Satellite Communications—Wave of the Future

Brief history and outlook of satellite communication activities in U.S. & rest of world, based primarily on information prepared by Comsat.

Comsat was chartered by an Act of Congress, the Communications Satellite Act of 1962. Although a creature of Congress with headquarters in Washington, D.C., Comsat is a domestic stockholder-owned corporation—not a government agency. It offers for lease to authorized customers reliable, high-quality satellite circuits capable of handling all types of communications—TV, multi-channel telephone, telegraph, high-speed data, facsimile, etc.

The world's first commercial satellite, Early Bird, was launched from Cape Kennedy April 6, 1965, and started commercial transatlantic service 3 months later. These events marked the first step toward establishment of a worldwide network of satellites to provide new channels of communication between the peoples of many nations.

New satellites more than twice as powerful as Early Bird have since gone into service and more are planned in 1967, expanding coverage in the Atlantic & Pacific to encompass nearly two-thirds of the world. The launch of a satellite—Lani Bird I—in this Intelsat II program in Oct. of 1966 proved only a partial success, permitting service between Japan, Hawaii and the U.S. mainland approximately 8 hours a day.

Lani Bird 2 was successfully launched in Jan. 1967 and placed in synchronous orbit 22,300 miles above the Pacific to provide 24-hour service. Additional Intelsat II series satellites will be orbited in 1967, expanding live coverage to Africa & South America.

The new Intelsat II series, Pacific & Atlantic satellites, operate at commercial microwave frequencies. The frequencies used are roughly between 6250 and 6400 megahertz for receiving, and in the range of 4050 to 5000 megahertz for transmitting spacecraft-to-ground. Bandwidth of the spacecraft is about 125 megahertz.

The next step in the expansion of global satellite communications will come in 1968 with the start of service via global spacecraft having capacities in excess of 1,200 voice channels each, more than 5 times the capacity of Early Bird.

On the ground, as in space, the commercial network is growing: New high-capacity sending and receiving terminals are being built, and old ones adapted to work with the new satellites. Twelve earth stations were operational in 1966. By the end of 1968, more than 30 earth stations are expected to be in operation, linking all continents & major population centers worldwide via satellite communications.

Early Bird & its successors have proven their versatility for all types of traffic, including two-way black & white and color TV. Some of the historic transatlantic TV transmission included live coverage of Pope John's visit to the UN in 1965, the Atlantic splashdowns of the Gemini astronauts, which were seen by millions of viewers in both Europe & North America.

Broadcasters scored a two-ocean first in Nov. 1966, when the newscasts of the debate over the admission of Red China to the United Nations were televised from New York to Europe via Early Bird, and to Japan via the Intelsat II series Pacific satellite.

A worldwide consortium—International Telecommunications Satellite Consortium (Intelsat)—controls global satellite traffic. By the end of 1966, 55 nations—including Comsat as the U.S. representative—were members of Intelsat.

Intelsat is the result of 2 international agreements, which were formulated in 1964 to implement the concept of establishing a commercial satellite system to be shared, or open to use by all nations. Under the agreements, each participating country or its communications representative shares in the financing & ownership of the satellites and certain related tracking & control facilities on the ground

—but not the individual ground stations. These are owned by the countries in which they are located. Comsat holds a majority interest and acts as manager on behalf of Intelsat.

These interim international agreements establishing Intelsat are effective until Dec. 1969. Here are the 55 members of Intelsat:

Algeria	Ireland	Portugal
Argentina	Israel	Saudi Arabia
Australia	Italy	Singapore
Austria	Japan	South Africa
Belgium	Jordan	Spain
Brazil	Kuwait	Sudan
Canada	Lebanon	Sweden
Ceylon	Liechtenstein	Switzerland
Chile	Libya	Syria
China	Malaysia	Thailand
Colombia	Mexico	Tunisia
Denmark	Monaco	United Arab Republic
Ethiopia	Morocco	United Kingdom
France	The Netherlands	United States
Germany	New Zealand	Vatican City
Greece	Nigeria	Venezuela
India	Norway	Yemen
Indonesia	Pakistan
Iraq	Philippines

As a domestic company, Comsat manages and operates 3 earth stations in the U.S.—Andover, Me.; Brewster Flat, Wash.; and Paumalu, Oahu, Hawaii. Applications are pending before the FCC to build additional stations in West Virginia, Central California and Puerto Rico. Stations abroad are owned & operated by participating Intelsat members. U.S. earth stations are 50% owned by Comsat, 50% by other common carriers.

The 12 operational stations, at the end of 1966: Andover, Me.; Brewster Flat, Wash.; Paumalu, Hawaii; Ibaraki, Japan; Carnarvon, Australia; Ascension Island, U.K.; Grand Canary Island, Spain; Goonhilly Downs, England; Raisting, West Germany; Pleumeur-Bodou, France; Fucino, Italy; Mill Village, Nova Scotia, Canada.

Broadcasters expect to use the new medium of satellite communications more extensively as the system expands and as it becomes more economically attractive. The following are typical one-way TV charges now on file with the FCC by Comsat for transmission via satellites between designated points (black & white):

Pacific Area

Between Brewster Flat & Paumalu, a full through circuit, $1,500 for the first 10 min., $42 for each additional minute.

Between Brewster Flat & Japan, one-half circuit, $1,200 for the first 10 min., $36 for each additional minute.

Between Paumalu & Japan, one-half circuit, $1,100 for the first 10 min., $30 for each additional minute.

Color transmissions will be 125% of the black & white rates. The proposed Comsat rates are charges to carriers, and are not the charges carriers will make to the users of the service.

Atlantic Area

Between a U.S. earth station & the satellite, one-half circuit, $1,100 for the first 10 min., $30 for each additional minute.

Charges for the remaining one-half circuit, between the satellite & European or overseas earth station, are made by the foreign country involved. As is the case in the Pacific, color transmissions are 125% of the black & white rates.

Satellite Communications

Early Bird & Lani Bird 2 are in synchronous orbits 22,300 miles above the equator, traveling at a speed which keeps pace with the earth's rotation. Thus, synchronous satellites appear to remain stationary in space, much as a notch on the rim of a spinning wheel remains opposite a spot on the wheel's hub. The characteristic of all synchronous satellites is that they can provide communications coverage 24 hours a day from their station above the equator.

Startling advances in rocketry, in electronics and other technologies made possible the development and success of these commercial satellites. So, too, did the knowledge gained from the successful launchings of 12 experimental communications satellites which preceded the first commercial spacecraft, Early Bird, into space.

Early Bird's predecessors include: SCORE, the first U.S. communications satellite, launched by NASA in Dec. 1958; Telstar I & II, the path-breaking AT&T satellites which transmitted first live TV pictures between Europe & America; Relay I & II—built by RCA—which provided links for communication experiments by NASA between the U.S., South America, Europe & Japan; Syncom II & III, synchronous satellites, built by Hughes Aircraft Co. & launched by NASA, which proved the feasibility of Early Bird.

A major conflict now is underway in U.S. over what entity is to own & control a domestic satellite system to provide network signals to TV stations. Involved are Congress, FCC, Comsat, Ford Foundation (which wants to divert satellite profits to support live, ETV network), networks, among others. Related dispute centers around ownership of necessary ground stations.

Gear up now for C.A.R.S.

with Jerrold 440 solid-state C.A.R.S. microwave

With the new Community Antenna Relay Service (C.A.R.S.), CATV operators can relay distant programs to the head-end on their own microwave system.

Here is the first multi-channel solid-state microwave system designed specifically for use in the C.A.R.S. band (12.7-12.95 GHz). Using the same proven solid-state circuitry as the 6-8 GHz common-carrier 440, the new Jerrold CARS 440 provides sharp, true color and black-and-white pictures over even the longest hops. Transmitters and receivers are designed for stacking to a single antenna without auxiliary equipment. With CARS 440 you're assured maximum stability, high output, minimum maintenance—at a surprisingly low price.

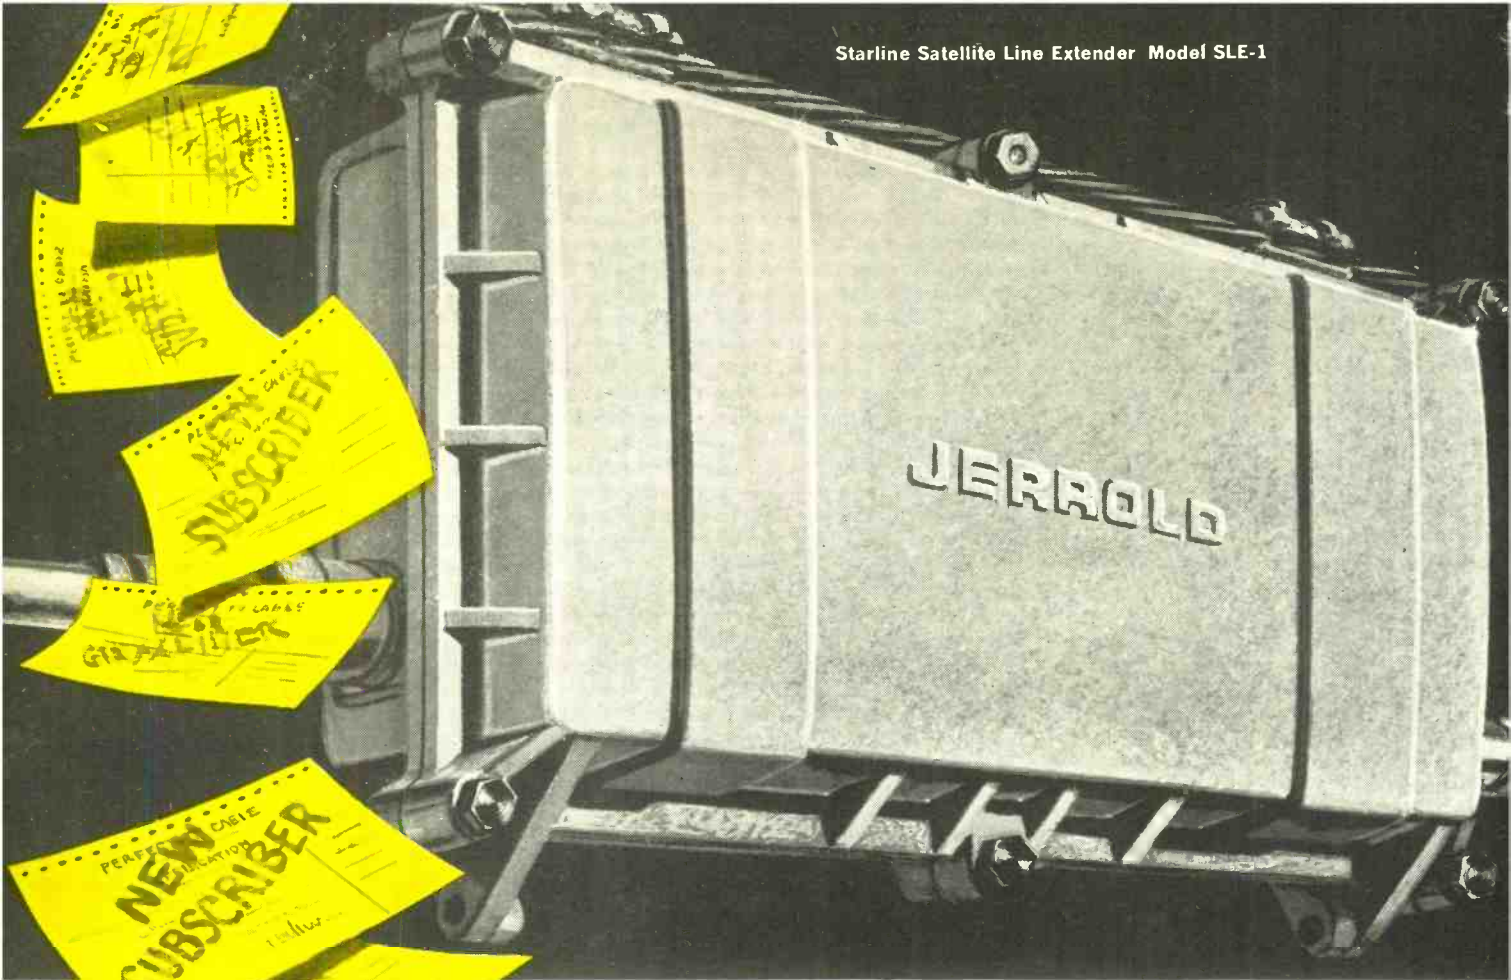

It's not too early to plan your CARS system. Start by talking with Jerrold, the people who know CATV best. Write today for complete information.

440 features (12 GHz)

1-watt (min.) transmitter output • 12 MHz base-band, flat within ± 0.25 db • Frequency stability $\pm 0.005\%$ • Individually self-contained power supplies • Modular construction throughout • Solid-state receiver and local oscillator • Vapor-stabilized transmitter klystron • Compact—only 10½ inches high innovation

Innovation is one of the qualities which distinguishes one company from another.

In media and marketing research . . . as in any endeavor . . . the constant search for a better way is the spirit of innovation. ARB imagination, guided by sound professional knowledge, has created many improvements in basic research technique and many new research services that provide important data for today's advertising community.

Accompanied by the excitement and controversy which new ideas bring, the results of many ARB innovations are evident. But the process of innovation should not end with this. That's why, at ARB, refinement, thought and creativity are a necessary and continuing part of our operation.

If you were in our shoes, you'd be a CATV expert, too.

Our balance sheet never shows how much we spend on shoe leather. But it does reflect the profitability of planning in the field as well as on the board. When there's a CATV problem to be solved, TeleSystems knows its boots are made for walking. That's why we go right to the source with on-spot research, engineering and sales guidance. TeleSystems walks away from pat formulas to build, plan or operate a cable system. We learn local conditions. We investigate local characteristics first-hand. That's why, in CATV, nobody can fill our shoes. But you can hire them. Call us if you're thinking CATV.

It doesn't matter if you're over the mountain, down in the valley or up the creek...

Plastoid aluminum sheath co-ax delivers in the most rugged climate or terrain!

You think you've got problems with rain, snow, water, high humidity. Or with big distances from your head-end to your drops. You should hear about the situations that CATV operators have already beat by specifying Plastoid aluminum sheaths.

We've helped system-builders lick sea-shore installations where salt-water corrosion plus high humidity have wrecked previous systems. We've watched our co-ax function smoothly year after year under water, up in the snows of windy mountain peaks—in the most rugged conditions you can imagine.

There are just two reasons: (1) We build in extra strength and dependability. (2) We test, test, test to be sure every foot, every inch of our cable meets our high standards.

So—even if you're up a steamy, tropical creek and fearful of your system's lasting powers, phone Plastoid. Question us about the "specs" of our .750-inch, .500- and .412-inch aluminum sheaths. They come with and without poly jackets. And they are all undoubtedly tops. If you question us further, we'll put you in touch with one of our hundreds of satisfied users—probably one in your own vicinity, maybe one with tougher problems than you face. Talk to him. Satisfy yourself that we deliver as promised. Then call us back to order and watch us deliver for you.

...or how to make your system a box-office hit

Cable: Available in seamless lengths up to ½ mile

Timatch[®] perfect match connectors

Putting a good show on the home screens of your subscribers is one part of CATV show business. Having the equipment to back up your programming—with clear, dependable pictures that don't ghost, fade or give up altogether—is another.

Times 30db CATV cable—and instantly-installed matching connectors—delivers award-winning performance to your subscribers' homes year after year. It's the surest way to keep them happy and put profits in your system's picture.

Times cable is trouble-free because of the way it's made:

in continuous seamless lengths up to ½ mile. This means fewer splices, fewer trouble points, less maintenance . . . and less labor cost. And because it's seamless, it's water and vaporproof . . . won't stop the signal short of target. All in all, you get improved electrical performance from Times cable and matching Timatch connectors. Long after so-called economy cable has been replaced, Times cable will still be a top performer, even while you're upgrading your system.

To take advantage of this direct way to assure your system's pay-out, contact Times for information on its CATV cable.

PLANNING

One of the reasons for our leadership in audience measurement is that we anticipate the needs of the television industry and make plans to meet them.

ARB planning has led to the development and use of the Television viewing Diary, Instantaneous Television Audience Measurement (ARBITRON), Simultaneous All-Market Measurement, Spot Activity Reports, the Personal Diary Method for Radio Measurement, Product Usage Data in survey reports, Quality Control Procedures in samples to account for CATV and UHF, the Instant Cume, and many other significant contributions to broadcast audience research.

Planning through research . . . responding to the medium we serve with ever-improved, more refined techniques . . . is the force behind our leadership. At ARB our planning pays off . . . for you.

With Times' CATV cable
send him up once ...

then forget it.

Timatch[®] perfect match connectors

This trip won't be necessary again for at least five years when the cable you install is Times JT1000 seamless aluminum tube sheath coaxial cable. You can forget about the cable later if you remember this now: Times JT1000 lasts longer up on the poles — without costly repairs or continuing maintenance. Instead of degrading from the day you install it, your cable will have the same high-

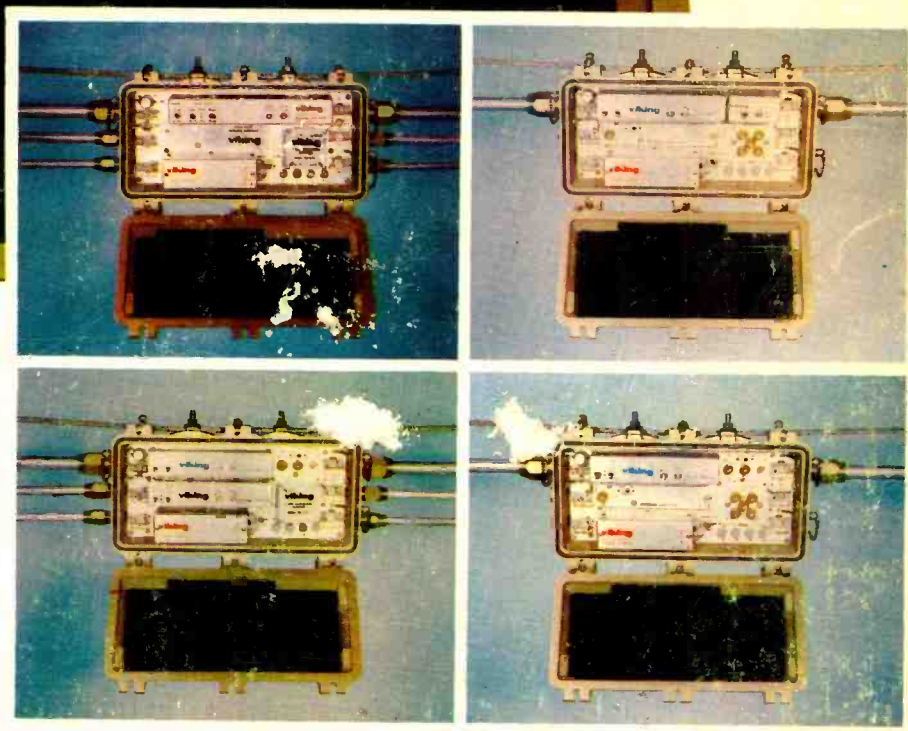

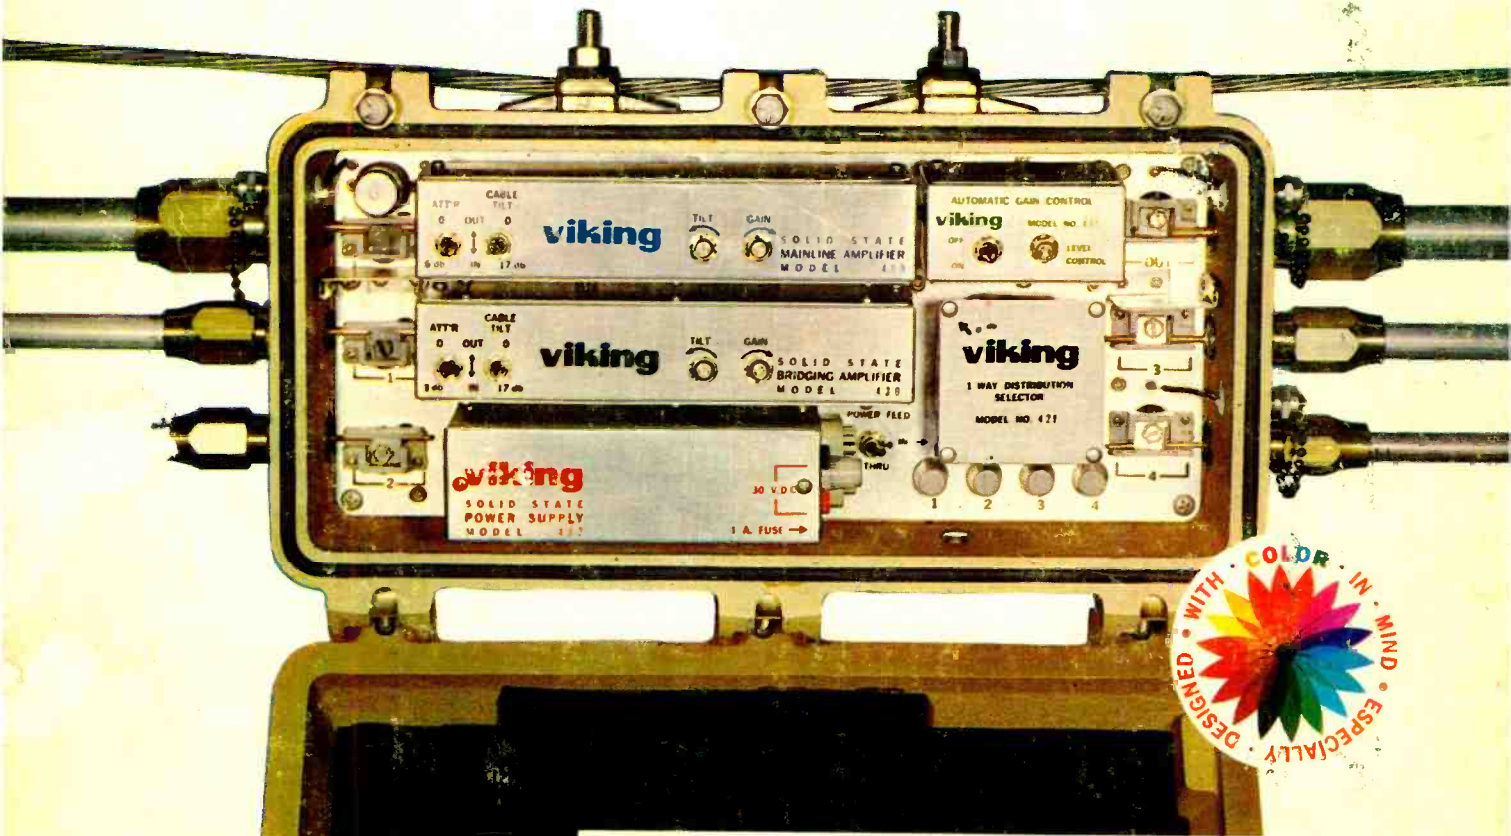

Cable: Available in seamless lengths up to 1/2 mile performance quality five years or more from now. Because it's seamless, it's water and vapor proof. Self-sealing when tapped. Gives a 30db return loss guarantee, and radiation protection when high power level amplifiers are used. So before you install a so-called "economy" cable that will send your men back up the poles for costly replacement, look into Times JT1000 cable. The payout makes the big difference.
