Foreword

In 1990 as the television and video industries continue to undergo vast changes, Quigley Publishing Company celebrates its 75th anniversary of publication under one continuous ownership and management. Completely revised and thoroughly updated annually, the International Television and Video Almanac, since 1955, and its companion volume, the International Motion Picture Almanac, since 1929, have served as indispensable reference tools to the industry, providing the hard data necessary to keep abreast of this constant flux and growth.

This 35th edition of the International Television and Video Almanac features expanded coverage throughout, including the addition of 200 new biographies of emergent filmmakers, actors, exhibitors and video and television executives to the nearly 5000 career profiles in the Who's Who. Also included is a 75th Anniversary history of Quigley Publishing Company.

I wish to thank the following friends and colleagues for generously sharing their expert knowledge: Alvin Marill, David Bartholomew, Roger Christiansen, Jim Tamulis, Larry Cohn, Ernest Cunningham, Mary Ann Grasso, Lloyd Ibert, Alan Barbour, Michael Schau, and most of all Stephen Klain. Thanks also to Robert McDonald, former Almanac editor Richard Gertner, Michelle Mart, George Groneman and Dick Rizzo for their invaluable assistance.

weekly's name was changed in 1928 to the Herald World and then in 1930 to Motion Picture Herald. In that same year Motion Picture Daily was established as the company moved its headquarters from Chicago to New York, becoming one of the first tenants of the new Radio City Music Hall building in Rockefeller Center.

MARTIN QUIGLEY

A major life-long interest of Martin Quigley was fulfilled in his creation in 1929 of the Motion Picture Almanac which he envisioned as an annual focusing on the WHO and WHAT of the entertainment world. His vision became a reality and Motion Picture Almanac has appeared every year since, making it the longest continually published reference book in the entertainment field. It has been extensively revised before each publication.

In 1956 the companion volume Television Almanac was established. In 1987 it was expanded to include the Home Video industry and the title was changed to Television & Video Almanac.

Martin Quigley was in frequent contact with all the pioneers of the film industry. When those who had created the industry and guided it for so many years decided to create a Foundation of the Motion Picture Pioneers, Martin Quigley was a prime mover. During World War II he was a member of the industry's War Activities Executive Committee which coordinated many aspects of the involvement of personnel and companies in the war effort.

As editor-in-chief and publisher Martin Quigley wrote articles from time to time, each of which attracted wide attention both within and outside the industry. He was in daily person-to-person contact with leading producers, major distribution executives and exhibitor leaders in his constant concern for the good reputation of the motion picture industry. At all times he was a champion of decent screen entertainment. He was the originator of the Motion Picture Production Code and the voluntary Motion Picture Production Code Administration. Often he was the liaison between film companies and the Catholic National Legion of Decency.

For a half century Motion Picture Herald was the major international publication of the American film trade. Subscribers were in more than 100 countries. Motion Picture Daily, for an equal period of time, was a prime organ of distribution and exhibition news on an up-to-the-minute basis. The Herald's Managers Round Table Department was sponsor for 40 years of the Quigley Showmanship Awards, the major recognition given theatre managers and independent exhibitors. The Herald's Merchandising Conferences for years promoted better understanding between distributors and leading theatre circuits as well as more effective film advertising and promotion. These Merchandising Conferences were directed by Martin Quigley, Jr.

For many years Quigley Publication's annual FAME was of great importance to the Hollywood community and the press as well as everywhere the status of screen, radio and television personalities was a major interest. Quigley established the annual poll of exhibitors to determine the Top Ten Money Making Stars. This highly regarded poll continues each year, now sponsored by the Motion Picture Almanac.

Economic conditions in the motion picture field in 1970-1972—when the major companies lost more money than in the decade of the Great Depression of the 1930s—forced a drastic curtailment of trade publications. In 1973 Quigley Publishing Company, Inc. suspended its periodicals and put its resources to work expanding and strengthening the Almanacs. In the years since both Almanacs have achieved international reputations as the authoritative source books on the Motion Picture, Television—and since 1987—the Home Video industries.

In the past decade and a half production of the Almanacs has gone through three different computer systems. The current editorial contents are substantially in excess of 20,000,000 characters with a third or more of them revised annually. Each edition builds on the past, all the way back to the periodicals founded 75 years ago. The 1990 editions of the Almanacs owe a great deal to the thousands of editions of Motion Picture Daily, Motion Picture Herald and other early Quigley Publications.

No over-view of the Company and the development of the Almanacs would be complete without credit being given to the earlier editors. The basic Almanac format and policy owe much to Terry Ramsaye, author of "A Million and One Nights," the classic history of the silent screen, and long-time editor of Motion Picture Herald. The subsequent editor, Charles S. Aaronson, carried on the Ramsaye tradition, until 1970. Beginning in 1970 and carrying on through 1987 Richard Gertner vastly improved and expanded the editorial contents. Under him the Almanac covers were changed to their present color coordinated combinations. The present editor, Jane Klain, took over in 1988, with Dick Gertner continuing as a consultant.

By the nature of the publishing industry many more men and women work on various stages of manufacture than on the editorial side. Hence many who played key roles in getting the Company's publications to our readers over these 75 years are unknown to us by name. Yet each of them, living or dead, well deserves a "Thank you" on this 75th Birthday.

MARTIN QUIGLEY, JR.

The Company may well be unique in the entertainment field in that it has had a father and son management over the entire span of three quarters of a century. The Company was founded a few years before the present head was born. Martin Quigley, Jr. joined as a cub reporter at the time his father had been president for 25 years. The younger Quigley served in various capacities: all editorial prior to his leave for four years of World War II; then editorial and management until his father's death in the 50th year with the Company he had founded. Since then Martin Quigley, Jr. has been president for the firm's third quarter of a century.

Looking only to developments in the entertainment field, the period from 1915 to 1990 has seen the following: the shift from shorts to feature length films; the move from silent to sound; black and white to full color; the birth and growth of radio; stereophonic sound and wide screen; magnetic recordings; records of a variety of types; black and white and then color television; satellite transmissions; video tapes; and, lasers. Surely more innovations are on the way!

Films, television and video are united in being different delivery systems bringing living images to the public in theatres and in homes. As in the beginning of screen entertainment, as in 1915, as now, the fundamental to success in any medium is subject matter deemed by the public worth seeing.

As the Company and its Almanacs look ahead to the decade of the 1990s and the 21st Century, all of us are challenged to serve a world wide readership by providing the best possible reference works for the motion picture, television and home video industries.

Martin Quigley, Jr.

The Year in Review

In the 1988-89 television season the share of the primetime audience dominated for so many years by the three major networks—ABC, CBS and NBC—fell three percentage points from the previous season to 61 percent—an all-time low since the A.C. Nielsen Company has been measuring the seasonal results from the early days of the industry.

In contrast the major cable channels—i.e., those covered under the basic monthly cable fee—rose from 20 to 24 percent in audience share control. Cable penetration, Nielsen said, increased seven percentage points over the previous year to 55.6 percent of households with television—a new all-time high. In other words, cable TV is now in more than 50 million of the estimated 90.4 million television households in the U.S.

An all-time low and an all-time high. Thus the battle is joined. What will the commercial networks do to combat the erosion caused by cable (though not exclusively—-independent stations and videocassettes are other factors)? And what will the cable industry do to consolidate and increase its gains?

Primarily the network counter-attack strategy is four-pronged. One program calls for intensified efforts to increase advertising sales. A second calls for new and “innovative” promotional techniques to ensnare the viewing public. A third will be more vigorous attempts to share in the enormous profits to be had from syndication of successful network shows in the independent (as well as network affiliate) station market. The fourth scheme calls for better programming to win back former viewers as well as potential new ones.

The first of these strategies has already met with success. By the end of June, 1989, the three major networks had sold almost 90 percent of their primetime commercial time for the 1989-90 season. Commitments from advertisers—led by a revived interest from automobile manufacturers who increased their TV spending up to 85 percent over 1988-89—were close to $4 billion, up some $700 million from the previous season. Even the newcomer Fox Broadcasting Company tripled its advance sales to $300 million from $100 million the year before. All this means, of course, that the networks will earn more money in 1990 than had earlier been predicted by even the most optimistic industry analysts.

In the promotional department all three networks devised some new (for them) campaigns to spread the word to the public about their wares for 1989-90. Each arranged a tie-in—ranging from posters and buttons to contests and games with big money prizes—with a well-known retail giant. CBS joined with K-Mart; NBC with Sears; and ABC with Pizza Hut, along with a large-scale campaign in 5,000 theatres in the summer of 1989. Some critics thought these efforts to be acts of desperation that would not work too well and would hardly be worth the exorbitant costs. Time will tell whether they will be repeated in 1990.

As for the third strategy—the drive to cash in on the riches to be had from syndication—it is a complex one. Currently an FCC regulation bars the networks from sharing in the profits which go to the companies producing the TV shows (mostly subsidiaries of the major Hollywood studios) that go into syndication after network runs. (Sometimes, as with the current CBS program, “Murder, She Wrote”, long-running shows are syndicated through old episodes while the show is still visible in new ones on network primetime.)

Efforts to get Washington to change the regulation favoring the production companies having been unsuccessful, the networks have adopted a new tactic. They are producing more and more of their own programs.

Of nine new series announced by CBS for 1989-90 two were produced by its own CBS

Entertainment. NBC's in-house production unit supplied two of five new series. Only ABC lagged in this area, although it planned to fill one primetime hour with an entry from its own news division.

Quotas set by the FCC for in-house production by the networks have limited them to five hours a week in primetime. This rule expires, however, in November, 1990, and is not expected to be extended—unless the studios can bring sufficient pressure to bear on Congress. Potentially, then, each network could produce all its primetime programming—thus shutting out the Hollywood studios entirely.

Concerning the fourth network campaign—better programming—that may well be the most difficult task of all. When the shows scheduled for the 1989–90 season were announced in the late spring of 1989, sighs of skepticism went up from many critics. Sitcoms based on families and their relationships again dominated all else.

NBC, in particular, stuck to the mixture as before. Still, well they might since that network finished first in 1988–89 (in the Nielsen rating report) for the fourth straight season. NBC's edge over second-place ABC was the second biggest lead in TV history. (In the 1955–56 season CBS's lead over NBC was slightly larger.) CBS, which had never finished third before the 1987–88 season, suffered the same fate for 1988–89.

In the final tally NBC averaged a 16 rating and a 26 share. (A rating point represents 1 percent of the nation's 90.4 million TV households; the share is the percentage tuned in of sets in use.) ABC averaged a 12.9 rating and 21 share and CBS a 12.6 rating and a 21 share.

NBC's five-year-old "The Cosby Show" finished first in the ratings for the 1988–89 season for the fourth year in a row, making it only the third series ever to hold first place for that long (the others were "Gunsmoke" and "All in the Family"). Finishing a close second was "Roseanne" (ABC), the highest-rated new show of the season. Others in the Top Ten were, in order: "A Different World" (NBC); "Cheers" (NBC); "The Golden Girls" (NBC); "60 Minutes" (CBS); "Who's the Boss?" (ABC); "Murder, She Wrote" (CBS); "Empty Nest" (NBC); and "Anything But Love" (ABC). For "60 Minutes" it was the 12th straight year it finished in the Top Ten. Highest-rated made-for-TV movie was "The Karen Carpenter Story" (CBS).

Two mini-series attracted widespread attention. CBS's eight-hour "Lonesome Dove" was the highest-rated of the season and, in fact, scored the biggest mini-series ratings triumph in five TV seasons. In contrast ABC's much-touted 29 and ½ hours-long "War and Remembrance" was a ratings disappointment to the network. Unlike CBS, which was estimated to have made over $30 million in advertising from "Lonesome Dove," NBC expected eventually to lose up to $40 million on "War and Remembrance." This would make the latter the biggest loss ever recorded by a network on a TV entertainment program. (ABC lost $65 million on the Winter Olympics in 1988.)

The fiasco of "War and Remembrance" stirred speculation that none of the networks would want to make many mini-series in the future, but that later proved not to be the case. Several were scheduled for the new 1989–90 season (including two to run six hours each).

Also noteworthy regarding 1988–89 programming was the resurgence in popularity of the theatrical movie. The highest rated feature film for the season was Paramount's "Beverly Hills Cop" (shown on ABC) which had already been seen on the network once before. The success of this and other theatrical films is credited to better scheduling and improved promotion by the networks.

While cable is viewed as the "enemy" by the Big Three, that is not the case with the new "fourth" network, Fox, which views cable instead as an "ally." This is because 80 percent of Fox's 126 stations are on the UHF dial instead of VHF. UHF's weaker signals are no problem for cable, which delivers all stations with equal force.

When it debuted in 1986, the Fox network was generally viewed as a dubious candidate for survival. In 1988–89, however, it made considerable strides in turning out shows that proved popular with the audience most coveted by advertisers: 18 to 49 year olds. For the 1989–90 season Fox expanded to a third night of primetime (Mondays) and expects to show a profit for the first time in this season.

Meanwhile, what's ahead for cable? In 1988–89 it continued to pose a stronger and stronger threat to the dominance of the Big Three. Advertising revenues again rose sharply and its other major source of income—subscriber fees—were likewise on the increase. (For recent statistics on other aspects of cable, see the section devoted to it in this book.)

Since so few areas in the U.S. remain unwired for cable, the industry's future plans call for signing up the households that have not yet subscribed. (Net growth of cable is now 10,000 homes a day and 300,000 a month.)

For all the rosy aspects of the cable picture, however, there are still some clouds on the horizon. Congressional critics have raised questions about its monopolistic tendencies and its ownership structure (many cable operators also own program supply firms), in addition to its now unregulated subscription rates and its bad reputation for consumer service.

Adding fuel to this adverse criticism in 1989 was the celebrated merger of Time, Inc. with Warner Communications. The former controls American Television and Communications, the nation's second-largest cable company, as well as HBO and Cinemax, two major cable movie channels. Warner, of course, is also a leading operator of cable TV systems and has a large television production operation.

From the videocassette industry there was good news and bad. The good: Rental revenues for 1989 were expected to increase by 10 percent to $5.6 billion, thus making total revenues for the year over $8.8 billion. The bad: sales of VCRs were expected to decline to about 10 million, which would be a decrease from the 11.2 million sold in 1988 and the 17.6 million of 1986. (For other statistics on the video industry, see that section in this book.)

The battle for the viewing audience continues apace, and so it will in the years to come.

Corporate Histories of the Networks

Capital Cities/ABC, Inc.

Like the other major U.S. television networks, ABC had its origins in radio. In the beginning Radio Corporation of America (RCA) owned two radio networks: the Blue and the Red. In 1941 the FCC decreed that the same company could not own two networks, so RCA incorporated the Blue under the name of American Broadcasting System and established it as an independent subsidiary with 116 stations. RCA then sold this network to Edward J. Noble, founder and chairman of the Life Savers Corporation, for $8 million. The name was changed to the American Broadcasting Company in 1944, at which time the network had 197 radio affiliates.

Television arrived for ABC in 1948 when, on April 19, ABC carried its first TV program: "On the Corner," with Henry Morgan, which was sponsored by the Admiral Radio Corp. Later in the year ABC scored two "firsts": the live broadcast of an opera (Verdi's "Otello") from the Metropolitan Opera House in New York and a TV documentary, "The Marshall Plan."

The next big step for ABC came in 1952 with its merger with United Paramount Theatres, the motion picture theatre circuit founded when Paramount Pictures was required under the Sherman Anti-Trust Act to separate its film production unit from its theatres. This merger was engineered by Leonard H. Goldenson, then the president of UPT. The new company was called American Broadcasting-Paramount Theatres, Inc.

During the 1950's ABC began operation at a profit although it had to struggle fiercely to acquire new affiliates. In 1954 ABC made a deal with Walt Disney to acquire a 35 per cent interest in Disneyland and all TV programs produced by Disney. The following year ABC signed an exclusive rights contract with Warner Bros. for TV programming.

The 1960's brought many changes to ABC beginning with the introduction of color programming for the fall season of 1962; this was expanded in 1966 to include full color broadcasting. In 1965 AB-PT's name was changed to American Broadcasting Companies, Inc. and the company's corporate headquarters were moved from West 66th Street in New York to 1330 Avenue of the Americas, where they remained until 1989.

High points in the decade of the '60s also included the introduction of the blockbuster theatrical movie to TV with spectacular rating results when "The Bridge on the River Kwai" was viewed (in 1966) by 60 million Americans.

In 1967 the ABC evening news was expanded from 15 minutes to a half hour, and Joey Bishop inaugurated ABC's late-night programming with his talk show.

An attempt to gain control of ABC by Howard Hughes was circumented by Goldenson in 1968. Hughes said publicly that he abandoned his efforts to acquire the network because of the strong resistance of Goldenson; however, it was speculated elsewhere that he gave up because as new owner of ABC he would have had to attend a public hearing under the auspices of the FCC. The fanatically reclusive Hughes, it was assumed, would never have agreed to come out of seclusion for such an event.

The decade of the Seventies was an eventful one for ABC, too, not the least because in 1972 it was able to operate at a profit for the first time in ten years. Also in the 1976-77 season ABC moved for the first time into first place in the ratings race. It held the lead for the next two years and then dropped back into second place in 1979-80, a position it held until 1983-84 when it dropped to third position. It was unable to rise above that until 1987-88 when it displaced CBS in second place, primarily because of special sports programming, such as the World Series and the Superbowl. It remained second in 1988-89.

In 1976 Barbara Walters joined ABC, becoming the first anchorwoman in television history. Her almost $1 million a year salary caused lifted eyebrows among her fellow anchor persons, including Harry Reasoner and Howard K. Smith.

In 1977 the mini-series "Roots" appeared on ABC and became the all-time highest-rated program. This helped immensely in the ratings race, and credit must go in large part to Fred Silverman who two years before had joined the company as president of ABC international. He left in 1978 to go to NBC.

The decade of the Eighties was a turbulent one for the television industry as cable TV and home video began whittling away at their audiences. ABC was no exception. Halfway through the period—in 1985—ABC agreed to be purchased by Capital Cities Communications at a cost of $3.5 billion. 1986 saw formal completion of the takeover and the merged company's name was changed to Capital Cities/ABC, Inc.

With the departure of Goldenson, that year also brought other important changes in management. Daniel B. Burke replaced Frederick J. Pierce as president and chief operating officer. There were also sweeping reductions in personnel in the interests of economy and streamlining. (At least 1,000 employees were fired.)

Budget cuts notwithstanding Capital Cities/ABC chairman Thomas Murphy pledged ABC would not scrimp on programming. Instead the focus was to be on the network's non-programming expenses which accounted for about 30 per cent of the budget. One result was to cut out internally-generated research which was to be contracted for on an ad hoc basis as needed.

Capital Cities/ABC owns eight television stations and 21 radio stations and is a partner in ESPN, the highly successful cable TV sports channel and two other cable TV services—Arts & Entertainment and Lifetime. It also owns publishing operations which include nine daily newspapers, several weeklies and a variety of trade and consumer magazines.

Columbia Broadcasting System, Inc.

CBS first saw the light of day in 1927 as a radio network with 16 stations—United Independent Broadcasters, Inc.—founded by Arthur Judson, a concert tour manager. In need of money, Judson secured backing from Louis Sterling, president of the Columbia Phonograph Company, and changed the network name to Columbia Phonograph Broadcasting System. Later other investors were invited in, the most prominent of whom was William S. Paley, who, on September 26, 1928, at the age of 27, became president of the firm whose name was changed again. Now it was called the Columbia Broadcasting System.

Paley introduced many innovations to radio broadcasting, most significant of which was the signing of an agreement in 1931 with Paramount Pictures whereby film stars were heard on radio for the first time. This laid the groundwork for the CBS policy in television from the outset to feature shows built around stars (Ed Sullivan, Lucille Ball, Arthur Godfrey, Jack Benny, Burns & Allen, Garry Moore, etc.).

Actually CBS was in TV as early as 1931 when it began regularly scheduled TV programming over experimental station W2XAB in New York City. In 1941 CBS began weekly broadcast of black-and-white TV programming over WCBS-TV in New York. By 1948 it had 30 affiliated stations.

The decade of the 1950's brought many important advances. In 1951 CBS broadcast the first live coast-to-coast TV transmission between New York and San Francisco. In 1952 there came opening of Television City in Hollywood—the industry's first self-contained TV production facility. In 1956 "Playhouse 90" made its debut and set new high standards for drama originated on TV.

But the big event of the decade came along early—in 1951—with the debut of "I Love Lucy." The road to creating that phenomenal success was a rocky one. For one thing CBS did not want Desi Arnaz, and signed him only on the insistence of Lucille Ball. Second, the couple wanted to work before a live audience—a practice also anathema to the CBS powers-that-be. Ball and Arnaz persisted, and their efforts led to what is regarded as the invention of the situation-comedy format.

1951 was also the year that Bill Gordon designed the CBS Eye—destined to become one of the most famous logos in the world.

In the field of soap operas CBS was both leader and winner, virtually monopolizing that market from 1951 to 1956. In 1951 it introduced "Search for Tomorrow," which was to become the longest-running show ever in that genre. This was followed by "Love of Life" (1951) "The Guiding Light" (1952)—both overnight hits. "Guiding Light" was still on the air in 1988, as was the fourth soap CBS introduced, "As the World Turns" (1956).

In the late '50s and through the '60s and '70s CBS reigned as king of prime time ratings as tallied by the Nielsen Company. It had tied with NBC in 1969–70 and 1970–71 and ABC led in three seasons; but the rest of the time CBS was Number One. Thus it was quite a jolt to the company when in 1985–86 it slipped to second place and stayed there through the following season. Then came the worst blow of all: in 1987–88 CBS came in third for the first time in TV history.

CBS maintained its long-running lead with such successes as "Gunsmoke" (1957), "The Defenders" (1961), "The Beverly Hillbillies" (1962), "All in the Family" (1972) and "Dallas" (1978). Also helping was "60 Minutes," the news-oriented show, which in 1988 had remained in the Top Ten prime time shows for 11 consecutive seasons.

CBS began the turbulent Eighties with a new president, Thomas Wyman (replacing John D. Backe). Worst year for the company so far in that decade was surely 1985 when the company was sent reeling under three major assaults.

First, Gen. William C. Westmoreland filed a $120 million law suit, charging he had been libeled during a 1982 "CBS Reports" documentary. The subsequent trial ended 18 weeks after it began in New York Federal Court after the general heard some of his closest advisers during the Vietnam War testify they supported the CBS documentary contention in that he had deliberately underestimated the enemy troop strength on the field. Fearing he would lose, Westmoreland dropped the action before it could go to a jury.

Second, Senator Jesse Helms (Rep., N.C.) and his Fairness in Media committee launched an unfriendly takeover bid to "become Dan Rather's boss." (Rather had replaced Walter Cronkite as chief news anchor in 1981.)

Third, Atlanta broadcast entrepreneur Ted Turner made an unfriendly junk-bond bid for CBS. In a clever move the network bought up 21 per cent of its own stock for $956 million and thwarted the takeover. Turner went after MGM/UA instead.

Meanwhile Laurence A. Tisch, a former theatre chain executive, had become the major stockholder in CBS and in 1986 he instigated some sweeping changes in the interests of cost-cutting and efficiency. Some 700 jobs were eliminated at the CBS Broadcast Group. Tisch also removed Wyman as president, named himself chief executive officer and induced founder William Paley to return to active duty as acting chairman of the board.

In 1988, stung by CBS' worst prime time rating performance ever, Tisch shuffled executive ranks again, naming Howard Stringer, previously president of CBS News, as president of the Broadcasting Group. He replaced Gene F. Jankowski, who was named to the newly created position of chairman of the Broadcast Group. At the same time Tisch reported the CBS second-quarter income for 1988 rose 40 per cent to a new quarterly record. He attributed this to higher sales achieved despite a slow advertising market and to improvement of operating margin through reduction of costs and making operations more efficient. It was all, said Tisch, the beginning of "a new era" for CBS.

In the 1988–89 season, however, CBS was in third place again.

National Broadcasting Company

Television began for NBC in 1928, when on April 4, it acquired from the Federal Communications Commission a permit to operate an experimental station, W2XBS. Actual transmission from the Empire State Building did not begin, however, until October 30, 1931. Some eight years late the network began broadcasting on a regular basis, beginning with the opening of the New York World's Fair on April 30, 1939.

NBC, like the other networks, was an outgrowth of radio operations. Radio Corp. of America, General Electric and Westinghouse jointly launched a network in 1926 which had 31 stations; 25 in a network called Red and 6 in one called Blue. A year later it was forced to sell the Blue network to ABC (see history of that network), keeping for itself the one known as Red.

In 1930 RCA bought out its partners, GE and Westinghouse, and NBC became its wholly owned subsidiary.

NBC became a TV network on January 12, 1940, when two stations, WNBC-TV, New York, and WRGB-TV, Schenectady, New York, carried the first network programming. In June, 1941, the FCC granted NBC the first commercial TV license and a month later it had four advertisers signed up: Procter & Gamble, Lever Brothers, Sun Oil and Bulova.

After World War II NBC scored two big "firsts." On June 19, 1946, Gillette became the first advertiser to sponsor a TV network show, the Joe Louis-Billy Conn boxing match. That same year Bristol-Myers became the first sponsor of a network TV series, "Geographically Speaking."

NBC can also claim to be the first to introduce coast-to-coast network TV coverage. On September 4, 1951, when the U.S.-Japanese peace treaty was signed in San Francisco, its cameras were on hand.

In 1952 NBC pioneered early morning programming when it introduced "The Today Show."

NBC can also claim the first regularly scheduled network color series: "The Marriage," launched in 1954. That same year it achieved the first west-to-east TV transmission with the television of the Tournament of Roses Parade in color. At the start of the 1965–66 season it could declare it was the "only all-color network."

In 1968 NBC introduced new forms of TV programming with "The Name of the Game," a series that incorporated feature-film elements into a 90-minute show. This then spawned the "NBC Mystery Movie"—a series of programs composed of "Colombo," "Hec Ramsey," "McMillan and Wife," "McCloud," "Amy Prentiss," "McCoy," and "Quincy, M.E."

In 1972 NBC broke new ground again when it introduced "The Tomorrow Show" shown from 1:00 a.m. to 2:00 a.m. This was a talk program and it demonstrated that in the wee small hours of the morning something more than re-runs and old movies could be shown. In 1974 another late-night show called "Weekend" was begun.

In 1976 NBC's telecast of "Gone with the Wind" drew the largest audience to that date for an entertainment program. In 1978 its "Holocaust" mini-series attracted 107 million viewers and won 21 major awards.

Such programs helped NBC in the ratings, but in 1976–77 it fell to third place, where it stayed until 1983–84. (Ironically 1976 was the year in which NBC celebrated its 50th anniversary in broadcasting with a four-hour, star-filled special.) In 1984-85 it edged up to second place, and the following year it was ranked Number One in prime-time viewing for the first time in the three decades of such tallying by Nielsen. (For the record NBC did tie for first place with CBS in 1969-70 and 1970-71.)

NBC held on solidly to its first place standing for 1986-87, 1987-88, and 1988-89.

Along with the other networks NBC moved into a period of turmoil during the decade of the Eighties, fighting off rising costs and competition from cable TV and home video. In 1986 General Electric Corporation purchased RCA (NBC's parent) for $6.28 billion; GE, it will be remembered, helped launch the radio network in 1926 which led to the development of NBC-TV. This brought personnel changes led by the replacement of Grant A. Tinker as NBC chief executive officer by Robert Wright, although Wright was not given Tinker's chairman title, that being taken by John F. Welch of GE. Instead Wright was named president as well as chief executive officer. Along with its competition NBC started cutting staff and budgets in 1986.

NBC owns television stations located in Chicago, Cleveland, Los Angeles, New York City and Washington, D.C. GE, the parent company, also owns TV station subsidiaries in Denver and Miami, which are operated under the aegis of NBC.

In 1987 NBC owned eight radio stations in various cities, but it is reconfiguring these operations and plans to sell some of them and also to acquire other stations in different cities.

In 1987 NBC released some interesting figures about costs of television production. It revealed the average prime time half-hour series program for the 1986-87 season cost about $500,000 for two showings; that the average hour program costs $1 million or more; and that a feature film made for TV runs to about $3 million.

STATISTICS

HISTORICAL DATES

- FIRST OVER-THE-AIR TOLL-TV EXPERIMENTS: 1950, Skiatron system tested over WOR-TV in New York City. 1951, Telemeter system tested over KTLA-TV, Los Angeles; Zenith tested its system over its own experimental station in Chicago.
- FEBRUARY 10, 1955: Federal Communications Commission started proceedings to determine whether it should authorize TV stations to transmit programs paid for on a subscription basis. Study involved 92 docket volumes reflecting the views of over 25,000 persons on legal, technical and policy questions.
- MAY 23, 1957: FCC concluded it had authority to authorize use of TV broadcast frequencies for subscription operations if it found it were in the public interest to do so. Did not define whether this service should be classified as "broadcasting" or some other.
- OCTOBER 17, 1957: FCC adopted its first report on the proceedings and declared it would consider applications to conduct trial pay-TV operations over TV stations provided certain conditions were met.
- MARCH 24, 1959: FCC issued third report saying it was ready to consider any pay-TV application by a commercial TV station conforming with requirements, among which were limitation of three-year trial authorizations to markets where there were at least four commercial TV stations (including the pay-TV one), and one trial system allowed per market.
- JUNE 22, 1960: Hartford Phonevision Co. (later RKO General Phonevision Co.), a licensee of WHCT (Channel 18), Hartford, CT, applied for authority to conduct a three-year trial subscription-TV operation. Application granted February 23, 1961. Operations began June 29, 1962, and concluded in January, 1969.
- JULY 3, 1967: FCC's subscription TV committee submitted a fourth report proposing an over-the-air subscription TV service. Rules were designed to integrate subscription TV into the total TV system so good programming would continue to be available over regular TV stations.
- DECEMBER 12, 1968: FCC formally established over-the-air subscription TV as a regular broadcast service.
- 1975: Home Box Office became the first in the television industry to use a satellite for regular transmission of programming.
- 1984: The FCC officially deregulated the cable industry, permitting pricing flexibility and enabling operators to raise charges for basic cable services by adding new channels while reducing service charges for premium channels.
- 1985: The Court of Appeals struck down the "must carry" rules which required cable operators to carry all local broadcast stations.

Statistics for 1988

In 1988 there were 25,000 communities being served by cable television with over 47 million subscribers. This represents 52.8 per cent of total U.S. TV households.

Cable systems have reached a total of 9,300 with another 300 franchises approved but not yet built. Texas has the most systems with 600 and California the most subscribers at 4.9 million.

Industry revenues in 1988 were estimated at about $14 billion.

The national average monthly subscriber rate for basic services rose to $14 in 1989, compared to $13 in 1988 and less than $8 in 1981.

Over 1,860 systems accept advertising on the local origination channels—excluding automated channels—with rates from $2 to $300 per 30-second spot. Most cable systems derive less than 5 per cent of their gross revenues from advertising.

Cable systems are required by law to offer a minimum 20-channel capacity, which is the average; however, many systems offer more.

Pay cable (Home Box Office, Showtime, etc.) now operates on about 7,400 systems, reaching 35 million subscribers in all 50 states.

Almost 32 per cent of all cable systems have ties with broadcast interests; over 20 per cent with program producers; and about 18 per cent with newspapers. Many systems have multiple cross-ownership ties.

Tele-Communications, Inc., based in Denver, is the nation's largest developer and operator of cable systems with 4 million subscribers. Basic monthly rate charged by that company is now $15.50, an increase of 7 per cent over 1988.

In an optimistic report by the U.S. Commerce Dept., issued early in 1989, it was predicted that the number of cable subscribers would jump 5 per cent in 1989, reaching 49 million which would be a household penetration rate of 54 per cent. The Dept. also forecast that cable firms would continue to raise rates and adjust program packages which, combined with increases in ad revenues, should boost the total intake some 14 per cent to $14.5 billion in 1989. Cable, it was said further, will have penetrated 60 per cent of American households by 1993, with total revenues growing at an 8 per cent average annual rate.
