Happy Listening

IT TOOK one of the world's most famous summer resorts to teach us a lesson about broadcasting and happiness.

Recently we stopped with friends at one of the most expensive summer hotels in America. Its rooms were full of wealthy vacationers. Most noticeable to us, however, was the number of wealthy men's wives who had fled north from the heat. At first glance these women appeared to have everything good the world could offer. Their clothes were fashionable, their coiffures were perfect to the last finger-wave. The crook of a finger brought flunkies to serve them whatever they required.

But during our second and third days we noticed how desperately each was attempting to escape boredom. Every face had a tired, hunted look. Throughout the days, those rich but bored women drank cocktails and played bridge. Throughout the nights they drank cocktails and gambled. Hungrily they sought distraction afresh with the passing of every hour. And the passing of every hour only served to remind them of their boredom.

We talked to some of those women and asked them if they ever listened to "One Man's Family." None of them had ever heard of it. We asked if they knew about O'Neill's dramas and the Bayreuth festival and the Chicago Cubs' baseball games, all on the air. But none of them listened to the radio.

And we thought of another woman in whose home we had stayed while driving through the country. She ran a home for tourists. Her husband had died and left her with nothing but a house full of furniture. Her bright, eager eyes are still in our memory. Her questions about radio personalities are still to be answered in a letter we promised to write. She was not bored, for one of the pieces of furniture her husband left was a radio. And through it, she was a citizen of the world.

So the lesson we learned about broadcasting and happiness was this: The woman in the house by the side of the road knew much more of the joy of living than any of those rich men's wives, despite their money and their clothes and their power. She knew more because a man who died just last month once turned his genius into a machine for sending sounds through the air. She had learned, as every real citizen of the world must learn, that switching on the radio that Marconi invented is like raising the curtain on life.

We hesitate to touch a subject which is so thoroughly wrapped up in politics and special pleas, but we do want to voice the listener's point of view in connection with complaints made recently about Station WLW and its exclusive use of "super power."

It just happens that WLW is depended upon for staticless reception by more listeners spread over more states than any other station in the country. It has been alleged that WLW has profited by its use of the super-power permit issued by the government, and now politicians would penalize WLW by withdrawing that permit. Actually, listeners would be hurt most by this.

DON AMECHE, BEWARE!

LES TREMAYNE THREATENS TO BECOME THE NEW MATINEE IDOL OF THE AIR!

NOT too long ago for vivid remembering, Don Ameche was America's number one Radio Romeo. Young, dark, sleek, romantic, he was the script-show's lone eagle of the air-planes, his feathers unruffled by competition's ugly breeze, his wings strong and rival-resistant, his monarchy of the microphone absolutely unchallenged.

But time flies, scenes shift, and new faces keep appearing.

That's why I say that Don Ameche'd better watch out.

He'd better watch out because there's a newer, younger, Romeo menacing his monarchy. This fellow is a Briton, his name is Les Tremayne, and he gave up a sizable legacy just to become an actor!

Now in case you happen to be one of the few who may not recognize Les offhand, let me remind you that this 24-year-old landed one of radio's most coveted assignments only recently when he stepped firmly into the elegant boots Don Ameche left vacant at the "First Nighter" microphone in the Little Theater Off Times Square.

A year or so ago Tremayne was a comparative unknown. Today, only a few months after his "First Nighter" debut opposite Barbara Luddy, he is generally conceded to be one of the most important figures in the industry. In fact, he's become so important that there's an unmistakable creak of uneasiness emanating from the starched-shirt fronts along radio row.

"That Tremayne," the boys mumble into their black ties. "Something the matter with a guy that'll give up a fortune just to be a radio actor. He must be touched in the head."

Touched he is. But not in the head. Touched with ambition—that's Les' trouble, if you can call it trouble.

Sitting high up in the shadows of the Merchandise Mart which houses Chicago NBC studios, I asked Les to tell us something of his lost legacy and something of the ambition that skyrocketed him from bit-player to star—a star with a contract said to be one of the most unique in radio.

"Really," he stuttered, and here a fog of British reticence enveloped the room. "there's not much to tell. I've always wanted to be an actor, ever since I was born."

He didn't have to wait long after this event to become an actor, for his mother, Dolly Tremayne, was a motion-picture star in England before the World War. That's why crashing the better than anything else in the world."

Aunt Kathy leaned forward on her cane. "If you'll do as I say," she told him, "you won't need to be an actor. You won't even have to work at all. But you must promise . . ."

"No," shouted Les.

"I'll give you ten more years," Aunt Kathy said briefly. "You can decide then."

This was in April, 1921.

Soon afterwards, Les and his family moved to America, where Dolly Tremayne, acceding to her husband's wishes, decided to give up the stage permanently. "I didn't, though," Les says now. "It's really surprising when you stop to think how many jobs I lost just because I wanted to be an actor—long before I ever became one. I was errand boy, paper boy, cherry picker in an Oklahoma orchard, private secretary to a Chicago physician, barker in a cheap amusement park, jockey on a third-rate race-track, pin boy in a bowling alley, bus boy, bell-hop . . ."

"I tried everything," he flicked an ash airily. "Finally, on my 18th birthday, one of my fellow bellhops introduced me to a radio production man, who cast me in a local Chicago show without even so much as an audition."

FROM that second on, acting was definitely in and Aunt Kathy, definitely out. A bird in the hand, Les figured, was worth two in the bush, and radio work in America was worth twice as much as a hypothetical fortune waiting somewhere in England. After all, Aunt Kathy might change her mind.

So he sat down and wrote to her. He was eighteen now, he reminded her. Old enough to know what he wanted. He still wanted acting. Radio was a medium he wanted to explore. He was sorry if she couldn't understand. He hoped she'd forgive.

The answer to his letter came back by cable. "You act," Aunt Kathy growled. "I'll disinherit."

Les acted, all right, but he didn't collect.

His first eight months in radio not only paid him very little but cost him money in the bargain. Cannily enough he had held on to his hotel job, thus, every time he got a studio call, he had to hire a substitute to hop bells. Soon he was paying out more than he was taking in.

"Radio cost me a lot that first year," Les says now, "but I've never been sorry." And there's no reason why he should be sorry, for after that first difficult apprenticeship, he never had to hop another bell. He was too busy hopping back and forth between microphones.

In the space of six months, he worked for NBC and CBS and the cinema was easy for Les, and that's why he was the Freddie Bartholomew of his day back in 1917 . . . "I played in lots of pictures with Mother when I was four," he remembers.

But even if his mother was a picture star, his maternal grandmother an opera singer and his mother's brother a picture producer, there were still the paternal relatives to be considered.

The Tremaynes, it seems, didn't care for the theater. Most bitter of all was Les' great-aunt Kathy, a fierce martinet with a silver-headed cane and a lorgnette—and, of course, enough money to give these formidable accessories plenty of background! She disliked her nephew's idea.

Aunt Kathy had great things in mind for Les. She didn't want him to follow the traditions of his mother's family. Didn't want him in the theater at all. In fact, she sought to bribe him . . .

It was on his eighth birthday that Aunt Kathy called Les into her study. "Son," and this very harshly, "I want you to promise me something. Promise me you'll be barrister, banker, bartender, bum, when you grow up. Anything," and here she exploded violently, "anything but an actor."

"Oh, I say," Les expostulated with eight-year earnestness. "I can't do that, you know. I like acting. Like it

IF YOU'VE ever seen a football game, you've heard the remark. Everybody has heard it at one time or another.

"Sure, these college boys are good—but put them up against a tough professional team and you'd see a rout!"

Don't you believe it! Not for a minute! There's not a bit of truth in the statement, and if you're hard to convince, you have only to tune in the College All-Stars-Green Bay Packers game on Wednesday night of this week. You can't be sure who'll win, you can't be sure who'll turn out to be the top-flight star of the encounter—but you can be sure that you'll hear one of the closest, hardest-fought games of this year or any other year! You won't be witness to a rout!

Four years ago there was some justification for the then-common idea that good professionals could beat good college players without much trouble. The experiment had never been tried, and sports fans had nothing to judge from except the infrequent—and always disastrous—professional-college baseball games. In baseball, there was no question about it: the pros would win. They did—almost invariably.

BUT football? Well, there've been three All-Star games, and so far the total margin of victory in favor of the professionals is five points. The first game, in 1934, was a 0-0 tie. The next year it was a 5-0 win for the pros, and last year another tie, this time 7-7.

And when the finest football players in the whole wide world trot out under the glaring field lights of Soldiers' Field in Chicago for the 1937 tussle, a good portion of the 80,000 fans in the stands, and just as big a contingent of the millions listening to the radio broadcast, will be betting on the college squad, hand-picked from campuses all over the land!

By the way, the All-Stars game is not to be confused with the annual classic between a picked team of eastern college players and the New York Giants. That game will be played this year on September 8. It differs from the All-Stars game in that the players, from eastern schools only, are not chosen by popular vote but by newspaper experts, and their professional opponents are always the Giants. The All-Stars play whatever professional team happens to be champion at that particular time.

And that combination makes the "dream game" of the year. Reason for that isn't hard to find. If you sat down with paper and pencil tonight, to pick two teams of the toughest, fastest, all-around best football players in the country—and that means the world, because American supremacy in football can't be questioned—you'd have to choose the men who'll be facing each other on Soldiers' Field September 1!

And as a matter of fact, that's just how the teams were chosen! A nationwide poll was conducted by 150 newspapers under the sponsorship of the Chicago Tribune. Fans in big cities and hamlets, on crossroads farms and prairie ranches made listings of the players they considered worthy of a place on the honor team of college football. Their votes were carefully tabulated, and the players they named have been in Chicago in rigorous training for the game since August 14!

EASIER to choose, because they play in more unified leagues, are the professionals. Whereas the college teams are divided into dozens of groups, all competing within themselves and with each other, the professionals play in two leagues. Since the All-Stars game has been played, the champions of the National League have upheld the professional side of the argument. In 1934 the Chicago Bears were tops, and in 1935 again. Last year it was the Detroit Lions, and this year the champion Green Bay Packers, whose home stamping-grounds are in Fort Atkinson, Wisconsin, will try to win a decisive victory over their so-called "schoolboy" opponents. They're apt to find the going hard, because by the time a schoolboy has grown to a height of six feet, weighs 190, and has three years of college competition under his belt, he's apt to be a fairly rugged customer. He'd better be, or he won't have any business crouching across the line from men like Arnie Herber or Don Hutson of the Packers! It will be interesting to see what happens when Herber, who played college ball at Wisconsin and St. Regis, meets, for instance, Sam Francis, the great Nebraska fullback who polled the terrific total of 1,104,372 points in this year's All-Star selections.

ALTHOUGH the fans pick the coaches for the All-Star squad as well as the players, the methods are different. To make a choice of players, each voter sends in his best complete team. These votes are tabulated, and the player

COMEBACK: JAY C. FLIPPEN—SUN.

BACK in the Twenties when vaudeville was the cream of show-business and "Ramona" was the tune on everyone's lips, a bushy-haired comedian by the name of Jay C. Flippen was knocking them for a loop.

In those days Jack Benny was a violinist who played his fiddle feebly and told feebler jokes, Edgar Bergen was a ventriloquist in the opening act along with trained seals and acrobats and Bob Burns couldn't get booking outside of the tank towns. But Flippen was a star, the envy of his contemporaries.

Today—

Well, you know what's happened to the first three. Benny has been signed to a non-cancelable three-year contract for $1,000,000. Edgar Bergen and Bob Burns are the biggest money-making newcomers in radio. But Flippen? Well, he finally has his chance at the networks. As yet it's only for three weeks on the Good Gulf Summer Show from August 22 to September 5. And at that he's just subbing for Harry von Zell, who is subbing for Phil Baker.

Some would call it a come-down. But Flip hasn't been traveling around in the two-a-day most of his life without picking up vaudevillian's happy philosophy.

Flippen is irrevocably tied up with Broadway. His pals are the old-timers who frequent Lindy's Restaurant more to meet their cronies than to eat, and his open-handedness is typical of the actor who never quite lost the free-spending habits of his palmier days. The Big Street, which has taken a beating by Radio City and that upstart known as Hollywood, is keeping its fingers crossed for its son who has received the same trouncing. If Flip clicks on the Good Gulf program the merry parade of sponsors holding out fat contracts will be on his trail. If he doesn't—well, Flip will have to go back to his Amateur Show on New York's local WHN.

FLIPPEN'S breezy manner dovetails to the best Broadway traditions, but it smacks also of the bigness of the West. He was born on a windy morning in March in Little Rock, Arkansas. After high school there was a window-dressing job for a dry-goods store. When the small-town boy heeded the call that every small-town boy and girl at some time or other hears, he left to go on the road as an actor.

He went through all the ropes of a dyed-in-the-wool trouper. Burlesque, musical comedy, night clubs and vaudeville. And like the dyed-in-the-wool trouper he was deaf to the blasting of radio and the movies. His technique was the sure-fire, quick comedy that is best across the footlights. Not for him the business of calmly reading off lines a hired gag-writer had written before an impersonal round little gadget suspended by a wire.

But the fellows who were reading off words from a typewritten sheet were beginning to ride around in imported phaetons, and Flip was still hailing twenty-cent cabs. He appeared as one of the guests on Rudy Vallee's program in 1932—he made the audience laugh, but nothing else happened.

When Major Bowes left the WHN original Amateur Hour to hit the gong on the networks, there was a vacancy on WHN for another master of ceremonies to carry on where Bowes had left off. Vitriolic, wise-cracking, quick-tongued Flippen was the perfect answer.

And yet, although he did as masterful a job of conducting the Amateur Show as his predecessor had done, Flip wasn't being baited by the network sponsors who held the money bags. Week after week he joked with amateur violinists, tap-dancers and bird imitators. Week after week he saw newcomers like Milton Berle, who had hung around his dressing-room in the old days, become high-ranking comedians with audiences counted in the millions.

When the sponsors of Phil Baker's program were rounding up guest artists to fill in the gap while Phil was vacationing, Flip was one of those who were signed. His first appearance on August 8 was a hit. It had to be a hit, for upon that appearance depended the question of whether or not he would be signed to round out the three weeks during Von Zell's vacation. Now, if Flip clicks on these three programs, it may be the break he needs. His Broadway cronies hope so.

JAMBOREE: THE GIRL SCOUTS MEET—TUES.

ON TUESDAY afternoon of this week, over the CBS network, Bob Trout, whose announcing duties take him to presidential inaugurations, on submarine dives, to golf links and on Easter parades, goes to Briarcliff Manor, New York, to interview smiling, youthful delegates to the first International Girl Scout Jamboree, in session at Camp Andree.

The celebration marks the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Girl Scout movement, begun by Juliette Gordon Low in Savannah, Georgia. The Juliette Gordon Low Foundation has made possible the visits of Girl Scouts of twenty-six countries to the American camp. And CBS, with Bob's help, will bring that Jamboree directly into the parlors of every Scout-loving home in America.

Camp Andree, the scene of the broadcast, has an interesting background. It was named for Andree Clark, daughter of United States Senator William A. Clark of Montana. The Clarks spent a great deal of time, during Andree's childhood, traveling in foreign countries, so that when they returned to their native land Andree felt strangely unlike an American girl. It was her association with the Girl Scouts that helped her to overcome her shyness—live like an American girl.

After her premature death at sixteen, Andree's parents discovered in her diary a great appreciation for what the Scout movement had done for her. And to express their own appreciation, the Clarks presented the land and the camp to the World Association of Girl Guides and Girl Scouts to be used as a gathering-place.

Today, a hundred and one girls are gathered there, both American and foreign born. It is a little experiment in international relations, for the "Big Sister" system is in force and each group of foreign girls lives in a group of Americans, so the former can be helped with their English and learn American customs. One delegate from Czechoslovakia learned all the English she knows in three months.

CAMP routine includes sports, arts and crafts, entertainment and study. All plans are in the hands of the Scouts themselves. They have set up many interesting evenings of fun, to which the foreign delegates have contributed their talent.

One international evening included a sword dance by the Chinese representative, a fencing dance by the Japanese, group and individual dances and songs by the Scandinavian delegation, and songs by the Polish girls.

The Irish Girl Scout instituted a regular community sing by teaching the audience some Irish jig-tunes.

Bob Trout will interview several of the delegates, asking them questions about their camp activities, their impressions of America, and about their Scout branches at home.

Bob is a veteran of Scout interviews. He has officiated at Boy Scout Jamborees for the past two years and remembers particularly the meticulous care with which the English delegates answered his questions.

Just what the Girl Scouts will be like at the microphone, Bob isn't prepared to say. But one thing he feels sure of—that they will probably not be so much addicted to the practise of "swapping" each other's possessions as Boy Scouts usually are!

STORIES IN SONG: BY HORACE HEIDT — MON.

THE mad scramble for something new, something different, is the bane of every orchestra leader's life. But Horace Heidt, genial leader of the band he calls "The Brigadiers," is never at a loss for an idea. Often he takes care of the problem by arranging a program of songs that were popular yesterday and would be today if it were not for the incessant public demand for new material. Such a program is going on the air from Toronto on Monday of this week when Heidt and the Brigadiers, on tour, broadcast from the Canadian city.

"Vagabond Lover," "The Very Thought of You," "Nola," "When My Baby Smiles At Me," are among the yesteryear favorites scheduled for the Monday Heidt broadcast. Songs with a story, every one of them, and every one of them dear to the heart of some famous orchestra leader.

Still more closely associated with Rudy Vallee than any other song is "Vagabond Lover," written in April, 1929, by Rudy himself and Leon Zimmerman, and the most popular song in America during the entire summer of that year. Heart and soul of "Vagabond Lover" are probably in the lines:

*"Some girls are quickly forgotten
And gone with the dawn of the day,
And some you remember
Like last glowing embers . . ."*

VALLEE used "Vagabond Lover" as a theme song for years, picked up the title for the story of his life, and the song was used in the film of the same name.

"Nola" is another melody that will always live in close association with one man and one orchestra: Vincent Lopez and his band. No one else can play "Nola" as Lopez plays it, and very few feel like trying. He found the number while idly leafing through a music publisher's catalog in 1921. Lopez remembered hearing a recording of the song, remembered, too, that he hadn't liked it. But Miss Catherine Jovee, an employe of the company, suggested he run it over on a house piano. He did—three times—decided he liked it. Since then Lopez has played "Nola" thousands of times. Not long ago, Nola Arndt, who really inspired the song, wrote one of her own, called "Trying To Say That I Love You." Lopez, in appreciation of what "Nola" had done for him, introduced it on one of his broadcasts.

The oldest song Heidt will play Monday night is "When My Baby Smiles At Me," known for years, from one end of the land to the other, as the personal theme of Ted Lewis, the grand old master of jazz. Lewis didn't write the song. It was "discovered" about twenty-five years ago by Harry von Tilzer, who heard it played at Churchill's old restaurant, then located at Broadway and 49th Street in New York. Tilzer called Lewis' attention to it, they looked up the composer, then re-wrote the number. No one in America can sing "When My Baby Smiles At Me" as Ted Lewis sings it.

Very British indeed in origin is "The Very Thought of You," which Heidt plays Monday night in honor of its composer, Ray Noble. Noble, English orchestra leader who created a sensation when he came to this country a few years ago, wrote "The Very Thought of You" when he was musical director of the British Viotor Recording Company. He uses it as a theme.

MELODRAMA: RADIO GUILD—FRI.

LISTENERS who confine their dial-twisting to nights have been missing a lot of good dramatic programs. The hour from 3 to 4 p.m.

EDT Friday on NBC is chuck full of thrilling tales. On the red network, in succession, come "Pepper Young's Family," "Ma Perkins," "Vie and Sade" and "The O'Neills." And on the blue network is NBC's sustaining pride and joy, the Radio Guild.

There's a program that packs a punch. It has no policy; it follows no trend; it aims only to produce plays that entertain.

On Friday afternoon of this week, Radio Guild presents a good old Western yarn—a thrilling story of crude love, adventure, loyalty and sacrifice. It's Clyde Fitch's "The Cowboy and the Lady."

True to typical melodrammer, the story opens with the boys of Teddy's ranch returning from a lynching party. The boys just got tired of old man Tanner's drunken fits and the way he treated folk thereabouts, went out and strung him to a tree. But they like Tanner's daughter, the pretty young Midge. In fact, a couple of the boys secretly love her. So does Teddy, boss of the ranch. Only Teddy's love is different. To him, Midge is only a child. He wants to make a home for her. With all the boys around, the only way he can do it is to adopt Midge as his sister. There is a lot of amusement as Teddy tries to reform the boys now that a girl is around.

Mrs. Weston, wife of a cowpuncher, comes to pay the boys of Teddy's ranch a visit to invite them all to a dance. She isn't getting along with her husband, as everyone knows, and Teddy confesses that he would like to win her. As Mrs. Weston leaves, she falls over a ledge. Teddy rescues her but takes advantage of her unconsciousness to forbid the boys to let it be known that it was he who was the hero. Not until Mrs. Weston is gone does Teddy let it be known that he broke an arm in the rescue.

Act II takes place in a dance hall two weeks later. It is the scene of Mrs. Weston's dance for her eastern friends, who are on their first visit to the West.

Midge shows up in her Sunday dress and the boys go wild about her. Dave calls Teddy aside and begs him to help win Midge's love. No sooner does Dave leave than Pete comes to seek Teddy's assistance as cupid. Then comes Joe. Meanwhile, Midge had already confided to Teddy that she loved Joe.

The villain enters in the person of Weston, the irresponsible husband. He dances with Midge, then takes her for a walk. Midge flies in screaming, saying Weston said things that were insulting.

TEDDY'S ire is aroused and a fight seems inevitable. But Midge begs Teddy to be calm and Mrs. Weston holds them apart. It is agreed that Teddy and Weston will meet outside later in the evening to "have it out."

Mrs. Weston takes advantage of this incident to tell her husband that she is through with him. She orders him to go his own way.

It turns out that Weston is making a play for any woman that comes his way. As soon as his wife leaves he goes to the room of Molly, owner of the dance hall, and they plan to run away together. As Weston and Molly come down the stairs, Jim, a half-breed Indian who is madly in love with Molly, picks up Mrs. Weston's gun, which is lying on the bar, and shoots Weston.

When the lights are turned on, Teddy and Mrs. Weston are both in the room. Each thinks the other did the shooting. Midge brings the sheriff, who starts to arrest Mrs. Weston. But up steps Teddy to say, "I am the one you're looking for."

Act III takes place in the courtroom where Teddy is on trial. He is acting as his own attorney. In questioning Joe, one of the ranch hands, it is brought out that Joe did pop the question to Midge and that she accepted. And Teddy makes Mrs. Weston confess she loves him.

The jury finds Teddy guilty. As he stands for sentence, Molly, who is a spectator with Jim, jumps up and shouts, "He didn't do it!" Jim grabs her and yells, "Shut your jaw," draws his gun and shoots. Thinking Molly is dead, Jim confesses all. But Molly lives, Mrs. Weston says she still loves Teddy, Joe and Midge gets hitched, and thus ends the Radio Guild show for September 3.

"HAMS" THEY CALL THEMSELVES

BY ALTON COOK

UP AT Joe Cook's place one night someone was fiddling with the radio, tuned to the amateur band. Out of a storm of static came the call, "CQ, CQ, CQ . . . CQ, CQ, CQ."
"Whatzit?" asked one of the group. "Somebody missing a cue, maybe?"

"That's a radio amateur," explained round-faced Sam Schriro. "They're great people. 'Hams,' they call themselves. 'CQ' means 'I'm a lonesome ham and won't some other ham please talk to me?'"

"They're the craziest people in radio. The other night I heard one of them telling a buddy how the plumbing in his house made interference. So he took out some of the pipe, which meant some of the bathrooms were without water, but it had improved his sending, and he couldn't complain. His buddy topped that one. He said he'd had the same trouble with his furnace, so he took out the furnace. He was pretty cold, but he's sending a great signal now."

Maybe the Joe Cook atmosphere was leading Sam into a little harmless exaggeration, but you know yourself that the amateur bands today do send out some fairly strange conversations. "Ham talk" is a code unto itself, a queer gibberish of abbreviations: QSN for static; QSM for man-made interference, such as refrigerator or vacuum-cleaner or electric-sign noises (your typical amateur has no use for any or all of these devices); QSO for signal, DX for distance.

A short-wave addict in the family is really no worse than a golfer, a chess player, or a stamp collector. The golfer may protest he's building up his health, the chess fiend may boast of his terrific powers of concentration, and the philatelist may brag that his stamp collection would be worth millions, if he had the right stamps—but the short-wave operator has more valid arguments. Year in and year out short-wave operators take part in heroic little dramas, often unnoticed, wherever disaster appears. These men and their playthings, if you want to call them that, have saved thousands of lives.

The floods of last spring studded newspaper headlines with heroic stories of what short-wave operators had accomplished in alleviating one of the worst disasters of modern times. With the Mississippi and Ohio rivers threatening to wash away whole cities, radio's hams stuck by their sets, maintained communications, coordinated rescue work. Broadcasts to the wondering, waiting world outside the flood area were made possible only by short-wave sets, and without them, authorities agree, the toll of property destroyed and lives lost would have been infinitely higher.

The exploits of these radio hams are not always set against a background of grim disaster. When the New York National Guard started its annual maneuvers last summer the latest radio equipment was set up for communication between units. In the field with them were short-wave operators of the national networks, broadcasting progress of this military carnival. Ranks of one National Guard company included an ingenious radio ham who thought of a scheme to confuse the enemy. With a few odds and ends of apparatus he set up a radio interference to blot out the enemy's radio communications. The strategem might have led to a noble victory, but unfortunately the interference also blanketed the neighboring wave-length that network announcers were using for their portable short-wave sets. NBC had to cancel one program from the encampment, and then amused officers told the over-zealous young man, "Don't do that any more."

It is in times of distress, however, that newspaper headlines most frequently ring with exploits of hams who the night before were casually chatting their strange gibberish into your own radio set. Frigid North Atlantic storms lashed at lonely Halfway Rock Light one night, ripping away the landing slip and marooning Pendell, assistant keeper of the light. Robert Strout, lighthouse-keeper ashore at the time, remembered that Pendell had often fiddled around with a short-wave radio set and talked to a fellow amateur at Falmouth Forside, Perley Swasey by name.

Strout rushed to Swasey, got messages to Pendell's anxious wife and encouragement to Assistant Pendell as waves pounded at the lighthouse foundations. That's one of the smaller services amateur radio has performed for the men on lonely lighthouse vigils.

There was another night on another coast when Pacific gales flung torrents over the top of the 135-foot-high Tillamook Rock lighthouse on the Oregon coast. Rocks were hurled through the lenses of the light, submarine cables washed away before word could be sent that the warning beacon on this dread reef had failed. This lighthouse-keeper, Henry Jenkins, was a radio ham too, but there was no set in his lighthouse.

BRAVING rain, wind and wave he managed to rig an antenna at the top of the tower, improvised a set from a broadcast receiver and miscellaneous equipment below. From this came his feeble QRR, the landsman's SOS. Another ham picked it up and sent word to the United States Lighthouse Service. Immediately marine wireless began sending messages that warned vessels away from those rocks.

The Army and Navy have taken their count of the forty-five thousand amateur radio operators in America. If war should come, they will be part of the first line of defense—with need for secret radio communications multiplied ten thousandfold by war conditions.

War has already made use of American radio hams. Early in 1915's submarine warfare days German U-boats seemed to be unaccountably getting word of sailings from American ports. Uncanny luck could not explain the presence of submarines in the path of Allied food and supply transports time after time. Governmental check began to locate any possible leakage of secret sailings. A German subsidized station on Long Island was suspected but nothing incriminative could be found in its messages.

A pioneer amateur, Charles Apgar, with a little home-made set in Westfield, New Jersey, was interested and used to listen to the messages from ANDY is about to annex a new Madame Queen. Charles J. Correll, second half of the Amos 'n' Andy team, has announced that he will be married on Saturday, September 11, in the Wee Kirk of the Heather to Alyce McLaughlin, former dancer, and fly his bride that evening in his own plane to Del Monte, several hundred miles up the Coast from Hollywood, for a two-day honeymoon—abbreviated because Andy must return for his broadcasts Monday night. The bride's mother, Mrs. John F. McLaughlin, of Chicago, will be matron of honor and Andy's father, J. B. Correll, of Peoria, Ill., will act as best man. The future Mrs. Andy, a sparkling, brown-eyed brunette, is excitedly making plans for their new Holmby Hills colonial mansion, for which ground was broken last week. Its location is several miles west of the home of the Freeman (Amos) Goddens.

And, speaking of A&A, they very nearly turned up Monday of last week without their regular announcer, all because Bill Hay played good samaritan and helped a woman motorist back on the road near Glendora, Calif., where he and Mrs. Hay had been week-ending. Returning to his parked car, Bill was just about to resume his journey home when bang! he thought the rear end of the car had exploded. Attempting to open the car doors, he found them jammed, and then he first noticed his ear—with emergency brake still on—had been smashed fifty feet forward along the highway by another careless woman driver who nonchalantly had crashed right into the rear of his car although he was to the right of the outer edge of a four-lane highway! Fortunately, the Hays seemed to have escaped with nothing more than a bad shock. Their car, however, was a write-off.

Sunday coffee hour songstress, Dorothy Lamour, and her mother Carmen, are pals of Producer Dwight Cooke. The other night Cooke invited them to a return dinner engagement at his home—and was presented (of all things) with a complete set of interior decorations for his den, including drapes with a design of musical notes. . . . Dorothy's hubby, Herbie Kay, flew into town week-end before last and then the pair of them planed over to Catalina to spend Sunday night at the dream isle where Herbie's band will be opening on September 1. And is Dorothy excited? Hubby will be in town all of four happy weeks.

Not so smoothly, however, goes the wedded bliss of Martha Raye and Buddy Westmore. Martha and Buddy are quite insane about one another, but the two kids are having the battle of their lives to keep that love uninjured by outside interference. Mother Raye accompanied Martha to New York on her recent personal-appearance date there; Buddy, a hard-working youngster who is not yet in the big money, was staked to fare to follow his wife there by his brother Ern, the celebrated make-up artist. Buddy won't use Martha's money; Hollywood whisperers say Mother fears Buddy will. It's all very silly and sad if true.

Jack Benny will make two pictures, and possibly three, each year for four years for Paramount at approximately $100,000 per picture, according to a new picture contract reported completed by cable with the Europe-va-tioning funnyman. At the same time, his wife, Mary Livingstone, was trans-Atlantic-phonied by the same studio to tell her the good news that her contract option had been taken up. The Bennys both are elieving in pictures as they did on the air—and maybe their air success and build-up didn't help! Latest personal note from Jack is that he expects to return from his summer vacation abroad by September 12 and he would like to drive from New York to Hollywood—to see America last.

Marlyn Stuart, pretty brown-eyed blonde who has such an easy job of it on the Ken Murray show, stood up her Hollywood boy friend last week when Jack Allbright arrived from New York. Marlyn has discarded nine pounds, has five more to go to reach the 112 mark called for when she goes before the camera for Murray's coming Universal picture, "Young Man's Fancy," in which Oswald also will take part.

Men will wear blue linen shorts about town next summer if Eddie Cantor is a criterion of male fashions—for that's what Eddie wore when he attended the last Texaco broadcast just to see how his old show was getting along. . . . Maureen O'Connor, the 13-year-old songstress of the summer Cantor series, aside from making good on that program, is making goo-goo eyes at Cinema Youngster Jackie Cooper, whom you'll be able to hear with Al Pearee Tuesday night of this week. . . . Saymore Saymore has two champions who don't believe a word they hear about her on the radio. They're her children, and they won't listen to the Texaco show because their mama is razzed so unmercifully—so there!

One of radio's best leading men remains undiscovered by Hollywood air producers—and your reporter means Vin (Jack Arnold) Haworth. Prohibited by an early movie contract from doing radio work, that clause has now expired. Perhaps a few of you who Haworth, trained early on the Bard of Avon, did splendidly in both pieces; may also be seen as a principal in Joe E. Brown's latest picture, "Riding on Air." Why, I wonder, must second-rate and has-been movie "names" be cast in ether dramas when a polished radio actor with Haworth's popularity is available?

How do you like this? Frances Langford, a very busy gal now that she's started to work making the "Hollywood Hotel" picture with Dick Powell for Warner Brothers, is being driven around town in a "bed" limousine supplied by her movie bosses. Idea is that Fran can relax every available moment.

Amos 'n' Andy will be the guests of the opening broadcast of the Packard Hour when it returns to the air on September 7. This is one of the very few times the famous blackface comedy team has ever guested on any commercial program other than one controlled by their own sponsor.

HOWDY readers! This vacation business that takes place every year is a great thing. Before I left I was kind of jittery, but after two weeks in the Adirondack Mountains I feel fit as a fiddle and ready for the big radio season that's not so far away.

The day before leaving on my annual rest period, I journeyed to Philadelphia to pay tribute to Boake Carter and present him with the RADIO GUIDE medal for being voted radio's most popular commentator in the recent Star of Stars contest.

As some of you may know, Carter has been broadcasting from his home ever since ole debbil pleurisy got the best of him. The studio is actually his cozy den and the microphones stand on a folding card table. In a regular radio studio before the broadcast goes on the air, the announcer asks for silence, but before Boake goes on the air, Mrs. Carter informs the telephone operator to discontinue service for the next twenty minutes and both receivers are removed from the hook to make sure the phone doesn't ring while the commentator is on the air. During the broadcast, Carter sits creak with hands on his hips and a stop-watch in front of him just so he doesn't run overtime.

In his den he has beautiful paintings of his lovely wife and another of his charming twelve-year-old daughter Gladys, who on this particular night was allowed to stay up past her bedtime to watch her daddy receive the medal. I was amazed to learn for the first time that years ago portrait painting was Carter's profession, and if you could see those beautiful paintings of his frau and daughter, I'm sure you would agree he is quite an excellent artist.

Great consternation was felt for the future of Phil Lord's pet program, "Gang Busters," when an injunction was served prohibiting him from dramatizing the story of Martin Durkin, murderer of a G-man. Durkin, eligible for parole in eight months, had his lawyer take action on the grounds that dramatization of his story would jeopardize his chances for parole. On Wednesday, August 18, at 5:30 p. m. New York time—the deadline set by CBS for this program—Lord, not having heard the decision of the United States District Court in Chicago, submitted a substitute story for the presentation the same night. At 6:20 p. m. a decision rendered by Judge Le Roy Adair came through—in favor of Lord. But because the deadline had been passed, the Durkin case could not go on the air. However, Lord announced plans to broadcast it August 25.

Patterned after her "Advice to the Lovelorn" newspaper column, the program will be on the air Tuesday through Friday for fifteen minutes, and will consist of four or five skits dramatizing the type of problems that are cropping up in the domestic lives of so many of our fellow citizens. After each brief sketch, Beatrice Fairfax, who is about fifty-something, married, and the mother of two sons, will give her sought-after advice.

I'm warning those that get scared easily that the famous mystery program, "The Shadow," returns to the airlines in a few weeks. It will be a half-hour production and will be heard over the Mutual and Yankee networks.

The Vox Poppers, Messrs. Parks Johnson and Wally Butterworth, really didn't anticipate the huge response they received when they asked listeners to write in if there was a covered bridge in their town. Thus far, they have received 11,381 reports calling attention to 1,243 covered bridges. Vermont leads with 222;

Pennsylvania 178; Indiana 171; Oregon 126. More letters came from California listeners despite the fact the state boasts only 17 covered bridges.

According to Arthur Godfrey, his session announcing the Professor Quiz programs wasn't exactly what he expected when he took the job. On a Washington, D. C., station Godfrey has a program sponsored by a number of parties, which gives him a nice fat pay envelope. The mainstay of his success is his effective and spontaneous chatter which he thought he would be allowed to do on the Quiz program. But after these many weeks, having found that he is relegated to straight announcing, Godfrey left the Professor's program last week and will concentrate on his radio duties in Washington.

Francis White returns to California when her guesting on the Cavalcade of Music comes to an end. Upon her return to the West, she will give a concert in San Diego.

Gertrude Berg, who authored Bobby Breen's movie, "Make A Wish," arrived in New York August 19 to start work on her "Rise of the Goldbergs," which returns to NBC on September 12. She is already at work on a second screen story for Bobby, tentatively titled "Streets of New York," which goes into production in September.

Not so many seasons ago, the radio fans were yelling, "We want Cantor" and boosting him for President. Well, those listeners got their wish. Eddie has become the president of the newly formed American Federation of Radio Artists, which is allied with the A. F. of L. Even in the entertainment field, where most things are supposedly all milk and honey, there is a union. One thing is assured, however: with Cantor as the head man, racketeers haven't a chance to muscle in.

Another mystery program that is bound to prove quite popular is the new "Phyl Coc" series that will be heard over a great many stations throughout the country. The stories are intriguing and the listeners will have the opportunity of winning cash prizes totaling $50,000. Be sure to listen for it.

PERSONAL APPEARANCE

BY CHARLES ISAACS

A GALAXY of stars, heroes, champions, and assorted national figures! An enviable group of radio guests that cannot be found outside the national network programs. That is, excepting the "Ladies First" program, broadcast from WCCO, Minneapolis, five days a week.

When Florence Lehmann, mistress of ceremonies, decided that listeners to this half-hour show would appreciate hearing personal interviews with famous people passing through or stopping in Minneapolis, there began a parade of personages that has established a record of some sort. With the program approaching its first anniversary, Miss Lehmann has interviewed over six hundred people, and the majority of these were nationally known.

"I've presented everyone from actors to parachute jumpers," Miss Leh-maid Eleanor Holm Jarrett, Evelyn Chandler, the ice-engraver, are a few from the world of sport that were brought to the WCCO program. Mr. and Mrs. Piccard, the stratospherists, told of their experiences in the ether over the ether. Elmer Hinck, stunt pilot and parachute jumper was another aviation representative. Kate Hepburn wouldn't talk, but her mother did a nice pinch-hit job. Writers Margaret Banning and Irving Stone had their say, and even Antonne, the famous French hair-dresser, "set" a few airwaves.

IT IS not always easy to obtain guests who are only pausing in the city.

"Our program begins at three o'clock, and that happens to be train-time also," says Miss Lehmann. "Sometimes I wire ahead, but usually it is a case of coercion, violent diplomacy,

Florence Lehmann, mistress of ceremonies on WCCO's "Ladies First" show, with Eddy Duchin, one of 600 celebrities she has interviewed mann says. "We get the actors when they're up and the parachute jumpers when they're down. Actors are favorites, especially one like John Boles, who was the direct cause of an avalanche of letters. (Perfumed.)"

Two to five guests appear on each program, but not all are exactly famous. People visiting the United States for the first time from far-flung countries such as South Africa, China, India, Iceland and others, are brought to the microphone. There has been also a conglomeration of guests with queer or distinctive jobs. A train announcer, auctioneer, calliope tuncer, and the only other trainer in the country made their debuts on the "Ladies First" program.

BESIDES John Boles, Hollywood names appearing on this show were Gladys George, Mary Carlisle, and the stage star Blanche Yurka. Ted Shawn, the dancer; Charles Coleman, Metropolitan tenor; Helen Jepson of opera and Paul Whiteman fame, were interviewed here. Eddy Duchin, Bob Crosby, Leon Belasco and Cab Calloway are a few of the orchestra leaders who have been on the local air. The great musicians, Mischa Elman, Percy Grainger, Dimitri Mitropolis, Lauritz Melchior, Albert Spaulding, and Jose Iturbi appeared here. The ex-champion, Jimmy Braddock, was interviewed before the fateful day resin got in his nose. Broncho Nagurski, former Minnesota football star, now heavyweight wrestling champion, had a head-lock on the mike just recently. Miss Lehmann netted Fred Perry and Ellsworth Vines, the great tennis "raquetters." Patty Berg, golfing girl-wonder, mer-and high pressure to pull guests off the train, rush them to the studio, wave a sheet of queries before their eyes, and then introduce them."

In the history of the program there have been only two cases of temperament. Segovia, the Spanish guitarist, refused to enter the studio until the large audience was removed. This task accomplished, Miss Lehmann began introducing him to the radio listeners. At that moment, two more people walked into the studio. Segovia gave one artistic snort, dashed out the door, and disappeared. Miss Lehmann hurriedly introduced another guest and the program went smoothly on.

The other "case" was when Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins consented to appear. As she was about to enter the studio, however, she announced she would exercise her woman's prerogative, and she changed her mind.

Most of the visitors have been very gracious. Artur Schnabel, the pianist, supplied the studio staff and audience with many laughs when he appeared. He was told not to smoke in the studio so he laid his cigar down and forgot about it. Later he began his search for the stogy, and announcers and engineers joined in. The only trouble was they thought he was looking for his glasses or some mislaid music sheets.

It would take page upon page to list the people of renown who have appeared here, but if you, too, are a movie actor, champion, famous musician, or flea-circus trainer, drop a line to Florence Lehmann and she'll find room for you on her very notable show of notables.

DON AMECHE, BEWARE!

Mutual networks. Dozens of local stations spotted him on twice that many programs. He was director, announcer, narrator, actor.

He became famous for the quality of his impersonations—quality that became quantity after he had imitated successfully the voices of Franklin Delano Roosevelt, Clarence Darrow, Charles Lindbergh, Mussolini, Al Smith, Hitler, Schnozzle Durante, the late King George V, Marconi, Admiral Richard Byrd, G. B. Shaw and—yes—Mahatma Gandhi.

Meanwhile, sponsors of the "Betty and Bob" program were not unaware of Les Tremayne. Don Ameche, who had the lead in their morning script-show, had decided that his "First Nighter" and "Grand Hotel" programs furnished enough work for him.

"Find a substitute for me," he begged "Betty and Bob" executives.

Cudgeling their brains for a pinch-hitter, Ameche's bosses considered Les . . . "That fellow, Tremayne," one of them ventured. "Let's give him a try."

Thus the youth who had relinquished a fortune to try his luck on the air came into his first really important radio role. He thought maybe he was going to get places after all.

AND he wasn't far from right, for not long afterward Don Ameche signed a motion-picture contract and left Chicago for Hollywood and a picture career. This time it was the "First Nighter" sponsors who held a conclave. They could move the "First Nighter" show to Hollywood, they knew, thereby keeping Ameche as head man. On the other hand, there was "Grand Hotel" to be considered. Ameche was head man there, too. It would be pretty inconvenient to move both shows to Hollywood. Why not do the "First Nighter" from the West Coast with Ameche in the lead and get a new partner for Anne Seymour and "Grand Hotel"? That's how Les got his second major break.

When Ameche and his "First Nighter" sponsors decided to go their separate ways, Les Tremayne was the logical choice for his successor.

That's how Les got his "First Nighter" contract—a contract that sets a radio precedent in that it guarantees him 52 weeks' work a year for a period of three years. Now he's so busy he's given up his part in "Betty and Bob." His last broadcast in that role was on August 20.

Tall, handsome Les Tremayne is my idea of an actor who will go far and stay long. He's pinch-hit himself to the pinnacle of radio, and if my hunch is right, it won't be many years before you'll be seeing him in pictures too. He's got all the making of a star.

Les Tremayne may be heard Fridays on "First Nighter" over an NBC network at:

EDT 10:00 p.m. — EST 9:00 p.m.
CDT 9:00 p.m. — CST 8:00 p.m.
MST 7:00 p.m. — PST 6:00 p.m.

NOT ANXIOUSLY AWAITING

Dear Editor of Radio Guide: In these days before television I can't help but think of all the advantages that our present radios have over television. That may sound strange, but I mean it!

I wonder if there aren't many like me for whom music is enhanced by the fact that we cannot see the performer. When watching a singer in church or concert, my attention is often distracted by the singer's hat, her dress or the way she distorts her face to accomplish certain tones, and much of the beauty of the song is lost. With television we would have to see the silly mannerisms.

I am one who feels, while we may be gaining much, we will also lose much when television arrives.—Mrs. R. T. Harper, Hastings, Nebraska.

The nation would be reluctant to leave their radios then! . . .—Clarence Hammann, Jr., New Orleans, La.

Voice of the Listener: . . . My idea of a perfect radio hour: Milton Cross as announcer, Fred Allen and company to furnish the comedy, Rudy Vallee's orchestra to furnish the music, Ted Husing to do a sport talk, Richard Crooks and Margaret Speaks to do the singing, "One Man's Family" for a short play, Fred Astaire for some tap-dancing and the Carborundum Band to close the program with the few lively marches! . . .—Stanley Burke, Cohoes, N. Y.

NO, MR. SMITH

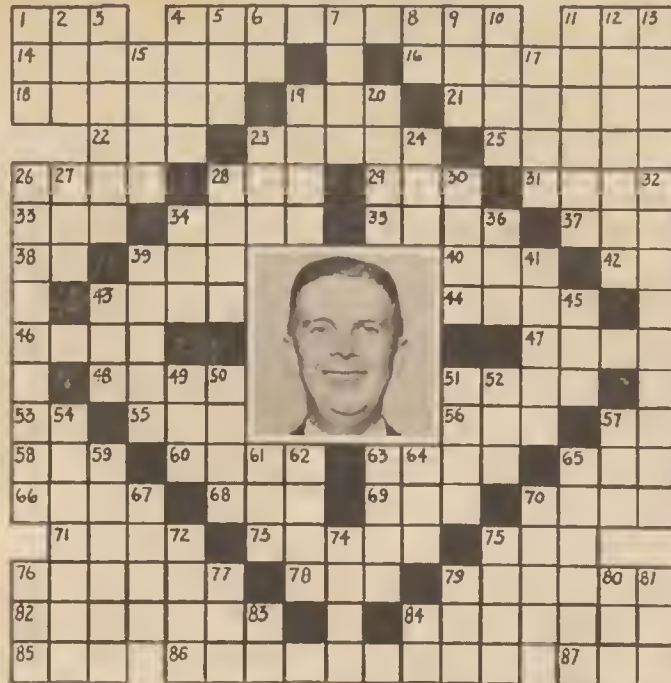

VOL: It takes a variety of opinions to keep this old world—and Radio Guide—humming, and for my initial expression to your publication, I desire to give a few reasons why I, only a listener—and not your Mr. Smith—consider Nelson Eddy the paramount singer of radio, screen and concert. To begin with, he is not a "show off" singer (frequently found among the Met Opera circle), trying to exhibit how loud and strong his voice really is. Instead he gains the correct interpretation of each song through smoothness, proper handling of his voice and above all, perfect enunciation. In other words, when I wish only musical tones I listen to a symphony and when I desire to hear the words of a song that are set to beautiful music, I listen to the rich, clear voice of Mr. Eddy.

No, I would not rate him along with other well-known singers and actors, but ahead of them, because when he sings and acts, his performances are Nelson Eddy and not the 1-2-3 style of every other artist.—Elizabeth F. Phillips, So. Milwaukee, Wis.

SCREEN STAR GUESTARS

VOL: I don't think it fair for screen stars who only appear on the air in occasional guest appearances to be included in a radio popularity poll. I refer specifically to Joan Crawford, Robert Taylor, Jeanette MacDonald, Clark Gable, and one or two others. Don't misunderstand me—I love the movies and I like all of the stars I have mentioned, but I just don't think they belong in this poll.

It is particularly unfair for Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy to receive second place as actors, when neither of them are at all outstanding for their acting, despite their lovely singing voices. Miss MacDonald should certainly not be ranked above Joan Blaine, Anne Seymour, Elsie Hitz, and other radio troupers.—Margaret A. Connell, Des Moines, Iowa.

REFLECTION

Voice of the Listener: The deadly dullness of the summer filler-inners on the radio makes me yearn for the coming of fall and the return of the regulars—and prompts the somewhat sheepish thought that the programs we spend nine months of the year picking to pieces for what we consider to be their shortcomings are pretty darn fine entertainment, after all.

We never appreciate a drink of water until the well goes dry.—James A. Wallace, San Francisco, Calif.

ANENT STUDIO APPLAUSE

Gentlemen: Why, oh why do so many programs put in handclapping that is so loud that anyone living in apartments has to sit at the radio monitoring the program as it comes in if he cares to hear it properly and yet not wake up the next-door neighbor's baby with applause that sounds like a cross between hail on a tin roof and the general reverberations of a wrecking-crow? The same can be said of screams of so-called terror, etc.—why make it so terribly much louder than the balance of the program?

This is perhaps the nuisance of nuisances and transcends by far commercial announcements, which anyone knows are necessary, and to my mind often instructive if not only reminding. I hope this will bring about some study of the subject. It's been growing worse.—"A Radio Listener."

THE END

VOL: I tire of serials that drag out forever, for no matter how interesting the story and the characters may be in the beginning, they become both tiresome and ludicrous when dragged out through a maze of unbelievable adventures.

"Follow the Moon" was perfect, so let us have more serials (if we have to have MORE serials) that are complete in something less than five or six years.—Mona Nelson, Washington, D. C.

receiving the greatest number of votes is named for his position on the varsity, or number 1 team. The player with the second highest total ranks immediately beneath him, naturally, and when a first-string player is taken out of the game, substitutions are made in order.

To select the coach—this year Charles Dorais of the University of Detroit—the fans name first, second and third choices. This method allows for selection of assistant coaches. Lynn Waldorf of Northwestern, Elmer Layden of Notre Dame, Jimmy Phelan of the University of Washington, and Bernie Moore of Louisiana State are aiding Dorais in training the 1937 All-Stars.

Coaches of that caliber should be able to turn out a pretty fair team, especially working with material that is little short of perfect. To have merely two or three of the 1937 All-Stars report to him for a season's play, any coach in America would cheerfully mortgage the old homestead.

HERE they are, eleven men who'll face the Green Bay Packers when the opening kickoff spins into the air at Soldiers' Field:

ENDS—Gaynell Tinsley, Louisiana State, and Merle Wendt, Ohio State. TACKLES—Edwin Widseth, Minnesota, and Averill Deniell, Pittsburgh. GUARDS—Steve Reid, Northwestern, and Max Starevich, Washington. CENTER—Bud Svendsen, Minnesota.

QUARTERBACK—Vernon Huffman, Indiana.

HALFBACKS—Robert LaRue, Pittsburgh, and John Drake, Purdue.

FULLBACK—Sam Francis, Nebraska.

And right behind them are such players as Steinkemper of Notre Dame, Golemske of Wisconsin, Glassford of Pittsburgh, Kuhn of Illinois, Basrak of Duquesne, Wilkinson of Minnesota, Danbon of Notre Dame, and Buivid of Marquette.

All told, there are 65 men in training in Chicago now, every one of them a star in his own right.

THE Packers are in rigorous training, too. They don't expect a walk-over, far from it. And no wonder! Not only are they facing the cream of the college crop of footballers, they're facing men who may be after their own positions! For many of the All-Stars, this will be the last game of their amateur careers. Some of them are already signed up with professional teams, and more of them may be after the final whistle of the game.

Interest in the game—which costs the Chicago Tribune $60,000 to stage and which netted $35,000 for charity in 1936 after expenses had been paid—has increased by leaps and bounds every year it has been played. In 1934 the votes sent in by the fans totalled 782,000. When the last adding-machine had clicked out the last digit this year, the figure stood at 5,036,466. Eighty thousand of those five million and more voters will crowd into Soldiers' Field Wednesday night. The rest of them, and you and you besides, will be sitting next their radios, straining to hear every play of the game that comes but once a year—and is worth waiting twelve months to hear!

heckler had no terror for the quick-witted George Bernard Shaw. His willingness to enter into verbal conflict—and his ability to more than hold his own when involved in a battle of wits—are no new developments in Shaw's life. In his younger days, of course, his sharpness did not have the world-wide reputation that it has today—but it was there just the same, and Shaw was never at a loss for words. Indeed, it has been this faculty that has carried him upward through a number of jobs to a position that is unique in the world of drama.

Shaw was a journalist, a critic of music and art, an indefatigable pamphleteer, a ranking debater, an essayist, before he finally sprang into the limelight as a playwright. It is in the field of drama that he has made his greatest successes and will be best remembered, although many of the other works from his pen—Shaw's total production is amazing—will probably share immortality.

No writer in our time has attracted so much attention to himself as Shaw. For years, his least remark has been front-page news—because he wanted it to be! For instance, when he was last in America, a year or so ago, his caustic remarks about the uselessness of the United States Constitution made news from one end of the land to the other. He has denounced Mr. Average American as being ninety percent moron, has frequently called him "The Great American Boob"—and has been extravagantly praised by Americans from Coast to Coast in spite of it!

THOSE who know Shaw best realize that he is not merely an impish groupie clown but a great writer, perhaps a genius of the first rank, and a thinker possessed of a deep social conscience. Shaw's clownings and evasions on the world's stage are simply a part of the campaign he planned when he stood, penniless and without prospect, before the literary citadels of London so many years ago. He realized that, to be known, one must be talked about; and since he could not at that time make people talk about the things he wrote, he set about making them talk about the things he did. It worked so well that he has never given it up. Shaw's instinct for forthright honesty and his dislike for red tape are sometimes confused with his prankishness. For instance, a few months ago an American writer whom Shaw knew wished to adapt one of his plays for the screen, but was refused permission by the Hollywood producers. When Shaw heard about it, he transferred the copyright of the play to the American, making him the absolute owner, putting him in a position to dictate not only what should be done about the adaptation of the play but everything else about it!

INTO "Back to Methuselah" Shaw has put his conception of life itself, his answers to the plaguing question, "What's it all about?" Beginning in the Garden of Eden with that very first of all dramatic casts, Adam and Eve and the Serpent, he takes us, in the last of the five plays, titled "As Far As Thought Can Reach," to the year 31,920 A. D. Here we find that people have learned to live, barring accidents, forever. But although the secret of living to be 300, 400, 500 years is known to them, in the end they prefer to give it all up, to return to the Garden of Eden, to go "Back to Methuselah."

George Bernard Shaw's "Back to Methuselah" may be heard Monday over an NBC network at:

EDT 9:30 p.m. — EST 8:30 p.m.
CST 8:30 p.m. — CST 7:30 p.m.
MDT 6:30 p.m. — PST 5:30 p.m.

MUSIC of the MASTERS

BY CARLETON SMITH

THE most important revival of the 1937 Salzburg Festival was Mozart's "The Magic Flute," conducted by Arturo Toscanini. Neither its first nor its second performance—both of which were broadcast to the United States—was satisfactory.

Mr. Toscanini, after scouring Central Europe, had to accept singers who were not only incapable of becoming the characters Mozart wanted or of making the beholder conscious of their symbolic significance, but who could not publish the external beauties of his music. Second, several of the participants did not have the same feeling and conception of their roles that Mr. Toscanini had, and though they yielded to him, there was an essential conflict. It might be said that they had a Teutonic, a heavy, somber approach—and he, that of a Latin, light and lyrical. Finally, if one judged from several changes of tempi in the overture and the increased speed with which the second act was taken at the second performance, Mr. Toscanini is still searching for the ideal.

His efforts to make the work alive and moving, his attempts to shake the cumbrous tradition which so frequently turns the solemn scenes into a "Parsifal-like" affair, were to the good. The clarity of tone and the exquisite balance of form which he achieved are certainly Mozartian. If the total effect is to accentuate the contrast between the comic and the serious scenes and to intensify the former, there is good precedent for it.

This opera was given in Mozart's time as a popular entertainment in a Singspiel theater, scarcely more than a barn. The popular melodies of Papageno were repeated, orchestra players were applauded for their virtuosity, and Mozart himself playing the glockenspiel offstage could not resist the temptation to make fun by adding an arpeggio or two after Schikaneder, the original Papageno, had finished and the bells were supposed to be silent.

It is in this spirit, as well as with an understanding of the deep moral purport of the allegory, that "The Magic Flute" should be approached.

The orchestral portions of the performances were a source of constant delight. There were innumerable instances, as in the scene between Tamino and the priest, where orchestral chords played precisely and as they are marked—each forte, a forte and each piano, a piano—were infinitely more expressive than the words of the singers.

It was when one's attention was concentrated on the voices that the bitter realization came that here even Toscanini was helpless. And in "The Magic Flute," to a greater extent than in any other opera he conducts in Salzburg, first-class singers are essential. Mozart's orchestration is fragile and transparent. The voices are heard as if they were naked; no flaw can be concealed.

Julie Osvath, the Queen of the Night, has a strong coloratura capable of decided accents. Her second act aria was transposed down a whole tone but even then she concentrated on the mechanics of singing and did not express the supernatural character of hellish rage of the demon-Queen. Jarmila Novotna, who showed signs of having worked over her role, poured out hard, shrill top tones, displayed more voice than one thought she had, but was unable to reflect the inner beauty of Pamina. Helge Roswaenge, the Tamino, with a voice robust and strong, is also not an ideal Mozart singer.

Mr. Toscanini's idea to have the three guiding spirits sung by boys instead of women provided a refreshing purity and a necessary impersonality and was a welcome contrast to the impassioned voices of the ladies of the Queen of the Night. However, not the best voices of the Wiener Saengerknaben were chosen, and this was unfortunate. The ladies, Hilde Konetzni, Stefania Fratnikova and Kerstin Thorborg, possess good voices but voices which do not blend and they were not always careful to sing together.

Best of all the cast, perhaps, was Willi Domgraf-Fassbender, released from Germany to sing the Papageno. If one did not object to his rather hard, North German pronunciation, he was exactly what he should be, a healthy, lusty, likable fellow, intent on the simple pleasures of living.

The great central figure of Sarastro, the commanding high priest, was beautifully sung and carefully drawn by Alexander Kipnis, who all but filled the character with its requisite depth of soul and warmth of heart.

It may be that we ask too much from these singers . . . more, perhaps, than was expected in Mozart's time. If so, it is because we realize better than did his contemporaries the true stature of his music. There was a greater ease and freedom in the second performance than in the first, and subsequently the nervousness and tenseness should entirely disappear. It is doubtful, however, if all of the artists can be expected to "grow" into their roles and make us feel, as they should, that for the moment, time stands still while we commune with the "soul of our soul."

Those who were present in Salzburg saw the scenes painted by Wilderman of Frankfurt after models made for the Berlin Royal Opera in 1818. They had the advantage of not repeating themselves and of following a steady progression from the night to the light, from the realm of the Queen to the Sun itself. They were intended to be symbolical of the development of character within the lovers. All of them are built on the old-style perspective, so that they can be properly viewed only from the center of the house. Several are overlaid with fantasy and one, the first in the second act, looks exactly like rows of Washington monuments from our national capital.

Certainly, the difficulties of presenting this opera on the small Festpielhaus stage were considerable. The many breaks of scene—the curtain fell eight times in the second act—tend to suspend interest and disconcert especially the hearer who does not understand German. Many in the audience, in spite of the best intentions, were obviously bored. They could not grasp the meaning of the lengthy passages of spoken dialog and they never succeeded in reconciling the inconsistencies of the libretto. Yet despite its faults, the presentation of "The Magic Flute" is good entertainment, well worth the listeners' while.

SHORT WAVES

BY CHAS. A. MORRISON, president, INTERNATIONAL DX-ER'S ALLIANCE

(Figures in Parentheses Are Megacycles)

GIVING station announcements in English, followed by church chimes, CO9BZ (8.998), "Radio Salas" of Havana, Cuba, has been coming on the air recently at 7:55 a.m. EST (6:55 a.m. CST) . . . The Overseas hour from Tokyo, radiated each morning from 8 to 9 a.m. EST (7 to 8 a.m. CST), and intended primarily for reception in Australia, is now being received with almost local volume over JZJ (11.8) . . . The 13-meter band is beginning to liven up a bit and almost any day between 9:15 a.m. and 12 noon EST (8:15 and 11 a.m. CST) GSG (21.53) of Daventry, England, may be heard with good signal strength, while GSH (21.47) is usually much weaker. W2XE (21.52) of New York City, due to its European beam aerial, is seldom heard with anything but poor volume . . . Transmission Three from Daventry, England, is broadcast on a frequency of 17.79 megas, daily from 9:15 to 10:30 a.m. EST (8:15 to 9:30 a.m. CST), over two transmitters, operating simultaneously under the call GSG, but with aerials beamed in different directions. On Sunday morning, August 15, the double signal caused by the two waves from GSG, arriving at this point at slightly varying intervals, was plainly audible . . . That evening at 7:45 p.m. EST (6:45 p.m. CST), a Latin station, presumably PSE (14.935) of Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, was heard broadcasting a musical program.

Another new Japanese station has taken to the air on 9.625 megas, relaying JFAK, Taihoku, Taiwan, daily from 4 to 10:30 a.m. EST (3 to 9:30 a.m. CST). On Sundays, however, the station signs off at 10:15 a.m. EST (9:15 a.m. CST). The last fifteen minutes of each broadcast is given over to news reports in English—mostly comments on recent developments in the Japanese-Chinese situation. This station has an extremely strong signal . . . JIB (10.535), Tyureiki, Taiwan, joins this newcomer in the JFAK relays after closing down its commercial telephone circuits with Tokyo around 9 a.m. EST (8 a.m. CST).

FZE8 (17.28) of Djibouti, French Somaliland, states that musical test programs are broadcast the first Thursday in each month from 6:45 to 7:15 a.m. EST (5:45 to 6:15 a.m. CST).

On Sunday evening, August 15, another new Cuban station, COCM, relaying broadcast station CMCM in Havana, made its debut on an approximate frequency of 9.85 megas. The address, given in Spanish, is believed to have been Apartado 33. Volume and tone quality was very good . . . Earl Roberts of Indianapolis, Ind., reports a further new Cuban as COBT. This station, which relays CMBT, has been operating on 18.75 megas, from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. EST (7 a.m. to 1 p.m. CST).

It is reported that FIU, "Radio Tananarive" of Tananarive, Madagascar, has finally finished testing on various frequencies and has settled down on 9.53 megas where it can be heard irregularly from 9:45 to 10:45 a.m. EST (8:45 to 9:45 a.m. CST).

The Danish short-wave station, heard almost daily from 6:30 p.m. EST (5:30 p.m. CST) on a frequency of 11.805 megas, also broadcasts on Sundays from 8 to 10:30 a.m. EST (7 to 9:30 a.m. CST), on 9.52 megas, according to a letter received by Paul Sampson of Regina, Saskatchewan, Canada. A power of 6,000 watts is being radiated by the broadcaster.

The program of Argentine propaganda, formerly broadcast over LSX on Monday and Friday evenings, from 5 to 6:30 p.m. EST (4 to 5:30 p.m. CST), is now being radiated by LSY (18.115) and LRX (9.66), both of Buenos Aires.

Listeners to Daventry, England, are to hear how Charlotte Corday, one of the most tragic figures of the French Revolution, was tried for her life before the Revolutionary Criminal Tribunal. The trial has been reconstructed from the dossiers in the national archives of France, and will be heard on Friday, September 3, at 7 p.m. EST (6 p.m. CST) . . . A program entitled "The Silver Greyhound," which consists of dramatic incidents in the history of the King's Messengers, the men who carry confidential dispatches from the Home Government in London to the King's Ambassadors and Ministers in foreign countries, will be recalled in a talk from Daventry, England, on Sunday, August 29, at 12:20 p.m. EST (11:20 a.m. CST).

"Radio Corriere," official publication of the Italian E. I. A. R., states that a new directional aerial beamed on North America, which is soon to be placed into service by short-wave station ZRO of Rome, will increase the effective power radiation of the broadcaster about four times.

Roy Myers of Los Angeles, Calif., has received a letter from M. B. Anderson of the Aerial Medical Service, Box 103, Cloncurry, Australia, which states that VJI, the "Flying Doctor" station, a pedal generator type transmitter with a power of 400 watts, is the headquarters station used for communication with the 46 interior medical stations. All interior transmitters have automatic keyboards similar to a typewriter that transmit the morse code perfectly at 10 words per minute and which can be operated by any member of the household without the slightest knowledge of the code. The daily schedule, with the interior stations operating on 2.02 megas and VJI on 2.05 megas, is from 4 to 5:30 p.m. and from 1 to 2 a.m. EST (3 to 4:30 p.m. and from 1 to 2 a.m. CST), while all stations operate on a frequency of 8.63 megas, from 5:30 p.m. to 2 a.m. EST (4:30 p.m. to 1 a.m. CST).

From Sintonia, I learn that Buenos Aires, Argentina, broadcasting station LR3, "Radio Belgrano," is soon to be relayed by Montevideo, Uruguay, short-wave stations CXA8 (9.505) and CXA14 (15.17).

YOUNG MAN OF YESTERDAY

EVERY FRIDAY NITE
(EDT) PROVES THAT
B. A. ROLFE MAY BE
OLD IN EXPERIENCE
—BUT HE'S YOUNG
IN HIS POPULARITY

1 When a son arrived in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Benjamin Rolfe on October 24, 1879, he was named Benjamin Adolphus—thereby perpetuating the initial combination "A-B"—which already has been in the family for 200 consecutive years! As Benjamin grew bigger, his name grew shorter—and now he's famous as B. A. Above, left: At age 5 months; center, 4 years—and at right, the youngster's father

2 Benny's father and mother were musicians before him, and he soon learned to carry on the family tradition. At 6 he played the piccolo and was learning to play the cornet. Two years later he was cornetist with his father's band (above). Leader Rolfe is second from left; Clarinetist Mrs. Rolfe, fourth from left; Benny, fourth from right

3 Benny soon became proficient on his cornet. When he was 8 he toured Europe as the "Boy Trumpet Wonder." This extended tour lasted till he was 12. Above: Benny at the age of 6—with his trumpet. "The Boy Wonder" (right) at the age of 11

4 At 16 (right), Benny had a 10-year reputation—but he was no longer the "Boy Wonder." The juvenile angle was dropped; his reputation continued to grow. He organized a band, played the leading vaudeville circuits. At 29 he conducted in Europe (above)

5 In 1903 Rolfe's career took a different turn. He met Jesse Lasky (top) that year and the two went into the vaudeville booking business. Later, they split to become movie producers. Lasky went to Paramount; Rolfe, to Metro. By 1912 Rolfe headed Rolfe Photo-plays, was an official of Columbia

6 Though a vaudeville booking agent, Rolfe toured the circuits in 1910 and 1911 with his own brass band just the same (left). He had almost as wide a reputation in Europe as in the United States. But when he and Lasky dissolved partnership, Rolfe gave up music for the movies

7 On his extensive tour, Rolfe met with great success. Among the places he played were Philadelphia's Woodside Park, Keith's Theater in Boston, Young's Atlantic City Pier. While at the pier he wrote the song hit at the right—and then he turned to the movies

ROLFE AND HIS BAND

9 Back at the bottom, B. A. turned to vaudeville again, produced acts from 1920 to 1926. Then he joined Vincent Lopez as trumpeter, soon organized his own band, made many records. Right: He and Thomas Edison look over the first Rolfe recording made

—Wide World

10 In a short time, Rolfe had one of the country's most popular bands. In 1926 it opened at New York's Palms D'Or (below), stayed four years. And his recording contract for that year called for $35,000—then an unheard-of price

—APEDA Photo

8 As a producer (above), Rolfe did very well. In 1920 he produced two-thirds of Metro's films. Then suddenly he lost everything!

11 B. A. Rolfe (above) has gone from bottom to top, from top to bottom, in movies, vaudeville and radio. Now as band-leader on Ripley's "Believe It Or Not" program, Fridays at 9 p.m. (EDT) over NBC, he's proving he has come back—to stay!

ARE RADIO STARS HUMAN?

Glorified, glamorized, set high on a pedestal—air stars have been so far removed from reality by an idolizing public that they seem to be gods, microphone deities. Still they are as human as anyone else—as Susie McKey recently learned when, as winner of a contest held by Eddie Cantor, she was shown Hollywood by Pinky Tomlin (left) and Jimmy Wallington

THEY MAY BE KINGS AND QUEENS BEFORE THE MIKE—
BUT THEY'RE JUST ORDINARY PEOPLE AWAY FROM IT!

Hartford-born Walter O'Keefe (above) worked his way through college just like thousands of others have done, won no distinction for scholarliness. Later, he began work at $25 a week

Jane Froman (above) doesn't suggest domesticity when she's before the mike—but she designs and makes all her own clothes. She likes to play golf, too—but she won't keep score Above: Arlene Harris, chatterbox of "Watch the Fun Go By," began monologs to entertain her husband. Then in 1932 she decided to turn to radio with her home talent—became a star!

Frank Crumit (below), genial m.c. of the "Universal Rhythm" show, likes people, enjoys entertaining them. Though he's long been a star, he'd be a lot of fun at your own fudge party

No one can dispute that Bob Burns (below) is of the soil. He really comes from the hills of Arkansas, just acts natural before the mike. Staying human has made him a star!

And for convincing proof that stars are people, here's Kenny Baker (below) during a preview of his latest movie. In it, Kenny portrays a shy fellow, does it easily—for it's natural!

1 Monday through Friday, each week, 300 people crowd into WBBM's Air Theater, see "Poetic Melodies" broadcast. They are directed by same ushers who prevent gate-crashing at Wrigley Field, who worked the Louis - Braddock fight. Left (A in diagram): Passing out the sponsor's product—gum

2 Floor plan (below) of the WBBM Air Theater on the first floor of the Wrigley Building, 410 N. Michigan Avenue, Chicago. The Air Theater—called "Studio 10"—was opened last November, was designed by William Lescaze, famous New York architect. It is 35' wide, 85' long—modernistic in design

3 Entrance (left—at B on diagram) to the Columbia Broadcasting System in Chicago—home of the WBBM Air Theater. Long after the "system cue" ends each broadcast, porters, engineers work far into the night to make ready for another day's audiences. Polishing the entrance is an every-night duty for Porter George Haug

There's no way for Tenor Jack Fulton and Poetic leader Franklyn MacCormack escape autograph hunters the lobby (C). Audience is fixed, but it's the ladies who do the signature-seeking

5 No smoking is allowed in WBBM's Air Theater. There are built-in aluminum smokidors beside each studio door (like the one at left at point D) so no one, including artists, can forget the rule

6 The control bridge of the ill-fated dirigible, Hindenburg, inspired Architect Lescaze's modernistic design for the suspended control booth (below—E in diagram). Windows are in aluminum frames

7 WBBM's Air Theater has a seating capacity of three hundred. Chairs are of fawn-colored mohair, and removable. Floors are of rubber tile for sound deadening and ease of maintenance. Left: An audience view (at F in diagram) from studio gallery

10 9 microphones, 7 on the stage and 2 in the ceiling, pick up "Poetic Melodies," carry it over 44 Columbia outlets into thousands of homes 5 nights a week. The mike (at right) is at point I in diagram

11 "Poetic Melodies" on the air (below), with Romantic Tenor Jack Fulton at the microphone, and Carlton Kelsey directing. (Jack stands at G in diagram, Kelsey at H, and the orchestra is at J.) The studio stage, 25'x25', accommodates a thirty-five-piece orchestra

KNOW WHAT A MAN CARRIES IN HIS POCKETS AND YOU KNOW THE MAN—HERE'S BROADWAY HILLBILLY WALTER O'KEEFE!

Walter digs deep, finds these things (above): Letters from two friends requesting six tickets in all to "Town Hall Tonight," and a cigarette case containing his favorite brand—Camels! From Walter's left-hand hip pocket came the bank book (above, right) to his savings account. In his right-hand hip pocket was a handkerchief. Walter also carries gum—Wrigley's Spearmint

Walter O'Keefe (above) looked surprised when Radio Guide's cameraman confronted him—asked to peek into his pockets. But the summer host of the Wednesday night (EDT) "Town Hall Tonight" felt obliging, started emptying. In Walter's left-hand coat pocket were these keys (below). The ones in his right hand are auto, office and home keys. The big one in his left hand is a locker-room key, is tied to a stick

Walter (left) tries every pocket and finds more objects—a package of Camels, 3 folders of matches, 1 box of safety matches, a yellow pencil, a green pencil, a season ticket to Rip's Tennis Courts, and $23 in bills. (It's against Uncle Sam's orders to photograph the money.) Behind the radio, stage and screen comic is his portable typewriter, on which he makes script changes during rehearsals. The table was intended to be a make-up table for dressing, but Walter doesn't dress up or use make-up. Above: Sum total of Walter O'Keefe's pocket contents

Almost as dramatic as the story of Robert E. Peary's heroic dash to the North Pole 30 years ago, which will be dramatized today, is the story of how the production came to the air. This "story behind the story" deals with the locating of Capt. Bob Bartlett and Donald B. Marshall, both on exploration trips to the Arctic, by amateur radio, and the drilling of Matt Hanson somewhere among the millions of people in New York City. Henry Lammie, author of the popular series, was notified that the dramatization could not be presented unless permission was first obtained from the three men who accompanied Peary on his famous expedition.

★ CBS-Dr. A. B. Harrison from London; WCCO KSCJ KRNT KMOX (sw-15.27)

Dr. A. B. Harrison, Shakespearean authority, will speak from Middle Temple Hall in London in connection with the performance of "Twelfth Night" which will be broadcast on Monday night (this week) at 8 p.m. RPT (8 EST and EDT), 7:58P; 6 MST; 5 PST). Middle Temple Hall is the scene of one of the best performances of "Twelfth Night," in 1801. It is generally believed that Shakespeare himself was one of the actors in this performance. The performance was in celebration of the completion of a term of school for law students, who, when they had completed several years of study, were allowed to come and "read" or study at Middle Temple Hall. Dr. Harrison will describe the Hall, and try to reconstruct for CBS how it looked in 1801 at the time of the performance of "Twelfth Night."

"Twelfth Night" will be the last presentation of the CBS Shakespeare Cycle and the only one to be heard from New York, from one of the CBS Shakespearean Leading actors will be Sir Cedric Hardwicke, who came from England especially for this one performance, as Malvolio, Helen Menken as Olivia, Pauline Paulhead as Viola, Orson Welles as the Duke, Estelle Winwood as Maria. "Twelfth Night" is one of Shakespeare's most sparkling light comedies, one most likely to appeal to a modern audience. Excellent music will be utilized a great deal for comic effect in "Twelfth Night," with a special pompous speaking theme in character for Malvolio.

George Bernard Shaw's monumental five-play cycle, "Back to Methuselah," will be presented in a special radio version with a cast of distinguished actors interpreting the roles. "Back to Methuselah" is considered by many critics to be the most effective and comprehensive dramatic exposition of Shaw's philosophy. It is a combination of the playwright himself in one hour and a quarter of playing time of the whole cycle which, on the stage, requires five full hours of acting. Adam, Eve, Cain, Lilith, the Serpent, and the intruder appear in the first scenes which are taken textually from the first play of the cycle.

A one-act program by Fisher Body will be given from the General Motors Building in Detroit, Michigan, where a banquet is given yearly, at which prizes are awarded in the yearly craftsmanship contest held by the Craftsmen's Guild of Fisher Body. The banquet hall is decorated to look like the medieval Guild Square in Brussels. There are two contests going on, one for the best oil comb body built by hand by a boy and one for the best model replica of an ideal modern automobile. The modern side to the contest is new this year. The idea of the Guild and the contest is to encourage fine craftsmanship in young boys today.

Her Voice Makes 70,000 Feet of Film a Year

of all this acting led her to a light smoke — Luckies..

"In Hollywood, I found a much greater rush about things than in English studios. The harder work not only meant added strain on my throat, but also caused me to smoke more cigarettes. At this time, my throat learned what a difference there is in a light smoke. I've found that even though I smoke as many Luckies as I wish, my throat remains in top form."
