WE HAD no idea that the March of Time had so many friends or that we had so many eagle-eyed readers. But now we know to the tune of 1,987 complaints which have run like a spring freshet across this desk. Yes, our listing of the March of Time has been wrong and we'd better admit it now. It was wrong not just one week but TWO!

And we'll probably be wrong some more before the March of Time master minds decide what to do with their bloomin' show.

Just by way of explanation, we got the news straight from the guy who should have known. He said: "Next week March of Time goes back to its old half hour, once-a-week."

The trouble, as I said then and repeat now, was that the public had precious little chance of making its wants known. Which brings us slam-bang against the newest development in the plan for a Radio Guide of more service to both broadcasters and its readers. Last week I promised to tell you of an organization which, when developed fully, would make every reader of Radio Guide a member in a nationwide association for the betterment of broadcasting. This week, we give that organization a name. It is: The Radio Guide Listeners' Guild.

Its purpose is to establish listening posts throughout all of the United States. And those listening posts will be manned, not by experts, but by average listeners.

We want those of you who would like to man those posts to join us . . . to join the Radio Guide Listeners' Guild. But first, those of us who have talked and thought this thing out have come to certain conclusions regarding fine radio entertainment. In the creed printed below those thoughts are reproduced. Read them and think about them, please. Next week, I will tell you further of this unique but tremendously significant listeners' Guild. Be sure to tune in.

DEAR, dear, the above explanation took so much space that we've not much left for other world-shaking items. But we can't hold out another minute on the story about Albert Payson Terhune and his dogs. Dogman Terhune knows some fine, thrilling things about our four-footed pals, and his me-to-you story in next week's RADIO GUIDE is one of those things that causes people to build monuments and burn red fire and do nip-ups and stuff.

WHEN a beautiful and helpless and infinitely cuddly sweet young thing looks through her lashes at a tough, hard-fisted business man, what happens?

It's the old story of the immovable body and the irresistible force—or have you heard that one? Anyhow, the tale is likely to scamper right into your home and heart if you open the rotogravure section of our next coming-up number.

Little Durelle Alexander, the sweet and seventeenish sex-appealer on Paul Whiteman's program, is the heroine.

ONE more item that may give good girls bad ideas or vice versa is "Four Stubborn Bachelors." Who are they? And why? Read it next week. You'll learn—and how!

Listening Post

THIS WEEK

MONTHS ago when I sat with Fannie Hurst at a luncheon table in New York, we talked of radio. She said, "The really forgotten men and women are those for whom programs are planned. One expert declares the public wants this. Another expert says the first expert is wrong, the public wants that. With the result that the public gets a few good things plus an overdose of hash."

The trouble, as I said then and repeat now, was that the public had precious little chance of making its wants known. Which brings us slam-bang against the newest development in the plan for a Radio Guide of more service to both broadcasters and its readers.

Last week I promised to tell you of an organization which, when developed fully, would make every reader of Radio Guide a member in a nationwide association for the betterment of broadcasting. This week, we give that organization a name. It is:

The Radio Guide Listeners' Guild.

Its purpose is to establish listening posts throughout all of the United States. And those listening posts will be manned, not by experts, but by average listeners.

We want those of you who would like to man those posts to join us . . . to join the Radio Guide Listeners' Guild. But first, those of us who have talked and thought this thing out have come to certain conclusions regarding fine radio entertainment.

RADIO GUILD CREED

- WE believe that the air should be kept clean.
  - We believe that the advertising of hard liquor should not be broadcast.
- We believe that local stations should not cut into network programs for local spot advertisements thereby mutilating network broadcasts.
- We believe that the horror element should be eliminated from all programs designed for children.
- We believe that advertising should be restricted to the basis of four minutes for each hour program.
- We believe that broadcasting should be free from medical quackery, nostrums and cure-alls.
- We believe that broadcasting should be free from fortune-telling, crystal-gazing and other pseudo-sciences.
- We believe that broadcasters should refrain from the discussion of subjects that are offensive to people of refinement and good taste.
- We believe that nothing should be broadcast which will offend any race, color or religious group.
- We believe that the cause of broadcasting as well as the public would be served better by the further separation of kilocycle allocations so as to prevent one station from overlapping another on the listener's dial.

You Can Take It from Harriet Hilliard and Ozzie Nelson That Wedding Trips for One Aren't a Bit of Fun

TELEPHONE HONEYMOON

By Mary Watkins Reeves

Every other night for three months Ozzie telephoned Harriet 3,000 miles and she called him the alternate days

IT WAS all very ultra-ultra romantic, the wedding and stuff. The social and radio columnists splurged space like a department store ad. The bride's gown was a little satin model Hattie Carnegie threw together for the small remuneration of three hundred berries. The groom had a wardrobe that even the Prince of Wales would have sported himself to wear. The Very Biggest Names on the air dolled up to jam the ceremony and ooh and ah at the proper moments in their million-dollar voices. And the wedding breakfast was a mere matter of half a thousand guests, with caviar and other light snacks a la Sherry-Netherland.

But when the time for the honeymoon rolled around—there wasn't any. The groom stood hatless at Newark Airport and watched a giant plane zoom westward with a blond wave and a pink palm pressed against one of its windows. And not for all the fame or wealth that belonged to the bride and groom could change that. For they were radio stars; one had a contract in Hollywood and the other had a contract in New York. And wedding trip or no wedding trip, when your name's on the dotted line it means business!

Course they finally managed to get around to a honeymoon, but it was a terrible flop, really. Ozzie Nelson and Harriet Hilliard told me so. For three long months—they were just reunited the other day—Ozzie and Harriet had to make love via telephone, telegram, parcel post and special delivery. It cost them five thousand dollars, a lot of anxiety, and there wasn't so much as a kiss in the bargain.

So that makes this, the intimate story of it all, rank propaganda against kissless honeymoons! You can take it from Harriet and Ozzie that wedding trips for one aren't a bit of fun.

NOW the Nelson-Hilliard hitching had been expected around Radio Row for years. For so many years, in fact, that it came to be accepted sort of like the elusive return of prosperity—you knew it was going to happen sometime, but you didn't know when. Because Harriet's been Ozzie's vocalist with the band for nigh-on four seasons, the two have been inseparable since 'way back, and nobody's ever ever been able to wrangle a statement out of either of them concerning their affaires-de-coeur. When two people won't talk, it's a sure sign every time.

Four winters ago when the Nelson band was just beginning to attain real prominence, I stood backstage at the Earle Theater in Washington and watched our hero and heroine singing into a microphone over the footlights. Harriet had on a fluffy white chiffon gown about the size of a snowflake. When the number was over she skipped into the draughty wings to a pour of applause, flopped onto a piano bench and began to fan away, with an old newspaper, the heat of her nervous excitement.

Ozzie had just launched the orchestra on its next tune when he looked around and saw what she was doing. Immediately he dumbfounded stage-managers and the entire company by leaving the mike, walking directly off-stage into the wings, grabbing up Harriet's wrap from a nearby chair and tossing it lightly into her lap. (You see, it was a breach for him to leave the stage since he was acting as M.C. for the act.)

"Put your coat on, Babe," he whispered to her quickly, "you might take cold!" Then he went out again as though nothing had occurred.

THAT, I decided, was modern eliv-alry if I'd ever seen any. And it smacked undeniably of romance. So I asked the blond named Peggy Lou

THE STORY OF A REMARKABLE ROMANCE

Even while studying her movie scripts Harriet's mind was on her husband across the continent

Snyder, which happens to be Harriet's real name, about the condition of her heart and her boss'.

"Marriage? Ozzie and I? Boo! Shoo! G'way! We're just a duet." And that, or the equivalent of it, was all I could ever get out of her 'til the very day she became Mrs. Nelson.

FOUR months ago, really only a few weeks before the take-off, I queried Ozzie for the umpteenth time.

"Marriage? Aw, Harriet's so popular she wouldn't even have me. Guess," he added, "guess I'll remain an unclaimed blessing for a long time yet." Then he laughed.

That's just a sample of what we reporters have had dished out to us for years from these two. You couldn't hold it against them, though. Mostly because they're both so swell, and the rest because you knew all the time they didn't mean a word of it.

The Nelson-Hilliard wedding simply had to happen eventually.

The truth of it was that they secretly planned last Spring to wed come Fall weather. Harriet, like any girl, wanted a real wedding with all the trappings and all the fuss and attention due a bride. So they decided to stage the nuptials at the lovely home of Ozzie's mother in Ridgewood, New Jersey, which would be completely private, but still close enough to New York for their radio and theatrical friends to attend the ceremony.

And just when they'd gotten it all settled for October eighth and Tiffany's had finished engraving their invitations—RKO wired the bride to be in Hollywood by October twelfth. She was to do the important singing role in the forthcoming Fred Astaire-Ginger Rogers musical, Follow the Fleet.

So their plans were jinxed and they stewed around for weeks and couldn't decide what to do about the wedding. Harriet had signed with RKO months before; it was to be her first picture, tunes by Irving Berlin and everything, and she couldn't afford to miss the opportunity. Ozzie, in turn, had contracted to spend the entire Fall and Winter in Manhattan broadcasting on the Sunday evening Ripley programs, and playing nightly in the Silver Grill of the Hotel Lexington.

THE whole affair looked pretty grim, particularly since the two never had been separated longer than two weeks since the very first time they met. Excepting Harriet's brief Summer vacations, they'd worked and played together every day and night for the past four years.

Well if there's anything a girl can't stand, according to Harriet, it's setting her wedding date and not going through with it. Nothing could be any worse than having to say to yourself on October eighth. "Today was the day I was going to be married—and here I am playing bridge on the Chief." So at the last minute she decided, honeymoon or no honeymoon, she had to be Mrs. Nelson before she left.

And that happened to be the way Mr. Nelson felt about it, too.

The wedding went off as smoothly as a Music Hall ballet. Harriet looked adorable and Ozzie will never be half as handsomely nervous again. Their gifts made the whole upstairs of the house look like a fully stocked department store just before Christmas. And everybody who's anybody went and had a grand time.

And three days afterward the bride darn sight better than nothing. This was the way they worked it:

1. Every night Ozzie sent Harriet a special delivery, air mail letter .....16c daily
2. Every night Harriet sent Ozzie a special delivery, air mail letter .....16c daily
3. Every night at ten o'clock Ozzie sent her a telegram. It was sent at that time so as to arrive in Harriet's home just about the hour she returned from the movie lot ....$4.00 daily
4. Every night at six o'clock Harriet sent a wire to her husband. It was so timed as to reach him in between the din-

Harriet declares her success is due to Ozzie's ability to select and arrange all of her songs and groom were three thousand miles apart—to stay that way for three long months.

There just wasn't anything to do then but honeymoon by long distance. It taxed them over four hundred dollars a week, and it was a tortuously lousy substitute for what Pop-Eye so patly calls proximity, but it was a ner and supper music at the Hotel Lexington .....$4.00 daily

5. Every other night Ozzie telephoned Harriet at exactly 2:15 a. m. That was fifteen minutes after he finished his supper music and just before he retired. In California it was 11:15 p. m., Harriet's bedtime

$5,000 FOR A HONEYMOON WITHOUT A KISS

- (15-minute talk) . . . $26.25 each call
6. Every other morning at six (Harriet had to rise that early to get to the set on time) she telephoned Ozzie to wake him at 9 a. m. in New York (15-minute talk) . . . $26.25 each call
  7. Then there were odds and ends—flowers, business arrangements relating to broadcasts, et cetera, that averaged about . . . $2.00 daily

ADD that all up and it'll almost take your breath away. It's a conservative estimate, too. Ozzie confesses he often kept his bride on the other end of the wire for as much as an hour—and that, coast to coast, is practically an endowment for the A.T.&T. I asked him if his expensive long-windedness was luxury or necessity.

Clowning, he quoted some poet or other: "In love we are as helpless as men faced with death . . ."

And there's certainly no comeback to that one.

Separate honeymoons, according to Mr. and Mrs. Nelson, have social drawbacks too that aren't much fun. For neither of them took any part in Hollywood or New York night life while the other was away. Mostly they wanted to be home when the time came for their wires, letters and phone calls. And besides, they definitely wanted to avoid idle gossip. Harriet knew only too well the ways of the cinema city—that if she should dance one innocent rhumba with a Hollywood eligible at the Trocadero, all the papers next day would have her toting the torch for him and Reno-vating her new husband. So she did her entertaining in the Beverly Hills home she and her mother rented, confined her companions to close friends and spent most of her evenings with a batch of stationery and a fountain pen.

Perhaps you heard her the time she guest-starred on the Shell Show from the coast in November. A lot of love went into that song—hers for Ozzie when she sang it, his for her in its preparation. Harriet, when she signed for the appearance, was in a ditch without him. He always had picked her numbers, done her arrangements and even taught them to her.

TRUST Ozzie to rise to the occasion though. He helped her decide over the 'phone what song she'd do, had his arrangers in New York arrange it for her, made a record of it with his orchestra playing the arrangement and with himself singing it the way he wanted her to sing it. He rushed the record to Hollywood by plane; Victor Young was ace musician enough to interpret Ozzie's ideas to a "T", and Harriet did her usually swell job without a hitch.

They planned to be together for Christmas. How they planned! For gifts Ozzie bought his bride a mink coat, a roadster the color of her eyes, and five hundred dollars' worth of exquisite French lingerie. Not just lingerie size sixteen, either—he sent her measurements to Paris and had every frilly piece of it custom-made to perfection. He had twinkly little Christmas trees installed in all six rooms of the penthouse he had furnished for her homecoming. Everything was ready and waiting, and Ozzie went around Radio City wearing a grin like a jack-o'-lantern.

AND then December twenty-third, no less, Harriet was informed she'd be detained a week for retakes. "That," she told me, "was worse than the last straw. I just died. I was so disappointed I thought I couldn't stand it. I practically wept from Christmas till New Year's!" It was tough on Ozzie, too.

At right, the honeymooners the day of their wedding before a plane whisked her away and, below, a photograph taken during their happily united days before their marriage

I know what an effort it was for him to stand up in front of the boys and to smile so gayly at the many dancers who make it a point of greeting a leader as though they were old friends—and resenting it like nobody's business if they don't get a cheery salutation in return.

But the Great Day came, early on a sleety Sunday morning, January fourth. While a raft of cameramen waited for Harriet's train in Grand Central, Ozzie foxed them by driving thirty miles upstate, taking bag, baggage and bride off the Century, and spiriting the load into town in blessed privacy. Then Mr. and Mrs. Nelson celebrated their Christmas reunion ten days late.

EVER since, they admit, they've been doing little else but making up for lost time. Of course Harriet's back in her old spot with the band, that Billie Trask upheld for her while she was away. But outside of work the Nelsons aren't making any engagements or accepting any social invitations that will take them out of their home and keep them apart even a short while. Because love—well, love seems to be like sleep. Every bit you lose you have to catch up sooner or later!

Ozzie Nelson's orchestra with Harriet Hilliard, vocalist, may be heard Sunday evenings over an NBC-WJZ network at 7:30 p.m. EST (6:30 CST; 5:30 MST; 4:30 PST).

It was here at Windsor Castle, where the British royal family maintains its principal residence, that the former Prince of Wales often spent an evening playing the tympans

Hal Kemp Remembers When EDWARD VIII Played the Drums

LONDON society never will forget the time when Hal Kemp insulted their Prince of Wales. Neither, says Hal with a grin, will he. That happened in London when half of the royal toes were stepping to the Kemp fox-trots.

Right now a red-blooded Yankee bunch of boys and girls are dancing to Hal's music on the Phil Baker show in their own plebeian living rooms, and a flock of debbies and their boy friends who come down to New York's Pennsylvania Hotel to see him in the flesh, do likewise.

But to get back to the Prince of Wales. In those days, of course, he wasn't His Majesty, King Edward VIII. He wasn't on his dignity as the ruler of the empire on which the sun never sets. In those days he was just a fun-loving bachelor with the saving grace of a sense of humor. But Hal Kemp didn't know that—yet.

Hal was playing in the very, very ultra Cafe de Paris in London in 1930. To this swank spot drifted most of the titled fun-lovers of Europe. Of course, there were bound to be some fireworks with a person like Hal playing at such a royalty-studded place. The other orchestra leaders there had been of the suave, impeccable type who could cater to the very formal crowd without flicking a bored eyelash. You know, the smoldering, "may-I-kiss-your-hand-madame" bandleaders who knew the P's and Q's of royal etiquette. Continental manners and all that.

Hal doesn't belong in that class. Definitely not. He's a lean, long-legged Southerner (pahdon his Alabama' ac-sent), as American as ham and beans and as independent as the cowlicks that sprouts up from his blond head.

"There's a certain iron rule in English society," Hal explained, "which forbids an orchestra from stopping while any member of the Royal Family is on the dance floor. No matter how long the band has been playing, no matter what circumstances may arise, the orchestra doesn't dare stop until the royal person has left the floor.

"The Prince of Wales stepped onto the floor just about when we were almost through with our numbers, and

When Hal Kemp was abroad he met most everyone whose family had a crest—but his biggest kick came from Sally's first tooth

Imagine the Thrill of Dancing While the Present King of England Beat the Traps! That Really Happened, and—of course I obeyed the edict. We played on and on and on and on, but there was the Prince, still going strong with no letup in sight. I never have seen such an indefatigable dancer in my life. He wore out three girls. Our floor show was to start at twelve-thirty, and here it was after one.

"At the end of a certain number I thought I saw the Prince make a motion to leave the floor, so I turned around and signaled the boys to go into the closing theme melody. I didn't pay any further attention to the floor until the final note. I swung around again, and there was the Prince still dancing! As the band stopped, he looked up puzzled and then left the floor.

"Immediately I knew that I had done something terrible. There was a loud buzzing, and if all the raised eyebrows were piled high they would have reached the ceiling. The manager ran over to me, wringing his hands and wailing. 'You have insulted the Prince! That was an unpardonable sin.' Imagine, taking it so seriously!" It was the Alabama Kemp talking, don't forget.

THE Prince must have liked this fresh young American who dared to thumb his nose at the Burke's Peerage, for some months later, when the Prince was making his epochal visit to the United States, he insisted that Kemp and his band travel with him on his ship.

"That was some compliment," Kemp remembers with a blushing pride, "because the Prince was an excellent dancer. In fact, he tops some of the college sophomores who trot around on the Penn floor."

The regular ship band had to sit on the sidelines and twirl their thumbs while Hal and his boys played the hot music that the Prince loved so much. Instead of appreciating this unexpected vacation, the ship band—ungrateful fellers—swiped the music and half the instruments of the favored Kemp boys.

"But," grins Hal, "we had the last laugh, after all. The ship band didn't count on the Prince's good fellowship or his sense of humor. When he saw us struggling through some numbers with our make-shift orchestration, he jumped right in with our men and played the drums with us. When I saw him twirl those drumsticks around, grinning like a ten-year-old, I thought that that must have been one of the happiest moments in his life. Every night after that he managed to slip in some drum-pounding with the rest of the boys. And maybe—a wink—"the passengers weren't thrilled to be dancing while the Prince of Wales played for them!"

BUT Hal was to shake hands with many other royal fingers between the first incident with the Prince and the ship experience.

"What really stands out in my memory is the sight of Prince Rao Sayaji of India, the richest man in the world, walking into the Cafe with six of his wives. They made a very strange and pompous-looking party as they paraded to their table in single file. They were dressed in English clothes which they wore with a certain awkwardness. The Prince loved to dance, and the poor fellow hoofed with every one of the six wives he brought along. He was a pretty good stepper, too, although he preferred a slower tempo than most dancers like.

"I met King Alphonse—a very gay fellow who loved American jazz because he felt it was closely associated with the early folk songs of Spain—and I met the King of Greece and King Albert of Belgium—and oh, practically every person who boasted of a family crest."

But you'll never guess what gave Hal his biggest thrill!

"It was watching Jenny Dolly of the Dolly Sisters—a 'commoner', mind you—win and lose one million dollars over the roulette tables in one night. And with never more than a slight shrug of her classical white shoulders to betray any emotion when she won and then lost that fabulous fortune!"

But don't let all this aura of glamour that halos Hal's slim face fool you. After he's finished playing at the Penn every night, he goes—yes, girls, he does—home to the wife and kiddies in Jackson Heights, a suburban section of New York.

None of their friends ever suspected that Hal and Betsy Kemp would settle down to sweet domesticity away from the wah-de-dahs of the night clubs. There's a certain legend that bandmen are a fast-living bunch who like the Dawn Patrol too much to become faithful husbands and fathers. It's not entirely a myth, either. Outside of Hal and George Olsen and perhaps one or two others, how many orchestra leaders do you know who are living a home life?

For another thing, Betsy Slaughter Kemp was a Southern society bud who never had to dry a youngster's sniveling nose, and whose main reason for living seemed to be in twirling around a dance floor. In fact, she first met Hal as she danced past his bandstand, her dark head snuggled on some Cah'lina gallant's shoulder. Their romance bumped up against the old family tradition that Betsy must marry a leisurly Southern gentleman who had the time to sit down and have his mint juleps in the afternoon. And when she and Hal cloped at midnight in the best Romeo-and-Juliet manner, her family predicted that their sheltered little magnolia would fade if she were transplanted to the atmosphere of one-night stands.

But Hal and Betsy—the man who knew Edward VIII when he was merely the Prince of Wales and the girl who belonged to the Southern equivalent of the 400—have settled down to connubial bliss and love in a cottage, tra-la! A pretty elegant sort of cottage, I'll admit, with enough play space for Sally, aged 3, and Hal Junior, just learning to stand up by himself.

AND Hal, a beaming papa if ever there was one, says, "The London tea party to which Lady Milbank invited me, where I met Edward VIII, the Duke of Kent, the Duke and Duchess of York and enough noblemen to fill a Geneva peace conference, didn't give me near as big a kick as Sally's first tooth!"

The Gulf Refining Company presents Hal Kemp with Phil Baker's Gulf Headliners every Sunday over the CBS-WABC network at 7:30 p.m. EST (6:30 CST; 5:30 MST; 4:30 PST).

The Lullaby Lady and her son enjoy many hours of fun together

DO YOU remember occasions at home when there was an extra theater ticket—or one piece of candy left over—or some other coveted object, the possession of which was decided by lot? Mother would write all the names on little slips of paper, throw them into a hat, then draw out a name. Do you recall your emotions if your name was drawn—that little secret gloating over your good luck?

Those surely must have been the sentiments of the Carnation Hour sponsors when they blindly stuck their hands into a hat and drew out Margaret Gent, of all people, for their Lullaby Lady. She's that by every right of heritage—yet she was drawn practically by lot for the NBC Monday night program on which she is featured.

There had been two Lullaby Ladies prior to Mrs. Gent. Successively they glided out of the picture as radio artists do, and there was a vacancy to be filled. Mrs. Dennis Gent of Evanston, Illinois, had sung on a few radio programs and had left her name with the casting director just in case somebody needed a contralto. Nothing of her background was suggested by her application.

She was just a singer looking for a contract.

Today there isn't a person connected with the show who doesn't believe that the idea for the program and Margaret Gent were fashioned in the self-same mold.

Which shouldn't breed any amazement since it is a literal fact that Mrs. Gent began rehearsing twelve years ago for the program on which she has been working only seven months.

But it was to Baby Andrew Gent that the Lullaby-Lady-to-Be directed her slumber melodies. With a voice that was the culmination of a long line of family musical talents, Mrs. Gent crooned nursery lays to her son, thus carrying on family tradition and justifying the predictions that had prevailed in her home at Worthington, Minnesota; that Margaret was a natural mother and one day would be quite a hand with a child of her own.

Andy Gent went through babyhood a prey to the usual child ailments. Proper care helped him defeat them all—but it was the excellent fundamental of sound, easy sleep that outfitted him with the constitution to combat sickness. Gently each night he had been lulled to dreams with the adult voice which, as that of a child, had been a neighborhood panacea.

IT WAS on a Summer evening in the southern Minnesota town and a neighbor, at the door of the Mackay (Mrs. Gent's maiden name) home, pleaded with Margaret's mother:

"Would you mind if your Marge came over for a few minutes, Mizz Mac, and tried to quiet the baby? I can't do a thing with her. She's that cross . . . it's the heat, I guess. Marge can always quiet her. I never did see such a hand with babies. She's more like a mother than an eight-year-old."

"I was always that way, myself," confided Mrs. Mackay. "Seems like I was always spending more time on the neighbors' children than I did on myself," she added.

On her way home from comforting that one infant, the child was greeted by another neighbor.

"I hate to ask you, Marge, but Tessie is like a bear. You're the only one that's ever able to do a thing with her. Would you mind coming in for just a minute?"

The girl sat down by the crib of the tossing baby, spoke a few words to her gently—then trailed off into an improvised song fashioned from different melodies she knew, building a smooth lullaby as a deft cook with a pinch of this and a dab of that concocts a pleasing dish without regard for recipe.

Within a few minutes the restless little one had relaxed and floated off into a dream paradise where brightly hued rubber balls, tossed to the ground, turned into lollypops and bounced right back into your mouth.

MORE than two decades later Margaret Mackay Gent sat in a studio at NBC headquarters in Chicago, reading from the day's vast volume of mail. One of them said:

"Dear Lullaby Lady: I have the worst sort of a problem which I am sure only you could solve. I have always been able to sing my children to sleep when they were cross or sick. But my third baby has the colic and I am just beside myself. Isn't there some particular song you could recommend to make her forget the pains?"

Unfortunately, Mrs. Gent cannot hand her formula to other mothers. She wishes she could.

"I've looked back over the years ever since those days up in Minnesota," she says, "and for the life of me I cannot see that I have ever sung different lullabies or sung those we all know any differently than all mothers.

"If I have any virtue it probably is my patience. A lot of mothers who have more household cares than the mere putting of a baby to sleep, sing a few snatches and sing them nervously, with the result that the excitement spreads to the child; and the lullaby, instead of inducing sleep, wards it off. So if I had any advice to give mothers it would be to sing softly and low, humming in drowsy tones whenever possible, and reducing the tempo gradually until a child is completely soothed.

"But what sort of advice is that? No modern mother would sing a baby to sleep. Science says to leave them to their tears and they'll quickly drop off without help. But isn't it fun, after they've gone to sleep, to lean over their little beds and just croon a little tune to them?"

So now you see how the Carnation Company picked a natural out of a hat. Yes, Margaret Gent is inevitably the Lullaby Lady.

The makers of Carnation Milk present Margaret Gent in the Contented Hour every Monday evening over an NBC-WEAF network at 10 p.m. EST (9 CST; 8 MST; 7 PST).

Calling All Cars

THE walls of the prison yard were gray, and gray were the faces of the prisoners. "Any minute," said Red McManus, through stiff lips.

In the Massachusetts State Prison at Charlestown, it was the hour of recreation. Hemmed in by those weathered walls of the 130-year-old institution, convicts in sad uniforms of shame talked or walked quietly. Their breaths steamed in December air.

"Get set!" murmured Red McManus. It was then that Guard Shaughnessy observed five convicts draw together. There was nothing in this to make him suspicious. But Shaughnessy mechanically noted their identity, because seasoned prison guards notice details.

The man they gathered around was that William P.—Red—McManus, doing a 21-to-24 year stretch for robbery—a hard guy, shrewd enough to obey prison rules. There was Frank Joyce, Red's special buddy, a keen-eyed and tight-mouthed crook who also was smarter than most. The other three men were just run-of-mine stir-birds: Phil Naples, Charles O'Brien and Edward McArdle. These five all worked in the paint shop. There was nothing funny in the fact that they should just drift together as the five-ton paint truck came past the gate.

Or so Guard Shaughnessy thought.

THE driver of the truck, Lewis Richards—civilian prison employe—jumped down from the driver's seat. The engine was running.

"Hello, Ed!" he called to Shaughnessy. The guard waved and grinned. Very slowly the five convicts moved towards the truck. Red McManus was in the lead.

"Now!" cried Red. "Let 'em have it!"

It took only a few seconds. The five thugs leaped. They pulled crude knives fashioned from stolen spoons. Red McManus ripped out a three-foot crowbar, which had been hidden in one of his trouser-legs.

"Oh! Don't!" cried Richards, the truck driver, as this steel bar crashed down upon his head. "For God's sake don't!" . . . He sprawled to the ground.

Guard Shaughnessy ran at McManus, raising the weighted cane which was his only weapon. Guards in many prisons don't carry firearms when they go among the prisoners, for fear that they may be overpowered and have these weapons taken from them.

McManus swung the crowbar. It struck Shaughnessy a glancing blow on the head, just as a clumsy knife in the hands of another thug slashed through his tunic and drew blood. The guard fell. Richards, the truck driver rolled over, groaning. McManus, swinging his steel bar madly, hit the prostrate man and smashed his skull as if it had been a walnut shell.

ANOTHER guard, Michael O'Donnell, bravely attacked. Cut and slugged, he fell instantly. A trusty named MacDonald was knocked unconscious.

"Come on!" roared McManus. He snatched up the dying Richards. With frenzied strength he hurled the stricken truck driver into the truck's cab, then leaped in after him. The truck swung in a mad circle—but not before the crafty Joyce had directed the placing of O'Donnell's unconscious body on the running board. Then Joyce jumped in beside McManus. The three other thugs vaulted into the back of the huge steel vehicle.

Joyce held O'Donnell up beside the right-hand door. Red McManus propped the body of Richards in front of him, so that if bullets came they might lodge in innocent flesh.

From the hundreds of convicts in the yard, yells, cat-calls, screams swiftly blended into a roar. Inside the buildings other convicts beat the bars of their cells and yammered. With the swiftness of a spreading gasoline fire a full-fledged prison riot was raging.

All because five thugs had captured a five-ton, steel truck! But the truck was in the prison yard, and two sets of locked wooden gates were between the rioters and the freedom they craved. What good, bewildered guards wondered, was an imprisoned truck to a hunch of imprisoned men? They weren't going anywhere.

But Red McManus knew what he was doing.

"Come on, boys!" he howled, and jammed the accelerator flat to the floor-boards. The truck jerked ahead, faster and faster, with Red shifting gears like a madman. It roared and swayed. It flew across the prison yard, scattering the howling convicts, nearly running some of them down. A regular mob of them began to scurry behind it. The thick stone wall loomed above it.

Splinters and boards and bolts flew as they went through those gates with a noise like thunder. The truck staggered. The steering wheel hit McManus in the stomach, knocking his wind out as he was thrown forward, but he kept the accelerator jammed down, and the steel behemoth waltzed around, steadied, picked up speed.

Frank Joyce, one of five who thought they could break from Massachusetts State Prison at Charlestown, shown after he had met the power of radio and had been sent back to his cell

Gasping for breath, McManus pointed the truck straight for those outer wooden gates. Roaring, it picked up speed. Somewhere a whistle shrilled, and a bullet ripped through the roof of the cab and out again.

THE truck's battered radiator hit those gates. Wood ripped like paper. McManus and Joyce were flattened against the windshield. The three thugs in the back were hurled and bruised against the back of the cab, but the truck lurched through the torn doors. The half-stunned thugs were free! And there wasn't so much as a curtain separating the State of Massachusetts from the ravaging, running horde that was following the frenzied five and their steel juggernaut.

It has been said that even Fate stacks the cards against lawbreakers. And it was chance that first came to society's aid.

For as the truck ripped and staggered through to freedom, it ran head-on into another truck of the same size, style and make! There was no avoiding the collision. Red McManus cursed and swung the wheel, but the two steel monsters came together.

"Run for it!" gasped McManus. He staggered out of the cab, with blood running down his face from contact with the windshield. The three men in the back had been thrown clear out. Joyce jumped down, unhurt.

"Grab one of them trucks at the potato sheds!" he screamed. Just a hundred yards away were the half-subterranean sheds, with a row of trucks standing beside them, engines turning over slowly.

MEANWHILE, that running horde of convicts in the yard had been stopped in their tracks. For a curtain had been hung to take the place of the outer door—a curtain of lead, laid down by the fire of guards. No one was hurt; the convicts realized that they couldn't hope to come alive through the withering fire that kicked up the ground at the feet of the leaders. Cursing, subsiding, they withdrew. Organized society, beaten in the first attack, was staging an efficient come-back.

By now the great prison siren was shrilling its brazen warning. For miles around it told townsmen and farmers that desperate men had broken jail. Guard Flanagan, on the outer wall, flashed news to Miss Catherine Newman, the prison telephone operator. She opened the key of the special police wire direct to Boston, so that just about as Red's gang was smashing through the outer gates, their radio message was flashing through the ether from the Boston police radio:

"Calling all cars . . . all cars . . ."

Can Convicts Break Prison with Radio Against Them?

TEMPORIZING with Cupid is a doubtful business at best. Virginia Payne, 25 years old and the Ma Perkins of the NBC dramatic series by that name, is wondering how much longer she can continue to parry the little god's arrows and still expect him to keep up the siege.

She'd really like to know—and maybe some of you can give her the answer—just about how often a girl can continue saying “No” to would-be husbands, and not stretch opportunity too far.

“Will there always be a mate in the offing?” “Will I sacrifice matrimony entirely in the interest of a career?” “Will there be a limit to the number of times I can refuse marriage—and still find that I am eligible?”

These are mighty pertinent problems to Virginia. She really feels that she wants to marry some day. Womanlike, she always wants to be wanted. But she also yearns to reach the saturation point of satisfaction in her dramatic career, so today her immediate slogan is: “Cupid, stay away from my door.”

“I wouldn't go so far as to say that the fellows have been knocking down the doors to get at my tender affections,” she admits. “But I've had a few chances and passed them up, and now the question is whether opportunity will keep on knocking or my few admirers will lose their patience and desert me about the time I decide to toss my career overboard and strike out for matrimonial shores in a great big way.

“I know that there are a number of married women in radio who manage the domestic phases of their lives beautifully,” she says. “If it were true in every instance I still would have to take into consideration my own enthusiasm about my dramatic work. But it isn't 100 per cent the case. I know quite a few persons whose happiness is on the verge just because of the divided attention which is the result of trying to serve two masters.”

AND matrimony, to Virginia, is a state of feminine subservience. She is of the old-fashioned strain which believes that unless the man is the boss, marriage is unorthodox.

It was an instance of her belief in that credo which already caused her to send her sponsors out scouting for a new Ma Perkins. But a truth suddenly popped out to slay the Lochinvar trait in her suitor—and Virginia is sharply reticent about her reflections on the matter.

He was an Ohio college sweetheart. He had wooed her ardently during their campus days, and when she went into radio in Cincinnati he was just as constant. But there was an element missing from his courting. Maybe continuous companionship had led him to take her for granted.

Art moved Virginia to Chicago, and apparently separation began to awaken the dormant fighting spirit in the boy she left behind her. As often as his work would permit he came to Chicago and stormed her with new fire—and she was weakening.

One day there was a ring at her apartment door and she opened it to look into the eyes of what she deemed her perpetual Lothario. But within two minutes she found she was dealing with a new kind of Rômeo. There was a fierceness to his ardor which was the ingredient that had been wanting.

YOU'RE mine, you!” he shouted with savage possessorship. “You go down to that studio right now and tell them you're through. No—never mind going down there. Just call them on the phone. We're getting married today and you're going back home where you belong. D'you get me?”

She did. The January thaw was on. Thrilled, she went to the phone to debate for a moment the potentialities of a decision. Slyly she jiggled at the phone to simulate delayed service while she hastily thought the matter over. While she was at the phone she glanced adoringly over at her intended mate—only to note that he had subsided to the davenport and was fading into a doze. She let him sleep for an hour.

When he awoke there were only ashes of his earlier fire. He still was the same persistent suitor, but his ardor had cooled. A little questioning, artfully feminine, revealed that he had fortified himself with a few drinks before storming the fort. His masterful manner had evaporated with the fumes of the stimulants he had absorbed. Today he is back in Cincinnati, married to a girl who makes him mind the baby, wash the dishes and get her breakfast every Sunday morning.

THE devotion which Virginia gives to her radio work is not a phase bred of contact with studio life. It is a congenital adoration which was exemplified in the manner in which she broke into the business.

Even the artist's certificate in piano which she won at the Cincinnati College of Music couldn't swerve Virginia from the path which the stars had charted for her.

In Cincinnati, where music practically is a civic endeavor, good pianists are as conspicuous as pigeons around a peanut machine, and it didn't take long for Virginia to find that out. Which accounts for a scene that took place in one of the Queen City radio stations when she was sixteen years old.

“I'm Virginia Payne,” announced a very brave little lady to a somber-faced executive. “Could you tell me how much I would have to pay to act on your station?” Here was something new to the broadcasting trade. Although that was nine years ago, radio officials already had their hands full with performers who thought their talent ranked with rare gems when it came to market value.

“I'll tell you, Miss Payne,” the amused director replied. “The chap who fixes the rates we charge to outside performers is out of town today but I'm going right over his head. You come in and try a part or two and we won't charge you a cent.” It was a

LONELY LITTLE STAR

Unable to Endure Her Separation from Dan, Lindy Goes to Him—and More Heart-Break

Linda Logan, brilliant singing star of the Noko program for the Amalgamated Broadcasting System, owes much to the efforts of her manager, Manzoni, for her rise from obscure vaudeville to stardom. Her marriage to Manzoni led to divorce; but their star-manager relation continues, in part to give him some sort of return for his successful promotion, in part because Linda isn't sure whether she still loves him. However, his rigid regime to keep her in trim for her work, robs her of personal freedom, romance, life.

She rebels, and meets a young man, Dan Corby, to whom she is greatly attracted. For reasons of her own she deceives him into believing that she is Lucille Pennington, Linda's secretary. She goes picknicking with him and misses an important audition for the very biggest spot in radio, the Klear-tone hour. Her lateness sweeps away her chances, for the sponsor wouldn't wait. In explaining, she blurts her love for Dan to Manzoni. He rages—and offers her a choice between another chance to audition for Klear-tone, or Dan. She must not see him again, until after the audition, and the contract is signed. What shall she do?

Now go on with the story:

(Part Five)

I PASSED my hand over my eyes, trying to think what Manzoni's alternative would mean.

To promise not to see Dan again! Why—it might mean not seeing him—ever. No! No! As much as the Klear-tone Hour meant to me, I couldn't risk that. I looked at Manzoni.

"You wouldn't—you couldn't—ask me to promise that!"

I could see his fists clenching and unclenching.

"Wouldn't I?" he said coldly. "I take that for your refusal. You have heard my terms. You do not accept them."

He snatched up his hat and started for the door. Just as he was leaving, I ran after him and caught at his arm, pulling him back.

"All right, I promise."

He smiled a quick, crafty smile of triumph.

"You are wise," he said, patting my hand. "I wish to assure you once more that it is not as your former husband, jealous of a possible rival, that I ask this—but as your manager, jealous only of your success. After your opening night, you are privileged to see this man as often as you please. Now I shall go to work for you with all my heart. And Manzoni has never failed you yet."

He kissed me on the forehead and glided out the door.

YET his pretty speech did not reassure me. Instead of being buoyed up by the prospect of getting another chance, I had an all-gone feeling inside. I had betrayed Dan. At the first crucial test I had let my career come first.

Yet I knew that if something should make it impossible for us to see each other again, I should never forgive myself.

If I had acted wrongly, I paid the price many times over in the days that followed—days which were hectic enough with the agonizing suspense of negotiating for the radio program.

No one who has not been through it can really have any idea what it is. The waiting for the phone calls that do not come; the angling for just the right moment to approach a big shot when he is in a receptive mood.

My case was particularly difficult. I had committed the unpardonable sin. I had been late to an audition. I was starting from far behind scratch. Manzoni had a monumental job before he could even get the Klear-tone people to consider me once more.

Worse, however, than the suspense over the impending contract was my anxiety about Dan. What would he be thinking when he didn't hear from me? I didn't dare tell him I was ill, or I knew he would hunt me out, and that would mean a chance of his running into Manzoni. And I couldn't have that!

AS THE days passed, I grew so nervous I could hardly eat or sleep. I hung breathlessly on every word from Manzoni, not so much on account of the contract itself now, but because it meant knowing definitely when I would be able to see Dan.

My spirits weren't raised any when my current series came to an end with a gala farewell night at the Radio Playhouse.

The performance for the air might have been just any program. But afterwards we put on a show that the Playhouse audience which was privileged to see it, would not soon forget.

There were tears in the comedian's eyes as he gagged about the last reunion of his radio family. More than one voice broke when we all gathered 'round to sing "Should Auld Acquaintance Be Forgot."

It had come—one of the saddest moments in radio, when a series ends; and with it friendships, associations that had grown to mean a lot.

The conversation after the audience had gone was gay—too gay. Everybody was talking about the audition ahead, the contract he had just signed. Alas, I knew that for too many of them it would mean the beginning of the dreary round of haunting agency and network offices again. Even for me, the future was uncertain.

As I crossed the stage, bare and silent now, where the musicians in tuxedos were stuffing trombones into cases or tenderly laying away violins, I heard a little girl from the singing chorus say to no one in particular:

"Gee, I wonder who'll want me now?"

I ran on out, tears stinging in my eyes.

At home, Manzoni was waiting, pacing up and down my livingroom.

"A pretty kettle of fish," he an-

In a minute Dan landed at my side. Then we ran through the areaway. "No nonsense now," Dan said grimly. "You're going to—" nounced. "The president of Klear-tone has just left for Florida."

The pent-up tears gushed forth in a flood then. I felt numb and disheartened. What was the use of anything? Manzoni tried to console me.

"Now, now," he said, "it's going to be all right. It is for us the great opportunity. It gives me the chance I have wanted—to talk to him away from the office, away from his interfering stooges. I'm taking the Florida Special tonight!"

The first few days after Manzoni had gone were filled with intolerable loneliness. It was almost the first perlod in my life that I found myself with nothing to do but kill time.

As I remained day after day cooped up in my little apartment watching the people in the Park, thinking of Manzoni lolling on some palm-fringed beach, resentment grew against the promise he had exacted from me not to see Dan Corby.

The more I thought of it, the more I began to doubt his motives. There was no practical reason whatever why I shouldn't be seeing Dan right now. The only reason, the true reason, then, could only be Manzoni's jealousy of me as my former husband.

On the third day after Manzoni's departure I had almost made up my mind to go back on my promise. Still

LISTEN my children and you shall hear that everything is not all hunky-dory and hotsy-totsy among that sparkling, celebrated and feted group known as radio entertainers. No, everything is not just one bowl of cherries after another.

I tell you this because I key-holed and saw:

That the MORIN SISTERS, highly approved singing trio, have upped and deserted the sacred portals of NBC for what they considered just cause. And here is the story:

The girls have one commercial program on the NBC net and have been used—under the stipulations of their contract with the chain's Artists' Bureau—on several non-paying sustaining broadcasts. Recently the trio was booked into Chicago's Palace Theater, an engagement for which they paid a proper commission of fifteen per cent of their salary to the Bureau. But, due to an altered stage time-schedule on the night of their week's theater date and their peculiar inability to be in two different places at the same time, the Morins missed one of their radio NON-PAY sustaining programs. So—

The NBC Artists' Bureau sharply fined them another slice of their theater date salary.

The network contracts are one-way tickets, artists complain. It seems that the artists do most of the work and the broadcasting systems collect the lion's share of the revenue. Well, say the networks, if the performers don't like it, they can—

AND that's how it happened that EDNA ODELL, a singer you certainly must know, after suffering a similar experience, walked into the Lion's Den to give him a brushing off with her downy whiskers. Yessir, she went right smack up to one of NBC's toppedy-top program big-wigs and told him her views on what she considered a modernized version of the Captain Kidd racket, the only change being that the radio Cap Kidd is sailing the ether waves instead of the ocean blue.

So she was politely (?) ushered from his presence and the premises and told never, never more to darken NBC's Chicago studio doors, nor the doors of any other NBC stations for that matter.

But, folks, wait! You don't know Edna. All she did was hop into a taxi, go to the offices of her railroading sponsor and tell the big boss there all that had happened. Result: Edna sang as usual on the Sunday night railroad-anged NBC program. Also, the NBC page boys are whispering it about that the pompous program big-wig has turned very meek and, what is more, is skilfully managing to keep well out of sight when our heroine, Edna, is in the Chi NBC emporium.

Speeder Radio's Fast One

To reader Eva Druen of Rockcreek, Ohio, I send thanks for her report of the WJR Traffic Court broadcast of two weeks ago during which one of the defendants, just fined four dollars by His Honor, jubilantly and unexpectedly shouted into the microphone:

"Hello, honey. I'll be home at two o'clock. He didn't send me away!"

But, taking everything into consideration, I'm sure that you will agree with Miss Druen and me that "he" should have.

Aha! So NBC-mikeman Stuart Dawson was shopping for a diamond solitaire, was he? She must be that bah-eutiful blonde Miss Lamb, the fleecy studio hostess, eh what?

Remember 'Way Back When—

WHILE Jack Frost rants across the country with his coast-to-coast hook-up of too-many icicles frequency, it's nice to warm your tootsies at the hearth and loudspeaker and reminisce. I remember one outstanding musical drama, Charlie and Mollie, long off the air. When launched it was a radio innovation... Long announcements were out. Throughout its 30 minutes all settings, changes and character introductions were done by specially written or adapted music... It was a real production in every sense and in its cast were DAVID OWEN, now producer of Betty and Bob and Jack Armstrong; VIN HAWORTH now love interest in Myrt and Marge; BETTY McLEAN, now an independent producer, and DOUG HOPE, now a star dramatic director and character actor.

That was a lineup. But the spirit behind Charlie and Mollie is not dead. No. LESTON HUNTLEY has emerged from his cocoon with a butterfly-beautiful new production you must hear. As daytime shows go, this one doesn't; it's a nighttime production at daytime prices. Don't forget—tab Broadway Cinderella, aired by Mutual net stations at 11:45 a.m. EST (10:45 CST; 9:45 MST; 8:45 PST) from Mondays to Fridays. You should like it.

Short Story About Shorts

It was really very embarrassing, but mostly for Molly rather than Fibber, when at rehearsal Producer Bruce Kamman hid McGee's trousers while he was changing costume. However, trouser McGee, unabashed, stepped to the mike sans pants for his bit the while Molly's cheeks bloomed as crimson as the red checks on Fibber's unmentionables.

Radioless Broadcasting

ALL that comes out of a loudspeaker isn't radio. That was proved last week to a hundred persons gathered in the New York NBC's law library when they heard MILTON CROSS announce an unusual program. "sponsored by the New York Alumni Association of Olivet College." Songs by JAMES WILKERSON and talks were heard—in the library but no where else... no where else because A. L. ASHBY, vice-president and general counsel of NBC was entertaining his classmates whom he had assembled to meet Dr. Joseph H. Brewer, president of the little Michigan college.

The radio stunt amazed the Olevetians—but not nearly so much as did Lawyer Ashby open the eyes of his studio pals when during one noon hour he dictated the whole script for the show in true professional fashion.

THIS WEEK'S NEWS REEL

Famous Faces in Famous Places

KEEP this under your hat because it's a deep dark secret and nobody is supposed to know about it. Your old friend CHARLIE WINNINGER may be back on Show Boat one of these Thursday nights, maybe as a guest star and maybe permanently. Anyway, the sponsor is giving it serious thought—so don't be amazed if it happens.

In Shallow Waters

AND let me tell you something else that's also an under-cover bit of news. BILL BACHER'S recent week-end trip to New York from California was to discuss the possibility of his returning East to resume direction of Show Boat. It's no secret, however, this hour ain't what it used to wuz, and the big boss of the program is anxious to bring it back to its former popularity. Bacher is now the guiding genius of Hollywood Hotel.

Fannie Brice Follies?

As reported here weeks ago, The Beauty Box Theater, also a show formerly directed by Bacher, is to be replaced by another program. But what it's to be, nobody knows.

After pouring over a flock of ideas, the sponsor still seems to be in the dark. The latest idea under consideration was The Ziegfeld Follies of the Air, and was to be woven around FANNIE BRICE, the prospective star. Although the idea hasn't been discarded entirely, it will be dropped if something better pops up.

Wedding Bells

EXCLUSIVE to RADIO GUIDE readers only: ROSALINE GREENE, one of radio's most popular actresses, was married secretly on January 16 to JOSEPH M. BARNETT, former WOR program director. Heartiest congratulations to you, Rosaline and Joe. My sincere wish is that you will enjoy married life as much as your good friend Marty does.

Paging Two Shows

THERE are two other hours reserved, yes reserved, for any sponsor who will have them. Perhaps I should put it this way:

FOR SALE: Two hours. One on NBC-WJZ Sundays from 8 to 9 o'clock EST. The other on CBS at the same hour. Rates reasonable. Only drawback: MAJOR BOWES' amateurs on NBC-WEAF at that same time. Apply any NBC or CBS salesman. The CBS hour is slightly used by EDDIE CANTOR and LESLIE HOWARD. Ask them for references.

Ed Wynn, Maybe

Oll, GRAHAM, the program is going to be different—that is, if the automobile manufacturer picks up the option it has for Ed Wynn's services.

The sponsor laid $2,000 on the line for the option, and auditions are being held daily—Sooo, maybe before long you will be hearing that punny man again. If the contract is signed the program will be aired over the CBS network, and LENNIE HAYTON and his boys will supply the music.

Gravest Error

DID you hear Columbia's announcement of the death of King George V of England, made at 7:30 p.m. EST

January 20? If you did, then you heard one of the gravest unintentional errors ever made on a network. In reading the death bulletin, the announcer ended by these words: "The King is dead; Long live the King."

Immediately thereafter came a deep gruff and a long laugh, not unlike that of the Shadow. It was SINGIN' SAM opening his program. Either Sam didn't listen to that death bulletin or else someone made a slip in not informing him. The effect was plenty sickening.

More Hit Parade Stuff

MY CHIEF snooper informs me that The Hit Parade sponsor is still doing plenty of auditioning for a new show which will be an addition to the Saturday night hour on NBC. The NBC-WEAF network for Wednesdays at 10 p.m. EST is reserved starting March 11 and the new program will consist of hot music. There is a possibility that AL GOODMAN, their former maestro, may conduct the hour. Then again it may be B. A. ROLFE. Or else CARL HOFF may shift to the Wednesday spot and someone else take over the Saturday Hit Parade. Anyway, there will be another program.

Who Will Pinch-Hit?

QUEEN JESSICA DRAGONETTE leaves the airlines for her annual vacation the middle of February, and will be away five weeks. At this writing her substitute has not been named, although several sopranos are under consideration.

Busy Gladys

GLADYS SWARTHOUT left Monday, January 20, for her vacation, which will be spent in Nassau. She gets back on February 8 and immediately starts on a four weeks' concert tour, after which she returns East to appear in Metropolitan Opera. It will be a long time before she is heard on another regular series because from opera Miss Swarthout rushes to Hollywood to make her second picture.

Quiet Tip

ASIDE to RAY PERKINS: Please stop calling every city your amateurs hail from, The Garden Spot of the World. It was funny the first time.

Two Out

TWO NBC announcers are no longer on that network's pay roll. One was GEORGE ANSBRO, whom you heard mostly on daytime sustaining. What was the trouble? Well, it's like this. All Warner Brothers music is banned from the network. And George, responsible for a certain show, allowed one of those banned songs to go out over the air. Nineteen stations were on the hookup, making each liable for special charges because of the boner.

The second announcer to go is NORMAN BROKENSHIRE, who was given an opportunity to stage another comeback but again decided to be foolish. It happened in Ohio when BOB CROSBY'S program was to broadcast, and Norman showed up with the same old well-known trouble. It probably will be the last chance Broke will get. By this time he should have had his lesson, but it seems he refuses to learn.

Peggy Allenby, above, isn't smiling to get into a mood for her Palmolive Beauty Box characterization. She's naturally happy. And as much can't be said for Allen Prescott the Wife Saver, at right. If you've wondered about actress Helen Hayes' personality-plus leading man, Joseph Bell, here he is immediately below, in all of his glory

Two master minds of Al Pearce's Gang, above, are Tizzie Lish, unkindly labeled Dizzy Cooking Expert, and Lord Bilgewater. In un-microphone activities Tizzie is William Herbert Comstock; Bilge, Monroe Upton. Phillips Lord, below, has plenty to be happy about now considering the success of his new Gang Busters

ELECT YOUR STARS

ALREADY, the avalanche has begun to move. With its annual Star of Stars contest just a week old, RADIO GUIDE is being snowed under with votes calculated to give certain artists a big start in the most important of all radio star elections.

And that's the thing against which laggard voters should guard themselves. Why give anyone so great a handicap that it will be impossible for your favorites to overtake the leaders? We always have urged readers to vote early. Remember that you can vote just as frequently as you wish—by single ballot or by the handful. So do not wait to accumulate ballots. Send them in weekly and watch your favorite artists spurt out to the front.

This year's classifications have been expanded greatly in order that you—the listeners—can name the leaders in ten different divisions of radio activities. Each division has its leaders, but it is up to you to name them.

It's one thing for you to go around talking about how devoted you are to this artist or that one, but this is a contest in which votes are the only things that really symbolize your loyalty. Nor are you the only ones vitally interested in this Star of Stars Election. The artists themselves are eager for this tangible sign of your support; sponsors scan the results carefully with an eye to employing the leaders and eventual winners. The big networks watch your reaction in this nationwide poll to determine the most popular performers in ten divisions of radio.

So it might easily be said that much of the immediate future of radio revolves about the ultimate count in this important election. Just think what a tremendous part you play in this greatest of entertainment enterprises—and get busy without delay.

Remember—for your protection and that of the artists involved, only the official ballot printed in RADIO GUIDE will be accepted for tabulation. To save you postage money, the voting coupon is printed in a size which can be pasted on a post card and mailed for one cent.

So vote today, tomorrow and as often as you wish. You can vote over and over again for the same artists—or if you suddenly have a change of heart you can vote for others. No later votes invalidate those which have been counted previously. It's your contest to elect your favorites. Go to it!

FOURTH SCOTTIE OFFER

ALREADY three homes have been made happier by the presence of Scottie dogs—pedigree bluebloods of this aristocratic breed—given away by RADIO GUIDE and the News Commentator GABRIEL HEATTER whose news revue is heard over an NBC network each Saturday.

And there are still more to be given away—and not a reason in the world why you shouldn't be the next to win one of these lovable pets. Certainly the conditions surrounding your winning one are about as simple as could be. All that is necessary is to clip from a newspaper what you consider a really funny news story, the sort of yarn that Heatter likes to repeat on his broadcasts, and send it in to us along with a comment of 50 words—or less—on the subject, What I Consider Last Year's Most Thrilling News Story. Remember, there is no requirement for box-tops or labels or reasonably accurate facsimiles or any of the other externals which are part and parcel of the usual radio contest.

Winning one of these dogs is purely a matter of your ability to select a funny news story and to write a sensible, short comment on the subject mentioned. Of course, it is essential that you know what kind of stories Heatter likes—what types already have won these valuable Scottie pups. So it is important that you listen to Mr. Heatter on his Saturday night broadcasts for the makers of Scott's Emulsion.

After that it's up to you, and just because you may have made an entry that failed to win, don't let that discourage you. Each entry is a completely new chapter in this contest, so keep on trying. And if you haven't entered so far—well, it must just be because you don't want a Scottie dog.

Because it is plain that there is some confusion as to just what type of story must be submitted to make you eligible to win one of these valuable dogs, RADIO GUIDE and Mr. Heatter must emphasize the fact that only funny NEWS stories are wanted. Do not submit jokes that you clip from the paper. The clipping must be of an actual news event—but one that has a humorous angle.

Remember, too, that your clipping must bear the date on which it appeared and the name of the publication in which it was printed. Failure to comply with these provisions automatically will void your contributions. Read all of the rules carefully. Many a potential winner has been discarded because some minor rule was ignored. Don't let this happen to yours.

Be sure you heed all the conditions. Send your clipped news story and your comments on the topic, What I Consider Last Year's Most Thrilling News Story to the Scottie Editor, RADIO GUIDE, 731 Plymouth Court, Chicago, Illinois. Your entry in this Fourth Scottie Contest must be in no later than 5 p.m. Thursday, February 6. Then dial to Gabriel Heatter's broadcast on February 9 and listen for the news that you want to hear—the name of the winner of this week's contest.

LONELY LITTLE STAR

my conscience held me. Hour after hour I paced my apartment, consumed with my inner struggle.

At last, just as dusk fell, and loneliness was at its height, my conscience lost. My last doubts vanished. I would go to Dan that night. Manzoni would never know. There was no reason why, I reasoned, I should honor a promise into which he had duped me out of selfish motives.

It was nine o'clock before I had put on my hat, slipped out-doors into the blustery night and started up the street to Dan's rooms.

I stood on the stoop of the old brown-stone house, waiting, after I had rung the bell. There was no sound. I was just beginning to be afraid that Dan wasn't home, and wondering if I would find the courage to come a second time, when the latch clicked. I ran up the stairs . . .

A feeling of blessed relief, comfort, relaxation swept over me as Dan's arms closed around me. We were together again. After the long, distracting days of our separation, it was like awakening into sunlight out of a nightmare.

"Dan, darling, it's so good to see you again!" I said, my head against his shoulder.

"It's great to see you again, sweet," he answered.

THERE was something cool and mechanical about his response that alarmed me.

"Dan—what is it?" I asked quickly. He laughed a short little laugh.

"You left me hanging in mid-air for a week without a word from you. Then ask me what's the matter?"

"I've been so busy!" I pleaded.

"Too busy for a single phone call?"

"Yes—for a single phone call. Linda Logan has kept me at her side, day and night."

"Linda Logan!" he snapped. "I'm sick of hearing about her."

He turned away from me and began to pace the room.

Suddenly he whipped about and seized me by the shoulders.

"Look, Lucille," he said, "which is more important—Linda Logan or you and I?"

I did not hesitate.

"You and I."

"Then why not chuck your job? You're a good secretary. You can get another one."

"Dan, I can't—not just yet."

"And I can't go on like this," he said firmly, "never being able to reach you, never hearing from you."

GIVE me just a little while, Dan," I pleaded.

"Look Lucille," he declared, tilting my chin so that my eyes looked up into his, "is there something you're keeping from me?"

"Yes, Dan, there is something—something that involves the reason why I can't leave Linda Logan yet. Believe me, it's not important. But I'm not free to tell you just yet. I can only ask you to trust me—to have faith in me—a little longer."

Dan looked at me searchingly.

"How much longer?" he demanded.

"Perhaps a week—not more than two, I'm sure."

His forbidding look frightened me. "Please, Dan," I said, "you must believe in me!"

I gave way to tears.

Dan gathered me in his arms.

"Of course I believe in you darling," he said. "Only please do hurry. Come on—we won't say any more about it tonight. Let's forget it and make the most of the time we do have together."

Before I knew it, I heard a nearby clock chime two.

When I said good-by to Dan, I had some difficulty persuading him that it wasn't necessary for him to see me home at that late hour. Finally, he reluctantly gave in.

He went with me down the stairs and the long dark hall to the front door. I had just kissed him for the last time and was about to step onto the stoop when just on the edge of a circle of light cast by the street lamp outside, I caught sight of a familiar figure lounging against the fence.

THEN I recognized the man in the brown trench coat—the same stealthy figure whom I had observed several times of late shadowing me.

I turned to Dan in terror.

"I—can't go out this way!" I whispered. "There's a man out there. I think he's spying on me!"

"I'll take care of him!" Dan said. He started for the door.

"No! No!" I whispered, pulling him back. "Isn't there some other way out?"

"We can go through the basement into the yard and hop over the fence. There's an areaway on the other side of a big apartment. We can slip out there easily."

My heart was pounding wildly as we went down to the basement, Dan lighting the way with matches. At the fence Dan lifted me up. Something thumped and scuttled away in the darkness. I barely stifled a scream. Then I realized it was only a big cat. Dan boosted me up first.

I LET go my hold on the fence and I dropped off into the empty blackness below. I landed on hard concrete. The darkness terrified me, even though I knew Dan was right behind me. In a minute Dan landed at my side. Then we ran through the areaway, coming out on another street.

"No nonsense now," Dan said grimly, his fingers gripped tightly on my arm. "You're going to let me take you home!"

"Really, Dan, I can't let you!" I protested. "You said you believed in me," I reminded him.

"Good-night, dear," I said. "We must be patient. Try to remember that I do love you."

As soon as my fears had quieted down inside a taxi speeding me home, I knew there were no kidnap threats, no blackmail plots.

I could come to only one conclusion. Manzoni was having me followed!

Well, if he were putting it on the basis of a game of wits, two of us could play at that!

When I reached home, I saw the yellow slip of a telegram sticking out from under my door. I tore it open hurriedly with trembling fingers and read:

"Meet me in office of president of Amalgamated at ten tomorrow morning. Manzoni."

That was all. What did it mean? That my chance had really come at last? That I was to have my audition? If so, why couldn't he have said so? Well, I thought with a shrug, that was Manzoni's way of doing things—maddeningly dramatic. I hardly slept that night. I was up at daybreak, put-tering on a black suit with a silver fox scarf. It was a gorgeous morning. The sun almost dazzled me as I rode through the Park to the studio.

The president of Amalgamated had his office on the fortieth floor. At the reception desk a uniformed page boy recognized me.

"Right this way, Miss Logan," he said, clicking his heels together with military smartness.

I followed him down the long winding corridor.

I hardly thought about where I was or what I was doing, I was so intent on the coming interview.

It was perhaps for that reason that I didn't see two men approaching until they were almost upon me. When I did notice them, my heart leaped into my throat. For there coming towards me down the corridor, talking earnestly to a companion, was Dan—my Dan, my beloved Dan who must never, never know—not now, anyhow—who I was.

MY first instinct was to look around for some means of escape. At my right was a frosted glass door. Without bothering to inquire where it led, I pushed it open and slipped through. I was evidently in someone's private office, but that didn't bother me. One thought kept turning over and over in my mind:

"What is Dan Corby doing here at Amalgamated?"

The truth about Dan's presence in the office of Amalgamated will astonish you as greatly as it did Linda. And the aftermath is one you never could guess. But you may read an installment more thrilling than any so far, in next week's RADIO GUIDE!

Voice of the Listener

This department is solely for the use of the readers as a place in which to voice opinions and exchange views about radio. Address your letters, which MUST NOT exceed 100 words, to VOL. RADIO GUIDE, 731 Plymouth Court, Chicago, Illinois

Van Fare

Sirs: Henry Bentine—bully fur you. Your open letter to Gene Arnold in a recent issue of RADIO GUIDE was exactly my sentiments. Do they still have the Minstrels? We tuned in twice waiting for Gene Arnold to come back and did like thousands of others—tuned out again. It isn't fair for one of the oldest and best programs to do a complete flop but I fear this fact will be accomplished all too soon. One great item that radio shows must have, and that the Sinclair Minstrel now is lacking, is sincerity. Give us back our Gene Arnold and a good radio program. Thanks.

Megegett, South Carolina Miriam Searson
Gene Arnold's old friends all deprecate the recent substitution of Gus Van. But experts say the revised minstrel show is gaining many new listeners, nevertheless.—Ed.

Call it Jazz-tice

Sirs: Thanks for a bit of long over-due justice. I refer to your article, S-L-I-D-E. Six years ago I wrote Will Osborne the first and only fan letter I have ever penned (this is the second). In it I remember humbly predicting that some day he would get the break he really deserved. There is no doubt, in the minds of those who really know, that Osborne originated the style of singing for which a rival became famous. But that is a long-dead feud. The important thing is; there is justice—even in the world of jazz. Go to it, Will. Chicago, Illinois Irwin Ratner Latest addition to trick instruments is new slide saxophone. Ork leaders including Osborne will almost certainly feature them during 1936.—Ed.

Word to the Whys

Sirs: Why, oh why do the sponsors change the players as soon as one becomes accustomed to them?

Here I thought the Home Sweet Home program was the tops and Monday they come around with another character in the role of Fred Kent. It kind of spoils the illusions one has about the play.

Also the Betty and Bob program is all wet since they keep changing the players. One never knows who is playing who or what or why.

Beaver, Pennsylvania Edna M. Wagner
Sponsors attempt to avoid cast shifts whenever possible. For the record, the baby of Betty and Bob has had two fathers, two mothers.—Ed.

Your Praise Our Reward

Sirs: With RADIO GUIDE rating an orchard of grade A-1 plums, what will it take to give it a just reward? I just can't go without this friend as well as guide.

There is only one thing which I wish RADIO GUIDE would add to pages: a column giving us an idea of who are the lesser artists on the air. We get plenty in all magazines about the big shots but the others who are so necessary for a whole day's program hell our interest as well. So why not give us something about Ray Jones, of Mac and Ray on WBJ at 8:45 each morning, and who are all the Lanes listed throughout the week? Mary, Arthur, Priscilla, Eddie and Rose Mary?

There are plenty others of course but just to name my favorites is sufficient. But my sincerest admiration to Ted Malone. He and RADIO GUIDE are so necessary to my happiness as the sunshine; I feel very blue if I don't get them. New Bedford, Massachusetts Radio Booster RADIO GUIDE, during 1936, will show more pictures and tell more stories of the lesser known stars than ever.—Ed.

More Grace Notes

Sirs: I should like to see Vic and Sale have a better hour for their broadcast, so that they would be heard by more people. Personally, I feel that they are the finest of their type of entertainers on the radio today. The script is exceedingly clever, and the actors superb. I don't mean they need my commendation, but I can't resist telling you how I feel about this program. Pipestone, Minnesota Grace R. Bailey

Climbing on Hill

Sirs: A flock of prunes to Edwin C. Hill for his very biased review of the Supreme Court decision of the AAA act as heard during his broadcast of January 7.

He stated that any good lawyer knew weeks ago that the act was invalid. Evidently Mr. Hill does not have a very high opinion of the ability and intelligence of the three Supreme Court Justices who ruled that the AAA act was constitutional and within the law. Maybe these honored and respected individuals are out of place and should be replaced at the bar of Justice by men of Mr. Hill's caliber.

Very interesting information, Mr. Hill, but for a supposedly impartial report of a vital national problem, it's an even bet that either you or your sponsor votes the anti-administration ticket.

Great Falls, Montana D. E. M.

DEM non-identifying initials have a strangely partisan look about them. Perhaps the usually reliable Ed Hill took advantage of editorial prerogative when he neglected to say that it was the consensus among attorneys that the law was invalid.—Ed.

Edwin C. Hill: "Prunes to him for biased comments on Supreme Court AAA decision."

Good Laud, Eddie

Sirs: Do I mean it? Yes, I mean it. Three cheers for good old Eddie Cantor. I want to congratulate him on the great opportunity he is offering for some very fortunate person. If there were more persons like him in this world and in the government there wouldn't be any need for war. I think it's one of the greatest entests ever offered over the air. Here's more power to you, Eddie.

Rena, Pennsylvania Charles Miller

Listeners all the way from the White House to the lowliest homes are unanimous in praising Comedian Cantor's unselfish effort to unearth the secret of permanent peace. It lifts him far above the level on which we have been prone to place our comics.—Ed.

In Hands of Receivers

Dear VOL: I'm wondering just how many listeners are finding it impossible to enjoy many of their favorite programs because of two or more stations broadcasting on the same frequency. The Radio Commission surely must be aware that modern receivers, ranging all over the nation, picking from one coast to the other, have antedated any sectional kilocycle allotments, and now give us distorted, jumbled reception in many sections of the dial, especially from eleven to fifteen hundred kilocycles.

Boulder, Colorado Wm. W. Graham

Plans already before Federal Communication Commission in Washington may re-allocate stations soon, thus making listening a pleasure even in Colorado.—Ed.

She Probably Didn't

Sirs: We sure thought it was silly of Beatrice Blage, of St. Louis, Missouri, to give her radio away so soon.

We don't have any trouble getting stations other than those that advertise all of the time. Why doesn't she sit down by her radio some day and get acquainted with it?

Too bad some people just turn on their radio in the morning and leave it on all day and, I dare say, they don't even know what the program is about. Then why blame radio?

Illineky, Illinois Charles Bailey

Miss Blage's threat (RADIO GUIDE, week ending January 4) probably was just another of those hasty New Year's resolutions, made only to be broken. If not there's a chance for some enterprising St. Louis radio dealer.—Ed.

On Short Waves

By Charles A. Morrison
President, International DX-er's Alliance

PERIODS of changeable weather and extreme cold are seldom favorable for short-wave reception. The last few days, January 16-23, might be cast into this category. However, reception has been fair and really enjoyable as a whole.

Early morning reception has been quite consistent this Winter, and we would suggest that if you will tune your dials before going to work, say between 7:30 and 8:30 a.m. EST you can be sure of DJB, Zeesen, Germany (15.20), and GSF, Daventry (15.14).

throughout the world via the short-wave channels.

Buenos Aires Shouts

AFTER months of anticipation, the finest station in the Southern hemisphere, Buenos Aires at last has launched its powerful new short-wave transmitter, LRU, Radio el Mundo. Anyone tuning to the 19-meter band on Thursday, January 16 between 7 and 7:40 p.m. EST could not have missed LRU on 15.29 megacycles, as it came through with an unbelievably

MEET THE AUTHOR

IN LINE with the policy of expansion of the short-wave department of RADIO GUIDE, we believe you would like to know the writer of this weekly department, Charles A. Morrison. Not only is he founder and president of the International DX-er's Alliance, but he is editor of its monthly organ, The Globe Cirler; president of the Society of Wireless Pioneers; American correspondent of Radio Cultura, founder of the Campana Buena Voluntad; DX editor of Radio Craft; contributing writer for many publications abroad, and author of several broadcast DX programs. Mr. Morrison is a radio veteran and a short-wave, as well as DX, authority unsurpassed. And RADIO GUIDE is proud to introduce you to him.—The Editor.

Surprisingly enough, the 16-meter band has been good all this season and GSG, Daventry (17.79) puts through an excellent signal up to sign-off at 8:45 a.m. EST.

2RO, Rome (11.81), can be heard off-and-on throughout the morning. Pontoise, France (11.88), comes on at 11:15 a.m. EST and often is quite good at this time of day. Incidentally, France is giving much more English material than heretofore.

The 31-meter band is at its best from 5 to 8 p.m. EST. Some of the best signals may be heard then. 2RO, Rome (9.64), can always be depended upon for their English news bulletin at 6 p.m. EST. GSB, Daventry, now is on in conjunction with GSC (9.58) from 6 to 8 p.m. EST and GSB is usually the best of the two. GSA, Daventry, on the 49-meter band (6.05) is also on at that time and is steadily improving.

From 8 to 10 p.m. EST you can tune in many South American programs with enjoyment, some of the best being YV2RC, Caracas (5.8); YV12RM, Maracay, Venezuela (6.30); TIPG, San Jose, Costa Rica (6.41), and HJN, Bogota, Colombia (5.95).

The King's Death

THE most dramatic and sorrowful news of the short-wave channels for many months was the brief message flashed to listeners throughout the world at 7 p.m. EST on January 20, and received here from GSB:

"We are grieved to tell you that his Gracious Majesty the King passed on in peace at 11:55 p.m. GMT tonight."

And so with little display of outward emotion, this terse message less than ten minutes after the King's death, expressed the age-old saying of, "The King is Dead: Long Live the King," to millions of saddened individuals strong signal. Frequent announcements in English informed that "This is LRU, Radio el Mundo, San Fernando, Buenos Aires, Argentina."

Haiti Makes Debut

ASTAR of lesser magnitude has appeared with the call HH3W, at Port-au-Prince, Haiti. HH3W was heard for several days just above HP5J, Panama, on the 31-meter band, or on 9.615 megacycles, but only recently did I identify it. HH3W, is a tri-lingual station, announcing in French, Spanish and English, and using an identification chime similar to that of NBC. HH3W signs off nightly at about 8:20 p.m. EST and is best from 7:30 to 8 p.m. EST.

Many short-wave listeners would give their proverbial right eye to log a station in Alaska. Save your orbit by listening for amateur station K7VH, of Juneau, at about 9 p.m. EST on approximately 14.2 megacycles, near the middle of the American phone band of 20 meters. K7VH puts through a hefty signal some nights.

Winter Olympic Schedules

TO SPORTS devotees the Winter Olympic Games, about to start in the picturesque Germany Alps at Garmisch-Partenkirchen, are the outstanding events of the frigid months. Short-wave listeners will hear many of the events as eye-witness accounts will be broadcast almost daily through the German stations at Zeesen.

On February 6 at 9 to 9:15 a.m. EST, the Zeesen stations will bring a special trans-Atlantic broadcast of the games to short-wave listeners. This one schedule also will be featured over the CBS network. DJB, Zeesen (15.2)

The Club House

By The Clubman

LET THE snows whip the East, gales rip at the Southland and ice blanket the Middle West. Here in the Club House it is cozy and pleasant, made all the more comfortable by the warmth of the friendships which our members shower upon their favorites. What a popular place this little nook has become almost overnight! I'm glad to be in charge of it—it restores any lagging faith in human loyalty. Spread around me are so many evidences of listener devotion that I couldn't possibly pass all of them on to you. So let's just pick a few at random.

FOR instance, here's Mitzi Holmes of No. 2541 Acqueduct Avenue, the Bronx, New York, N. Y., knocking on the door and asking if she can say a word about the ROSALINE GREENE fan club of which she is president. Here's where you can literally shout about it, Mitzi, and no one will be on hand to say, "Sh-h-h-h!" The place is yours while you invite all and sundry to avail themselves of your club facilities, and that delightful booklet the Twentieth Century Magazine. Here's a golden opportunity for the countless fans who have been demanding a square deal for Rosaline to rally 'round and join the club.

AND here is a sort of querulous whisper asking me if I could possibly say something about the club devoted to BEN BERNIE. I couldn't say enough, if the truth were known, because I am the most shameless Bernie fan in the country. So who am I to ask questions? I don't know why I boost so for that old nomad, but I guess it must be the Bernie magnetism at work. He owes me letters—he fails to acknowledge telegrams, he remembers everybody else with Christmas cards and only sends me New Year greetings two weeks late, and still I say, "Let's go Ben Bernie." So to those who do not know about the organization, here's full information to all who are maestro-minded. His club seems to cover Dixie like the dew (apologies to WSB) as the president, Miss Mary Dies, lives at Room No. 416 of the San Jacinto Hotel, Houston, Texas, while a long flight across the gulf at No. 622 South Ingram Avenue, in Lakeland, Florida, sits Secretary Joy Montgomery (Miss) awaiting volunteers from the ranks of the canco conductor's admirers.

BUT I'm afraid that while we've been so busy listening to those who run clubs, we've overlooked several potential joiners whose cries for membership really should be heeded. Why, here's a chap, Donald Ware of Box No. 3, Seagraves, Texas, just clamoring to get in, and asking information that will have to come from you presidents and secretaries. Here are clubs that Donald is most eager to contact: Wayne King, Horace Heidt, Jan Garber, Joe Sanders (get busy, Sylvia); Glen Gray, Lou Palmer and little Jeannine. From the tone of his conversation it wouldn't be difficult to gather that he really goes for Jeannine. And who could blame him? However, you folks who have the answers to Donald's problem had better get in touch with him. The dues are jingling in his pocket and the fan virus is rampant in his blood. Could you find a better ready-made situation than that?

Am I not the gabby one? It would be no job at all to go on gassing here for the next two hours, but the "lights out" signal has been flashed so it's au revoir for now. But come next week. I'll be seein' you, so try and get in sometime during the next few days.

miracle to Virginia but she came in, did a role or two, wasn't charged for the privilege—but didn't collect for it, either.

However, that condition didn't prevail long. Soon she was being called more and more frequently, and got on the WLW dramatic staff at a regular salary. Then a commercial program came along. Virginia was included.

She eventually went to Chicago because its radio studios offered wider scope. Her reputation had preceded her, however, so when she appeared at NBC headquarters more than two years ago she was clapped into the Ma Perkins cast then being auditioned—and without so much as a chance to say, "What's it all about?"

That very same query is reflected in her outlook on the classic struggle between career and Cupid. How's a girl to know?—is her dilemma. She lost respect long since for the challenge that opportunity knocks but once.

And while she loves her dramatic success, its material reward, and its huge dividends of personal gratification, Virginia has no yearning to wind up life as a "ground-gripper" type with nothing in view but a long vista of a career.

If you know a way that she can eat her cake and have it, too, she'd love to get your formula. If the secret is yours, you can communicate with her in care of the station through which you have been listening.

The makers of Oxydol present Ma Perkins every Monday to Friday inclusive, over an NBC-WEAF network at 3:15 p.m. EST (2:15 CST; 1:15 MST; 12:15 PST).

Medal of Merit

AWARDED TO

Kate Smith

Kate, below, in a pose she loves to assume when she is singing your favorites

Kate's life isn't all broadcasts and rehearsals. Far from it. She tends to business herself

One reason for Kate's success is the genuine pleasure that she gets from pleasing you

THE obvious thing to say about Kate Smith and her success is that she is lucky in having so astute a manager and partner as Ted Collins. The honest thing to say is that had Ted Collins found in the unknown singer he took out of a Broadway musical show anything less than genius for the job to which he put her, Kate Smith would still be merely a big girl trying to get along.

Her great success as an artist is now practically paralleled as a coffee saleslady. To her credit it can be said that Kate Smith has won and is winning more friends through her present series than she did even during her rocket-like rise five years ago.

She brings a great gift to radio. It is, I think, especially one of warm and sincere enthusiasm. She is one of the few who can say "Cheer up," and make us like it.

Last month we explained that it is part of RADIO GUIDE's program for 1936 to call attention to those artists who serve with unusual distinction the cause of better listening. So, in behalf of her legions of friends who are readers of RADIO GUIDE, we award her our Medal of Merit.—C.M.

NOW IT MUST BE TOLD

WELL, Eddie Cantor has finished his movie and his broadcasts, and left Hollywood. And everyone is drawing deep, sincere sighs of relief.

Not that Eddie isn't everybody's pal, not that the Hollywood crowd is glad to see him go. But Eddie is such a dynamo. Such a worker.

Frankly, I think more than one doctor out here has told Eddie he'd better slow down. And Eddie has retorted gaily, "I'll slow down when I get back to New York."

He's in New York now, but we won't forget him out here. We won't forget the mad, restless pace that he hit. It's part of the Hollywood legend, how hard Eddie Cantor works.

When Eddie Cantor sings I Love to Spend Each Sunday with You, he not only means that he really likes it, but he also means he really spends Sunday with you—all of it! I know, for I saw this happen:

Sunday morning, breakfast-at-eight in the Cantor household was Eddie's first rehearsal. Ida, his wife, and Marjorie, his oldest daughter, were his first audience of the day, and between orange juice and coffee they heard the show from beginning to end. Ida was pretty easy to please. But Marjorie is a chip off the old block. She takes her humor seriously. That's why Eddie counted on her opinion so much. If he got a grin from her, his studio audience would roar.

At ten Eddie arrived at the radio playhouse where Louis Gress and his orchestra already had been rehearsing for two hours. The men always sneaked a two-minute rest and a cigarette before Eddie arrived, because they know once he came, there would be no rest for anybody.

"Good morning, boys. Good morning, good morning!" The energetic but unsmiling Mr. Cantor breezed across the stage, rubbing his hands together.

Do You Know What Eddie Cantor Goes Through Before You Hear His Gags and Quips?

By Katherine Hartley

Frenchy, his valet, and Bunky, his prop man, followed close behind him. "All right, boys. Let's get started. Let's hear what you've got!"

The boys would play the first number. Eddie walked up and down listening, pacing the floor like an expectant father. The number would be finished. At least so the boys thought, until Eddie cried, "All right. Now I'll hear it in the control room."

HE HOPPED up the stairs to the control room. The boys started to do the number over. Eddie's cool, collected voice on the loudspeaker interrupted them. "The brasses are too loud. Can't you get them back further, Louis?" Louis got them back further.

So it went, on and on, a music rehearsal for an hour and a half. Occasionally, if it were a dance number, Eddie would get up and start to dance to it, still not smiling. Once I saw him do this, and a minute later Jimmy Wallington, too, got up from his chair and Eddie and Jimmy waltzed around the stage together. It was a scream, but nobody smiled. I still don't know whether they were clowning, or just trying to discover how danceable the music was.

At eleven-thirty the music routine was all set, and Eddie himself picked up a piece of chalk and wrote out the numbers on the big blackboard from which Louis Gress got his cues. Then he spoke:

"All right, boys. Get yourself a cup of coffee, and be back here at twelve."

Rest for the boys, but not for Eddie. Even before the door closed on the last musician, Eddie had rounded up Jimmy Wallington and Parkyakarkus and the other members of the cast for their rehearsal. He directed this part of the show too, coaching lines, planning effective entrances and exits.

More than any other radio showman, Eddie stages his show for his visual audience, because he believes that the more his audience-out-front enjoys the show, the more will his radio audience.

Take his own costumes, for example. When Jimmy Wallington tells you that here comes Eddie dressed as Santa Claus, or Haile Selassie—and then when the audience roars—you, listening at your radio, know that Eddie must look funny, and picturing him in your mind's eye you chuckle, too!

At twelve o'clock the doors of the auditorium were opened, and long lines of people (some of them had been waiting for hours to get a good seat)

Eddie never is happier than when he and Ida are with all the girls. With some of them at school in the East, and the rest in California—his heart right now doesn't sing its full melody poured into the building. And at twelve-thirty Eddie gave his first show for these people. This first show was not broadcast. It was called a dress rehearsal. But it was more than that. Eddie considered it the most important and difficult show of the day. He gave it to get audience reaction. This noon show always ran more than thirty minutes, but later it was cut, according to what the audience liked and didn't.

DURING the show a constant check was made on every laugh. In the control booth, a man timed every audience laugh to the second. In another listening booth, Eddie's writers noted the kind of laugh every joke pulled—one check for a good laugh, a double check for a belly laugh, and nothing if no laugh. The show was cut according to these reports.

That's why when the first audience went home, Eddie went back to work. He and his writers spent the entire afternoon cutting and revising, and at

Of all the things for Ida to bring back from a trip to Europe—a Kewpie Doll!

Shh! It's a secret—but Eddie's determined to tell it to Elaine Johnson before Parkyakarkus gets in his licks four the new show went on the air for the East. At four-thirty this show was over—but Eddie's work wasn't. He put through a long-distance call and phoned his four daughters, who are at school in New York, for criticism.

On one program Eddie had sung a certain song which Eddie hunched wasn't very good. The melody was all right, but the lyrics had no meaning. "That was a very clever idea," his seven-year-old told him.

"What was a clever idea?" asked Eddie, puzzled.

"Singing a song without any words," she answered promptly.

Eddie can take it, and did. And on the third version of Eddie's show—which he gave at eight o'clock for Western audiences—that particular song was replaced with another.

THREE shows a day, that's all. Marjorie says: "You'd think he'd be worn out after the third show is over. You'd think he'd want to take a hot bath and tumble into bed. But do you know what really happens? Daddy gets home about nine, and with him are his writers and his gag men. They have a quick bite to eat, and then go into the library. They're there till after midnight, working on next week's show!

"I used to go with him to the studio on Sundays. But I got worn out just watching him. Now Mother and I listen at home—and enjoy it!"

So that's how Eddie spent his Hollywood Sundays with you. But it's not all. His program is never off his mind.

IF YOU heard the show on December 7, you'll remember the gag he pulled about "Eddie's a barber"—a play on Ethiopia's Addis Ababa. Eddie told me that joke originated when he went to the movies one night and saw a newsreel in which Lowell Thomas reported the situation in Addis Ababa. And so he built an Ethiopian routine around it. He often gets his ideas for an entire routine from just one joke.

And the joke may occur to him in a theater, in a restaurant, at a dinner table, in a barber's chair, or even in the midst of a serious conversation with someone. If you're talking with Eddie, and suddenly he gets a far-away look in those big pop-eyes of his, there's only one explanation. Eddie has just thought of a gag.

But while Eddie doesn't laugh at his own jokes, he's a perfect audience for other comedians. "Sure, I'm just a yokel when it comes to laughing at other comics. I get a tremendous kick out of them. Why, I've got about fifty favorite comedians. I couldn't begin to name them all. Victor Moore is my pet. Why, I even laugh at my girls' jokes."

It's true, nothing pleases Eddie more than to have the girls send him their ideas. Marylin—she's seventeen, and the second oldest—is constantly making up jokes for him, and her letters are filled with professional words such as routine, gag, blackout, etc., and she uses them all in the right places, too. This tickles Eddie to death, but Marjorie doesn't like it very much. "I think she's after my job," she told me. "But over my dead body—"

AND there, ladies and gentlemen, is the secret behind the apprehension everyone in Hollywood felt over Eddie Cantor. They knew he was working hard . . . much, much too hard.

He's in New York now, with all his troupe of funny men, gag men, and yes-and-no men. His daughters are close by so he doesn't have to use the long-distance phone to get their reactions to his likes, but the move still costs him money. For he still talks to Ida, his wife, and Ida is sometime in California, sometime in Florida, and only now and then with Eddie in New York.

ing with their portable broadcasting equipment. And almost masked from the glittering audience by a semi-circular array of potted palms sat Harold Stern's orchestra, the strains of its music filling the room with melody. Coming into the singularly beautiful room from the hustle and bustle of of apology. It was then that I learned that the Reds had put her on a spot all their own. Perhaps Margaret wouldn't be so nervous if circumstances hadn't already proved that this diamond-studded program can incite some of its listeners to crime and violence.

At left, Miss Santry prepares to broadcast her interview with Baron Von Detman and Nino Martini, the popular opera and radio star

EVERY TIME Margaret Santry signs off she invites you listeners to join her at the Ritz for a spot of tea. But oh, my brothers and oh, my sisters, take heed, for in the interest of honest journalism, I must report that you're apt to be tossed out on your ear if you decide to honor her request.

I had an invitation to tilt teacups with the personable Margaret, and almost wound up in the hoosegow for my pains. It's always embarrassing to be given the bum's rush—but in the Ritz of all places! There a fellow hasn't even the consolation of saying: "Zounds! I've been thrown out of better places than this!"

Was this the way society treated its guests, I wondered as I was yanked into a secluded corner of the swanky Palm Court Room by a pair of huskies and subjected to a third degree. Had the Santry gal gone high hat? . . . or was I simply imagining the whole thing?

Not at all. Incredible as it may sound, Margaret is haunted by the fear that the Reds are after her! Despite the protective atmosphere of culture and refinement which completely surrounds her at the Ritz, this darling of the Four Hundred actually is afraid that some wild-eyed disciple of Communism will come bursting in upon her and toss a bomb at her feet! Anonymous threats of that kind actually have been made.

Judging by the letters they write, the radicals consider Tea at the Ritz one of their pet peeves. In the beginning, Margaret Santry paid no attention to the threatening missives. It was simply a gag, she decided, and continued blithely to present the almost legendary figures of society before the microphone, and to chat with them informally about such intimate matters as the cut of a dress, their ideas of love and politics, the decorative schemes of their bedrooms, and kindred topics never touched on by the elite except in the privacy of their mansions.

BUT gradually the threats became uglier. There were warnings—danger signals in red—and the implication of each letter was plain. The radicals resented the parade of America's aristocracy down the airwaves, and demanded that the broadcasts cease.

Finally, anonymous phone calls began to flood the exchange at the Ritz. It was then that Margaret Santry came down with a bad case of jitters . . . and it was then also that I was treated like a stew at the opera when I arrived for the interview.

It was near broadcast time, and the swanky Palm Court Room was crowded with something like a hundred million dollars of America's most expensive and exclusive people. Over in a far corner of the palm-fringed room sat two husky young engineers, fuss-

Madison Avenue was like stepping suddenly from one world into another. Everybody who was anybody in society was there. Seated about the tables sipping tea or cocktails were the Sidney Dillon Ripleys, General and Mrs. Charles H. Sherrill, Mrs. Oakland Rhinclander, Mrs. Manville Gould, the Pierre C. Cartiers.

"Good afternoon, Miss Santry," I began, moving swiftly toward her table.

But that was as far as I got. She emitted a startled, frightened gasp. "I'm not Miss Santry," she said, her face a pasty white, her head averted. And just then I was seized by the two husky engineers, who hustled me unceremoniously into a far corner.

"Who are you? What do you want here?" they asked ominously.

I flashed my press card for identification, vowed that I was an unsullied Democrat, and pleaded that I had come merely to keep a press appointment with Miss Santry.

Whereupon I was marched back to Miss Santry who, naturally, was full

For instance, there is the case of a celebrated society dowager who was rapped over the head by a thug and relieved of her jewels. Margaret, of course, swore me to secrecy as to the identity of the principal, so let's call her Mrs. Blank.

SOME weeks ago Margaret presented Mrs. Blank on her program, anonymously. During the course of the microphone tete-a-tete, this Social Registerite related how she had been robbed of many thousands of dollars' worth of valuable jewels by thugs who gained access to her home by posing as delivery men for a florist. As she stooped to sign for the corsage, they conked her over the head and stripped her of all the gems she wore.

"That happened some time ago," related Miss Santry, "and Mrs. Blank of course didn't expect any violent aftermath to her little anecdote. Yet, the day following the broadcast Mrs. Blank's dearest friend was visited by two florist delivery men who assaulted her and relieved her of her diamonds. Apparently some one listening to the program had utilized the idea, with equally successful results!"

Fantastic, isn't it, that one of radio's most aristocratic amateurs unwittingly should have taught criminals a new trick in their own trade?

BUT it isn't only the radicals and criminals who are led into paths of iniquity by this program. For example, there is the droll story of the lady prohibitionist. Of course, once again you can understand why I can't tell you the name of this eminent society matron, this staunch detester of the demon rum, who is the heroine of the hilarious episode. She's such an important personage, however, that we'll call her

Mrs. Hold-Your-Breath-at-the-Name. With firm and haughty tread she approached the microphone. Her confidence was superb. For years she had been accustomed to dominate meetings of the Women's Christian Temperance Union—and radio would be a cinch.

But that beady little black microphone has a stare like a snake's eye. Facing it, our dominating dowager became a frightened bird. As air time approached she began to fidget with her diamond encrusted purse, and with each nervous tremble the costly bag threw blue, green and orange fire as its diamonds moved beneath her nervous hands. Finally she could stand it no longer.

Margaret Santry's alertness, her keen mind and her charm all are apparent in her face

"I could hardly believe my eyes," Margaret told me, "when those fumbling fingers suddenly threw open the bag. A shaking hand dived into its depths and came out clutching—a small bottle of whiskey! Without pause or apology that dear lady, that pillar of the WCTU, upped the bottle and downed the drink in one shuddering gulp. It was just the stimulant she needed, for she went right into the broadcast and did a good job."

When it was all over, there was just one tiny moment of embarrassment. Then she said naively: "I had heard something against the terrors of the microphone, so I came fortified against failure."

MARGARET SANTRY first appeared before the mike shortly after she was graduated from New York University. Her first radio talks were devoted to social welfare work for the YWCA.

Shortly after this she was asked to write a radio column for the New York American, where she was subsequently shifted to the society department. In 1930 her paper commissioned her to visit the world-famous Nobel family in Sweden. Her series of articles on the Nobels brought her international fame.

Tea at the Ritz wasn't a planned program—it came about as the result of an accident. Margaret is the proud mistress of a country farm, a charming old house near Tuxedo, New York; and to this farm each Summer flock hundreds of her famous friends. The guest list of any of these gay gatherings reads like a who's who in society, literature, stage, screen and radio.

TO ONE of these gatherings on a week-end last Summer came Robert Goelet, owner of the Ritz-Carlton Hotel; Mr. and Mrs. August Belmont; Lady Wilkins; Prince and Princess Obelinsky, Mrs. Oliver Harriman, and others of the 400.

Margaret still doesn't know what possessed her to say it, but suddenly she exclaimed: "What an ideal setting this would make for a broadcast!"

Every one dismissed the remark with a laugh, except Mr. Robert Goelet. "Why not?" he exclaimed, slapping his thigh. "Of course it would be impractical to broadcast from the farm. Why not meet at the Ritz several times a week? There's our title for a program—Tea at the Ritz! I'm sure we'd all have a lot of fun—and you should have no trouble interesting a sponsor!"

The rest is history. Tea at the Ritz became one of the outstanding radio novelties of the year. Society, oddly enough, loves to parade before the mike, and to date hardly a celebrity has escaped Margaret Santry's friendly radio cross-examination. The listeners love it too—with the exception of the disgruntled radicals, of course—for Tea at the Ritz marks the first time that the socially elect have condescended to remove the barriers that separate the Four Hundred from the Hundred Million.

The Pompeian Company presents Margaret Santry in Tea at the Ritz every Monday, Wednesday and Friday over the CBS-WABC network at 4:45 p.m. EST (3:45 CST; 2:45 MST; 1:45 PST).

ON SHORT WAVES

probably will be your best at that time. On February 8 at 1:30 p.m. EST, not only Zeesen but Daventry will feature the games. Your best bets from Daventry should be GSI (15.26) and GSD (11.75).

The Question Box

OPENING up our readers' Question Box, I find that C. H. Stirk, 349 E. Elm Street, West Union, Iowa, wants to know the frequency of NX2Z, the Greenland amateur I told you about recently. NX2Z is on approximately 14.01 megacycles at the extreme low frequency end of the 20-meter "ham" band.

Incidentally, NX2Z says that they have ceased worrying about the snow as it is so deep in Hopsteter, Greenland, that they can't measure it.

I wish to invite readers to send in their unidentified stations, or other questions concerning short waves, and I will endeavor to answer them in this column. By the way, I would like to know how you like the new short-wave section department and hear your suggestions and comments.

DISCARD YOUR OLD AERIAL
It Is Most Likely Corroded and Has Poor or Loose Nolsy Connections
NO MORE BUZZES, CLICKS and shorts from summer rains and winter snow and sleet when using an F. & H. Capacity Aerial Eliminator. Equals an aerial 75 ft. long, strung 50 ft. high, yet occupies only 1 1/2 in. by 4 in. space behind your radio—guaranteed to give you nationwide reception or your money back.
BETTER TONE AND DISTANCE GUARANTEED
Sensitivity, selectivity, tone and volume improved. No lightning danger or unsightly lead-in and aerial wires. Makes your set complete in itself. Forget aerial wires and troubles—more your set anywhere.
NOT NEW—VALUE ALREADY PROVED
On the market five years, 80,000 satisfied customers in U. S. and foreign countries. In use from the Arctic Region of Norway to the Tropics of Africa. Chosen by Government for use on Naval Hospital bedside radios. Each factory tested on actual long distance reception. Can not harm set—does not connect to light socket—no current used—no danger of shocks or blow-outs.

FIVE TONS OF TERROR

Speed to the Charlestown State Prison . . . Break in progress . . . Break in progress at Charlestown State Prison . . .

Never dreaming of this human storm that they had drawn down upon their own heads, Red McManus and his men ran madly towards the potato sheds.

But by now policemen and prison guards began to pour into the yards. A machine gun rat-tat-tatted.

Naples dropped and died. The rest scattered and escaped for the moment. O'Brien and McArdle crawling into a produce shed. Immediately police bullets smacked into that shed. The two lifted their hands and were taken alive.

McManus and Joyce managed to hide under another shed. McManus was bleeding now from police bullets.

"There they go!" shouted Sergeant Thomas Friel of the Boston police. And Detective Francis Conlon, working with Friel, joined him in a quick dash to the dark hole into which the fugitives had crept.

"Look out!" Conlon shouted. "There's a lot of underground passages around these sheds. Those guys might sneak under the tracks!" There was a flash.

"All cars . . . Surround the sheds and guard the railroad tracks beside the Charlestown Prison . . . Some of the escaping convicts have taken refuge in or near some sheds beside the tracks . . . All cars . . . Surround the sheds . . ."

Car after car arrived. Police lines surrounded the sheds. Officers patrolled the tracks. Apparently, Red McManus and Frank Joyce didn't have a chance. And yet these desperate men were not ready to surrender.

"Are you hit, Red?" Joyce whispered. "Yeah, they got me a couple times. Not bad though. I'm all right."

As the two thugs talked, they had been moving farther and farther away from the patch of light which marked the entry to their underground lair. Now a shadow darkened that little opening, and a grim voice cried:

"Come on out, you two!" There was no answer.

And then, in the small opening where light showed, there were suddenly little flashes. A machine-gun stuttered. In that cave-like lair where the thugs covered, its noise roared and re-echoed. Bullets whispered in the dark air, and ploughed into wood and earth.

"Ugh!" grunted Red McManus. "They got you again?" Joyce asked as he crouched behind the body of the ringleader. McManus groaned.

The machine-gun stopped. "Coming out?" an officer's voice laconically shouted.

But there was still no answer from under the shed. Then some hard object suddenly plopped down upon the earth. There was an explosion. Not a shattering explosion—but instantly a deluge of tear-gas was released in the enclosed air. Another gas-bomb exploded. And another.

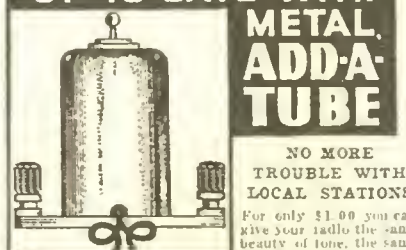

That ended it. When the air had a chance to clear a little, Superintendent King, Deputy Superintendent John Anderson, Sergeant Friel and Detective Lawrence O'Connor crawled under the shed to drag out the prisoners.

They brought them out, helpless. And that night McManus died.

Thanks to radio, the deaths in this prison break were kept down to three: the unfortunate truck driver Richards, Naples and McManus.

As Guard O'Donnell, recovering from his cracked head, said: "Radio puts 'em in—and keeps 'em in!"

THE AIR MUSIC IN

By Carleton Smith

LEOPOLD STOKOWSKI informs us that the reason the Philadelphia Orchestra is broadcasting less, is not because he is against sustaining programs, but for an entirely different reason. "I am convinced," he says, "that the best results can be obtained by broadcasting from a studio with special pickup methods and with no one present in the studio except the musicians and engineers who are absolutely necessary to do the work."

Mr. Stokowski is absolutely correct in his statement.

No Audiences

MOST of the more serious artists have banned studio audiences, and JOHN CHARLES THOMAS makes the following explanation:

"Radio is the most intimate entertainment of them all, for it enters the home offering entertainment designed for the individual rather than for one selective group. It is meant for a lone traveler on a long journey, as well as for a solitary occupant of a cabin in the middle of a woods.

"People who live in pent-houses high above the glare of city traffic, enjoy it from the same viewpoint as the farmer who tills the soil in the lowlands. But it certainly is not designed for a few hundred people whose curiosity leads them to be spectators at a broadcast.

"I believe that visitors at the studios should be banned on the basis that the artist, in trying to entertain the spectator, is likely to forget the much larger listening audience. Personally, during a broadcast my attention is always focused on the man at the controls, and this would mean in most instances that my back would be to the audience. But I always face that control engineer. He's the best friend I have in the radio broadcast."

Metropolitan Opera

GENERAL Manager EDWARD JOHNSON is very considerate of Saturday matinee listeners. We will hear ROSA PONSELLE in Carmen February 1 (NBC, 1:55 p.m. EST; 12:55 CST; 11:55 a.m. MST; 10:55 PST), and what is now the most popular of all operas, Wagner's Tristan and Isolde on February 8 (NBC at 2 p.m. EST; 1 CST; 12 noon MST; 11 a.m. PST). Artists will be LAURITZ MELCHOIR and KIRSTEN FLAGSTAD.

Three B's

A program of the three B's directed by Toscanini needs no further comment.

OTTO KLEMPERER will conduct the Los Angeles Philharmonic-Symphony in the second of its present bi-weekly series of broadcasts February 7 (NBC at 5:45 p.m. EST; 4:45 CST; 3:45 MST; 2:45 PST).

ALEXANDER SEMMLER plays Beethoven's Sonata in A major, Opus 2, No. 2, in the series (CBS, February 2, at 10:35 a.m. EST; 9:35 CST; 8:35 MST; 7:35 PST) in which he is presenting all the Beethoven piano sonatas.

MAN CAN NOW TALK WITH GOD

"A new and revolutionary religious teaching based entirely on the misunderstood sayings of the Galilean Carpenter, and designed to show how we may find, understand and use the same identical power which Jesus used in performing His so-called Miracles," is attracting world wide attention to its founder, Dr. Frank B. Robinson, noted teacher, author and lecturer.

"Psychiana," this new psychological religion, believes and teaches that it is today possible for every normal human being, understanding spiritual law as Christ understood it, "to duplicate every work that the Carpenter of Galilee ever did"—it believes and teaches that when He said, "the things that I do shall ye do also," He meant what He said and meant it literally to all mankind, through all the ages.

Dr. Robinson has prepared a 6000 word treatise on "Psychiana," in which he tells about his long search for the Truth, how he finally came to the full realization of an Unseen Power or force "so dynamic in itself that all other powers and forces fade into insignificance beside it"—how he learned to commune directly with the Living God, using this mighty, never-failing power to demonstrate health, happiness and financial success, and how any normal being may find and use it as Jesus did. He is now offering this treatise free to every reader of this magazine who writes him.

If you want to read this "highly interesting, revolutionary and fascinating story of the discovery of a great Truth," just send your name and address to Dr. Frank B. Robinson, 403 2nd Street, Moscow, Idaho. It will be sent free and postpaid without cost or obligation. Write the Doctor today.—Copyright 1935, Dr. Frank B. Robinson.—Advertisement.
