Early last year WCKT, Channel 7 in Miami, mailed its annual Public Service Report entitled "NEEDS", covering 1959. This booklet was sent to leaders in education, religion, government, professions, labor, and business. It reported on WCKT's efforts to meet community, educational, spiritual, and informational NEEDS.

Accompanying the Report, WCKT furnished these leaders a questionnaire asking, "IN ORDER OF IMPORTANCE, WHAT ARE SOUTH FLORIDA'S GREATEST NEEDS AS OF NOW?"

Among the "NEEDS" projects recommended, WCKT has created and aired three 60-minute documentaries: CUBA ON THE MOVE—delving into the Cuban population influx and the problems of Communism; YANKEE DOLLAR—a study of Florida tourism; ROOTS IN SAND—a look at juvenile delinquency. MIAMI CON-

DEMNER, dealing with badly-needed slum clearance, is being readied for 60-minute airing. Among 30-minute programs broadcast were DELEGATION FROM FLORIDA—interviews with delegates to the political convention; CRYING CITY—studying rejuvenation of downtown Miami; SILENT VOICE—comparing the American free vote with non-democratic processes elsewhere; FLORIDA'S FUTURE—pointing up integration problems.

The "NEEDS" questionnaire inspired a cultural SHOWCASE series. These 60-minute programs covered University of Miami music as well as offerings of the Miami Ballet Company, Miami Opera Guild, and dramatics groups.

WCKT also broadcast thousands of announcements and hundreds of hours of community service programming.

NATION TO NATION, OBJECTIVELY SPEAKING ON TELEVISION

China, Cuba, Laos, the Congo, Algiers—what next? Will a new crisis, as these have, create new areas of disagreement between traditionally friendly nations?

There has probably never been a time when better communications between people of different lands was more urgently needed. Not just abstract reports that filter through individuals—but first-hand documents of the way people live from day to day...of their goals and aspirations, their inner thoughts expressed spontaneously and directly to individuals of another country, another way of life. More direct contact must be established—now!

It is with this conviction that INTERTEL was established by five television broadcasters—Westinghouse Broadcasting Company (U.S.A.), National Educational Television and Radio Center (U.S.A.), the Australian Broadcasting Commission, the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, and Associated Rediffusion, Ltd. (Great Britain).

On a regular basis over the next 18 months, each member of this international federation of broadcasters will in turn produce a television program on a leading world problem for a potential audience of 281,000,000 English-speaking people—greatest audience ever exposed to the same public service program. Each program will be another cultural exchange: Each a viewpoint from another nation—fresh, challenging, most likely controversial.

Among the many topics scheduled for programming are: the Canadian attitude toward Cuba...from Australia, an analysis of U.S.-Canadian relations...an English view of the inner conflicts of France...an American impression of how the ordinary Englishman lives today, and what he can look forward to.

At a time when the world is in such critical need of greater mutual understanding and positive acts for peace, WBC believes INTERTEL goes far to satisfy this need.

NEWSMAKER of the week

The newest national station representative firm, Television Advertising Representatives, is taking final shape as a separate but subsidiary company of the Westinghouse Broadcasting Co. with election of Larry Israel as president, succeeding Donald H. McGauvau, WBC president who becomes TvAR board chairman. Storer has also formed its own rep firm.

The newsmaker: Larry Israel, v.p. and general manager of the new Westinghouse representative organization since December, 1958, takes over the post as TvAR president with the assistance of two able-bodied new executive officers: Robert M. McGregy, executive v.p., and Lamont Thompson, v. p. in Chicago.

The two-year-old firm, which previously represented only the five owned and operated tv properties of Westinghouse, is expanding its sales and service facilities to include representation for other video facilities. The current tv line-up: WBZ-TV, Boston; KDKA-TV, Pittsburgh; WJZ-TV, Baltimore; KYW-TV, Cleveland, and KPIX, San Francisco.

Larry Israel

Israel has been with WBC in an executive capacity since 1957, when he joined the o&o station, WJZ-TV, Baltimore, as general manager. He's credited by his management with upping the station from third market position to first after take-over because of a "drastically" revised program schedule—and in a short time.

Before joining WBC, Israel worked as v.p. and general manager of WENS, the tv station in Pittsburgh which he helped put on the air in 1953, and for KMGM-TV, Minneapolis-St. Paul. In 1948 he entered the broadcast business with WDTV, now KDKA-TV, WBC's Pittsburgh outlet, as—successively—news and special events editor, operations manager and sales manager.

Israel was born in McKeesport, Pa., where he spent his early years and from which he emigrated to the Midwest for studies at the University of Missouri's journalism school. His first post-college jobs were as a reporter for a Philadelphia newspaper and broadcast facility.

Since then he has experienced a logical metamorphosis to salesman of the type which insists on solid backing of station and cost data with specific marketing information for agencies and clients.

The 42-year-old company president lives in Scarsdale, a Westchester suburb, with his wife and their two youngsters, Susan and Howard.

WHICH HALF? John Wanamaker, founder of the Philadelphia store bearing his name, once said only half his advertising expenditure did any good—but he didn't know which half. Here Mr. and Mrs. Metrodelphia are listening to part of the good half on WIP, just before they pass through Wanamaker's "carriage entrance."

Confidence Begins at Home. Philadelphia retailers do much of their selling on WIP, and with good reason. 40 years of unparalleled public service speak for the past. And Metropolitan's fresh concepts of news, service and showmanship are rapidly moving WIP to the foremost audience position in Philadelphia. More and more national advertisers, too, are doing their shopping on . . . WIP, Metrodelphia, Pa.

Plea for 'blue ribbon' programing

When I did my 6 March piece commenting on Governor LeRoy Collins' maiden speech before the Joint Boards of the National Association of Broadcasters I fully intended to make no further comment on the attitudes and philosophies of the NAB's new president until he submitted his plan for reorganization to the Association in June. However, as you know, just last week, 15 March (this is being written on the 22nd), the distinguished new leader of the broadcasting trade group got up before Radio and Television Executives' Society and made another speech.

I'm an ardent RTES member, and I make most of the luncheons, but the day the Governor was talking I was soaking up some sorely needed sun beside the pool at the La Rada in San Juan, Puerto Rico. I have, however, read the Governor's remarks carefully, and discussed them with a number of industry people, whose judgment I respect and consider moderately objective.

In his first talk to the Broadcasters in February, the Governor said that he hoped to see that the NAB "becomes involved more effectively in improving the kind and quality of programing in prime time, the extent as well as the nature of advertising and the machinery for assuring effective self-discipline in all these areas."

Last Wednesday the Governor apparently decided to go a touch further. He said that he would like to see the three television networks, ABC, CBS and NBC put on about two hours each of what he called "blue ribbon" programing in prime evening hours. He defined what he meant by "blue ribbon programs." They should be, he said, "very high level . . . in such areas as outstanding drama, fine music, public information and education . . . programing which, through its very quality, will prove highly entertaining to substantial segments of the audience."

In the February maiden speech, the Governor also was kind enough to offer this advice negatively about the kind of programing the industry should do: ". . . if any program is an influence for debasement and is inimical to the public welfare, regardless of how popular, in my opinion its public broadcast cannot be justified."

Suggestions from another source

Strangely enough, during roughly the same span of time in which the new head of the broadcasting industry's trade association has gone to great lengths to spell out, as he sees it, the kind of programing the industry should do, another very eminent and distinguished gentleman with no prior programing experience, has let it be known that he is not particularly happy with the kind of programing the broadcasting industry has presented to the public. At least he has let this be known to the degree that he feels some studies

GOOD NEWS!

6 out of 10 copies of local programing needs should be made. And he has further let it be known that he feels it is fully within the area of responsibility of the Federal Communications Commission to have a voice in the kind of programing broadcasters put out. I refer, of course, to the Commission's own new Chairman, Mr. Newton N. Minow.

I do not recall a single previous occasion in twenty-seven years as a close observer of the broadcasting scene, when the head of the NAB and the head of the FCC both decided at the same time to counsel the broadcasters on the kind of programs they should carry.

It seems a little ironic to me that all this fine counsel should be forthcoming at a time when CBS-TV has just let it be known that it intended to continue to carry Eyewitness to History, CBS Reports and Twentieth Century regardless of whether Firestone continues to sponsor the first, or Prudential the last of the three. Cancellations seem imminent on both of these, and it is entirely possible that the Paley-Stanton network will find itself carrying on a sustaining basis three shows which I think Governor Collins would admit fit his definition of "blue ribbon programing" and "very high level in the public information area."

A fairly good guess at the cost to the network of carrying these three shows (production, time, etc.) would be somewhere around $15,000,000 per year. NBC, too, is probably carrying more public information and important world affairs shows in prime time than ever in its history. And even ABC is doing more in these areas as they secure an increasingly firmer financial foothold on the ladder of network competition.

Possibly the networks and broadcasters don't mind these program suggestions from the new head of their trade association and the Chairman of the FCC. Personally it makes me a little uneasy.

Elaboration slated for future

Possibly this isn't the best week in the world for me to be worrying about what I have always considered to be the very essential freedom of programing which I think responsible broadcasters must have if we don't want to risk government control of radio and tv.

Judging from the mail, I've got other problems. You may remember that I did a column on the jingle business 20 February. I was careful to point out that the piece was by no means intended as a complete or definitive presentation of the jingle industry and all the firms in it. Little good that did me. Mr. James C. Wells, president of Futursonic Productions, Inc., of Dallas, Texas, wrote me: ". . . We were indeed disappointed to receive no mention in your column on the 'Jingle Saga.' Futursonic produces at least as many musical jingles as any other like firm in the world. . . ." Mr. Wells then supplied me with extremely interesting operational data.

My old friend, Al Sambrook, manager of RCA Recorded Program Services was a little more petulant. He wrote: "Dear Joe:

"I read your column about radio jingles, their development, sources and distribution. My comment is that you certainly should have investigated the development, sources and distribution a little more because there are other factors in that regard such as transcription libraries whose total production and distribution are tremendous and by far the greater."

But that's all Al said. Not a word more, nor any printed pieces, press releases, promotion material or what have you about the excellent Thesaurus and Syndicated Sales operations of his estimable organization. Nevertheless, when I get a little more time maybe I'll explore the entire history of the jingle business, its "development, sources and distribution" and do another piece.

Flint-Bay City-Saginaw moves into the top 40 (in actual TV homes delivered)

You see, what were once two eastern Michigan markets—Flint and Bay City-Saginaw—are now listed and officially recognized as one. So this moves this heavily populated urban area way up among the 40 largest TV markets in the country.*

Right in the same neighborhood with Providence, Charlotte, Denver and New Orleans. And that's in terms of homes actually delivered people watching television, not just set owners. It's a market with money, too. Even a little better.

off than some of its new top-40 neighbors. SRDS reports, for example, nearly $200 more to spend per household than the national average.

How do you reach it? The only way, really, is from within the market area.

For the very latest figures we have show that far-away Detroit stations no longer give you the eastern Michigan audience. It's the stations within that deliver the viewers today and, we're glad we can add, at a most appealing cost. That's where we are, of course—within the market area. Our transmitter is only 20 miles from Flint, 12 from Saginaw and 25 from Bay City. With City-Grade service to all three. To reach us, and to get all the figures on the nation's newest top-40 market, just call Harrington, Richter & Parsons, Inc. Program background

Many thanks for the article "How tv looks to a retired veteran" published in the 6 February issue of SPONSOR. You did an excellent job of reporting.

For the record: there are two slight discrepancies, neither one of which is really of sufficient importance to warrant comment. However, someone might challenge the facts, in which case you should be armed with the particulars.

In the opening paragraph I am referred to as a "veteran sales executive." Although, during the past 10 years, salesmen and sales departments have reported to me, I have never regarded myself as primarily a sales executive. I have felt that my forte was station management, station relations and general administration.

The last paragraph states that I began broadcasting as "manager of KYW and continued with that station when it was sold to NBC and became WMAQ." KYW was started by Westinghouse in Chicago in October 1921. WMAQ came on the air (with the original call letters of WGU) on April 13, 1922. I established the station for The Chicago Daily News within a few weeks after I had been made The Daily News' first radio editor in January 1922. WMAQ was sold to NBC in November, 1931 and I chose at that time to remain in broadcasting rather than returning to newspaper work.

Valued support

May I use this letter to you for three purposes?

First, let me thank you and many other advertising publication editors for the wonderful editorial support you have given the Academy during these first three years of existence. It has been help such as this that has built our membership to nearly 200 advertising educators.

Second, I have enclosed a copy of our 1961 Yearbook that has been sent out to over 2,500 interested educators and practitioners. It's our first visual calling card.

And last, will you please publish the dates of our annual convention in your column, "Trade Dates." This will be our first meeting in the West and we certainly want a good representation.

Timebuyers at work

Lucille Widener of Victor & Richards, Inc., New York, feels that "the advantages of working for a small agency are numerous. The responsibilities are numerous too. The buyer works directly with the media director and meets all the clients personally. In a recent article on timebuyers, a vice president and media director of a large agency admitted that the buyer, unfortunately, rarely sees the client in order to explain why program B is a better buy than A, even though B's cpm is higher than A's. The smaller agency timebuyer has a chance to explain the why's and wherefores of a buy. The promotional pieces that are sent in by stations to the timebuyers are very important. Last year, a station in Salt Lake City, Utah, sent a success story in on their morning man. He had received thousands of orders for a certain mail order item. We filed this—not only in the files but in the back of our mind. When the next radio campaign got under way for one of our clients, we ordered this morning schedule and ran for weeks and weeks. Result—the station got billings and we received orders. It is a good idea for representatives to send success stories and promotional pieces."

Carole Lewis of Papert, Koenig, Lois, New York, points out, "The trend among advertising agencies, large and small, towards more creative copy places an added responsibility on timebuyers. Obviously, the necessity to put more originality into commercials, to make each sell more effectively, is a result of our more competitive economy. Each expensive unit of time must work harder if it is to produce the same amount of net profit for the advertiser. This extra effort cannot be limited to the creative department. With better tools to work with, better radio or television commercials, the buyer has an even more stringent responsibility to put them to best use. The content of the commercials, the particular appeal of their selling approach, must be considered in selecting time, programs and stations that will most accurately match their direction. This blending of product characteristics, creative direction and appropriate media selection can be a most stimulating challenge to a timebuyer—especially when one adds to the blend. "And don't forget, keep the cost per thousand down."

*"Well, we decided one thing, anyhow:
we include Huntington-Charleston and WSAZ-TV."*

MORE AND MORE sales and advertising managers are putting the HUNTINGTON-CHARLESTON market on their must-buy lists. Reasoning: This Dynamic Circle pulls together 72 counties in 4 states, an area of concentrated industrial might in the heart of the "American Ruhr" region of the great Ohio Valley. The two million industrious people who live here earn $4 billion in annual payrolls. WSAZ-TV is the only single advertising medium that covers the nearly 500,000 TV homes in the area. Mail is usually a good barometer of one's popularity. Yet, because WPIX-11 has no mail, we're more popular with advertisers! An extraordinary statement except when you understand the kind of mail we mean: No Mail Order Advertisers! WPIX-11 advertisers are national, representing the foremost advertisers in the land. General Motors. General Foods, P & G. Coca-Cola, R. J. Reynolds — they're all here in quantity. The big focus on the week: the continuing brisk upward trend of national spot tv buying for the second successive week.

As a result of this sharp upsurge in calls and orders major reps have radically revised their previous estimates of March, April, and May business. Some think that even June will turn out substantially above expectations.

They make this reservation: March 1960 was such a disproportionately large month that some stations may not show much of an increase.

The action on availability calls and confirmations the past week was fairly evenly spread between New York and the midwest.

New York tv business included P&G's Duz (Compton), 49 weeks, 5-10 minutes day and night each per station; Avon Cosmetics (Monroe Dreher); Palmolive soap (Bates), 52 weeks, day and night minutes, chainbreaks; American Home Instantine (Compton) and Sani-Flush (Bates); Ivory Liquid (Compton); Calumet baking powder (FCB).

Out of the midwest: Kool-Aid (FCB); Kellogg (Burnett), all products in major markets, 10 weeks; Rust-Oleum (O'Grady, Anderson, Gray); American Dairy (Campbell-Mithun); Amoco (D'Arcy), eight weeks, about 70 markets; Continental Casualty (Hartman), 15 markets.

In view of Ford's new approach to tv, spot has every chance of becoming an important item on that giant's advertising menu.

How spot fares, of course, will depend in large measure on the response that the automotive firm gets from the networks to the position it has delineated concerning the use of that medium. That position, in sum, is this:

- Ford will no longer obligate itself to maintaining a flat level of billings on a year-around scale.
- The new pattern will be—lay it on very thick the last quarter of the year, thin out a little the first quarter of the year, reduce advertising perceptibly the second quarter and push very little during the summer.
- Because of the basic economics of the auto field, it is imperative that the networks apply an all-out dollar discount instead of figuring in continuity also (ABC TV already does it).

The foregoing is all part of a long-range plan that Ford has adopted for its advertising strategy and general marketing. In light of the fact that NBC TV, for all intents and purposes, has let Chevrolet take a 13-week hiatus—the first such granted—from its Sunday 9-10 p.m. slot has made Ford confident that the networks will go along—partially, if not completely.

Madison Avenue reaction: CBS TV and NBC TV will likely take a long, long look at the discount angle since it involves a most basic principle in their economic structure.

Some agency marketingmen see something that happened this past winter as boding well for retailing and advertising this spring.

They note that because of the severe snowstorms and sub-zero weather in January and February, and even March, people didn't get out to shop for other than necessities.

This built-up mound of spendable cash, the marketers add, will gravitate rapidly toward the retail marts handling durables as the weather turns better for shopping.

The midwest accounted overwhelmingly for the past week's new activity in spot radio.

Among the accounts: Campbell's Barbecue Beans (NL&B); Clabber Girl baking powder (Pollyea, Terra Haute); Heckman Biscuits (Hartman); Swift's Allsweet (Burnett); Kraft Margarine (NL&B); Kraft's Mayonnaise (JWT); Parker Pen (Compton); HA Hair Arranger (R. Jack Scott). About set to buy: Speigel (R. Jack Scott).

For the second time within a year D-F-S is on the quest for special rates from radio stations for L&M—but with this difference: the agency is side-stepping the reps and approaching the stations directly.

One of the stations contacted by D-F-S reported to its rep that the deal the agency offered was lower than the lowest possible end rate and called for discounts not contained in the rate card.

D-F-S's response to SPONSOR-SCOPE re this report: no comment.

New food brands are doing a lot to keep spot buying active out of Chicago.

- Quaker's ready-to-eat high-protein, Life (JWT), which has been under test in Albany, N. Y., for three years, is going national with tv schedules. The cereal is a competitor of Kellogg's K and emphasizes a built-in sweetener, which K lacks.

- Two new 900-calorie formulas, Pet Milk's Sego (Gardner, St. Louis) and General Mills' Subtract (Knox-Reeves) are also bowing into air media this month, with Sego electing spot tv and Subtract, spot radio.

With the way the scheduling's going in network tv, sports could turn out to be the last refuge of live programing.

Perhaps that's why sports continues to be a highly saleable commodity in the medium.

In any event, there'll be more network sports than ever on tap for the sponsor dollar during the 1961-62 season, with Ford, as noted in the previous issue, among the latest long-range policy recruits.

Following is SPONSOR-SCOPE's network-by-network breakdown of estimated sports revenue (time, talent, rights, production and cable costs included) for the coming season:

It would be no exaggeration to say that major tv agencies and their clients are appalled at the prices asked for some of the new network half-hour film series.

The negative costs of some of the new ones are running $60-65,000, as compared to two or three seasons back when $40-45,000 was considered pretty high.

Undoubtedly the record-breaker of them all is the new Robert Young show, which has been sold on an alternate-week basis to Scott Paper and Toni at $72,000 for originals and $30,000 for reruns.

Scott, whose relations with Young and his producer, Gene Rodney, have been most cordial over the years, couldn't resist a protest when the price was mentioned.

However, it became reconciled by the thought that if the budget proved too overwhelming, the series would be given a summer hiatus and a cheaper show substituted.

Reynolds Metals (L&N) may be starting something that could, if widely adopted, throw a monkey wrench into the alternate-week cross-plugging concept.

In settling on an alternate hour of NBC TV's Dick Powell anthology Reynolds stipulated that it would consume all six minutes of commercial time coming to it.

This means the other sponsor or sponsors of the series will have to forego mention on the alternate week.

CBS TV is definitely getting off the ground with its 10 a.m.-to-noon rotating minute sales plan.

As of last week it was running around 50% of sellout; that is, of the 100 spots available approximately 50 were sponsored. NBC TV morning periods were 75% sold.

Nighttime sponsored picture for the first week of March: in terms of minutes ABC TV was up 25% over a year ago, CBS TV was down 10% and NBC TV was up 10%.

NBC TV is making it easier for advertisers to buy into most of its fall hour shows by pricing them at a flat $30,000 gross per commercial minute.

The effect: (1) it betters the network's competitive position, particularly on new series; (2) it provides a convenient type of buy for individual brands.

In some cases the network requires a run of 26 consecutive weeks; in others, the minimum is 13 weeks, with alternate weeks verboten.

P&G will have a record number of weekly nighttime commercial minutes riding this fall on the tv networks.

At the moment the P&G product exposure adds up to 18½ minutes a week, with the placement as follows: the Snowwhites, three minutes; Cheyenne, two minutes; Rifleman, three minutes; the Dick Van Dyke show, three minutes; the Real McCoys, three minutes; the CBS TV period now occupied by the Tom Ewell show, 1½ minutes; the unscheduled ABC TV Thursday 9:30-10 period, three minutes.

ABC TV points to the January-February 1960 report on audience composition by ARB as giving added support to the network's claim that its nighttime schedule holds top favor with the younger and larger tv homes.

The following comparisons concern average per-minute ratings between 7:30-11 p.m.:

GROUPS	ABC TV	CBS TV	NBC TV
Under 40	24.7	20.9	18.3
40-54	20.5	22.0	17.7
55 & over	15.8	22.8	21.1
1-2 families	15.4	21.6	19.3
3-4 families	19.6	22.7	18.7
5 & over families	27.1	21.5	19.0

Put this one down as a first since the advent of bigtime tv. CBS TV is turning over a nighttime period to a regularly scheduled sports show, namely, what is now the Sunday Sports Spectacular.

The switch will be for the spring and summer. The spot: Thursday 7:30-8:30.

The suggestion for the move came from JWT in behalf of Schlitz.

Look for Campbell Soup (BBDO) to up its spot radio budget for 1961-62.

The pattern will be to cover all the bigger markets in its regional buys, which will raise the list to between 80-100 markets.

A report prepared for the annual meeting of CBS, Inc., stockholders (19 April) reveals that the top five earners on the broadcast side in 1960 earned among them around $1,164,627 in salaries, additional compensation and retirement pensions.

PERSON	SALARY	PAID OUT	DEFERRED	PENSION	TOTAL
William S. Paley	$150,000	$138,750	$11,250	$59,252	$359,252
Frank Stanton	150,000	138,750	11,250	59,027	359,027
Merle S. Jones	100,096	17,500	22,500	24,300	164,396
James T. Aubrey, Jr.	100,000	40,000	-----	30,300	170,300
Arthur Hull Hayes	63,500	16,250	8,750	23,152	111,652
TOTAL	$563,596	$351,250	$53,750	$196,031	$1,164,627

What is now a lot of smoke on the beer front could turn out to be a big spot billings fire come the warm weather up north.

Practically all the brand leaders with more or less national distribution have been inquiring about availabilities of time and programs in both tv and radio.

These include Schlitz (JWT), Miller (Mathisson), Old Milwaukee (Best), Pabst and Blatz (K&E). Budweiser (D'Arcy) is deep in the process of actually buying tv and radio. An active regional is Frankenmuth, buying radio through Marcus, Cleveland.

Incidentally, more and more reps are acting as local salesmen for stations in getting orders from national brewers via their agencies. The rate is local card rate, with the agencies expected to add on their 17.6% commission.

The SRA's standard contract form has but one hurdle to go for final adoption at JWT.

The agency's media department has been studying the form since last November and last week it recommended to the legal department the latter give it its imprimatur.

Quite a number of other important spot agencies have already embraced the form, but an exception will be Burnett. It's not because Burnett doesn't favor it, but the agency handles station buying via an automation system.

Looks like Compton will plug the hole made by the exit of Mobiloil with the acquisition from Grey of Chock Full o' Nuts ($2.5 million).

Grey is making up partially for this defection with the Martinson coffee account.

Farm radio markets, which include large urban stations catering to rural audiences, are due for a huge haul of Ford tractor dollars out of Meldrum & Fewsmith, Cleveland.

The market list may run as high as 600, and the occasion is the introduction of a new large-type tractor, which makes Ford now competitive with International-Harvester.

NET TV BUYING FLURRY AS OPTIONS END

Client options are up today (Monday) after a weekend extension by the networks because of the holiday. Shortening deadline spurred a flurry of buying activity in the past fortnight.

In the six-day sales period from 20 to 28 March, 20 major agencies made 40 program buys on the three networks. A SPONSOR-WEEK summary of sales reported by the networks for this time period points up these trends:

- Most of the sales are new rather than renewal business—29 in 40 transactions.
- More than three-fourths of the sales are for fall rather than summer sponsorship.
- Five agencies in the 20 represented account for 25 of the 40 program buys.
- A total of 31 advertisers was signed by the three networks in six sales days, with 13 for CBS TV, 11 for NBC TV and 7 for ABC TV (verbal orders not included).

Agencies doing the most business in terms of total program buys—NOT necessarily in terms of billing volume and commercial tonnage—were headed by Compton, with portions of seven programs purchased for Schick safety razor.

Next in order of total number of show buys were Lenzen & Newell and Kenyon & Eckhardt, with five each. The weight is with L&N, however, because through it the American Gas Assn. has contracted for eight hour-long live dramas based on movie scripts owned by the Selznick Co.

Series will be telecast in color at the rate of one monthly on NBC TV. Other L&N clients which bought

$40 million billing in latest ad merger

$40 million is the estimated annual billing for the newly merged Western Advertising and Geyer, Morey, Madden & Ballard, the former contributing some $6 million of this total.

Western, a 36-year-old agency, becomes a division of GMM&B, which is 50 years old. Announcement was made by Sam M. Ballard, president of GMM&B, and G. B. Gunlogson, Western board chairman. Move is effective today (Monday).

FCC to study how commercial vhf's in L.A., N.Y. could convert to education (Washington): Two commercial vhf tv stations in New York and Los Angeles may be diverted to educational uses.

Possibility came to light last week as FCC in a surprise move approved immediate inquiry into feasible methods by which this could be done. Each city now has seven commercial vhf allocations.

FCC notes that 13% of the American public living in these markets is now deprived of such a service, and that both cities have unusually good educational resources. Both have unused uhf allocations for educational facilities.

Deadline for comments is 1 May. FCC contends it is "urgently desirable and in the public interest to inquire into means." Study will be complex and necessarily threatens existing commercial operations.

Y&R: One-half of "New Breed" on ABC TV for Johnson & Johnson, a third of "Bus Stop" on ABC TV for Singer Sewing, renewal on ABC TV for J&J of "Donna Reed" and "Surfside 6."

The DFS business: Sterling Drug for NBC TV's "Thriller" and "Dr. Kildare," L&M also in the latter and for "Twilight Zone" on CBS TV.

Only non-New York agencies represented in the buying list for that period were North Adv. and Leo Burnett, Chicago, and Knox-Reeves, Minneapolis.

Most of this new business—about 40% of the program buys—has come from drugs and cigarettes, with other product categories about evenly divided with only two or three program buys.

Storer names Baxter to radio v.p. slot

Encouraging nod in radio's direction has been given by the Storer Broadcasting Co., where Lionel Baxter has been named vice president for radio and the seven Storer radio properties.

Lionel Baxter

Baxter's credo is to match community need with the basic program service of news, music, entertainment and special features. Four of the Storer outlets are independents, three, network-affiliated.

Baxter has held a variety of executive positions with the firm since 1953, when he became commercial manager of WBRC, Birmingham, and moved a year later to the managing directorship. In '57 he took over v.p. and management of the Philadelphia outlet, WIBG, remaining there until 1959.

They are: WTOP-TV, Washington; WBTV, Charlotte, and WJXT, Jacksonville. Effective date is 25 June. TvAR now reps five tv stations owned by Westinghouse Broadcasting, of which it is a subsidiary.

RESEARCHERS' EYES GLUED TO FINE PRINT IN U.S. RATINGS SUMMARY

Statisticians and analysts throughout the industry are absorbed this week in a word-by-word perusal of the complex 163-page report on ratings made by the American Statistical Assn. to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce in Washington.

Admen and most broadcast pros are throwing up their hands—figuratively and literally—and relying on research colleagues to untangle the skeins of technical terms and interpretations.

In balance, the report seems to omit specific conclusions and to straddle the fence in documenting an equal number of pros and cons about current ratings services, their systems and techniques.

Several trends emerging seem to follow those already established in agency analysis of the raw ratings data. Among them:

- The major agencies blend the results of more than one service to come up with a pattern. They don't take a raw rating at numerical value per se.

For example, if Service A shows a 10 rating, Service B a 5, these raw figures are balanced off against the program competition. Usually rankings of shows in relation to others surveyed by the same service show a constant pattern.

- The same generalized approach is usually taken for audience composition data. For example, a program may attract 60 women, 30 men and 10 teens for among every 100 persons.

An agency analyst, looking for trends, would be influenced against buying such a program for a male audience because of the female dominance.

New York admen, commenting on the survey in general terms, concur that there is a need for standardization and additional documentation, and for the ATA's recommended Office of Research Methodology.

As one noted, however, "Everybody is for better ratings. It's like no one being against sin!"

Oren Harris, chairman of the Regulatory Agencies subcommittee—a follow-up group to the former Oversight subcommittee which commissioned the independent study a year ago—commented on the report's complexity as he released it to the press 10 days ago.

He noted there was something in it for everybody—for those people against and those pro ratings as now determined.

The six chapters in the booklet cover these subjects:

1. General introduction.
2. Discussion, conclusions and recommendations.
3. The data provided by the rating services.
4. Methods used and populations covered in current rating services.
5. Interviewing procedures.
6. Sampling methods.

Wall St. Journal says tv $$ gains spark revamp of Satevepost, maybe Life

A whopping 36-inch story in last Wednesday's "Wall St. Journal" credited tv's capture of advertising dollars as the big reason for an upcoming revamp of the "Saturday Evening Post"—and possibly "Life," too.

Among statements in Michael Creedman's summary:

- "Changes (in prospect for Satevepost) are dictated by an entirely new challenge: tv."

- "The trouble, according to magazine men, is declining advertising, lost mostly to tv in recent years."

- "The 'Post's' big competitors in the general magazine field—'Life' and 'Look'—have not come up with the complete answer to tv competition either." (See adjacent story.)

WSJ noted that 1960 was the 10th consecutive year in which "Post" had ad lineage losses. In 1950 lineage totals figured 3-plus million; a decade later, despite circulation gains lineage dropped to 1.8-plus million.

N. Y. ratings bill voted into limbo

The New York State bill which would have demanded full documentation about ratings used in promotion or sales was tabled indefinitely, in effect, as it was sent back to committee last week before adjournment of the Assembly. Move puts it in limbo until next year.

Bill was filed by Assemblyman Bruce Manley, Republican from Fredonia, on 4 January as an amendment to the penal law "in relation to the issuance of radio or tv ratings for the purpose of influencing the sale of advertising."

Essence: to require full statements as to the "manner in which percentages or numbers are obtained" including "description of the method used, number of persons contacted, dates and times when contacted, location of such persons, exact area covered by the poll."

Spring plus love equals Prince spaghetti

Prince Macaroni Mfg. Co. has hired a "love entrepreneur" to extoll this emotion's satisfactions to the nation's housewives.

Three-minute radio features themed to "Nothing moves people like the power of love" indicate the sponsor's implicit hope that nothing moves sales of spaghetti like spot radio (supplemented with newspapers).

"A little romance" is to be imparted by John Fostini, "whose dramatic, virile voice and realistic approach to the subject of love are unique."

ADMEN MULL 'COMPLEMENTARY' ROLE OF MAGAZINES TO TV

A spot check on Agency Row reaction to A. C. Nielsen's introduction of its new Nielsen Media Service is that magazines got a big boost. But admen talking with SPONSOR-WEEK aren't at all sure just what tv gets out of the new comparison.

Objective of the new print-tv service, Nielsen spokesmen said Monday at a mass introduction to agencies and advertisers, is to "provide a continuing audience measurement of national magazines, of network tv and also to provide the facility for combining audiences that view or read these media."

Presentation stressed that the information was not "competitive"—merely "complementary." But general findings are construed by many tv pros to be highly competitive, in THEIR sense of that word.

One conclusion: magazines have "heaviest contact" in light-viewing tv homes, "minimum contact" in homes that have been covered heavily by tv." Thus the heaviest readers aren't the heaviest viewers.

Another summary: Westerns, situation comedies and mystery dramas reach more of the younger homes, and Westerns have more general appeal than the other program types. Weekly magazine averages tend to have the same audience pattern as the average situation comedy or mystery drama. However, "the average Western reaches more of the lower income homes, those with a family income under $5,000," contrasted with the average measured magazines which "has higher audiences in the upper income groups ($8,000-plus)."

The average situation comedy and mystery drama—again—tend to have audiences similar to the magazines—upper income homes. Nielsen stressed that "nobody buys on averages; they help to give direction."

ADVERTISING HAS ITS OWN M.M.

The initials MM took on new meaning last week as Metropolitan Broadcasting Corp. stockholders voted to change the corporate name to MetroMedia Inc.

John W. Kluge, board chairman and president, pointed out the multiple-media operation of the company with its tv and radio properties and its recent acquisition of the Foster & Kleiser outdoor advertising firm which headquarters on the West coast. He noted also that the broadcast properties contribute about 50% to the company's gross.

John W. Kluge

Still further expansion was provided for by stockholders who voted authorization to increase the number of stock shares to 3.6 million.

BBDO boosts spot radio with new 'pocket piece'

Top user of medium is sending primer to its clients in attempt to break down long-held theories, show medium's present values

BBDO, the top spot radio billing agency ($15 million in 1960, according to SPONSOR's estimate), is sending out to its clients this week its long-awaited booklet on spot radio. The booklet takes a hard and authoritative look at the economics of spot radio, its audience and delivery. It is in effect a briefing to the agency's clients as well as notice that, while many of the old opinions about radio have died hard, they are unequivocally dead.

The pocket piece, released by BBDO's v.p. and media director Herbert D. Maneloveg, contains an abundance of charts, figures and facts (some surveys were especially made for BBDO) on the "hows" and "whys" of spot radio buying, but this does not mean that the agency is establishing a set pattern for spot radio use among its clients.

"Every product, every client is different," said Maneloveg, "and here are dozens of ways to use spot radio. The purpose of the booklet is to remind clients and some of our people that radio has changed—and what constitutes that change; to put it in a proper perspective and perhaps change some old ideas."

BBDO is careful to point out that this study—published here for the first time—is not intended to in any way deprecate the powerhouse stations, but to show clients the need for buying balance.

ning and analysis department. include analyses of:

- The growth of the independent stations, including basic audience profiles of these compared with “powerhouse” and network stations. A special Nielsen study prepared for the agency in 100 markets illustrates this section.

- The cost efficiency of spot radio comparing “typical” cost-per-1,000 to network radio, network and spot television (e.g., “A tv advertiser will spend $105,000 per week for a night-time network show. This same expenditure will buy over 50 radio spots per week in the top 100 markets.”)

- The reach of single vs. multiple-station buys, including a table showing how hypothetical spot schedules would build up four week unduplicated ratings if split up on one, two or three stations (from studies also especially prepared by Nielsen).

“The numbers—everything in this pocket piece—all these things are merely a guide toward buying,” Maneloveg explained. “They are merely documentation. There are obviously intuitive angles to understand before you buy a medium; the numbers are a guide, but only our judgement and knowledge can lead us to decision.”

BBDO uses the spot radio medium “to solve specific problems, to answer specific needs.” Among its major uses by 385 Madison Ave. timebuyers are the following examples:

1) To supplement a summer drop in television viewership. “We often hold off a part of the budget for this purpose.”)

2) By examination of the profile of a radio audience, when the buyer seeks young households, for example, he uses spot radio for additional frequency against prime prospects on top of a layer of national media.

3) Sometimes because of budget considerations or the peculiar profile of a product, they can use radio exclusively (e.g. men’s products in driving time).

4) Fm and “better-programing” am stations give extra frequency for expensive purchase products.

“We use spot radio to solve marketing problems; it’s as simple as that,” Maneloveg stated. “If we use it more than anybody else, then we’re at the top of the list. But we’re not concerned about where we place, only with how we use it.”

Among the special studies made for the pocket piece, one of the most significant to the medium deals with independent vs. network stations. It compares their audiences by county size, homes with children, age of head of household and income level. BBDO is careful to note that both kinds of stations reach important segments of the market, in which respect “they tend to complement each other.”

“Let me point out,” said Maneloveg, “that this study—published here for the first time—does not, nor is it intended to, in any way deprecate the powerhouse stations. It is designed to show our clients that a balance is necessary. Radio buying patterns are such that you must blend different stations together: you must examine station profiles.”

The special Nielsen study (of 100 markets) illustrates the difference in basic profile between “powerhouse” and network stations on the one hand and independent stations on the other. The former are shown to be more popular among older and smaller families, to have a flat profile by ir come and a good reach into rural areas.

The independent and music-and-news operations are shown to appeal to younger homes with children, to have "a sharp bias toward" higher-income families. And since most have "relatively weak signals" outside of their home areas, much of their audience tends to be concentrated in "A" and "B" counties.

"The purpose is not to come up with something new or earth-shaking," Maneloveg said, "but to remind our clients of the changes in radio. The major use of this study is, after all, for justification of certain buys. Clients, so many of them, still remember back to the days when powerhouse and network stations were the only ones they bought. But today, when you have a product that wants, say, big city or housewife orientation, the powerhouse station may not be the whole answer any more.

"You may want a certain age group," he continued, "or you may want reach just within the city limits. You look at this profile on page 11 and see that you can do better buying a number of independents in the same market. That's its purpose."

The media director outlined BBDO's basic philosophy on the use of "the numbers" after noting that the agency would "put out a series of pocket pieces, one for every medium that most people have a deep interest in but about which they may have questions." Subsequent booklets will cover fringe television ("What are the ratings; what an advertiser can acquire; who are the viewers?"); daytime tv ("This one is almost completed."); fm radio; supplements; total audience concepts of magazines and a twice-a-year rate digest.

"We don't buy just for ratings," Maneloveg stressed. "The history of BBDO in tv shows that we have top programs some seasons and don't others. We examine the weekly figures, of course, but we're not unhappy when they're not all tops; the 'type' of audience we're reaching determines how happy we are. In radio, we use ratings the same way, just as a guide. We are more interested in the profile of our audience.

“Ratings are used only as a guide. In a buy, the important thing is the audience profile.”

“Ratings are numbers; numbers are people; people are markets. We are trying to show our clients that profiles are the important thing. We’d just as happily sacrifice a number of rating points against better prospects among the audience.

“In radio,” he noted, “we’re saying to our clients, ‘Would you rather have a nice average seven on a Top-40 station if you’re selling a prestige product, or would you rather have a solid two or three on a station with compatible programing and an audience with a high income?’”

Maneloveg said that he’d always been “surprised” at some agencies that make recommendations to clients and say that “our aim is to get a rating points a week.” He asked, “What do rating points mean? You can buy a nice big plan, get good ratings—but perhaps you’re not getting coverage, or you may be reaching the wrong people.

“We must look beyond ratings,” he declared. “For reach or coverage you may have to sacrifice cost-per-

1,000, lose a couple of discounts and buy different outlets. This is what we’re trying to explain to our clients.”

The study also makes note of radio programing trends. Based on station logs, Hooper and SRDS, BBDO estimates show a basic change since 1954. Music and news formats have risen to “complete dominance.” Almost 75-85% of the programing of most independent stations is now composed of music and news.

Popular music accounted for 28% of programing in 1954, the survey says. Today it totals 48%. Concert music is up, from 4% in 1954 to 8% today. The other categories: Country music, still the same 7%; local news, up 1% from 1954’s 11%; network shows, down to 10% today from 18%; and “miscellaneous,” 32% (1954), 15% today.

The car radio audience tends, BBDO notes, to be (1) younger (between 18 and 44 years old); (2) in higher income brackets, and (3) better educated . . . “and thus offers a prime target for advertising exposure.” Auto audience composition is listed as: from 6-9 a.m.—77% men, 14% women, 9% teens and children and 1.8 listeners per car; from 9 a.m. to noon—55% men, 26% women, 19% teens and children and 1.7 listeners per car; from noon to 6 p.m.—52% men, 31% women, 17% teens and children, and 1.7 listeners per car; and from 6 p.m. to midnight—52% men, 27% women, 21% teens and children and 1.9 listeners per car.

BBDO concludes, from data developed by Nielsen, Politz, Pulse and Sindlinger studies, that the average man does 30% of his radio listening away from home. Only 13% of the average woman’s listening is done out-of-home. Of this, about 70% of male listening is done in automobiles; more than 50% of female listening out-of-home is done in automobiles.

Auto listening, BBDO tells its clients, adds 25-26% to in-home radio audiences. In the late afternoon and early evening hours, automobile-radio usage is 40% as high as in-home listening. During an average day, almost 30 million people listen to car radios, males making up two thirds of the audience.

The agency notes here that costs vary sharply by station and time of day. Also, package plans featuring large discounts are not represented in the above chart; costs should be used only as guide

Radio's lack of seasonality is a plus, BBDO indicates. Average radio listening per week "does not vary sharply by season." June, July and August listening levels are the same as the annual average for the medium, the study says, and although in-home listening tends to drop slightly in the summer, added out-of-home listening more than makes up for this loss. "Tv viewing, on the other hand, declines by as much as 20% in the summer months."

Multiple station buys, BBDO tells its clients, are essential to provide strong penetration, because "very few stations in major markets are able to reach 30% or more of their metro area radio homes per week." In 21 major markets, the agency states, a "saturation" schedule of 60 spots per week, on one station, will deliver 38% of the radio homes an average of 11 times each, over a four-week period. A two-station buy (120 spots per week) extends unduplicated reach to 59%. A three-station buy (180 spots per week) reaches 69% of the homes, while all four stations combined deliver 74%.

Summing up BBDO's purpose in issuing the pocket piece to its clients: "Spot radio offers advertisers the use of an extremely economical, high-frequency medium which can be purchased with maximum flexibility. In many cases, radio can be a front-line vehicle delivering high levels of market penetration. In other situations, spot radio can provide the added 'reminder' copy lift needed to supplement a national network or spot tv schedule, or print campaign in key markets.

"BBDO has long recognized the inherent qualitative as well as quantitative values of spot radio. Because of this, we have consistently explored the available data on radio in order to determine basic media buying and planning principles. In recommending the medium for a specific marketing problem, no over-all rule of thumb or buying formulae can arbitrarily be substituted for proper media analysis which is geared to handle any specific questions."

Maneloveg declared that the release of the pocket does not mean that his agency is recommending spot radio over network radio, spot or network

Some hard-boiled business matters were thrashed out here beneath the languorous palms of balmy Florida, where Anheuser-Busch laid out the velvet carpet for reps in an effort to nail down blue chip availabilities for its upcoming, king-size summer promotion in supermarkets.

The makers of Budweiser and its St. Louis agency, D'Arcy, won't see all the returns in for a couple of months—the annual "Pick a Pair of 6-Paks" promotion doesn't begin until the end of May—but if the client doesn't get the cream of announcement spots on radio and tv, it certainly won't be for lack of trying.

A few weeks ago, Anheuser-Busch flew down a load of 75 media reps to its new $25 million plant, set in exotic Busch Gardens, consisting of 15 acres of tropical flora and fauna and one of the Florida's outstanding tourist attractions. About three doz-media and J. Dolan Walsh, assistant radio tv media manager, it was strictly business. There was good reason for it:

- The $2.5 million (half for radio/tv) summer push was described by Raymond E. Krings, Anheuser-Busch ad manager, as the most heavily supported promotion of its kind in the country. "This is no peanut deal," he told the reps.

- From 25 May through 31 July, during which time all Budweiser consumer advertising will be geared to "Pick a Pair," announcements will run on more than 600 radio stations and more than 300 tv stations. In addition, the promotion will be supported by the Budweiser-owned The Third Man, a half-hour series now running in some 80 markets.

- Though Budweiser is holding firmly to its number one ranking in beer sales and its share of market has increased nationally during the past four years, Budweiser's share of supermarket sales is down. William E. Bien, Anheuser-Busch marketing v.p., explained to the reps that 40% of national beer volume is concentrated in supermarkets.

- Budweiser, as well as other brewers, is being hit where it hurts by the supermarkets' private label beers. For this and the above reasons, Budweiser is understandably determined to get as much mileage out of its new supermarket promotion as possible.

The agency, client, and rep group from Chicago and St. Louis arrived in Tampa aboard a chartered DC-7, where they were greeted at Busch Gardens by August A. Busch, Jr., president and board chairman of Anheuser-Busch, who told them why this year's marketing plans are so important to the company.

Nearly 8.5 million barrels of beer were sold in 1960, he said, a record year for the brewery. He credited the "Pick a Pair" promotion for the company's hike in profits from $13 million in 1959 to $15.4 million in 1960. Last year marked the fourth consecutive year that Anheuser-Busch has maintained its record as number one in national beer sales. (In 1957 it regained the title as number one in national beer sales by brewery, and in 1958 became the leading branded seller.)

The general business sessions and the individual media meetings during the following two days were conducted in a uniquely informal environment on St. Petersburg Beach, at poolside and in meeting rooms of the Colonial Inn where the group was quartered during the trip.

The four-day excursion probably represents an unprecedented rapport between advertiser-agency and media. While no actual buying was done on the trip, budgets were discussed, and marketing and merchandising objectives were outlined for the promotion. This major thrust will gain additional impetus this year by a 20% increase in the consumer advertising budget.

Running concurrently in the "Pick a Pair" campaign will be full-page, four-color ads in eight national magazines and Sunday supplements, as well as a heavy outdoor schedule during June and July.

Here's how the "Pick a Pair" promotion works for Budweiser at the retail level: The "buy-two" concept applies to just about any item on the grocers' shelves. Under the "Pick a Pair" slogan, strongly identified with Budweiser, retailers are encouraged to promote two of anything they desire. Budweiser, in addition to its own in-store displays, provides the material for retailer use on other items: "Pick a Pair" over-the-wire-hangers, price cards, shelf talkers, window posters, etc. These materials do not bear the name Budweiser—just the "Pick a Pair" slogan. The only place the Budweiser name is

The annual "Pick a Pair" promotion has gained wide acceptance in the grocery and package store trade during the past four years. Morris R. Shlensky, president of the Katz Drug Chain reported: "The slogan 'Pick a Pair' has been popularized to the point where it is now an accepted American axiom. The Katz chain has realized such fine results from the promotion that we have extended it on a storewide basis."

G. C. Bramon, president of the Piggly Wiggly Corp., had this to say of the promotion: "'Pick a Pair' points to increased sales in all departments."

The "Pick a Pair" concept, developed in December 1957 by the brewery and D'Arcy, began on a modest scale in 1958. But soon after the first year promotion of the buy-two theory, "Pick a Pair" seemed destined for success, according to An-

FIVE-YEAR REPORT ON SPOT TV GROWTH

▼ A hefty increase is revealed in TvB-Rorabaugh study; '60 totals 50% ahead of amount invested in '56

▼ Announcements thrive as programs recede; number of spenders up; eight product categories double outlay

TvB today (3 April) releases a five-year review of spot tv's substantial growth, detailing the components of a 50% increase in gross time expenditures over 1956. Among its revelations:

- Spot tv more and more is becoming an announcement operation, while programs' share of revenue is on the wane

- The average spot tv advertiser spends nearly 80% more

- The number spending over $1,000,000 rose from 81 to 125

- Eight product classifications have doubled their investment; seven showed a hike of 50% or more

The report is a culmination of five years of research into and publication of spot tv expenditures by TvB and N. C. Rorabaugh. TvB does similar work on network tv, with the help of LNA-BAR. The wealth of information available for television is conspicuously absent from radio due to inability to develop a satisfactory and economical method, and lack of cooperation from stations, agencies and advertisers.

Spot tv advertisers spent $616,701,000 last year, compared to $397,606,000 in 1956, according to the study. While the number of advertisers was down slightly, individual expenditures were way up and withdrawals came almost entirely from those who spent under $20,000 a year, TvB finds.

Looking at individual advertisers, the largest (Procter & Gamble) trebled its spot tv budget over the five-year period, pushing the figure from $17,522,450 to $55,084,440.

The 10th highest spot tv advertiser's expenditure in the medium was 46% higher in 1960 than five years earlier. Miles Laboratories held down that position in 1956 with $5,354,730. Last year it was the Wrigley Co. which spent $7,810,220.

To qualify for 100th place last year took almost twice the spot tv investment that made the grade in 1956. American Bakeries Co. did it with $797,330 five years ago. In 1960 Standard Oil of California occupied the slot by spending $1,332,990.

SPOT TELEVISION SPENDING*

1956: $397,606,000

1960: $616,701,000

*Gross time, TvB Rorabaugh

That spot tv more and more is an announcement medium can clearly be seen in the direction taken by these increased monies. Announcements and participations were up 75%, I.D.'s 42%, while programs virtually remained the same in expenditures.

The figure for announcements and participations went from $266,970,000 in 1956 to $466,556,000 last year. I.D.'s hit $66,343,000 in 1960, compared to $46,906,000 five years ago. For programs, the investment remained in the neighborhood of $84,000,000.

Therefore, announcements and participations increased their share of the total spot tv dollar from 67% to 76%. I.D.'s were down slightly, from 11.8% to 10.8%, and programs showed a drop in share from 21% to 13.6%, according to TvB.

As for number of advertisers in the medium, last year's total is down somewhat from 1956 (3,807, compared to 4,000 previously).

TvB breaks down the five-year progress of spot tv expenditures by product category (see chart). It lists eight classifications that more than doubled their spending in the medium. In addition there are seven groups that went up 50% or more, six, between 25% and 50%, and two that were up less than 25%. On the other hand, TvB found decreased spot tv spending by seven product categories.

The study traces the five year progress of 1960's top 10 brands among the spot tv investors. In the lead with $7,810,000 is Wrigley chewing gum, which spent under a million dollars in the medium five years ago.

Second is Lestoil at $7,107,000, considerably less than its 1959 outlay, but well above the 1956 expenditure of $807,630. Next comes Maxwell House coffee, in the top 10 all five years, but now at its all-time high. In fourth, Kellogg cereals, up a million dollars over its 1956 figure. Mr. Clean, not yet on the market in 1956, or 1957, occupied fifth place last year.

Rounding out the top ten brands: Alka Seltzer, up there all five years; Kent cigarettes, which spent $4,667,000 in 1960 compared to $188,280 in 1956; Ford automobiles; Yuban

TV TAKES

THE FASHION WORLD BY STORM

Print-minded stores like Macy's, Ward, Alexander's, Ohrbach's, Hess' are using spot tv to show spring lines

Tv fashion shows are stimulating in-store traffic, boosting sales, building images, stores happily report

The wooing of retail store advertising budgets from print to tv has seen its first major breakthrough this spring.

Around 50 department stores, including Macy's, Ohrbach's and Alexander's in New York; Montgomery Ward in 15 southcentral markets; Woodward & Lothrop in Washington, D. C.; and Hess Bros. in Allentown, Pa., have staged 30-minute taped fashion shows on local tv stations.

The significance of this breakthrough for spot tv is no small matter. For one thing, it is a giant step in the over-all education of print-entrenched retail and department stores, on the flexible uses of television. And, from the general results of this fashion swing into television, it looks as if more and more stores will be participating in these seasonal events.

There are four main reasons why department stores are using tv in a big way this year to show their new spring-summer lines. These are:

- To stimulate in-store traffic.
- To build the store image as a high fashion house.
- To sell the actual clothes shown.
- To show the creations to a mass audience in one shot.

Although many smaller department stores have been using fashion shows for several years, it was not until spring 1960, when Macy's first showing of imports and copies was presented on WNBC-TV, New York, that the tv fashion parade took hold. Since then, the idea has spread rapidly. Several other stores, including Ohrbach's, Meier & Frank, Portland, Ore.; Alexander's and Gimbels in Milwaukee, got their feet wet with tv fashion shows last year.

The biggest news, however, came this spring when Montgomery-Ward undertook its 15-market regional project. This was Ward's first dip into regional program sponsorship. The show was taped at WFAA-TV, Dallas, and spotlighted designers and manufacturers from the southwest. Purpose of the show was twofold: to commemorate the opening of Ward's Dallas buying office, and to stimulate sales. Although all results were not in at press time, Ward indicated that sales, following the show, were "tremendous."

The show was produced by Montgomery Ward's public relations department. Individual stores in the chain's southcentral region were selected to carry the show. The stores bought their own time. The program was shown on tape in 12 markets, where tape facilities were available, and on kinescope in three markets.

The actual production ran 28 minutes. The remaining time was given over to individual store managers for institutional commercials on behalf of their particular Ward branch.

The department store tv fashion show ball got rolling last March in New York. At that time, George Pitt, retail stores account executive at WNBC-TV, New York, approached Macy's with an idea for a taped fashion show of imports. Macy's liked it, Alpine cigarettes sponsored it, and the show was a success.

Sales results were immediate. Macy's reported an increase in units sold (dresses, suits, coats) of 300% and an increase in dollar volume from the past season (of the import copy lines) of 400%.

Macy's followed its initial effort with another show in the fall, as did Alexander's and Ohrbach's.

This spring all three were back on the air in New York, with more lavish productions. Macy's was the only one with an outside sponsor, Al Italia airlines. Ohrbach's and Alexander's backed their shows themselves.

Also hot in the tv fashion activity this spring was Hess Bros. of Allentown, which taped its show in the store, but aired it over WFIL-TV, Philadelphia (Allentown has no tv station).

These four stores featured designer imports and store copies. Among the designers shown were Balenciaga, Givenchy, Monsieur X, Lanvin, Ricci, Simonetta, Veneziani, Fabiani, Capucci and Rodriguez.

Here are the highlights of the season's major tv fashion shows:

- Macy's: A pioneer in import showings last year, Macy's came back this spring with a salute to Italian and French couturiers, and featured the store's U.S.-made copies. The show was taped in Rome and shown twice on WNBC-TV, New York. It featured European and South American models, songs by Italian singing star Domenico Modugno and commentary by Celeste Holm. It was the only tv fashion show to have a sponsor—Al Italia airlines. The show was Macy's had immediate results in New York where in-store traffic at live fashion shows was highly stimulated following the tv presentations. Sales of the clothes shown on tv were also up, said Macy's.

CAMERAS move in on Hess Bros.' models showing European originals on the Allentown store's WFIL-TV Philadelphia fashion show. While a handful of guests attended the telecast, thousands viewed at home, and store traffic and sales were boosted during the days following the show repeated in Atlanta, Ga., where Macy's has a store called Davison's. Produced by WNBC-TV. Reported cost: under $40,000.

- Ohrbach's: New York high fashion models showed European imports and Ohrbach's copies in a 30-min. show taped at WABC-TV studios. Maggie McNellis did commentary, Art James was the announcer. Only 1:50 minutes of institutional commercials were used. The show emphasized close-ups of clothes' details. It was repeated on KNXT-TV, Los Angeles, where Ohrbach's has a store. Future productions are anticipated. Show was produced by Ohrbach's agency, Doyle Dane Bernbach. Cost: $50,000.

- Montgomery Ward: A 30-min. show, featuring designers and manufacturers from the midwest, was taped at WFAA-TV, Dallas, and shown in 15 southcentral markets where Ward has stores. Dallas models were used. Dallas tv personality Julie Bonnell did commentary. The show was produced by Ward's public relations department. Costs: not available.

- Alexander's: The objective of this low-budget store was to stress a high fashion image. For this, Alexander's taped its French, Italian and Spanish import and copy show in Aruba, using New York models and featuring Orson Bean and Rita Gam on commentary. It was shown on WCBS-TV. Commercials featured the designer original ("price $1,000") and the Alexander's copy ("price $39.95"). It was produced by Alexander's. Followups are anticipated. Reported cost: under $50,000.

- Hess Bros.: This Allentown, Pa., store used WFIL-TV, Philadelphia, to air its 30-min. taped fashion show because Allentown doesn't have a tv station. The show was produced by Hess personnel and featured store-trained models. Hess' sales promotion manager Wayne Holben, was host. It was taped in the store. European originals were featured but Hess' copies were shown in the commercials. Newspaper tie-ins were extensively used. Estimated cost: under $25,000.

Woodward & Lothrop of Washington, D. C., also had a big spring splash on tv. It was a salute to American designers. The show cost W&L around $5,000. "Besides stimulating store traffic, we had the problem of showing our lines to enough people," said a W&L spokesman. "The largest auditorium suitable for fashion shows in D.C., holds 3,000 people, and it is very expensive to rent," she said.

All of these stores promoted their tv fashion shows with extensive newspaper tie-ins during the week preceding the telecast.

Hess Bros., however, took full-page newspaper ads just to publicize their television project.

Hess also staged a saturation radio promotion on behalf of the show with week-long schedules on WKAP WAEB and WSN in Allentown WGPA in Bethlehem, WEST and WEEK in Easton.

Round-the-clock "teasers" also were scheduled on WFIL-TV.

Woodward & Lothrop also bought full-page ads in all Washington, D. C. newspapers on behalf of their "Ten po: U.S.A." telecast.

While the stores were hesitant to give actual time and talent costs, of the-record estimates ranged from $5,000 for Woodward & Lothrop, to around $50,000 for Alexander's.

There are some department store however, which produce fashion show for as little as $100. TvB's vice president for local sales Howard P. Abrams, pointed out. Among these are Neel's in Thomasville, Ga., and Ale Loeb in Meridian, Miss., which use local talent and store producers, for

'IF YOU CAN'T BEAT THEM...'

Virginia movie house chain packs in audience by sinking 75% of ad budget per film into tv exposure

Airs five- to 10-minute spots on Norfolk station prior to film's opening; enlists personality's support

There's a motion picture exhibitor in Virginia who's more than willing to let bygones be bygones with his traditional rival, tv.

"If you can't beat 'em, join 'em," says Bryan Rose, manager of the Levine Enterprises which operates 11 theaters in Norfolk, Portsmouth, Hampton and Newport News. So, he's joined the ranks of tv advertisers.

And he sees a trend on the part of the motion picture business in general toward using more and more tv advertising. According to Rose, major film companies are providing cop money for their pictures and often the majority of the budgets are going to tv rather than newspapers, long the major medium for exhibitors.

By way of explanation, Rose points out, "The return per dollar spent in tv is far greater than the same dollar spent in newspapers. The cost of newspaper advertising is out of proportion to the readership and consequently loses out on our ad dollar."

Rose precedes the opening of a new picture with five to 10 announcements, usually 60 seconds in length, on WVEC-TV, Norfolk. "Our grosses on films are greater than ever, which we attribute largely to television," Rose states. "The service a tv station gives us is far superior in both promotional excitement and eventual results than any other medium."

The exhibitor receives his tv commercials from the film producer, with excerpts from the picture and a tag for theater name and location. In placing the spots, he's out to come as close as possible to reaching an audience for which the film will have greatest appeal. With children's pictures, however, it's helpful to familiarize parents with what's coming.

An example of how this approach works is the campaign for Walt Disney's "Swiss Family Robinson." For this film with juvenile appeal, most of the spots ran in the Bungles weekday evening children's show. Unable to resist the ideal tie in, the exhibitor also ran an I.D. adjacent to the ABC TV Disney Presents program on which the film received mention.

An additional boost to "Swiss Family Robinson" came from a personal appearance by the WVEC-TV personality Bungles at the opening. He informed his tv audience he'd be on hand for the morning premiere. It was 13 degree weather, a bit nippy for Norfolk, but they reportedly were lined up around the block an hour and a half before starting time. By 2:30 p.m. the theater's crowd record for one day had been broken. At the last report the film was heading into its ninth week.

As Rose sees it, one of the most important phases of promotion for new pictures is the service a tv station can give. "The fact that a station can furnish personalities to help us put pictures across is extremely important," he says. "The stations have built their personalities over a long period of time, and we consider their following a valuable bonus." ▀

ALLIANCE has proven beneficial to Bryan Rose, (l), gen. mgr. of Levine Enterprises in Virginia, and Bill Barnes, a.e. from WVEC-TV, Norfolk

CANADIAN TV: A SECOND BIRTH

➤ With the opening of nine new major market private stations, advertisers now have alternatives to the CBC

➤ Here is a review of the events that made possible new opportunities; Weed relates them to U. S. sponsor American advertisers in search of opportunities should lay their compasses on the conference-room table and watch them jump around to the north. That's Canada up there—a "$300 billion challenge," according to a leading U. S. and Canadian station representative, Weed & Co.

For in mid-March, the American (and Canadian) advertiser had, for the first time, a realistic alternative to network tv in the nation to the north due to the completion of a string of "second stations," not government-owned, in the major markets.

With the latest of the big city "free-enterprise independents" just gone on the air bringing the total to nine, the advertiser will no longer be forced to depend on the overcrowded

CBC network stations to bid for his share of the $300 billion that Weed maintains will be spent by Canadians in the 1960's.

To a great extent, Canadians themselves consider this a second coming of Canadian tv in the eight major markets (two new stations are in Montreal), because CBC stations had been practically sold out, especially in prime time, for the past six years. This has kept many advertisers out of the medium: it has accelerated the trend to co-sponsorship and multiple sponsorships: it has forced other advertisers to work out selective deals with two-dozen or more secondary markets and then use other media for coverage in major cities.

Also, creation of a string of second stations brought about the practicability of the first privately-owned network, which has just been formed by Spence Caldwell. One drawback to the tv progress, advertisers noted, was that the new stations, cutting into the audiences of the established outlets, would mean a higher cost-per-1,000. But station men pointed out that Canadian tv was still a bargain at the price compared to the 50 States to the south.

Weed & Co. presents a facts and figures analysis of the new situation in a thick new presentation that outlines the history of Canadian tv and the background leading up to the establishment of the new stations. The stated purpose: to lure the American ad dollar to Canadian tv. Weed, which represents 29 north-of-the-border outlets, covers just about every aspect of what the U. S. advertiser should know about Canada—its economy, its potential, its possibilities. Among the more specific media questions that Weed answers:

Do I need a Canadian advertising agency? Not necessarily. It is pos-

Some basic questions about the major market private stations

Q. What about time avails?

A. Time can be bought—as opposed to the CBC crush—on the new stations: CFCF-TV, Montreal (English); CFTM-TV, Montreal (French); CHAN-TV, Vancouver; CJAY-TV, Winnipeg; CFTO-TV, Toronto; CJOH-TV, Ottawa-Hull; CJCH-TV, Halifax; CFRN-TV, Edmonton, and CFCN-TV, Calgary.

Q. Is CBC needed for coverage?

A. Not necessarily, as the new independents allow an advertiser to achieve nation-wide coverage via "selective tv" (like U. S. spot program placement). This method is made-to-order for the American advertiser interested in keeping ad effort in line with distribution. He can also buy spot announcements; units as small as a single station.

Q. What are rates like?

A. The nine new "second stations" have a potential coverage of 66-70% of Canadian tv households. Their rates are slightly lower than the CBC outlets: In Toronto, class A one-time half-hour on CBLT is $750; on new CFTO, $690. In Vancouver, class A one-time half-hour on CBUT is $408; sible for a U. S. advertiser or agency to place business directly on Canadian tv through its U. S. offices.

What programs are available for sponsorship? Programs fall into three categories—national, regional and local. National sponsorship: Many “proven” U. S. shows are syndicated for use in Canada, such as Maverick, Gunsmoke, Peter Gunn and Route 66. Independently produced film programs are available for syndication as in the U. S., and Canadian produced shows are taped by production companies and independent stations. CBC live shows are available. Regional: With the exception of network productions, all of the above are available for regional or “selected market” (like U. S. spot program placement) sponsorship. Local: U. S. produced film shows can be purchased directly from the individual station. You can also purchase locally produced shows—news, weather, women’s features, etc.)

Including time, what does a network show cost? A half-hour show carried on the CBC English network costs approximately $13,000 per week, assuming a net program price of $5,000.

LATEST MATERIAL to alert the American advertiser to the growing potential of the changing Canadian tv markets has been published by Joseph J. Weed (l), president of the Weed organization, and Peter McGurk, v.p. and general manager of Weed & Company Including time, what will selective television cost? You cannot compare network with selective television in this manner, since the very basis of selective tv is that an advertiser may choose the exact market lists he wants.

As a guide, however, let’s suppose your selective plan is intended to cover 80% of the television homes in English Canada. Assuming a program cost of $2,250 net, the total weekly price would be approximately $9,500. In addition, with a good property having more audience appeal than its CBC competition, your “80% of Canada” selective plan could very likely reach more homes per broadcast than a full network placement. And it would do so at lower cost.

As a matter of fact, depending on the extent to which you use a pool of commercials here, you may be able to run them in Canada without incurring any extra talent residual payments. Your advertising agency will be able to figure this out for you. Of course, if your commercials are “voice over,” you can use them in French-speaking Canada once you’ve replaced the track. Also, many stations produce commercials, using and their availabilities, coverage, rates, and program policies on new CHAN, $360. Rates are set in hopes to deliver as much audience as CBC competitors; stations must also amortize huge facilities.

Q. Are they getting audiences?

A. The new stations have generally done well at capturing audience. In Calgary, Halifax and Montreal, new stations have about split audience with older rivals—and “total” audience has increased. Toronto station is in close fight; Vancouver outlet hasn’t yet caught opposition; Winnipeg’s new channel leads in the latest report. In Edmonton, CBC won’t have affiliate until next Fall.

Q. Any program restrictions?

A. You can sponsor any form of programming on the independent outlets. The CBC, on the other hand, does not permit sponsorship of news broadcasts or programs falling into public affairs category.

Q. Any product restrictions?

A. The situation is changing. For instance, beer advertising was formerly not acceptable, can now be run on stations in the provinces of Quebec and Ontario. It is anticipated that restrictions will be eased in other provinces as well.

What makes a tv commercial believable?

Norton Wolf, vice president and creative supervisor, Benton & Bowles, Inc., New York

Believability—like beauty—is in the eye of the beholder. To what degree is believability also in the hand of the creator—the writer? Let's see.

The first thing that makes a commercial believable is whether or not

What the writer asks the beholder to believe is a major consideration the writer believes in the product. It's not necessary or desirable to achieve a state of ecstasy. But you at least ought to figure you could look your dear old fifth grade teacher square in the eye and tell her your sales story, without getting sent to the principal's office for either fibbing or cribbing.

The second thing that makes a commercial believable is what you ask the beholder to believe. Will it be something new, valuable, surprising, and important to the most important person of all: himself? Or will it be humdrum, ho-hum, old hat, braggy, impersonal? Lest we forget, no one has ever found a substitute for the selling idea.

Next, how many things will you ask the beholder to believe? How glibly we say (and quickly forget) that it's far easier for the viewer to absorb and believe one idea than three ideas, in 60 seconds—or 60 weeks, for that matter.

Fourth, by what means will you ask the beholder to believe? Shall you appeal to reason or imagination—or both? Will you be factual or fanciful, dreamy or dramatic? You may soar as airily as you like for a perfume, and you will be believed—sometimes. You can be doggedly down to earth for a detergent, and you will be believed—sometimes.

Why sometimes yes, sometimes no? I'm convinced the answer lies entirely in the experience, judgment, taste and enthusiasm of the writer. The good writer uses his freedom to explore and to select. He disciplines himself to be simple and direct. He makes every word, every picture, every second, every frame completely relevant to the product, the selling idea, and to the beholder's needs and experience.

And now, before we chisel these thoughts in stone, let us remember Alice who declared, "One can't believe impossible things." To which the White Queen replied, "I daresay you haven't had much practice. . . . Why, sometimes I've believed as many as six impossible things before breakfast."

Joseph McDonough, vice president and associate creative director, Cunningham & Walsh Inc., New York

The simplest way to make a television commercial believable is to have the commercial constructed by people who recognize the truth. When these people work on the commercial:

- when the writer writes a commercial he believes in . . .
 - when the art director draws a storyboard he believes in . . .
 - when the account executive sells a storyboard he believes in . . .
 - when the client O.K.'s a storyboard he believes in . . .
 - when the agency producer produces a storyboard he believes in . . .
 - when each one of the above does what he truly believes in . . .
- . . . then you'll have a believable commercial.

In other words, when the selling message and the presentation is truthful . . . the commercial is believable.

Then, once the storyboard is turned over to a film producer and . . . the actors . . . the director . . . the camera director . . . the set designer . . . when all the people on the film, believe in the film—you'll get a believable film.

A television commercial that is not believable is like any other "phoney" . . . sooner or later the public recognizes the "phoney" and they stop believing . . . they stop buying.

Perhaps it's seeing on television the same model/actor attempting to sell two different products on the same night. Neither of these products are for the particular use of model/actors. The model/actor does not display any expert knowledge of either of the products. So . . . I do not believe him. He's a moonlighter. Two jobs and no sales.

Maybe that wild set is an art director's dream but it doesn't even remotely resemble my bathroom. Mine's always a mess. I'd be afraid to use that one. Howinthehell am I going to get into that sunken tub?

Perhaps it's a beer, a good beer, I like your beer. But it doesn't make

When both the selling message and selling presentation are truthful me laugh. Not just a sip, anyhow. And I don't want that much energy. I'm too tired to run up that beach. And that athletic young thing that's chasing him! I know she'd be too much for me.

Advertising is a simple business. Advertising is an aid to selling. As such, it should put forth some simple, logical selling messages for a product. In order for people to accept these selling messages they should be presented in a believable way.

Let's do it.

Richard J. Mercer, vice president and creative group supervisor, Batten, Barton, Durstine & Osborn, Inc., New York

A believable commercial like a believable person has no affectations. It is first of all frankly what it is: a commercial. It doesn't try to kid

The overwhelming superiority of Warner's "Films of the 50's" was demonstrated during the January 6-February 2 survey period in St. Louis. During this time, these Seven Arts feature films were telecast exclusively over KSD's "Gold Award Theatre" sponsored by Beautyrama, Inc. They scored their high rating against two other feature film programs.

Beautyrama will continue to sponsor the "Gold Award Theatre" and will continue to telecast the Seven Arts' "Films of the 50's."

These recent films from Warner's library of big-star hits do as well against top network shows as they do against other feature films. Example: KTVU in San Francisco on Sunday night scored a smashing 36.2 share of audience, higher by 50% than the next best station, against such tough competition as Shirley Temple, Lassie, Dennis the Menace, Walt Disney and Maverick.

anybody into thinking it is anything else. It is, in a word, honest.

But honesty alone will not necessarily make a commercial believable.

Be honestly commercial, tell the truth, involve viewer's emotions

For credulity on the part of the viewer or listener is a product not only of his intellect but his emotions as well. Therefore while a believable commercial must first of all be truthful, it must convey its truth through emotional channels. This of course is a matter of art.

And that is why the advertising business will always be peopled with writers and artists. It is the main task of these creative people to find the happy phrase, the fascinating image that makes the truth about a product or service more than a dull inventory of facts, but an interesting, memorable piece of communication.

That is why the Nearsighted Mister Magoo sells General Electric Light Bulbs. Everything he says about General Electric Bulbs is the absolute truth. But when Magoo says it, it's so much more fun and more believable, too. Why? Because it involves the viewer.

Another animated character, Hy Fim, tells the truth about Chevron Supreme Gasoline: it is a true super-octane fuel for today's more powerful cars. And then, he always adds a further truth, such as "Chevron Supreme Gasoline fits any shape gas tank." And suddenly a simple sales message takes on a fresh point of view that stimulates the heart as well as the mind.

Both the General Electric Light Bulb and the Chevron Supreme Gasoline campaigns have been extremely successful. They are evidently then highly believable. They do more than tell the truth, they also get the viewer involved in it.

What makes a believable commercial? Truth plus art. Be honestly commercial, tell the truth. ◆ heuser-Busch executives. That first year, 16 million 6-Paks of Budweiser were sold during the promotion. In 1959, and again in 1960, 20 million 6-Paks were moved during the two-month period. Expectations for the 1961 promotion are high. Budweiser expects to overtake its last year's record. In addition to the success of Budweiser 6-Pak sales, said Krings, every package and brand in the Anheuser-Busch line increased beyond normal sales during June-July.

Krings says that during the "Pick a Pair" promotion, the company encourages retailers to give a little incentive price break to the consumer in order to make the buy-two deal attractive.

Although national beer sales volume is on the rise, marketing problems are becoming more complex for big brewers. Foremost among these is the share of market inroads being made by unadvertised, private label brands. Bien told the reps that the non-advertised brands are becoming a major factor in the brewing industry. Sold chiefly through supermarkets and grocery chains, the private labels account for between 30-35% of total sales volume, predominately in Florida and California.

Beer ranks fifth in dollar sales in the grocery industry, ahead of all other items except fresh meats, fresh and frozen vegetables and fruit. According to Anheuser-Busch, there is a 20% retail profit margin on beer, putting it well ahead of health and beauty aids in grocery store profit building.

Although 1960 was the largest year in the history of American brewing, per capita consumption (15 gallons per year) is not going up. The increase in beer consumption is due to population rise.

One marketing problem that brewers have not been able to overcome, says Bien, is the lack of acceptance of beer as a social drink. Budweiser is attempting to make inroads here by promoting beer as a with-meal beverage.

Budweiser's advertising philosophy in radio and tv commercials has always been soft sell, gently emphasizing the "Where There's Life There's Bud" theme. "But for the June and July 'Pick a Pair' push we shout for the order," said John C. Macheca, D'Arcy v.p. and Budweiser a/c.

In outlining Budweiser's marketing objectives for this summer's "Pick a Pair" promotion, Macheca told the reps at the Florida get-together: "We make no demands of you, nor do we insist on any kind of merchandising support. But we do ask for your suggestions and your help because we need it."

The reps agreed that the business sessions, while conducted in an environment of casual informality, were concentrated and intense. But Anheuser-Busch provided time for their guests to enjoy some native Florida attractions. Highlights of these, in addition to Busch Gardens and the brewery tour, was an exhibition game between the St. Louis Cardinals and Detroit Tigers at Al Lang Field, and "Pick a Pair" night at Tampa's famous Jai-a-Lai games.

The Budweiser people expressed profound appreciation to the reps for their help in past promotions. Said Krings, in closing the meetings, "We have a deep and tremendous spirit of gratitude toward all of you who helped build up the promotion. What you have done has made it a stand-out all across America." ◆ tergents represented on the medium jumped from two to eight, compact automobiles from one to nine, cigarettes from 23 to 36.

While no spray starches were on the scene back in 1956, nine were present on spot tv last year. The instant potato roster rose from two to seven.

There is an examination of share of spot tv expenditures by product category. Among the more dramatic changes over the past five years is the household cleaners group which rose from 1.7% of total spot tv dollars spent in 1956 to 5% last year. This reflects the influx of competition to Lestoil, formerly uncontested.

Another sizeable increase in share took place in household laundry products, up from 4.1% in 1956 to 7.3% last year. By far the largest share for both years comes from food and grocery products, off slightly from 27.1% five years ago to 26.7% in 1960.

A slight increase of share over the five year period was registered by cosmetics and toiletries (from 3.6% to 9.2%). Among those whose share declined: tobacco products (down from 7.6% to 5.3%); dental products (from 3.3% to 1.9%); household equipment (from 1.9% to 1.1%).

TvB took note of over 35 different associations, councils and bureaus that spent more than $300,000 last year in spot tv to promote intangibles, as opposed to a specific advertiser's product. Their causes included coffee, tea, cement, lamb, wine, motor boats, cherries, seeds, oil heat, pine, insurance and banks.

Among other spot tv users in the intangibles category last year, TvB cites: 34 different banks in more than one market; 91 insurance companies; 116 public utilities and telephone companies 17 religious groups.

Also examined was spot tv's usefulness in promoting expensive items. In the medium last year: 125 companies offering large-ticket household appliances; 56 automobile makes; four tractors; 11 trailers; seven trucks; three swimming pools; five motor boats, and eight foreign airlines.

their regularly scheduled tv fashion shows. There are no SAG requirements in these markets, keeping talent and production costs nominal.

The larger stores, however, have a rougher, or shall we say, more interesting time. In producing the show in Rome, WNBC-TV and Macy's worked under a very tight plane schedule, prayed for good flying and shooting weather, and got the whole show under wraps within a matter of days. Producer-director Mel London, associate producer John Dorsey, unit manager Dick Barnhill and coordinator George Pitt, arrived in Rome several days before the copies and originals were flown there from New York, to set up locations, hire mobile units and crews. Macy's had the weather they hoped for, and the entire production schedule was carried out.

Ohrbach's, however, wasn't so lucky — weatherwise. Doyle Dane Bernbach's original plan was to shoot the show on Long Island's beaches, but as radio/tv director Don Trevor, said "after seeing that the models looked

ARE YOUR
ONE MINUTE
COMMERCIALS
OUT AT SEA?

LOS ANGELES is famed for ingenuity — but even in Los Angeles, no one has discovered how to put a 60-second commercial into a 20-second availability.

Thus your minutes are forced to fringe times on some Los Angeles stations. Or, marooned within inferior programming on other stations.

To give greater selling effectiveness to your minutes in Los Angeles, just turn the page...

frozen, we headed back for the WABC-TV studios and did the job there." The sets achieved the same desired effect as the location shots, he said.

What is the future of department stores in tv? Up to the last year or so their activity has been limited to some spot tv. There is no doubt that department stores are print-oriented. They are steeped in print tradition and their creative people have been print-trained.

But, from all indications, they want to learn about tv. "My contact with stores all over the country has shown me that retailers don't know whether to use direct or indirect sell. The stations don't know what to tell the stores and the stores' own copywriters don't know how to approach tv," said Morris Rosenblum, creative director, advertising, for Macy's. Department stores must be educated, and those stores that can afford it, must gain experience through experimentation."

Rosenblum feels that stores should approach tv in much the same way that they use print. "for image building, merchandising, sales and institutional messages."

Macy's itself has increased its tv advertising to a very significant figure in the last four years. The store has a 52-week contract for 21 weekly spots with WNBC-TV and also uses two other New York independent stations regularly.

All the stores which had fashion shows this spring indicated to sponsor that they planned to return with them in the future.

As for results, each store reported that in-store sales and traffic following the shows were hypoed tremendously by the impact of their tv venture.

However, the New York stores in particular don't expect to do better than break even. But as one Ohrbach's spokesman said, "the long-term image effects of such a show are well worth it."

Ohrbach's has been strictly a print and billboard advertiser up to now. One major reason for not using tv, says Mark Klauser, the store's advertising and publicity director, is "we can't get the time spots that we'd like at a good cost."

In the case of the recent tv fashion show, Klauser pointed out, Ohrbach's was able to talk to its regular customers as well as potential buyers, and was well satisfied.

Ohrbach's has had tremendous identification on tv in the past however, as a supplier of clothes for daytime and evening net tv shows.

What about fashion shows on the networks? Just before Macy's initial venture last March, NBC TV ran Pond's Ala Mode, a network fashion show stressing Parisian couture. The show mixed entertainment with fashion and scored "very low ratings."

"Fashions don't lend themselves to network tv," Macy's public relations director Edrie Van Dore said. "This is a big country and there is no such thing as 'the American look.' In the south the women go for chiffon and flowers, in New England, suits and coats and in New York, black dresses," she pointed out.

It looks like fashion shows will remain a natural for spot tv. "Until recent years, these shows were held in store auditoriums, or selling floors," TvB's Abrahams pointed out. "But today we see tv is the only possible medium for this purpose."

RADIO RESULTS

OFFICE PERSONNEL

SPONSOR: Kelly Girl Service, Inc.

AGENCY: Direct

Capsule case history: Kelly Girl Service, Inc., one of the leading temporary office services in the country, decided to place a campaign on KDKA to remind businessmen and executives in the Pittsburgh area of its full line of office help: secretaries, stenographers, typists, comptometer operators, key punch operators and other clerical workers. Schedule was for four one-minute announcements per week on Rege Cordic's 6 to 10 a.m. show, Cordic and Company, which features comedy skits, service features and music. Commercials, with a clever opening to "Mr. Boss," pitched speed and economy. Results, according to A. W. Leonard, Pittsburgh branch manager for Kelly: "Our spots on KDKA increased our dominance in the market. We began to notice a sales reaction from the very first week of the schedule." After two months on the air, a careful check by Leonard showed that the radio advertising on KDKA had increased business a full 25% for Kelly Girl Service. KDKA, Pittsburgh

OFFICE SUPPLIES

SPONSOR: Roberts Office Supply Co.

AGENCY: Direct

Capsule case history: With many office supply firms relying largely on direct mail, if they advertise at all, Roberts Office Supply Co. of Portland, Maine, has realized outstanding sales results by sponsoring classical music on WMTW-FM. The firm attributes its success over the fm station to two factors: 1) A high percentage of listeners are executives; and 2) the station's tri-state coverage (Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont). Richard Walker, Roberts' president, said: "WMTW-FM's coverage has given us access to new prospects not usually contacted by our salesmen in their routine calls, and has racked up for us major sales to customers who otherwise would never have heard of us." Recently, a new firm in the small resort village of Jackson, New Hampshire, requested a salesman and subsequently placed a substantial order, based on a commercial. Tremendous tri-state sales of this type have made the Portland office supply company's costs for advertising negligible. WMTW-FM, Portland, Me.-Mt. Washington, N. H.

FOOD

SPONSOR: Trout Foods, Inc.

AGENCY: Direct

Capsule case history: Over the past 10 years, Trout Foods, Inc., distributors of pretzels, potato chips, corn curls, cookies and like products in Reading, York and Wilkes Barre, Pa., has grown from five employees and three trucks to 28 employees and 17 trucks. The real growth period began three years ago when Trout intensified its radio campaign and allocated 80% of the ad budget to WEEU for sponsorship of Paul Harvey, the station's network co-op program, broadcast Monday through Friday from 1:00 to 1:15 p.m. "Almost without exception we find grocers tuned to our show," says Charles D. Trout, president of the company. "This alone is an excellent door-opener, but more importantly it pre-sells our products and lends tremendous prestige to us as distributors." With radio a key factor in sales, Trout Foods' volume of business has grown 400 percent in the past years while its number of employees has increased five-fold, making it a leading area distributor. BANK

SPONSOR: Liberty Bank of Buffalo

AGENCY: Direct

Capsule case history: The Liberty Bank of Buffalo, New York, used an intensive schedule on WEBR to build traffic on opening day of its "Glass Bank" branch. The bank bought a campaign in Trafficcopter Reports during evening rush hour. In addition, the bank ordered a special remote from the bank lobby the evening before the opening, the Bank of the Rendezvous Show, which ran from 6:20 to 8:30 p.m. On the basis of past performances, the bank manager projected a total of 2,500 people to be expected on opening day. But a conservative estimate of the traffic that passed through was over 4,500, according to bank officials, with a high percentage opening new accounts. Joseph T. Trapp, v.p. of Liberty Bank, said: "The tremendous turnout and the number of new accounts was directly traceable to our promotion over WEBR. No other type of concentrated advertising could have produced these results." The Buffalo bank expects to continue radio advertising on the station. WEBR, Buffalo

From one who cared

"I thought you would be very much moved as we were at CARE to read the enclosed letter* from one of your listeners. It certainly was a generous and thoughtful thing for Chris Collins to do to give up buying a sweater for herself and instead send $10.00 to CARE after hearing a public service announcement over WWDC. Unfortunately, Chris Collins neglected to send us her address so that we could send her a thank-you letter on receipt. It occurred to me that you might want to mention this on one of your programs in the hope that she may want to communicate with us and give us her address. The support which WWDC gives to CARE is, indeed, very effective and meaningful."

KATE ALFRIEND, Public Relations
Washington CARE Committee

*"This money was to have bought me a new sweater but, after hearing a message about CARE on WWDC, I decided it would do far more good if I sent it to you. I feel sure it will mean more to ten less fortunate people than it will ever mean to me."

"I want to thank you for the special service announcements you made for the Lighthouse during September. They brought many inquiries, not only from blind persons in the District, Maryland and Virginia, but also from transients who did not know such services were also available in their home states. They also brought inquiries from the Surgeon General's Office, the USIA... and interested visitors from the Ministry of Labor in London and from Ghana and the Netherlands."

... the station that keeps people in mind

"Distance lends enchantment." So said the poet—to be precise, Thomas Campbell (1777-1844). And without a rhyming couplet in our body, we say "Amen—it sure can be true of radio."

From the first crystal set to the tiniest new transistor, good radio has created a magic—an "enchantment of distance"—all its own. Unseen voices can become family friends—check our stack of fan mail. Unseen audiences can make themselves felt—check our response to public service appeals. Unseen products and services can make themselves SALES—check our list of national and local advertisers.

It all adds up to PEOPLE, and the way you communicate with them. Distance can be a distinct asset, if you have the magic. WWDC has it. That's why we're the station for you to keep in mind.

Pepsi-Cola's "Now it's Pepsi for those who think young" theme got a big play in the Greenville, N. C., area from local bottler Jack Minges.

Here's what he did:

For six weeks, he ran a teaser campaign using 80 local tv spots. Then — for two weeks — the following schedule: 44 tv announcements a week on two local stations; 500 radio spots per week on five local radio outlets; one full newspaper color page insertion; and one-half page newspaper insertion in each of two additional newspapers.

As an extra fillip, Minges proclaimed the theme via an airborne trailing banner while a public address system beamed down spot recordings of the new "Pepsi song" to the tune of Whoopee.

Tv Stations

ABC's Hollywood stations, KABC-TV and KABC Radio took advantage of the current rash of fashion showings and patterned the format to a clever sales presentation.

The stations put on a Show Styles for Spring showing to some 500 advertising executives at the Ambassador Hotel.

Models in bathing suits paraded out the stations sales-ability in four segments:

1) Place in the sun: the image of progress; an explanation of ABC's growth in recognition and respect.

2) Patterned for Pleasure: the story of the station's programming.

3) Ahead of the Swim: the trend toward ABC.

IF . . .

you believe that more national spot dollars can and should be allocated to your market—

you agree that your market growth-story must be told to media decision makers—

you and other station managers in your market want to step up the national spot dollar flow—

THEN . . .

SALES SPOTTERS can help you. This company, recently formed by a group of broadcasting sales executives, is dedicated to SELLING a limited number of radio television markets to national spot advertisers. We are known and respected by every media director and supervisor, in the New York area. Our intent is to represent a limited number of markets . . . to properly sell your market (by a presentation which we will prepare) to major spot advertisers and their agencies.

No one is actively doing this for you on a regular basis. No one is currently concentrating on getting more spot dollars for your market.

Sales Spotters, through a unique plan, will present your market story to the people who pick the spot markets and decide the budget for each.

Obviously, we must limit our list of markets, so the time to act is NOW !!!

Get together with the other station managers and discuss this plan. Agree that you want extra spot dollars (You and your rep can individually shoot for the dollars after they have been allocated for your market), then let's discuss details.

Full-scale Congressional probes of the rating services appeared to have suffered a serious setback because of the study made for Rep. Oren Harris (D., Ark.) and his House Commerce Committee.

Harris, himself, certainly now plans no such investigation. He has, however, left the door open just a little bit for a possible probe of the way in which networks use the ratings to place or displace programing.

The report on the study made by a committee of statistical experts was technical enough to discourage any lawmaker. While it did contain some conclusions and recommendations, they were not of a nature to shake the structure.

Major recommendation was for a single industry-supported agency to study methods and uses. There was a conclusion to the effect that ratings are often in error with respect to small stations and small areas, but it was acknowledged that no better efforts could be supported.

While methods on a national scale were said to have many shortcomings, the report said the results are pretty accurate, and again lack of financial support was cited.

The situation at the FCC with respect to toughening regulation continues to grow more threatening every day.

With an average of 1,700 station licenses coming up for renewal each year, it has now been revealed that some 700 are in a "deferred" status.

Both statements were made at political complaint hearings held this week by the Senate Watchdog subcommittee, and the author of both was Joseph Nelson, chief of the Renewals Branch, Broadcast Division.

The development occurred a few days after KORD, Pasco, Wash., became the station with the dubious honor of being the first to get into trouble on purely programing grounds. Others have had payola, technical violations, and such things as alleged fraud as the moving factor in their difficulties, though programing has sometimes entered into it.

KORD was charged with promising farm programing, locally originated programing, etc., and not delivering it. It was charged with greatly exceeding the number of commercials it had promised, and in some cases in 25-minute periods of having almost nothing but spots back-to-back.

Even so, the vote was only 4-3 to hold renewal hearings. In this case, Ford was one of two doubtful commissioners who crossed over to vote with the Minow-Lee-Bartley lineup, which will be voting this way consistently. The other doubtful vote, Cross, went with the Hyde-Craven lineup, which will be voting consistently the other way.

Both the outcome and the way the individual commissioners voted were significant in assessing what will happen to many of the some 700 "deferreds."

FCC Chairman Newton Minow gave the Senate Watchdog subcommittee (actually a subcommittee of the Senate Commerce Communications subcommittee set up to keep tabs on the industry during the recent campaign) a glowing picture of industry performance politically.

He quoted President Kennedy's statement that "broadcasting's performance in the critical election year of 1960 was a great step forward in the democratic process." He stopped short of asking that the 1960 temporary relaxation of equal time requirements for presidential and vice-presidential candidates be made permanent.

MCA's eagerness to jump into selling full-hour off-network re-runs, and now a half-hour one as well (Staccato) may signify a continued hiatus from first-run production.

It's been more than a year since MCA brought out a trio of first-run syndicated shows (Shotgun Slade, Johnny Midnight, and Coronado 9) and still nothing new for syndication is foreseen from MCA for the immediate future.

By contrast, MCA has five off-network shows which have gone on sale in recent weeks, four full-hours and now Staccato, 27 half-hour episodes of which have been sold to WNEW-TV, New York; KTTV, Los Angeles; WTTG, Washington; WTVH, Peoria; KOVR, Stockton, and WTVP, Decatur.

With its biggest regional client, Falstaff, electing to drop syndication next year, MCA has apparently decided that station sales of off-network re-runs are its most lucrative possibilities in the present syndication market.

Syndicators last week were holding their breath waiting for a chain reaction of network and regional sales to start itself off.

Several were sweating out word regarding "on the fence" network program proposals.

Others were out making an early play for big regional accounts.

This feeling was in the air: a lull before the storm.

It's not expected that too many of the shows which went into a second year of production for the current season will try for a third year next season.

Except where such shows have the insurance of continuing regional backing, the distributors involved would rather sell the 78 episodes as re-runs to stations than build up an added inventory in continuing first-run station sale.

At one time it was axiomatic that a show never went into a second year of production without major regional backing, but this is no longer so. Now, shows that successfully go into a second year, mostly via station sales, seem to be drawing the line on a third year, a new axiom replacing the old one.

A show to watch this fall will be Father of the Bride on CBS TV.

Based on an MGM property, the pilot was financed by General Mills (BBDO) some time ago. MGM-TV will make the series and Campbell's will co-sponsor.

The show will be watched closely for two reasons: to see how client-backed pilots work out, and also to test the success of series based on movie properties.

The production order for the show, incidentally, marks an all-time high in tv activity at MGM-TV, making two hours, Dr. Kildare and Cain's Hundred, in cooperation with NBC TV, and another hour, Asphalt Jungle, for ABC TV.

Banks and financial services seem to be the most rapidly growing group of syndication sponsors at the moment, reports a Ziv-UA study.

This type of advertiser is currently spending at the rate of $2 million a year for just the first-run shows of the one syndicator.

Factors behind banking growth in syndication sponsorship are 1) the change of image in recent years banks have undergone from conservative, impersonal institutions to modern, personal ones, and 2) banking's inherently local-regional character, lending itself readily to syndication program sponsorship.

Cartoon shows are becoming one of the best types for the international market.

Screen Gems has reason to believe that Huckleberry Hound—the first regular half-hour animated tv series—may also become an international tv best-seller. Sold in 25 countries, the show has been dubbed already into French, German, Spanish, Portuguese, and Japanese.

This is the most extensive dubbing ever done for a tv cartoon series.

Following in Huckleberry Hound's footsteps in the international tv market are Quick Draw McGraw and The Flintstones. All of the shows are produced by Hanna-Barbera and distributed by Screen Gems.

Up to now action-adventure has been the most universal tv program type, easy to follow and not too hard to dub, especially where voice-over is prominent. But the cartoons seem even easier to dub; regional dialects can be used, and material can be readily re-written if needed.

Not all of the network casualties of any season end up in local re-runs.

A variety of legal and economic factors will keep many of this season's off-network shows in the vault, perhaps permanently.

In a few cases rights may be owned by original sponsors who have no further interest in seeing the show on the air again in any way.

In other cases re-run rights reside with a producer with no experience in re-run syndication, who must make distribution agreements with existing syndicators.

Still other shows, clearing the legal hurdles, stay out of re-run syndication for economic reasons: talent repayments and sales expenses can at times mount to $10,000 per episode, a prohibitive re-investment.

The best re-run shows are the same as the best network shows: programs with long network runs, good ratings track records and sponsor histories—and there are few of these.

There's been a new interest in imported video tape shows lately.

KHJ-TV, Los Angeles, had its highest Nielsen morning ratings with a Mexican-made series of soap operas video-taped in Spanish.

Each program has 50 episodes for ten-week Monday-through-Friday telecasts. Titles are Mortal Sin, Shadows in White, and Maria Guadalupe.

Programs were distributed by Teleprograms' de Mexico, a subsidiary of Telesistema, S. A., Mexican tv center.

The Mexican shows, locally sponsored, will be also seen shortly in other markets in the southwestern U. S. The shows are also distributed in Latin America.

Although many commercials producers have eyed the cartoon program production field as a likely adjunct, very few have actually gone into it in recent seasons.

The outstanding exception of the current season is Video-Craft Productions, a New York film commercials house, which made and sold New Adventures of Pinocchio, a series of 130 five-minute color cartoons.

Among the 26 stations sold are KTLA, Los Angeles; WGN-TV, Chicago; KPRC-TV, Houston; KLZ-TV, Denver; KRON-TV, San Francisco; WAGA-TV, Atlanta; WIIC, Pittsburgh; KIRO-TV, Seattle; KRLD-TV, Dallas; CKLW-TV, Detroit; KROD-TV, El Paso; KARD-TV, Wichita, and WDSU-TV, New Orleans.

Note that Video-Craft's effort is exceptional on two counts: 1) it was a tv film commercials house that expanded into cartoon program production, and 2) it undertook syndication distribution of its own product.

BBDO brass last week paid a visit to Pittsburgh Plate Glass for what might be described as an eleventh-hour effort to keep the $2.5-million account in the fold.

Meantime, there's been plenty of pitching from other agencies.

NBC Acceptance says it's operating under very strict rules when it comes to taking merchandise from manufacturers to use as giveaways on its game shows.

The rules, in brief:

- The middleman submitting the stuff must have a letter of authorization from the manufacturer.
- The donor can't be guaranteed the minimum wordage that will be used to describe his contributed prize.
- A flash-card picturing the merchandise will be used only when the prize itself isn't exposed during the program.

(See 20 March SPONSOR HEARS on how the "middleman" solicits agencies.)

Speaking of unusual coincidences, there's one prevailing at the moment at Compton and JWT.

They're both pitching all-out to snag a gasoline account.

Compton, to make up for the loss of Mobiloil; JWT, Shell.

Blowing the whistle on a competitor caught in a triple-spotting situation has lately become a business-wooing device among a few stations in certain tv markets.

The finger-pointer usually operates through his rep, who, to help make the thing stick, urges a buyer to check with the other two agencies involved in the triple spot.

In one such recent case all three agencies notified the culprit that they would not honor any bills dating back to the advent of the triple-spotting, citing the fact that the contracts specifically ban the practice.

A trend that seems to be taking on momentum in the rep field: groups making it mandatory that a rep accept newly-acquired properties in secondary markets he is to be assigned a big revenue station.

The tie-in can prove embarrassing from two angles:

- 1) The rep relinquishing a competitive station with which he has maintained happy and fruitful relations.
- 2) The manager of a sold property finding himself forced to abandon a rep that has done a consistently good job for him.

There's a difference between agencies and reps in the matter of adjusting manpower when a source of commission goes out the door.

An agency can lop off the account group without fear of arousing other clients, but a rep has no choice but to retain his full contingent of salesmen.

These salesmen have been supplying all the stations with business, and in the event of a cutback, the other stations are bound to protest it's unfair to make them take their share of the rap in reduced manpower.

In his new assignment, Rine will be chairman of the company's profit sharing trust fund, and will supervise the Storer owned Miami Beach Sun Publishing Co. as well as the handling of other administrative matters.

Storer's director of radio operations Lionel F. Baxter has been moved up to fill the vacated Rine spot.

WABC-TV, New York City, v.p. and general manager Joseph Stamler, speaking before the Donnell Library Television Information Office class last week, credited tv advertising with providing economic change and improvement stimulus.

Excerpts of his talk:

- Advertising has increased from a $5 billion business annually in 1959 to almost $12 billion in 1960. Television advertising revenue has grown from $58 million in 1949 to more than $1.5 billion in 1960.

- While the pros and cons of advertising as a marketing tool has stirred many a heated controversy over the years, there are few economists today who would refute its dynamic power in moving goods and services.

- Advertisers discovered long ago that television advertising like all advertising is to make the story known to the greatest number of prospects possible at the least cost in the most persuasive manner.

How to best explain and sell the $20 billion Negro market will be surveyed later this week (10-11 April) by the board of the recently organized Negro Radio Association in meetings at the Roosevelt Hotel New York City.

The group includes 58 Negro-appeal radio stations under the chairmanship of Francis N. Fitzgerald, WGIV, Charlotte, N. C., who said his seven man board will discuss:

- 1) Implementation of the group's original organizational blueprint.
- 2) Possible research tactics which can deliver more and authentic Negro market information for agencies and advisors.
- 3) Suggested setting up of a New York office.

Adam Young, speaking before the annual Tele-Broadcasters meeting in New York City last week, said a radio station's prosperity was dependent, not on the nation's economy, but on these three factors:

1. The station's product—its programming—and how salable it is.
2. What the station does with the product—how well will it be sold.
3. Image—will the station do the myriad other things that will give it acceptance.

CANADIAN TV

Canadian talent and geared particularly to appeal to the Canadian consumer.

What do syndicated programs cost? A film show shot in Hollywood for the use of the U. S. networks normally recovers its production cost and earns a profit out of the price the U. S. sponsors pay. This means that foreign sales—after selling and distribution costs abroad are paid for—are “gravy” to the show's owner. This, in turn, means that the price you pay for Canadian rights to a film show merely reflects supply and demand on one hand and your agency's negotiating ability on the other.

If five sponsors want the Canadian rights to Gunsmoke, for example, the one willing to pay the highest price is likely to get the show. In such a situation, he'd pay approximately $3,500 to $4,000 an episode for national rights.

On the other hand, and more realistically, the distributor is likely to have available a long list of good U. S. shows but not nearly enough sponsors to go around. In this case you are most likely to get the show you want for $2,000 to $2,500 an episode. Moreover, if you buy two or more shows from the same distributor, you have a good chance of getting them at less than $2,000 each.

This scale of pricing simply reflects the fact that Canada is a buyer's market. With only one station in most markets, a maximum of two in major markets, and a quota system that holds down United States programming to 45% of the station's total schedule, Canada simply cannot absorb the massive output of film from United States syndicators and networks. Network prices, for the average show produced by the Canadian Broadcasting Corp. of one-half hour in length, will be upwards of $5,000 an episode to the sponsor.

What about time availabilities on network affiliates? Time periods on free-enterprise stations affiliated with the network can be bought outside of network option time, which at night is approximately 8 to 11:15 p.m. in most of Canada and 9 to 12:15 p.m. in the Atlantic provinces. These free-enterprise stations cover the balance of Canada's television homes. They are eager to accept selective programming since these shows are usually their top audience builder.

In the case of CBC owned and operated stations, a large proportion of time not earmarked for network programs is devoted to news and public affairs shows which are not available for sponsorship. A few early-evening and late-night periods can be bought for selective programming, when available.

What is the ratings situation? National ratings are not relevant because of: (1) The language problem. Because nearly 30% of Canada's population is French-speaking, “national” ratings on either English or French shows are relatively meaningless; and (2) the enormous market-by-market rating differential. A large portion of Canada's tv homes are located in “extreme” markets (i.e., single-channel markets or multi-channel border markets).

Tv and radio NEWSMAKERS

Walter A. Schwartz has been named national radio sales manager for the Westinghouse Broadcasting Co. He replaces Perry Bascom who, last month, was appointed general manager of WBC's Cleveland radio outlet KYW. Schwartz comes to his new post with a strong and varied background. He has been a performer, announcer, salesman, sales manager and head of a national rep firm office. Since 1959 he has been in charge of WBC's Am Radio Sales office Detroit. He was WWJ, Detroit sales manager.

Joseph P. Dowling has been named sales promotion manager of Storer's recently formed rep firm, Storer Television Sales, Inc. Dowling joins Storer after five years with CBS Television Stations Division. His most recent assignment was sales promotion manager, CBS Television Spot Sales. Prior to that he was sales promotion manager of WHCT, Hartford, Conn. Dowling's broadcasting career began in the research department at ABC. He moved on to Headley Reed, N.Y.C., and WTOP-TV, Washington.

Blair Television Associates, in expanding its sales executive level, has elevated two of its sales staffers to sales-management positions. The duo: James Theiss (left) to sales manager of Eastern stations, and Lloyd Heaney (below right) to sales manager, Western stations. Both men bring to their new posts a broad background in spot tv sales experience. Theiss, a graduate of Seton Hall University where he majored in economics and business administration, joined Blair five years ago. Prior to that time, he spent several years in the media department of Benton & Bowles as timebuyer on the General Foods and Procter & Gamble accounts. Heaney's experience in broadcasting includes more than ten years with the Chicago Tribune and station WGN-TV. Four years ago, he resigned from the WGN sales development division to join Blair Television Associates in Chicago. He was transferred to New York City when the Blair Television Associates' sales staff was enlarged last year. Heaney's formal education was gained at DePaul University and the University of Chicago.

The seller's viewpoint

The practice of stations running movie films in competition with a network adaptation of the same story is firmly defended by Burt Lambert, vice-president and director of sales for WOR-TV, New York. (This independent was a pioneer in the practice of repeating the same movie throughout the week via its Million Dollar Movie spread.) Lambert argues that the practice is no different than one network programing a western opposite another network's western. He also defends the practice as a competitive necessity.

Independent tv stations must program films competitively

A few months ago, an incident took place that pinpointed the role of the independent tv station in its programing of films. WOR-TV presented Ernest Hemingway's "The Killers." At the same time a network announced its live version of the same story.

Following the parallel programing a great many reports were carried in the newspapers and trade journals reflecting the irritation of the network. These same objections were voiced when we presented Al Jolson in "The Jazz Singer," paralleling again a network adaptation of the film story.

The facts that lie behind the matter are these: WOR-TV as a film station has made many multi-million dollar purchases of feature films. Other independent stations throughout the country have done likewise. The networks on the other hand have, in many cases, purchased the film rights to some of these film properties with intent to offer live versions. Obviously, there will be times, perhaps increasingly more numerous, when feature film showcases on independents will schedule films as the networks present their interpretation of the same story.

We will not argue at length the question of which version is better. As is well known, the facilities, studios and production techniques of Hollywood are not easily duplicated in television studios.

The independent station's point of view is rather simple. We exist in a highly competitive market where success is measured by pleasing the audience with the best of product most of the time. Our product is film; our investment in such product is a heavy one. We might here call attention to the fact that it is, perhaps, within the power of the networks to seek and present original material rather than aim for "adaptations." That, however, may well be beside the point.

When the clamor arose there was the rather sad suggestion that we "shoudna' dunnit." They may as well clamor that the networks begin to observe each other's competitive programing and desist from showing a western on network A, when network B is going all out with horse operas, that news not compete with news, and that specials and spectaculars be programed with due concern for what the other part of the forest plans.

We do not program with intent to parallel. But we face the same problem that any other independent station faces throughout the country. We move in an intense world where we are concerned with putting our best product forward. Our investment in such product makes it mandatory that we program our major film properties to reach the widest audience at all times. As a result we offer Million Dollar Movie 16 times a week, at specific hours regardless of what others are programing on their outlets.

When we depart from films, we do not buy adaptations, but like so many other independents in this and other markets, we program live material using station personalities, or through special documentaries, reports of significance to the community we serve.

Perhaps the best comment that could be made on our film programing is a final reference to network plans to use feature films for their programing. Certainly it is better for Goliath to acknowledge the Davids of independent television rather than to protest.

In this case perhaps they doth protest too much.

SPONSOR SPEAKS

Return to confidence

For the past three weeks, SPONSOR editors in their daily checks with radio/tv agencies and advertisers have been picking up an increasing number of encouraging signs about the state of the business.

Advertising budgets, once locked in a winter atmosphere of doubt and discontent, are beginning to open up with the approach of spring.

New plans, new appropriations, new campaigns are shaping up in scores of agency offices. And it looks as if spot, both tv and radio, will be leading the advertising parade in a healthy return to confidence.

This we believe is as it should be.

The dynamics of the air media, and the flexibility of radio/tv spot make them ideally suited to spearhead a new vigorous anti-recession drive.

The broadcasting industry, more than any other, can provide the emotional and inspirational lift which the American economy needs to start opening up those New Frontiers.

In this connection, we want to make special mention of the Advertising Council's new nation-wide campaign "Confidence in a Growing America."

The Council's project co-ordinator, Robert M. Gray of Esso Standard Oil, and his agency task forces, have put together an impressive promotional package, including many fine materials for use by radio and tv stations and networks.

We urge all-out industry support for the "Confidence in a Growing America" drive.

Plan now for Radio Month

And speaking of drives, we take our hats off too to the NAB's Public Relations Service for its complete and beautifully planned kit on National Radio Month.

These kits are already in station hands, and it is not too early to start making plans for using them next month.

They provide radio men with a comprehensive set of tools for promoting radio's image, tools that should be used and used aggressively by everyone who believes in the power and importance of the medium. Keynote of National Radio Month is "Radio—the best sound around." Radio, itself, can make this claim come true.

10-SECOND SPOTS

Medium medium: Comic Gary Morton opens his night club act with—"I'm working here because I'm too expensive for Jack Paar and too cheap for Ed Sullivan."

Rare pair: Jack Douglas, working the $320 show, said that Reader's Digest, "a trade paper in Levittown," has an article this month on the latest birth control method. "It's separate rooms—preferably one in Seattle and one in Buffalo."

Pour attitude: Over at N. Y.'s Fleur de Lis (ABC's Hurley's), someone said—"Some people have no respect for age unless it's bottled."

Utilitarian: An evening newspaper carried the following tv program listing—"Late movie (1:15 a.m., channel 2): Desire Me (1947—90 min.). Greer Garson, Robert Mitchum. A man not only deserts his friend but steals the man's wife to boot." For kicks, we figure.

Promises: Gary Cooper was talking to TV Guide about the television cowboy stars—"These people would be laughed right out of any authentic Western town, say between 1850 and 1890. If those people shot themselves up as much as they do on some of these tv shows, they never would have got the West populated."

Can do: A convivial timebuyer noted at P. J. O'Hara's in N. Y. that the new Deputy Mayor had started in the sanitation department and suggested, "That's really coming up from the rank."

Good evening, men: Washington correspondent Bill Shannon (N. Y. Post) quotes an Administration official this way: "(My) most uncanny experience is to attend committee meetings with Edward R. Murrow the U. S. Information administrator. The chairman calls upon him and there he is, just like on television chain-smoking and talking in that deep voice. I almost expect him to say, 'This is the news!'"

Shock treatment: Approach the sex with caution, men, when tuning in CBS TV's Gunslinger show. It seems that co-star John Pickard is the guy who posed for those WW II Army recruiting posters and with pointed finger said, "We Want You!"

The Nation's leading advertisers (like Colgate) are sold on SPOT... The only market-by-market mass medium with no waste circulation... The medium that lets you match your advertising effort to your sales potential... Bess Myerson sells the housewife at carefully selected times and... COLGATE'S AJAX continues to bubble up increased sales... Your H-R man will sell you now on SPOT...
