Foreword

Nothing brings back a memory like a song.

I can't estimate how many times I've said that phrase on the radio down through the years and then gone on to prove the point by playing the record that was, oh say, Number One all over America on the night of March 27, 1943, or maybe the Number Ten song on July 20, 1940.

A quick check of the listings inside this book shows the Number One song that spring night of wartime 1943 was "I've Heard That Song Before," and in altered form it provided a title for this compilation. The Number Ten song that summer night in 1940 was "I'm Stepping Out With a Memory Tonight," a symbolic invitation to do the same with this book on every Saturday night from 1930 through the present.

Because while some people collect stamps and others have matchbook collections, I have the entire Top Ten song listings since 1930, the only such compilation in existence.

The temptation is to call it the weekly Hit Parade listings, and, indeed, that now-defunct radio-TV show "Your Hit Parade" does play a big part in twenty-four of the years of listings. But the show didn't appear on the air until April 20, 1935, and it disappeared from TV that very same week in 1959.

Basically, the sources for this compilation fall into three segments.

The listings from January 1930 through mid-April 1935 were obtained from the bound volumes of Variety in the New York Public Library, the histories of Broadway and motion picture musicals, and from information in Sigmund Spaeth's book A History of Popular Music in America.

From April 20, 1935, to its demise in that same April week in 1959, the source is "Your Hit Parade."

From April 1959 when "Your Hit Parade" finally surrendered to rock 'n' roll and left the airways, to the present, the Top Ten source has been the middle-of-the-road "Easy Listening" listings in Billboard.

How did it all get started for me?

As a youngster in 1942, I had started out jotting down the Hit Parade Saturday night radio listings whenever I could. Some years later I went to

New York and persuaded an account executive at Batten, Barton, Durstine & Osborn, the agency for "Your Hit Parade," to allow me to look at their listings and fill in the gaps.

He brought out a common black loose-leaf notebook in which the week-by-week listings were typed. I had expected at least a leather-bound job, taken from a fireproof vault. This was trembling finger time for a Hit Parade buff as I opened the book and there they were! The very first "Your Hit Parade." The first song ever to be Number One. And even the listings from that Saturday night in 1944 when the program was preempted on radio for one of the national political conventions. I laboriously copied them down during a two-day session, and that Saturday night accepted a B.B.D.&O. ticket to witness the week's "Your Hit Parade" radio broadcast at NBC in Rockefeller Center.

In the years to come, there were inevitable gaps again, most notably during my two years of Army service. The source for filling these in was a volume titled This Was Your Hit Parade by John R. Williams, a Hit Parade buff from Camden, Maine, who obtained the listings the American Tobacco Company sent weekly to the New York Public Library, and who had them privately published in 1973. Mr. Williams' book is recommended for the "pure" Hit Parade listings, because I have taken three liberties with the actual listings.

For one thing, "Your Hit Parade" originally featured the Top Fifteen songs of the week, later went to ten, then to nine, and eventually to seven. (Gotta get in those Lucky Strike Extras.) I have kept the entire listings in this book at a consistent Top Ten, moving the logical songs in and out of the lower ranks during those periods.

Secondly, I have eliminated the occasional "Your Hit Parade" practice of introducing a newcomer one week, dropping it for a few weeks, and bringing it back later for a long run. In these few instances, I have made the song's tenure a steady one once it was on the Top Ten.

And thirdly, I have eliminated the program's rather irritating habit of bringing back "holiday" songs annually just because the season was upon us again. The feeling here was that songs like "Easter Parade," "White Christmas," and "Rudolph, the Red-Nosed Reindeer" should be listed only in their big origination years, indicative of the song hits from those particular years. (Another example of similar minor changes was the elimination of the old "Take Me Out to the Ballgame," which for unknown reasons suddenly appeared for one week in 1950, hardly indicative of the year's songs.)

Again, in the post-"Hit Parade" era, certain liberties have been taken with the Top Ten listings in Billboard magazine. The Billboard listings were dictated by the songs disc jockeys played for their biggest audience, the teen rock crowd. Incredibly such popular songs as "The Impossible Dream," "Moon River," songs from "The Sound of Music" and "Gypsy," Tony Bennett's "I Left My Heart in San Francisco," and many others didn't penetrate the Top Ten. These and others have been arbitrarily added with the sure knowledge that they were, indeed, among the weekly Top Ten of their respective origination years.

Included in each year's segment is a summation of news and anecdotal events. Newcomers to the Top Ten are indicated by an asterisk. In the back of the book is an alphabetical index for every song, indicating the year or years it was listed. The index also records how many weeks each song was on the listings (19), and how many weeks, if any, that it was Number One (19-2).

What has finally emerged here is intended as a permanent record, an instant bet settler, a true history of popular music from 1930, through the rock years, and up to the present. Or, as they used to say on "Your Hit Parade" each Saturday night, "the songs most requested of the nation's bandleaders, the best sellers in sheet music and phonograph records, the songs most heard on the air and most played on the automatic coin machines . . . an accurate, authentic tabulation of America's taste in popular music!"

What was the longest any song remained in the Top Ten? (See 1943.)

What was the first song ever to be Number One for ten weeks? (See 1941.)

What is the longest number of weeks a song was Number One? (See 1951.)

What was the first song ever to be Number One on radio's "Your Hit Parade"? (See 1935.)

What were the Top Ten tunes on Pearl Harbor Saturday night? (See 1941.)

What were the Top Ten tunes on that November weekend when President John F. Kennedy was assassinated? (See 1963.)

What songs were the only ones to appear in tandem as a single entry on the Top Ten? (See 1969.)

They're all inside.

But what's more important—what were the top tunes on your tenth birthday . . . or the day you were born . . . or met your wife or husband . . . or when you went into the service . . . or graduated from high school?

They're all inside, too.

Have fun.

I'VE HEARD THOSE SONGS BEFORE

1930

It's fitting, if not somewhat symbolic, that the two top tunes of 1930 were "Happy Days Are Here Again" and "Little White Lies." Tin Pan Alley told us that happy days were here again, a little white lie that couldn't make the Depression go away. In any event, each was Number One on the Top Ten for six weeks apiece, tying for the honor of the year's most popular song.

Upbeat songs of cheer were the musical order of the day. Others were "Great Day," "On the Sunny Side of the Street," "Painting the Clouds With Sunshine," and "Sunny Side Up."

One might have called it Music to Stand in a Bread Line By, because the decade known as the Roaring Twenties had been swept out on a 1929 stock market collapse that ushered in what was to be known as the Tired Thirties.

America discovered miniature golf that year, and the indoor craze sweeping the nation was bridge. Boulder Dam was begun, the League of Nations was dying without knowing it, Prohibition was producing gangsterism and bathtub gin, and Admiral Byrd was given a ticker-tape welcome back from the Antarctic. It was the best use made that year of ticker tape. The Philadelphia Athletics took the St. Louis Cardinals in the World Series, and Knute Rockne had an undefeated football team at Notre Dame.

Radio, that upstart entertainment medium, was making static-marred stars of its own—Amos 'n' Andy, Walter Winchell, Will Rogers, and Rudy Vallee (whose "Betty Coed" and "The Stein Song" were two of the year's big hits). George Gershwin was supplying the tunes from Broadway with his Strike Up the Band and Girl Crazy. The new singing star at year's end was Ethel Zimmerman, who dropped the "Zim" off her name but left the "zing" in her songs.

For Hollywood it was the year of All Quiet on the Western Front, Garbo's Anna Christie, and the Marx Brothers in Animal Crackers. The movie industry was in the middle of the big changeover from silents to "talkies." No sweat for Tin Pan Alley. They merely turned out a tune called "If I Had a Talking Picture of You."

It was the year that didn't mean you were hearing the last dance when the orchestra broke into the sweet strains of "Goodnight, Sweetheart." For 1931 was the origination year of that now traditional ballroom sign-off tune, and orchestras played it enough in the featured spot of the night to make it Number One for nine weeks and, hence, the top song of the year.

The musical year also gave birth to two songs that lived long after 1931 as signature radio themes—"When the Moon Comes Over the Mountain," for young songbird Kate Smith, and "Where the Blue of the Night Meets the Gold of the Day," for young crooner Bing Crosby.

Crooner Russ Columbo, at the height of his career, was contributing "Paradise," "Call Me Darling," and "You Try Somebody Else" to the Top Ten.

Jerome Kern's The Cat and the Fiddle was big on Broadway that year, giving us "She Didn't Say Yes" and "The Night Was Made for Love," and Cole Porter had The New Yorkers, which featured "Love For Sale." Radio, in its infancy, banned the lyrics as too risqué.

In the book field, Pearl Buck wrote The Good Earth, and Fannie Hurst depicted the woes of extramarital entanglements in Back Street.

The monarchy fell in Spain, Japan overran Manchuria, and the sports world was stunned by the death of Knute Rockne in an airplane crash. New York opened the world's tallest building, the Empire State, but in the Depression year of 1931 many of its 102 stories were unfilled.

On the screen Charlie Chaplin still had a hit with a "silent" in his City Lights, but the "talkies" being talked about were Cimarron, Karloff's Frankenstein, The Front Page, and a new Jimmy Cagney movie that caught the violent flavor of the times. It was called Public Enemy.

Soup kitchens were multiplying, and so was crime.

If one song symbolized 1932 it was the mournful lament "Brother, Can You Spare a Dime?" That nearly said it all.

Dump-ground settlements made of corrugated iron and old packing crates mushroomed around the country, inevitably and unfairly being labeled "Hooverilles." Ironically the top song of the year, seven weeks Number One, was titled "A Shanty in Old Shanty Town."

The shock of the year was the crime of the year when the nineteen-month-old son of world-famous hero Charles Lindbergh was kidnapped from his Hopewell, New Jersey, home and slain. It touched off a massive hunt for the killer.

Jimmy Walker, the song-writing playboy mayor of New York City, resigned under fire during a statewide investigation of corruption in his administration.

Japan attacked China, and the United States, blissfully oblivious, dedicated the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington National Cemetery as "a monument to lasting peace."

Grand Hotel, I Am a Fugitive from a Chain Gang, and Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde were the big movie attractions of the year.

Al Capone went to prison, not for the various crimes he was suspected of but for evading income-tax laws. In May the Bonus Army invaded Washington and vowed to camp there until Congress paid the veterans their bonuses in full. The Bonus Bill was defeated, and the "army" was dispersed by tear gas showered by the real Army.

That, and the stigma of the "Hooverilles," proved the downfall of President Herbert Hoover in November. Franklin D. Roosevelt, riding the crest of a brilliant administration as governor of New York, was elected to the presidency with his running mate, John Nance Garner.

A nation which was hearing "Brother, Can You Spare a Dime?" settled back to wait for the Democratic inauguration next March.

It was FDR's year, purely, simply, and flamboyantly.

He took office on March 4 with his famed "nothing to fear but fear itself" speech, and two days later proclaimed a bank holiday in an attempt to get the country on its financial feet again.

The people watched the celebrated First Hundred Days, and approved. The New Deal was here, and along with the familiar initials of FDR came a marching alphabet of governmental agencies ranging from the NRA to the CCC, the AAA, and the TVA.

Franklin D. Roosevelt was in the headlines even before he took office that year. In February, when he was President-elect, an assassination attempt was made on him in Miami by Giuseppe Zangara, who fired six shots. Although Roosevelt wasn't hit, Chicago mayor Anton Cermak was killed and four others were wounded. The assassin went to the electric chair a month later.

Halfway around the globe another man came to power that same year when Adolf Hitler became Chancellor of Germany, and the swastika flag came into being.

In America Prohibition was finally repealed, Chicago opened its World's Fair, and people were reading Anthony Adverse, Lost Horizon, and God's Little Acre—not necessarily in that order.

On Broadway it was Irving Berlin's As Thousands Cheer and Jerome Kern's Roberta. The top song of the year was "Stormy Weather," with six weeks as Number One.

At the movies top pictures were Little Women with Katharine Hepburn, and The Private Life of Henry VIII with Charles Laughton. But without a doubt the film sensation of the year was a color cartoon short by Walt Disney, The Three Little Pigs. It started the nation singing "Who's Afraid of the Big Bad Wolf?"; and those who can read something into anything swore it was a nervous public rebuttal to the Depression.

It was a year of violence. It was The G-Men versus The Bank Robbers and The Kidnappers. They got Pretty Boy Floyd, Baby Face Nelson, John Dillinger, and that couple who were to become so famous more than thirty years later that their first names required no last names for identification—Bonnie and Clyde.

Bruno Richard Hauptmann was arrested and charged with the kidnapping and murder of the Lindbergh baby.

Von Hindenburg died in Germany and Hitler combined the offices of president and chancellor to become Führer. Concentration camps appeared, and an alliance was made with Italian dictator Benito Mussolini. In America Russ Columbo died at twenty-six in a freak shooting accident.

Yet, with all this, one of the biggest news events of the year was a happy one in Ontario, Canada, where Mrs. Oliva Dionne gave birth to her famed quintuplets. And little Finland paid her World War I debt to the United States—the only nation to do so.

The St. Louis Cardinals won the World Series against the Detroit Tigers four games to three—with all four games being won by the pitching Dean brothers, Dizzy and Daffy.

Cole Porter's Anything Goes, with Ethel Merman, was the biggest thing on Broadway, and the biggest thing on the screen was It Happened One Night, which won Oscars for Best Picture, Best Director (Frank Capra), Best Actor (Clark Gable), and Best Actress (Claudette Colbert).

Best-selling books of the year were James Hilton's Goodbye, Mr. Chips, John O'Hara's Appointment in Samarra, and Walter Pitkin's book with the built-in reading audience, Life Begins at 40.

On the radio there were Eddie Cantor, Bing Crosby, and—still—Amos 'n' Andy. On the Top Ten, six weeks as Number One made "Lost in a Fog" the top song of 1934.

As far as this compilation is concerned, the most important musical event of 1935 occurred on the night of April 20 when radio recognized the top songs of the week with the first broadcast of a new weekly Saturday night network show, "Your Hit Parade."

The first song ever to be Number One on the show: "Soon." The top songs of the year: "Chasing Shadows" and "Cheek to Cheek," tied with five weeks apiece as Number One.

Shirley Temple reigned supreme in the movies, singing "On the Good Ship Lollipop" onto the Top Ten. Major films of the year were Mutiny on the Bounty and The Informer. On Broadway top shows were Three Men on a Horse, Dead End, The Petrified Forest, and George Gershwin's Porgy and Bess.

Civil war raged in Greece. Mussolini used dive bombers to attack spear-carrying Ethiopians. Mary Pickford divorced Douglas Fairbanks.

Will Rogers and Wiley Post died when Post's plane crashed near Point Barrow, Alaska. Huey Long, dictatorial leader of Louisiana, was assassinated in Baton Rouge. Gang leader Dutch Schultz was shot to death in a New Jersey saloon. The Supreme Court killed the Blue Eagle of the NRA, but the New Deal gave us the WPA in its place.

Bruno Richard Hauptmann was convicted in the Lindbergh case. Babe Ruth left the Yankees for the Boston Braves. James Braddock took the heavyweight boxing crown from Max Baer, but down in the ranks, coming up fast, was a young black boxer named J. L. Barrow of Detroit. He fought under the name of Joe Louis.

Americans were playing that new game, Monopoly, and engaging in a ten-cent chain-letter craze that was blanketing the country. What were they singing? These songs . . .

It was the year of the ultimate love story, when a king gave up his throne to marry the woman he loved. The world listened in awe that December as England's Edward VIII made the historic and dramatic radio broadcast from Windsor Castle that he was abdicating to marry the Baltimore divorcée, Wallis Warfield Simpson.

In America the year's biggest craze was the "knock-knock" jokes (which even inspired a song onto the Top Ten one night), and the rage of the airwaves was Bob Burns with his bazooka. The novelty song of the year was the contagious "The Music Goes Round and Round," but the top songs of the year were "Did I Remember?" and "The Way You Look Tonight," each of which rode the Number One spot for six weeks apiece.

Little Orphan Annie was giving away Ovaltine Shake-Up Mugs on radio, The Saturday Evening Post was selling for a nickel, and a new magazine called Life made its debut and showed its class by charging a dime.

Now civil war flared in Spain. Germany announced all Jewish children from the ages of six to fourteen must leave public schools. Emperor Haile Selassie fled Ethiopia and Mussolini "annexed" it. The athlete of the year had to be Jesse Owens, the black American sprinter who gave the Nazis their only defeat that year in the Olympics at Berlin.

In this country, Route 66 was crowded with the mattress-covered cars of Oklahomans who had abandoned their Dust Bowl homes and were headed west for the promised land of California.

The state of New Jersey finally electrocuted Bruno Richard Hauptmann for the Lindbergh murder, and Franklin Roosevelt swept to a second term over GOP candidate Alf Landon by carrying every state but two.

Top favorites on Broadway were You Can't Take It With You and The Women. On screen we had The Trail of the Lonesome Pine and San Francisco. In the book field, there was only one: Margaret Mitchell's mammoth Gone With the Wind, which sold 50,000 copies its first day of publication.

It was the year of The Big Bands, the dance called The Big Apple, and a new word in the vocabulary—jitterbug.

They called it swing, and the present masters of it were bandleaders Benny Goodman, Larry Clinton, and Artie Shaw.

But it wasn't a swing song that was 1937's top hit. Instead, it was the lilting "Once In Awhile," with seven weeks as Number One.

Elsewhere, 1937 was the year of the sit-down strike, radio Fireside Chats by FDR, the Jack Benny-Fred Allen "feud" on radio, and the undisputed favorites of the airwaves—Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy.

The small town of New London, Texas, buried a whole generation after a gas-leak explosion in the school building killed 294 children and teachers.

The Japanese shelled and sank the U.S. gunboat Panay, with the loss of two lives. They apologized and paid.

Kids read Big Little Books and dreamed someday they would pilot the China Clipper. Adults read Dale Carnegie's new How to Win Friends and Influence People, and listened on the radio as Joe Louis, now known as the Brown Bomber, decked James J. Braddock to become the heavy-weight boxing champ of the world.

Amelia Earhart Putnam vanished on a flight over the Pacific, never to be heard from again, and the German dirigible Hindenburg, making its first trans-Atlantic flight, burst into flames and killed thirty-six people as it came in for a landing at Lakehurst, New Jersey.

Broadway had Rodgers and Hart's Babes in Arms, and the movies had Lost Horizon, The Good Earth, Captains Courageous, and Dorothy Lamour in a sarong.

The movies also had Bank Night, Buck Night, and Dish Night. The Depression was still here.

One of the song hits of 1938 was called "The Dipsy Doodle"—and that pretty well said it for the year itself.

Orson Welles, the young major-domo of radio's "Mercury Theater," scared the Halloween nightlights out of the nation by broadcasting The War of the Worlds, complete with simulated newscasts of Martians landing in New Jersey, which sent people tumbling out of their homes in panic.

An aviator named Douglas Corrigan became known overnight as "Wrong Way Corrigan" when he flew the Atlantic and landed in Dublin after saying he had taken off from Brooklyn and was heading for Los Angeles in his light plane. "Stick with that story," a newspaperman told him, and a celebrity was born.

New cars were selling for $880, Jack Armstrong was giving away Hike-o-Meters for Wheaties box tops, the nation was playing Bingo, kids collected bubble gum cards of the China-Japan war, everyone was listening to "Information, Please" on the radio, and the big new dance (and song) was the "Lambeth Walk."

On a more somber note, Hitler invaded Austria, and British Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain went to Munich where he yielded to Nazi demands for the takeover of the Sudetenland in the interest of "peace in our time."

Screen newcomer Bob Hope made his debut in The Big Broadcast of 1938, singing "Thanks For the Memory" onto "Your Hit Parade." The old standard "Alexander's Ragtime Band" also made "Your Hit Parade" via the 1938 movie of the same name. Other big film hits were Test Pilot, You Can't Take It With You, and Boys Town. However, the undisputed movie sensation of the year was Walt Disney's Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs, the first feature-length cartoon, and it contributed two songs to the Top Ten, "Whistle While You Work" and "Heigh Ho." But the top song of the year, also undisputed, was "My Reverie," eight weeks Number One.

And then, suddenly, it was over. The uneasy peace was gone. The Great War, the War to End All Wars, now had to be relabeled World War I. For World War II was declared in Europe in September as Hitler disregarded the Munich agreement, overran Czechoslovakia, and then sent his tanks into Poland. The cry in this country was "This time we'll stay out."

We opened the New York World's Fair, with its Trylon and Perisphere trademark. The kids were reading about Superman and Batman in comic books, the adults were reading John Steinbeck's The Grapes of Wrath, and the college students were engaging in the new fad of swallowing goldfish.

Little Orphan Annie was giving away Decoder Badges on radio, a player with the New York Yankees named Joe DiMaggio was leading the American League in batting, and the newspapers were following the dramatic efforts of raising thirty-three men by diving bell from the submarine Squalus on the floor of the Atlantic.

Two of the all-time great motion pictures made it to the screen that year, both directed by Victor

Fleming. Gone With the Wind swept the Oscars, and The Wizard of Oz began an endurance trek that was to continue through the far-in-the-future era of TV. The latter film produced one of the two top songs of the year, "Over the Rainbow." Its seven weeks as Number One tied it with "Deep Purple" for the 1939 honors.

In the Big Band field, the year belonged to Glenn Miller. His "Sunrise Serenade" was so popular, it was followed up on "Your Hit Parade" that same year with his "Moonlight Serenade." Elsewhere on "Your Hit Parade," Tin Pan Alley borrowed from the classics, with Tchaikovsky supplying the impetus for "Our Love" and "Moon Love," and "The Lamp Is Low" being drawn from Ravel.

On Broadway Life With Father began what was to be a record run for a play. The biggest show on radio was Kay Kyser's "Kollege of Musical Knowledge," and he supplied the year's biggest novelty tune, "Three Little Fishes." Vocalist of the year had to be wee Bonnie Baker, whose wee recording of "Oh, Johnny, Oh" became synonymous with 1939.

With an almost audible sigh of relief, the decade known as the Tired Thirties gave way to the one that would be known as the Flaming Forties.

Hitler's blitzkrieg remained unchecked as Norway, Denmark, Holland, Belgium, and, finally, France all fell. Winston Churchill became British Prime Minister. Britain, using a fleet of anything that could float, pulled off the greatest mass evacuation in history, removing its troops from Dunkirk. And that summer, with Britain standing alone between Hitler and world conquest, the Battle of Britain began in the skies over England.

Russia conquered Finland and sided with the Germans and Italians. The United States still vowed this time they'd stay out, but ominously the peacetime draft began in this country. The training weapons were often broomsticks utilized as rifles.

A group of political amateurs stampeded the Republican convention that year with gallery cries of "We Want Willkie." They got him, and Wendell Willkie rolled up the second biggest popular vote in history that November. The biggest, though, was polled by FDR, who won an unprecedented third term on the platform of "Don't change horses in midstream."

Wilbur Shaw won the Indianapolis 500 for the third time, Cornelius Warmadam became the first man to pole-vault fifteen feet, and the forty-hour work week went into effect. "I Love a Mystery" was a hot radio property. The joke craze was "Yehudi" jokes, supplied by Bob Hope's Jerry Colonna. Hollywood gave us Rebecca and Disney's second all-cartoon feature, Pinocchio, which contributed "When You Wish Upon a Star" to "Your Hit Parade." The year's novelty song followup to 1939's "Three Little Fishes" was "Playmates," with Kay Kyser again doing the honors. Tchaikovsky did his part again with "On the Isle of May."

But the biggest hits of 1940, each with seven weeks as Number One, were "The Woodpecker Song" (not to be confused with "Woody Woodpecker" of the Hit Parade eight years later) and the song that will always mean 1940 for the young romantics of that year, "I'll Never Smile Again."

One rule remains constant. If you are old enough, you can unhesitatingly recall what you were doing December 7, 1941, on that Sunday when Japan bombed Pearl Harbor and this nation was plunged into World War II.

As such, the Saturday night "Your Hit Parade" of December 6, 1941, is the most requested memory-music date I hear. The Number One song that night was "Tonight We Love," popularized by the Freddy Martin recording; Tchaikovsky, dead since 1893, was still doing his bit for Tin Pan Alley. It was Glenn Miller's year, though. "Elmer's Tune" and "Chattanooga Choo Choo," hits because of his recordings, were right behind "Tonight We Love."

The war we found ourselves in by year's end had been responsible for many of 1941's hit tunes all year long—"My Sister and I" (Holland), "The White Cliffs of Dover" (Britain), and "Till Reveille" (the peacetime draft here).

The nonsense song of the year was undisputed—"The Hut Sut Song." Also undisputed was the top song of the year—"I Hear a Rhapsody."

No song had ever been Number One more than eight weeks. "I Hear a Rhapsody" tied that, went on to nine weeks, and then set a new record of ten weeks in the top spot.

It was a good year for popular music in spite of an ASCAP ban on radio tunes that for a while threatened to make the public-domain "Jeanie With the Light Brown Hair" the most overworked girl on the airwaves. She didn't, however, make "Your Hit Parade."

President Roosevelt, prior to Pearl Harbor, signed the Lend-Lease Act to aid embattled Britain, proclaimed man's right to "The Four Freedoms," and met with Churchill in the North Atlantic to draft the Atlantic Charter.

It was the year of the Veronica Lake hairdo, and the baseball season in which Joe DiMaggio hit safely in a record fifty-six straight games. On the screen Citizen Kane was premiered on its way toward eventual milestone status. And Lady in the Dark was lighting up Broadway, although the Great White Way was to undergo a dimout in anticipation of possible air raids.

The war was going badly for the United States, operating with the skeletal remains of a fleet that had been all but destroyed at Pearl Harbor. Manila, Bataan, and Corregidor fell. Marines were fighting at Guadalcanal.

The only bright spots were the routing of the Japanese in the Battle of the Coral Sea, and the air raid on Tokyo led by Lieutenant Colonel Jimmy Doolittle. By November General Dwight D. Eisenhower invaded North Africa.

Back home the women were becoming WAACs, WAVEs, SPARs, and WASPs. Gasoline, tires, sugar, and coffee were obtained with ration stamps, and the lines stretched long. Even Lucky Strike Green went to war.

A tragic fire at the Cocoanut Grove nightclub in Boston killed 492 persons, including western star Buck Jones, and led to new building codes that required public doors to open out, not in.

The public was reading See Here, Private Hargrove, watching Mrs. Miniver on the screen, and hearing departing G.I.'s yell to one another "You'll be sor-r-r-y," a cry born earlier on the radio quiz show "Take It or Leave It" when the nervous contestant had to decide whether to take his $32 in winnings or gamble for the stupendous sum of $64.

Early in the year Tin Pan Alley turned out the quickie "Remember Pearl Harbor," but the war was reflected best in such upbeat numbers as "Don't Sit Under the Apple Tree," "This Is Worth Fighting For," and "Praise the Lord and Pass the Ammunition," and such sentimental ones as "I Don't Want to Walk Without You," "Miss You," "He Wears a Pair of Silver Wings," and "When the Lights Go On Again."

There was no doubt about the top song of 1942. Irving Berlin's "White Christmas," during the wartime Christmas season, became the second song in Hit Parade history to remain Number One for ten weeks.

The two biggest show-business smashes of 1943 were the first pairing of Richard Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein II on Broadway for their Oklahoma!, and the incredible impact Swoon King Frank Sinatra made on the bobby-sox world.

The frail, bow-tied singer with the Tommy Dorsey orchestra had teenagers fainting in the aisles of New York's Paramount Theater in January, and on the night of February 6, 1943, he replaced Barry Wood as featured vocalist on "Your Hit Parade," and the girlish screams were heard nationwide each Saturday night. Soon he was singing his own hits onto the Top Ten—"That Old Black Magic," "It's Always You," "In the Blue of Evening," and "All or Nothing At All," a song he had recorded with Harry James in 1939 which had been brought off the shelf to cash in on his new popularity.

Oklahoma!, which revolutionized the musical-comedy stage away from operetta to the book format, gave the Hit Parade "Oh, What a Beautiful Mornin'" and "People Will Say We're in Love." The latter, although Number One only three times, set a longevity record in all positions—a staggering thirty weeks. But the top songs of the year, each with nine weeks as Number One, were "You'll Never Know" and "My Heart Tells Me."

At the movies we were seeing Casablanca, which furnished the Hit Parade with "As Time Goes By." It was the year of the zoot suit, the bloody race riot in Detroit, and FDR's signing of the first pay-as-you-go income tax bill. We were reading Wendell Willkie's One World and Betty Smith's A Tree Grows in Brooklyn. The war tide began to turn. North Africa was ours. Sicily was invaded. Mussolini resigned and Italy surrendered, although it still was held by the Germans. Meats, fats, cheese, and canned goods were added to the rationed list.

In the middle of the string of war-inspired tunes, ranging from "Don't Get Around Much Anymore" to "Comin' In On a Wing and a Prayer," hillbilly songwriter Al Dexter threatened court action unless the pop music Hit Parade recognized that everyone else was playing his honky-tonk tune, "Pistol-Packin' Mama." It appeared on "Your Hit Parade" shortly thereafter.

The biggest event of 1944 was D-Day, the sixth of June, when Allied forces crossed the English Channel to invade Europe at Normandy. It was the beginning of an end that was still a year away. Paris was liberated, and the Battle of the Bulge began in December.

Back home, cars were either up on blocks or sporting windshield stickers that proclaimed A, B, or C gasoline priorities. There was a civilian cigarette shortage which inspired huge lines whenever they went on sale. Dick Tracy was chasing The Brow, and Skeeze was in the Army.

The tragedy of the year was the Ringling Brothers, Barnum and Bailey Circus fire that claimed 169 lives in Hartford, Connecticut.

Screen newcomer Jennifer Jones was capturing movie audiences in The Song of Bernadette, and Bing Crosby and Barry Fitzgerald turned their collars backward as priests in Going My Way. The latter film produced the song hit "Swinging On a Star," the movie Cover Girl gave us "Long Ago and Far Away," and Broadway's Mexican Hayride supplied "I Love You" to the Top Ten. The non-sense song of the year was "Mairzy Doats."

John Hersey's novel A Bell for Adano won the Pulitzer Prize, but the one everyone was reading behind the cover of another book, in that more naïve era, was Kathleen Winsor's racy Forever Amber.

If FDR's third term was unprecedented, his fourth term was earthshaking. He won it handily that November over Thomas Dewey.

Frank Sinatra made his first movie, Higher and Higher, and sang two songs from it onto "Your Hit Parade"—"A Lovely Way to Spend an Evening" and "I Couldn't Sleep a Wink Last Night." For some reason a rash of revivals broke into the Top Ten that year: "Always," "My Ideal," "I'm Confessin'," "It Had to Be You," and "Together."

But it was the war-inspired tunes that dominated: "No Love, No Nothin'," "Goodnight Wherever You Are," "Milkman, Keep Those Bottles Quiet," "I'll Walk Alone," and "I'll Be Seeing You." The latter, written in 1938 but finding its own niche in 1944 by saying the right things in a wartime year, was the top song of the year, with ten weeks as Number One.

Perhaps no other single year in contemporary times was so history-packed as 1945. It saw the deaths of Mussolini, Hitler, and Roosevelt. It saw the surrender of Germany. It saw the dropping of the world's first atomic bombs on Hiroshima and Nagasaki. It saw the unconditional surrender of Japan.

The war was over.

There was a new President, Harry Truman. There was the beginning formation of a new worldwide organization called the United Nations. There was a new boss in Japan—General Douglas MacArthur, who had fulfilled his promise to return.

Incredibly, one fog-shrouded morning in New York City, a B-25 crashed into the seventy-ninth floor of the Empire State Building, killing thirteen.

Suddenly there was a new word in the vocabulary: postwar. And the biggest pastime once again became the movies, with Ray Milland's The Lost Weekend and Joan Crawford's Mildred Pierce leading the way in 1945.

Frank Sinatra was gone from "Your Hit Parade," replaced by, of all people, the operatic Lawrence Tibbett. Glenn Miller was gone, a wartime casualty, and so was the Big Band era. The hit makers now weren't the bands, they were singers like Sinatra, Dinah Shore, Perry Como, and Dick Haymes. Both Como and Haymes had hit recordings of "Till the End of Time," taken from the classic "Polonaise," putting it in the Number One spot for seven weeks. However, the top song of 1945 had to be the eight-week Number One run of "Don't Fence Me In," even though it began its string in late 1944.

Rodgers and Hammerstein had a big year in 1945. Their second Broadway hit, Carousel, had produced "If I Loved You" for the Hit Parade, and their first and only movie, State Fair, had given the Top Ten listings "It Might As Well Be Spring" and "That's For Me."

But perhaps the best-remembered song of 1945 was one by Jule Styne and Sammy Cahn, made famous in the Harry James-Kitty Kallen recording, which seemed to say it all for the returning servicemen: "It's Been a Long, Long Time."

Peace, it was wonderful.

In 1946 there was a shortage of new cars, apartments, and white shirts. But, happily, there was no shortage of good music.

Three songs, "Oh! What It Seemed to Be," "The Gypsy," and "To Each His Own," tied for the top tune of the year, each with eight weeks as Number One.

On Broadway the story could be summed up in one musical, Irving Berlin's Annie Get Your Gun. The show had perhaps more individual song hits than any other in stage history, although only three, "They Say It's Wonderful," "I Got the Sun in the Morning," and "Doin' What Comes Naturally," made radio's "Your Hit Parade."

The intriguing thing to ponder about that musical is the little-known fact that Jerome Kern was set to write it but died in late 1945. Would he have written all those hits that Berlin did? Kern's last contributions to the Top Ten were "In Love in Vain" and "All Through the Day" from the 1946 movie Centennial Summer.

The revival mill supplied "I'm Always Chasing Rainbows" and an old Russ Columbo hit in a new Perry Como dressing, "Prisoner of Love." Broadway's Call Me Mister, which gave the Hit Parade "South America, Take It Away," was a musical tale of returning servicemen, so it was right at home in 1946. The same could be said for the top motion picture of 1946, the highly memorable The Best Years of Our Lives.

The United Nations opened that year, but there still were reminders of the war in the headlines. "Lord Haw Haw," who had broadcast for the Nazis, was hanged for treason in London. And at Nuremberg eleven top Nazis were sentenced to hang. Ten were executed, but Hermann Goering committed suicide by poison in his cell two hours before he was to go to the gallows.

It was the year flying saucers were first spotted, surely an indication that the "future" was here. But conversely, it was also the year that music-dom dipped all the way back to 1913 for the top song of the year, "Peg O' My Heart," ten weeks Number One. Heartened by "Peg," Tin Pan Alley had 1909's "I Wonder Who's Kissing Her Now?" waiting in the wings to go on next. It did, to a lesser success.

Other revivals included 1931's "Guilty" and "Heartaches" (the latter a whistling hit recording by Ted Weems and Elmo Tanner). But there was no shortage of new tunes. Buddy Clark provided "Linda," as Frankie Laine revived "That's My Desire." Broadway's Finian's Rainbow and Brigadoon gave us "How Are Things in Glocca Morra?" and "Almost Like Being in Love," respectively. Rodgers and Hammerstein, now geared to turning out a Broadway musical every two years, gave us Allegro and its hit song, "So Far."

Al Jolson and Francis Craig had new careers in front of them. Everyone was doing Jolson impersonations after the immense popularity of the film The Jolson Story, released in late 1946, and the Jolson-sung sound track had delivered "The Anniversary Song" to the 1947 Hit Parade. Francis Craig was an obscure pianist who recorded "Red Rose" on the equally obscure Bullet label. "Red Rose" never made it, but disc jockeys flipped it over and played Craig's "Near You" to stardom. The year's most irritating song had to be "Civilization," a song a lot of people still think was titled "Bongo, Bongo, Bongo."

In April, 461 persons were killed in Texas City, Texas, when a ship blew up in the harbor and touched off a chain reaction of explosions and fires in the city. It was the year of "The New Look," with longer dresses for the fashion-conscious. Mickey Spillane introduced Mike Hammer in I, the Jury. And it was the year of the Truman Doctrine, the Taft-Hartley Act, and the Marshall Plan. On the nation's movie screens we had Gentleman's Agreement, Miracle on 34th Street, and A Double Life. In Congress, for the first time in fourteen years, we had a Republican majority and visions already of a Republican president in 1948. If one thing was certain, it was the conviction that Harry Truman couldn't win against anybody in '48.

Australia gave us "Now Is the Hour," England, "A Tree in the Meadow," and Hollywood, "Buttons and Bows." Between them they monopolized thirty weeks as the Number One song, because for the first time in the history of "Your Hit Parade," three songs were Number One ten weeks apiece in the same year and, of course, the top songs of 1948.

It was rough going for the rest down in the ranks, but Doris Day, a longtime band singer, discovered she was a movie star that year in her first film, Romance on the High Seas, and sang "It's Magic" onto the Top Ten. Nat "King" Cole sang about that hippie-before-his-time, "Nature Boy." Francis Craig followed up his "Near You" with "Beg Your Pardon." And the revival mill supplied "Baby Face," "I'm Looking Over a Four Leaf Clover," "The Best Things in Life Are Free," and "Little White Lies."

It was a banner year at the movies with Laurence Olivier's Hamlet, Jane Wyman's Johnny Belinda, and Humphrey Bogart's The Treasure of the Sierra Madre.

Mohandas K. Gandhi, Hindu spiritual leader of India, was assassinated by a fanatic in New Delhi.

Czechoslovakia joined the Communist bloc party, and the amazing Berlin Air Lift was begun by U. S. and British forces to get food and fuel to West Berlin past the Soviet land blockade. The Cold War was here.

It was the year the Jewish state of Israel was born as the British evacuated Palestine. Former Premier Tojo and six other Japanese war leaders were hanged in Tokyo as war criminals. Back in this country there was the drama of the show-down at the House Un-American Activities Committee between Whittaker Chambers, former Time magazine editor and admitted Communist, and the man Chambers testified he received secret documents from, Alger Hiss, former State Department official. Television was here now, and the face of America was being changed by sprouting rooftop antennas and darkened living rooms illuminated only by the glow from a seven-inch screen.

Oh, yes. Despite the odds, the pollsters, the Dixiecrats, the Henry Wallace third party, and the Chicago Tribune, which prematurely headlined that Thomas Dewey had won, Harry Truman was elected President of the United States.

Rodgers and Hammerstein, following their every-two-years pattern of Broadway musicals, came back in stunning fashion in 1949, making Ezio Pinza and Mary Martin king and queen of Broadway in South Pacific. The R & H factor put four hits from the score on the Hit Parade—"Bali Hai," "A Wonderful Guy," "Younger Than Springtime," and the song that became the top tune of 1949 with ten weeks as Number One, "Some Enchanted Evening." The biggest legit hit on Broadway that year was Arthur Miller's Death of a Salesman, starring Lee J. Cobb.

The Hit Parade saw revivals of "I've Got My Love to Keep Me Warm" and "I Can Dream, Can't I?" The year's rouser was "Cruising Down the River." Top movie of the year was All the King's Men. Those who had television sets were mesmerized by Milton Berle, known alternately as "Uncle Miltie" and "Mr. Television."

In Camden, New Jersey, Howard Unruh, a twenty-eight-year-old World War II combat veteran, suddenly went berserk and started on a door-to-door killing spree that left twelve dead and four wounded. In San Marino, California, as the nation watched and waited, three-and-a-half-year-old Kathy Fiscus was removed dead from the abandoned well she had tumbled into fifty-two hours earlier. Singer Buddy Clark was killed in a plane crash, and Margaret Mitchell, author of Gone With the Wind, was killed when struck by a car in Atlanta. An era ended in this country when Joe Louis, heavyweight boxing champ since 1937, resigned the title.

Joseph Cardinal Mindszenty, Roman Catholic primate of Hungary, was given life imprisonment by the Communist government in Budapest on charges of treason. (He was freed in 1956.) After 328 days 2,343,315 tons of food and coal had been delivered, the Soviet blockade was lifted, and the Berlin Air Lift ended. Nationalist China's government fled to Formosa, giving the world two Chinese governments.

Memories of World War II were stirred as broadcasters Axis Sally and Tokyo Rose received prison sentences for treason. And shudders of possible wars to come were realized when Russia ended the U.S. monopoly on A-bombs by exploding their own in a first test.

And so the decade known as the Flaming Forties, which actually had flared into global flames, gave way to the one that was going to be the Fabulous Fifties.

Six months deep into it, we were in another war.

The North Koreans crossed the thirty-eighth parallel in June, and President Harry Truman recalled later that the most difficult decision he ever made, including the one to drop the world's first atomic bomb, was to send American troops into Korea. By Christmas draft boards in average-sized big cities were calling up 200 men a day.

There was a rash of silly songs that year with titles like "Bibbidi Bobbidi Boo," "Rag Mop," "I Said My Pajamas," "I'd've Baked a Cake," "Tzena, Tzena, Tzena," and "The Thing." In the fall everyone was so tired of bidding "Goodnight, Irene" they were pleading for her to finally go on inside and hit the sack. Yet the top song of 1950 was a stirring love song, "My Foolish Heart," with nine weeks as Number One. The most intriguing tune of the year was the zither melody of "The Third Man Theme." Both came to "Your Hit Parade" from the movies of the same names.

Other fine films that year were All About Eve, Born Yesterday, 12 O'Clock High, The Gunfighter, and Sunset Boulevard. Broadway had Guys and Dolls, which furnished "A Bushel and a Peck," and the revival circuit had 1937's "Harbor Lights" back for another run.

It was the year of the Brink's robbery in Boston, where masked bandits got away with $2,775,-395.12. (The FBI got the culprits six years later.)

In an attempt to kill President Truman, two Puerto Rican fanatics tried to shoot their way into his Washington home. Guards killed one and wounded the other, at the cost of one guard's life and the wounding of two others.

And two new terms came into usage: "H-bomb" and "taking the Fifth." President Truman authorized the AEC to produce the new hydrogen bomb, and the Supreme Court ruled that under the Fifth Amendment no one could be forced to testify against himself.

In a startling, dramatic announcement President Truman created the biggest news of 1951 by firing General Douglas MacArthur during the height of the Korean War that April. In an equally dramatic moment MacArthur came home for the first time since World War II began and made his emotional farewell to Congress, proclaiming that "old soldiers never die, they just fade away."

The most dramatic moment in sports came that fall with Bobby Thomson's incredible last-minute home run which won the pennant for the New York Giants in a last-day play-off with the Brooklyn Dodgers.

The Hit Parade had a dramatic moment of its own that year when Nat "King" Cole's recording of "Too Young" pushed that song into the Number One spot for twelve weeks, a new all-time record. No song could follow that act, but Tony Bennett's recording of "Because of You" tried mightily with eleven weeks as Number One, and Perry Como's "If" had ten weeks in the top spot.

It was the year of Mario Lanza, who supplied "Be My Love" and "The Loveliest Night of the Year" (which was "Over the Waves" with new lyrics), and the year of Les Paul and Mary Ford, who gave us electronic revivals of "How High the Moon" and "The World Is Waiting For the Sunrise." From Broadway Irving Berlin's Call Me Madam contributed "You're Just in Love," and Rodgers and Hammerstein's "The King and I" delivered "Hello, Young Lovers."

Devastating floods hit Kansas and Missouri, and the Army and Navy were given equal time in the year's two top books, James Jones's From Here to Eternity and Herman Wouk's Pulitzer Prize winner, The Caine Mutiny.

The biggest thing on TV that year, besides Dagmar on "Broadway Open House," was the televised hearings by Senator Estes Kefauver into organized crime. Millions of viewers saw the hands, but not the faces, of witnesses taking advantage of the new Fifth Amendment ruling.

Old movies dominated TV, but the new ones in the theaters that year were such winners as An American in Paris, The African Queen, A Streetcar Named Desire, and A Place in the Sun.

Dwight D. Eisenhower, war hero, college president, and idolized figure in history, reached the natural culmination of his career by being elected President of the United States in November, breaking the Democrats' monopoly on the White House that stretched back to 1933.

He vowed to go to Korea before he took office, which he did, but the conflict droned on with no victory in sight. By fall the first of 1950's draftees were returning to civilian life, their two years up with nothing settled at the thirty-eighth parallel.

One G.I. was busy in the music field. Virtually everything Private first class Eddie Fisher recorded made "Your Hit Parade" that year: "Tell Me Why," "I'm Yours," "Anytime," "Wish You Were Here" (from the Broadway musical of that year), "Outside of Heaven," and even that old chestnut "Lady of Spain." Other revivals of 1952 were Nat "King" Cole's "Walkin' My Baby Back Home" and the Mills Brothers' "Glow Worm." It was the year of Johnnie Ray, who tearfully gave us "Cry" and "Little White Cloud That Cried." But it was Jo Stafford who recorded the year's top tune, "You Belong to Me," nine weeks as Number One.

One of the top movies of the year was High Noon, and it supplied its title song to the Hit Parade. Other big films of 1952 were The Greatest Show on Earth, Come Back, Little Sheba, Viva Zapata, and The Quiet Man.

It was the year of college panty raids; of ship captain Kurt Carlsen, who refused to leave his sinking Flying Enterprise; of Arthur Godfrey, Bishop Sheen, and "I Love Lucy" on TV; and it was the time when an ex-G.I. named George Jorgensen went to Denmark for sex surgery and returned as Christine Jorgensen.

King George VI died and Elizabeth II became Queen of England. Rocky Marciano ko'd Jersey Joe Walcott for the heavyweight championship. Texans were cussing Edna Ferber's new novel, Giant.

And two dogs figured in the news. FDR's dog, Fala, died. Richard Nixon's dog, Checkers, was defended on network TV.

It was the year of the Kinsey report on sexual behavior, the year the Scrabble craze swept the nation, and the year man climbed higher, dived deeper, and flew faster than ever before.

Edmund Hillary scaled Mount Everest ("because it was there"), Auguste and Jacques Piccard descended 10,334 feet into the Mediterranean in a steel diving ball, and Air Force Major Charles Jeaeger streaked through the stratosphere at 1,650 mph, two and a half times the speed of sound.

The year saw the death of Joseph Stalin, and both the birth and death of the new movie process, 3-D films. The best movies of the year (none in 3-D) were From Here to Eternity, Shane, and Stalag 17.

Fighting stopped in Korea, but peace talks bogged down. The world watched the romance between Princess Margaret and Peter Townsend. Africa flinched under the bloody series of Mau Mau raids. Julius and Ethel Rosenberg, the convicted spies, went to the electric chair while pickets paraded. Carl Hall and Bonnie Heady went to the gas chamber after having three months earlier kidnapped and murdered six-year-old Bobby Greenlease, Jr., in Kansas City, Missouri, demanding and getting $600,000, the largest ransom in history.

TV was so big now it was the making of pro football, previously a castoff sport for forgotten college athletes. Red Grange was the knowledgeable but ungrammatical off-camera spokesman. (Fans loved him for saying, "Green Bay are a good team, but Detroit have the better line.") Jack Webb's "Dragnet" was so popular its dum-dum-dum theme could be heard from nearly any house on any block on summer nights when windows were open. "I Love Lucy" had the best rating system of all: Cities discovered the water intake mysteriously rose sharply all over America during "Lucy" commercials, leading to the "Teleflush" theory that millions were going to the bathroom between acts. Lucille Ball herself carried off the year's best-planned publicity gimmick when TV's "Lucy" had a baby at the same time the real-life Lucy was delivering her new son.

Saturday night meant Jackie Gleason, Sid Caesar and Imogene Coca, and "Your Hit Parade" with Snooky Lanson, Dorothy Collins, Gisele MacKenzie, and Russell Arms. The top song they sang, with eight weeks as Number One in 1953, was "Song From Moulin Rouge."

It was the year of two famous women. Marilyn Monroe, the product of an orphanage and a foster home, had become the most famous sex symbol in the world. And for fifty-six days the world watched as the French and a lone woman—a nurse named Geneviève de Galard-Terraube and dubbed The Angel of Dienbienphu—made a futile, losing last stand against the Reds in what was then called the Indochina War. Later it would become known as the Vietnam War.

In an astonishing event that year, five members of Congress were wounded in the House of Representatives when four Puerto Ricans, one a woman, fired shots at random from a spectators' gallery, demanding independence for Puerto Rico. The congressmen recovered; the attackers went to prison. The year had started off astonishingly, with millions of viewers not believing their eyes on New Year's Day when they saw Tommy Lewis come off the Alabama bench at the Cotton Bowl and tackle Rice's Dicky Moegle as he headed for a TD.

The sensation of TV was new comic George Gobel, who had the country saying "I'll be a dirty bird." The darling of TV was dimpled pianist Liberace. But the show that left the housework undone around the nation was the televised Army-McCarthy hearings, easily the best and longest drama on the tube. When it was all over, Senator Joseph McCarthy was condemned by the Senate for his conduct at the hearings.

Roger Bannister banned forever the bugaboo of running a four-minute mile by turning the trick in 3:59.4. It was the year of the historic Supreme Court ruling that racial segregation in schools was unconstitutional. The new big dance of the year was the mambo. The murder trial of the year was in Cleveland, where Dr. Sam Shepard was found guilty of slaying his wife, Marilyn. Color TV was futilely trying to make inroads on the market. The first atomic-powered submarine, the Nautilus, was launched. And then there were four: Emilie Dionne died at the age of twenty.

The top movie of the year was On the Waterfront. The top Broadway musical was The Pajama Game, and it supplied the top song of the year, "Hey, There," ten weeks as Number One.

It was just background music from one of the year's better movies, The Blackboard Jungle, but enough kids played it enough times to land it on the Hit Parade one July night—and it signaled the beginning of the end for an entire era of popular music. The song was the raucous "Rock Around the Clock." The Big Beat had a toehold.

Still, the top songs of the year, tied with nine weeks apiece as Number One, were "The Yellow Rose of Texas" and "The Ballad of Davy Crockett."

The latter had come from TV, where Fess Parker had created a national craze with coonskin caps. Television that year opened up a new career for bandleader Lawrence Welk, and it hooked the nation on the first of the big TV quiz shows, "The $64,000 Question," with Hal March supplying the questions to the contestants in the isolation booth.

On Broadway the show to see that year was Damn Yankees, which gave the Hit Parade "Whatever Lola Wants" and "Heart." In the movies it was the low-budget sleeper, Marty.

The front pages told of Ike's heart attack in Denver, which sent the stock market tumbling. Albert Einstein died, Winston Churchill retired, Juan Peron was overthrown in Argentina, and the AFL-CIO merged. After twenty years on the air, "Your Hit Parade" left radio, leaving everyone to watch the TV version.

It was a year of tragedy, when a disabled racing car hurtled into the crowd at Le Mans, France, killing eighty-two and injuring seventy-eight.

But it also was a year of hope—the year of the Summit Meeting at Geneva between the Big Four powers, and the year of the Salk polio vaccine.

Just as the two biggest show-business impacts of 1943 had been a singer (Frank Sinatra) and a Broadway musical (Oklahoma!), the same two categories marked 1956 with a similar impact. This time it was Elvis Presley and My Fair Lady.

The young Memphis truck driver with sideburns, guitar, and fluid drive in his pelvis revolutionized the music world in 1956, pushed "Your Hit Parade" closer to its eventual extinction, and touched off the most fanatical, screaming, fainting cult of feminine followers since Sinatra's bobby-soxers. Virtually everything he recorded landed on the Hit Parade, turning the Saturday night songfest into a procession of titles like "Heartbreak Hotel," "Blue Suede Shoes," "Hound Dog," and, on a quieter note, "Love Me Tender."

Yet, if it was the year of rock 'n' roll, it also was the year of Lerner 'n' Loewe. Their My Fair Lady, later destined to break the Broadway long-run record for a musical set by Oklahoma!, gave the Hit Parade "On the Street Where You Live" and "I Could Have Danced All Night."

For all that, the top song of the year was "Canadian Sunset," with seven weeks as Number

One. ("Singing the Blues" also tied that figure, but the majority of its run carried over into 1957.)

Revivals for the year included 1934's "Moon-glow," 1939's "My Prayer," and 1940's "Blueberry Hill."

Egypt seized the Suez Canal, Grace Metalious was seizing royalties with her novel, Peyton Place, and Ike was seizing the White House for a second term by nine million votes. It was the year two airliners collided and crashed into the Grand Canyon, and the ocean liner Andrea Doria went to the bottom forty-five miles south of Nantucket Island, Massachusetts, after a collision with the Stockholm.

The Hungarian revolt was crushed by Soviet tanks, a Marine drill instructor was convicted of negligent homicide after six recruits drowned in an enforced march through a stream at Parris Island, South Carolina, and Grace Kelly of Hollywood became Princess Grace of Monaco.

In such a year there was nothing left except for someone to pitch the first perfect game in the history of the World Series. Don Larsen of the Yankees did it against Brooklyn.

Two new terms, neither a favorite of the American people, came into use that year—sputnik and recession. The Russians had the first, winning the race to launch the first orbiting satellite, and Americans had the latter.

Britain tested its first H-bomb, President Eisenhower sent federal troops to Little Rock, Arkansas, to enforce the Supreme Court's school integration edict, and the talk of the baseball world that year was the Milwaukee Braves, who beat the Yankees to win their very first World Series.

The talk of the United States Senate was about—and came from—Senator Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, who filibustered for twenty-four hours and eighteen minutes, eclipsing Wayne Morse's 1953 record of twenty-two hours and twenty-six minutes.

The Bridge on the River Kwai was the top Hollywood product, and late in the year Meredith Willson's The Music Man opened on Broadway to critical acclaim. Earlier, West Side Story had supplied "Tonight" to the Top Ten.

The Hit Parade didn't quite know what to do as rock 'n' roll boiled and crashed around the Top Ten charts. The adult cry began to be heard: "What will they have to look back on as romantic music of the times?" As if in answer, the teen cry was heard: "Listen, dear, they're playing our songs—'Teddy Bear,' 'All Shook Up,' and 'Raunchy.'"

Amid all the strange and new, three oldies came back to live again on the Top Ten: 1937's "So Rare," 1936's "I'm Gonna Sit Right Down and Write Myself a Letter," and 1931's "Love Letters in the Sand."

Oddly enough, considering the trend, it was the latter, popularized by Pat Boone, that tied with Debbie Reynolds's "Tammy" as the top song of 1957. Each was Number One for ten weeks.

It was the year Khrushchev came to power in Russia, and a young Texan named Van Cliburn unlocked the Iron Curtain with eighty-eight keys.

Charles de Gaulle came back to power in France, Fidel Castro drove Batista from Cuba, and the new ruler of American homes each night was Jack Paar on the "Tonight" show. The Giants and the Dodgers went to the West Coast, and Sherman Adams, Ike's chief aide, went back to private life after a congressional subcommittee investigation was held on influence and gift-giving in governmental agencies.

The United States put up its first satellite, Explorer I. The recession deepened and then slackened. Little Rock closed its schools rather than integrate. And Russian poet Boris Pasternak was forced to decline the Nobel Prize for his Doctor Zhivago.

There was revolt in Iraq, and U.S. troops were sent to Lebanon. At home, we dedicated two more Tombs of Unknown Soldiers for World War II and Korea. Pope Pius XII died, and the Vatican election produced Pope John XXIII.

We were in the midst of what became known as the Golden Age of TV drama, with "Playhouse 90" leading the field. But the best drama on the tube that year was the very first overtime game in the history of National Football League championship games. The Baltimore Colts scored first in the overtime, beating the New York Giants 23-17.

Flower Drum Song was the new Rodgers and Hammerstein musical on Broadway, and Lerner and Loewe's Gigi was the top movie of the year. The top song of 1958 was Tommy Edwards's recording of "It's All in the Game," with eight weeks as Number One.

The novelty songs of the year were "The Chipmunk Song" and "The Purple People Eater." A couple of revivals had the kids thinking they had discovered new songs in Connie Francis's recording of "Who's Sorry Now?" and The Platters' rendition of "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes." In the latter, that was almost the case. Chances are, Jerome Kern, had he been alive, wouldn't have recognized his own tune from 1933's Roberta in its wailing 1958 rock dressing.

It could be called the year of The Big Fix. A fixed chariot race on the movie screen reaped a record eleven Oscars for Ben-Hur. And the news of a rigged quiz show on television reaped doom for the popular "Twenty-One" and other TV shows like it.

The nation's top hero had been Columbia University teacher Charles Van Doren, continually winning contestant on "Twenty-One," until it was revealed he had been coached in advance on the questions. The show disappeared from the tube after that.

"Your Hit Parade" also vanished from television that year, surrendering to the new world of overnight rock 'n' roll hits that were considered "Golden Oldies" six weeks later.

The top song of the year was Bobby Darin's "Mack the Knife," a lyric version of 1956's "Moritat," which was Number One for nine weeks. Gypsy and The Sound of Music were the big musicals on Broadway, both supplying tunes to the Top Ten. And "My Happiness" came back from the 1948 Hit Parade to live again.

The jet age arrived with the 707, bringing with it the term The Jet Set, as commercial passenger flights became globe-shrinking jaunts of 660 mph at a 39,000-foot altitude.

The book everyone was reading was Allen Drury's saga of Washington, Advise and Consent. The world needed new maps with the emergence of new African nations, and the United States needed a new flag as Alaska and Hawaii became states.

Russia hit the moon with a rocket, Ingemar Johansson of Sweden hit Floyd Patterson's jaw for the heavyweight boxing title, and Khrushchev hit the ceiling when he visited this country and was denied a trip to Disneyland for security reasons.

The Soaring Sixties soared into sight with a paradox. They said John F. Kennedy was too young to run at forty-three, and Stan Musial was too old to run at thirty-eight.

But Kennedy ran all the way to the White House that November, winded after winning the closest election in United States history over Richard Nixon.

It was the year of the beatniks, the bearded poets of the new coffeehouses, and the year of the on-camera walkout by Jack Paar on his NBC-TV "Tonight" show.

Seventeen African nations changed their names, Khrushchev took off his shoe and banged it on a desk during a United Nations session, and Princess Margaret became Mrs. Antony Armstrong-Jones.

The best seller of the year was Harper Lee's To Kill a Mockingbird. The tragedy of the year was the midair collision of two airliners over New York, killing 137.

The Apartment was the Oscar-winning picture of 1960, and Casey Stengel, the pennant-winning manager, was released from the Yankees after winning his latest one.

It was the year of lunch-counter sit-ins by blacks throughout the South, and the year of Gary Powers, whose U-2 reconnaissance plane was shot down over Soviet Russia.

Caryl Chessman, who had won eight stays of execution since his 1948 conviction on robbery and kidnapping charges as California's Red Light Bandit, kept his ninth date and walked to his death in the San Quentin gas chamber.

Musically, it was an uninspired year, with only thirty-eight newcomers appearing on the Top Ten. "Theme From A Summer Place" was the year's top tune, with nine weeks as Number One.

1961

The first tip-off to the kind of year it was going to be should have come when you realized it read the same way if you turned 1961 upside down.

It was the year of The Wall (in Berlin) and The Twist (in the Peppermint Lounge in New York City).

Bad girl of the year was Carla, the destructive hurricane. Gagarin and Titov orbited into space, giving Russia another first. Shepard and Grissom made this country's first downrange suborbital space ride.

JFK gave us the Peace Corps, and started thousands reading the James Bond books. But the book millions were reading was Harold Robbins's The Carpetbaggers.

There were busloads of Freedom Riders in the Deep South, and hijackings of airliners to Cuba.

The ill-planned counterrevolutionary invasion of Cuba collapsed into what would be called the Bay of Pigs Fiasco.

Ex-Congo premier Patrice Lumumba was murdered in Katanga, United Nations secretary-general Dag Hammarskjold was killed in a plane crash, and ex-Gestapo chief Adolf Eichmann received the death sentence at his trial in Israel.

Again it was an uninspired and disappointing musical year. A recording by Bobby Lewis produced the top song, "Tossin' and Turnin'," which was Number One for seven weeks. The two biggest musicals on Broadway were Camelot and How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying, and they each contributed to the Top Ten songs of the year. A recording of "Blue Moon" by The Marcels brought that song, hardly recognizable, back from 1934.

But the biggest record of 1961 was one that was broken. Roger Maris of the New York Yankees finally smashed his sixty-first home run, breaking Babe Ruth's single-season record set in 1927. It's true that the season was longer now, giving Maris more games in which to accomplish the feat, but at least the year had seen a new champ.

The first U.S. Marine to go into orbit in 1962 was that track-star military athlete John Uelses, with the new controversial Fiberglas pole. The second was Lieutenant Colonel John H. Glenn, Jr., who orbited the earth three times in Friendship 7, and could have been elected President of the United States if the elections had been held that next week.

The actual President of the United States was being likened unto Superman as JFK bent the steel industry to his way of thinking about proposed price increases.

It was also the year that President Kennedy federalized the Mississippi National Guard, calling for the state to admit a black man, James Meredith, to the state university. Two died in the riots as he was admitted.

And it was the year of the Cuban missile crisis, when Kennedy went on TV to announce his successful ultimatum to Russia.

A 114-day newspaper strike closed down seven dailies in New York City, the Seattle World's Fair was opened, Telstar was sent into orbit to permit transoceanic TV, and in New Orleans a group of white people financed a busload of black Freedom Riders to New York City.

A chartered 707 jet crashed on takeoff at the Paris airport, killing 130 Atlanta citizens in what was then history's worst single plane disaster.

In the entertainment world, Lawrence of Arabia and To Kill a Mockingbird made it to the screen. Vaughn Meader had the hottest comedy album in the country, impersonating JFK on "The First Family." And in Rome, Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton were filming the costly Cleopatra, a movie with pyramids in the background and a triangle on the side.

Richard Rodgers, writing his first musical alone after the death of Oscar Hammerstein II, had No Strings on Broadway. It gave the Top Ten "The Sweetest Sounds." However, the sweetest sounds were the strains of "Moon River," whose nine weeks as Number One made it the top song of 1962, even though it began its string in the final three weeks of 1961.

What were you doing November 22, 1963? Just as it was remembered later that "Tonight We Love" was the Number One song on Pearl Harbor Saturday, 1941, now it was noted that a song called "I'm Leaving It Up to You" was Number One on that black weekend of 1963.

It had been a good year for ten months and twenty-one days up until that incredible, history-packed weekend which introduced the names Oswald and Ruby into history. Suddenly we had a new President. The headline initials were now LBJ, not JFK.

JFK had said he was going to get the country back on its feet—and he did in 1963 by starting off the year with his walking fad, which spread nationwide.

Later were to come a different kind—the Freedom Walks in the South. Racial unrest was stirring. There were troops sent to Birmingham, the National Guard was mobilized to enforce integration at the University of Alabama, and blacks marched on Washington for full civil rights immediately.

The year saw the conviction of Texas wheeler-dealer Billy Sol Estes, the Supreme Court ruling that Bible reading couldn't be required in schools, and The Great Train Robbery, when a masked gang got away with millions in England.

Christine Keeler was tried and found wanton in the Profumo sex scandal that rocked the British government, Russia shot the first woman into space, Pope John XXIII died and was replaced by Pope Paul VI. It was the year Johnny Carson replaced Jack Paar on the "Tonight" show, and the year Buddhist priests began setting fire to themselves in Vietnam.

Quintuplets, four girls and a boy, were born to Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Fischer of Aberdeen, South Dakota. Two guys named Tom Jones and Hud were big at the movies.

It was the year of the bossa nova, and the time when three revivals were all on the Top Ten at the same time. Somehow, dressed up in 1963's Big Beat, "Deep Purple," "Maria Elena," and "There, I've Said It Again" didn't sound like they did in 1939, 1941, and 1945. Undoubtedly the finest song of 1963 was "More," and it proved it by being Number One more times than any other song that year—eight weeks.

For the third time, a single year played host to the double show-business impact of a sensational singing artist and a milestone Broadway musical. In 1943 it had been Sinatra and Oklahoma! In 1956 it was Presley and My Fair Lady. And in 1964 it was The Beatles and Hello, Dolly.

The mop-topped quartet from England took the nation and the music world by storm with shrill electronic renditions of "Can't Buy Me Love," "A Hard Day's Night," "She Loves You," "Please Please Me," "Love Me Do," "I Feel Fine," and "I Want to Hold Your Hand," which became the year's top song, with seven weeks as Number One.

Carol Channing's Hello, Dolly, which eventually would break the long-run record for a musical set by My Fair Lady, gave the Top Ten its title song, although that was largely through Louis Armstrong's recording.

It was a banner year for Broadway in that 1964 also saw the debut of Barbra Streisand's Funny Girl and Zero Mostel's Fiddler on the Roof, both of which supplied songs to the Top Ten.

Khrushchev was out, and LBJ stayed in—by 61 percent of the vote in the November landslide over the Republicans' Barry Goldwater.

Herbert Hoover, Douglas MacArthur, and the poll tax all died that year. New York opened its World's Fair with black protest sit-ins. LBJ presented his Civil Rights Act, and the FBI made mass arrests for the murders of three civil-rights workers slain and buried in a recently built Mississippi earth dam.

It was the year of topless bathing suits for women, discotheques, and the Tonkin Bay incident that stepped up our involvement in Vietnam.

Moon pictures were flashed back to earth, Goldfinger began reaping movie box-office gold at Christmas, a poet named Cassius Clay became the heavyweight boxing champ, and the best seller was the Warren Report, which stated there was no conspiracy in the assassination of John F. Kennedy.

It was a year of draft card burnings, peace demonstrations, and marches on Washington. As our involvement in Vietnam grew, so did the picket lines.

There were civil rights marches from Selma to Montgomery in Alabama, and there was the disastrous five-day Watts riot in Los Angeles that left 33 dead, 800 injured, 3,000 arrested, and $200,000,000 in damages.

Man walked in space for the first time (a Russian first, then the United States' Edward White), looked at his first photographs of Mars sent back from that planet quicker than the drugstore used to do it, and saw Europe and North America linked for live TV via the Early Bird satellite.

They pulled the plug on New York City and the northeastern United States during the Big Blackout of 1965, leaving 30,000,000 people in the dark for twelve hours.

LBJ was unveiling both his Great Society and the scar from his gall bladder operation for photographers that year, earning him the title of The Abdominal Showman.

Winston Churchill died, the last of the major World War II leaders. Pope Paul visited New York. Truman Capote was publishing his best seller, In Cold Blood.

Bad girl of the year was Hurricane Betsy. Favorite girl of the screen was Julie Andrews, a hit in both Mary Poppins and The Sound of Music, the latter film eventually outgrossing Gone With the Wind.

The year's songs ranged from revivals (1953's "Crying in the Chapel") to protest songs ("Eve of Destruction"). Some were surprised that two of the raucous Beatles wrote one of the year's better, more melodic songs, "Yesterday," not to be confused with Jerome Kern's "Yesterdays." The new singers putting hits on the Top Ten were Roger Miller, Petula Clark, and Tom Jones. Good music seemed to be coming back, a fact verified by the year's top song, with six weeks as Number One, "The Shadow of Your Smile."

It was a year of rioting in the streets and of mass murder in the headlines.

Stokely Carmichael gave birth to the cry of "Black Power," and blacks in Chicago and Cleveland took the cue from Watts the summer before when 1966's long, hot summer rolled around.

But nothing shocked the nation like the brutal slayings of eight nurses in Chicago by Richard Speck, and the University of Texas tower snipings by Charles Whitman, who was killed by police bullets after he had killed his wife and mother and then slain twelve strangers from his tower perch while wounding forty-five.

Musically the year was summed up in a Frank Sinatra song that made the Top Ten: "It Was a Very Good Year." Good music definitely was back, and 1966 will always be the year of glorious records. Jim Ryun broke one in the mile run, and music-dom gave us two in "Somewhere My Love" ("Lara's Theme" from Doctor Zhivago) and "Strangers in the Night," which became the year's top song, with seven weeks as Number One.

We had Doctor Zhivago and Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf? at the movies, Mame and Cabaret on Broadway, and the new tongue-in-cheek "Batman" on TV.

Medicare went into effect, the airlines went on strike, the President gave away his daughter Luci to Pat Nugent, and Jacqueline Susann had the year's best seller in Valley of the Dolls. However, the U.S. government played a scene straight out of James Bond's Thunderball, when it finally recovered intact an H-bomb that had been lost in the sea near Spain.

The Supreme Court imposed sweeping curbs on the power of police to interrogate subjects, and we looked up one election day to realize a movie actor who had once starred in Bedtime for Bonzo was now California Governor Ronald Reagan.

It was a Mod, Mod, Mod, Mod World. Mini-skirts were here, and men's hair was getting longer. Notre Dame went for the tie instead of the win in its dream football game with Michigan State, and it appeared the United States was going for the same in Vietnam.

It was the year you began to feel your age. Elvis got married at thirty-two, Shirley Temple ran for Congress, and "What's My Line?" died of hardening of the ratings.

Britain devalued the pound—and to prove it, sent us Twiggy. It was the year of the new Soul Music. And the year the kids went to pot, they said. There were hippies, flower children, LSD trippers. San Francisco's Haight-Ashbury became the most well-known intersection in the country.

Israel won the Six-Day War with the Arabs, and back in this country discontent grew as casualties mounted in Vietnam. Cassius Clay, now known as Muhammad Ali, had refused to be drafted and had his heavyweight boxing crown removed as he was sentenced to five years in prison. Dr. Spock, the baby doctor, went from pacifiers to pacifism. When the long, hot summer arrived, it was Newark and Detroit blacks who rioted in those cities at the cost of sixty-five lives.

Jack Ruby died in Parkland Hospital, the same site where John F. Kennedy and Lee Harvey Oswald had died. Lynda Bird Johnson got married in the White House. Medical history was made with the first human heart transplant. The year started with the first Super Bowl, pro football championship game. It ended with Bonnie and Clyde as the big movie and the big dress fad. But Bonnie wasn't the bad girl of the year; it was Hurricane Beulah.

The tragedy of the year occurred when astronauts Edward White, first American to walk in space, Virgil Grissom, and Roger Chaffee burned to death on the pad at Cape Kennedy during a training exercise. LBJ met with Russia's Kosygin at Glassboro, New Jersey, Congress voted not to seat New York Representative Adam Clayton Powell, and Svetlana Alliluyeva, Stalin's daughter, defected to this country and published her memoirs. The big publishing news, though, was William Manchester's mammoth The Death of a President, which irked the Kennedys and Johnsons but fascinated the reading public.

The year's most contagious tune was "Ode to Billy Joe." The year's brightest new singing star was Vikki Carr, whose "It Must Be Him" tied "Gentle On My Mind" as the year's top tune, each being Number One for six weeks.

1968

It was the most history-packed year since 1945. Incredibly, 1968 saw the capture of the U.S. intelligence ship Pueblo by North Korea, LBJ saying no to another term in a stunning TV throwaway sentence, the assassinations of Martin Luther King and Senator Robert Kennedy, the slow beginnings of Vietnam peace talks in Paris, the muddy spectacle of Resurrection City tents in Washington, the Chicago youth riots at the Democratic Convention, the election of Richard Nixon as President in a comeback squeaker over Hubert Humphrey, the startling marriage of Jackie Kennedy to Aristotle Onassis, the Christmastime release of the Pueblo crew, and the Christmastime orbiting of the moon by American astronauts Frank Borman, James Lovell, and William Anders.

It was the year of Tiny Tim, Nehru suits, Black Power gloves at the Olympics, and a gold rush that didn't refer to an old Charlie Chaplin movie. Elvis became a father, Jerry Lewis became a grandfather, and Nixon and Eisenhower got married. That's what the headlines said when daughter Julie was wed to grandson David.

Everyone wanted to be under thirty, except Denny McLain of the Detroit Tigers, who finally went over the number one memorable day on the pitcher's mound. Roberto DeVicenzo gave the sports autograph of the year by signing his incorrect score card at the Masters, and Dancer's Image stood in a stall singing "What Kind of Foal Am I?," after being the first Kentucky Derby winner to be disqualified.

Singer Glen Campbell and songwriter Jim Webb had Number One tunes with "By the Time I Get to Phoenix," from late 1967, and "Wichita Lineman." Jeannie C. Riley had the big novelty tune, "Harper Valley P.T.A." Bobby Goldsboro had the most memorable, "Honey." But Herb Alpert had the year's top one, "This Guy's in Love With You," nine weeks as Number One.

There was a revival of airliner hijackings to Cuba, fashion ushered in the see-through blouse, and Rowan and Martin's "Laugh-In" established itself as the top new TV show of the year, giving the language "Sock it to me" and "Here come de judge." Top movies were The Graduate, The Odd Couple, Rosemary's Baby, and 2001: A Space Odyssey. The top foreign film import was Closely Watched Trains, but the most closely watched train was on TV one painful June day making Robert Kennedy's New York-to-Washington funeral trek.

It will forever and always be the year that man first walked on the moon. A world that couldn't believe its eyes, much less that Americans had beaten the Russians there, watched TV in awe that night of July 20, 1969, as Neil Armstrong became the first man to leave his footprints on the moon. His first words, "That's one small step for man, one giant leap for mankind," became a quote for the ages. Minutes later he was joined by astronaut Edwin Aldrin, Jr., as Michael Collins orbited above them in Apollo 11. And four months later, while Richard F. Gordon, Jr., did the orbiting, Apollo 12 astronauts Charles Conrad, Jr., and Alan Bean accomplished the feat for America for the second time in the same year.

Aside from the moon, the second most famous location in the 1969 headlines was Chappaquiddick, where the tragedy of the Kennedys loomed again as Senator Edward Kennedy's car went off the bridge, and he waited all night before notifying authorities that a young secretary had drowned in the mishap.

In such a year it seemed nothing could further surprise or stun the nation. But the New York Jets, of the underdog American Football League, had beaten the NFL champs for the first time in the Super Bowl, and the lowly, laughable New York Mets won not only the pennant but also the World Series.

It was the year of rock festivals in open fields, Hurricane Camille, female racetrack jockeys, and a new wave of youth-oriented movies led by Midnight Cowboy and Easy Rider. Campus rebellions by college students were on the front pages, and long hair and sideburns were "in" for men. The year ushered in a sexual permissiveness not seen since the days of the Roman Empire. It was anything-goes in the movies and on the newsstands. There were nudes and sexual acts on the Broadway stage in Oh! Calcutta! and Hair, the latter being a rock musical that gave the Top Ten its first tandem song as one entry, "Aquarius/Let the Sunshine In." Six weeks as Number One, it tied with "A Time For Us," from the film Romeo and Juliet, as 1969's top song.

Dwight D. Eisenhower, Ho Chi Minh, and The Saturday Evening Post all died; the best seller of the year was Portnoy's Complaint; and the exposure of the year was the My Lai Massacre, which intensified dissatisfaction with the United States' part in the Vietnam war.

The Spectacular Seventies came in with a bang. There was the roar of National Guard gunfire on the campus of Ohio's Kent State University that left four student demonstrators dead. There was the sound of four hijacked jets being blown up in the desert by Arabs. The world's worst natural disaster occurred in Pakistan when huge tidal waves left hundreds of thousands dead, and in this country there was the disastrous Hurricane Celia.

Dramas of the year were (books) The Godfather, (movies) Patton and Love Story, and (real life) Apollo 13 astronauts James Lovell, Fred Haise, and John Swigert limping back from outer space to a successful splashdown after a malfunction scrubbed their proposed moon landing and threatened for a while to leave them stranded like the astronauts in the 1970 fictionalized movie, Marooned.

The unpopular Vietnam war droned on as President Nixon sent troops in—and out—of Cambodia. An unknown millionaire named Michael Brody began giving away his money to anyone who phoned him for a donation. Johnny Cash had a boy and named him Johnny instead of Sue.

Broadway finally said "Good-bye, Dolly" after she set a new longevity record for a musical—2,844 performances. Newest college fad was the longest kiss—twenty-seven hours and fourteen minutes—set by an Omaha couple. (Sure, he kissed you once, but will he kiss you again?)

It was the year of the Women's Liberation movement, of the hardhat workers who came out backing President Nixon, and of the nation's first postal strike. In sports UCLA won an unprecedented fourth straight national basketball title, and Tom Dempsey of the New Orleans Saints kicked a record-shattering sixty-three-yard field goal. The bizarre Charles Manson trial for the Sharon Tate murders held the headlines. Tragic airplane crashes wiped out the football teams of Wichita State and Marshall University. Pro coach Vince Lombardi died, and the epitaph for Marie Dionne could have read: And then there were three.

The hottest new recording group was The Carpenters, whose "Close to You" and "We've Only Just Begun," each with seven weeks as Number One, were the top songs of 1970.

It was the year of the Smile button, hot pants, water beds, and a religious movement among youth that spawned the term "Jesus freaks." Broadway had Jesus Christ Superstar and, for another generation, tap-dancing Ruby Keeler in a revival of No, No, Nanette. The biggest thing on television was Archie Bunker in "All in the Family." At the movies it was The French Connection. And the year's winner on the Top Ten was "Where Do I Begin?" with nine weeks as Number One, from the late 1970 movie Love Story, still generating long box-office lines in 1971.

At year's end there was something new in the air. Hijackers were demanding ransom and parachutes for bail-out escapes. Look magazine died, and Lieutenant William Calley got life for his part in the My Lai Massacre. Charles Manson and his demoniacal followers got death sentences in their trial for the Sharon Tate massacre. President Nixon devalued the dollar. Red China was in at the UN, Nationalist China was out. The new term in the news was the Pentagon Papers, and the government took The New York Times to court over their publication. The eighteen-year-olds got the vote, and George C. Scott got the Oscar for Patton but refused it. An earthquake hit Los Angeles and, unbelievably, the militants got around to bombing the U.S. Capitol in Washington over the prolonged Vietnam War.

The year brought death to forty-two in the Attica Prison riot, to 162 in Japan in history's worst airplane crash, and to three Russian cosmonauts who were found dead in their capsule when it was brought back to earth. And in Yuba City, California, Juan Corona was accused of history's greatest mass killing when searchers found the bodies of twenty-five transient workers buried on his property.

UCLA won an unprecedented fifth national basketball championship. Joe Frazier won the heavyweight boxing crown by beating Muhammad Ali in the "Fight of the Century." Lee Trevino, in a four-week period, won the U.S., Canadian, and British Opens, but the golfer of the year had to be Alan Shepard, who hit a shot on the moon. Twice in 1971 Americans walked on the moon again, but the Apollo 14 and 15 lunar landings were almost too commonplace now for viewers to watch on TV.

The year was Richard Nixon's. In a succession of headlines he went to Red China, he went to Russia, and in November he went to town with the second biggest landslide victory in presidential election history. His opponent, Senator George McGovern, came from far back in the pack to Democratic nomination glory only to lose ground nationally over the dumping of Thomas Eagleton as his running mate after the disclosure of Eagleton's past mental health treatment. The campaign year had started as if the nation were watching a painful rerun on TV as Alabama Governor George Wallace lay on a shopping center lot, shot down by a would-be assassin. He lived but was left paralyzed from the waist down.

The sportsman of the year was Mark Spitz, who swam his way to an unprecedented seven Gold Medals in the Olympics. But the world's violence even carried over to the Olympics in Munich, where Palestinian terrorists engaged in a grim kidnapping bloodbath that left seventeen dead. Elsewhere, Japanese terrorists, hired by the Arabs, used machine guns and grenades to massacre twenty-five persons and injure seventy as hapless airline passengers waited for their luggage in Tel Aviv.

Disasters of the year: A Soviet jet crashed in Russia, killing 172 on a Friday the thirteenth . . . Hurricane Agnes killed ninety-six in floods . . . A flood in Rapid City, South Dakota, claimed 235 lives . . . Managua, Nicaragua, became the burial site for 10,000 earthquake victims.

Records of the year: The Godfather became moviedom's all-time grosser its first year out . . . Fiddler on the Roof closed after 3,242 performances, becoming Broadway's longest-running show, play or musical . . . Texas State Senator Mike McKool set the world filibuster record, talking in Austin for forty-two hours, thirty-three minutes . . . Bob Seagren set a new pole-vault record at 18 feet, 5¾ inches . . . UCLA won its sixth straight national basketball crown . . . "Alone Again (Naturally)" was the year's top song, with seven weeks as Number One.

Two more moon walks were hardly watched by jaded TV viewers. Harry Truman, J. Edgar Hoover, and Life magazine all died. American prima donna Bobby Fischer beat Russia's Boris Spassky in the Super Bowl of chess, and Clifford Irving was Ghost Writer of the Year, pocketing $650,000 for a hoax Howard Hughes biography that went unprinted.

It started out, jubilantly enough, as the year the Vietnam War ended, and the POWs came home. It ended as the year when Vice-President Spiro Agnew resigned because of alleged bribery payoffs when he was Governor of Maryland, and the Congress was crying for the impeachment of President Richard Nixon over the cover-up of the Watergate scandal.

Gerald Ford was appointed Vice-President. Richard Nixon refused to resign as the televised Watergate hearings droned on, uncovering more damning evidence of White House knowledge about the 1972 burglary of Democratic headquarters in Washington's Watergate complex. There were the missing White House tapes, the infamous eighteen-minute erasure in one of them, the firings and indictments of high officials. And out of Senator Sam Ervin's televised hearings, the year's most overworked phrase: "At this point in time . . ."

The year first saw a meat shortage and sky-high prices for it. Then came the Energy Crisis, with its dimouts of city lights and a gasoline shortage that found motorists lining up for sixty-cent gas when they could find service stations open. Inflation, long talked about, became a reality.

The year's blackest headlines: A New Orleans sniper left six dead and seventeen wounded before he was slain atop a French Quarter hotel . . . Israeli fighter planes shot down a civilian Libyan jetliner, killing 106 aboard . . . Dean Arnold Corll, David Owen Brooks, and Elmer Wayne Henley operated a homosexual slaying factory in Houston that turned up the bodies of twenty-seven missing teenage boys . . . Arab hijackers mowed down a Rome airport with bullets and fire bombs, taking thirty-two lives . . . Israel went to war again against Egypt and Syria.

In January, Lyndon Johnson died. The year saw militant Indians taking over Wounded Knee, South Dakota, for seventy days. Marlon Brando won the Oscar for The Godfather but refused it. UCLA won its seventh straight national basketball championship. Secretariat became the first horse since 1948 to win racing's Triple Crown. O. J. Simpson set a new pro football rushing record, 2,003 yards in a season. Tennis hustler Bobby Riggs lost to Billie Jean King in the Ms. match of the year. Bette Midler's record impersonation of the Andrews Sisters put "Boogie Woogie Bugle Boy" on the Top Ten, which the original didn't do in 1941. But the top song was "And I Love You So," with five weeks as Number One.

As the world settled down to watch one hot and frantic night in August, Richard Nixon forever stamped himself and 1974 into history by delivering a television address in which he became the first President of the United States to resign his office.

Faced with a Supreme Court edict that he must surrender incriminating tapes about the Watergate scandal, he chose resignation rather than impending impeachment. Gerald Ford, himself an appointed Vice-President following Spiro Agnew's 1973 resignation, became President of the United States and a month later granted Nixon a presidential pardon. When Ford appointed Nelson Rockefeller as Vice-President, the nation for the first time had two men not elected to the two highest offices.

It was also the year of the bizarre Patricia Hearst kidnapping, her equally bizarre defection to her Symbionese Liberation Army abductors, and the later Los Angeles shoot-out that wiped out the gang but failed to turn up the heiress.

It was the year of nude streakers, a dubious fad that began on campuses and spread to unexpected appearances on network TV. At the movies we had The Godfather, Part II, The Exorcist, and The Towering Inferno. In the Top Ten "I Honestly Love You" was the year's top song, with five weeks as Number One. In sports Hank Aaron hit number 715 one memorable night in Atlanta to break Babe Ruth's home-run record. At season's end he had made it 733 homers. But the most startling record of the year was set by an American Lockheed SR-71 that zipped from New York to London in one hour and fifty-five minutes. Flop of the year: Daredevil Evel Knievel, who went into the drink while trying to rocket over Snake River Canyon.

Muhammad Ali regained his heavyweight crown by knocking out George Foreman in Africa. Rioting over school busing came to Boston. Congressman Wilbur Mills of Arkansas made headlines with stripper Fanne Fox. Semi-Depression gripped the nation with the combination of inflation and unemployment. The starkest headlines told of political kidnappings, a black gunman assassinating Martin Luther King's mother at church services in Atlanta, and of history's worst aviation disaster when 346 persons were killed in the crash of a Turkish jumbo jet in Paris.

It was the year the Viet Cong suddenly marched on South Vietnam and Cambodia, quickly crushed both into unconditional surrender, and finally ended thirty years of warfare.

Tragically, the initial U.S. evacuation flight of Vietnamese orphans, carrying 243 children, crashed on takeoff in Saigon, killing 155 aboard. Later, more than 150,000 Vietnamese refugees flooded into the United States looking for homes and jobs. Another Pueblo-type incident ended on a triumphant note for the U.S. when President Ford sent Marines to the rescue to retrieve the American freighter Mayaguez and its crew after Cambodia captured the ship.

Incredibly, in this country two women, one of them the notorious Lynette "Squeaky" Fromme of the Charles Manson "family," tried unsuccessfully to shoot President Ford within a seven-day period in California. That state made headlines again when Patty Hearst was finally captured, surrendering at gunpoint.

Fighting flared in Beirut and Angola. Jimmy Hoffa disappeared, supposedly a murder victim, and the World Football League died, apparently of apathy and underfinancing. New York City was going broke, and the rest of the country was reeling under inflation. The only thing going higher than prices was Dave Roberts, who pole-vaulted to a new record of eighteen feet, 6½ inches. New Zealand's John Walker set a new record in the mile run, 3:49.4.

King Faisal of Saudi Arabia was assassinated by a nephew who shot him within the walls of the royal palace, and in this country Japanese Emperor Hirohito—thirty years late—finally got to the White House.

The most overworked words of the year were Bicentennial and détente. In a feat of celestial détente, U.S. and Soviet astronauts linked up and went capsule-visiting in space. President Ford also went visiting, and critics said he took a show boat to China.

There was never any question about the top movie of the year as Jaws grossed more than $100,000,000 in six months to set a new all-time box-office record. The year's top song, with a more modest five weeks as Number One, was "Please, Mister, Please."

It was, quite simply, the year of Jimmy Carter, the man who came out of nowhere, made a no-suspense show out of the Democratic National Convention, and in November was elected President of the United States. Gerald Ford, the nation's first nonelected President, lost narrowly, becoming the first incumbent since Herbert Hoover to be turned out of the White House.

It was also, of course, the year of the peanut joke, the Playboy magazine "lust" jokes inspired by Carter's ill-advised interview, and the Washington "Can she type?" jokes, inspired by secretary Elizabeth Ray, a nontypist who charged she was on Congressman Wayne Hays's payroll for sexual favors.

It was a year of records. Seven Americans won the Nobel Prize, giving the United States an unprecedented sweep of the 1976 awards. Abilene Christian College's Ove Johansson kicked a sixty-nine-yard field goal against East Texas State, breaking Tom Dempsey's pro football record. Dave Roberts pole-vaulted 18 feet, 8½ inches, Dwight Stones high-jumped a record 7 feet, 7¼ inches, and Hank Aaron finally retired from baseball, leaving the home-run record at 755. But the best record of 1976 was Barry Manilow's "Tryin' to Get the Feeling Again," the top song with six weeks as Number One.

On the Fourth of July, America's Bicentennial exploded in a cascade of fireworks and tall ships sailing majestically into New York's Hudson River. Amazingly, America's Viking I spacecraft landed on Mars, sending back razor-sharp photos of the planet's surface. Down on this planet, death claimed the world's two top billionaires, J. Paul Getty and recluse Howard Hughes, the latter, ironically, being a man who had to die to prove he was alive.

It was the End of the Sixth Happiness for Zsa Zsa Gabor and Elizabeth Taylor, both shedding husband number six and promptly marrying husband number seven. Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz, a man of the soil, told an earthy joke about blacks and had to go back to the farm. Flop of the year: swine-flu shots. Mysterious killer of the year: the Philadelphia legionnaires' disease, which claimed the lives of twenty-five conventioners in that city. Headlines of the year: Three masked men kidnapped twenty-six children and the driver from a school bus in Chowchilla, California, burying them in an underground prison from which they escaped before ransom demands could be made . . . Israeli commandos flew 2,620 miles for a lightning strike on Uganda's Entebbe Airport to kill pro-Palestinian skyjackers and rescue 104 hostages.

It was the kind of year when the Egyptian president, Anwar Sadat, could make a first-ever step on Israeli soil to talk peace . . . when a mysterious slayer known as Son of Sam could terrorize New York before being captured . . . when the nation suffered its coldest January in history.

And yet, somehow, 1977 will always be remembered as the year Elvis Presley died unexpectedly at the age of forty-two, setting off mourning usually reserved for Presidents. No less stunning was the death weeks later of Bing Crosby.

There was never any question about the movie of the year: Star Wars, which set a new all-time box-office gross. The top song of the year was Leo Sayer's recording of "When I Need You," with seven weeks as Number One. The other records of the year were nonplaying: Seattle Slew became the first horse ever to win the Triple Crown of racing without suffering a defeat . . . Al Geiberger shocked the world by shooting an incredible 59 in the Danny Thomas-Memphis Golf Classic . . . A. J. Foyt became the first man ever to win four Indianapolis 500 races . . . Tokyo's Sadaharu Oh belted his 756th career home run, breaking Hank Aaron's baseball record . . . St. Louis Cardinal Lou Brock stole his 893rd base, breaking Ty Cobb's record . . . Texas State Senator

Bill Meier filibustered in Austin for forty-three hours, setting a world record.

President Jimmy Carter set precedents during his first year in office, going informal to his inauguration, banning "Hail to the Chief," carrying his own baggage, spending the night with at-random American families, holding "Dial-a-President" call-in radio programs, and telling people to "Call me Jimmy." It was the year his budget director, Bert Lance, resigned under fire; the year of the prison escape and recapture of Martin Luther King's slayer, James Earl Ray; the year convicted killer Gary Gilmore was executed by a Utah firing squad, the first person to be executed in the United States in nearly ten years.

It was the year of "Roots" on TV, and tragedy in the headlines, when fire claimed 164 nightclub victims at the crowded Beverly Hills Supper Club in Southgate, Kentucky. Ironically, history's worst aviation disaster occurred on the ground when 581 died as Pan Am and KLM jumbo jets collided on the runway at Santa Cruz Airport in the Canary Islands. And Hanafi Moslem gunmen terrorized the nation's capital in March, seizing three Washington buildings and holding 149 hostages for thirty-eight hours, killing one and wounding several.

It was a year of deadly numbers, and a ghastly recipe of cyanide and children's fruit punch . . . It left a staggering 914 dead in mass suicide-murders that wiped out the Jonestown commune of Americans in Guyana shortly after investigating newsmen and a U.S. congressman were killed trying to leave . . . The grim numbers hit home when 144 died in San Diego as a jet and a private plane collided in the United States' worst air disaster . . . In Des Plaines, Illinois, investigators turned up the bodies of thirty-three boys and young men, sexually molested and murdered by John Gacy, Jr., exceeding the twenty-seven in a similar 1973 Houston case . . . But the number that probably made the biggest impact in 1978 was thirteen, as Howard Jarvis began a taxpayer revolt with California's Proposition 13.

Other numbers in 1978 included three popes all in one year, with the world being stunned by the death of Pope John Paul I only thirty-four days after he had been elected . . . The number three kept cropping up: Muhammad Ali became the first to win the heavyweight title three times when he beat Leon Spinks . . . Affirmed became the eleventh horse in history to win racing's Triple Crown.

Ten weeks as Number One piled up for "Time Passages," making it the top song of the year . . .

Mickey Rooney got married for the eighth time . . . And we all felt our ages when both Mickey Mouse and Shirley Temple turned fifty.

If 1977 was the nation's coldest winter, 1978 was its snowiest as blizzards paralyzed the country . . . It was the year of the world's first test-tube baby, Louise Brown, born to Mrs. John Brown in England . . . There was palace upheaval in Iran; terrorism in Italy, where Aldo Moro, leader of the Christian Democratic Party, was slain; and "Holo-caust" on TV as that series became 1978's viewing counterpart to 1977's "Roots" . . . The San Francisco mayor and a city supervisor were slain in City Hall by a disgruntled former city supervisor . . . And 1978 will be remembered as the year President Carter gathered Egypt's Anwar Sadat and Israel's Menachem Begin at Camp David to agree on a peace settlement.

But the numbers game prevailed: Three American men from Albuquerque made history's first Atlantic crossing in a balloon, from Maine to France in 137 hours, 18 minutes . . . Six masked gunmen got $5,000,000 in the United States' biggest heist, at New York's Kennedy Airport . . . And Ray Blazina and Bobbi Sherlock of Pittsburgh set a new single-kiss record, maintaining it 130 hours, two minutes and seventeen seconds.

If the top movie of 1979 was Apocalypse Now, the top crisis was OPECalypse Now, as the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries drove the price of American gasoline up to $1 a gallon, caused mile-long lines at service stations (when you could find one open), and finally caused odd-even days of gas rationing . . . Elsewhere, the villain of the year was Ayatollah Khomeini, who took over after the Shah of Iran fled to the United States. Iranian students held more than fifty Americans hostage in demand for the Shah's return . . . Flop of the year: The Susan B. Anthony dollar, the buck that never got passed. In a year of soaring inflation and orbiting gold prices, it was suggested the new coin should have been called the J. C. penny.

It was a year of records: The Pittsburgh Steelers beat the Dallas Cowboys to become the first team to win three Super Bowls . . . Britain's Sebastian Coe set a record for the mile run (3:48:95), and Maxine Nightingale recorded the best record when "Lead Me On" became the top song of the year with seven weeks as Number One . . . The grimmest record of the year: 275 killed in the worst air disaster in United States history as an American Airlines DC-10 jetliner crashed just after takeoff at Chicago's O'Hare Airport.

It was the year of The China Syndrome on the screen, a fictional tale of a leaking nuclear power plant that a few days later became a fact in Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, with thousands being evacuated around Three Mile Island . . . For those who thought Elvis Presley's death in 1977 would be the only time a show-business passing would grab nationwide front-page bannerlines, 1979 will be remembered as the year one morning's bannerlines proclaimed: "John Wayne, American, Dies" . . . It was finally the year for equal rights: Hurricanes were named for males (Bad Boys of the Year were Frederic and David—with the latter becoming Goliath), and Margaret Thatcher became Britain's first woman prime minister.

After nearly thirty-one years as hostile neighbors, Egypt and Israel signed a formal treaty at the White House with peacemaker Jimmy Carter signing as a witness . . . Pope John Paul II visited the United States, terrorists took the life of Britain's Lord Louis Mountbatten, Skylab finally fell and didn't hit anybody, and a feared Soviet Union troop buildup in Cuba turned out to be the Cuban fizzle crisis.

And so we entered the Electrifying Eighties, with the most electrifying moment saved for the eleventh month when Ronald Reagan was elected President of the United States in an unpredicted landslide over incumbent Jimmy Carter.

It was the year the Gipper won one for himself, and also the year of the actors' strike. It was a time no one thought they'd ever see: When Ronald Reagan was the only actor working.

The whodunit of the year turned out to be a shedunit. The shots heard around the world were fired by Kristin, J. R. Ewing's mistress. And the night the world finally got that answer "Dallas" became the highest-rated TV show in history as 83 million watched.

We knew immediately who fired the other shots heard around the world. John Lennon signed his life away, giving an autograph to Beatle fan Mark David Chapman, twenty-five, who later that night murdered Lennon in New York.

On Broadway, Grease closed after 3,388 performances, passing Fiddler on the Roof, to become the longest-running show in Broadway history. Hits at the movies were Ordinary People and The Empire Strikes Back. Musically, the top song of the year was "Lost in Love," six weeks as Number One.

It was the year gold got so high, the country's motto became "Ingot We Trust," and inflation got so bad Bo Derek became a "12." Shirley Temple became a grandmother, and it was Bye Bye, Bertie when Bert Parks, sixty-five, was fired as Miss America Pageant emcee for being too old.

Tragedies of the year: An earthquake killed more than 3,000 people in Italy. A fire at the MGM Grand Hotel in Las Vegas claimed eighty-four lives. Atlanta was terrorized as eleven black children were found murdered and four remained missing. The last of the red-hot lavas was Mount St. Helens, which blew its top in Cougar, Washington, leaving thirty-four dead and thirty-two missing. An aborted rescue mission of the hostages in Iran left eight American military men dead in the desert as two aircraft collided on the ground. And at year's end, fifty-two American hostages taken in 1979 were still prisoners.

It was on your marks, get set, Stop! for American track stars at the Summer Olympics in Moscow as the U.S. led a sixty-two-nation boycott because the Soviets had invaded Afghanistan. Records of the year were Poland's Wladislaw Kozakiewicz pole-vaulting 18 feet, 11½ inches, and East Germany's Gerd Wessig high-jumping 7 feet, 8¾ inches. The Pittsburgh Steelers beat the Los Angeles Rams to become the first team in history to win four Super Bowls, Swedish tennis star Bjorn Borg won Wimbledon for the fifth consecutive time, the U.S.'s Eric Heiden won five gold medals in speed skating at the Winter Olympics. And it was Ladies First at the Kentucky Derby when Genuine Risk became the first filly to win that race in sixty-five years.

I'VE HEARD THOSE SONGS BEFORE

The Weekly Top Ten Tunes for the Last Fifty Years

What was the number one song on Pearl Harbor Saturday?
 What music was in the air on that terrible night in 1963 when your sweetheart left the party early with your best friend?
 Or on the day they were married?

Here is the ultimate guide to popular music, the one indispensable reference work for everyone interested in the songs that have provided the sound track of our lives for the last half-century.

I've Heard Those Songs Before is the only compilation in existence of the Top Ten songs since 1930, listed week by week. For each year there is a lively summary of important events. A master index lists and locates every Top Ten tune and indicates how long each song was on the list and how often it was in first place.

Elston Brooks, show business columnist of the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, has been annotating and perfecting these lists of the nation's favorite songs since 1942, when he first found himself hooked on "Your Hit Parade." Through painstaking research in musical histories and entertainment trade papers he has assembled for the first time an authoritative record of musical best sellers in the pre-Hit Parade era, and a revised listing for the Sixties and Seventies, which corrects the errors of emphasis created by rock-oriented disc jockeys.

As Brooks says in his Foreword, "What has finally emerged here is intended as a permanent record, an instant bet settler, a true history of popular music from 1930, through the rock years, and up to the present."

More than a useful reference, I've Heard Those Songs Before is a surprising and delightfully readable chronicle of the weeks of our lives.
