The Squalus disaster shows network service at its best

THE Hobby Lobby program has never received the praise to which it is rightfully entitled. Millions enjoy it, and it is one of the best commercial programs, but because it is one of the best we accept it chiefly as entertainment. Actually, it is much else.

It is an answer, for example, to the bewildering question of how each of us can get the most out of life. David Elman, who produces Hobby Lobby and who originated the idea, knows that thousands of people all over this country have solved their own problems of unhappiness or distress by the adoption of some simple hobby.

One such was Mrs. Arthur Terry, of Short Hills, N. J. It is her hobby to collect old spectacles and frames and refit them to the eyes of people who cannot afford to pay for them. Through her efforts, she has collected 30,000 old pairs of glasses. Through her, more than 7,000 worthy people can see better today.

We feel certain that those who heard Mrs. Terry tell her story on Dave Elman's Hobby Lobby program got from it not only good fun but also inspiration and perhaps the answer to the riddle of living happily in this unhappy world.

The bulk of publicity goes to the shows with the biggest names, the most gags and the snappiest music. But if merit is its own reward, programs like "Hobby Lobby" are doubly successful.

WORD reached the networks that the U. S. Submarine Squalus was sunk in 240 feet of water. Within minutes, every listener whose set was tuned to a network station heard the tragic news. Later there were follow-up broadcasts, then special broadcasts, and then on-the-spot broadcasts.

Anyone who has not peered behind the scenes of the great broadcasting companies cannot possibly comprehend the streamlined organizations which are always poised in anticipation of some great national news story. On a dull day, one might walk into the offices of A. A. Schechter, director of special events for the National Broadcasting Company, and wonder what that stocky, calm young man could do to justify his salary. But on a busy day, on such a day as that on which the Squalus sank, try to keep up with him.

A. A. Schechter

ONLY because radio is on the job does such a picture as that opposite become possible. Here is the family of William Isaacs (a Squalus survivor), awaiting good news or bad in their Washington, D. C., home. They are typical of hundreds who listened for news of their dear ones to come to them by radio.

Paul White

are radio men. To have a radio reporter on the spot first is a great scoop. To put on the air the first "flash" of a great disaster or accomplishment is the goal aimed at. To cover quickly and completely every event in which the public might be interested is a part of their service. In passing, it should be noted that all this is possible only under what we call the American system of broadcasting, wherein fair competition insures the listener that he himself (and not a paternal government) may elect the "best" from a wide variety of choices.

AT COLUMBIA, Paul White is in charge of all special events. At WOR-Mutual, it is Johnny Johnstone. Between three networks all America is serviced immediately by radio. Between them also there is a tremendously urgent rivalry. Once newspaper work provided the romantics of news gathering, but today's RADIO isn't such an ogre after all. Remember how those early opera stars and concert managers said broadcasting would ruin the opera and concert business? It hasn't. Remember when movie barons said broadcasting would keep people home at night? It hasn't.

But there are still some newspapermen who say that radio is ruining their business. If people get their news out of the air, why should they buy a newspaper? Well, it seems that people buy newspapers in order to read still more about what they have heard. The election of Cardinal Pacelli as Pope Pius XII is a case in point. The Catholic College of Cardinals elected a pope in 1922, also in 1939. News of both elections came in midmorning. The St. Louis Post-Dispatch recently compared what happened to its papal extra. In 1922, without international radio broadcasts, they sold 1,000 copies. In 1939, with full radio coverage and eye-witness accounts, they sold at least 400 percent more.

WE ARE not in the habit of mentioning the personal activities of RADIO GUIDE staff members, but since a leading broadcaster has found one of our editors of interest, we see no harm in calling him to your attention. For three years Wilson Brown has been our eastern editorial representative. You have read his stories, most of them unsigned, in past issues. In his spare time, he has devoted himself to several hundred children who are students at the New York Institute of the Blind. Through his interest, many radio stars have visited the Institute, singing or playing or acting. In addition, he has learned Braille in order that he might teach blind high-school pupils something about journalism and writing. Next year two of his graduates go to college on scholarships he arranged. He calls this spare-time work a hobby. You may have heard Elman question him further on last week's "Hobby Lobby."

RADIO performers are supposed to be temperamental and untrustworthy gypsies with no understanding of the value of money or economics. That is their heritage from the theater. But a surprising note reached this desk a few days ago. It told of a movement afoot among the younger radio folk to change an item of government which has endured for years.

They want the right to vote at eighteen years of age.

The idea stems probably from the plan of Judge Ben B. Lindsey, which he discussed some weeks ago with the President. It has its merits. Why should a girl who can get married legally at eighteen, or a boy who can be conscripted and turned into a good soldier at eighteen, not be a good citizen or voter until he is twenty-one? It doesn't make sense.

THE MELANCHOLY CLOWN

Did Uncle Sam's spanking make a bigger, better Jack Benny?

BY JAMES STREET

JACK, THE BEE, BENNY, is a stung man, but he's still Public Entertainer No. One, sadder and wiser for learning you can't give Uncle Sam the hotfoot without getting kicked.

However, if precedents were worth a continental whoop, Mr. Benjamin Kubelsky, the melancholy clown of Waukegan, Illinois, would be in radio's doghouse with lockjaw instead of collecting more than $835,000 a year for making America laugh at the jester who poses as the conceited sap of slapstick but who actually was sucker enough to gamble a million-dollar reputation to save tip change in a silly gyp game with his best friend, Old Man Sam, the bossman.

Mae West made one slip in radio and Sister West was exiled to silence. Norman Brokenshire got too friendly with Brother Johnny Barleycorn and soon good old Broke was just that way. But Jack Benny was accused of smuggling, a crime for which necks have been stretched from halyards, and yet, right now, more persons hear his Jell-O program than ever before.

Radio didn't spank Mr. Benny or his pal, George Burns, a confessed smuggler. Of course, the fact they are very valuable radio properties had naught to do with this. But radio, which often crows before stupid censors and sometimes sets itself upon the judgment-throne of the smug self-righteous, did not hamstring the two stars. And what happened?

Nothing!

The American public was given the unheard-of privilege of judging the men. The American public is quite capable of selecting its favorite entertainers, as strange as that may seem to censors. The self-righteous will be surprised and perhaps put out to learn that we pay more attention to Brother Benny today than we did last year before the finger of John Law was pointed at him. It doesn't mean that we hate sin less but that we love good entertainment more. It doesn't mean we approve of Mr. Benny's actions but we like his act.

The man is a phenomenon. And just to hush critics who whisper that John Law has licked him, we will quote a few figures which are not supposed to be quoted. The day before he was indicted on a charge of smuggling $2,131 worth of jewelry into his native land, Benny had a Crossley rating of 37.4, which means that 37.4 percent of all radios in the United States are tuned to his program on Sunday nights.

Two weeks after his arraignment, at which he pleaded not guilty, his rating jumped to 40.1.

No other half-hour show can even tag him, and he's right on the heels of the "Chase & Sanborn" program, the air's most popular but which is a sixty-minute spasm. It is estimated that Benny visits in seven million American homes each week. If there are five members to a family, it means thirty-five million Americans hear him. That's almost as many folks as live in France!

Let's get this smuggling-case behind us so we can take Mr. Benny apart and see what makes him click. It would be unfair to you and to Benny to keep planting the case throughout his biography. Some Americans say if a poor unknown were accused of smuggling he would be put between the bars and become a jail sandwich. Be that as it may, none but the naive believe Old Lady Justice is blind.

But the Benny case proves what suckers smart men can be. There is a man who pays his Uncle Sam approximately half a million a year in income taxes and says he's glad to do it. Yet he's accused of trying to pinch a few pennies from the same uncle. It's incongruous.

Why is it that, as children, the stolen watermelons always tasted sweeter? Why will a man scheme to save a few dollars in taxes when he can use the time to make money? Why will a man buy bootleg liquor? Why will church-going housewives heed the chant of the peddler who assures her a bit of lace he's selling is a bargain because it was smuggled from the old country, probably Brooklyn? If you can explain that, you will know one of the cockeyedest characteristics of Americans. It's a game with us, a silly, childish game in which we try to outwit the one man who has done more for us than any Lauer, wife of New York Supreme Court Justice Edgar J. Lauer. Mrs. Lauer, Burns and Chaperau pleaded guilty. Benny pleaded not guilty, contending he had no intent of violating the law.

When he appeared before the Federal grand jury, Benny is reported to have chucked the jewelry on a table and to have said, "I never want to see the damned things again." You can bet your boots he never wants to see them. They might have ruined him. Already they have cost him a small fortune in lawyer fees and all that. His pal, George Burns, admitted guilt to charges of smuggling $5,000 worth of jewelry into the country for his wife, Gracie Allen. His error cost him $17,770 in fines and penalties and a suspended prison sentence. His counsel fees were reported to have totaled $25,000. When Uncle Sam burns a fellow he blisters him!

The charges against Benny unquestionably cost him much personal prestige, but apparently no professional prestige. The day when it was smart to nick Uncle Sam for a few dollars has gone. Things being as they are, the average American has become very fond of Old Man Sam and his way of doing things, and it sticks in Mr. John Public's craw when any man who can afford to buy fine jewelry in France for his wife should even try to avoid just payments of duty.

The case against Benny is rather confusing to the layman. If Chaperau had been an accredited foreign diplomat he would have been given the

—Jack Albin

Mary Livingstone wasn't keen about marrying Jack Benny, the trouper, but they've been happy

"The Maxwell" was a fixture of Benny's sketches and the butt of innumerable jibes. Below, Jack pompously sits at the real Maxwell's wheel right to fetch certain articles duty free. It's a compliment we pay to foreign diplomats. But even if Chaperau had been accredited, it still would have been illegal for him to have brought in articles for another man.

Here is an example of what I mean:

If I had an official job in your state and was allowed to buy one hundred gallons of gasoline a month without paying your state's gas tax, I would be within the law only if I used the gas. But say I use only fifty gallons a month, so I go to you and say I'll buy the extra fifty, tax-free, and give it to you or sell it to you. We both are guilty if the deal is completed.

Mr. Benny can thank whatever "gods may be" that the American public has not punished him. His own admirable actions had much to do with this. He cooperated with the authorities and he didn't act snorty. Some well-wishers sought to protect him from photographers and reporters, but Benny would have none of it. It was a wise decision. And so, as far as this article is concerned, the case is closed.

Jack Benny is a melancholy plodder, a fingernail-biter who is funny only through work and never with spontaneity. He can't think as quickly on his feet as his friend, Fred Allen. His wit is not lance-like or spontaneous, Veteran comedian and accordionist Phil Baker (above during broadcast) will continue series through summer, moving from Sat. to Wed.

Maestro Paul Whiteman and his orchestra members have been having troubles getting to the studios from engagement spots near New York

NEW YORK.—Phil Baker has won for himself another renewal of his contract, and starting July 5 his program will be heard on Wednesday nights instead of Saturdays, which should mean many more listeners. Phil's sponsor is definitely sold on radio as a medium of advertising, because since they went on the air with Baker their sales of pineapple juice and "gems" have gone way up . . . Parks Johnson and Wally Butterworth have been given another renewal and will continue to put on their "Vox Pop" broadcasts direct from the RCA exhibit at the World's Fair grounds. This marks the fifth year the show has been on the networks and the seventh in radio. Who said these audience-participation programs wouldn't last? Just in case you're interested, the three Coast-to-Coast networks broadcast thirty-seven quiz programs a week. Sixteen are on NBC; fourteen on CBS; seven on MBS . . . However, there will be one less question-and-answer show on the air when Prof. Quiz departs after his broadcast of June 24.

The Merry Macs leave the "For Men Only" and Fred Allen shows in a short time and will head for the West Coast, playing in vaudeville theaters en route . . . Ben Bernie goes off for the summer on June 25 . . . The Jim McWilliams "Ask-It-Basket" and "Gang Busters" programs fade on June 28, and when they return to the air they may move into the present Kate Smith Thursday night spot . . . The Paul Whiteman show is reported due to make a change, but it won't be in day or time. A singer is being considered as an extra attraction . . . The Hal Kemp-Griffin show has made a slight change by adding an interview spot with some prominent person whose name makes news . . . The "March of Games" program may have a sponsor by the time you read this.

Kilocycle Chatter

More than a month ago you read here that Inga Nelson, who sang in Swedish on the Fred Allen show, was signed for the Fred Waring series, which starts June 19. She will be teamed with frog-voiced Poley McClintock, playing the part of Waring's Swedish maid who has a crush on Poley. It should be good . . . NBC is arranging to broadcast the U. S. Army maneuvers from August 16 to 25 . . . If he can arrange it, Fred Allen will have his sponsor as the "Person You Didn't Expect to Meet" on his program before he signs off for the summer . . . Phil Lord will have no active part in his "District Attorney" programs when it replaces the Bob Hope show during the comedian's vacation. However, Lord will get a royalty check each week, which is all that really matters . . . Now that Betty Garde's Broadway play, "Primrose Path," has closed its doors, you'll probably be hearing the talented actress again on many evening shows . . . Which reminds me that Noel Mills, another very capable actress, won herself the lead in the new CBS dramatic serial "When a Girl Marries" after her sterling performance opposite Franchot Tone in a sketch that was heard on the Kate Smith show. She impressed Elaine Sterne Carrington, who wrote the sketch and who also is the author of the new serial drama.

Peggy Mann, who sings with Enoch Light's band, aspires to be a dramatic actress as a side line and has auditioned for the producer of a daytime serial show . . . The recent news that one Gordon Graham had been appointed "executive assistant to the local head of the WPA Federal Theatre" in New York City was quite interesting to me, because I remember—and perhaps you do, too—when Graham was a member of the Funnyboners Trio. Remember them? A couple of years ago he appeared in New York radio studios again, this time as a CBS announcer. He won the announcing assignment for Joan Blaine's "Valiant Lady" series, and during the course of that series was called upon to substitute for the director for a week or two. Gordon did such a swell job that he was made regular director and has been with "Valiant Lady" ever since.

Now that Tommy Dorsey is back in New York, "Bud" Collyer is announcing the program once again. "Bud" also is the announcer on the Robert Ripley show, and with the many dramatic shows that he plays in, he's a mighty busy man, which proves that class will tell . . . Ruth Carhart has been signed for another year on CBS and goes into her fourth year on that network singing popular melodies, classical songs and even children's songs. But what I really started out to say is that Ruth was singing in front of a mike the other day despite the fact that she was in terrific pain, suffering from an impacted wisdom tooth . . . John Kieran, the "Information, Please" genius, may have to quit his sports column and radio program and go away for a complete rest. Dem's the doctor's orders . . . I hope the strain of the next three weeks doesn't get the best of Jane Froman. She is rehearsing for her role in George White's new "Scandals," during which time she will be playing at a New York theater and also preparing for her new CBS program that starts on June 11. Jane has been a lady of leisure for many months—and then everything happens at once. Isn't that always the way things happen?

Dick Himber Is At Liberty

You've got to hand it to Dick Himber for having a sense of humor. The orchestra-leader bought a full-page ad in a weekly trade-paper just to announce in big type the fact that he's at liberty. However, the ad went on to read that he was at liberty from 4 a.m. to 7 a.m. During the other twenty-one hours of the day he was playing an engagement at a New York theater, rushing back and forth to the Paradise Restaurant, where he is also being featured, rehearsing for his radio programs and making electrical transcriptions for his Studebaker series. Other than that he doesn't have a thing to do . . .

Whiteman the Traveler

Paul Whiteman has been having just about as much trouble getting to his regular Wednesday night broadcast while playing engagements around New York as he had this winter while touring the country. Two weeks ago he was playing in Newark, New Jersey, and had to have two motorcycle-police escorts in order to make it to the studio in time—a New Jersey escort and a New York escort. And then he had to do the same thing all over again for the rebroadcast later in the evening. This week he was playing at the Flatbush Theater in Brooklyn and was afraid he'd get snarled up in traffic if he tried to make the studio by taxicab, so he piled his men into a subway, instruments and all, much to the enjoyment of the passengers. Counting the rebroadcast, that entailed three subway trips, and, says Paul, it took a mess of nickels.

Hollywood Showdown

By Evans Plummer

HOLLYWOOD. — Are you a grouch nursemaid? Think hard. Perhaps your peeve-child is relief, your senator, Mussolini's figure, F. D. R.'s grin, Los Angeles drivers and their broken-down jalopies, radio comedians or dear old mother-in-law, who knows how to raise your children. Whatever it is, grouch-holders from every state will be invited to convene July 16 at the Hollywood Bowl as the guests of that spritely broadcast, the Corn Kix "Grouch Club," and organized nationally under the pessimistic direction of Jack Lescoulie, grouchmaster, and Nate Hiken, scribe. The Bowl seats 25,000 nasty dispositions, and the entire hatefest will be aired from Coast to Coast during the regular Grouch Club period just to prove some things or other.

Bits About the Stars

Columbia network's W. B. Lewis, CBS program boss, a current Hollywood visitor, promises more programs from the cinema capital, a swing from swing to melody in bands, and television . . . Tuffy Goff, alias Lum's Abner, Tito Guizar and Al Pearce's Carl Hoff all birthdayered within a week and reported mysterious explosive candles on their birthday cakes. Nazi or publicity man's plot? . . . Kay Kyser remains at Santa Catalina's Casino till June 17, then appears for a week at Treasure Island, and follows with a week at the Los Angeles Paramount Theater. Bob Hope and Jerry Colonna will start their vacations with two weeks of appearances in Chicago and another two in New York. Bob's wife, Dolores Reade, will be on the bill. Parkyakarkus, Schlepferman and McGee's Donald Novis are also plotting personal-appearance tours . . . Molly's Fibber, who would go rural, finally mistook some poison oak for weeds! . . . Changes brew for the Texaco Star Theater; reports are it will cost less soon . . . Ken Murray, building a 12-room home in the Riviera section here, struck a spring in excavating. In the spring, a young man's fancy . . . RKO Pictures is plotting to premiere "Career," the Alice Eden-John Archer starrer, July 2, in Des Moines, and "Gateway to Hollywood" may originate in the corn-belt capital for the occasion . . . Dick Powell would like to have back his garden gate which scavenger-hunters borrowed . . . Returning to Hollywood for the "Good News" June 15, 22 and 29 airings, Tony Martin's first words were addressed to a blonde. "How're you, sweetheart?" he asked Alice Faye . . . Jaded ears are directed to NBC's resumed "Idea Mart" series on Wednesday evenings; each weekly show is an experiment by a different producer . . . Frances Langford's in-laws sent her an opossum-like, rose-eating Cuscus from the isle of Moluccos, but Cuscus doesn't smell like a rose.

Rom-Antics . . .

Observed at a drive-in eatery at 11:30 p.m., Dorothy Lamour, with hat pulled down over face and wearing dark glasses, with Lee Bowman, coat collar pulled up and wearing dark glasses! Afraid of the midnight sun, autograph-hunters, or? . . . The Judy Garland crush on Artie Shaw still exists, but Artie's eyes are concentrating on NBC's oomph girl, Yvonne Duval, with whom it's a steady date. And, hmmm! Shaw has bought a home here in Benedict Canyon . . . Eat-togethers: June Lang and Gilbert Roland, at the Vine Brown Derby.

Big Hand to S. A. G. Show . . .

Nearly a quarter of a million dollars was raised by the Screen Guild Show, which started its vacation June 4, for the Motion Picture Relief Fund, local charitable agency for the benefit of ailing unemployed and aged screen actors, directors, producers and technicians. For the gratis appearance of the big-time stars on the program, Gulf Oil has paid $10,000 weekly to the fund. The 1939-40 season will add $390,000 to the coffers of M. P. R. F., and then a permanent home, hospital and numerous bungalows will be constructed by the charity . . . Unusual angle of the Screen Guild Shows has been the $30,000 or more worth of talent it has mustered every week, and all voluntarily, too. Top-flight celebrities have even canceled paid air commitments to give their time to the charity broadcast; Billie Burke, delayed by a broken ankle from an earlier miking, insisted later upon going on the show; Cary Grant, Joan Crawford and Robert Montgomery are among the many who have offered their services free as many times as required.

Benny-Allen Fight Report

The great Jack Benny vs. Fred Allen fisticuffs bout, which this column is promoting as a main event at Butte, Montana's Golden Jubilee celebration, is meeting with various obstacles placed in its path obviously by Allen and Benny henchmen, who are afraid neither one of them could lift a glove. "Benny will fight Allen," wires Phil Harris, "at North Pole." "Impossible," retaliates Harry von Zell, who adds, "match must be held in South Africa, where Allen expects to vacation and study pigmy Latin." . . . Thousands of listeners have registered their votes with your reporter for the fight, and with a national broadcast hook-up, too. The only dissenting opinion comes from New York City (probably from an Allen crony) and expresses the delightful thought that Jack and Fred should kiss and make up. That, too, would make a lovely broadcast!

Backstage in Glamourland

At Woodbury Playhouse May 28: Margaret McKay, Paula Winslowe and the male cast members slapping their hips in unison to simulate the sound of the girls in "Girls' Dormitory" taking their setting-up exercises . . . At "Lux Theater's" rendition of "Angels with Dirty Faces," a kids' basketball game staged in the theater basement in order to provide the proper sound-effect . . . At "Texaco Theater," May 24: Laughing Lady Kitty O'Neill, who weighs 179 pounds, dazzling Ned Sparks' eyes with her canary-yellow silk-crepe dress topped with a matching tiny hat.

Bob Young Learns to Sing

Robert Young, the "Good News" m.c., lately has developed into quite a Crosby, but not without considerable work by Meredith Willson, the show's maestro. Willson selects a song he thinks Bob could sing, purchases a popular recording of it close to Bob's voice-range, and then has Young play the record over and over the while he sings the words in imitation. After three days of this, Mrs. Young leaves home and Bob reports to Willson for first rehearsal. Meredith modifies the arrangement to suit Young's voice peculiarities and then runs the m.c. through an afternoon of piano accompaniment. Two days later, Bob sings the tune with Willson's band . . . Yet, when "Good News" goes on the air, you're apt to hear the maestro remark in a most surprised manner, "My, my, Robert, you're getting to be quite a singer!"

TULIPS FOR THE PROFESSOR

The annual Tulp Festival in Holland, Michigan, is always a gala event, especially this year when Professor Quiz of radio (above) was welcomed as guest of honor, with other radio and screen stars, by little Sandra Kay Decker

Hollanders are proud of their festival, proud to have had Professor Quiz as guest. The Burgomelster opened festivities by declaring the streets untidy, whereupon 300 citizens turned out in traditional Dutch garb to scrub them

In snow-white caps and wooden shoes, the women scrubbed, after their swains had thrown on great buckets of water, thus preparing for the riotous display of tulips which followed. Bob Trout, who assists Prof. Quiz, described the event over CBS

On span-clean streets, Professor Quiz and his party watched Holland girls do the traditional klompen dance. In the evening the Professor conducted his quiz (CBS, Sat.) from Holland auditorium

Professor and Mrs. Quiz (Dr. and Mrs. Craig Earl in private life) also visited the Mary Free Bed Home in Grand Rapids, where the genial sage amused youngsters with card tricks rather than questions

How Radio Saved the Squalus Survivors

Radio and the Navy cooperate in winning a race with death

BY WILSON BROWN

—International
Hysterical joy here as Mrs. Carlton B. Powell received word her husband was among the Squalus survivors

THE naval radio operator in the Portsmouth, N. H., Navy Yard shore-station took the message and filed it. "S. S. Squalus diving." The report gave the minute of diving, the course, the speed. "Up at nine-forty," it said. That was a part of regulations since that other submarine accident. But these new subs were always diving and reporting and nothing ever happened.

Sixty minutes later, in a routine call, the operator called the Squalus. He got no answer. He waited a bit and called again.

"S. S. Squalus, can you hear me. Come on in. Can you hear me?"

Swiftly, then, the rescue machinery of the Navy got into action.

Out there in the Atlantic ocean near the Isle of Shoals was a sister submarine called the Sculpin. The two of them, the Squalus and the Sculpin, were named for two of the ocean's most formidable fishes, and they were the newest and best subs in the world. A message reached her and sent her to the spot indicated (by radio, remember) to that navy-yard operator in the Squalus' last report. On the surface, just where it should have been, the Sculpin saw a smudge of scarlet smoke. It came from a buoy which had been released from the sunken Squalus and it carried a telephone.

"Are you alive?" the men on the surface asked.

"Yes . . . at least thirty-six of us are."

"What happened?"

A disappointing click was the only answer. Then a jumble of words, more noises, more words, and finally no words whatsoever. But the men in the sunken sub were alive. Or some of them.

Radio told the news to shore stations. Radio listeners first heard it when a hundred programs from Coast to Coast were interrupted to make room for the tragic flash. Radio told Washington, Brooklyn, and the New London Navy Yards that the Navy had a rescue job to do. In New London, the Falcon, a rescue ship specially fitted for just such an emergency, got swiftly under way. Washington sent expert divers. In Brooklyn, the U. S. cruiser Brooklyn lay in the yards but its crew was scattered about Long Island and New

Above drawing shows how the miracle-bell was lowered from the Falcon on guide lines hooked by divers to the stricken Squalus 240 feet down. The steel bell fitted over an emergency hatch, enabling survivors to escape

York. New York radio stations aired the Navy's curt order to "return to ship." Within one hour, the Brooklyn with its crew was under way to the sunken Squalus.

Radio stations then met another emergency. Naval switchboards were jamming with in-coming phone calls from relatives of men in the submarine service. Broadcasters put bulletins on the air asking relatives not to phone the Navy, promising that radio would bring them news just as soon as the names of survivors could be learned.

But radio was not yet done. It had first discovered the fact that the Squalus had sunk, it had dispatched another submarine to search out its location, it had brought rescue ships from a dozen places, but now it had to keep an anxious world informed.

At NBC in New York, arrangements had been made with WHEB in Portsmouth to feed the network with on-the-spot news. Boston's WBZ chartered a fishing-boat and sent men out to the scene of the tragedy. A crew was hurried from New York by plane.

At Mutual, a crew was dispatched to Portsmouth by airplane, one of them being Commander Edward Ellsberg, hero of the Submarine S-51 disaster of several years back.

CBS rushed a Boston announcer and engineer to charter The Swan and steam to where the helpless sub lay on ocean's floor. Three other Boston CBS men went aboard a coast-guard cutter and were transferred at sea to the Brooklyn. Bob Trout and another crew went by plane.

Between them, they covered every phase of the rescue, which had been organized so swiftly by radio that divers and diving-bells were on the scene for once long before the precious air in the submarine was exhausted. They told listeners of divers who tapped out messages which could be answered with an air-saving "yes" or "no," of answers they heard as shouted through the submarine hull.

Then they described the first emergency use of the Navy's newest rescue device, the miracle bell. Here was a contraption of heavy iron and tubes and valiant hopes. Would it work? Divers accompanied it and its crew below the surface, fitted it to the proper hatch below 240 feet of green salt water. Presently, watchers above knew it was ascending. Breaking the surface finally, its top opened and out were lifted seven heroes from the deep. Three more trips, each watched by radio's representatives, each reported by them, so that mothers and wives and others might know as soon as possible if their son or husband still lived.

The Navy, with radio to help, won its race with death for the bodies of thirty-three of those sailors. The man with the scythe got twenty-six. But they were gone, there can be no doubt, before radio began its work of mercy.

IT'S CRAZY BUT IT'S FUN

They may grab your pet cat or a button off your coat—these scavenger-hunting radio fans

BY FRANCIS CHASE, JR.

MR. GLICKSMAN, who ran the little delicatessen store on Lombard street in Baltimore, had just been saying to his wife:

"Leah, I tell you the eating-trade is crazy. One guy wants vinegar on his hotdogs, another wants mustard on eggs. It's a pleasure to wait on a lady like Mrs. Jones, who always wants sensible things. Now take Mrs. Jones—" He was interrupted by the loud clang of the bell on the door.

It was Mrs. Jones, and Mr. Glicksman's eyes grew wide and round as he stared at her. In one hand she carried an auto jack and a peanut-butter sandwich. Over that arm was draped a red necktie and a pair of spats. In the other hand was a plate, a picture of the Washington monument, and a railroad time-table. And under that arm she carried a dog.

"Well, don't stand there staring," she shouted. "I want two fried eggs and—" This was almost more than Mr. Glicksman could bear—"I want them sewed together."

Mr. Glicksman had never encountered such a mad order in all his twenty years of business in that same spot. But it was not so much the order which astounded and confounded him. It was the wild look in the ordinarily sane eyes of his most normal customer that made him mutter to himself, "Most unusual." But he prepared the eggs and Leah sewed them together carefully with black thread.

When, in the next fifteen minutes, seven other customers—all known to him as staid and reserved pillars of society in that particular section of the city—rushed in with identical demands and with the same wild-eyed look, Mr. Glicksman threw up his hands and gave up.

"TELL you, Leah, it's crazy. That's what it is—crazy. But—" he added, more soberly, "whatever it is, it's good for business."

Had Mr. Glicksman had his radio tuned to station WBAL that October night in 1937, he would have understood that he was witnessing—was even participating in, to a minor degree—the birth of a new radio idea, "The Scavenger Hunt."

Since that first night, the "radio Scavenger Hunt" has spread across the country like a mad contagion, and currently is creating a sensation in Paris, where it is heard—or played—through the Poste Parisien, a privately owned station, with a master of ceremonies aptly designated as le roi des lou- logues, or, in simple, every-day English, king of the nuts.

For radio Scavenger Hunts are nutty—hilariously so. Sane clerks who, day after day, labor at their dull tasks; men who have built great business establishments upon little more than their sound judgment; calm housewives who go serenely about their work by day—all these, by night (and by this strange, new alchemy), are converted into a crazy, boisterous, enthusiastic and slaphappy gang of seekers into strange places for even stranger articles—a bottle filled with cigar-smoke, a money-order blank, or—to Mr. Glicksman's combined dismay and elation—two fried eggs sewed together. Its appeal is universal. Its effect, devastating. But it does things to radio listeners that no other program has succeeded in doing, and that's why NBC is now auditioning it with a view to making it a network feature.

IT ALL started one morning in the elevator at WBAL. Leslie Peard, salesman at that station, was telling Garry Morfit, at that time announcer, continuity-writer and general handyman around the plant, about a treasure-hunt he had been on the night before.

"I tell you, Garry, we had more fun than we've had since 1929. Everybody gets into the spirit of the thing and you sure forget about the butcher, the baker, the bills and the tough customers you try to sell. If you could get something like that on the radio—something to make people forget their troubles for a while—you'd have a real show."

"I guess you would," Morfit agreed. "But I don't see how you'd work it out."

The idea had been planted, however, and all that day it kept forcing itself insidiously into the forefront of his mind. He couldn't work. A radio program into which the listener would enter, in which he would participate actively and enthusiastically, would be a sellout. But how to work it.

And then—at two o'clock in the morning—he jumped out of bed. He had it! Not a treasure-hunt—in which the players would follow clues from one spot to another until they found the treasure—but a scavenger-hunt. It would have to be done in two periods a couple of hours apart. The first period would be used in explaining the game and in giving the list of items to be collected. The second period would be used in interviewing the winners.

On October 2, 1937, the first radio scavenger-hunt was held. It was unheralded and unadvertised, shoved into a vacant fifteen-minute spot at the last minute. A prize of ten dollars was offered for the winner and a two-hour intervening period was allowed for collecting the weird assortment called for on that first program. The contestants were to bring their findings to a small studio-room set aside as a "receiving" room.

The winner that night came in with all of the articles in twenty-seven minutes flat, closely followed by forty-eight others—a clamoring, howling, good-natured mob, representative of every walk of life. In that first group was a banker in evening dress, a street-car motorman, stenographers, clerks, businessmen and housewives. As part of their collections, there were forty-nine excited, barking and snapping dogs to add to the excitement. The studio was jammed and the excited good-humor of the crowd was transmitted with remarkable fidelity to those who had not participated but who were listening in.

MORFIT, acting as master of ceremonies, saw at once that his place was strictly in the background. And there he stayed. People had been out chasing madly around the city for an hour, and they were still warm and enthusiastic when they came into the studio. They had all had such strange and exciting experiences and they wanted to tell about them. When the next week rolled around, it was necessary to use the largest studio at the station as a "receiving" room. Over two hundred contestants came that second week.

On that program, one of the items called for was "any kind of animal." Every kind of animal was forthcoming. People brought three parrots, a raccoon, cats, dogs, mice and a goat who threatened to "baaa" the show off the air. But with the spontaneous good-humor the show seemed to produce in everyone, the goat—far from being expelled from the studio—was brought up close to the microphone for his innings.

THE QUEEN IS A SWEETHEART

A Yankee announcer discovers British royalty — a sweet queen, a man's king

BY GEORGE HICKS
NBC Special-Events Announcer

—International

MARK TWAIN was wrong, and you don't have to join the navy to see the world. Those are my personal convictions after ten years as a special-events announcer with the National Broadcasting Company. In that decade I've broadcast from land, sea and air, describing sports, submarine dives, maiden flights of dirigibles and even was sent to the South Seas to describe an eclipse of the sun. But the present assignment, covering the North American tour of King George VI and Queen Elizabeth, is at once the most exciting and complicated I've ever attempted.

When advised that I had been selected, I greeted the news with unbounded pleasure. Then I told my wife.

"What won't you do next?" she said, moving away to pack my bag like a good "radio widow."

I arrived in Quebec on Sunday afternoon and proceeded to the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation offices to go over details. Quebec was in a gala mood. Flags were waving proudly from buildings and homes and crowds were pouring into the historic city to witness the advent of the King and Queen. Everyone was tense with excitement.

With Mr. A. A. Schechter, director of special events, who had arrived ahead of me, I went over the line of march, arranged for our microphone positions and the necessary credentials that would permit us to pass unmolested through the small army of guards stationed along the route to prevent any unnecessary incidents.

Arrangements completed, I went to my room in the Chateau Frontenac, where the King and Queen were to stay. On arrival, the management issued a special pass for my use that would permit me to enter and leave the hotel through the service quarters. Service quarters, mind you. No one, I was told, would be allowed in the front of the building. That was definitely reserved for Their Majesties.

By nightfall Tuesday, I knew pretty well just what I was expected to do and had carefully rehearsed the various things I might say while on the air. There was still one perplexing problem to be settled. How do you refer to a king and a queen. With other dignitaries it's always difficult to memorize correct titles and then remember to use them while on the air. For example, the President of the United States is never introduced or described by name when he is presented or discussed. It is assumed that the people who elected him know his name and, therefore, poor taste is shown when he is presented by name.

Canadian officials gave me their advice.

Then came the big moment. Would I succeed or fail? The King and Queen had landed and were approaching our vantage point. I had received stern warning that I must not move from my position while they passed and must remain there for a half-hour afterwards. To broadcast was permissible and even desirable, but there must be emphatically no impositions on Their Majesties' gracious indulgence. Furthermore, I was to be at my post by 8:00 a.m., regardless of the time the couple would appear, or risk refusal to pass the line of police and royal guards.

I had been waiting for two-and-a-half hours when the signal was given that Their Majesties were in sight and I was to begin my description of the scene. I began talking, reporting the scene as I saw it. Huge, joyous but orderly crowds waiting to get a brief glimpse of their sovereigns. Some had been waiting this moment since the day before, fearful that after a long and possibly costly trip just for the event, they might miss them.

I'd about exhausted all the material I had gathered for the job, and still the King and Queen had not reached my position. I felt that sinking feeling in the pit of my stomach, wondering about what I could talk next. Frantically scanning the scene, I spied three French-Canadian girls who had climbed atop a statue for a better view of the royal couple. The alert police had ordered them down, but one still clung there, afraid of falling. I began discussing her precarious position, when a guard went to her assistance.

One diverting incident that I did not mention was when a slightly inebriated chap could not suppress a desire to lead the military band playing near my position. The police bundled him into a motorcycle sidecar and drove him off with the drunk doffing his cap and waving to the encouraging throngs as he roared by.

World's Greatest Saxophonist

THAT'S the title they've given Jimmy Dorsey—the world's greatest saxophonist. Loyal fans of Wayne King, Carmen Lombardo and others may dispute the title, but no one will deny his talent as a swingster with the sax and clarinet. After his journeyman days with such leaders as Vincent Lopez and Paul Whiteman, Jimmy and brother Tommy organized the Dorsey Brothers Orchestra in 1934. In 1935 the brothers went their separate ways, and Jimmy's orchestra crashed big-time radio on Bing Crosby's "KMH." A pioneer exponent of swing, Jimmy today airs his moderate swing over NBC.

WILL RADIO WIN F. D. R. A THIRD TERM?

What are the chances of the men most likely to challenge Roosevelt's leadership in the next presidential race?

BY LORRAINE THOMAS

ALREADY candidates for the presidential nominations are hurling their thinly veiled platforms and pledges through the air. Mr. Roosevelt, in a recent talk to American retailers which was broadcast nationally, gave the first indication that he would not be averse to a third term when he justified his presidential actions over the past six years—item by item—in what many observers feel is a bid for reelection.

Whatever other significance Mr. Roosevelt's words might have, they have clearly indicated his opinion that the next presidential campaign will be fought largely in the air. That other presidential candidates are of the same opinion is demonstrated by an increased patronage of the better public-speaking coaches at the Nation's capital.

Here is a preview of what is in store for listeners during the coming months, a score-card rating of the radio personalities of those candidates who at this stage seem most likely to go places. The head of the public-speaking department of a large and important American university has analyzed their radio appeal—without regard for their political background and principles—and here's how they stack up: (1) President Roosevelt, (2) James Farley, (3) Thomas E. Dewey, (4) John Nance Garner, (5) Robert A. Taft, (6) Cordell Hull, (7) Arthur Vandenberg.

Now let's look at them individually and see what they have on the ball from a radio standpoint.

President Roosevelt, Democrat, New York—radio appeal score, 97%: The President starts off with one of the greatest handicaps a vote-getter can carry—his Harvard accent. His accent would alienate him at once from the common man were it not overcome by the deep sincerity of his radio presentation. He talks simply, with effective pauses, and in the cadence of one who thinks of the other fellow but who—at the same time—is proud of himself. The aristocratic accent is forgotten in the full, vibrant quality of his voice, a fine sound to listen to with a rich overtone of pleasantness. He is persuasive and a past master at making presentations of things so rosy that you are at once drawn to him.

Only serious black mark against his radio personality is his continued use of the phrase, "My friends," which, at the outset, seemed so spontaneous and heart-given and which now seems a radio trick rather than a heartfelt salutation to millions listening in.

Postmaster General James Farley, Democrat, New York—radio appeal score, 92%: Genial Jim Farley, just returned from a long zigzag tour of the nation, during which he shook 100,000 hands and called 15,000 voters by their first names, has the good fortune to sound on the radio much as he does in person—a good fellow among good fellows. How active a candidate Jim will become depends solely upon the President's plans, for Jim is loyal to Mr. Roosevelt. Jim's chief asset is an easy poise that seems to say, "I like you, so I'll let you in on something." And somehow you find yourself listening, for he exudes that smart air of being "in on the know." Genial, straightforward, friendly, Farley is a potent radio personality.

District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey, Republican, New York—radio appeal score, 90%: Dramatic, racket-busting Thomas E. Dewey, whose dynamic fight against vice in Manhattan has placed upon him the same distinguishing mark that brought Teddy Roosevelt to the White House, has the type of radio personality you expect in such a man of action. His voice is resonant and effective, his short, staccato sen- (Continued on Page 37)

MILTON CROSS: ALL-AMERICAN BEDMAKER

Milton Cross, dulcet-tongued NBC announcer and 'easy winner of the Men's Bedmaking Champlonship with a grade of 87, receives the beautiful Pequot "Sheets-Stakes" Trophy with the promised kiss from Joy Hodges, screen star

Chiefly because he put the sheets underneath the bed instead of on top of it, Lew Lehr, "crazy" newsreel commentator and comic of Ben Bernie's Sunday program (CBS), received a low grade of five, which pleased him mightily

Phil Baker of "Honolulu Bound" (CBS, Sat.), finding himself outclassed almost from the start, gave up; at the end of the contest was found in a tangle with mattress. That netted the comedian a minus-five—for sabotage!

Lester Gaba, soap-sculptor and mannequin-designer, was also an entry. He brought his famous "Cynthia" mannequin with him, placed her tenderly in his bed and rated 50 points for his generosity in letting a woman share his bed

Artist Salvador Dali made a long bed with an umbrella in keeping with his surrealist painting, "The Long Bed." He was given ten points for Imagination

PEQUOT "Sheets-Stakes" Day dawned bright and clear. Ready to start in the unprecedented bedmaking classic for men were eight famous Americans—most of them radio stars. They were out to demonstrate their prowess at turning a neat "hospital corner" and bolstering a weak pillow. Not for glory only, though! To the winner was to go the beautiful silver "Sheets-Stakes" trophy plus a kiss from Joy Hodges, screen star and "Yumh Girl" of Columbia University. Thus, when Johnny McHugh, veteran starter of Olympic Games and championship meets, fired the starting-gun and newspaperwomen judges were lined up to observe, the eight distinguished contestants leaped eagerly to the bedmaking job, with varying degrees of success, however. To the man who made the neatest bed most quickly was to go the trophy and the kiss! These pictures indicate the results.

TWENTIETH CENTURY SCHOTTISCHE

FROM Merrie England some months ago, came the quaint Lambeth Walk, dance step new to young moderns brought up on swing, very familiar to old-time square dancers and schottische enthusiasts. More recently, the jolly English have given us another gayer, more novel dance step—the Chestnut Tree. As in the Lambeth Walk, everyone does the same step at the same time, both dancers facing forward. Novel part of the Chestnut Tree, though, is that dancers act out the words, " 'neath the Spreading Chestnut Tree," which they sing at the end of each step. Famous dance instructor Arthur Murray appeared on CBS recently to demonstrate the new step. Pictures below show Kay Lorraine of the "Hit Parade" (CBS) doing the new singing dance sensation with a Murray instructor. In No. 1, Nan Wynn (r.), vocalist, joins Kay.

Backstage in Chicago

Johnnie Johnston, romantic baritone, heard on "Ransom Sherman Presents" (Wed.) and various Chicago NBC programs, has large following

Famous World War ace Eddie Rickenbacker (l.) was a recent guest of poet Edgar Guest (r.) on the CBS "It Can Be Done" program Wednesday

Arch Oboler, writer of "Arch Oboler's Plays" (NBC, Sat.), came to Chicago to receive award of "Knickerbocker Playhouse" (CBS, Sunday)

CHICAGO.—I closed a recent column with an invitation for every shut-in listener to write me. I want to open this column with a great big "thank you." Not every shut-in wrote. That would make Jim Farley's men work overtime. But many fine letters did come in. I'm going to try to answer them all personally. Meanwhile, to all, thank you so much. And I'd still like to hear from others.

This, too, tickled my typewriter and me: An overwhelming majority of these letters from shut-ins, besides a lot from non-shut-ins, have been mentioning "Breakfast Club," "Club Matinee," "First Nighter," and many other Chicago shows and artists as their special favorites. They say it's because these programs and performers not only give swell entertainment but the general air of naturalness and friendliness appeals to the average listener.

Au Revoir, Vass Family

The Chicago scene is emptier by one versatile guy and four vivacious gals since the Vass Family—Frank, Sally, Virginia, Louisa, Emily—left for work in New York, at least for the summer. You'll be hearing more and more from and of this novelty outfit, whose tunes are as fresh as a spring breeze through the magnolias in their own Carolinas. Don't be surprised if they reappear in this sector in the fall, for, as Frank told me, they sorta hated to leave Chicago and its radio congeniality. And that, too, speaks well for the Crossroads.

"So long" also to Alec Templeton and Edna O'Dell, MBS songstress. They go west to sub for Fibber McGee this summer, but both will in all probability be back in our neighborhood come frost time. Incidentally, did you hear Alec draw a great ovation from the audience of the "Ford Sunday Evening Hour" Sunday, May 28, with his mastery of the classics, his phenomenal improvisations, and especially the pinch of "jam" he tucked into the sophisticated-music hour?

Number three au revoir goes to "Girl Alone." It's the serial most often mentioned by you listeners as a model for other daytimers. Betty Winkler and Pat Murphy long ago captured your affection, too. It's too bad the show will be off during the summer, but you can depend on Patricia and Scoop being back in the studio when the school-bells ring again.

Oboler's Triumphant Arch

Arch Oboler, who used to be the notorious bone-breaking, blood-spilling, hair-raising creator of "Lights Out" monstrosities, is now one of the outstanding playwrights of radio, as you can understand by listening to his current series on NBC, "Arch Oboler's Plays." Arch came home to Chicago to receive the Knickerbocker Award on CBS "Knickerbocker Theater" Sunday, May 28. On that night the production was his "Ghost Bride." Being in town on Saturday, May 27, Arch produced his NBC play here, and it turned out to be one of the most powerful he has ever done—not only swell drama but an emphatic con-war sermon. I for one would like to hear it redone—with the same grand actors, Betty Winkler and Pat Murphy.

Arch is a little man who sits on the table in the control-room with one leg doubled under him and rocks and sways as he directs. He's a big man when it comes to ideas and their expression. It's not only a compliment to him but also to radio's growing sense of its own power of creative development that Arch's NBC series is being renewed. Orchids to Oboler for helping put an Arch in the backbone of radio drama.

Skelton's Gag

That Skelton guy really works for his money. After his "Avalon Time" programs he puts on skits for the studio audience, and never fails to win not only laughs but admiration. He's earnest and really enjoys having fun, on or off the air. On a recent Saturday night when I took in the show there was a piece of by-play after the broadcast that was a brilliant impromptu demonstration. Red had told the spectators to get up and ooze out when they got tired of his show. Nobody moved for a while, but presently a couple rose and started to edge around the wall through the standing audience to the door. Red halted in the midst of his dialog with Edna Stillwell, grabbed a mike, and over the studio amplification system gave a rapid-fire step-by-step description of the couple's exit. It brought roars from the house and sportsmanlike laughs from the couple.

Daubs on the Backdrop

Speaking of "Avalon Time," the popular Hercules characterization is even more ludicrous when you see Bud Vandover (of Tom, Dick and Harry), a bit on the stout side, doing the part with rare twiddle-twaddle mimicry . . . Angeline Orr, of "Judy and Jane," one of radio's expert tennis-players, is entered in several summer tournaments . . . The volume of children's verse by actress Betty Lou Gerson, which is being published, all grew out of home entertainment for Betty Lou's little nephew. The verses are chiefly fanciful interpretations of the natural elements, which are so bewildering to youngsters . . . Elliott Lewis, "Knickerbocker Playhouse" star, is an accomplished pianist and can hum off the movements of many classical compositions on call . . . When Barbara Luddy returned from her California vacation a few weeks ago, she was doubly teted, for she arrived back on her birthday . . . "Plantation Party's" Westerners were concocting rhymes for amusement the other day. The prize went to bass-fiddler Milt Mabie for his epitaph: "Here lies a man who played the viol, but when you say that, stranger, smile!" . . . Johnnie Johnston, Lillian Cornell and the Cadets have had to learn songs in the native tongues of seventeen countries for "Melody Rendezvous." By the way, in response to many, many requests for pictures of Johnnie, the handsome feller with the romantic baritone voice is looking at you from this page . . . WGN's new $250,000 transmitter is now in operation and highly favorable reports are being received from points as far as four hundred miles away . . . When air ace Eddie Rickenbacker guested on "It Can Be Done," he and Eddie Guest found plenty to chat about, even though the poet does little air traveling and always commutes from Detroit by train for his program . . . "Kitty Keene, Inc.," starring Gail Henshaw, has moved to a late afternoon spot . . . A real turnout met the Hoosier Hot Shots at their recent personal appearance in Muncie, Ind., for all the boys hail from that section, and nearly all their twenty-eight "instruments" claim Muncie as home . . . WCFL featuring a new vocalist, Louise.

Hey, McNeill!

I'm getting a lot of mail and expect to get a lot more saying that "Breakfast Club" deserves a sponsor and the listeners will buy any product you plug, for they know you could give them orange juice with their medicine. Maybe yet somebody will wake up and smell the coffee.

VOICE OF THE LISTENER

Corn on Ears

Editor, RADIO GUIDE:

My greatest objection is the habit of some comedians who clown in front of their visible audience, causing uproarious applause, while we listeners have to wait until they begin to speak again. This clowning brings to the comedian's ears his most cherished desire, applause. I won't mention names for fear of stepping on these comedians' toes, which would be very painful to them, if they have as much "corn" on their feet as they do in their words. I suppose the habit couldn't be changed, since, if the almighty sponsor is pleased, even "Heaven Can Wait."

Bob Blanchard, Augusta, Ga.

Serialysis

Editor, RADIO GUIDE:

I'd like to differ with those who want only cheerful serials. Life is seldom all fun for any of us, and to me the sketches are more true-to-life and more interesting when they tell of both joys and sorrows.

Mrs. H. H. C., Alexandria Bay, N. Y.

● Are there others who feel this way? To date far more letters have been received condemning the monotonous woefulness of the serial sketches.—Editor.

Down With Jumper-Uppers

Editor, RADIO GUIDE:

Musical introductions to some programs are so loud all I can think of is a sideshow coming into my home. I appreciate the wonderful entertainment we receive, but continual trips to the radio to adjust the volume up and down during programs show me there is plenty of room for improvement.

Bessie B. Burroughs, Ann Arbor, Mich.

● One of the most baneful conditions in radio is the widespread tendency to let parts of a program, particularly the musical numbers and the fanfare introductions, blast the loudspeakers, while dialog parts may have to be tuned up. This is an engineering fault, but we wonder if oftentimes the engineer, part of whose job is to balance the volume, isn't instructed by the sponsor or producer to keep those fanfares "emphatic."—Editor.

Shut-In Corner

Editor, RADIO GUIDE:

We have been shut in for twenty years, my husband, the invalid, and I, the wife, nurse, housekeeper and companion. We are middle-aged now, but were in the prime of life when this dreadful thing came upon my husband.

We have had a radio ever since the old cat's-whisker contrivance and, while we can never go to the movies and see the stars in action, we like to read the pithy squibs in RADIO GUIDE. My husband enjoys the ball games, and we like the daytime serials when they're not too weepy.

We read Irving Gross' plea in RADIO GUIDE and, although we are unable to do anything for him ourselves, we sincerely hope those who can will do so.

"... An ampler Ether, a diviner Air..."—Wordsworth

Opera on the Air

REGULARLY we lovers of opera get dispirited when we read seasonally that the two great lyric companies of New York and Chicago threaten to go on the rocks unless guarantors and subscribers come to the rescue with cash. The "opera crisis," now an old matter for us, dates from the ominous 1929 or so. However, we always fear that sometime, like the fabled cry of "Wolf, Wolf," the dreadful finale might really be with us.

Propagandists and theorists make their annual diagnoses: "This country is essentially not opera-minded"; "we shall never have opera houses in every sizable city like Central Europe"; "things might be all right if opera were regularly sung in English"; "the movies have spoiled us for the slow-motion acting of opera"; "the tragedy of opera in our land lies in the fact that it is an expensive and fashionable pastime and not a popular-priced institution for the people." And so on.

The truth is that the average Mr. and Mrs. America and their children do not throng to opera because they are not familiar with it. Once to know it is to love it always.

How can that be done? The answer came to me suddenly and strongly last Sunday—the salvation of opera lies in radio.

What brought the idea so decisively to my mind was the remarkable performance of "Rigoletto," given by the Music Hall of the Air under the conductorship of Erno Rapee. Not only did he lead with precision, insight and ardor, but also the singers gave finished and fervent performances. What thrilled me even more was that the chief roles were done by Americans. While they did sing in Italian, the short, lucid and intelligent narrational remarks of Milton Cross gave every listener a clear idea of the story highlights of "Rigoletto."

Radio fans of opera have aided generously with dollar contributions to keep the Metropolitan going. NBC pays it a handsome sum each season for its broadcasts. Its recent cross-country tour was a tremendous financial success. Thronged audiences everywhere proved that radio has built up a vast army of enthusiasts for the great operas and brilliant casts.

Radio now has its own specialized symphony orchestra on a par with the best. Is the time not eminently ripe to found also an outstanding operatic organization performing exclusively on the air? The reasonable answer must inevitably be "Yes"! The money is available in the leading networks, the best singers and conductors could be made available, and the millions of dialers are available. Who will be the first to see the light?

I'm all for a glamorous opera company dedicated to radio. Are you?

Speaking Up

By V. Vidal

METROPOLITAN Opera goes to know him as the prodigy conductor who, at twenty-six, directed some of the most brilliant Wagnerian performances in years. Regulars at the pre-Nazi Salzburg Festival remember him as a shabby, eager-eyed student with a phenomenal musical memory, bursting his buttons with enthusiasm for Bruno Walter and Toscanini. Only Viennese Erich Leinsdorf himself can tell the tale, of the five years bridging the gap.

Back in Vienna, studying piano, cello, composition, harmony and counterpoint, he made up his mind to be a conductor. Salzburg attracted all the best conductors at the same time, so Salzburg was his starting-point. Too poor to pay the fare, young Leinsdorf hiked there from Vienna. After a few weeks of living on air, he sneaked into a "Walkuere" rehearsal directed by Walter at the piano. Walter went up on the stage for a moment, and suddenly heard piano music. He glanced down and found Leinsdorf calmly accompanying the singers from memory. Amused and impressed, Walter engaged him as his assistant for the rest of the season. The same winter, in Vienna, Toscanini called for a rehearsal pianist who knew a certain complicated modern score. A nervous but determined voice piped up "I can do it." Johnny-on-the-spot Leinsdorf sat right down, played the entire score perfectly and earned Toscanini's amazed "Bene, Bene!" and a contract as his assistant the following summer in Salzburg. Three years later the Metropolitan engaged Leinsdorf as rehearsal pianist, with the agreement to let him conduct a full rehearsal performance, and if he made good, to give him a public debut. "Walkuere" was the opera he directed. After the first act the orchestra rose and applauded. After the second, the manager cheered. And after the third—well, the critics ran out of superlatives writing up his public New York debut. This season, at twenty-seven, he was made a full-fledged conductor. His youth still annoys him.

Short, stocky, with light-brown hair and a startling smile, Leinsdorf has acquired dignity and calm, except before a performance, when he almost dies of indigestion. He has been known to consume a dozen apples while insisting with his mouth full that he simply can't eat before conducting. He's immensely pleased but not especially astonished at his Metropolitan success, but hopes he won't be rubber-stamped as a Wagnerian conductor. He wants to conduct all kinds of opera as well as symphony. There's no doubt that he will. As one critic said, Erich Leinsdorf is a man "who knows what he wants, wants something good and gets it."

The Columbia Symphony Orchestra, CBS. Howard Barlow, conductor. Concerto for Oboe (Handel), Mitchell Miller, oboist, and Orchestra; Les Eolides (Franck), "Reformation" Symphony (Mendelssohn), the Orchestra.

Maybe Barlow has been reading our "Something About" essays, wherein we recently spoke about rare concertos for the oboe. At any rate, here he is with a notable example by Handel, who had a special preference for the instrument, as did Bach. It dates back into the dimmest days of antiquity, and has been found in Egyptian tombs of 3700 B.C. Originally the oboe was known as the shawm. Haydn, Mozart and Beethoven used two oboes in their symphonies; Wagner, always out ahead, put three oboes in his operatic orchestra.

Handel wrote six oboe concertos, in which that "soprano" of the double-reed family (the English horn is the "alto") is understandingly employed in exposition of its pastoral tone-quality, and blended beautifully with the orchestral accompaniment.

There is an old comical superstition that oboe players end by becoming insane. Oboists themselves love to say, "You don't have to be crazy to play the oboe, but it helps." Barlow assures this department that the soloist of today is not only eminently sane but also a splendid musician and accomplished virtuoso.

The NBC Orchestra, NBC. Erich Leinsdorf, conductor. Overture Iphigenia in Aulis (Gluck-Wagner). "London" Symphony (Haydn), Afternoon of a Faun (Debussy), Polovetsian Dances from "Prince Igor" (Borodin).

Written in 1795, the last year of Haydn's second visit to London (he composed twelve symphonies in all for his concerts there), this example opens with a somber introduction but quickly changes to a gentler mood. Following the idyllic second movement and a lively scherzo, the finale attracts with its initial pert rhythmic subject, and later scampering figures that keep up the animated spirit to the end.

Wagner felt that the ending of Gluck's overture, with its somewhat thin orchestration, needed revision, and so he supplied it with amplifications that make for more sonority and dramatic effect. He completed his version in 1846 and it probably furnished relaxation during the composition of "Lohengrin," which occupied him at the time.

Debussy's delicately suggestive score describing the sensuous Faun and his elusive nymphs remains one of the popular peaks of the modern symphonic repertoire. He calls his opus a "Prelude"

Sinfonietta, MBS. Alfred Wallenstein, conductor. Castor and Pollux (Rameau), Zortzico (Albeniz-Borguno), Menuet Pompeux (Chabrier).

In astrology, Castor and Pollux form

James Melton, tenor, is soloist on the "Ford Summer Hour" (CBS, Sun.) which features light classics

the twin constellation Gemini. In mythology, they are also twins, sons of Jupiter and Leda (the lady of the swan adventure). Castor was noted for his skill in horsemanship and for his quest of the Golden Fleece with Jason. Pollux, evidently the dumbbell of the family, seems to have done nothing at all exciting.

"Castor and Pollux," the opera (1737) by Rameau, has a rapid and confused libretto, like all that composer's stage works, but its music is worthy of the master who wrote engaging airs, devised a new system of harmony and expanded the structure of the overture so that it paved the way for the symphonies of Haydn and Mozart.

Zortzico is a Basque dance in 5-8 (five-in-a-measure) time, and this particular one was originally a piano piece by the gifted Albeniz (1861-1909). Also a brilliant pianist, he won high praise from Liszt, with whom he studied.

Chabrier (1841-1894), French composer of bright and tuneful scores, is best known as the creator of the universally beloved "España," Spanish rhapsody.

Lewisohn Stadium Concert, CBS. The New York Philharmonic Orchestra. Massimo Freccia, conductor. Overture to "Oberon" (Weber), "Eroica" Symphony (Beethoven), "Firebird Suite" (Stravinsky), "Sicilian Vespers" (Verdi).

This, the second night at the Stadium, and the first of its broadcasts, brings a conductor who made a distinct success there last summer because of his musical grasp, rhythmic firmness and sharply etched interpretations.

The present program, conservative and familiar, needs no extended elucidation, for the numbers are almost ABC to regular symphonic listeners on the air.

The broadcast starts at ten o'clock, and so it is not possible at this moment to forecast which of the music will be heard. Probably the last two numbers following the intermission are in line for the microphone. While Stravinsky told me that he considers his early "Firebird" an unimportant composition, nevertheless many of us like it better than some of his later radical and less melodious works. Verdi's opera, "Sicilian Vespers" (1855) immediately preceded his "Rigoletto," "Trovatore" and "Traviata."

Something About Early Piano Solos

LAST week we reviewed the repertoire of the organ, and now its immediate successor, the piano, is in line for contemplation of its music.

Ancestrally our piano (or pianoforte) of today dates from 1711. In that year, Bartolomeo Cristofori (1665-1731), harpsichord builder of Padua, Italy, invented a "graveimbalo col piano e forte," which employed small hammers that struck the strings. The forerunners of the instrument (virginal, spinet, clavier, clavecin, harpsichord, cembalo) had plucked the strings with quills. (One of Cristofori's "graveimbalos," made in 1720, is at the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York.

All the earlier mediums, about four octaves in range, produced only short, unprolongable tones. Then came the clavichord, with its metal device enabling tone to be prolonged and even vibrated variously according to the strength of the key pressure. In 1726, Gottfried Silbermann (encouraged by Bach) began to amplify the Cristofori principle and thereafter the improvement of the piano went ahead rapidly, keeping pace with the technical demands of the performers and culminating in the seven-octave "grand" of today, which grew directly from the innovating Liszt, with his dramatic and resounding compositions and playing.

While no works written especially for the hammer piano appeared until 1770, the music of the earlier periods could of course be performed on the new instrument and some of it is in use even in our own time—Byrd, Purcell, Couperin, Daquin, Scarlatti, Bach, Haydn, Handel, Mozart and Beethoven. It was not until 1818 that the last-named composed his "Hammerklavier" sonata, after the English manufacturer, Broadwood, had presented him with a pianoforte. Mozart's concertos are for the pianoforte and so are some of the Clementi sonatas, done as early as 1773. By the way, he himself was a piano manufacturer, as was also Ignaz Pleyel (1757-1831), distinguished Viennese composer, who settled in Paris and founded a piano factory there in 1807. It still exists and sold its 100,000th instrument in 1898. Kalkbrenner, renowned Parisian pianist, joined the firm in 1824. Chopin used the Pleyel pianos, exclusively and their ultimate facile touch and "singing" tone doubtless came through his influence.

The first known public hearing of the piano as a solo instrument occurred in 1768, when Johann Christian Bach, son of an illustrious father, used the new instrument at his concert. In 1771 Clementi wrote his three sonatas, opus 2, and those, together with his great set of studies "Gradus ad Parnassum," plumbed the possibilities of the contemporaneous pianoforte and gave him lasting distinction as the founder of modern piano-playing.

When Bach made his entry, he swept aside many of the rigid forms and harmonic restrictions that hampered his predecessors. His outlook was not only Olympian but also prophetic, for he foreshadowed the music that was to come in the future. In his "Chromatic Fantasie and Fugue," there are harmonies suggesting some of those in Wagner's "Tristan and Isolde." The Bach "Inventions," "Well-Tempered Clavichord," (preludes and fugues), suites and fantasies, laid the basis for all piano music that has followed since. Haydn, Mozart, Schubert, and Beethoven all built on Bach, and so did Schumann, Weber, Liszt, and Brahms. The Bach compositions, while fundamentally formal, nevertheless are alive with feeling, ranging from the lightest moods to the most grave and dramatic. The late Harold Samuel, English pianist, specialized in Bach's music, and with affectionate and thoroughly human interpretations showed all its possibilities of romantic and even humorous expression. Previously the players of Bach had emphasized chiefly his staid dignity and towering scholasticism. Samuel gave a whole week of Bach programs, six recitals in New York in 1924 and again in 1935, two years before his untimely death. At present, his successor looks to be the young American, Rosalyn Tureck, who also devotes herself to whole recitals of Bach compositions.

The composers preceding Bach had dabbled some in "program" music, imitating the calls of birds and other sounds in nature. Johann Kuhnau (1660-1722) even produced six formidable harpsichord sonatas called "Musical Pictures of Several Bible Tales," setting forth the fight of David and Goliath, David's cure of Saul, Jacob's wedding, etc.

Domenico Scarlatti, born in the same year as Bach and Handel (1685), wrote over 300 sonatas for harpsichord, but they somewhat belie their name, for many of them are in only one movement and a few as short as two pages. Light spirit prevails in almost the whole lot. Scarlatti went further than Bach in technical innovations. The latter was the first to use the thumbs on the keyboard, but Scarlatti employed the crossing of hands, runs in thirds and sixths, leaps wider than an octave, broken chords in contrary motion, tones repeated by rapidly changing the fingers, etc. He gave piano technic its first initial push towards really brilliant virtuosity.

Mozart's many solo-piano compositions found their finest form in his sonatas, even though few of them survive now in public performance. The favorite one in A major was the first work in that form to employ a theme and variations as one of the movements. There is much sentiment in the Mozart piano pieces, but no profound tragedy or extreme pathos.

Massimo Freccia takes the baton for the first of the "Lewisohn Stadium Concerts," heard over CBS, Thurs.

LISTENING TO LEARN

Person-to-Person

● The close relationship between good music and radio inspired the addition in 1938 of a radio workshop to the curriculum of the National Music Camp,* where talented college men and women and high-school girls and boys may take advantage of extraordinary opportunities for musical training during summer months. Here, for the first time last year, N. M. C. students were given a chance to plan, write and produce their own programs under capable instructors. A natural development from the radio workshop was the drama workshop that will be given its introduction this summer. To send this new department off to a flying start, the part-time services of the NBC's Blevins Davis have been secured. Mr. Davis will be remembered for the "Great Plays" series, one of the season's most highly praised. To give students a clear and concise picture of the theater as a form of art and culture from its origin to the present day, there will be three courses: Play production, history of costume, history of the theater. Plays will be written, cast, rehearsed, costumed, staged and broadcast or recorded, and special emphasis will be placed on radio drama and the techniques peculiar to radio-dramatic productions. Assisting Blevins Davis will be Stewart Bosley and Douglas Ferguson, both professional actors trained at the Yale University Department of Drama.

● Just released: Carroll Atkinson's Development of Radio-Education Policies in American Public School Systems,† a comprehensive survey of the various plans for adapting radio to education that are being practised in many cities. A must for all educators; interesting reading for anyone concerned with the educational and cultural aspects and possibilities of radio.

● Clarence Morgan will conduct two five-week radio-workshop courses at Indiana State Teachers College this summer. The first began on June 12, the second starts July 17. The courses will include training in microphone technique, script-writing, production of five types of educational broadcasts, voice-recording and detailed discussion of classroom use of radio.

● Our Educational Program Classifier will appear in abbreviated form during the summer months only. The June Classifier, originally promised for the issue week ending June 23, will be presented instead the following week.

● NBC promises another summer series by Raymond Gregg, who should be remembered for the broadcasts he presented last summer direct from Rocky Mountain National Park, in which he took a portable microphone and a class of students for a nature-study walk and talk in the park. Gregg is the park naturalist of the Rocky Mountain Park Service at Estes, Colorado, for some years a teacher of natural history in public-school work, a man with an unusual talent with children. Although the starting-date and other details for this series have not yet been definitely set, it is contemplated to be about the first week in July. —J. H.

Perseus the Hero, as he is sometimes called, is depicted in the drawing below on his return from slaying the Medusa. At his belt is seen the Gorgon's head. In the old drawings, such as the one below from Bayer's Uranometria, the eye of the Medusa is represented as the variable star Algol, the winking star, or, as it is sometimes called, the Demon Star. Perseus can be seen late at night in June, low in the Northeast.

Professor William H. Barton, executive curator of the Hayden Planetarium of the American Museum of Natural History, appears on this program in person each week and discusses with three fictitious characters the history of a different star-constellation. The constellation is always visible in the sky at the time of year the discussion is presented, offering listeners unusual opportunity to continue the study of astronomy that begins at their loudspeakers.

MYTHOLOGICAL NOTES OF INTEREST

PERSEUS—Son of Zeus and Danae, the savior and husband of Andromeda. He slew the Medusa using a mirror to avoid being turned into stone.

MEDUSA—One of the three Gorgons whose hair Minerva changed to serpents so terrible to look upon that they would turn the beholder to stone.

GORGON—Frightful female monster inhabiting the edge of the Western Ocean, near the Region of Night and the Hesperides. Three are mentioned: Stheno, Euryale and Medusa; but the name is applied preeminently to Medusa.

"Growth of Our Flag"

Appropriately preceding Flag Day (June 14), "The World Is Yours" on Sunday, June 11, will dramatize the story of our flag's growth from background facts prepared by Smithsonian Institution historians. Although the United States is a comparatively new nation, many famous flags of various designs have figured in its history. The facts in the outline* below were gleaned from an article submitted by the U. S. Office of Education which (article) was appraised by Webster True, editor of the Smithsonian Institution, as probably the best brief authentic story of how our "Stars and Stripes" came into being that was ever written.

1775—As early as the summer of this year thirteen horizontal red or blue and white stripes were recognized as emblematic of the thirteen colonies.

1776—January 2, a flag bearing thirteen red and white stripes with the British union jack in the upper inner canton was raised over General Washington's headquarters at Cambridge, Massachusetts. This flag was widely used in the Navy as American National ensign, was known as the Grand Union or Continental Union Flag.

1777—June 14, first official design established by resolution† of the Continental Congress, which provided "that the flag of the United States be thirteen stripes alternate red and white, that the union be thirteen stars white in a blue field representing a new constellation."

1794—Though Vermont was added to the Union in 1791 and Kentucky in 1792, it was not until 1794 that the design of the flag was changed by Congress to fifteen stars in the union, fifteen stripes in the field. This remained official until 1818, although five new states‡ were admitted during the intervening period.

1818—April 4, Act of Congress provided that the number of stripes be reduced from fifteen to thirteen, that the number of stars be increased to twenty, and that on the Fourth of July following the admission of a new state to the Union, an additional star be installed in the union of the flag. Twenty-eight stars have been added since 1818.

The source from which the authors of the Flag Resolution of June 14, 1777, derived the idea of the stars has been much debated, but it seems logical to believe that they were influenced in their decision by the knowledge that symbols taken from nature were popular in the colonies: the Massachusetts flag bore a pine tree, the South Carolina flag a crescent, and the Rhode Island flag of this period bore thirteen white stars in a blue field as a union device.

"The World Is Yours" may be heard Sundays over NBC at:

EDT 4:30 p.m. — EST 3:30 p.m.
CDT 3:30 p.m. — CST 2:30 p.m.
MST 1:30 p.m. — PST 12:30 p.m.

*Presented to give listeners pertinent facts that will stimulate their interest in and deepen their understanding of the subject to be treated in the broadcast.

†The resolution did not state how the stars should be arranged in the union, and this arrangement varied with the views of the designers of the United States flags during the period 1777-1818.

"MA, HAND me that new-fangled newspaper," says Hiram, as he throws a leg out of bed and through his overalls into his brogan.

Hiram pauses to stretch and rub his eyes. The Joneses get up early. They're farmers. Not the hick kind the city people poke fun at. They're the kind that country people are proud of being—landed gentry. They have the latest farm machinery, WPA outbuildings, CCC soil-erosion correctives, rural electrification—and a radio with one of those new-fangled thingamajigs.

Ma's already busy fixing the fire in the kitchen stove and can't hear Hiram for the clatter, so he drags one overall-leg after him and shuffles over to the shiny box in the corner. A strip of paper dangles from a slot in the box, much as the roller-towel dangles from the kitchen wall. Hiram gives it a yank—just as he'd yank the towel. But he doesn't wipe his hands on the strip of paper he has ripped from the contraption. He begins to read it, for it's a newspaper, a kind of newspaper that is printed right in the home, printed by radio. It's the magic, Merlin-like product of man's genius called by the scientific name of facsimile but more popularly known as the ghost that writes.

For that box in the corner does contain a ghost. It must. How else could any contraption with its only source of power the electricity fed to it from the electric-light socket draw pictures of men across an ocean or write stories of strikes and battles and conferences a thousand miles away.

Our hypothetical Hiram is not afraid of his ghost, however. He loves it, for it places him as close or closer to the world in which he lives as his city cousins. At night, when he retires, he turns a switch on his facsimile receiver. Next morning, lo and wonder at it, there is a complete newspaper in miniature, printed while he slept.

She turned a switch on her facsimile receiver last night, now, before breakfast, tears off morning paper in the sending mechanism at the broadcasting station. By photo-electric action, impulses are sent out by the radio transmitter. In the home or the office these electric impulses are picked up by the receiving apparatus and transformed back into a reproduction of the original matter.

What is the status of facsimile broadcasting at present?

It is still in the experimental stage, but making rapid strides toward establishment as a general medium of communication.

How extensively is this experimental operation being conducted now?

To date the following seventeen regular broadcasting stations are licensed for facsimile operation: KFBK, Sacramento, Calif.; KGW, Portland, Oregon; KHQ, Spokane, Wash.; KMJ, Fresno, Calif.; KSTP, St. Paul, Minn.; WBEN, Buffalo, N. Y.; WCLE, Cleveland, Ohio; WGH, Newport News, Va.; WGN, Chicago, Ill.; WHK, Cleveland, Ohio; WHO, Des Moines, Iowa; WLW, Cincinnati, Ohio; WOR, Newark, N. J.; WSAI, Cincinnati, Ohio; WSM, Nashville, Tenn.; WTMJ, Milwaukee, Wis.; WWJ, Detroit, Mich. The following ten short-wave transmitters are licensed: WIXMX, Sargents Purchase, N. H.; W2XBF, New York, N. Y.; W2XR, Long Island City, N. Y.; W2XUP, New York, N. Y.; W8XE, Cleveland, Ohio; W8XUJ, Cincinnati, Ohio; W8XTY, Detroit, Mich.; W8XUF, Jackson, Mich.; W9XSP, St. Louis, Mo.; W9XZY, St. Louis, Mo.

The Mutual Broadcasting System has linked together a miniature facsimile network.

The St. Louis Post-Dispatch has transmitted a daily facsimile edition since December 7, 1938, and now produces a nine-page radio newspaper for seventeen experimental receivers in a service area with a radius of thirty miles. They have found transmission of pictures surprisingly successful, both as to qual-

So far, this new field is still in the testing-stage, far below radio's near-perfection; also, however, far above television's area limits. Some day, though, the newspaper of the air will be another accepted institution of our spiraling civilization.

You, Mr. S. Jeremiah Slick, Jr., whose door says "private," will halt the plush-propped conference on company economy and, reaching across your mahogany desk, you will tear the latest news of government economy or non-economy off your facsimile printer and read it to the assembled executives.

You, Mrs. Allen, whose home is seldom private, because of relatives, neighbors and your own children, will lean on your broom for a second to pluck off Charity Channing's latest recipe, in black and white, for future reference.

And, you think, the kid named Joe will peddle something besides papers to get his start toward the private office.

No. It isn't that radical. Publishers are not afraid that facsimile will replace the newspaper any more than radio has supplanted it, or any more than television will kill the movies.

You can get that off your mental merry-go-round. Many things must happen before facsimile reaches the stages of ultimate utility, and many questions must be answered. And the public must be made familiarly acquainted with this stranger in our midst.

For example, how many know the answer to that most fundamental of questions: What is it?

The simplest and most elementary comparison that can be made is this: Radio appeals to your ears with sound. Facsimile appeals to your eyes with printed and pictorial matter. It's something of a cross between radio and television, with emphasis on news, and it bases its general usefulness upon the increasing importance of news in our daily lives.

And how does it work?

The matter to be transmitted, either in printing or in picture form, is placed in front of a traveling beam of light

NEW PROGRAMS

"News and Rhythm" (Darl-Rich) made its debut on the CBS network Sunday, June 4, at 11:00 a.m. EDT (10:00 EST). The program features Carl Hohenzarlin and a sixteen-piece orchestra. Dave Bacal playing the novachord, and interspersed with news by Todd Hunter.

"Musical Playhouse" (Gulf Oil) will be premiered Sunday, June 11, at 7:30 p.m. EDT (6:30 EST). Erno Rapee, Jane Froman, vocalist, and Jan Peerce, tenor, are going to head the new gala musical revue as the summer replacement for "Screen Guild Show." Except for a few guest appearances together, this show will be the first time Erno Rapee, Jane Froman and Jan Peerce have been starred in the same show. Because of their versatility, the programs to be aired in the following weeks will cover a large field of musical presentations.

"Summer Hour" (Ford Motor Company), a new summer program replacing the "Sunday Evening Hour," begins Sunday, June 11, at 9:00 p.m. EDT (8:00 EST). The program will star James Melton, Fraucla White and Don Voorhees conducting a 36-piece orchestra. In addition to the singing and music of the members of the regular cast, the broadcast will feature a guest vocalist each week.

PROGRAM CHANGES

"Tune-Up Time" (Ethyl Gasoline), usually heard on Thursdays, moved to Monday nights, June 5, at 8:00 p.m. EDT (7:00 EST). The personnel of the cast remains the same, with comedian Walter O'Keefe, conductor Andre Kostelanetz and orchestra, vocalist Kay Thompson and her Rhythm Singers.

"Midstream" (Teel), popular daytime serial, moved to a new hour, 4:45 p.m. EDT (3:45 EST), Monday, June 5.

"Raymond Paige, 99 Men and a Girl" (U. S. Rubber Company) moved to Friday nights, June 9. Raymond Paige and his orchestra and a guest vocalist can be heard at 9:00 p.m. EDT (8:00 EST).

★ Star in program listings indicates news highlights

AFTERNOON

12:30 EDT (11:30 EST) National Farm and Home Hour.
Subject: "The Oldest Erosion Control Project—Coon Valley, Wisconsin." Speakers: George Nygaard of the Wisconsin State Soil Conservation Committee; R. H. Musser, regional conservator of the Federal Soil Conservation Service, and R. H. Davis, in charge of flood-control surveys for the Soil Conservation Service.

1:00 EDT (12:00 EST) Let's Talk It Over.
Guests: Sylvia Porter of the financial department of the New York Post; Caspar Reardon, harpist; Ted Strong and Earl Blackwell, who conduct a celebrity service, and others. Today's program has been planned as an inspiration to the thousands of potential job-hunters being graduated from schools this June. All participants are under thirty years of age and have, through their own ingenuity, created careers for themselves.

NIGHT

7:30 EDT (6:30 EST) Ask-It-Basket with Jim McWilliams; Quiz Program.

8:00 EDT (7:00 EST) One Man's Family; Serial Drama.

WHAT USERS SAY
Lubbock, Tex. After using the Capacity Aerial
Eliminator over a year on my 1915 small set
I can say it brings in reception with due volume and clarity, pulling in stations from Japan, Europe, South America, and broadcast stations from all over the U. S. Efficiency proven, I took down my old outside aerial. Signed
Davenport, La. Received your Radio Aerial Eliminator

IT'S CRAZY

But it was not all smooth sailing. First, the title of the show had to be changed to "Treasure Hunt" because a sponsor objected to the association of the word "scavenger" with his product. Then, in Baltimore, the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals made a strong protest. On an early program, contestants had been asked to bring a cat to the studio. The next day, citizens of the city awoke to find their pets gone and, that same day, the SPCA found hundreds of homeless cats wandering around in downtown Baltimore, abandoned by treasure-hunters for whom they had served their purpose.

In the winter of 1937, in Pittsburgh, the "Treasure Hunt" was dealt a blow which threatened its existence. The hilly streets were covered with snow, and a scavenger-hunter, hurrying to the station in his automobile, skidded across a red-lighted intersection and collided with another car. Immediately the Pittsburgh Safety Council demanded that the program be withdrawn from the air.

Modifications were worked out, however, which eliminated speed as an element of success, and skill items were inserted. Typical of these skill items was, "Write a letter to the mayor applying for the job of dog-catcher." The only time element now remaining was that the collection must be completed within the hour which intervenes between the first and second broadcasts.

These were the objectionable features which cropped up during the program's early tryouts. On the other hand, the value of the show as one into which the public entered with an enthusiasm that made it forget the troubles of the work-a-day world had already been demonstrated in more than fifteen cities. And forgetting the troubles of a world bestridden by war and threats of war, strange "isms," and economic uncertainty is not to be sneezed at. For radio—aside from its other obligations—has the definite obligation to bring entertainment and relaxation to its audience. The scavenger-hunt has proved itself as entertainment and diversion.

Currently, the National Broadcasting Company is auditioning the show with a view to making a network feature of it, feeling that few other shows have achieved the spontaneity and good-humor that scavenger-hunts have evoked.

For the thousands who have—and will—enter into the game as contestants, it means release from the drab and dull through adventure and thrills and fun. To the listener who does not care to leave his comfortable living-room, the scavenger-hunt still brings a vicarious sort of adventure and fun in the excited and garbled interviews with the winners. For the enthusiasm and rowdy good-nature of the participants seeps through the microphone to the listener with a contagious infection.

So, this summer, if a wild-eyed lady rushes up to you on the street and snatches a button from your coat, or if—in a restaurant—you hear the amazing order, "Two fried eggs and sew 'em together," don't call the keeper. It's just a radio scavenger-hunt.

F. D. R. A THIRD TERM?

tences ending with a punch you know is in the man himself. Unlike Roosevelt and Farley, his appeal is not the appeal of persuasion but of hard, purposeful drive, of force and vigor. Thus far, Dewey has carefully refrained from making a national speech on national issues, but such abstention is not for long. When the strategic moment arrives, you have the feeling that Dewey will be in there fighting because, basically, he is a fighting man.

Vice President John Nance Garner, Democrat, Texas—radio appeal score, 86%: The white hope of the conservative Democrats is Vice President Garner, whose oft-rumored schism with the President has never quite come off despite known differences of opinion between the two on matters of government spending. Garner's chief appeal is his down-to-earth Texas accent and a hardheaded common sense, which he gives out through homely anecdotes and similes after the manner of the late Will Rogers. He speaks authoritatively and with the ease of one long in the public eye. Chief radio liability of the Vice President is a voice that is rather flat, rather high-pitched and not too pleasant to listen to over long periods.

Senator Robert A. Taft, Republican, Ohio—radio appeal score, 85%: Phenomenon of the politico-radio world is Ohio's new Senator, Robert A. Taft, notably inept at speech-making, who has just completed a series of debates with Congressman T. V. Smith on New Deal policies. GOP strategists, aware of Taft's weaknesses and Smith's strength (he is one of the New Deal's most engaging talkers and a radio veteran of sixteen years), tried to dissuade Taft from entering the debates, but without avail. When a poll was taken at the conclusion of the debates, Republicans were pleasantly surprised, Democrats at a loss to understand the score—Taft 66%, Smith 34%. Taft is a halting talker, lacking the fine, interpretive qualities which distinguished his opponent. But he speaks a homely common sense with a sincerity that makes people listen to him anyway.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull, Democrat, Tennessee—radio appeal score, 84%: Back in 1932, a quiet, scholarly and almost unknown gentleman moved into the gaudy, gingerbread building which houses our State Department in Washington and took up the duties of handling our relations with foreign powers. His keen judgment and shrewd handling of foreign affairs in the time which has elapsed since then have definitely marked Cordell Hull as a presidential possibility. As a radio figure, his chief appeal is a quiet gentlemanliness and an ability to address a radio audience in conversational tones which are at once pleasant and compelling. His voice is rich and pleasing, his accents cultured and softly southern.

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, Republican, Michigan—radio appeal score, 83%: During the 1936 campaign he used the same oratorical manner he used on the platform, and when it had gone out through the ether and was picked up by the loudspeakers, his voice was that of one haranguing a mob while his adversary was coolly appealing to reason. Since that time Mr. Vandenberg has given more attention to his radio appearance, and today he speaks with vigor and force but without that displeasing quality he once had. Still not a radiant radio personality, he speaks authoritatively, and his current deliberate delivery gives a nice weight to his words.

These are the men who will come to you through your loudspeakers in the months approaching. They will come seeking your vote and support. Whether you listen or whether you invoke your inalienable right to turn the tuning-knob to another station for another candidate's talk or some "hot music" will depend upon the appeal and the personality they bring with them to the microphone.

Should President Roosevelt decide to run for a third term—and present indications point that way—we shall not see the one-sided campaign of '32 and '36. For others than the President now realize the force and the power behind radio and are preparing themselves to make the most effective use of the spoken word. A political battle between the intimately persuasive Roosevelt and the hard-hitting, vigorous Dewey, for example, would not only make political history, it would dwarf almost any commercial show radio has to offer.

Will Radio Win a Third Term for FDR?

On Short Waves: Edited by Chas. A. Morrison

President, International DX'ers Alliance

Times given are EDT. For EST and CDT subtract 1 hour; CST, 2 hours; MST, 3 hours; PST, 4 hours.

SHORT-WAVE broadcasting in the United States has entered a second and more mature stage of its development. According to a recent decree of the Federal Communications Commission the experimental status of international broadcasting is to be abolished in favor of the granting of regular licenses which will permit these stations to transmit commercial or sponsored programs, under certain restrictions. Advertising plugs will be limited to the name of the sponsor and the name and general character of the commodity, utility or service. Another of the new rules affecting the short-wave service states that licensees of international broadcast stations "shall render only an international broadcast service which will reflect the culture of this country and which will promote international good-will, understanding and cooperation." Some observers see in this clause another step in the Federal Communications' ever-tightening grip on radio which many fear will end in a government censorship of broadcasting such as is now in effect in several foreign countries. We, the American listening public, must never allow the cultural, educational and entertainment aspects of our international service to be subordinated or completely stifled in favor of insidious propaganda broadcasts which would be controlled by selfish political interests. Traditional American freedom of speech and thought must be preserved at all costs.

Another one of Daventry's new GR-frequencies has been introduced, namely GRX (9.69), which is on the air daily from 1:25 to 5 and from 5:20 to 7 p.m. EDT, replacing GRY (9.6) for this transmission.

Lee Mason of Detroit, Mich., writes that EAQ (9.86), at one time the "Voice of Republican Spain," is now back on the air with a nightly broadcast for North America, from 8:30 to 9:30 p.m. EDT. The new identification is "Radio Nationalist Spain, EAQ, Madrid," while the closing announcement is "Franco, Franco, Franco, Viva Espana." Letters from American listeners are solicited and the announcer promises to promptly verify each correct report.

An intriguing DX station, "Radio Leo," operated by Father Mols of the Catholic Society of Jesus at 7 Avenue Lippens, Leopoldville, Belgian Congo, has increased its power to 250 watts, and now broadcasts simultaneously on 15.17 and 9.525 megs, Sundays and holidays, from 6:25 to 8 a.m. EDT.

SHORT-WAVE SHORTS: A new official list from Costa Rica lists a station TI7RVM (6.035), supposedly in operation at Las Juntas . . . HNF, Baghdad, Iraq, has shifted in frequency to 9.685 megs, where it can be heard daily to 4 p.m. EDT. Announcements are in English . . . A "Bulletin for DX'ers" is broadcast on Mondays at 8:30 p.m. EDT over W1XAL (6.04) or W1XAR (11.73) of Boston, Mass. . . In preparation for its annual voyage to the Arctic, Donald Ellas Clark, has requested a permit to operate a 100-watt transmitter aboard the schooner Effie M. Morrissey, on the following frequencies: 6.425, 8.655, 9.135, 12.862 and 17.31 megs . . . An ordinary telephone line, one of the thousands used every day, has finally transmitted a high-definition television picture. The feat, long considered impossible, was accomplished recently in an NBC telecast of the six-day bicycle race at Madison Square Garden over station W2XBS. This item is of tremendous significance in that it may mark the first step toward the solution of the problem of network telecasting . . . According to an NNRC item credited to the QRC, CP12 (6.255), "Radio Fides," 250-watt transmitter at La Paz, Bolivia, operated by a Jesuit school, is now on the air and broadcasting daily from 8 to 9 a.m., from 12 noon to 1, and from 8 to 10 p.m. EDT. Reports should be sent to Observatorio San Calixto, P. O. Box 283, La Paz, Bolivia.

Activities of the French Foreign Legion may soon become part of our regular daily listening fare, for a powerful new short-wave station, to be known as "Radio Maroc III," is now under construction at Rabat, Morocco. It will operate on 8.185 and 11.94 megs . . . A new short-wave station is reported to be in operation at Aleppo, Syria, on a frequency of 12.215 megs.

Short-wave programs of American stations are shown along with the regular listings beginning on page 20. These are indicated, for example, by (sw-11.87) in parentheses following a program listing. This means that on 11.87 megacycles the same program may also be heard over an American short-wave station. Please note that foreign stations do not always adhere precisely to their announced program schedules.

THE GHOST THAT WRITES

ity and the reception of the public.

WSM, Nashville, Tenn., has transmitted fair copy as far as 500 miles, and WHO, Des Moines, Iowa, has received copy from WLW, Cincinnati, Ohio, 600 miles away.

There are over one hundred experimental receivers in use in the areas of Sacramento and Fresno, Calif., and the broadcasters there have received many inquiries about purchasing sets.

Now, what about the receiver? What are they like? What do they cost? When can you get them?

This year may see a general public sale of facsimile sets. There are two systems of reception being used and, consequently, two different makes of sets. They are the Finch system and the RCA system, differing essentially only in mechanical details of printing. The receivers are, in general, medium-size cabinets out of which the paper unrolls at the rate of about three feet an hour. The RCA system uses paper eight and one-half inches wide; the Finch system, three and three-fourths inches.

The RCA sets are being used chiefly for experimental purposes, but the Crosley Corporation, using the Finch system, is marketing the "Reado" set, with switching-clock, printer and receiver at $150; also a printer attachment for a regular radio set delivering five watts or more at about $80.

Television creeps, but the ghost that writes has also learned to walk. Radio, the daddy of both, is a proud father, and he knows that he will never be put out of his own house by his amazing offspring.

as Edgar Bergen's. Benny builds a gag as a man builds a house—with blueprints, architects and models.

He and Allen once appeared on the same program, and Fred, who is lighting at ad-libbing, slipped in a punch that wasn't in the script. Jack said, "I'd give a thousand dollars to be able to think up an answer to that one." And he would have, but he's not made that way.

His legal name is Jack Benny, but he was born Benjamin Kubelsky in Waukegan on February 14, 1894.

He was six when he began studying violin.

"My father," he said, "handed me a violin and a monkey-wrench and told me not to take chances, plumbing isn't a bad business."

The boy knew he wanted to be a musician and he set his head to it. There were no idle day-dreams. He charted his course and stuck to it. In the summertime he worked at his father's store, but every day he practised.

He yearned for the theater and as a boy asked for a job. He was made doorman, then property-man. He was a middling violinist and a very serious worker. He never tried to be funny; he was too busy worrying. A seven-piece orchestra in Waukegan gave him the job of first violinist. That was in 1916 and Jack was twenty-two, a moody, serious fellow.

The lamented Cora Salisbury was pianist for the orchestra and was one of the first persons to spot Benny's talents, not as a funnyman but as a musician. They teamed as Salisbury-Benny and went into vaudeville. Jack fiddled for a year, and by that time the United States had fiddled itself right into the World War.

Jack joined the Navy to see what things looked like on the other side of the fence. He was sent to the Great Lakes Training Station and was put to building fences and stacking lumber. Benny fought the war with a two-by-four and a fiddle.

When the Navy learned that Benny was a musician, he was stuck into an entertainment unit and fiddled for the boys. He was good enough, and was as funny as a crutch. He simply stood by a piano and played his violin.

Then one day his unit was assigned to raise money for some fund. Jack fiddled for pennies, but none fell. He stuck his violin under his arm and began talking. The crowd roared and Jack got flustered. He had accomplished what few comedians can do: he had made himself seem a sucker and the crowd loved it. Crowds always do. There's something perverted about our sense of humor. We'll laugh at a sap instead of feeling sorry for him. A real wit can make us feel superior. For all of us are suckers, and when we see a man who is a bigger fool than we are we laugh at him. Benny didn't know it, but he had unfolded the oldest secret of the clown—pathos, which can be so tragic it's funny.

It took Benny a long time to get accustomed to talking, but gradually he played his fiddle less and less.

After being discharged he went out as a "single" and played first in Springfield, Illinois.

"I remember I played my fiddle and told a few jokes," he said. "I got some laughs."

After the show he studied the gags that had brought laughter, and polished them.

His progress was slow, but he finally landed in New York, just another vaudeville actor—and the woods were full of them. He always wore a hat during his act in those days and would go on the stage with his fiddle under his arm, crack a few wise ones and threaten to play his fiddle, particularly "The Bee." Sometimes he would play it.

One night he was playing a benefit and forgot his violin. He went on and talked and clicked. Thereafter, he adopted the routine of leaving his fiddle in his dressing-room and borrowing one from the orchestra. Then he took off his hat and really had no props.

For six years he used the same opening gag. He had become a master of ceremonies for the vaudeville shows, and would walk out and ask the pit conductor, "How is the show?"

The leader would reply, "Fine up to now."

Benny would reply, "I'll fix that."

Funny? Not in print, but when Benny said it the customers howled.

Vaudeville managers pleaded with him to change it but he wouldn't.

Finally, after six years, Goodman Ace, a columnist for the Kansas City Journal-Post, wrote a new opening gag for Benny. He was to come on the stage following a troupe of Japanese acrobats and say:

"Well, I guess it takes better than Japs to open."

Benny used that gag once, then went back to his old stand-by.

After years of hard work Benny got top billing. He was one of the crack masters of ceremony of the business. Back in his vaudeville days he was working with a couple of the Marx Brothers in Vancouver, British Columbia, and the Marx boys took Benny out to see their friends, the Marks family, no kin. Jack had a nice time. He met Sadye and her sister, Babe Marks, and they played flinch, or something just as exciting. When Jack left he said the girls were a couple of "nice high-school kids."

The Marks family moved to Los Angeles and Jack called on Babe. Sadye kibitzed the date and got in Benny's hair, and Jack marked her as a nuisance. Sadye, however, bribed some of her girl friends and they went in a body to Jack's show and sat in stony silence while everybody else giggled.

In 1926, Benny was playing the Orpheum Theater in Los Angeles and Babe and Sadye called backstage to see him. Babe had married Al Bernovici and was in show business. Sadye had changed her name to Mary Livingstone and was a hosiery-buyer for a Los Angeles department store.

Jack began dating Mary. The next year, 1927, they met in Chicago and were married on January 12. Mary fainted after the ceremony.

James Street's second and intimate article about Jack Benny appears in next week's issue.

Then the King and Queen came upon the scene, driving within thirty feet of my position. The Queen sent a gracious smile in my direction. The King stared straight ahead. From my observation-post, what I saw of Their Majesties was at once thrilling and satisfying. My impression was that they are young, intelligent, kind and simple people who, except for the force of circumstances, would be agreeable neighbors. He looked as if he could handle himself in almost any situation; in short, a man's man. While she, wearing a gorgeous gown, smiling sweetly everywhere, was, in my language, a sweetheart.

When the allotted time had expired my nerves were a bundle of knots. I waited the specified time-limit impatiently, then made tracks for the hotel. When I arrived, there were several people waiting for me. They said they'd heard my broadcast and asked me if I wouldn't do a broadcast for the "Radio Societe," the French network of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, and a second program for listeners in the British Empire. Grateful for the knowledge that I hadn't erred in my NBC broadcast, I accepted before I realized that my French was so meager as to make the "Radio Societe" broadcast nearly impossible. But I dictated my impressions to an interpreter.

There were several other pick-ups before I was to return to New York to await Their Majesties' arrival at Niagara Falls, N. Y. When they were finished, I began the chore of fulfilling a contractual obligation with my wife, Anne, and our six-year-old son, Ivan. When I first began being assigned to these remote broadcasts they made me solemnly promise to bring them some memento of the trip, each gift to be different.

Our home is already cluttered up with souvenirs ranging from toys to house furnishings. I dutifully did my shopping, buying a hooked rug for Anne and a Canadian flag and wind-up-type boat for Ivan.

As I write this article I am back in Radio City, marking time until I leave again to join Their Majesties at Niagara Falls on Wednesday evening, June 7. I shall stay with them after that until they leave the United States. Having passed my "baptism of royalty" in Montreal and Quebec, I don't anticipate any further anxious moments.

But before I conclude, permit me to discuss one point of interest to us Americans. It comes from my own observations and from implications and inferences given while I spoke with the friends I made in Canada.

The Canadian visit and reception to Their Majesties, it was implied, was a historic and pleasant experience. The impression was unavoidable, however, that the Canadian tour was not as important to them as the royal visit in the United States. There was no direct mention of the fact, but all the evidence indicated that the American visit, it was hoped, would be happily interpreted and will result in a further cementing of the friendly relations existing between the Empire and its former colony.
