EDITOR'S COMMENTS

Welcome to another "mostly ads edition" of A.R.C. The coming radio events section is also included which lists 27 meetings, 9 meets, and 5 auctions for July. Articles will appear in a future issue.

With three major radio events coming up in July and August, we are pleased to print a guest editorial contributed by David and Julia Bart commenting on the importance of attending radio events, especially in today's Internet-centered environment. On the other hand, A.R.C. also has to compete in that environment.

New to A.R.C.'s website is an improved Marketplace, now in a shopping cart format. Just point and click to subscribe, renew, or purchase a book. All items are pictured, described and linked to a book review, if available. And, all credit card transactions are secure.

Be sure to take advantage of A.R.C. benefits: a toll-free number (866) 371-0512; Discover, MasterCard, American Express, Visa accepted; books shipped free in the U. S. by USPS media mail; and for current subscribers, a 10 percent discount on all book orders. And, again in this "mostly ads edition," is a subscriber $5 off coupon, good for any purchase over $30, except advertising. It is included on page 20.

Happy Collecting!

John V. Terrey, Editor

ON THE COVER

On the cover this month is the flea market at last year's ARCI meet. You can see what you might be missing if you don't follow David and Julia Bart's recommendation to attend a radio meet this summer.

Attending Radio Shows in an Internet World

BY DAVID & JULIA BART

Another summer has arrived and collectors are deciding whether or not to drive to radio shows around the country. With eBay, Internet sales and classified ads, it may seem easier to shop from home; but, radio collectors thrive on personal interaction. They need each other to learn about the hobby and to share information. Everyone benefits from active shows, and the clubs need the support. So, get up and see the country. Attend a radio show this summer!

We have been collecting radios, telegraph and other antiques for more than 20 years. Hot topics have varied over the years. One trend, however, is unmistakable — attendance at shows in virtually all areas has declined. This is surprising in light of successful television programs such as the Antique Road Show and the History Detectives. Sales of collectors' books and history books have never been better. While eBay and the Internet are often blamed for the declines in show attendance, many factors have played a role. Changing tastes, passing fads, rising travel expenses, increased costs of club membership and show fees, as well as an aging clientele, have all affected participation.

Endlessly surfing the Internet can yield a great deal of interesting information. Shopping is available at any time, day or night; but, sitting at home at the keyboard is not enough.

The key to getting the most out of a radio show is concentration. The full breadth of knowledge and experience in our hobby can only be gleaned from seeing hundreds of hobbyists in a concentrated environment. Regular attendance at radio shows should be a standard part of everyone's participation in this hobby. This is where you recharge your batteries, and enjoy the benefits of the worldwide fraternity of radio enthusiasts and radio collectors!

Furthermore, radio clubs, the sponsors of the shows, need your support. Attending shows gives you the chance to support the very clubs that first brought us all together. They make the arrangements that let us organize and meet. The clubs publish newsletters and magazines providing valuable information for the collector. Every member makes a difference! The clubs need you. We have seen several once active and vibrant clubs simply fade away from lack of participation. What a shame. Remember, by attending shows, you are contributing to the clubs and helping them to pass our hobby down to future generations of collectors.

It's not too late for you to come out and support your radio club this summer. The sidebar describes three of the largest radio shows for 2009. All three shows offer a chance to meet fellow hobbyists and the opportunity to go home with exciting additions to your collection. So, get out this summer and attend a local flea market, regional Hamfest or a national radio collectors' show, and spend a great weekend celebrating the world of radio!

THREE UPCOMING RADIO SHOWS

MARC EXTRAVAGANZA — JULY 9-11, 2009

The Michigan Antique Radio Club's Extravaganza is held in Lansing, Michigan. It is one of the largest radio shows in the country. The show includes educational programs, an auction, a large equipment contest, the option of registering for seller spaces under a large tent, and an evening reception with entertainment. (See www.michiganantiqueradio.org)

ARCI RADIOFEST — JULY 30-AUG 1, 2009

The Antique Radio Club of Illinois' Radiofest in Willowbrook, Illinois, is one of the largest shows in the country. It draws approximately 1,200 people from 22 states and 5 countries. Annual events include solid educational programs, two auctions, a huge vibrant flea market, competitive equipment contest and a banquet with entertainment. This year the huge Wolff's Flea Market (the largest in Chicago), the world famous Kane County Flea Market and the Bolingbrook Amateur Radio Society (BARS) Hamfest all occur on the same weekend as Radiofest, offering a full week-end of radio activities and collecting opportunities. (See www.antique-radios.org)

AWA CONFERENCE — AUG 20-23, 2009

The Antique Wireless Association Conference in Rochester, New York, continues to have the best overall educational program of any radio show. No other radio show draws a worldwide crowd like AWA. A visit to the internationally recognized AWA Museum is a highlight of the show. Add in an auction, flea market, a book fair, a banquet, and an equipment contest which always features rare items. This year the AWA is introducing a whole new conference — online registration, a new weekend schedule, an expanded book fair and better overall logistics. (See www.antiquewireless.org)

NINE REASONS TO ATTEND A RADIO SHOW

- Nothing beats a face-to-face conversation! Personal contacts can be invaluable to building your collection.
- Shows let you see, touch and inquire. They provide a place where the beginning, or experienced, collector can get first-hand exposure to the hobby. Best of all, you can go home with your purchases!
- Prices at shows are often lower than on the Internet. We regularly "find" things at radio shows without paying top dollar.
- The bigger shows typically have high quality programs and exhibits.
- Shows offer a place to exchange ideas, tips, and tricks, and provide a place to learn about restoration techniques.
- Shows are still the best location to track down new and old parts. They are an excellent place to sell your duplicates without the hassle of chasing payments and boxing and shipping the merchandise.
- Regional shows still offer geographic variety. As new products were originally brought to market, they were sold at different times across different areas of the country. These patterns still reveal themselves in local flea markets and collector shows.
- Contrary to popular misconceptions, most collectors are not set up on the Internet with private websites. Shows provide everyone an opportunity to trade, as well as a place to meet, learn and share.
- Let's not forget travel! Many participants only see each other at the shows, taking the opportunity to visit and renew their interests. What better way to see the country, develop your collection, and have a little fun!

Radio Manufacturers of the 1920's – Volume One by Alan Douglas

This book, the first in a three-volume series, was reviewed by John Wolkonowicz in A.R.C.'s March 1988 issue.

We've all been waiting for this book! Alan Douglas' Radio Manufacturers of the 1920's was certainly worth the wait. I do not think I'm going too far out on a limb in saying that this will become the definitive book on American broadcast receivers of the 1920s within our life-times.

I have known Alan for 20 years now and know that this book has been in the back of his mind for at least that long. The author's excellent magazine articles, which began in the mid-1970s, have familiarized many of us with his factual and concise writing style. Alan greatly enjoyed writing those articles, and was constantly on the look-out for new source materials, magazines and books which he could use for more articles.

By the early 1980s, when this book was conceived in earnest, Alan had amassed what is one of the finest and most complete historical radio libraries in the country. This, coupled with his keen interest in the subject matter and his entertaining writing style, ensured the resulting book to be of lasting value.

The research that went into this book did not stop with the usual book and magazine literature search. In addition, Alan combed Patent Office Gazettes, Sunday Newspaper Radio Supplements from the 1920s, and original company records. He maintained correspondence with former radio company executives, factory workers, dealers and enthusiasts, and endeavored to interview them personally whenever possible. No stone was left unturned.

The result is a book which goes far beyond the normally dry historical text. This book will satisfy business historians seeking to learn about the beginnings of this important industry. It will satisfy new collectors looking to identify and learn more about their sets and the companies that made them, and it will be of particular interest to the serious collector looking for previously unpublished information.

Alan's initial goal was to cover every manufacturer and every radio set produced in the U.S. during the 1920s. That book would have taken a lifetime to write and would probably have filled

5,000 pages. To limit the project to a manageable size, Alan set some boundaries. To be included, a company generally had to have maintained national advertising of its products for a period of three years. This limited the scope of the book to about 70 of the largest manufacturers. So, if your favorite company is not included, this is the reason why.

The book is being issued in three volumes to spread out the workload for the author and publisher and to make the book manageable in size. Volumes 2 and 3 are well underway.

Volume 1 begins with a 20-page illustrated introduction to radio in the 1920s. Here, Alan sets the stage for the company histories that follow, and he provides general information on radio engineering and design trends as the 1920s progressed. The remaining 200 pages of the book are devoted to chapters on individual radio manufacturers and the sets they produced during the 1920s.

Each chapter contains one or more pages of corporate history followed by original advertisements and photographs in chronological order of every set that company advertised up to December 1929. Wherever possible, Alan used a recent photograph of an unrestored, or correctly restored, set. The photographs in this book are truly of professional quality. For those of you wishing to identify unusual sets in your collection, or for those wanting to learn more about the sets made by a particular favorite manufacturer, this book will be unbeatable.

To give you an idea of the size of the chapters, a typical small manufacturer, Air Way, has three pages, one-quarter page of text and 23 illustrations. A large chapter, such as the one on Atwater Kent, covers 24 pages, has four pages of text and 68 illustrations.

I guess the best way to sum up my review of this book is to say that if you could buy just one book on the antique radio hobby, this should be it! As over five years of research went into this book, the price asked is small indeed.

Volumes 1, 2 & 3 are available from A.R.C. for $29.95 each with free shipping. Subscriber cost is $26.95 each.
