After 36 years...

REDISCOVER THE ALL-NEW WIS RADIO

WIS Radio, for 36 years, has been the symbol of Quality Broadcast Service to South Carolinians and advertisers alike. Today, WIS Radio... constantly alert to the many new scientific and electronic advancements being made in the broadcasting industry... is once again on the move!

This "montage" by Jak Smysl depicts the WIS Radio staff moving into new and enlarged offices and studios, located on a 58-acre site northwest of Columbia off Highway 1-26 and Hush River Road. This newly designed, multi-purpose facility begins with three 448 feet high steel towers, designed for a clearer, sharper, and far-reaching broadcast signal. Four fully-equipped studios (two on-air and two production and recording), are electronically designed with the latest completely transistorized audio and control equipment. Many other technical advancements in the industry have been incorporated in the design and operation of the new WIS Radio.

This new move has been accomplished in order to keep pace with WIS Radio's constant goal... providing a total AM broadcast service to South Carolina.

KRLD delivers MORE

... LISTENERS than any single station in the Southwest

According to the Nielsen Coverage Survey '61, KRLD Radio is the NUMBER ONE station in the Southwest. KRLD Radio also delivers the biggest audience of any station or frequency in the Dallas-Fort Worth metropolitan area. For details, see your Advertising Time Sales representative.

Clyde W. Rembert, President

Any audience measurement data used herein are estimates only, subject to errors and limitations inherent in indicated sources due to sample size and selection, and other methodological procedures. These estimates may or may not be accurate measures of the true audience.

All figures shown are gross before deduction of any discounts or agency commission. This makes them comparable to data for other media including network radio, spot TV and network TV.

Brand expenditures are, in most cases, based on breakouts as reported. In the few instances where exact figures were not available due to product scheduling on a rotating basis, RAB has projected estimates of brand expenditures.

Educational and religious broadcasters are not included in this spot radio listing. The five leaders in this category are: Goodnews Broadcasting Assn., $1,600,000; The World Tomorrow, $1,057,000; Radio Bible Class, $750,000; Billy Graham Evangelistic Assn., $412,000; Gospel Broadcasting Assn., $400,000.

SAF-T-CLIMB SAVES A LIFE!

Saf-T-Climb — the only 100% positive safe climbing device — prevents falls from any vertical structure, above or below ground.

And, Saf-T-Climb is simplest to install, simplest to use — even on convex and concave structures. Galvanized, aluminum or stainless Saf-T-Notch Rail attaches rigidly to structure.

Worker wears belt snapped to manganese bronze Saf-T-Lok Sleeve with patented locking pawl that limits falls to 6-inch maximum. Widely approved; proven in use for over 12 years.

Audimax. A solid state automatic level control guaranteed to out-perform ordinary compressors, limiters, or AGCs. It will increase effective program power.

Model 600 Wide Range Program Monitor. The first instrument which allows the measurement of noise, crosstalk and low level audio material on a single 60 dB-wide scale. Where the standard Volume Indicator measures only the top 23 dB of signal level logarithmically, this new Program Monitor displays information from +3 to -57 dB on a single linear, decibel scale, thus permitting accurate reading of low level audio material as well as line noise during program pauses.

Model 600 Wide Range Program Monitor. The first instrument which allows the measurement of noise, crosstalk and low level

Volumax. A solid state automatic peak controller that overcomes the inherent limitations of peak limiters. Used with Audimax, truly astonishing increases in effective coverage can be achieved.
FM Volumax. A totally new concept in automatic peak control that solves FM overmodulation problems. It is guaranteed to prevent FM overmodulation and SCA crosstalk without distortion.

Model 192 Digital Display Control. Allows rapid control of up to 192 of the Model DDU-1A display units shown below. Each Model 192 selects up to 12 groups of 16 DDU-1A units. Contains feedback "truth" circuits and allows complete TV display system flexibility.

Model DDU-1A Electro-mechanical indicator units. The perfect way to display election results, ball scores, stock reports, etc. White characters are displayed on a flat black plane for optimum readability. Designed specifically for TV use.

What do you get by going Eastman all the way?

You get a complete system of color motion picture products. Each element—shooting stock, intermediate, print film and chemistry—is designed to do a specific job. All are designed to work together, beautifully. You get more than just product. You get the personal service of our field engineers, who are backed by the engineers and scientists in our laboratories. When you rely on Eastman, you get a total concern for the unqualified success of your entire production.

Look carefully at every issue of Time,
Life,
Newsweek, and
U.S. News & World Report.
For a year.

Count the microphones
you see in every picture.

You'll find more E-V microphones than all other U.S. brands combined.

You'll find more E-V microphones than all foreign brands combined.

You'll find E-V microphones shown 3.77 times more often than any other brand.

When the chips are down, professional sound engineers for radio, TV, motion pictures, and critical sound reinforcement choose Electro-Voice.

What's new about that?

Nothing.

It's been going on for years!

Revere-Mincom conquers the Color Dropout Problem

When color VTR is subjected to ordinary dropout compensation techniques, some improvement may result. Often, however, these primitive techniques generate effects more distracting than the dropout itself. Two examples: 1. Switching transients due to FM substitution. 2. Color phase inversion caused by one-line information delay.

Revere-Mincom's Color Dropout Compensator solves the problem of keeping the Danube blue, Hornets green, and signals in the pink. It's compatible with all time correction units, Hi-Band, Low Band, Color and Monochrome.

For more information about color dropouts and Revere-Mincom's Color DOC, write for this booklet:

You have only one opportunity to plug in an RCA solid-state rectifier

RCA solid-state rectifiers are made to last!
Plug in one RCA rectifier unit as a direct replacement for one of your mercury vapor or gas rectifiers and it could very well last the lifetime of your equipment.

RCA plug-in rectifier units CR273/8008, CR274/872A, and CR275/866A/3B28 are available only through your RCA Industrial Distributor. The three types he stocks, and can deliver off-the-shelf to you, are of the same high quality as those which have racked up 13,338 trouble-free hours in the visual driver of the transmitter at WBRE-TV Wilkes Barre, Pennsylvania. In fact, the high efficiency and performance of the units at WBRE-TV have remained the same as they were on the first day of installation.
Realistically, you have everything to gain when you replace with RCA plug-in rectifiers. You get all of the advantages of RCA solid-state: ruggedness, high-reliability, plus economy. Maintenance and replacement costs are practically non-existent. And costly loss of revenue in off-the-air time, because of rectifier failure, becomes a thing of the past.
The time to go to RCA solid-state rectifiers is now—and the price is right! Ask your RCA Industrial Distributor for his latest price and off-the-shelf delivery of these units. Call him.

ROHN TOWERS "STAND UP" to Hurricane Betsy and Hilda

A series of ROHN micro-wave towers, used on Shell Oil Company offshore platforms near the Louisiana coast, took on the full fury of "Hurricane Hilda and Betsy" and withstood the test!

Designed for 50 pound windload per square foot, these towers stood up to winds known to have been well in excess of this.

For towers proved in design, engineering and construction, specify ROHN. Complete tower, lighting kit, microwave reflector, and tower accessory catalogs and specifications available on request. Representatives worldwide.

First for UHF

Another first for Stainless—an all UHF custom tower family perched 1,000 feet high above Detroit—
WKBD-TV and WTVS, with WJMY soon to come.
Kaiser Broadcasting stations chose this tower through their confidence in Stainless' experience
(20 years in tower design and fabrication).
Completion performance of only 70 days from sign-up to on-air won other Kaiser installations for Stainless.

before you buy any color processor, ask yourself these

6 questions:

How long does it take to warm up?

Normally it takes most processors 3 to 4 hours to get from ambient 70° to the required 100-110°. With a Treise Color Processor, warm-up takes only 20-45 minutes. (Think how much valuable time you save!)

Once on temperature, does it stay on temperature?

Treise Processors feature a unique "proportional control" system that maintains a close watch over the temperature and provides just the right amount of heat to maintain it at all times. There is no "stop 'n go," no wide fluctuations of temperature. Thus a Treise Processor is more economical to run than any other processor.

Does it provide consistent quality?

No other processor can assure you such unvaryingly consistent quality and performance — end to end, side to side, roll to roll, day to day! This is the kind of performance you should demand from a processor . . . and can take for granted when you buy from Treise.

Is it flexible enough to fully utilize the new films?

Treise Processors provide for 50% additional first-developer time to permit full utilization of the new EF Ektachrome film. (This feature is important when you consider that news work demands wide flexibility in film speeds to achieve optimum results under all shooting conditions.) To our knowledge, only Treise offers such outstanding flexibility!

Does it "cut corners" to feature a "cut-rate" price?

Treise Processors meet or exceed all film manufacturers' specifications. All chemical solutions are pump recirculated and filtered. All moving parts in the drive system run on ball bearings. All components are the finest that money can buy. Materials and construction make absolutely no compromise with quality!

How easy is it to maintain?

When it comes to maintaining a Treise Processor, there's frankly very little of it. When necessary, however, you'll find that it has been designed with service in mind. For example, the film racks are removable without the use of tools and without disturbing thread-up. This unique feature permits spot inspection of the film transport system and results in minimum "down-time." All pumps, filters, etc., can be easily inspected and replaced in a few minutes, instead of the usual 2 to 3 hours delay!

TREISE MT-20

If your requirements call for exceptionally high volume in a short period of time (—and if you want to surpass any other station), we recommend the Treise MT-20 Color Processor. This model accommodates 16mm color reversal film at rates up to 60 fpm and is the finest TV color processor that money can buy!

TREISE MTV-30

If your needs are normal and you're on a fairly tight budget, we suggest the Treise MTV-30 Color Processor. This model accommodates 16mm color reversal film at rates up to 30 fpm — the most practicable speed for television needs.

What Makes ROHN CATV Towers Different?

Here Are Just A Few Reasons
Why So Many CATV Owners Are Specifying ROHN Towers:

EXPERIENCE — ROHN engineers have more experience and are among the pioneers in tower construction and design.

DESIGN — ROHN towers are carefully and fully engineered to DO MORE THAN the job for which they are intended. They're proved by thousands of installations for every conceivable type job.

COMPLETENESS — The line is complete for every need. All accessories, lighting, and microwave reflectors are available from ONE reliable source. Entire job can be "turn-key" production if desired.

For COLOR that stays ...
all the way to the transmitter...

...new Jerrold 440 solid-state microwave

Funny things can happen to color on the way to the transmitter. That's why, for your STL, you need microwave with outstanding differential phase and gain specifications to maintain studio-fidelity of picture and sound all the way.

New Jerrold 440 Solid-State Microwave offers you live-color performance: Differential phase  $\pm 0.25$  degree; differential gain  $\pm 0.25$  db; ultra-high stability ( $\pm 0.005\%$ ); conservatively rated 1-watt output klystron; solid-state reliability, compactness, and freedom from maintenance. In a word, the 440 Series by Jerrold is the finest microwave available at any price—and you'll be pleasantly surprised when you check the price against specs.

If the 440 is as good as we say for color transmission, you know it has to be great for black-and-white. Make us prove it—write for complete information.

440 features

- 1-watt (min.) transmitter output
- Vapor-stabilized transmitter klystron
- Frequency stability  $\pm 0.005\%$
- Solid-state receiver and local oscillator
- 12 MHz baseband, flat within  $\pm 0.25$  db
- Individually self-contained power supplies
- Modular construction throughout
- Compact—only 10½ inches high.

BROADCAST PRIMER Evolution of Broadcasting

By George Gillingham
Former Chief, Office of Reports and Information, FCC

Radio communications was born of many minds and developments. In the 1860's, Maxwell predicted the existence of radio waves. Hertz later demonstrated that rapid variations of electric current can be projected into space in the form of waves similar to those of light and heat. In 1895, Marconi transmitted radio signals for a short distance and, at the turn of the century, conducted successful transatlantic tests.

The first practical application of radio was for ship-to-ship and ship-to-shore telegraphic communication. Marine disasters early demonstrated the speed and effectiveness of radiotelegraphy for safeguarding life and property at sea.

This new communication medium was first known as "wireless". American use of the term "radio" is traced to about 1912 when the Navy, feeling that "wireless" was too inclusive, adopted the word "radiotelegraph". Though the British still cling to the older term, "radio" continues to be the American designation except in referring to television. The word "broadcast" stems from early U. S. naval reference to "broadcast" of orders to the fleet.

The first voice broadcast is a subject for debate. Claims to that distinction range from "Hello, Rainey", said to have been sent by Stubblefield to a partner in a demonstration near Murray, Ky., in 1892, to an impromptu program from Brant Rock, Mass., by Fessenden in 1906, which was picked up by nearby ships.

There were other early experimental audio transmissions—such as De Forest putting the singer Caruso on the air in 1910 and transatlantic voice tests by the Navy station at Arlington, Va., in 1915—but it was not until after World War I that regular broadcasting began. The "first" broadcasting station is likewise a matter of conflicting claims. This is due largely to the fact that some pioneer AM broadcast stations developed from experimental operations. Although KDKA Pittsburgh, did not receive a regular broadcasting license until November 7, 1921, it furnished programs experimentally prior to that date. Records of the Department of Commerce, which then supervised radio, indicate that the first station issued a regular broadcasting license was WJZ Springfield, Mass., on September 15, 1921.

There was experimental network operation over telephone lines as early as 1922. In that year WJZ now New York, and WGY Schenectady, broadcast the World Series. Early in 1923 WEAJ New York, and WNAC Boston, picked up a football game from Chicago. Later that same year WEAJ and WGY were connected with KDKA Pittsburgh, and KYW Chicago, to carry talks made at a dinner in New York. President Coolidge's message to Congress was broadcast by six stations in 1923. In 1926 the National Broadcasting Co. started the first regular network with 24 stations. Its first coast-to-coast hookup, in 1927, broadcast a football game. In the latter year, the Columbia Broadcasting System was organized. The first round-the-world broadcast was made from Schenectady in 1930.

FM (frequency modulation) and TV (television) broadcast emerged from their experimental stage just before U. S. entry into World War II. Wartime restrictions retarded normal expansion of radio facilities but that emergency produced new techniques and apparatus which, with subsequent developments, have invaluable present-day application. International TV and radio program relay is now furthered by communication satellites.

Regulation of Broadcasting

There was a Wireless Ship Act of 1910 which applied to use of radio by ships, but the Radio Act of 1912 was the first domestic law for the control of radio in general. It made the then secretary of commerce and labor responsible for licensing radio stations and operators.

Early broadcasting was experimental and, therefore, noncommercial. In 1919 broadcasters were enabled to operate as "limited commercial stations". In 1922 the "wavelength" of 360 meters (approximately 330 kilocycles) was assigned for the transmission of "important news items, entertainment, lectures, sermons, and similar matter".

Recommendations of the first National Radio Conference in 1922 resulted in further regulations by the secretary of commerce. A new type of AM broadcast station came into being, with minimum power of 500 watts and maximum of 1000 (1 kilowatt). Two frequencies (750 and 833 kilocycles) were assigned for program transmission.

So rapid was the development of aural broadcasting that, upon recommendation of subsequent National Radio Conferences (1923 and 1924), the Department of Commerce allocated 550 to 1500 kilocycles for standard broadcast (AM being the only regular broadcast at that time), and authorized operating power up to 5000 watts (5 kilowatts).

Increase in the number of AM stations caused so much interference that, in 1925, a fourth National Radio Conference asked for a limitation on broadcast time and power. The secretary of commerce was unable to deal with the situation because court decisions held that the Radio Act of 1912 did not give him this authority. As a result, many broadcasters jumped their frequencies and increased their power and operating time at will, regardless of the effect on other stations. This caused bedlam on the air.

In 1926 President Coolidge urged Congress to remedy matters. The result was the Dill-White Radio Act of 1927.

Federal Radio Commission

The Radio Act of 1927 created a five-member Federal Radio Commission with certain regulatory powers over radio, including the issuance of station licenses, the allocation of frequency bands to various services, assignment of specified frequencies to individual stations and control of station power. The same act also delegated to the secretary of commerce authority to inspect radio stations, to examine and license radio operators and to assign radio call signals.

Much of the early efforts of the Federal Radio Commission were required to straighten out the confusion in the broadcast band. It was impossible to care for the 732 broadcast stations as then operating. New rules and regulations caused about 150 of them to surrender their licenses.

Communications Act of 1934

At the request of President Roosevelt, the secretary of commerce in 1933 appointed an interdepartmental committee to study the overall interstate and international electrical communications situation. The committee reported that "the communications service, as far as congressional action is involved, should be regulated by a single body". Accordingly, it recommended the establishment of a new agency which would regulate all interstate and foreign communication by wire and radio, including telegraph, telephone and broadcast. The resultant Communications Act of 1934 created the present Federal Communications Commission for this unified regulation.

Federal Communications Commission

The Federal Communications Commission, an independent federal agency composed of seven commissioners appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, began operating on July 11, 1934. Its organization and functions are set forth in a separate fact sheet titled "An ABC of the FCC", which is available from the commission on request.

FCC Broadcast Regulation

One of the FCC's major activities is the general regulation of broadcasting—now visual as well as aural. This regulation has two phases.

The first phase deals with the allocation of spectrum space to the different types of broadcast services in accordance with commission policies and rules to carry out the intent of international agreements, the Communications Act and other domestic laws affecting broadcasting.

The second phase more directly concerns individual stations. It embraces consideration of applications to build and

CASCADE DELIVERS PERFORMANCE

You expect performance when you buy CATV amplifiers, and performance is what you get with Cascade.

Take the Cascade Electronics CETA-1/25 trunk line amplifier for example: it delivers a maximum operational gain of 55 dbmv, a maximum gain of 28 db, and a recommended operational gain of 25 db. Minimum input return loss is 18 db, with output return loss of 15 db. Noise figure? An excellent figure of 8 db low band, 10 db high band, when aligned for full cable equalization.

Add to all these performance qualifications a tilt compensated, continuous 8 db gain control range at Ch. 13, and a tilt control range of 5 db at Ch. 2.

Each Cascade Trunk Amplifier has a built in power inserter and temperature level gain control. Quickly inserted modular circuit boards make service a quick and simple matter, if required.

Each Cascade Amplifier is backed by a written TWO YEAR Warranty covering components and workmanship. One more reason for insisting on Cascade performance.

BROADCAST PRIMER

operate; the assignment of specific frequencies, power, operating time and call letters; the periodic inspection of equipment and the engineering aspects of operation; passing upon transfers and assignments of facilities; also changes in existing authorizations; modifying construction permits and renewing licenses; reviewing the general service of each particular station to determine whether it has been operating in the public interest; licensing operators of transmitters, and otherwise discharging domestic regulatory responsibilities.

Broadcast stations are licensed to serve the public interest, convenience and necessity. Because radio channels are limited and are a part of the public domain, it is important that they be entrusted to licensees who have a high sense of public responsibility. The normal broadcast license period is three years.

The Communications Act sets up certain basic requirements which must be met by broadcast applicants. In general, applicants must be legally, technically and financially qualified, and show that their proposed operation will be in the public interest. The broadcast license privilege is limited by law to citizens of the United States. It is denied to corporations wherein any officer or director is an alien or of which more than one-fifth of the capital stock is controlled by foreign interests.

Penalties for broadcast station violations, depending upon their degree of seriousness, range from reprimands, fines up to $10,000, and short-term (probationary) licenses, to denials of license renewals or revocation of licenses. Cease and desist orders can also be issued.

In 1965 the commission provided for public inspection of certain records of broadcast stations in the communities they serve, mainly duplicate copies of their records in the public files at the commission's Washington offices.

Programs.—Under the Communications Act, it is the responsibility of each broadcast station licensee to arrange his program structure so that his operations will be in the public interest. The commission does not prescribe any percentages of time which should be devoted to particular subjects, such as news, education, religion, music, public issues, etc. That is something which can vary with the locality and, accordingly, is at the discretion of the individual station licensee. However, the commission does periodically review the overall performance of a station—engineering and otherwise—usually when it applies for renewal of its license, to determine whether it has lived up to its obligations and the promises it made in obtaining permission to use the public airwaves.

Broadcast obligations.—In 1960 the commission issued a report and statement of policy in connection with its programing inquiry. As to the obligations of a station licensee, it said:

"In the fulfillment of his obligation the broadcaster should consider the tastes, needs and desires of the public he is licensed to serve in developing his programing and should exercise conscientious efforts not only to ascertain them but also to carry them out as well as he reasonably can. He should reasonably attempt to meet all such needs and interests on an equitable basis. Particular areas of interest and types of appropriate service may, of course, differ from community to community, and from time to time. However, the commission does expect its broadcast licensees to take the necessary steps to inform themselves of the real needs and interests of the areas they serve and to provide programing which in fact constitutes a diligent effort, in good faith, to provide for those needs and interests.

"The major elements usually necessary to meet the public interest, needs and desires of the community in which the station is located as developed by the industry, and recognized by the commission, have included: (1) Opportunity for local self-expression, (2) the development and use of local talent, (3) programs for children, (4) religious programs, (5) educational programs, (6) public affairs programs, (7) editorialization by licensees, (8) political broadcasts, (9) agricultural programs, (10) news programs, (11) weather and market reports, (12) sports programs, (13) service to minority groups, (14) entertainment programing.

"The elements set out above are neither all-embracing nor constant. We re-emphasize that they do not serve and have never been intended as a rigid mold or fixed formula for station operation. The ascertainment of the needed elements of the broadcast matter to be provided by a particular licensee for the audience he is obligated to serve remains primarily the function of the licensee. His honest and prudent judgments will be accorded great weight by the commission. Indeed, any other course would tend to substitute the judgment of the commission for that of the licensee."

Censorship and free speech.—The Communications Act states: "Nothing in this act shall be understood or construed to give the commission the power of censorship over the radio communications or signals transmitted by any radio station, and no regulation or condition shall be promulgated or fixed by the commission which shall interfere with the right of free speech by means of radio communication" (Sect. 326). The commission has held that freedom of speech on the air must be broad enough to give equal opportunity for the presentation of both sides of public issues. This is known as the commission's "fairness doctrine", which stems from an editorializing policy announced in 1949 and supported by a 1959 amendment to the Communications Act which obligates broadcasters "to afford reasonable opportunity for the discussion of conflicting views of public importance".

Advertising.—The commission does not pass upon individual broadcast commercials. However, it does consider whether over-commercialization contrary to the public interest may be involved in considering applications for new stations, renewals and transfers. Also, under a cooperative arrangement with the Federal Trade Commission, which has jurisdiction over false and misleading advertising on the air, the commission notifies stations of broadcast advertising cited by the FTC so that these stations may take any necessary action consistent with their obligation to operate in the public interest. In 1965 the commission adopted a policy which expects broadcast stations and producers of their advertising to cooperate in controlling the volume (loudness) of commercials.

Political broadcasts.—The Communications Act (Sect. 315) expressly provides: "If any licensee shall permit any person who is a legally qualified candidate for any public office to use a broadcasting station, he shall afford equal opportunities to all other such candidates for that office in the use of such broadcasting station; provided, that such licensee shall have no power of censorship over the material broadcast under the provisions of this section. No obligation is hereby imposed upon any licensee to allow the use of its station by any such candidate. The charges made for the use of any broadcasting station for any of the purposes set forth in this section shall not exceed the charges made for comparable use of such station for other purposes". In 1959 the act was amended to exempt from the equal-time requirement appearances by candidates on "bona-fide" newscasts, news interviews and other news coverage.

"Payola" and "fixed quiz" show revelations resulted in the Communications Act being amended in 1960 to make it illegal to "plug" records and other commercial services over the air without identifying those instances in which money or other consideration is received for so doing. Also penalties are provided for those who broadcast deceptive contests purporting to be based upon knowledge, skill or chance.

Lotteries, obscenity and fraud.—The United States Criminal Code prohibits broadcast of information concerning "any lottery, gift enterprise, or similar scheme", also utterance of obscene, indecent or profane language, and fraud by wire, radio or television. A 1954 Supreme Court decision on a particular give-away program did not hold it to be a lottery.

Time charges and station management.—The Communications Act declares that broadcasting is not a common carrier operation; consequently a broadcast station is not required to sell or to give time to all who seek to go on the air. Because programing is primarily the responsibility of broadcast station licensees, the commission does not ordinarily monitor or pass upon individual programs, or require the filing of scripts. However, broadcast stations are required to keep a program log and a technical log, and a record of all requests for political broadcast time. The commission does not maintain surveillance of the day-by-day internal management of broadcast stations, or regulate their time charges, profits, artists' salaries or employee relations. It licenses only the stations and their transmitter operators; not announcers, disk jockeys or other personnel.

Radio and TV "codes" are issued by the National Association of Broadcasters for the guidance and voluntary compliance of its member stations. They concern programing and advertising practices.

Networks.—The commission does not license networks as such, only individual stations. However, its licensees are subject to the chain broadcasting regulations adopted by the commission in 1941 to further competition in broadcasting. These rules have been supplemented by regulations stemming from its special study of TV network broadcasting initiated in 1955. The commission has endorsed proposed legislation which would enable it to regulate networks directly to a degree short of licensing.

Monopoly.—There is commission prohibition against the same interest or group from operating more than one network, or more than one AM, FM or TV station in the same locality, or more than seven AM, seven FM or seven TV commercial stations throughout the country as a whole. Not more than five of these TV stations may be in the VHF band. In 1965 the commission adopted an interim policy of limiting common ownership to not more than two VHF stations or more than three TV stations collectively in the top 50 markets.

Receivers.—The commission does not license sets that are used for reception only. However, it does impose limitations on their radiation which may interfere with radio or TV service. The advent of wireless prompted the use of receiving sets by amateurs and others interested in listening-in on Morse code radiotelegraph transmission. Inexpensive crystal detectors boomed the production of home-made and manufactured receivers. The advent of broadcasting aroused public interest in sets (at first battery operated) to receive regular programs. Receiving sets operated by house current came on the market about 1928. A 1948 development called the "transistor" replaced tubes in sets. (See "TV Broadcast" for all-channel reception requirement.)

Call letters.—International agreement provides for the national identification of a radio station by the first letter or first two letters of its assigned call signal, and for this purpose apportions the alphabet among nations. United States broadcast stations use call letters beginning with K or W. Generally speaking, those beginning with K are assigned to stations west of the Mississippi River and in the territories and possessions, while W is assigned to broadcast stations east of the Mississippi.

During radio's infancy, most of the broadcast stations were in the East. As inland stations developed, the Mississippi river was made the dividing line of K and W calls. KDKA Pittsburgh was assigned the K letter before the present system was put into effect. Most of the early broadcast assignments were three letters. This combination became exhausted, making it necessary to add a fourth letter.

Since many AM broadcast licensees also operate FM and TV stations, a common practice is to use the call letters of the AM station followed by the dsh and "FM" or "TV", as the case may be.

National defense.—In cooperating with military and civil defense agencies, the Commission has, with the assistance of the broadcast industry, established an Emergency Broadcast System, which includes FM State Defense Networks. These facilities are for the prime purpose of giving emergency warning and advice to the public in event of armed attack but, meanwhile, are put to peacetime use in alerting localities and regions to serious storm and other weather threats to life and property.

Broadcast Operation Frequencies

Since radio frequencies differ, the particular qualities of each radio band must be considered in determining the type of service which can best operate on it. Consequently, that portion of the radio spectrum between 535 and 1605 kilocycles is occupied by AM broadcast, FM broadcast is allocated 88 to 108 megacycles, and TV is provided for in 54-216 megacycles (VHF) and 470-890 megacycles (UHF). (A "kilocycle" denotes a thousand wave-transmissions a second, while a "megacycle" is a short way of indicating a thousand kilocycles.)

FM broadcast requires a channel 20 times wider than that used for AM, but TV transmission of combined picture and sound needs about 6 times the spectrum space occupied by the entire AM broadcast band.

The same aural or video broadcast channel can be used in different places if the using stations are far enough apart so as to not interfere with one another or with stations on adjacent or technically related channels. A TV station may be required to operate "offset" 10 kilocycles above or below its normal carrier frequency. The channel assigned to such a station is, in consequence, designated "plus" or "minus", as the case may be. This makes more TV assignments possible and reduces the probability of interference.

AM and FM Operation

Without being too technical, here is how an aural (AM or FM) broadcast station works:

A person talks into a microphone as if he were a telephone. His voice sets up vibrations of varying intensity and frequency. The lower the pitch the slower the vibration.

In the microphone these vibrations are converted into electrical impulses like those in the originating sound. At the transmitting station they are greatly amplified—sometimes millions of times—before being put on the "carrier" wave. The intensity and frequency of the carrier wave are constant and this wave, by itself, does not transmit music or speech. So it is varied to correspond with the fluctuations of the speech or music received at the microphone. This is called "modulation".

In AM broadcast the audio waves are impressed on the carrier wave in a manner to cause its amplitude (or power) to vary with the audio waves. The frequency of the carrier remains constant. This is known as "amplitude modulation". In "frequency modulation" (FM), the amplitude remains unchanged but the frequency is varied in a manner corresponding to the voice or music to be transmitted. (Television is discussed elsewhere in this primer.)

These modulated waves radiate from the antenna tower at approximately 186,000 miles per second (the speed of light). Some of them follow the contour of the ground and are called "groundwaves". Others dart upward and are called "skywaves". Skywaves are often forced back to earth by a ceiling of electrical particles known as the ionosphere. This rebound gives the listener a choice of more distant AM stations at night. Daytime reception is largely dependent upon groundwaves.

Radio waves may pass through buildings and other objects but are subject to absorption and interference. As in the case of ripples on water, radio vibrations weaken with distance. Seasonal disturbances and sunspot periods can throw them off their course and cause "freak" reception.

AM broadcast stations use "medium waves". That is to say, they transmit 540,000 to 1,600,000 waves a second. At 540,000 waves a second, the distance between the crests is approximately 1,300 feet. This is known as "wave length". A station transmitting 540,000 waves a second is said to have a "frequency" of 540,000 cycles or 540 kilocycles.

The so-called "short-wave" (long-distance) broadcast stations transmit from 6,000,000 to 25,000,000 waves per second. These waves are sent out one after another so rapidly that the distance between their crests (wave-length) is only about 37 to 150 feet.

The modulated radio wave from the radio station is picked up by the home receiving antenna (exterior or set-enclosed). In other words, the wave sets up in the receiving antenna a current having the same frequency characteristics as the one transmitted. In the receiver the audio and carrier waves are separated by a device called a detector or demodulator. The carrier wave, no longer needed, is dissipated while the audio wave is relayed to the loud speaker where it is transformed back into the sound that you hear.

Relay Broadcast

Relay broadcast depends upon common carrier or private interconnecting facilities. Most live-talent AM network programs are sent over telephone circuits, many across the continent, for rebroadcast. AM and FM stations also use transcriptions (recording), and TV stations show films, kinescope and tape recordings. Broadcast stations usually employ wire connections between studios and transmitters, but some use radio (see "Auxiliary Broadcast Services").

Besides being transmitted over wire, cable or microwave facilities, broadcast programs can be picked out of the air for rebroadcast. Because of its characteristics, TV cannot be sent over ordinary wire lines but depends upon coaxial cable or microwave relay, which can also handle AM and FM transmission as well as telephone and telegraph communication.

Transmitting Antennas

In the interest of safety to air navigation, broadcast transmitting antennas must be approved by the Federal Aviation Agency before they can be constructed. All transmitting antennas exceeding 170 feet in height must be painted and lighted. The advent of TV (which, roughly, goes as far as can be seen from the top of the transmitting antenna) has produced many towering shafts. One of these, used by KTHV-TV Fargo, N. Dak., rises 2,063 feet above ground, making it, temporarily, the tallest man-made structure in the world. To further minimize hazard to air traffic, shared use of towers in excess of 500 feet or grouping them on "antenna farms", where possible, is advocated.

Directional Antennas

Directional antennas enable radio stations to control their service patterns. As AM broadcast stations began to multiply on shared channels, it became necessary to employ directional antennas to prevent interference. Since 1937, directional antennas have helped new stations squeeze into the congested AM broadcast band. Directional antenna arrays can produce "figure 8" and more complicated service patterns. One complex array includes nine towers. Directional antennas are used also in international communication and microwave relay to beam transmission to particular points. Some FM and TV stations now use directional antennas.

AM Broadcast

Amplitude modulation (AM) is the oldest system of program transmission. Besides being used in the standard broadcast band, it is also employed in most long-distance shortwave broadcasts as well as for the visual part of TV programs.

The 535 to 1605 kilocycles portion of the radio spectrum is now used for AM broadcast. This pioneer service started operation on these lower frequencies and, as a result, has continued to occupy the band in which it developed.

The AM broadcast band consists of 107 channels, each 10 kilocycles wide. Individual stations are assigned frequencies in the center of each channel, such as 540 kilocycles, 550 kilocycles, etc.

AM broadcast stations use power of from 250 watts to 50 kilowatts (50,000 watts). The latter is the present maximum power prescribed by the commission for this service.

Classes of AM Stations

There are four major classes of AM stations.

A Class I station operates on a "clear" channel and employs 10,000, 25,000, or 50,000 watts power to serve remote rural areas as well as a large center of population.

A Class II station is a secondary station which operates on a clear channel with a power of 250, 500, 1,000, 5,000, 10,000, 25,000, or 50,000 watts. It serves a population center and an adjacent rural area, and is operated so as to not interfere with the extensive services rendered by major clear channel stations.

A Class III station, which shares a "regional" channel with several similar stations, uses power of 500, 1,000 or 5,000 watts and serves a center of population and an adjacent rural area.

A Class IV station operates on a "local" channel (shared by many similar stations elsewhere) and employs a minimum of 250 watts.

"Clear channels" are set apart by international agreement for the operation of maximum-power AM stations to serve remote rural areas at night. People living outside populous communities depend largely upon the strong skywave signals of distant clear channel stations which are protected against nighttime interference.

An AM broadcast station transmits two types of signals—a groundwave and a skywave signal. Since the former is more reliable, the service provided by skywave signals is considered secondary. Skywave service varies in effectiveness with changes in such factors as time of day, weather, latitude, and atmospheric noise. It is chiefly effective at night, when it can provide a useful service to a much larger area than can be reached by groundwave signals.

Almost half of all AM stations are licensed to operate daytime only (sunrise to sunset).

Growing congestion in the AM band caused the commission in 1964 to curb overlap of service by new AM stations or major changes in existing AM stations. The object is to use the now limited assignment potential to bring AM service to communities and areas still lacking it. Also, steps were taken to limit dual service by mutually owned AM and FM stations in large cities, looking toward future divorcement of such combination programming (see "FM Broadcast").

FM Broadcast

FM (frequency modulation) broadcast has several advantages over the older AM (amplitude modulation) method. FM has higher fidelity characteristics and is more free of static, fading and background overlapping of other station programs.

FM's greater tonal range capability is due primarily to the fact that it uses a wider channel than that employed for AM broadcast. Then, too, FM occupies a higher portion of the radio spectrum where there is less static and other noise than at lower frequencies. FM receivers have the particular ability to suppress weaker stations and other interference.

Since the frequencies on which FM operates do not ordinarily reflect back to earth from ionospheric layers (skywaves), it is possible for many scattered FM stations to use the same frequency without interfering with one another.

FM and AM broadcast do not interfere with each other since they are on widely separated bands. Because of the difference in their spectrum locations and the systems used, FM cannot be heard on AM receivers without special adapters. Likewise, AM broadcast cannot be heard on sets made to receive FM exclusively. However, combination sets cover both bands and systems.

FM History

The principle of frequency modulation has long been known but its advantages for broadcasting were not realized until shortly before World War II. Largely as a result of interest evoked by extensive FM development work by Edwin H. Armstrong in the 1930's, the commission authorized increased FM experimentation and in 1940, after extensive public hearings, provided for commercial FM operation to start January 1, 1941. It set apart 35 channels for commercial FM and 5 channels for noncommercial educational FM use.

There was no "first" individual commercial FM grant because, on October 31, 1940, the commission granted construction permits to 15 such stations simultaneously. By the end of 1940 the number of authorizations had increased to 25. The first commercial FM station licensed by the commission was WSM-FM Nashville (May 29, 1941), which operated until 1951.

FM stations were initially assigned call letters with added numerals, but in 1943 the present letter system was adopted. There is optional use of the suffix "FM" to distinguish FM stations from AM stations under joint operation.

Though all radio construction was frozen by World War II, more than 40 prewar FM stations continued to serve some 400,000 receivers.

Because of skywave interference experienced on the then FM band of 42-50 megacycles, the commission in 1945, after public hearing, moved FM to its present higher and less vulnerable position in the radio spectrum—88 to 108 megacycles—and at the same time increased the number of channels to 100. This provided 80 channels for commercial FM and 20 channels for non-commercial educational broadcast (see "Educational Broadcast").

FM Stations and Services

In 1962, the commission revised its

BROADCAST PRIMER

FM broadcast rules, among other things, to:

Divide the country into three zones (instead of the previous two) for FM broadcast operation. Zone I (like TV Zone I) includes part or all of 18 northeastern states, plus the District of Columbia; Zone I-A is limited to the Southern portion of California, and Zone II includes the remainder of the United States (excluding Alaska and Hawaii).

Create three classes of commercial FM stations (instead of the previous two). Class A stations are assigned to all zones; Class B stations are assigned to Zones I and I-A, and Class C stations are assigned to Zone II.

Class A stations use power of from 100 watts to 3 kilowatts to serve an area of about 15 miles; Class B stations, with power of from 5 kilowatts to 50 kilowatts, have a range of some 40 miles, and Class C stations, employing 25-to-100 kilowatts power, reach approximately 65 miles.

Maximum equivalent antenna height above average terrain is 300 feet for Class A stations, 500 feet for Class B and 2,000 feet for Class C. Where these figures are exceeded, power must be correspondingly reduced. Minimum co-channel separations are 65 miles for Class A stations; 150 miles for Class B and 180 miles for Class C.

In 1963, the commission adopted a table assigning the 30 commercial FM channels to states and communities, similar to the method of making TV channel assignments. Nearly 3,000 FM channel assignments were made to nearly 2,000 communities in states exclusive of Alaska and Hawaii.

The previously mentioned new AM broadcast rules, adopted in 1964, required that, effective October 15, 1965, FM stations owned jointly with AM stations in cities of over 100,000 population reduce duplication of AM programs over their FM stations to not more than half of the FM station's broadcast week. Temporary exemption was granted in particular cases. The commission believes that separate ownership of AM and FM stations is a desirable long-range goal.

Subsidiary FM service.—To aid FM broadcasters, the commission in 1955 enabled them to apply for subsidiary authorizations to render supplemental service such as "functional (background) music" operations. This specialized service is tailored to business and other subscribers. Multiplexed operation permits the transmission of a different program at the same time as the regular program. The former is received on special sets in stores, factories, etc., of subscribers.

The first subsidiary grants were made simultaneously on October 12, 1955 to WPEN-FM Philadelphia, and WWDG-FM Washington.

Stereophonic FM service.—In 1961 the commission adopted standards for FM stereophonic broadcast. Effective June 1 of that year, FM stations were permitted to transmit "stereo" programs on a multiplex basis without further FCC authorization. "Stereo" involves a dual transmission and reception to enable music and other sound to be heard with more realistic effect.

On the day the "stereo" rules became effective (June 1, 1961), the commission received, at the same time, its first notifications that two FM stations had started such regular operation. They were WGFJ Schenectady, N. Y., and WEFM Chicago. Both stations had previously experimented with "stereo" under FCC authority, as had some other FM stations.

TV Broadcast

Television (TV) broadcasting involves transmission of visual and aural programs so synchronized that at the receiving set they are seen and heard in a manner resembling talking motion pictures.

The picture phase is accomplished by sending a rapid succession of electrical impulses which the receiver transforms into scenes and images. The method is complex, but the following is a brief explanation of monochrome (black-and-white) video operation.

The scene to be televised is focused on a special tube in the television camera which has a small "screen" covered with approximately 367,000 microscopic dots of a special substance. This "screen" can be likened to a tiny motion picture screen and is called a "mosaic". The varying light from each part of the scene being televised falls upon these dots and gives them an electrical charge the strength of which depends upon the amount of light falling upon the individual dots. Thus each dot becomes a tiny storage battery and the scene is formed in a pattern of electrical charges on the mosaic.

The mosaic is "scanned" by a tiny beam of electrons, no larger than the head of a pin, moving from left to right and progressing downward (just as the printed page is read by the human eye). This complete process is repeated 60 times per second, and the horizontal lines of alternate scanning are interlaced so that 30 complete pictures or "frames" composed of 525 horizontal lines are produced each second. As the electron beam strikes each dot on the mosaic, the dot is discharged through the electron beam and the electrical impulses produced are used to modulate the signals of the TV transmitter. Each time the dots are discharged by the electron beam they are recharged by the light produced by the succeeding scene falling upon them. The succession of individual "still" scenes creates the illustration of motion just as in the case of motion pictures made on film.

The reproduction by the TV receiver of the pictures transmitted is just the reverse of the transmission. The incoming succession of electrical impulses are separate from the "carrier" and, after amplification, impressed on the picture tube grid. The picture tube also has an electron "gun" which shoots out a tiny beam of electrons which moves from left to right and progresses downward on the face of the picture tube.

The face of the tube is coated with a material which fluoresces or gives off light at the point where it is struck by the electron beam. In the absence of a television signal the whole face of the picture tube is illuminated equally by a series of closely spaced horizontal lines. When a TV signal is placed on the grid of the picture tube it controls the strength of the electron beam and hence the amount of light on the face of the tube. If the scanning of the electron beam in the picture tube is kept in perfect step with the scanning of the electron beam in the TV camera, the picture tube will reproduce the lights and shadows of the subject scene and the succession of such scenes produces the illusion of motion.

In brief, the picture seen by the viewer is actually produced by a flickering spot of light moving rapidly across and down the face of the picture tube. The viewer sees the "whole" picture because the screen continues to glow for a tiny fraction of a second after the electron beam has passed, which coupled with the retentive ability of the eye creates the illusion that the picture is there all the time. The high rate of repetition minimizes flicker and lends smoothness to motion.

The TV transmitter is, in effect, two separate units. One sends out the picture and the other the sound. Visual transmission is by amplitude modulation (AM). The sound portion employs frequency modulation (FM) and operates much like the regular FM broadcast described elsewhere in this primer.

TV History

Many persons in many lands contributed to the development of television. Like radio, TV was made possible by electronic discoveries in the late 19th century and early 20th century. In 1884 Nipkow, a German, patented a scanning disk for transmitting pictures by wireless. In our own country, Jenkins began his study of the subject about 1890. Rignoux and Fournier conducted "television" experiments in France in the 1900's. In 1915 Marconi predicted "visible telephone". In 1923 Zworykin applied for a patent on the iconoscope (TV camera tube). Two years later Jenkins demonstrated mechanical TV apparatus. There were experiments by Alexanderson, Farnsworth and Baird in 1926-27. An experimental TV program was sent by wire between New York and Washington by the Bell Telephone Laboratories in 1927, in which Secretary of Commerce Hoover participated. The next year the same laboratories experimentally televised outdoor programs.

The Federal Radio Commission (predecessor of the Federal Communications Commission) reported that "a few" broadcast stations were experimenting with video in 1928. In that year, WGY Schenectady, N. Y., experimentally broadcast the first drama by TV. Large-screen TV was demonstrated by RCA at a New York theater in 1930, and RCA tested outdoor TV pickup at Camden, N. J., in 1936.

Seventeen experimental TV stations were operating in 1937. An experimental mobile TV station was placed in operation that year. The first United States President seen on TV was Franklin D. Roosevelt, when he opened the New York World's Fair in 1939. That year also saw the first telecast major league baseball game, college football game and professional boxing match. In 1940 the Republican and Democratic conventions were first televised, that of the former making pioneer use of coaxial cable for long-distance TV relay purposes. Previously, in the same year, WNBT New York, and WRGB Schenectady, N. Y., were joined by radio relay for a rebroadcast test. The first President's message to Congress over network TV was that of Truman in 1950. The first TV debate between presidential candidates was in 1960 between Kennedy and Nixon. The first presidential message to Congress televised in color was that of President Johnson in 1966.

Meanwhile, in 1939, the Milwaukee Journal filed the first application to broadcast TV programs on a commercial basis. At a hearing in 1940, the FCC found industry divided on the question of whether TV was ready for commercial use and at odds on engineering standards. At that time various TV systems required different receivers. A National Television Systems Committee considered standardization and reported in 1941. Subsequent commission hearings showed the industry to be in substantial agreement on commercialization and standards. The latter fixed the present line and frame frequencies at 525 and 30 respectively. On April 30, 1941, the commission authorized commercial TV operation to start July 1 of that year.

A number of TV stations which had been operating experimentally applied for commercial authorization. The first grant looking to regular TV operation was issued to WNBT New York, on June 17, 1941, effective July 1 of that year. On June 24, 1941, WCBW New York, was authorized to commence program tests July 1 thereafter. By May of 1942 ten commercial TV stations were on the air. Six of these continued to provide service during the war.

In 1945 the commission allocated 13 VHF (very high frequency) channels between 44 and 216 megacycles for commercial television. In doing so, it pointed out that there was insufficient spectrum space below 300 megacycles for an adequate nationwide and competitive TV broadcasting system. Twelve of these channels were to be shared with certain nonbroadcast (fixed and mobile) services. At the time, that portion of the UHF (ultra high frequency) spectrum between 480 and 920 megacycles was made available for experimental TV operation looking to future TV expansion, and between 1245 and 1325 megacycles for TV relay.

In 1948, because of interference to commercial TV operation, the commission stopped the sharing of television VHF channels with other services, and deleted TV Channel No. 1 (44-50 MC) by assigning it to the nonbroadcast services affected.

TV Proceedings 1948-1951

As predicted by the commission in 1945, it became increasingly evident that the few available VHF channels were inadequate to provide a truly nationwide competitive TV service. Also, operating stations developed interference which had not been anticipated when TV broadcasting began. As a result, the commission on September 30, 1948 stopped granting new TV stations pending a study of the situation. This was the so-called TV "freeze" order.

The resultant study showed that, before additional stations could be authorized, it was necessary to determine various engineering and other questions which would govern future TV operation. Consequently, on July 11, 1949 the commission proposed comprehensive changes looking to the improvement and extension of TV service. These included new engineering standards; opening UHF channels for TV broadcasting; consideration of color systems; reservation of channels for non-commercial educational use; and a national assignment plan incorporating VHF and UHF channels.

The color question was the first subject considered because up to the actual hearing it had not been determined if color could operate in the same channel width (six megacycles) used for black-and-white TV transmission.

Color TV.—In color TV a brightness component is transmitted in much the same manner as the black-and-white picture signal is sent in monochrome and, in addition, a color component is transmitted at the same time on a "subcarrier" frequency which is located between the visual and aural carrier frequencies.

Color TV had been the subject of study and experimentation for a quarter of a century. In 1928 Baird, in England, demonstrated an early system. The next year color pictures were sent over wire in a test at the Bell Telephone Laboratories in New York. RCA gave an experimental color TV demonstration in February 1940 and CBS tested color TV broadcast the following August.

The question of color TV was considered initially by the FCC in 1941, when it proposed alternative standards for monochrome and color. In 1945 it allocated certain UHF frequencies for experimentation in developing color and high definition black-and-white TV. It was not until 1946 that it received a formal proposal for the adoption of color. In denying that CBS petition in 1947, the commission urged further experimentation with particular reference to making color transmission possible in the 6-megacycle band width used by monochrome TV.

Three competitive color systems were offered for commission consideration in the general TV proceedings which started in 1949. They were the CBS "field sequential" system, the RCA "dot sequential" system, and the Color Television, Inc. "line sequential" system. Each of these systems required special or converted sets to receive color. The CBS system could not be received in black-and-white on existing receivers without adapters; the two others claimed they could.

On the basis of testimony and demonstrations, the commission on September 1, 1950 found that the field sequential system was the only system then presented which met its criteria for color operation. However, in view of the fact that this system could not be received in monochrome on existing receivers, and the possibility of improvements in TV color systems generally, the commission proposed postponing a color decision and adopting monochrome "bracket standards" which would enable future black-and-white TV sets incorporating those standards to receive color transmissions in black-and-white. This proposal was conditioned upon receiver manufacturers agreeing to equip new TV sets with a switch and an appropriate circuit for that purpose.

But the response from manufacturers was insufficient and, in accordance with its September announcement, the commission on October 11, 1950 adopted the CBS field sequential system for color TV broadcasting to become effective November 20 thereafter. In so doing, it held the door open for consideration of development of a better system on the basis of practical tests and actual demonstrations.

Start of commercial color broadcasting was delayed when RCA obtained a preliminary injunction in the United States District Court at Chicago. On May 23, 1951 the Supreme Court of the United States upheld the validity of the commission's action and CBS began limited color broadcasts on June 25 of that year. Because of the materials shortage, the National Production Authority on the following November 20 prohibited the manufacture of color TV sets or attachments for general public use, and interest in the field sequential system lagged.

Thereafter, new TV color standards were developed and advocated by the industry through its National Television Systems Committee. They were adopted by the commission on December 17, 1953.

These present standards are based on the "simultaneous" system, which transmits three primary colors (red, green and blue) at one and the same time. They are "compatible" in that they enable existing TV sets to receive color broadcasts in black and white. Color sets are necessary to receive colorcasts in color. Color sets also receive monochrome transmissions.

TV "Freeze" Lifted—1952

On April 14, 1952, the commission announced the lifting of the TV "freeze", the addition of 70 UHF channels (between 470-830 megacycles) to the 12 VHF channels (between 54-216 megacycles) then in use, and the adoption of a table making more than 2,000 channel assignments (over 1,400 UHF and over 500 VHF) to nearly 1,300 communities throughout the United States and its territories, including 242 assignments for non-commercial educational use.

The minimum effective radiated visual power of TV stations is fixed at 100 watts. No minimum antenna height above average terrain is specified. TV stations operate in accordance with tables of maximum power which varies with antenna height. Maximum effective radiated power on VHF channels 2-6 is fixed at 100 kilowatts, on VHF channels 7-13 at 316 kilowatts, and on UHF channels 14-83 at 5000 kilowatts; with very high antennas these powers are reduced.

Station separations are determined by three geographic zones. Minimum co-channel separations are 170 miles for VHF channels, and 155 miles for UHF channels in Zone I which encompasses the entire states of Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New Jersey, Maryland, Pennsylvania, Delaware, District of Columbia, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, and part of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, New York, Virginia, West Virginia, Michigan, and Wisconsin.

Minimum co-channel separations are 190 miles for VHF channels, and 175 miles for UHF channels in Zone II, which includes the entire states of Kentucky, Tennessee, North Carolina, South Carolina, Missouri, Iowa, Minnesota, Arkansas, Kansas, Nebraska, Oklahoma, North Dakota, South Dakota, Utah, Idaho, Arizona, New Mexico, Montana, Wyoming, Nevada, Colorado, Oregon, Washington, California, Alaska and Hawaii, and parts of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, New York, Virginia, West Virginia, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Michigan, Wisconsin, and Texas.

Minimum co-channel separations are 220 miles for VHF channels, and 205 miles for UHF channels in Zone III, which includes Florida and parts of Georgia, Alabama, Louisiana, Mississippi, and Texas.

The first commercial TV grants following the lifting of the freeze were made on July 11, 1952, simultaneously, to three Denver, Colo., stations—KFEL-TV, KDEN, and KFTV. KFEL-TV began program operation on July 19 thereafter. The first UHF commercial TV station to go on the air was KPTV Portland, Ore., on September 20, 1952.

The initial commercial grant to the territories and possessions were made on July 23, 1952, to WKAQ-TV San Juan, Puerto Rico.

TV Service

Being in a higher part of the spectrum, UHF broadcasts cannot be received on VHF sets without changes in the set or the addition of a converter. Combination sets, however, receive both VHF and UHF stations. In some cases, UHF reception requires some slight changes in home antennas which were installed for VHF use, or may require a new antenna and a more efficient type of antenna lead in.

TV stations engaged in commercial operation are required normally to broadcast a minimum of 28 hours a week except in their initial stages when there is a graduated scale of operation starting with 12 hours.

Steps taken by the commission to bring TV service to additional areas include authorizing "satellite" stations on VHF and UHF channels to rebroadcast the programs of mother stations; "boosters" for UHF stations to fill in shadows in their service areas, and "translators" (low power on VHF channels and higher power on the top 14 UHF channels) to pick up and rebroadcast the programs of outside stations. Any rebroadcasting requires the consent of the station whose programs are picked up. Rules adopted in 1965 permit translators up to 100 watts power to apply for operation on VHF and UHF channels assigned to communities but unused.

Unlike AM networking, which is possible over ordinary telephone wires, TV requires special relay adjuncts. Network TV operation is made possible in large measure by the development of coaxial cable and microwave relay facilities. As early as 1937 motion pictures were televised and sent over the coaxial cable link between New York and Philadelphia. Network operation was begun by WNET New York, WROB Schenectady, N. Y., and WPTZ Philadelphia, 1944. Regular coaxial cable TV relay service was inaugurated between Washington and New York in 1946. The following year, microwave relay extended this service to Boston. A midwestern relay system, opened in 1943, was joined with the eastern system in 1949. The first link in the transcontinental relay system was opened between New York and Chicago in 1950. It was extended to San Francisco the following year and, on September 4, 1951, carried telecasts of the Japanese peace treaty conference. Most live TV network relay is over the coaxial cable and microwave facilities of commercial communication common carriers. There is some private microwave TV relay.

"Subliminal" advertising.—Because so-called "subliminal" advertising is not used by TV stations, and is frowned upon by that industry, the commission has not found it necessary to adopt any covering rules or regulations.

UHF Development

Economic and technical problems long impeded more utilization of the UHF channels. In addition to the normal TV cost factor, they were caused, chiefly, by the large number of VHF-only receivers in use, and the consequent preference for VHF stations for advertising revenue sources.

In 1956 the commission outlined a long-range and interim plan to promote comparable TV facilities as a means of extending TV service throughout the nation. It invited comments on the possibility of ultimately shifting all or a major portion of TV operation to the UHF band and, at the same time, sought to enlist the cooperation of industry in a research and development study to increase the range and coverage of UHF stations. Meanwhile, it increased the maximum power of UHF stations, made certain areas all-UHF and increased TV competition in others, and took other steps to put UHF and VHF operation on a more competitive basis. In 1966, it revised the TV channel assignment table to make additional UHF assignments.

On two occasions the commission sought the release of government VHF space to augment the VHF broadcast channels but national defense considerations prevented any action.

At the commission's request, Congress appropriated money for a test in New York City which demonstrated the ability of UHF to provide service comparable with VHF in a large canyon-type metropolitan locality.

Also at FCC request, Congress in 1962 adopted a requirement that TV receivers shipped in interstate commerce, or imported, be able to receive all UHF as well as VHF channels. The commission gave the industry until April 30, 1964 to convert to all channel set production. This is giving substantial impetus to UHF expansion, the only door now open for TV growth. Continued use of VHF-only receivers is not affected.

CATV Systems

CATV (community antenna TV) systems pick up programs of outside TV broadcast stations by means of a receiving antenna or bring them in by microwave radio relay. These signals are sent from the local CATV distributing point by multipurpose coaxial cable (which can simultaneously carry up to a dozen or more signals on different channels) to the homes of subscribers linked to the cable system.

CATV systems started about 1950 as a means of bringing TV service to small communities unable to support a local TV station and beyond the range of outside TV stations. They have since spread to communities served by TV stations and constitute a large and fast-growing business.

In April 1965, the commission adopted rules to require a microwave-served CATV system to carry the signals of local stations on request and refrain from duplicating the programs of local commercial stations within a period of 15 days before or after the local broadcast.

In October 1965, the commission provided certain frequencies for use by non-common carrier microwave stations to relay signals to CATV systems and established a new Community Antenna Relay Service (CARS) to absorb CATV-serving microwave relay services in the Business Radio Service.

In March 1966, the commission adopted rules requiring CATV systems, upon request and within the limits of their channel capacity, to carry all TV stations placing a Grade B or better signal over the community served by the system and of all 100-watt or higher power TV translators operating in the community, according to an order of priority. The non-duplication requirement of 1965 was reduced to the day of local broadcast.

The new rules provide that no CATV system located within the Grade A (primary service) contour of a TV station in the 100 largest TV markets shall provide new service to subscribers which would extend the signal of any TV station beyond its Grade B (secondary service) contour except upon a showing, made in evidentiary hearing and approved by the Commission, that the extension would be in the public interest and not be detrimental to TV broadcast service in the area.

The commission proposed legislation recommending, in the main, that Congress clarify and confirm FCC jurisdiction in the CATV field.

The commission does not license CATV systems.

Subscription TV

Subscription TV involves furnishing special programs to viewers who pay charge for this service. Generally speaking, there are two kinds of subscription TV—that which transmits programs from studio to sets of subscribers entirely by wire or cable (closed-circuit pay TV), and that which sends scrambled audio and video signals over the air which may be seen in intelligible form only by subscribers who have unscrambling devices attached to their TV sets.

The commission authorized over-the-air pay-TV experimentation as early as 1950. Five years later it proposed trial of such a service and, in 1957, invited comments on various proposed systems. They differ mainly in how the transmissions are sent in scrambled form and then decoded by the special apparatus attached to a subscriber's TV set, and whether coin boxes, punch cards or tape record is used for billing purposes. Later in 1957 the commission looked toward considering applications by TV stations to test this service under certain conditions. But, in view of resolutions by two congressional committees, it deferred further action until 1959 when it invited applications by commercial TV stations to test pay-TV under revised requirements.

The latter specify three-year trial authorizations limited to markets in which there are at least four existing commercial TV services, to the trial of any system in only one market, to one system per market, and to subscription programs being broadcast over only one local TV station at a time. Also, until the commission has decided whether toll-TV service should be authorized on a regular basis, it ruled that the public should not be called upon to buy any special equipment.

On February 24, 1961 the commission, after a hearing, granted the only conforming toll-TV application then pending (WVBT Hartford, Conn.). That station started pay-TV programming on June 29, 1962. Data concerning that trial was submitted in March 1965 to the commission together with a request that the FCC consider whether over-the-air subscription TV should be authorized on a permanent nation-wide basis. The commission in March 1966 invited comments on this proposal, also as to what its role should be with regard to closed-circuit pay TV.

Educational Broadcast AM Educational Stations

Educational institutions were among the pioneers in experimental broadcast, and held many early AM licenses.

By 1925, educational groups had 171 such licenses. For various reasons, notably the increased competition from commercial broadcasting, most of these stations were off the air when the FCC was created. However, about 40 educational stations still operate in the AM broadcast band, a score of them on a voluntary noncommercial basis.

As directed by Section 307(c) of the Communications Act, the commission made a study of the proposal that Congress should allocate fixed percentages of radio facilities for particular types of non-profit radio programs and activities, including education. On January 22, 1935, the commission recommended that no such statutory allocation be made at that time. It held that there was "no need for a change in the existing law to accomplish the helpful purposes of the proposal", but recognized the need for extending broadcasting to education and expressed its intention "actively to assist the determination of the rightful place of broadcasting in education and to see that it is used in that place."

To further the development of non-commercial educational broadcasting, the commission in 1938 set aside certain AM channels between 41 and 42 megacycles for the exclusive use of educational institutions. Because of the inability of the normal radio set to receive broadcasts on these frequencies, only a few educational institutions secured licenses for such operation. They later changed to frequency modulation operation when provision was made for FM educational broadcasting.

FM Educational Stations

When regular FM broadcasting was authorized to start in 1941, five channels between 42 and 43 megacycles were allocated for noncommercial educational use, in lieu of the educational AM facilities previously provided.

In 1945, as part of an extensive revision of frequency allocations, the commission reserved 20 FM channels between 88 and 92 megacycles for noncommercial educational FM stations. This educational portion of the FM band is contiguous to that containing the commercial FM stations and FM receivers are capable of tuning in both noncommercial and commercial FM stations within range. The number of these noncommercial educational FM stations has grown slowly but steadily.

In 1948 the commission authorized low power (10 watt) operation on educational FM channels. With such low power equipment easily installed and operated, schools may begin broadcasting to a limited area of from two to five miles in radius for an outlay of a few thousand dollars. Higher power equipment may be added when desired. In 1951, as a further aid, the commission authorized remote control operation of low power educational FM stations.

Stations in the educational FM broadcast service are licensed principally to school systems, colleges and universities for furnishing educational programs to teachers and students, as well as for public educational and informational purposes. FM educational stations are of two classes—low power and high power.

TV Educational Stations

The commission, for the first time, allocated TV facilities for exclusive non-commercial educational use as a result of its lengthy study of this question in the general television proceedings (discussed under "TV Broadcast"). The commission determined therein that "the need for noncommercial educational stations has been amply demonstrated," that "the record shows the desire and ability of education to make a substantial contribution to the use of television," that "the actual process of formulating plans and of enacting necessary legislation or of making adequate financing available is one which will generally require more time for educational organizations than for commercial interests . . . and that to insure an extensive rather than a sparse and haphazard development of educational television, channels must be reserved by the Commission at this time". Consequently, in its Sixth Report and Order of April 14, 1952, the commission made channel assignments to 242 communities exclusively for noncommercial educational purposes. Forty-six of these were made to "primarily educational centers". Of the total of 242 channels then assigned, 80 were VHF and 162 were UHF. There have since been additional assignments.

The commission further aided educational TV by, in 1963, establishing a supplemental service for using channels in a nonbroadcast band to transmit instructional and cultural material to schools and other selected receiver locations.

The commission expects educational TV licenses to make their station facilities available to other local educational institutions, since such assignments are made to serve the educational and cultural needs of the community. Except in particular cases, TV educational eligibility is not extended to municipal authorities in places where an independent educational authority—such as a board of education—is established. Although there is no requirement that noncommercial educational stations broadcast a specified minimum number of hours, commercial and educational TV stations are both subject to the same service requirements, such as station separation, antenna height and power, etc.

A 1962 law enables the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare to make matching Federal grants of money to construct noncommercial educational TV stations.

The first noncommercial educational TV grant was made July 23, 1952 to the Kansas State College of Agriculture and Applied Sciences (KSAC-TV), at Manhattan, Kans., but the station was never built. The first such station to go on the air was KUHT Houston, May 25, 1953; and the first one licensed was WCET Cincinnati, Ohio, March 11, 1955. The first state educational TV network was established in Alabama on April 28, 1955.

Several colleges and universities hold commercial TV authorizations and operate on a profit or nonprofit basis. Many schools have closed-circuit TV systems to link classrooms for instructional purposes.

INTERNATIONAL BROADCAST

Under international agreement, certain high frequency bands are allocated for broadcast between nations.

Authorizations for non-government international broadcast stations located in the United States are issued by the FCC. A single grant usually authorizes use of a number of frequencies between 5950 and 26,100 kilocycles as well as several transmitters. This is because of seasonal and other considerations in broadcasting different programs to different parts of the world at the same time. The minimum power for international broadcast stations under commission jurisdiction is 50 kilowatts.

During World War II, international broadcast stations in the United States were taken over by the Office of War Information and the Office of Inter-American Affairs of the Department of State which operated and programed them in the interest of the war effort.

The "Voice of America" is the title given to the programs now sent out daily, in many languages, to various parts of the world by shortwave transmitters under the auspices of the United States Information Agency. Transmission is by amplitude modulation.

BROADCAST RELAY BY SATELLITES

Satellite communication is, in effect, an extension into space of international telephone and telegraph services. It relays communication over greater distances than possible with earth-bound radio and cable. Communication common carriers engaged in space communication offer a variety of for-hire services to the inclusion of video broadcast relay.

The first live transatlantic telecast by satellite—from the United States to Europe—was relayed by "Telestar I" on July 10, 1962. The initial picture was an American flag fluttering in the breeze in front of the sending station at Andover, Ma. Still pictures in color were received from England six days later. Live telecasts were exchanged between the two continents on July 23. The pioneer live color test was on September 12 of the same year.

AUXILIARY BROADCAST

The commission authorizes several classes of auxiliary broadcast stations for live "pick up" and speeding programs of outside origin to studios, or from studios to transmitters. A brief description of these adjuncts follows:

Remote pickup stations are employed by aural and video stations for "on-the-spot" coverage of news and other events.

Studio-transmitter links are used to transmit aural and TV programs from studios to remote transmitters. Because a TV station's coverage depends to a large extent upon the height of its antenna, the latter is often located on a mountain some distance from the studio.

Intercity relay stations are utilized by some TV stations, usually remote from common carrier facilities, to carry programs between stations by microwave.

Also, cueing transmitters are used in broadcast studios to direct performers who wear hidden miniature receivers.

EXPERIMENTAL BROADCAST

Experimental broadcast stations test new techniques and develop broadcast equipment. Information obtained from this experimentation and research helps the industry to evolve and improve equipment and methods and also provides the Commission with useful information about new developments. Because of their temporary nature, the number of these authorizations fluctuates.

GROWTH OF BROADCAST SERVICES

The Color Labmaster has arrived to meet them!... The world's largest manufacturer of black and white film processing equipment is leading the swing to color. The Houston Fearless Color Labmaster takes its place in the same quality line of processing equipment that produced the black and white Labmaster. ■ Experience with the most widely used continuous film processing devices in the world provided the know-how for producing the superior Color Labmaster. Modular construction, a feature of the black and white equipment, is also a feature of the Color Labmaster. This "building block" construction concept allows for custom tailoring to any film process; and, the Color Labmaster is easily adaptable to any new requirements. ■ On all of our products, the Houston Fearless name means quality. And, only one 16/35mm color film processor makes quality and performance a byword – only one processor will perform when all other color film processors are outmoded – only the Color Labmaster from Houston Fearless! ■ Write today for complete information.

STATION APPLICATION PROCEDURE
How to Apply for a Broadcasting Station (AM/FM/TV)

(Updated to January 1966)

Any qualified citizen, firm, or group may apply to the Federal Communications Commission for authority to construct a standard (AM), frequency modulation (FM), or television (TV) broadcast station.

Licensing of these facilities is prescribed by the Communications Act of 1934, as amended, which sets up certain basic requirements. In general, applicants must satisfy the commission that they are legally, technically and financially qualified, and that operation of the proposed station would be in the public interest.

The licensing procedure is detailed in Part 1 of the commission's rules of "Practice and Procedure," while station operation is covered by Part 73 (formerly Part 3) "Radio Broadcast Services." The latter includes technical standards for AM, FM and TV stations, and TV and FM channel (frequency) assignments by states and communities. Copies of these rules are not supplied by the commission but are available from the Government Printing Office.

Most applicants employ engineering and legal services in preparing their applications. The workload of the commission does not enable it to make technical or other special studies, etc., for prospective applicants. Nor does it recommend individual lawyers or engineers. Those who practice before the commission have their own associations, the members of which are listed in various trade publications.

Following is a summary of the consecutive steps to be followed in applying for authorization to build and operate a broadcast station. The application procedure is substantially the same whether the facility sought is AM, FM or TV.

Selecting A Facility

An AM applicant must make his own search for a frequency on which he could operate without causing or receiving interference from existing stations and stations proposed in pending applications; AM broadcast stations operate on "local," "regional," or "clear" channels. Stations of 250 watts power nighttime and up to 1 kilowatt daytime serve small communities; stations of 500 watts to 5 kilowatts power cover centers of population and surrounding areas; stations of 10 to 50 kilowatts power are for large area coverage, particularly at night.

An FM station applicant must request an FM channel assigned to the community in which he proposes to operate, or a place within a 25-mile radius which has no FM channel assignment. Power, antenna height and station separation are governed by which of three zones the station is to be located. There are three classes of commercial FM stations. Class A stations use power of from 100 watts to 3 kilowatts to cover a radius of about 15 miles; Class B stations, 5 kilowatts to 50 kilowatts for 40-mile service and Class C, 25 kilowatts to 100 kilowatts for 65-mile range. Noncommercial educational FM stations are in a separate category and may operate with power as low as 10 watts. Operating commercial and educational FM stations may apply for a "Subsidiary Communications Authorization" (Form 318) to furnish certain supplemental services. FM stations may engage in stereophonic broadcasting for which no special application is required.

An applicant for a TV station must request a VHF (very high frequency) or a UHF (ultra high frequency) channel assigned to the community in which he proposes to operate, or a place having no channel assignment within 15 miles of that community. Power depends upon the kind of channels used (VHF or UHF) and station separation is determined by three zones. TV "translator" stations serve remote communities by picking up and re-broadcasting the programs of outside stations, with latter's permission. They operate on VHF or the upper 14 UHF channels. Booster stations fill in the shadows of UHF station service areas. Certain channels are assigned for non-commercial educational TV operation.

Applying for a Construction Permit

After a prospective broadcaster has decided upon the type of station he desires, and the place where it would be located, he should ascertain and plan to meet the program needs of the locality he intends to serve. The next step is to apply for a construction permit. This is done on FCC Form 301, "Application for Authority to Construct a New Broadcast Station or Make Changes in an Existing Broadcast Station," which covers AM, FM or TV broadcast, except educational applicants who use FCC Form 340, TV translators (Form 346), and booster stations (Form 343). These forms require information about the citizenship and character of the applicant, as well as his financial, technical and other qualifications, plus details about the transmitting apparatus to be used, antenna and studio locations, and the service proposed. Commercial broadcast applicants are required to show their financial ability to operate for one year after construction of the station. Triplicate copies are required. Nonprofit educational institutions apply for new or changed instructional fixed TV stations on Form 330F.

Applicants Must Give Local Notice

Applicants for new broadcast stations, license renewals, station sales or major changes in existing stations must give local public notice of such intent, also of any subsequent designation of their applications for hearing. This is done over the applicant's local station (if any) and by advertising in the local newspaper. It affords interested persons an opportunity to comment on these applications to the commission. Applicants and stations must also maintain public reference files in their respective localities.

Application Processing

All broadcast applications are reported twice by the commission—when first tendered (received) and, again, when formally accepted for filing. An application is not acted upon until at least 30 days after the commission gives public notice of its acceptance. During that time it is subject to objecting petitions being filed.

Competing AM applications may be filed up to a date specified (about 30 days subsequent to) in a notice of AM applications ready for processing. Competing FM and TV applications may be filed up to the day the initial application is ready for commission consideration.

Applications are, in general, processed in the order in which accepted. They are reviewed in their engineering, legal and financial aspects by the Broadcast Bureau, which, under delegated authority, can act on routine applications and report to the commission applications involving policy or other particular considerations. If an application has no engineering or other conflicts, has no valid protests, the applicant is qualified, and all other requirements are met, it is granted without hearing and a construction permit is issued. All such grants are announced by the commission. Petitions for reconsideration of grants made without hearing can be filed within 30 days thereafter but must show good cause why the objections were not raised prior to the grant.

Hearing Procedure

Where it appears that an application does not conform to the commission's rules and regulations; that serious interference would be caused; there is protest of merit; or if other serious questions of a technical, legal or financial character are involved, a hearing is usually required. The commission must accord a hearing to timely filed competing applications.

In designating an application for hearing, the commission gives public notice of the issues for the information of the applicant and others concerned. The hearing notice generally allows the applicant 60 days or more in which to prepare. Even after being designated for hearing, an applicant may find it possible to amend his application to resolve engineering or other problems. (Commission approval is required for all mergers or "pay-offs" involving competing applicants.)

Hearings on competing applications are normally held at the commission's Washington offices; however, hearings on license revocations and renewals are held in the communities affected.

Hearings are customarily conducted by an examiner. He has authority to administer oaths, examine witnesses and rule upon the admission of evidence. A prehearing conference is held to reach agreement on procedural matters.

Within 20 days after the close of a record by the hearing examiner, each party and the chief of the Broadcast Bureau of the commission can file proposed findings of fact and conclusions to support their contentions. After review of the evidence and statements, the hearing examiner issues an initial decision.

If he wishes to contest the initial decision, the applicant or any other party in interest has 30 days from the date on which the initial decision was issued to file exceptions. In all cases heard by an examiner, the commission or its review board may hear oral argument on timely request of any party. After oral argument, the commission or the review board, as the case may be, may adopt, modify or reverse the hearing examiner's initial decision. In cases where the review board has acted on the exceptions, an appeal from its decision may be taken to the commission within 30 days thereafter. However, the commission may in its discretion deny an appeal for review without stating reasons for such action.

Court appeals can be taken within 30 days following release of the final decision, in which case the commission's action is stayed pending court determination.

Construction Permit

When an application is granted, a construction permit is issued. The new permittee may then request call letters which, if available and conforming to the rules, are issued. A period of 60 days from date of the construction permit is provided in which construction shall begin, and a maximum of 6 months thereafter as the time for completion (or 8 months in all). Application to modify a broadcast construction authorization, or to make changes in an existing station, or to modify a license, is made on the same form used in seeking initial construction authorization. If the permittee is unable to build his station within the time specified, he must apply for extension of time on Form 701 ("Application for Additional Time to Construct a Radio Station"), giving reasons. Upon completion of construction the permittee conducts equipment (not program) tests.

License

The final step is to apply for the actual license on Form 302 ("Application for New Broadcast Station License"), or Form 341 (for noncommercial educational stations), Form 344 (for TV boosters), or Form 347 (for TV translators). Applicants must show compliance with all terms, conditions and obligations set forth in the original application and the construction permit. Not until he applies for a license can the holder of a construction permit request authority to conduct program tests. The license application form provides a space for program test request, or it can be made separately. A station license and program test authority are issued if no new cause or circumstance has come to the attention of the commission that would make operation of the station contrary to public interest.

Renewal of License

Applicants for renewal of station licenses must show that they have operated according to the terms of their authorizations and the promises they made in obtaining them. Renewal applications are made on Form 303 ("Application for Renewal of Broadcast Station License"), except that noncommercial educational licensees use Form 342; TV boosters Form 345, and TV translators Form 348. Pending the disposition of any commission hearing or other proceeding involving license renewal or revocation considerations the station continues to operate even though its license term may have expired.

Sales and Transfers

If the holder of a construction permit or license desires to assign the same to someone else, he makes application on Form 314 ("Application for Consent to Assignment of Radio Broadcast Station Construction Permit or License"). Should the permittee or licensee wish to transfer corporate control, he applies on Form 315 ("Application for Consent to Transfer Control of Corporation Holding Radio Broadcast Station Construction Permit or License"). Form 316 ("Application for Assignment or Transfer—Short Form") may be used when the transfer or assignment involves no substantial change in interest. Sale of stations held less than three years are subject to hearing except in case of death, hardship or other mitigating circumstances beyond the licensee's control.

Construction Changes

Applicants for authority to make construction changes in existing stations make application on the same form used in applying for a construction permit for the type of station involved.

Application Fees

Since March 17, 1964, the commission has exacted fees for most application filings. This is to comply with government policy to charge for certain federal services. The fee for broadcast applications for construction permits for new stations, major changes in existing stations, license renewals, assignment of license or transfer of control (exclusive of FCC Form 316), is $75 for AM and FM stations, $150 for TV stations, and $10 for translators. Applicants using FCC Form 316 (the short form for transfer or assignment involving no substantial change in interest) pay $30, except translators and auxiliaries (for which there is no fee). A charge of $30 is made for applications to change broadcast station call letters. The fee for other broadcast applications is $30. Fees are not required for applications filed by tax-exempt organizations for operating noncommercial educational broadcast stations, whether or not such operation is on frequencies reserved for noncommercial educational use.

Printed Rules

The Commission does not furnish copies of its rules. But copies are sold in printed form by the Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C. 20402. The rules on FCC practices and procedures are contained in Volume I, which is available at the Government Printing Office for $2.50 a copy; the broadcast rules are contained in Volume III, the price of which is $4.50. Orders should be sent to the Government Printing Office direct (not through the FCC). The printed rules are sold on a subscription basis, which entitles the purchaser to receive subsequent amendments to the rule part purchased until an overall revised printing is necessary.

FCC Rules Regulating Radio-Television

(Selected sections amended to Sept. 1, 1966. Compiled with the cooperation of Pike & Fischer Inc., publisher of Pike & Fischer Radio Regulation.)

ALLOCATIONS AND DEFINITIONS

In am rules . . .

§73.1 Standard broadcast station.—The term "standard broadcast station" means a broadcasting station licensed for the transmission of radio-telephone emissions primarily intended to be received by the general public and operated on a channel in the band 535-1605 kilocycles.

§73.2 Standard broadcast band.—The term "standard broadcast band" means the band of frequencies extending from 535-1605 kilocycles.

§73.3 Standard broadcast channel.—The term "standard broadcast channel" means the band of frequencies occupied by the carrier and two side bands of a broadcast signal with the carrier frequency at the center. Channels shall be designated by their assigned carrier frequencies. The 107 carrier frequencies assigned to standard broadcast stations shall begin at 540 kilocycles and be in successive steps of 10 kilocycles.

§73.4 Dominant station.—The term "dominant station" means a Class I station, as defined in §73.21, operating on a clear channel.

§73.5 Secondary station.—The term "secondary station" means any station except a Class I station operating on a clear channel.

§73.6 Daytime.—The term "daytime" means that period of time between local sunrise and local sunset.

§73.7 Nighttime.—The term "nighttime" means that period of time between local sunset and 12 midnight local standard time.

§73.8 Sunrise and sunset.—The term "sunrise and sunset" means for each particular location and during any particular month, the time of sunrise and sunset as specified in the instrument of authorization.

§73.9 Broadcast day.—The term "broadcast day" means that period of time between local sunrise and 12 midnight local standard time.

§73.10 Experimental period.—The term "experimental period" means that time between 12 midnight and local sunrise. This period may be used for experimental purposes in testing and maintaining apparatus by the licensee of any standard broadcast station on its assigned frequency and with its authorized power, provided no interference is caused to other stations maintaining a regular operating schedule within such period. No station licensed for "daytime" or "specified hours" of operation may broadcast any regular or scheduled program during this period.

§73.11 Service areas.—(a) The term "primary service area" of a broadcast station means the area in which the ground wave is not subject to objectionable interference or objectionable fading.

(b) The term "secondary service area" of a broadcast station means the area served by the sky wave and not subject to objectionable interference. The signal is subject to intermittent variations in intensity.

(c) The term "intermittent service area" of a broadcast station means the area receiving service from the ground wave but beyond the primary service area and subject to some interference and fading.

§73.12 Portable transmitter.—The term "portable transmitter" means a transmitter so constructed that it may be moved about conveniently from place to place, and is in fact so moved about from time to time, but not ordinarily used while in motion. In the standard broadcast band, such a transmitter is used in making field intensity measurements for locating a transmitter site for a standard broadcast station. A portable broadcast station will not be licensed in the standard broadcast band for regular transmission of programs intended to be received by the public.

§73.13 Auxiliary transmitter.—The term "auxiliary transmitter" means a transmitter maintained only for transmitting the regular programs of a station in case of failure of the main transmitter.

Allocations—(am)

§73.21 Classes of standard broadcast channels and stations.

(a) Clear channel. A clear channel is one on which the dominant station or stations render service over wide areas, and which are cleared of objectionable interference within their primary service areas and over all or a substantial portion of their secondary service areas. Stations operating on these channels are classified as follows:

(1) Class I station. A Class I station is a dominant station operating on a clear channel and designed to render primary and secondary service over an extended area and at relatively long distances. Its primary service area is free from objectionable interference from other stations on the same and adjacent channels, and its secondary service area free from interference except from stations on adjacent channels, and from stations on the same channel in accordance with the channel designation in §73.25 or 73.182. The operating power shall not be less than 10 kilowatts nor more than 50 kilowatts. (Also see §73.25[a] for further power limitation.)

(2) Class II station. A Class II station is a secondary station which operates on a clear channel (see §73.25) and is designed to render service over a primary service area which is limited by and subject to such interference as may be received from Class I stations. Whenever necessary a Class II station shall use a directional antenna or other means to avoid interference with Class I stations and with other Class II stations, in accordance with §73.182 (and §73.22 in the case of Class II-A stations). Class II stations are divided into three groups:

(i) Class II-A station. A Class II-A station is an unlimited time Class II station operating on one of the clear channels listed in §73.22 and assigned to a community within a state specified in the Table contained in that section. A Class II-A station shall operate with power of not less than 10 kilowatts nighttime nor more than 50 kilowatts at any time.

(ii) Class II-B station. A Class II-B station is an unlimited time Class II station other than those included in Class II-A. A Class II-B station shall operate with power not less than 0.25 kilowatts nor more than 50 kilowatts.

NOTE: The Class II station operating unlimited time on 760 kc at San Diego and the Class II station operating unlimited time on 750 kc at Anchorage, Alaska, shall be limited to a power of 10 kw. Both stations shall protect the I-A station on the same frequency to its 0.5 mv/m 50% skywave contour.

(iii) Class II-D station. A Class II-D station is a Class II station operating daytime or limited time. A Class II-D station shall operate with power not less than 0.25 kilowatts nor more than 50 kilowatts.

(b) Regional channel. A regional channel is one on which several stations may operate with powers not in excess of 5 kilowatts. The primary service area of a station operating on any such channel may be limited to a given field intensity contour as a consequence of interference.

(1) Class III station. A Class III station is a station which operates on a regional channel and is designed to render service primarily to a principal center of population and the rural area contiguous thereto. Class III stations are subdivided into two classes.

(i) Class III-A station. A Class III-A station is a Class III station which operates with power not less than 1 kilowatt nor more than 5 kilowatts and the service area of which is subject to interference in accordance with §73.182.

(ii) Class III-B station. A Class III-B station is a Class III station which operates with power not less than 0.5 kilowatt, nor more than 1 kilowatt night and 5 kilowatts daytime, and the service area of which is subject to interference in accordance with §73.182.

(c) Local channel. A local channel is one on which several stations operate with powers no greater than provided in this paragraph. The primary service area of a station operating on any such channel may be limited to a given field intensity contour as a consequence of interference. Such stations operate with power no greater than 250 watts nighttime, and power daytime no greater than 1 kilowatt (or no greater than 250 watts if the station is located 100 kilometers [62 miles] or closer to the Mexican border, or in the area of the state of Florida south of 28 degrees north latitude and between 80 and 82 degrees west longitude).

(1) Class IV station. A Class IV station is a station operating on a local channel and designed to render service primarily to a city or town and the suburban and rural areas contiguous thereto. The power of a station of this class shall not be less than 0.25 kilowatt, and not more than 0.25 kilowatt nighttime and 1 kilowatt daytime, and its service area is subject to interference in accordance with §73.182. Stations which are licensed to operate with 100 watts day or night may continue to do so.

NOTE 1: Under NARBA the power ceiling for Class IV stations is 250 watts daytime as well as nighttime. The U.S.-Mexican Agreement permits such stations to operate with up to 1 kilowatt power daytime if they are located further than 100 kilometers [62 miles] from the Mexican border. Pursuant to the U.S.-Mexican Agreement and informal coordination with the other NARBA signatories, the Commission will consider applications for Class IV stations on local channels with daytime powers more than 250 watts, up to 1 kilowatt, if such station is to be located outside of the areas specified in paragraph (c) of this section, and if no objectionable interference would be caused (under the standards set forth in the pertinent international agreement) to a duly notified station in Mexico, Haiti, or any foreign country signatory to NARBA.

NOTE 2: All authorizations of new or changed Class I-B, Class II-B, Class II-D, Class III or Class IV facilities after October 30, 1961, are subject to whatever interference may be received from, or whatever overlap of 2.0 mv/m and 25 mv/m groundwave contours or overlap of 25 mv/m groundwave contours may be involved with previously or subsequently authorized Class II-A facilities.

§73.22 Assignment of Class II-A stations.

(a) Table of assignments. One Class II-A station may be assigned on each channel listed in the following table within the designated state or states:

| Channel (kc) | Existing Class I Station | State(s) in which Class II-A Assignment may be Applied for |
|--------------|--------------------------|--|

(b) Minimum service to "white" areas. No Class II-A station shall be assigned unless at least 25% of its nighttime interference-free service area or at least 25% of the population residing therein receives no other interference-free nighttime primary service.

(c) Power. Class II-A stations shall operate with not less than 10 kw power nighttime.

(d) Protection. (1) Protection by Class II-A stations to other stations. The co-channel Class I-A station shall be protected by the Class II-A station to its 0.1 mv/m contour daytime and its 0.5 mv/m 50% skywave contour nighttime. All other stations of any class authorized on or before October 30, 1961, shall normally receive protection from objectionable interference from Class II-A stations as provided in §73.182.

(2) Protection to Class II-A stations. A Class II-A station shall normally receive daytime protection to its 0.5 mv/m groundwave contour and nighttime protection to the contour to which it is limited by the co-channel Class I-A station.

(e) Applications not complying with this section. Applications for Class II-A stations which do not meet the requirements of paragraphs (b) and (c) of this section will be returned without further consideration.

§73.23 Time of operation of the several classes of stations.—The several classes of standard broadcast stations may be licensed to operate in accordance with the following:

(a) "Unlimited time" permits operation without a maximum limit as to time.

(b) "Limited time" is applicable to class II (secondary) stations operating on a clear channel with facilities authorized before Nov. 30, 1959. It permits operation of the secondary station during daytime, and until local sunset if located west of the dominant station on the channel, or if located east thereof, until sunset at the dominant station; and in addition during night hours, if any, not used by the dominant station or stations on the channel.

(c) Daytime permits operation during the hours between average monthly local sunrise and average monthly local sunset. Daytime stations operating on local channels with a power of 0.25 kw may, upon notification to the Commission and to the Engineer in Charge of the radio district in which they are located, operate at hours beyond those specified in their license.

(d) "Sharing time" permits operation during hours which are so restricted by the station license as to require a division of time with one or more other stations using the same channel.

(e) Specified hours means that the exact operating hours are specified in the license. (The minimum hours that any station shall operate are specified in §73.71.) Specified hours stations operating on local channels with a power of 0.25 kw, except those sharing time with other stations may, upon notification to the Commission and the Engineer in Charge of the radio district in which they are located, operate at hours beyond those specified in their license.

§73.24 Broadcast facilities; showing required.—An authorization for a new standard broadcast station or increase in facilities of an existing station will be issued only after a satisfactory showing has been made in regard to the following, among others:

(a) That the proposed assignment will tend to effect a fair, efficient and equitable distribution of radio service among the several states and communities.

(b) (1) That a proposed new daytime station (or change in frequency of an existing daytime station) complies with the standards of station separation set forth in §73.37.

(2) That a proposed change in daytime facilities (other than a change in frequency or a Class IV station increasing daytime power) does not involve overlap of contours prohibited by §73.37 with any other station in any area where there is not already such overlap between the two stations.

(3) That a proposed new nighttime operation or change in frequency of any existing nighttime operation (except Class IV stations) would (i) not cause objectionable interference to any existing station (see §73.182(o)); and (ii) provided a first primary AM service to at least 25 percent of the area within the proposed interference free nighttime service area.

(4) That a proposed change in nighttime facilities (other than a change in frequency) would not cause objectionable interference to any other station (see §73.182(o)).

NOTE: The preceding provisions of this paragraph (b) shall not be applied to applications for new Class II-A stations or to applications accepted for filing before July 13, 1964. With respect to such applications, a showing must be made that:

(a) Objectionable interference will not be caused to existing stations or that, if interference will be caused, the need for the proposed service outweighs the need for the service which will be lost by reason of such interference. (For special provisions concerning interference from Class

II-A stations to stations of other classes authorized after October 30, 1961, see Note 2 to §73.21 and §73.22(d). For determining objectionable interference, see §73.182 and §73.186.)

(b) The proposed station will not suffer interference to such an extent that its service would be reduced to an unsatisfactory degree.

(c) That the applicant is financially qualified to construct and operate the proposed station.

(d) That the applicant is legally qualified. That the applicant (or the person or persons in control of an applicant corporation or other organization) is of good character and possesses other qualifications sufficient to provide a satisfactory public service.

(e) That the technical equipment proposed, the location of the transmitter, and other technical phases of operation comply with the regulations governing the same, and the requirements of good engineering practice. (See technical regulations of this subpart and §73.188.)

(f) That the facilities sought are subject to assignment as requested under existing international agreements and the rules and regulations of the Commission.

(g) That the population within the 1 m/v contour does not exceed 1.0 per cent of the population within the 25 mv/m contour: Provided, however, that where the number of persons within the 1 m/v contour is 300 or less the provisions of this subparagraph are not applicable.

(h) That, in the case of an application for a class II station, the proposed station would radiate, during two hours following local sunrise and two hours preceding local sunset, in any direction toward the 0.1 mv/m ground-wave contour of a co-channel United States Class I station, no more than the maximum radiation values permitted under the provisions of §73.187.

(i) That, in the case of an application for a Class II-A station (see §73.22), 25% or more of the area or population within the nighttime interference-free service contour of the proposed station receives no nighttime interference-free primary service from another station.

(j) That the public interest, convenience and necessity will be served through the operation under the proposed assignment.

§73.25 Clear channels: Classes I and II stations.—The frequencies in the following tabulations are designated as clear channels and assigned for use by the classes of stations given:

(a) On each of the following channels, one Class I station will be assigned, operating with power of 50 kw: 640, 650, 660, 670, 700, 720, 750, 760, 780, 820, 830, 840, 870, 880, 890, 1020, 1030, 1040, 1100, 1120, 1160, 1180, 1200 and 1210 kc. In addition, on the channels listed in this paragraph, Class II stations may be assigned as follows:

(1) On 670, 720, 780, 880, 890, 1020, 1030, 1100, 1120, 1180 and 1210 kc, one Class II-A unlimited time station, assigned and located pursuant to the provisions of §73.22.

(2) On the channel 750 kc, an unlimited time Class II station located at Anchorage.

(3) On the channel 760 kc, an unlimited time Class II station located at San Diego.

(4) On any of the channels listed in this paragraph (to the extent consistent with the assignments provided in subparagraphs [1], [2], and [3] of this paragraph), unlimited time Class II stations located in Alaska, Hawaii, Virgin Islands, or Puerto Rico, which will not deliver more than 5 microvolts per meter groundwave day or night or microvolts per meter 10 percent time skywave at night at any point within the continental limits of the United States excluding Alaska.

(5) On any of the channels listed in this paragraph (to the extent consistent with the Class I, Class II-A, and Anchorage and San Diego, Class II assignments provided in this paragraph, and, in the case of limited time stations, subject to the restrictions contained in §73.38), limited time and daytime only stations, as follows:

(i) In Alaska, Hawaii, Puerto Rico and Virgin Islands.

(ii) Within the continental United States excluding Alaska, where the station would operate with facilities authorized as of October 30, 1961.

NOTE 1: In view of special circumstances arising from the provision of pre-sunrise broadcast service on 640 kc at Ames, Iowa, applications will be accepted for broadcast operations on 640 kc between 6:00 a.m. central standard time and local sunrise at Ames, Iowa, with not to exceed 1 kw power: Provided, that such applications will be acted upon only after and in light of the decision reached in Docket No. 11290.

FCC RULES

NOTE 2: In view of special circumstances arising from the provision of a service during some nighttime hours by a Class II station operating on 830 kc at New York, N. Y., (i.e. from 6:00 a.m. to local sunrise and from sunset at Minneapolis to 10:00 p.m. E.S.T.), applications will be accepted for such operation: Provided, that they will be acted upon only after and in light of the decision reached in Docket No. 11227.

NOTE 3: On the frequency 770 kc, two Class I stations may be assigned.

NOTE 4: See NARBA concerning priority for Canadian Class I-B and Cuban I-C assignments on 640 kc.

NOTE 5: See NARBA concerning Cuban Class II-E assignments on 660, 670, 760, 780, 830, 1020, 1030 and 1120 kc.

NOTE 6: See U.S.-Mexican Agreement concerning Mexican use of 660, 760 and 830 kc.

(b) To each of the following channels there may be assigned Class I and Class II stations: 630, 710, 810, 850, 940, 1000, 1060, 1070, 1080, 1090, 1110, 1130, 1140, 1170, 1190, 1500, 1510, 1520, 1530, 1540, 1550 and 1560 kilocycles.

NOTE 1: See NARBA and the U.S.-Mexican Agreement concerning a Cuban Class II-E assignment on, and Mexican use of, 1030 kc.

NOTE 2: Class I and Class II stations on 1540 kc shall deliver not over 5 microvolts per meter groundwave or 25 microvolts per meter 10 percent time skywave at any point of land in the Bahama Islands, and such stations operating nighttime (i.e., sunset to sunrise at the location of the Class II station) shall be located not less than 850 miles from the nearest point of land in the Bahama Islands.

(c) For Class II stations which will not deliver over 5 microvolts per meter groundwave or 25 microvolts per meter 10 percent time skywave at any point on the Canadian border, and provided that such station operating nighttime (i.e. sunset to sunrise at the location of the Class II station) are located not less than 650 miles from the nearest point on the Canadian border, 690, 740, 860, 990, 1010, and 1580 kilocycles.

NOTE: See NARBA concerning priority for Cuban Class I-B assignment on 1010 kcs, Class I-C assignments on 690 and 860 kcs, and Class I-D assignment on 740 kcs.

(d) The frequencies 730, 800, 900, 1050, 1220 and 1570 kilocycles, for Class II stations which operate daytime only, which will not deliver at any point on the Mexican border over 5 microvolts per meter groundwave, and which operate with no more than the following powers:

(1) If not located within the areas specified in subparagraph (2) of this paragraph, 5 kilowatts.

(2) If operating on any of the following frequencies within the following specified areas, no more than one kilowatt:

(i) 800 kcs: less than 1319 kilometers (820 miles) from Ciudad Juarez, Chihuahua.

(ii) 1050 kcs: less than 998 kilometers (620 miles) from Monterrey, Nuevo Leon.

(iii) 1570 kcs: less than 998 kilometers (620 miles) from Ciudad Acuna, Coahuila.

NOTE: See the U.S./Mexican Agreement concerning specific U.S. unlimited time Class II assignments on each of the following channels: 730, 800, 900, 1050 and 1220 kcs.

(e) The frequency 540 kilocycles, for Class II stations which will not deliver a signal of more than 5 microvolts per meter groundwave or 25 microvolts per meter 10% skywave at any point on the Canadian border, nor more than 10 microvolts per meter daytime or 50 microvolts per meter nighttime at any point on the Mexican border: Provided, that stations operating at night shall be located:

(1) Within the continental United States including Alaska; and

(2) Not less than 650 miles from the nearest point on the Canadian border; and

(3) North of the parallel 35° N. if west of the meridian 93° W., or north of the parallel 30° N. if east of said meridian.

NOTE: See §2.106 (a) of this chapter with respect to use of 540 kcs.

§73.26 Regional channels: Classes III-A and III-B stations.—The following frequencies are designated as regional channels and are assigned for use by class III-A and III-B stations: 550, 560, 570, 580, 590, 600, 610, 620, 630, 790, 910, 920, 930, 950, 960, 970, 980, 1150, 1250, 1260, 1270, 1280, 1290, 1300, 1310, 1320, 1330, 1350, 1360, 1370, 1380, 1390, 1410, 1420, 1430, 1440, 1460, 1470, 1480, 1590, and 1600 kilocycles.

NOTE: See NARBA concerning Cuban Class I-C assignment on 550 kc, Class I-D assignments on 570, 590, 630, 920, 950 and 980 kcs, and Class III-E assignments on 790, 910 and 1150 kcs.

§73.27 Local channels: Class IV stations.—The following frequencies are designated as local channels and are assigned for use by class IV stations: 1230, 1240, 1400, 1450, and 1490 kilocycles.

NOTE: See NARBA concerning Cuban Class IV-E assignments on 1240 and 1340 kcs.

§73.28 Assignment of stations to channels.—(a) With respect to applications for new Class II-A stations, and other applications accepted for filing before July 13, 1964, the individual assignments of stations to channels which may cause interference to other United States stations only shall be made in accordance with the provisions of this part for the respective classes of stations involved. (For determining objectionable interference, see §§73.22, and 73.182 through 73.186.)

(b) Except as provided in §73.21(c) concerning Class IV stations, no assignment of a standard broadcast station will be made which would be inconsistent with the provisions of NARBA or the U.S./Mexican Agreement. Similarly, as long as protection for U.S. assignments from Haitian assignments continues, no U.S. assignment of a standard broadcast station will be made which would cause objectionable interference (under the standards set forth in NARBA) to a duly notified Haitian station. (The Haitian stations considered to be duly notified are those notified and accepted in accordance with past agreements, and those subsequently notified in accordance with the procedures and understandings which have pertained thus far.) In all cases where an individual assignment may cause interference with, or may involve a channel assigned for priority of use by, a station in another North American country, the classifications, allocation requirements, and engineering standards set forth in NARBA and the U.S./Mexican Agreement shall be observed.

NOTE: In general, an application for a standard broadcast station assignment, the grant of which would be consistent with the provisions of NARBA and the U.S./Mexican Agreement and would not cause objectionable interference to a duly notified station in Haiti, will be considered and acted upon by the Commission in accordance with its rules and established procedure for action upon such applications. However, in particular cases, such applications may also present considerations of an international nature which require that a different procedure be followed. In such cases the procedure to be followed will be determined by the Commission in the light of the special considerations involved.

With respect to applications for facilities which would involve conflict with NARBA only as to a country which has signed but not completed formal ratification of that agreement, and facilities which would cause objectionable interference to a duly notified Haitian station, special provisions of a procedural nature are contained in §1.352 of this chapter.

(c) Engineering standards now in force domestically differ in some respects from those specified for international purposes. The engineering standards specified for international purposes (in NARBA and the U.S./Mexican Agreement) will be used to determine: (1) the extent to which interference might be caused by a proposed station in the United States to a station in another country of the North American Region; and (2) whether the United States should register an objection to any new or changed assignment notified by another country of the North American Region. The domestic standards in effect in the United States will be used to determine the extent to which interference exists or would exist from a foreign station where the value of such interference enters into a calculation of: (1) the service to be rendered by a proposed operation in the United States; or (2) the permissible interfering signal from one station in the United States to another United States station.

(d) With respect to applications for new Class II-A stations, and other applications accepted for filing before July 13, 1964, the following shall apply: Upon showing that a need exists, a Class II, III, or IV station may be assigned to a channel available for such class, even though interference will be received within its normally protected contour, subject to the following conditions: (1) No objectionable interference will be caused by the proposed station to existing stations or that if interference will be caused, the need for the proposed service outweighs the need for the service which will be lost by reason of such interference; (2) Primary service will be provided to the community in which the proposed station is to be located; (3) The interference received does not affect more than 10 percent of the population in the proposed station's normally protected primary service area; however, in the event that the nighttime interference received by a proposed Class II or III station would exceed this amount, then an assignment may be made if the proposed station would provide either a standard broadcast nighttime facility to a community not having such a facility or if 25 percent or more of the nighttime primary service area of the proposed station is without primary nighttime service. This subparagraph (3) shall not apply to existing Class IV stations on local channels applying for an increase in power above 250 watts, nor to new Class IV stations proposing power in excess of 250 watts with respect to population in the primary service area outside the equivalent 250 watt, 0.5 mv/m contour.

§73.29 Class IV stations on regional channels.—No license will be granted for the operation of a class IV station on a regional channel, provided, however, that class IV stations presently authorized to operate on regional channels will not be required to change frequency or power but will not be protected against interference from class III stations.

In FM rules . . .

§73.201. Numerical designation of fm broadcast channels.—For convenience, the frequencies available for fm broadcasting (including those assigned to noncommercial educational broadcasting) are given numerical designations which are shown in the table below:

EDITOR'S NOTE: [The band is 88-108 mc. Noncommercial educational fm occupies 88-92 mc.]

§73.202. Table of Assignments.—(a) General. The following Table of Assignments contains the channels (other than noncommercial educational channels) assigned to the listed communities in the United States, its territories and possessions. Channels designated with an "A" are for Class A FM stations. All other listed channels are for Class B stations in Zones I and I-A and for Class C stations in Zone II.

[EDITOR'S NOTE: Channel assignments by cities are reprinted in the AM-FM directory and are not repeated here.]

§73.203. Availability of channels.—(a) Subject to the provisions of paragraph (b) of this section, applications may be filed to construct FM broadcast stations in the 48 contiguous states only on the channels assigned in the Table of Assignments (§73.202(b)) only in communities listed therein. Applications which fail to comply with this requirement, whether or not accompanied by a petition to amend the Table, will not be accepted for filing; provided, however, that applications specifying channels which accord with publicly announced Commission orders changing the Table of Assignments will be accepted for filing even though such applications are tendered before the effective dates of such channel changes.

(b) A channel assigned to a community listed in the Table of Assignments is available upon application in any unlisted community which is located within 25 miles of the listed community. Where channels are assigned to two or more communities listed in combination in the Table of Assignments the provisions of this paragraph shall apply separately to each community so listed. The distance between communities shall be determined by the distance between the respective coordinates thereof as set forth in the publication of the United States Department of Commerce entitled "Air Line Distance Between Cities in the United States." (This publication may be purchased from the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C. 20402). If said publication does not contain the coordinates of either or both communities, the coordinates of the main post office in either or both of the communities shall be used. The method to be followed in making the measurements is set forth in §73.208(b).

§73.204. International agreements and other restrictions on use of channels.

(a) Authorizations issued by the Commission for fm broadcast facilities will be subject to the provisions of any agreements entered into by the United States with Canada concerning fm assignments and authorizations. The Commission may decide after consultation with Canada that an application should not be granted; or if, pursuant to an agreement providing for timely objection after grant, Canada files such objection, the Commission may on its own motion set aside the grant pending consideration. The Commission will give notice of the filing of such objections.

(b) The frequency 89.1 mcs (ch. 206) is reserved in the New York City metropolitan area for the use of the United Nations with the equivalent of an antenna height of 500 feet above average terrain and effective radiated power of 20 kilowatts, and the Commission will make no assignments which would cause objectionable interference with such use.

(c) In Alaska, the frequency band 88-100 mcs is allocated exclusively to government radio services and the nongovernment fixed service. The frequencies 88.1 through 99.9 mcs (chs. 201 through 260) will not be assigned in Alaska for use by fm broadcast stations.

(d) In Hawaii, the frequency band 98-108 mcs is allocated for nonbroadcast use. The frequencies 98.1 through 107.9 mcs (chs. 251 through 300) will not be assigned in Hawaii for use by fm broadcast stations.

§73.205. Zones.

For the purpose of allocation and assignment, the United States is divided into three zones as follows:

(a) Zone I consists of that portion of the United States located within the confines of the following lines drawn on the United States Albers Equal Area Projection Map (based on standard parallels 29½° and 45½°; North American datum): Beginning at the most easterly point on the State boundary line between North Carolina and Virginia; thence in a straight line to a point on the Virginia, West Virginia boundary line located at North Latitude 37° 49' and West Longitude 80° 12' 30"; thence westerly along the southern boundary lines of the States of West Virginia, Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois to a point at the junction of the Illinois, Kentucky, and Missouri State boundary lines; thence northerly along the western boundary line of the State of Illinois to a point at the junction of the Illinois, Iowa, and Wisconsin State boundary lines; thence easterly along the northern State boundary line of Illinois to the 90th meridian; thence north along this meridian to the 43.5° parallel; thence east along the parallel to the United States-Canada border; thence southerly and following that border until it again intersects the 43.5° parallel; thence east along this parallel to the 71st meridian; thence in a straight line to the intersection of the 69th meridian and the 45th parallel; thence east along the 45th parallel to the Atlantic Ocean. When any of the above lines pass through a city, the city shall be considered to be located in Zone I. (See Figure 1 of §73.699 [in complete copy of Rules]).

(b) Zone IA consists of Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and that portion of the State of California which is located south of the 40th parallel.

(c) Zone II consists of Alaska, Hawaii and the rest of the United States which is not located in either Zone I or Zone IA.

§73.206. Classes of commercial channels, and stations operating thereon.

(a) Class A channels and stations.
 (1) Except as provided in §73.202, the following frequencies are designated as Class A channels and are assigned for use, in all zones, by Class A stations only:

| Frequency (mc) | Channel No. | Frequency (mc) | Channel No. |
|----------------|-------------|----------------|-------------|
| 92.1           | 221         | 100.1          | 261         |
| 92.7           | 224         | 100.9          | 265         |
| 93.5           | 228         | 101.7          | 269         |
| 94.3           | 232         | 102.3          | 272         |
| 95.3           | 237         | 103.1          | 276         |
| 95.9           | 240         | 103.9          | 280         |
| 96.7           | 244         | 104.9          | 285         |
| 97.7           | 249         | 105.5          | 288         |
| 98.3           | 252         | 106.3          | 292         |
| 99.3           | 257         | 107.1          | 296         |

(2) A Class A station is a station which operates on a Class A channel, and is designed to render service to a relatively small community, city, or town, and the surrounding rural area.

(3) A Class A station will not be authorized to operate with effective radiated power greater than 3 kilowatts (4.8 dbk), and the coverage of a Class A station shall not exceed that obtained from 3 kilowatts effective radiated power and antenna height about average terrain of 300 feet. For provisions concerning minimum facilities, and concerning reduction in power where antenna height above average terrain exceeds 300 feet, see §73.211.

(b) Class B-C channels and Class B and Class C stations.

(1) Except for the channels specified in paragraph (a) (1) of this section, all of the channels listed in §73.201 from 222 through 300 (92.3 through 107.9 mcs) are classified as Class B-C channels, and (subject to the restrictions set forth in §73.204) are assigned for use in Zones I and I-A by Class B stations only, and for use in Zone II by Class C stations only (there are no Class C stations in Zones I or I-A and no Class B stations in Zone II).

(2) A Class B station is a station which operates on a Class B-C channel in Zone I or Zone I-A, and is designed to render service to a sizable community, city, or town, or to the principal city or cities of an urbanized area, and to the surrounding area.

(3) With respect to Class B stations authorized after September 10, 1962, no such station will be authorized with effective radiated power greater than 50 kilowatts (17 dbk), and the coverage of a Class B station authorized after that date shall not exceed that obtained from 50 kilowatts effective radiated power and 500 feet antenna height above average terrain. For provisions concerning minimum power, and concerning reduction in power where antenna height above average terrain exceeds 500 feet, see §73.211.

(4) A Class C station is a station which operates on a Class B-C channel in Zone II, and is designed to render service to a community, city, or town, and large surrounding area.

(5) With respect to Class C stations authorized after September 10, 1962, no such station will be authorized with effective radiated power greater than 100 kilowatts (20 dbk), and the coverage of a Class C station authorized after that date shall not exceed that obtained from 100 kilowatts effective radiated power and antenna height above average terrain of 2,000 feet. For provisions concerning minimum power, and reduction in power where antenna height above average terrain exceeds 2,000 feet, see §73.211.

§73.207. Minimum mileage separations between co-channel and adjacent-channel stations on commercial channels.

(a) Petitions to amend the Table of Assignments (§73.202(b)) (other than those expressly requesting amendment of this section or §73.205) will be dismissed and no application for a new station, change in the channel of an existing station, or increase in antenna height or effective radiated power, or change in location of an existing station will be accepted for filing unless the proposed facilities will be located at least as far from the transmitter sites of other co-channel and adjacent-channel stations (both existing and proposed) as the distances specified in this paragraph. Proposed stations of the respective classes shown in the left-hand column of the table (below) shall be located no less than the distance shown from co-channel stations and first adjacent-channel stations (200 kc/s removed) and second and third adjacent-channel stations (400 and 600 kc/s removed) of the classes shown in the remaining columns of the table. The distances shown between stations of different classes apply regardless of which is the proposed station under consideration (e.g., distances shown from a new Class A station to an existing Class C station are also the distances between a new Class C and an existing Class A station.) The distances between Class B and Class C stations apply only across zone lines. The adjacent-channel spacings listed also apply: (1) To applications for non-commercial educational facilities on channels 218, 219, or 220, with respect to other stations on channels 221, 222, or 223; (2) to applications for facilities on channels 221, 222, or 223 with respect to non-commercial educational stations on channels 218, 219, or 220 (for classification of noncommercial educational stations, see §73.504).

(b) The zone in which the transmitter of an fm station is located or proposed to be located determines the applicable rules with respect to minimum required spacings.

§73.209. Protection from interference.

(a) Permittees and licensees of fm broadcast stations are not protected from any interference which may be caused by the grant of a new station, or of authority to modify the facilities of an existing station, in accordance with the provisions of the subpart.

(b) The nature and extent of the protection from interference accorded to FM broadcast stations is limited solely to the protection which results from the minimum assignment and station separation requirements and the rules with respect to maximum powers and antenna heights set forth in this subpart.

§73.211. Power and antenna height requirements.

(a) Minimum requirements.
 (1) Except as provided in paragraph (b) (2) of this section, the minimum effective radiated power shall be:

|         |                     |
|---------|---------------------|
| Class A | 100 watts (—10 dbk) |
| Class B | 5 kw (7 dbk)        |
| Class C | 25 kw (14 dbk)      |

(2) No minimum antenna height above average terrain is specified.

(b) Maximum power and antenna height.
 (1) The maximum effective radiated power in any direction, and maximum antenna height for equivalence purposes, shall be as follows for the various classes of stations:

|         | Maximum power     | Maximum antenna height (feet above average terrain) |
|---------|-------------------|---|
| Class A | 3 kw (4.8 dbk)    | 300   |
| Class B | 50 kw (17.0 dbk)  | 500   |
| Class C | 100 kw (20.0 dbk) | 2,000   |

(2) Antenna heights may be used exceeding those specified in this paragraph for equivalence purposes, provided effective radiated power is reduced in the amount determined by use of the appropriate curves in Figure 3 of §73.333. Where, under Figure 3 of §73.333, effective radiated power must be reduced to an amount less than the normal minimum specified in paragraph (a) (1) of this section for the class of station involved, the effective radiated power determined by Figure 3 of §73.333 shall be the minimum for the station involved.

(3) In Puerto Rico antenna heights may be used up to 2000 feet above average terrain with effective radiated powers up to 25 kw. For antenna heights above 2000 feet the power shall be reduced so that the station's 1 mv/m contour (located pursuant to Figure 1 of §73.333) will be no further from the station's transmitter than with the facilities of 25 kw and antenna height of 2000 feet. For powers above 25 kw (up to 50 kw) no antenna heights will be authorized which result in greater coverage by the 1 mv/m contour than that obtained with the facilities

NOTE: Stations or assignments separated in frequency by 10.6 or 10.8 mc/s (53 or 54 channels) will not be authorized unless they conform to the following separation table:

| Class of Stations | Required Spacing in Miles |
|-------------------|---------------------------|
| A to A            | 5                         |

| C to C            | 30                        |

of 25 kw and antenna height of 2000 feet.

(c) Determination of applicable rules. The zone in which the transmitter of an fm station is located or proposed to be located determines the applicable rules with respect to the class of station, and thus the minimum and maximum requirements as to facilities.

(d) Existing stations. Stations authorized as of September 10, 1962 which do not conform to the requirements of this section, may continue to operate as authorized. For stations operating with facilities in excess of those specified in Paragraph (b) of this section no changes in facilities will be authorized which either increases the effective radiated power or extends the location of the 1 mv/m field strength contour beyond that of its present authorization in any direction. The provisions of this section shall not apply to applications to increase facilities for those stations operating with powers less than the minimum powers specified in paragraph (a) of this section. In TV rules . . .

(b) In Alaska and Hawaii the frequency bands 76-82 mc and 82-88 mc are allocated for nonbroadcast use. These frequency bands (Channels 5 and 6) will not be assigned in Alaska and Hawaii for use by television broadcast stations.

(c) Channel 37, 608-614 mc/s, is not available for assignment prior to January 1, 1974.

ED. NOTE—Subsection (d) withdraws Channel 4 from television broadcast use in Guam.

§73.606. Table of Assignments.—(a) The following Table of Assignments contains the channels assigned to the listed communities in the United States, its Territories, and Possessions. Channels designated with an asterisk are assigned for use by noncommercial educational broadcast stations only. A station on a channel identified by a plus or minus mark is required to operate with its carrier frequencies offset 10 kc above or below, respectively, the normal carrier frequencies.

[EDITOR'S NOTE: Channel assignments by cities are reprinted in the TV station directory and are not repeated here.]

§73.607. Availability of channels.—(a) Subject to the provisions of paragraph (b) of this section, applications may be filed to construct television broadcast stations only on the channels assigned in the Table of Assignments and only in the communities listed therein. Applications which fail to comply with this requirement, whether or not accompanied by a petition to amend the Table, will not be accepted for filing provided, however, that applications specifying channels which accord with publicly announced Commission orders changing the Table of Assignments will be accepted for filing even though such applications are tendered before the effective dates of such channel changes.

(b) A channel assigned to a community listed in the Table of Assignments is available upon application in any unlisted community which is located within 15 miles of the listed community. In addition, a channel assigned to a community listed in the Table of Assignments and not designated for use by noncommercial educational stations only, is available upon application in any other community within 15 miles thereof which, although listed in the table, is assigned only a channel designed for use only by noncommercial educational stations. Where channels are assigned to two or more communities listed in combination in the Table of Assignments the provisions of this paragraph shall apply separately to each community so listed. The distance between communities shall be determined by the distance between the respective coordinates thereof as set forth in the publication of the United States Department of Commerce entitled "Air Line Distances Between Cities in the United States." (This publication may be purchased from the Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C.) If said publication does not contain the coordinates of either or both communities, the coordinates of the main post office in either or both of such communities shall be used. The method to be followed in making the measurements is set forth in §73.611(d).

§73.609. Zones.—(a) For the purpose of allocation and assignment, the United States is divided into three zones as follows:

(1) Zone I consists of that portion of the United States located within the confines of the following lines drawn on the United States Albers Equal Area Projection Map (based on standard parallels 29½° and 45½°; North American datum): Beginning at the most easterly point on the state boundary line between North Carolina and Virginia; thence in a straight line to a point of the Virginia-West Virginia boundary line located at North Latitude 37° 49' and West Longitude 80° 12' 30"; thence westerly along the southern boundary lines of the states of West Virginia, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois to a point at the junction of the Illinois, Kentucky, and Missouri State boundary lines; thence northerly along the western boundary line of the State of Illinois to a point at the junction of the Illinois, Iowa, and Wisconsin state boundary lines; thence easterly along the northern state boundary line of Illinois to the 90th meridian; thence north along this meridian to the 43.5° parallel; thence east along this parallel to the 71st meridian; thence in a straight line to the intersection of the 69th meridian and the 45th parallel; thence east along the 45th parallel to the Atlantic Ocean. When any of the above lines pass through a city, the city shall be considered to be located in Zone I. (See Figure 1 of §73.699.)

(2) Zone II consists of that portion of the United States which is not located in either Zone I or Zone III, and Puerto Rico, Alaska, Hawaiian Islands and the Virgin Islands.

(3) Zone III consists of that portion of the United States located south of a line, drawn on the United States Albers Equal Area Projection Map (based on standard parallels 29½° and 45½°; North American datum), beginning at a point on the east coast of Georgia and the 31st parallel and ending at the United States-Mexican border, consisting of arcs drawn with a 150 mile radius to the north from the following specified points:

| North Latitude | West Longitude |
|----------------|----------------|
| a) 29°40'00"   | 83°24'00"      |
| b) 30°07'00"   | 81°12'00"      |
| c) 30°31'00"   | 86°30'00"      |
| d) 30°48'00"   | 87°58'30"      |
| e) 30°00'00"   | 90°38'30"      |
| f) 30°04'30"   | 93°19'00"      |
| g) 28°46'00"   | 95°05'00"      |
| h) 28°43'00"   | 96°30'30"      |
| i) 27°52'30"   | 97°32'00"      |

When any of the above arcs pass through a city, the city shall be considered to be located in Zone II. (See Figure 2 of §73.699.)

§73.610. Separations.—(a) The provisions of this section relate to assignment separations and station separations. Petitions to amend the Table of Assignments (§73.606(b)) (other than those also expressly requesting amendment of this section or §73.609) will be dismissed and all applications for new television broadcast stations or for changes in the transmitter sites of existing stations will not be accepted for filing if they fail to comply with the requirements specified in paragraphs (b), (c) and (d) of this section.

NOTE: Licensees and permittees of television broadcast stations which were operating on April 14, 1952 pursuant to one or more separations below those set forth in §73.610 may continue to so operate, but in no event may they further reduce the separations below the minimum. As the existing separations of such stations are increased, the new separations will become the required minimum separations until separations are reached which comply with the requirements of §73.610. Thereafter, the provisions of said section shall be applicable.

(b) Minimum co-channel assignment and station separations:

| Zone | Channels 2-13 | Channels 14-83 |
|------|---------------|----------------|
| I    | 170 miles     | 155 miles      |
| II   | 190 miles     | 175 miles      |
| III  | 220 miles     | 205 miles      |

(2) The minimum co-channel mileage separation between a station in one zone and a station in another zone shall be that of the zone requiring the lower separation.

(c) Minimum assignment and station adjacent channel separations applicable to all zones:

| (1) Channels 2-13 | Channels 14-83 |
|-------------------|----------------|
| 60 miles          | 55 miles       |

(2) Due to the frequency spacing which exists between channels 4 and 5, between channels 6 and 7, and between channels 13 and 14, the minimum adjacent channel separations specified above shall not be applicable to these pairs of channels (see §73.603).

(d) In addition to the requirements of paragraphs (a), (b) and (c) of this section, the minimum assignment and station separations between stations on channels 14-83, inclusive, as set forth in Table IV of §73.698 must be met in either rule making proceedings looking towards the amendment of the Table of Assignments (§73.606(b)) or in licensing proceedings. No channel listed in column (1) of Table IV of §73.698 [see below] will be assigned to any city, and no application for an authorization to operate on such a channel will be granted unless the mileage separations indicated at the top of column (2)-(7), inclusive, are met with respect to each of the channels listed in those columns and parallel with the channel in column (1).

(e) The zone in which the transmitter of a television station is located or proposed to be located determines the applicable rules with respect to co-channel mileage separations where the transmitter is located in a different zone from that in which the channel to be employed is located.

§73.614. Power and antenna height requirements.—(a) Minimum requirements. Applications will not be accepted for filing if they specify less than—10 dbk (100 watts) visual effective radiated power in any horizontal direction. No minimum antenna height above average terrain is specified.

(b) Maximum power. Applications will not be accepted for filing if they specify a power in excess of that provided in this paragraph. Except as provided in subparagraph (1) below, the maximum effective radiated powers of television broadcast stations operating on the channels set forth below with antenna heights not in excess of 2000 feet above average terrain shall be as follows:

|--------------|--|
| 2-6          | 20 dbk (100 kw)  |
| 7-13         | 25 dbk (316 kw)  |
| 14-83        | 37 dbk (5000 kw)   |

(1) In Zone I, on Channels 2-13 inclusive, the maximum powers specified above for these channels may be used only with antenna heights not in excess of 1000 feet above average terrain. Where antenna heights exceeding 1000 feet above average terrain are used on Channels 2-13, or antenna heights exceeding 2000 feet above average terrain are used on Channels 14-83, the maximum power shall be based on the chart designated as Figure 3 of §73.699.

NOTE: This limitation shall not apply to any licensee or permittee in Zone I who received an authorization after March 22, 1951, to relocate its transmitter site and construct a new tower and antenna to a height in excess of 1000
