO. Columbia Pictures will produce the films, which will have the collective title: "America Sings with Kate Smith." Patriotic songs, naturally, will predominate . . .

"Street Singer" Arthur Tracy on the way to his studio met announcer Milton Cross, whom Tracy hadn't seen in about five years. Tracy invited Cross into the studio for his broadcast. Cross politely joined Tracy, sat down and listened to the program. Then when Tracy had finished, Cross stepped to the microphone and announced, "This is the Blue Network." He had been assigned to the broadcast for that task! . . .

For many months producers of the "Mr. District Attorney" program had been anxious to present a dramatization dealing with espionage. However, NBC officials prohibited this type of production, maintaining that it would put "ideas" into the minds of listeners. Finally they relented. So the drama, "The Case of the Whispered Word," recently marked a definite change in theme of the D. A.'s activities. But NBC still won't permit any series of programs on this subject.

Most of the correspondents are refugees from Nazi-occupied countries. But every time he tried to explain what it was, the censor operator would cut in, interrupt and warn both parties that they couldn't and must not discuss (1) ship movements, (2) the weather, (3) troop concentrations or (4) any other subject that might be of interest to enemies of the United States and Canada. Manning finally despaired and told his caller to put his facts on paper, mail it through the regular channels, and let the government censors decide for sure what should or should not be told.

WHEN Arnold Schoenberg was twenty-five years old he wrote what is considered his first major opus, "Verklaerte Nacht" ("Radiant Night"). The piece, composed for string sextet, was finished in September, 1899. Richard Dehmel's poem, "Weib und die Welt" ("Woman and the World"), was the inspiration for the work, and the manuscript carried the following excerpt from the poem, paraphrased by H. Edward Krehbiel:

"Two mortals walk through a cold, barren grove. The moon sails over the tall oaks, which send their scrawny branches up through the unclouded moonlight. A woman speaks. She confesses a sin to the man at her side: she is with child, and he is not its father. She had lost belief in happiness and, longing for life's fullness, for motherhood and mother's duty, she had surrendered herself, shuddering, to the embraces of a man she knew not. She had thought herself blessed, but now life had avenged itself upon her by giving her the love of him she walked with. She staggers onward, gazing with lack-luster eyes at the moon which follows her. A man speaks. Let her not burden her soul with the thoughts of guilt. See, the moon's sheen enwraps the universe. Together they are driving over chill waters, but a flame from each warms the other. It, too, will transfigure the little stranger, and she will bear the child to him. For she has inspired the brilliant glow within him and made him, too, a child. They sink into each other's arms. Their breaths meet in kisses in the air. Two mortals wander through the wondrous moonlight."

"Verklaerte Nacht" is a composition of uncommon emotional fervor, such as might have been expected from an eager and alive youth of twenty-five. And because of its dramatic scope, the music is often played in transcriptions for larger ensembles, even symphonic orchestras.

("Verklaerte Nacht" will be played in its original form on the Library of Congress Concert by the Budapest String Quartet, assisted by Milton Katims and Benar Heifetz, over CBS, on Saturday, May 23.)

The gripping, passionately rhythmic and biting music of Spain, that is, the concert hall sublimation of that country's earthy expression, is no better represented than through Manuel de Falla's exciting work, "El Amor Brujo" ("Love the Sorcerer"). This music is as different from the synthetic Spanish-type works of Glinka, Chabrier, Moszkowski, Rimsky-Korsakoff and others as night is from day. Here the composer, himself a Spaniard, one who has made an exhaustive study of Flamenco idioms, gives us, true, a symphonic composition, yet one that is steeped in the very core and spirit of Andalusian music.

"El Amor Brujo" has proved so irresistible a work that it has not lacked choreographers. It was written for voice and orchestra to a dramatic scenario by Gregorio Martinez, distinguished poet. Of course, this is program music, with a complete story, what's more, which the composer has attempted to tell in his suite. Briefly, the tale concerns the spectral persecution of Candelas, a beautiful young girl, by her deceased lover, a fascinating gipsy. She is unable to forget him, having known his hypnotic spell over her when he was alive. In the meantime, Candelas is loved now by Carmelo, a handsome youth, and she unconsciously returns that love, but her memories of the gipsy, his fascination and the fear that he might return interfere.

Finally, after many awesome experiences with the Spectre, Carmelo kisses Candelas and thus breaks the spell, love having triumphed over death.

One of the most absorbing sections of the suite is that of the Ritual Dance of Fire, which is frequently performed in its piano arrangement. In this fragment, all the tart accents, the snap and vigor of Flamenco music come to amazing realization.

(Jose Iturbi plays the Ritual Dance of Fire on the Telephone Hour broadcast, NBC, Monday, May 25.)

A Permanent Interlude

Before operatic works of light and comic character became known as opera buffe they were described as intermezzi. Thus, an intermezzo, which in the Italian means an interval, used to be given in association with a larger and more dramatic opera. One such was Pergolesi's "La Serva Padrona" ("The Maid Mistress"). The short-lived Pergolesi (he died at the age of twenty-six) based this work on a book by Jacopo Angelo Nelli. The first performance of "La Serva Padrona" took place at the Teatro San Bartolomeo, Naples, on August 28, 1733, three years before the composer's death. It was given—being an intermezzo—with a serious work by the same composer, "Il Prigionier" ("The Prisoner").

Such is "La Serva's" charm, however, that it has outlived its more serious colleague by many years.

The story of the opera has to do with Serpina, a maid, and her ambition to become the wife of her master, Pandolfo. She tries many wiles to no avail, but when she resorts to out-and-out trickery in making Pandolfo jealous of his valet Scapin, who masquerades as a sea captain, she attains her objective.

"La Serva Padrona" made its bow in this country at the New York Academy of Music on November 13, 1858. Strangely enough, it was employed virtually in its original capacity as "intermezzo," serving as curtain-raiser to Bellini's "Norma." Nevertheless, the opera buffe, as it is known now, is a work of merit on its own, its sparkling music and delightful subject having seen to that.

(Bernard Herrmann conducts an abbreviated version of "La Serva Padrona" on One-Act Operas, CBS, Monday, May 25.)

Youth Education

The Columbus Boys' Choir, a popular youth feature of the radio, was established in 1938 by the Kiwanis Club of Columbus, Ohio. Under the direction of Herbert Huffman, the aim of the choir is the carrying out of constructive work for boys in the field of education. Music is employed as a means, not an end, which doesn't necessarily mean that it is secondary or performed in haphazard fashion. The choir is composed of fifty or sixty youngsters, each of whom is provided with voice-training besides being given the opportunity to develop along other cultural lines.

Concert Records

Victor's feature album of the month—and with good reason—is the recording by Leopold Stokowski and the NBC Symphony Orchestra of Tchaikovsky's Fourth Symphony. The music of the Russian composer is much in demand these days, hence another album of his isn't going to be snubbed, you can wager. The performance combines the qualities of sympathy and passionate expression, which are often part and parcel of any Stokowski achievement.

Another Victor item is Howard Hanson's "Lament for Beowulf" as recorded by the Eastman-Rochester Symphony Orchestra and the Eastman School Choir, under the composer's direction. The Anglo-Saxon mythical folk hero, of course, is known to every high-school student. Mr. Hanson's music attempts to depict the character without straining at the leash of dramatic possibilities.

POPULAR MUSIC

ALMOST every artist you talk to, whether he or she be a musician or singer, seems to have started out in life with the purpose of following anything but an artistic career. Paul Lavalle, youthful maestro, is no exception. He wanted to become another Blackstone. (N.B.: Lawyer and not cigar.) As a youth of eleven in his home town of Beacon, N. Y., young Paul plugged away at the studies that were to lead him into the major ones of the legal profession.

One fine day, however, his older brother Michael, who knew well the youngster's capabilities with the clarinet which he had been studying in the meantime, drafted him for his orchestra. In a few years Paul had become mighty proficient with both clarinet and the saxophone families, so that it was natural for him to organize his own band. The love for law—and order, no doubt—persisted. When he was nineteen, with a year of law studies behind him, he took a day off, so to speak, in order to try for a clarinet scholarship at the Juilliard School of Music. P. S.: He won it.

Three years later our subverted lawyer was graduated with honors. He played in various well-known orchestras, and during that hectic period he put in a full year at an exclusive resort at Havana, where he developed a taste for Cuban music. After hours he would seek little out-of-the-way places where the musicians used to get together and he would join in the Cuban equivalent of "hot" sessions. Nostalgically, or perhaps Lavalle is that type of creative artist, he wrote a "Symphonic Rumba," which was recently performed by Frank Black and the NBC Orchestra.

The growth, to say nothing of the development, of Paul Lavalle has been nothing short of phenomenal, as they say in cliché circles. He is a mainstay of radio's "Chamber Music Society of Lower Basin Street," he conducts his own program, "Silhouettes in Blue," in short he is everywhere at once, contributing to the giant musical panorama that is the Blue Network Company.

Nazis Can't Take It

J. B. PRIESTLEY, famous British novelist and broadcaster, speaking from London the other night made some significant remarks on the utter absurdity of much of the Nazi radio propaganda.

He explained that many people had come to believe that Nazi propaganda was very effective and dangerous. According to Priestley, this Nazi propaganda is for the most part stupid and getting more stupid all the time. Instead of concentrating upon one subject they are now swinging wildly from one subject to another like a dying man clutching at a straw.

Goebbels was in a revel of sadistic delight when the Luftwaffe was blitzing Britain. Then Hitler got most of his Luftwaffe tied up in Russia, giving the R. A. F. a chance to take over, which they did by sending hundreds of planes swarming over the continent dropping thousands of tons of bombs. At once the Germans began to seriously doubt the benefits to anyone of that "baptism of fire" that they had themselves initiated and been so boastful of just a few months before. The Britons, however, felt it was high time that the German people began to realize the horror that they themselves had loosed upon the world. Meanwhile Goebbels, cowering in his corner, ran out a few hastily prepared talks telling the British that bombing was stupid anyway and that it ought to be stopped. He didn't seriously think the British would rise to this bait but he was willing to try anything. When British bombers kept coming over in greater and greater numbers and with greater and greater loads of bombs, Goebbels tore his hair and shouted his venom to the skies, calling the British barbaric and idiotic. Nazi propagandists then began to scream retaliation and said their Luftwaffe would repay the British by destroying every historic and venerable landmark and building in England, and proceeded to back up their threats by bombing such lovely and historic old country towns as Exeter and Norwich. This, too, was a propaganda stunt, you see, for Germany could not now spare the hundreds of bombers necessary to destroy great military objectives and therefore tried to make a little look like a whole lot by sending over a few planes to bomb cathedrals and ancient castles. "But," said Priestley, "this bombing of historic buildings—even if they destroy every one in Britain—won't hinder our war effort in the least. Of course the loss will be great not only to England but to the whole world, but we have something more precious than any building and that is 'freedom,' and we mean to retain it."

Freedom

Speaking of freedom as opposed to intolerance, Philip Godala, noted British historian, remarked that freedom is like the air we breathe. We value it most just when we are about to run short of it. In Great Britain and the United States, he continued, there have been firm beliefs in tolerance. Tolerance is not easy. In order to be tolerant we must be willing to admit that someone else's way may be better than ours. Intolerance will never build a United States of America or a British Empire, but it will build occupied continents of cowering and abject slaves. Freedom is a silken bond that binds people in all corners of the world, fragile and invisible, it is yet so strong that it can never be severed by a Japanese sword.

New American Voice to Orient

In MOVIE-RADIO GUIDE issue of November 1, 1941, I told about the new 100,000-watt short-wave transmitter to serve the Orient that Associated Broadcasters, Inc., of San Francisco, California, had just received a permit to install. This station, whose call letters are KWID, has already taken the air for initial test broadcasts. To plan, build, ship and install a huge short-wave transmitter and the necessary beam aeriels and studios (which are in the Mark Hopkins Hotel in downtown San Francisco) in just a little over six months is almost a miracle. Urgent need for this additional program service to the Far East greased the usual slow channels of production. General Electric Company and the office of the Coordinator of Information cooperated to cut the necessary red tape and get the job done swiftly and efficiently. The new station is operating only on 15.29 megs daily from 6:00 to 10:00 p.m. PWT at time of writing, but additional frequencies and hours of operation will be added as soon as feasible.

"Major Bowes" to Soldiers

The American Expeditionary Forces are hearing "Major Bowes' Amateurs" program weekly every Sunday from 6:30 to 7:00 a.m. PWT. With other CBS network commercials, "Major Bowes' Amateurs" is being short-waved by means of delayed broadcasts to the service men abroad via Columbia's two 50,000-watt stations, WCBX (15.27) and WCRC (11.83), both located in New York City.

Guess Who

Ever so often, Goebbels finds it necessary to add another yellow-backed American traitor to his rogues' gallery of propagandists. His latest and perhaps most loathsome addition is a venomous creature known as "Guess Who," who spits forth his poison Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays at 6:15 p.m. PWT over the Berlin short-wave station. Guess Who tries to arouse interest by having his listeners guess his real identity, which he claims he will reveal sometime before the last of June—as if anyone cared who he is. Seems to me he would be safer to keep his identity concealed, for this type of cowardly traitor is going to receive short shrift when the armies of the United Nations march into Berlin.

U. S. Commander Thanks KGEI

In the midst of fighting in the Philippines and the East Indies, members of the officers' mess of an embattled U. S. warship, since sunk, made a solemn pledge that the first officer from the ship to reach San Francisco should go immediately to KGEI, General Electric's powerful international short-wave station in that city, and thank them in person for their broadcasts.

This was the report brought recently to KGEI by a man in khaki fatigue clothes and a naval officer's cap—the commander of the ship who, escaping from Java with only a pair of pajamas, was the first officer to reach San Francisco.

"I have come to thank you in behalf of the men on my ship," the officer said, "for the broadcasts that meant so much to them during fighting around the Philippines and the East Indies."

Occupied Paris Hears WGEA

A post-card, smuggled out of Nazi-occupied Paris recently to Edward Beck, who broadcasts daily to Europe news programs in French over WGEA, Schenectady, N. Y., offers proof that in spite of Nazi regulations forbidding short-wave receivers, French people in the occupied zone still listen, when they have the chance, to American radio.

The post-card is of the inter-zone type which regulations allow to be sent between occupied and unoccupied France carrying messages of a strictly personal nature only. Sent by a French friend in Paris to Beck, in care of a mutual friend in a city in the unoccupied zone, the card got its message by the censors with the sentence: "It is a very, very long time since we have had news from you, but fortunately from time to time we hear the sound of your voice."

Beck, who only escaped from occupied Paris a few months ago, himself has since been helping to fight the Axis by combating their propaganda through his news broadcasts to Europe. This post-card is the first word he has had from Paris since Pearl Harbor, but previous to that time he had a letter smuggled out of the occupied zone informing him that "a great number of people in Paris listen whenever they have the opportunity, and in the provinces many families we know of listen nightly."

Frequency Modulation

See Expansion of FM Broadcasting After the War Providing Jobs for Large Numbers of New Workers, Opening Up New Field to Men and Women Now in War Work

By DICK DORRANCE

The Future of FM

ALTHOUGH the war has placed concise restrictions on the granting of further permits to build any broadcast stations of any type—including FM ones—owners of the noise-free, full-fidelity FM outlets now on the air are not discouraged. They recognize, of course, that frequency modulation as a broadcast service must mark time until victory is won. But these war days can be productive of much experience for FM broadcasters who acknowledge the need for new programming techniques and better ways to make use of the startling realism that FM can transmit.

There are few people in the radio world today who doubt frequency modulation will play an important part in the post-war period of reconstruction. One of FM's outstanding virtues—freedom from interference when stations in closely spaced areas use the same channel—means there is virtually no limit to the number of new FM stations that can be built and operated. Even the smallest towns may have their own broadcast stations, offering perfect fidelity day and night, never garbled or broken up when evening comes because some other station, maybe hundreds of miles away, is using the same spot on the dial.

These many new stations mean that the radio industry will expand considerably, requiring large numbers of new workers, creating new outlets for the natural talent that is often overlooked today. They'll need more technicians and executives and announcers, opening up good jobs for men and women released from war work.

New Sets for Old

We cannot guess, of course, how long the war may last. But we can't overlook the fact that even if it continues only another year or two, a sizable percentage of the nation's 57,000,000 radio receivers will need replacement each year. As you probably know, the War Production Board has banned the manufacture of further sets for civilian use. It may be three, four, five years or more—postulating that the war is won by then—before receiver factories can again set up their assembly lines, now converted to war work, and begin turning out civilian radio receivers again. A tremendous number of sets will need replacement by that time after years of hard and faithful service.

It is no startling news that most of the major manufacturers, when they return to every-day production, plan to bring out dual-purpose receivers, equipped for either FM or ordinary AM reception at the turn of a switch. Even today there are hundreds of set aside for these studio-transmitter links by the Federal Communications Commission.

Radio relay, replacing telephone lines, is not uncommon in FM. The Yankee Network has used such a circuit for two years between its FM studios on Brookline Avenue in Boston and the W43B transmitter on Mount Asnebumskit, outside Worcester, Mass. The distance is approximately forty-five airline miles. W41MM, the giant FM outlet atop Clingman's Peak in North Carolina, will receive programs from Winston-Salem, 102 miles away, over a similar beamed relay.

FM is also proving its worth, particularly today when telephone lines are constantly busy and installation of new ones not always possible, by feeding network programs to distant AM stations for rebroadcast. Listeners of WEAN in Providence, R. I., and WICC, Bridgeport, Conn., do not realize that some of the programs they hear have reached their local stations via W43B. WMFF, Plattsburg, N. Y., rebroadcasts baseball games picked up from New England FM stations, and W47P, Pittsburgh, has fed programs to neighboring AM stations as distant as sixty miles.

Frequency modulation is especially suited for this work, and FM networks are in frequent operation throughout the northeastern part of the country, each station picking up and rebroadcasting its neighbor—all without use of telephone wires. The absence of background rush and the sharp fidelity permits these FM programs to go through a large number of relays without appreciable loss of quality.

More Work for FM

Milwaukee has long been one of the most FM-conscious cities in the country, thanks to the excellent programming and promotional efforts of W55M, the Milwaukee Journal's FM station which is heard throughout much of Wisconsin. It is not hard to understand, therefore, why the Milwaukee police and fire departments have decided to install a complete two-way communication system using 109 mobile FM units.

Necessary materials for construction of the equipment have been allocated as essential by the War Production Board. The police will have seventy-five installations, the fire department thirty-four.

groups in this country looking forward to the time when they can apply for official permission to build FM stations. Not all of them are commercial broadcasters, since schools, universities, institutions, municipal governments and similar organizations appreciate the value of radio as well.

The FM stations now on the air feel an obligation to continue their pioneer work and to learn as much about the new techniques of frequency modulation as possible so that they may be trail-blazers with the return of normal times. We told you, in an earlier issue of MOVIE-RADIO GUIDE, about FM's part in the fighting of the war.

Wires vs. Radio

Radio transmitters are very seldom located at the same spot as the broadcasting studios. There are a number of reasons for this. With AM stations it's usually because a site outside the city—where a high tower can be erected and a great many copper wires buried underground—allows the station to transmit a louder signal. With FM stations it's often so because more height for wider coverage may be obtained at some point outside the city.

In both cases the studios themselves can't very well be built at the transmitter site because that would mean considerable commuting and inconvenience for artists and speakers who broadcast over the station. Consequently it has been the practise to link studios and transmitter with a telephone wire over which programs are relayed before being sent out on the air.

FM stations, however, haven't always found this method satisfactory. Except in rare cases, the telephone wires available today are unable to carry the full tonal fidelity that FM can broadcast. Sometimes the FM transmitter is on an isolated mountaintop where construction of telephone lines would involve tremendous expense. The solution has been to employ a radio beam circuit in place of wirelines.

This is done by installing a low-power, ultrashort-wave transmitter on the roof of the studios. A special directional antenna aims a narrow pathway of radio energy straight toward the regular transmitter site, where it's picked up on another directional antenna by a precision-built receiver. The program is then sent out in the usual fashion to FM listeners.

The Idea in Use

W47A at Schenectady, N. Y., installed a radio relay of this type several weeks ago over which programs travel the twelve miles between downtown Schenectady and the transmitter site high in the near-by Helderberg Mountains. A special section of the radio frequency spectrum—from 330 to 342 megacycles—has been

This weekly column of FM news and discussion is intended as a MOVIE-RADIO GUIDE service for the swiftly growing audience of FM listeners. Letters from readers are always welcome. We shall be glad to answer your questions and, if you do not yet have FM reception in your locality, advise you whether any is in prospect.

Wythe Williams Brings His Scoops Back; Kaltenborn Speaks Out About Catering to Sponsors; Woman Correspondent Reports on Nazi Morale

By JOHN PAUL

Williams—Returns

Wythe Williams, after about a year away from the network airwaves, is back on Mutual (Sunday evenings) with his spectacular inside news stories and startling scoop predictions. The veteran journalist was a sensation while he was on the air during the early phases of this war, gaining a phenomenal record for the accuracy of his analyses and prognostications based on information gleaned from his world-wide grapevine. Among the most noteworthy of these news beats was his prediction of the invasion of Denmark a few hours before it happened and his revelation that Marshal Petain had asked General Franco to intercede with Hitler for an armistice. As a matter of fact, it was Williams' forecasting faculty that landed him an air sponsor originally. An executive had heard him predict within three days the date of the outbreak of World War II in 1939 as guest on a "Hobby Lobby" program.

Kaltenborn—Sponsor Last

H. V. Kaltenborn, who recently celebrated his twentieth anniversary in radio, gave one evidence of why he is perennially popular with radio listeners. At the recent Institute for Education by Radio in Columbus, Ohio, the outspoken dean of commentators challenged another broadcaster who had told the conference his standards of consideration for newscasting were: Station first, sponsor second, public third. Barked Kaltenborn: "I place my own honest judgment of news values first, interests of the listeners second, the station third, and the sponsor gets no consideration." Regular Kaltenborn

TWENTY years in radio and still going strong. That's the record of H. V. Kaltenborn, who just completed his second decade on air listeners, familiar with his free-swinging talk, whether they agree with him or not, believe that he does hew to the mark—and they've seen the chips falling in all directions from his fiery talks on the labor situation of recent months!

Brown—Lectures

Cecil Brown, CBS foreign correspondent who also has a name for speaking out plainly what he sees and thinks, now back from the thick of the world's fighting, is in the midst of a lecture tour that will eventually take him to twenty-five cities in fifteen states. Remaining stops in the itinerary include the following: May 23—Harrisburg, Pa.; May 24—Dayton, Ohio; May 25—Indianapolis, Ind.; May 26—Warren, Ohio; May 27—Columbus, Ohio; May 28—Springfield, Mass.; June 1—Spokane, Wash.; June 2—Seattle, Wash.; June 3—Portland, Ore.; June 4—Chico, Calif.; June 5—San Francisco, Calif.; June 6—San Diego, Calif.; June 8—Los Angeles, Calif.

Denman—Neutral Report

Despite their setbacks on the Russian front and the British aerial offensive, the Nazis are far from a cracking-point internally, according to Jo Denman (Mrs. Josephine Anderson) who, with her husband, David Anderson, reports for NBC from Stockholm, Sweden. Mrs. Anderson, just returned to this country with her little daughter, says the belief of diplomats in neutral Sweden is that only a decisive military setback can shatter Nazi morale. However, she interpreted the recall of men from the German legation in Stockholm for active war service as a sign of the severe drain on Nazi man-power.

CECIL BROWN is now telling American audiences first hand about the tremendous war events he has broadcast from abroad

San Francisco's new Radio City soon will broadcast the sweetest organ music in the world. A revolutionary technique in organ construction will make this possible, according to Charles Hershman, organ-builder for NBC in San Francisco and at Hollywood Radio City. Radio, Hershman pointed out, has never been able to use the softest notes of an organ because of competition from the sound of air exhaust from regulators and tremolos. He solved the problem by placing the regulators below the level of pipe outlets in the studio. He also devised a method for sending the air exhaust back into the organ so it can be used over and over again in the pipes. "If our theory is correct," Hershman said today, "we'll be able to hear an organ whisper on the air for the first time." The organ, housed in a studio that floats on felt to keep the instrument from shaking the building, will contain 1,400 pipes. Hershman said in addition to being the sweetest, it should also be one of the most powerful radio studio organs in the world.

proud of her most recent honor. The Princeton Tiger, student publication of tradition-loaded Princeton University, has elected her the "Radio Actress of the Year." Said the voice of the Princeton men, in part: "It is not because she is the voice of enchantment, or because she is most pleasing to behold, or even because she is so amazingly versatile. It is because Charlotte Manson is such a rare and fabulous combination of all these three that we nominate her Radio Actress of the Year." Wonder if the college boys have been reading the "Stepmother" fictionization running in MOVIE-RADIO GUIDE? And wonder if that bewitching cover portrait on the May 9-15 issue had anything to do with their "most pleasing to behold" tribute? . . .

Mother's Day activities called to attention the fact that Eddie Firestone, Jr., practically had two mothers to honor, and he is very proud of both. Eddie's real mother, Mrs. Lillian Firestone, arrived in Chicago from California just in time for Mother's Day. Number two is Constance Crowder, who not only plays parent to Eddie's "That Brewster Boy" character on CBS but also does a pretty regular job of mothering Eddie for Mrs. Firestone. It's a very satisfactory exchange system, for Mrs. Firestone in turn looks after Connie's twelve-year-old son at school in Palo Alto, Calif. Incidentally, "That Brewster Boy" will move from Wednesday to the Friday night spot long occupied by the dramatic fixture "First Nighter." Chicago's "Little Theater Off Times Square" will close its doors, at least temporarily, because of priorities . . .

Whether it's the patriotic urge to conserve razor blades or the subtle influence of the vernal season or something else that is none of our business, a fresh crop of chin whiskers has sprouted over the handsome features of Henry Hunter. The Chicago actor's sporadic beard, off for several months, is on again, and Henry is seemingly stuck with it this time. Plus beard, he posed for an identification picture for a U. S. Coast

GRAHAM McNAMEE, pioneer personality of radio announcing, died May 9 in a New York hospital. McNamee was fifty-three, had been in radio almost twenty years. He was best known in sports and special events. Many listeners will remember him chiefly as a foil for Perfect Fool Ed Wynn Guard permit to yacht on Lake Michigan this summer. Now he's afraid to shave again for fear he'll get shot or something for yachting on bearded Henry Hunter's pass! . . .

Are there more smart boys than smart girls? Or do the smart girls just stay out of the public eye? Anyway, girls have been pretty scarce comparatively on the "Quiz Kids" program. But quizmaster Joe Kelly, believing there are plenty of wise young women between the ages of five and sixteen, has put out a plea for those in the Chicago area to come forth and vindicate their sex . . .

In the field of popular song-writing many feel called but few are chosen. Now and then, though, some talented non-professional crashes through with a success. Apropos, a team of attractive secretaries in the J. Walter Thompson Co. advertising agency here may have taken the first step up the bumpy road. Harriet Marstone and Nan Wisner have written a fetching tune called "Reminiscing of You," which has its premiere on WGN's "Northerners" program May 26, and which has a publisher interested.

GENERAL ENTERTAINMENT

By ARTHUR MILLER

Of the numerous popular diversions, few have suffered from the war. In fact, it has been established that the war-industries workers especially lose little time in making the most of their leisure by "lighting out" for places where they can be entertained. It is not that Americans are escapists. They have always enjoyed dancing, the movies, sports events, horseback-riding, etc.

National income is rising. Cities where defense industries are booming are finding out that if there isn't enough to offer the workers in the way of diversion after work, the workers don't hesitate to travel scores of miles for this objective. People are spending their money. And the entertainment field is getting much of it.

The Government wants us all to set aside part of our regular earnings to buy war savings bonds. We are told that we shouldn't spend so much money on frivolous things—on luxury items. Does this mean that we shouldn't go to the theater, or to baseball games, or the movies, or spend money for new clothes which we might be able to do without? I think it does, to some extent.

If one is in the habit of going out twice a week he should be able to make the sacrifice of going out only once a week. If one is accustomed to seeing his home-town professional baseball team playing whenever the team is at home, he should be able to make the sacrifice of going less frequently. This is what the Government means when it says we should give up some things to save for bonds so we'll have the necessary money to pay for the vast war expenses.

Still we continue to seek amusement for which we must pay. Yet this is all right. A reflection of the spirit of our people is seen herein. Hitler, Mussolini and Hirohito can't change our love of good fun.

WAR-TIME FASHIONS

PRIORITIES hold nothing sacred—not even women's clothes. But the ladies can be depended upon to remain attractive. In above pictures is convincing proof, posed by Sybil Chism, blond organist for "Lum 'n' Abner" (NBC), and Harriet Hilliard, songstress-comedienne with Red Skelton (NBC). In first picture Sybil (left) wears sheerweave suit with collarless jacket, rayon blouse. Harriet's wool-flannel suit is now behind WPB orders. In second picture Harriet's slacks with jacket must give way to Sybil's cuffless, narrow-legged trousers. In third picture Sybil models outdated ensemble outfit, while Harriet wears smart rayon dress with slim, gathered skirt. In last picture both girls are dressed in best war-time style, right down to lisle hose

Cream Compatibility

WHEN Elizabeth Arden, one of the country's leading beauty authorities, says that not more than one woman in a hundred knows how to use creams correctly, it's high time you and I faced these facts about beauty.

Your skin is one of the most complicated organs of your body. That's why it's essential that you have a thorough knowledge of its quality and texture before applying treatment creams. When chosen intelligently, creams will maintain your skin at a normal, glowing peak of health.

Chances are you've had difficulty in choosing creams that do the most for your appearance. You're confused by the various types on the market. Conflicting product stories label each cream an indispensable. It's little wonder that you face your dressing-table with an enie-meenie-minie-moe discrimination.

However, when you know the fundamental types, learn how to use them to best advantage, you'll make every effort to buy creams for their skin "compatibility." The ingenuity of American chemists makes this possible—guaranteeing custom-made products designed specifically for you! Treatment lines like Cosmetiques Tussy cater to the three skin textures—oily, dry and normal, offering a complete line of creams true-to-skin type.

These are three essential creams to be considered: Cleansing, softening (emollient) and foundation. The ingredients of each differ widely, suited to its functional purpose, and denying the fact that one cream can "stand in" for another. Cleansing-cream, needed for basic skin health, is a beauty "must"! It softens the layers of stale make-up and removes grime, along with moisture and waste accumulations. Spread thoroughly over the face and throat, patted on briskly, the application provides an energizing facial exercise that will keep muscles firm. And because nerve-centers are stimulated, nourished blood rises to the skin surface, rejuvenating sluggish, flaked skin, refining enlarged pores and eliminating blackheads.

The second type of essential cream is a foundation or base. Its special properties protect and line the skin surface, acting as a middleman for your cosmetics. Light, filmy, this cream provides a mat finish for your make-up. "Powder 'n' paint" cling longer—shiny areas are less frequent.

Your shopping-list should definitely include the third basic—lubricating emollient. A boon for dry skin, it's not to be confused with cleansing-cream. It contains a larger proportion of rich oils, penetrates deeply and is primarily important for its supplying quality. The Pond's laboratories, long famous for their cleansing product, have developed an excellent dry-skin cream which because of its high lanolin content (natural oil) soaks and softens the outer layer of your facial tissues. It should be applied overnight or just before "tubbing" for best results.

NOW that you know your cream "musts"—know yourself! Admit that only in rare medical cases are so-called adolescent skins justifiable. Decide what type of skin you have and go about this business of applying cream seriously. Keep your skin clean from without—eat nourishing foods that will keep it healthy from within. Stop trying to cover a bad complexion—get at the root of the difficulty and begin by correcting—not camouflaging. As an impetus try the Harriet Hubbard Ayer beauty kit. Especially convenient for week-end trips, air-raid emergencies, or as an office "pick-up," the "Ayer Way to Loveliness" contains generous amounts of the three cream essentials, plus a skin freshener. Timely and practical, it's a budget-wise buy at only $1.50. It will help you start with a cream slate!

Conquerors of the Clouds

THE roar of planes in combat, a machine-gun sputters, the scream of a Japanese Zero in its last dive—these are just dramatized incidents in station WHKC's weekly radio series featuring aviation news, "Conquerors of the Clouds," but they show aircraft workers in Columbus, Ohio, how the products of their efforts play a vital part in the war. It is unique in that it is presented by warplane-builders in the Columbus plant of the Curtiss-Wright Corporation, virtually none of whom have ever had previous microphone or acting experience.

AT HER JOB in the bench assembly department at Curtiss-Wright we find pretty Barbara Chattos, who is heard often on "Conquerors of the Clouds"

TO MAKE her radio parts sound authentic, Barbara has cultivated French and Russian accents, recently portrayed the role of a Soviet woman aircraft mechanic

ON THE JOB, Ruth Van Kirk wears the customary navy-blue uniform, works in the final assembly department at the warplane plant in Columbus, Ohio

"LOOK OUT, the bombs," screams Ruth as she portrays the role of a U. S. Army nurse during a bombing raid on an American hospital in the Philippines

REPAIRING the tools used to make warplanes is Jim Wygant's job at the plant. He's one of the few in the program's cast with previous theatrical experience

SPOT-WELDER Varney Heeth, ex-theater doorman, and Mary Brown, machinery repairwoman, follow their scripts closely as Jim Wygant (r.) reads his lines

Mrs. J. H. Waterhouse, Los Angeles, Calif.—VIRGINIA CLARK has had her baby and will return to the role of Helen Trent—if she has not already returned by the time this goes to press.

Mrs. Judson Lanier, Kissimmee, Fla.—ANN SHEPHERD, who played the lead in "Joyce Jordan," is now doing stage work in New York.

Mrs. C. O. David, Clayton, La.—Yes, NED WEVER is Jerry in "Big Sister," and ALICE FROST has the lead in "Woman of Courage."

Miss G. H. Ebner, Newark, N. J.—BOB HANNON was only four years old when he appeared at a florists' convention in Kansas City and gave his first demonstration of talent in putting over a musical number . . . When he reached high-school age, Bob began making nightly appearances at amateur contests in near-by theaters, picking up at least five dollars in prizes every night. Soon he had saved up a stake which he invested in a second-hand car. The first time the youthful minstrel drove his newly acquired automobile, he ran it through the wire netting of a tennis court. That was the end of the car—but not of Bob . . . Young Hannon presently won a vaudeville engagement, then wound up in Chicago, where he was master of ceremonies and sang in a Chicago night-

Mr. W. H. West, Jamestown, Calif.—Comedian FRANK FAY's lingo was heard for the last time on April 16. His show is no longer on the air.

WHAT'S COOKING!

By GEORGIA SCOTT

Frozen Economy

CBS SOPRANO Jean Tennyson cooks for relaxation after operatic roles, serves friends an informal midnight supper of fish 'n' chips year around, frozen foods are cheaper, Mrs. Seabergh keeps prices at a frozen level.

THOSE of you who can remember the last war and its effect on the foods we were consuming can't possibly have forgotten the sudden transition to canned products. A direct growth of World War I needs, "food in a tin" was rightly heralded "nutrition miracle of the times." Eliminating seasonal and geographical menu limitations, canned foods proved the ingenuity of America's nutrition experts.

Today, as then, food history is being written and vital war needs are again motivating an advance in food science. Dehydrated and frozen foods are the nutrition miracles of World War II. And although quick-frozen foods have been on the market for more than a decade, their practical timeliness looms of immediate significance.

Only edible portions of frozen foods are brought to your work-table. You're not paying for surplus bones, pits, pods, heads and entrails. With everything prepared to cook and ready to serve in half the time usually required, you can make the most of your day bundling for our boys in the barracks, rolling bandages and working for home defense. And since frozen foods are healthier, tested and proved as to high-vitamin content (they're picked "ripe prime" and frozen on the spot), you're eating for personal health and national defense! While canning and long storage often reduce vitamin strength, freezing retains the easily destroyed vitamin C.

I drove up to Westchester the other day to see a unique frozen-food center—supposedly the only one of its kind in the world. According to its owners, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Seabergh, business has tripled in the past fifteen months. Opened by the Seaberghs more than two years ago, this progressive, streamlined grocery puts convenient, vitamin-rich frozen foods within the reach of an average-income consumer. Proving that pound for pound the

Because she remembers her homemaking difficulties as a newlywed (Alberta worked at the dual role of housewife and career woman), she goes all-out to help her customers plan quick, well-balanced, economical menus. She posts dinner suggestions nightly, and the day I dropped in, Alberta featured a special menu that could be prepared in five minutes and cost only sixty-nine cents. With one package of chopped steak, enough for four, went one package of cut sweet corn and one pint of high-butterfat ice-cream. An alternate dinner combination costing eighty-five cents included four three-ounce cubed sirloin steaks (no bone, fat or gristle), one package of spinach and one package of strawberries.

YOU'RE assured the finest-flavored tender meat at a budget price if you use quick-frozen foods. Chosen by rigid scientific standards, their full flavor and juicy tenderness are sealed in by quick freezing. Fish is a good choice as the main dish for a hurry-up meal, for it's an easily prepared, thrifty source of body-building protein.

Jean Tennyson, CBS star of "Great Moments in Music," recommends fish 'n' chips for making Fridays a whopping success. Try her recipe for this favorite party specialty.

Fish and Chips

- 1 cup sifted flour
- 1 teaspoon double-acting baking-powder

- ½ teaspoon salt
- 2 eggs, well beaten
- 2/3 cup milk
- 1 tablespoon melted butter
- 2 packages quick-frozen fillet of flounder, thawed
- Salt and pepper
- Lemon juice

Sift flour once, measure, add baking-powder and salt, and sift again. Combine eggs, milk and melted butter; add to flour mixture and beat until smooth.

Separate fillets and sprinkle with salt, pepper and lemon juice. Dip each fillet in batter. (Let excess batter run off.) Fry in deep fat (370 degrees F.) three minutes, or until done. Drain on unglazed paper. Serve with thin French-fried potatoes and cole slaw or tartar sauce.

Whimsical Mayor: Airlines' Mayor La Trivia (Gale Gordon away from the mike) of Wistful Vista, radio abode of the incomparable Fibber McGee and Molly, looks very meek and amiable, but his quips on the air pack a wallop that leave an indelible impression on the minds of listeners. Belt-buckle speech on recent Fibber show, in which he opined "if we expect our boys to belt the Japs over there, we have to buckle down over here," is a good example. When not concerned with mayoring the Wistful Vistaites, La Trivia (above) absorbs ideas with which to befuddle Fibber and Molly; takes forty winks after this arduous task of tussling with unfamiliar phrases; later rehearses, with gestures, speech he will deliver at Wistful Vista Chamber of Commerce. The Fibber McGee and Molly program is heard Tuesday nights on NBC home. And don't make excuses—oh, I'm not blaming you, Mother. You've had your hands full taking care of me. But—what about this woman, Kay? I thought she was supposed to look after the children."

"She does look after them, John."
"Not very well, I should say. Letting Bud stay out all hours of the night. Oh, Mother, everything is so strange around here lately—"

"How? What do you mean?"
"Well, for one thing, having that woman around the house. And—that child! I keep forgetting he's her little boy. He's such a cute little tike and so much like Bud used to be. I—I almost feel sometimes as though he were my own."

Mother Fairchild caught her breath. What if John should fall upon the truth in some such roundabout way? Was that why Kay had tried to keep Billy away from his father?

Mother Fairchild finally got the invalid quieted just as Kay returned despondent and worried. Bud still wasn't home. Kay called the only friend she knew to turn to in time of trouble—David Houseman.

David came as soon as he could get away from the office. He and Kay sat before the fireplace in the living-room and Kay served hot coffee and sandwiches. David told Kay that Andy Clayton had gone to Turtle Flats to look for Bud himself.

Kay shivered as though with cold and David poked up the fire, sending sparks shooting up the flue. He threw another log on the embers and soon there was a blaze.

"There, how's that?" he asked.
"Better. Oh, David, if we could only do something! It's waiting that's so hard. Just to sit and—I wish I'd gone to Turtle Flats with Andy. I've a notion to get the car out and drive down there now. I could talk to Pop again."

"Pop won't be there. He leaves the store at eleven-thirty."

"Well, I could talk to McKinney myself. Maybe McKinney would pay more attention to me than he will to Andy. Maybe I could make him understand how a mother feels." Then, as though to herself, Kay added, "Or a stepmother."

David protested. "Forget that, Kay. Bud thinks as much of you as if you were his mother—you know he does."

"Yes, and that makes it worse. A mother is supposed to take care of her children. Andy will telephone here, won't he, if he learns about Bud?"

"He said he'd get in touch with me the minute he left McKinney's office."
"Just where is McKinney's office, David?"

David walked to the fireplace, picked up the tongs and pushed a log back into a more firm position in the fire.

"Well, Kay, McKinney has two offices," he said, putting the tongs back in the rack and lighting a cigarette. "One of them is in that place he runs. That's more or less open to the public. And the other's down in that old warehouse next to the railroad tracks."

"That's a queer place for an office, David."

He laughed. "I disagree with you, Kay. It's a very clever place for an office. The kind of people McKinney deals with like to come and go without being seen. And they can do it down there in that maze of tracks and old freight-sheds. Look, honey, you're shivering again. Look, lean back against the cushions." Kay leaned back and smiled up at David. "There," he said, "now relax a bit. Now I'm going to hold your hands . . . yes, I am. And you needn't pull away. I'm not making love to you, I'm simply getting your hands warm. They're cold as ice . . ."

For a moment Kay felt contentment despite her worries. David was so considerate.

"I—I do presume terribly on our friendship, don't I, David?"

"No. You don't presume at all. And it isn't friendship, darling. Not on my part. And—if you're referring to tonight and your sending for me—I love it. There's no place I'd rather be than here with you. Don't you understand, Kay? I love to have you depend on me. It—well, it makes me feel as if I were just a little bit important to you."

Later that evening Andy Clayton called and said that Boss McKinney denied any knowledge of Bud's whereabouts. Clayton said he was convinced that McKinney was telling the truth and had said he was doing his best to locate the boy. David finally took his leave and Kay went back to sit by the open fire. She stared into the dying embers, lost in her thoughts and worries when, suddenly, she woke herself from a fevered doze and realized that the first finger of dawn was poking at her through the window. She rose wearily. She had to face another day.

Mid-morning and Bud still was missing. Kay's fears increased by the hour. If there was only something she could do! But there was nothing, nothing except wait helplessly for news. She paced the floor between the living-room and hall and looked almost angrily at the telephone. Why didn't it ring?

She was almost startled a half-hour later when the telephone did ring. She almost jumped with fright, but hurried to lift the receiver.

"Hello. Hello," she spoke frantically. Then she heard a strange, hoarse voice answering hers. She'd never heard that voice before, she could swear. It sounded as though it was coming from a great distance away. "Mrs. Fairchild?" the voice asked. "Mrs. John Fairchild?"

"Yes. Yes. Who's calling?" Kay couldn't keep a note of hysteria from her own voice.

"I have a message for you, Mrs. Fairchild." Kay knew it was a man talking, but he sounded far away—far, far away.

"Oh, yes? What is it?"

"Listen carefully, please."

"I'm listening."

"Tell your husband that as soon as he sends in his resignation as mayor, his son, Bud, will return home."

"What? Oh . . ." There was the sound of a phone being placed back on a hook at the other end of the wire. Kay clicked her phone frantically, but the line had gone dead. Peg came into the room and found Kay staring off into space still holding the receiver in her hand.

"Kay!" she cried. "Kay, it wasn't bad news?"

"No," Kay replied in a dazed voice. "that is I—I don't know—"

"Kay, tell me—is Bud all right?"

"Yes, Peg. I—I guess so. The man said, 'Tell your husband to resign as mayor and his son will return home.'"

"Oh, Kay, then he is safe. Bud, I mean. I'll tell Grandma and we'll write out the resignation and get Dad to sign it. And then—"

"Wait a minute, Peg. Come back. We can't do that."

Peg, who had started to leave the room, returned and asked why they couldn't write the resignation.

"I mean," Kay said slowly, "we can't ask your father to sign a resignation. Because—he has forgotten he's mayor!"

"Oh, but—"

"And if we give him a resignation to sign he'll know he's forgotten. And the doctor said—"

"Oh, but Kay, we've got to. We've got to think of Bud."

"Yes, but—"

"We can't let him come to harm."
"We can't let your father come to harm either, Peg."

"Kay, you mean? Oh, Kay, you mean we've got to choose between Bud—and Dad?"

"I—I don't know, Peg. It—it looks that way."
