THE LONG AND SHORT of entertainment, according to Dr. I. Q., is this sort of stunt in which the soldiers entertain each other their own way

IN A dingy little restaurant in a quiet little town in central Ohio in the fall of 1940, a tow-headed youngster, all of twenty-one, and away from home for the first time in his life, munched a hamburger and wondered why Uncle Sam had called him to the colors. He was a buck private from Louisville, Kentucky, just arrived at Reception Center, Fort Hayes, Ohio, one of the many young men who suddenly found themselves thrown into entirely new surroundings, new habits, new people, new duties, new responsibilities. He was not a sentimental young man in the usual sense of the word, nor was he addicted to the weakness of dramatizing his present situation. But as he brushed the last crumbs of the hamburger bun off his hands and flipped a dime on the counter, he couldn't help but think to himself how much nicer it would be if he were back home in Kentucky, doing his regular job at the oil company, seeing his girl once or twice a week, eating at home where Mother's cooking just somehow seemed to hit the spot.

No, he wasn't especially sad. He wasn't especially mad. In fact, he couldn't quite make up his mind how he felt—a little frustrated, perhaps—a little as though his old ideas of being the "master of his fate and the captain of his soul" might have been all wrong somehow.

As time went on, this young man was to have many such moments. Some would be more painful than others. At times he was to be filled with resentment at having been picked up and shoved into a job he felt himself ill equipped to handle. At times the pangs of homesickness were to bring a heavy, tight feeling to his throat and, when he was sure no one was looking, tears to his blue clear eyes. He was to find himself in that peculiar frame of mind known only to the homesick, when nothing especially matters except the empty feeling of being all alone in a very big world. That was October, 1940. And if you catch yourself wondering exactly how I could know these innermost thoughts of an Army private, perhaps I should tell you that he and I had a long talk together about that time. You see, that young man is my little brother, Don McClain.

screen!

We're hearing on all sides that the motion picture industry is doing a great job—producing marvelous training films, morale films; the theatres are selling stamps and bonds day and night and the stars are everlastingly on tour or on the air.

Meanwhile in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer corner two feature films have bobbed their heads up with considerable bob. Like Tennyson's brook "Mrs. Miniver" goes on forever. The other picture deals with another "Mrs".

It is "The War Against Mrs. Hadley". This tale of a Washington diarch has already captured its early audiences. It brings a lump of laughter to the throat. A lump of laughter is the kind with a tear in it.

The "ten-best picture" game, started with "Mrs. Miniver", spread quickly to the four corners of all newspapers. If the game was a strain on you, we are afraid you're in for more of the same. For "Random Harvest" is coming (adv.).

"Random Harvest", as you all-knowing readers know, is the best-selling novel by James Hilton. The James Hilton. The Goodbye Mr. Chips James Hilton, the Lost Horizon James Hilton.

But above all, the Random Harvest James Hilton.

Ronald Colman. Greer Garson—Random Harvest stars. Mervyn LeRoy, R. H. Director. Sidney Franklin, R. H. Producer.

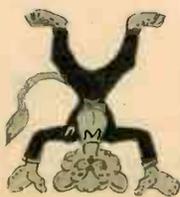

In a column entitled "Picture of The Month" which runs in Good Housekeeping, McCall's, Woman's Home Companion, Collier's and Newsweek, "Seven Sweethearts" is the choice.

Many are screened but few are chosen. Congratulations "Seven Sweethearts". And Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for thus bringing to the fore three promising stars in Kathryn Grayson, Van Heflin and Marsha Hunt.

I'm head over heels with joy at the crop of new films coming.

Presenting Milli Scanlon . . .

MISS MILLI SCANLON has become the first professional woman announcer of Cleveland. Probably that won't sound like news to old-timers who recall the days when women announcers were as common as victory claims in Nazi and Nip news releases. But since early days of radio, men have taken over the announcing chores on the air. So Miss Milli of Cleveland's WHK is really in a unique position for these our times. Proof of that lies in the fact that radio officials put her on trial for three months as an experiment. If listeners liked her, well and good! She was hired. If they didn't, that was that! For pleasing the radio public was their first consideration.

ANNOUNCER Milli Scanlon of Cleveland's WHK. Listeners voted in her favor

Of course the present war situation is largely responsible for this move to bring women back as announcers. With so many men already in our armed forces and more leaving every day, it was imperative that something be done to meet the shortage. To that end, WHK, Mutual's Cleveland affiliate, joined with the American Federation of Radio Artists in conducting the experiment, choosing Miss Scanlon, radio continuity-writer on WHK, as their first recruit.

Now that her three months' probation period is up and a careful check has been made, it is interesting—and gratifying—to note that not a single complaint on a feminine voice announcing has come in to Station WHK. Miss Scanlon has proved that American women can take over on the radio home front, if it becomes necessary, until the war is over.

For that reason Movie-Radio Guide is happy to present Milli Scanlon, modern pioneer, who is doing her share in meeting a crisis. And now that Miss Scanlon has proved her mettle as an announcer, radio listeners can expect women announcers to become more and more the order of the day for the duration.

Naturally, Miss Scanlon's enthusiastic about her new announcing chore, and she believes that the opportunities for women in future of radio are immeasurable. According to her, the most important requirement is a flexible, vibrant voice, speaking in an unaffected manner and with a smile that comes from the heart. However, women looking for jobs that accent glamour better turn to other fields than that of radio-announcing. For it's just a routine behind-the-scenes job, sans snappy uniform, glittering parades or martial music.—The Editors.

Keep 'em Sinking, MATURE!

An Open Letter to the Hollywood "Hunk of Man"

DEAR Vic:

There is something a little smug and unctuous about an "open letter." They are usually written by authors to indicate that they have an intimate acquaintance with well-known people, and the whole idea is a little nauseous. In this case, the editors of MOVIE-RADIO GUIDE are addressing you directly so that the public may better understand a complex character.

We understand, as you do, that your only original sin in Hollywood was that you were too tall, dark and handsome. You knew it, and if you hadn't, your I. Q. would have been mighty low indeed. You started off on the wrong foot by boisterously ignoring all the rules of good Hollywood behavior. While other actors dealt through their press-agents with the editors, you personally arrived at the offices of MOVIE-RADIO GUIDE in shirt, slacks and bedroom slippers to "sell yourself." You flirted with the pretty switchboard girl, you pounded on the editor's desk. With matchless gall you told him how to run his publication. You cut other Hollywood men out of their best dates, still wearing the same frayed slack suit, at a time when you didn't even own an automobile. You admitted that you were a "bad actor," actually and theoretically, even though you had three years of stage training behind you.

All of this generated extreme dislike for the name of Mature in all quarters of Hollywood except those exclusive sanctums from which pay-checks are issued. Some of this dislike transmitted itself (with some help from your less ardent admirers) direct to the public. This Mature, Americans decided, was too much of everything—too big, too muscular, too successful with pretty girls. With nothing to go

Chevrons Replace Loud Shirts and Jingling Spurs as a Great Showman Trades His Saddle for an Air-Forces Job

THE sergeant called in civilian clothes. He was dressed to the limit in the traditional Hollywood version of a cowboy's costume—from the spotless white Stetson, the tan jacket, and the silk shirt to the be-spangled, high-heeled boots.

Sergeant Gene Autry was a veteran of three days' service with the U. S. Army Air Forces when I talked to him. He hadn't received a uniform, was still an active performer in his touring rodeo. Outwardly he was the same Gene we all know, the high-power movie-radio-rodeo star with the mild manner and the melodious voice—the showman through and through.

Underneath the surface there was something else—something hard to describe. Here was a well-known movie-radio star, still a civilian to all intents and purposes. He still had had no training, no taste of Army life. He was living at a swank hotel, surrounded by managers, press-agents, and the like. But you could tell that something had happened to Gene Autry. There was an earnestness, a seriousness, a fierce determination in his talk that was not the product of the high-power ballyhoo which has surrounded him for many years.

I asked the obvious questions first: "Why did you enlist, and why did you choose the Air Forces?"

There was no emotionalism, no exhibitionism in Gene's answer. "I joined up because I thought I could do more for my country in the service than anywhere else," he said simply. "At first, because I know and love horses, I thought of joining the cavalry. But I talked it over with a good many people in various branches of the service. They seemed to think that I have a following among the young men of this country. They said I could influence these fellows by my example. And they pointed out that the Army needs a lot more fliers than horsemen. They need young fliers, particularly, lads of seventeen, eighteen, nineteen, who can learn quickly and fly for a long time to come. Since the Army men felt that way about it, I decided to go along with them."

"How do you feel about it personally?" I asked. The answer was rather surprising, when you realize that Autry's whole career has been built on the tradition of open-range horsemanship. He said, "I like it. I like flying. I've flown a good deal myself, and I'm convinced aviation is the coming thing. After this war, there is going to be commercial aviation on a tremendous scale. The fellows getting Army air training today are really preparing for a great future."

Right then I made a blunder. I put two and two together and came up with an answer that, according to Gene's way of thinking, was five. I said, "You seem to be a forward-looking man. That's strange, for your screen and radio personality is really built on a way of life that's passing out, isn't it?"

Sergeant Autry bristled at once. "No, sir," he said. "The horse and the West aren't passing. This is still a great cattle country, and you can't run a cattle ranch without horses. This country was built by horsemen—Paul Revere, George Washington, Jackson, Davy Crockett. The West is still the West, and so long as Americans eat beef there'll always be an important place for horses and horsemen."

We talked next about the sharp change Gene faced in leaving show business for military work as an en-

A doughboy in Ireland inquires whether Bob Hope and Rosalind Russell can be summoned to entertain the fighting forces overseas.

In the skit that resulted, "Private" Bob Hope was plodding down a highway. Rosalind Russell pulled alongside in a car, and invited him to hop in. Hope declined—a touch any soldier would appreciate. Ultimately, she persuaded him. But he sat down as far from her as he could. She invited him to come a little closer. He demurred.

"If I do," he fumbled, "one thing will lead to another—and soon—"

"And soon what?" she inquired.

"Soon—we'd be playing gin-rummy!"

This is the kind of stuff that makes "Command Performance, U. S. A.," a hit from Alaska to the Antipodes; from Cairo to Chungking.

"Command Performance" is beamed out thirty-two times every Sunday over eighteen short-wave stations to suit the listening hours of American troops overseas. Recordings are sent to England to be repeated by the British Broadcasting Corporation.

Its theme song is "Over There," and it is twenty-nine minutes of sparkling entertainment built around requests from the fighting men. They hear nothing of dish-pan hands, black-heads or B. O., and there are no strident commands to buy soup or soap. Uncle Sam is the sponsor and the only commercial run like this:

"Soldiers and sailors, just tear off the top of a Stuka or Zero and write us what you want to hear and we'll give it to you."

This kind of sales talk really pulls. Every week hundreds of letters pour in—from soldiers, sailors, marines and nurses. The Army handles the requests. Hollywood assembles the talent. The men get America's choicest entertainers. Nobody has yet declined to perform.

Fighting men abroad miss the voices, the songs and laughter of the girls they left behind them on Main Street or in Manhattan. The men want girls—glamour girls, singing and swinging girls, and funny girls.

Ginny Simms, young songstress of radio and pictures, seems to be emerging as a World War II Elsie Janis—Sweetheart of our new A. E. F. There are lots of requests for Dorothy Lamour, Dinah Shore, Frances Langford, Mary Martin and Connee Boswell, too. Soldiers and sailors who are hep to pep want effervescent Betty Hutton, Judy Garland and Carmen Miranda. Dinah Shore, the radio-singing sensation of the year, sang "Mad About Him Blues" for twelve machine-gunners in Australia. The boys in Trinidad wrote Judy Garland they'd been looking for "Minnie"—wouldn't she sing the song and maybe lure her FATHER AND SON come to grips when Jeffrey surprises Joan and his dad discussing plans. Even his father's command for silence fails to keep him from threatening her and branding her a blackmailer

THE dramatic story of "Valiant Lady," fictionized for MOVIE-RADIO GUIDE by Wiley S. Maloney, is broadcast Monday through Friday over CBS at 10 a.m. EWT, 9 a.m. CWT, 9:30 a.m. MWT, 8:30 a.m. PWT, sponsored by General Mills for Bisquick and Gold Medal Flour.

Joan Scott left Fairville, Ohio, to go to Chicago after the death of her husband. The couple had been falsely accused of crime, and Joan was determined to build a new life and clear her husband's name. At the Chicago station, a stranger threw his arms around her, introduced her to his father, swept her off in a limousine. He was Jeff Clark, son of T. R. Clark, wealthy publisher. Jeff was involved with Margie Cook, a fortune-seeking dancer. He had told his father that his fiancée was arriving, and the older man decided to meet her at the train.

Jeff, knowing that T. R. Clark wouldn't approve of "Cookie," took him to the wrong station, saw Joan, and begged her to play the part of fiancée. Joan agreed, only because detectives were about to arrest her and the introduction offered a chance to escape.

The older Clark approved of Joan, and to the dismay of both the young people urged her to stay at the Clark home. Joan tried to get out of the situation, but Jeff begged her to see it through. Meantime, the gold-digger, "Cookie," was making life miserable for the playboy.

The situation came to a head when, without warning either Joan or Jeff, T. R. Clark placed an item in his paper announcing the engagement of the couple. Now go on with the story.

—The Editors.

PART 3

PRETTY Joan Scott's face was pale with anger. The headlines in the society section of the Chicago Dispatch that announced her engagement to Jeffrey Clark was, she felt, carrying the farce a step too far. She had been willing to be a good scout and play young Jeffrey's little game to fool his father, and bravely she had gone through the scene last night with the elder Clark. She had feared the powerful multimillionaire newspaper publisher at first. Later she had learned to like him. But Jeff had let her down on his end of the agreement, and she had meant to leave. The headline in the paper had been a final straw.

"This," she cried indignantly to Mrs. Evans, the housekeeper, "has gone far enough."

She began dressing furiously, preparatory to leaving.

Meanwhile, in the bedroom of the Beachwater Hotel's most expensive suite, Miss Margie Cook, Jeffrey's real girl, displayed feelings quite similar to Joan's. Miss Cook, however, did not get out of bed. Instead, she reached over and seized the telephone. It was Cookie's habit to speak loudly and clearly at all times. When she wished to emphasize a point, she shouted. When she was excited, she roared. But when she was really angry, Cookie's voice was low and icy, as threatening as the point of a stiletto. Jeff Clark recognized signs of trouble when Cookie first spoke. He began defensively.

"I thought I told you not to call me at home," he said.

"Listen, you worm," Cookie said in her iciest tones, "you're not telling me anything! And you know what I'm calling about. You think I'm blind. I've got the newspaper right in front of me."

"What newspaper?" Jeff asked, stalling for time. He had seen the paper and feared the worst.

"What newspaper!" Cookie roared. She paused for effect, and again her voice became like a drift of snow. "Listen, you stupid jerk, on the society page of your father's paper is an announcement of your engagement to that Joan Scott. And don't tell me you didn't see it!"

Jeff fumbled for words. He tried to tell Cookie that he had not been responsible for the item. But she wouldn't listen. She suggested that perhaps Joan had put the item in the paper.

"Why, that little phony!" Jeff cried. "I'll fix her. I'll get her out of this house so fast she'll never know what hit her. You leave everything to me, will you, Cookie?"

"Like fun I will! You've stalled me long enough. It's about time you and I had a talk with your father. And this seems to be just as good a time as any. I've listened to you as much as I want to. Every time I look at that headline I could bust a blood-vessel . . ."

"I know you're angry, dear, but if you'll just leave it to me—"

"Leave it to you, nothing. This time I'm going to handle it myself. See you later, Jeff."

With that, Cookie banged the receiver back into its cradle and left Jeff frantic on the other end of the wire. He could imagine nothing worse than Cookie calling on his father.

Up in her bedroom, meantime, Joan had completed dressing. She asked where Mr. Clark's office was, and Mrs. Evans informed her that it was Thomas R. Clark's custom to use the study downstairs during the mornings.

"Fine," Joan said grimly. "That'll save a lot of time and trouble. I'll go down immediately."

Mrs. Evans held up her hands in horror. "But, Miss Scott," she said, trembling at the very thought, "no one, no one is ever allowed in Mr. Clark's study when he's working. He's never to be disturbed."

"No?" said Joan, bracing herself. "Well, this time he's going to be disturbed. I'm sorry, Mrs. Evans, to take this thing out on you, but I just can't help it. Now, will you please step out of my way and let me go down to Mr. Clark?"

Joan flung open the door and marched down the broad marble staircase. In the anteroom before Thomas R. Clark's study was a pack of newspaper reporters, hungry for a story on the wedding of the year. They shouted at Joan, fired questions at her, begged for statements, exclusive interviews and photographs. To Joan, they seemed like a pack of wolves, but she fought her way through them, reached the door of the study. She opened it, walked in and closed the door behind her. She was about to speak, then she faltered. Thomas R. Clark looked up from his desk and glowered at her. His eyes were cold, hard. His stare was more than suspicious. Suddenly Joan felt terribly frightened. She didn't know it, but Clark really was amused. He was a past master at concealing his feelings.

But Joan had faced trouble before, and she wasn't going to let a mere multimillionaire newspaper publisher frighten her for long, even if he did have a face like a mad bulldog. Clark did little to put her at ease. He offered her a chair, then turned to answer an insistently ringing telephone. The call was from Senator Jamison congratulating Clark upon the engagement announcement. Finally Clark hung up, turned to Joan.

"They're giving a little party for you two weeks from Saturday," he said blandly. "Mighty considerate of them, don't you think?"

Joan sat aloof and cool. Clark did not wait for her to answer. "I tell you, my dear, that phone's been ringing all morning. Never knew there were so many people ready to congratulate me because my son finally had found a girl." He became more expansive. "Makes me feel kind of good—well—oh, I'm sorry, Joan, what's on your mind? Cook spoil your breakfast or something?"

Joan started to speak, but again was interrupted by the ringing telephone. By the time Clark hung up again, Joan really was angry. He kept her waiting still longer when he called his secretary, Brennan, and told him to take all calls for the next ten minutes. Finally, he turned to Joan.

"Mr. Clark," she said, "I'm glad you are through talking on the telephone, because I want to have a talk with you. And it's not about the cook spoiling my breakfast."

"No?" Clark said innocently.

"Will you please stop trying to humor me?" asked Joan, putting her foot down. "I don't know what Jeffrey has told you about me, and I don't know how he could have allowed it to go this far. The fact remains it has, but I don't intend to permit it to continue. I refuse to become any more involved in your affairs or your son's."

"That's pretty strong talk, my dear," Clark said evenly. "Perhaps we were a trifle hasty in assuming—"

"Hasty isn't the word," Joan said, cutting him short. "Presumptuous would be more like it."

"Now, just because you're upset—"

"Mr. Clark, I'm more than upset. And I believe you'll be, too. Here's the truth. I'm not engaged to your son, I never was and I never will be! Furthermore, I never intended to become engaged to him!"

"How do you mean that?" Clark asked. He really had been surprised and taken aback.

"The first time I ever laid eyes on Jeffrey," Joan told him, "was in the railroad station yesterday morning!"

Clark was amazed. Joan told how she'd been met at the railroad station when she got off the train. Clark's reaction was typical. He told her to stop right there. He held up his hand, demanding silence. He became business-like.

"Jeff's gotten himself into scrapes like this before," he said. "I had no guarantee that this wasn't another one . . . How much are you asking?"

Joan's face flushed with honest anger. She stood up and looked down at the big man with contempt. Her voice was steely hard.

"Mr. Clark," she said, "you and your son evidently have the same idea. You seem to think you can have everything you want simply by paying money for it. Now get this through your head: I don't want any money."

Clark paused, and when he spoke again his voice was quiet—deadly quiet. "I suppose you're going to tell me now that you want to—"

Before he could go on, Joan interrupted. "If you're going to say that I want to marry your son, you're wrong again. All I want to do is explain what's happened. When it's clear, I (Continued on Page Facing 36)

MARY MARTIN SCHOLARSHIPS HELP TALENTED YOUNGSTERS ALONG SUCCESS ROAD!

Gary Cooper Turns Alpine Climber for "Bell Tolls" Role; Greer ("Mrs. Miniver") Garson Gave a Director a Hint; Brian Donlevy Remembers an Old Friend

HOLLYWOOD By FRANCES LONG

Noblesse Oblige: Fresh out of the United States Naval Academy was Brian Donlevy some fifteen years ago. He had decided to be an actor. He was in New York, and he was broke and hungry. George Leyendecker, famous magazine illustrator, helped Brian get on his feet by using him as a model. For three years, Donlevy modeled everything from collars to Santa Claus costumes. So what? So next week George Leyendecker arrives in Hollywood to do a series of drawings for national magazines, and Brian will again model for him—not to eat this time but to repay the man who once befriended him. With an acute shortage of male models in New York, Brian didn't hesitate in agreeing to pinch-hit in order to get his friend out of a bad spot. So in between scenes for Universal's "Nightmare" with Diana Barrymore, Brian will be posing for magazine illustrations. History repeats itself! . . .

Michele cuts a corner: Michele Morgan, currently vacationing at Del Monte, was in a dither about keeping all the dates service men on leave at the resort asked for, solved the problem by going out with them in groups rather than singly. According to reportorial counting of noses the other evening, Michele was seen with fourteen en masse, and everybody happy . . .

Ah, Bromeo! Producer Buddy De Sylva walked into the Paramount commissary the other day and saw Ray Milland about to down a bromo-seltzer. "Ah, Romeo and Bromeo," he quipped.

In "Palm Beach Story" Claudette Colbert has to deliver these lines: "Chivalry is not only dead, it is decomposed." Which is quite contrary to her views in real life, happily married as the lady is to Dr. Joel Pressman, now a surgeon in the U. S. Navy . . .

Movie-Radio Guide's Hollywood offices had two extra special visitors last week—Rita Hayworth and Vic Mature. They came together. Vic was on leave from the Coast Guard and Rita had just finished "You Were Never Lovelier," and that's a fact. Now they're both working for Uncle Sam. Vic's back with the Coast Guard and Rita's in Texas on a USO junket. When they were about to leave, Vic lingered a second, and we asked him if this affair with Rita was to be catalogued with all his other Hollywood romantics. "Not on your life!" he popped back . . .

Just in Case: When Greer Garson learned that she had been cast in the role of "Mrs. Miniver," she was—to be trite—scared stiff. Not because she was afraid of the role but of the director. She had heard that William Wyler was a tough hombre who insisted on perfection. So Miss Garson decided to send Mr. Wyler a gift with a message—a pair of "velvet" gloves. Evidently the hint worked, because after the picture was finished—and what a picture it's proving to be!—Greer sent Mr. Wyler, "a great director and a fine man," one Miniver rose . . .

Remember "Three Smart Girls" and how they grew up? Now Universal's Bruce Manning is writing "Three Smart Girls Join Up" for Deanna Durbin, Helen Parrish and Nan Grey, the originals from the picture "Three Smart Girls Grow Up." 'Twasn't long after that production was released before the girls all married. Now Movietown's wondering if they will take the title of this movie as seriously . . .

Budding is the word for the romance between youngsters Gail Russell and Freddie Bartholomew. Gail, who is the self-styled Hedy Lamarr of Santa Monica, has just been given her first picture role in a Henry Aldrich opus. Freddie got a start when he saw Gail for the first time, and now it looks like steady company for the pair.

Superfluous—in fact Hollywood in the know calls it rank waste—aside from its being the chuckle of the week on the acidulous side! What? A big Hollywood studio hired a technical expert on knife-throwing for one of their pictures. Yet everybody who knows the particular studio's set-up and its personnel says there is no one over there who needs advice on the subject of knife-throwing! . . .

Bob Hope and Bing Crosby were rating a certain producer last week. Both agreed that he wasn't too sharp, but Hope made it clear when he said, "That guy is about as important as a picture on the second half of a double bill with 'Gone With the Wind!'" . . .

Missing—One Author. Name: Ernest Hemingway, who authored "For Whom the Bell Tolls," now being made into a picture at Paramount Studios. If anyone who reads this sees him will they please tell him that Paramount producers are searching for him. They seem to think he is in the vicinity of Santa Ana doing a story on the air base there, while his wife Martha is doing a graveyard shift at Lockheed, gathering more material. Added note: If it's a game he's playing, Paramount's front office wishes he'd stop . . .

Bell Starts Tolling Anyway: Most difficult location stuff ever undertaken by a Hollywood studio is that on "For Whom the Bell Tolls" sets. Daily, Gary Cooper, Ingrid Bergman, Akim Tamiroff, others in the cast do stunts that would ordinarily be performed by experienced stunt actors. They are up to an elevation of 10,000 feet, which makes breathing and physical exercise tough, and are working harder than they ever did before in their lives. Elevation made it impossible to lay a sound-cable from the sound-truck; so the innards of the truck had to be removed and carried up the mountain-side piecemeal on muleback. There

GENE AUTRY found Evelyn Finley riding with a group on the Coast two years ago. Since then Evelyn's appeared in all Autry shows. A University of New Mexico girl, the lady's a trick rider of no mean ability, as those who've seen her ride will testify it was reassembled and the recording on film done that way.

Last week producer-director Sam Wood wanted a shot of Gary Cooper looking out from a point covering a great expanse of country. Coop had to scale a cliff 250 feet straight up. After he made it, Wood yelled, "How's the height?" And Gary came back with, "It's not the height, it's the depth!"

Later, when the excitement had cooled, Tamiroff opined, "It would be all right to do this mountain-goat stuff and cliff-climbing for fun, but it seems so silly to do it for money."

The wit of the troupe, Tammy didn't lose his sense of humor when he was working in a battle sequence showing the attack of Pablo and his band on some enemy tanks, not even when he slipped on loose shale, careened down the mountainside, and slid into the road in a cloud of dust. He just looked back up the steep cliff that he'd have to climb again and flipped, "I don't ask to be the best actor in this troupe. All I want to be is the one who lives the longest" . . .

Mary Martin doesn't forget what a tough time she had getting a break as an actress. Now she is a success, Mary's constantly doing her bit to make it easier for others she believes have talent. She holds a contest every year and the winner receives a scholarship, and practically every month Miss Martin holds auditions at her Westwood home for talented youngsters. As this is written three of her proteges are already success-bound in the theatrical profession. Toni Gilman, the winner of her last scholarship contest in New York, has been signed by United Artists. Zora Grey, a torchy singer, is now profitably engaged in a San Francisco night-spot, and Marjorie Garland, who played a small role in Mary's latest film, "Happy Go Lucky" (Paramount), is now touring the country with Bobbie Sherwood's band . . .

They look toward Dixie. Despite the fact that she's as Irish as the Blarney stone, it isn't difficult to imagine Maureen O'Hara as a southern lady. And some day that's just what Maureen plans to be. She and her husband, Will Price, own a 20,000-acre cotton plantation in Mississippi, and when the glamour of Hollywood has faded, Maureen and Will are going to take up a new life in the South and turn to cotton pickin'.

JANE WYMAN, Betty Grable and Vic Mature in 20th Century's light musical, "Footlight Serenade." All three do a swell job

MOVIE REVIEWS

"Footlight Serenade"

Cast: Betty Grable, John Payne, Victor Mature, Jane Wyman, James Gleason, Phil Silvers, Cobina Wright, Jr., June Lang. A Twentieth Century-Fox production, directed by Gregory Ratoff, produced by William Le Baron. Original story idea by Fidel La Barba and Kenneth Earl. Screenplay by Robert Ellis, Helen Logan and Lynn Starling.

This Is the Story: Vic Mature, as a heavyweight boxing champ, leaves the ring for the more lucrative field of musical comedy. Here he falls in love with Betty Grable, who's already married to John Payne, a sparring partner of Mature. That's about all there is to the plot. The real value of the picture lies in the dialog and the music.

Verdict: Delightful fare all 'round. Mature doesn't get the girl, but he and Phil Silvers pack a wallop to the funny-bone.—Family.

"Are Husbands Necessary?"

Cast: Ray Milland, Betty Field, Patricia Morison, Eugene Pallette, Charles Dingle, Leif Erikson, Elizabeth Risdon, Richard Hayden, Kathleen Lockhart, Philip Terry, Cecil Kellaway, Anne Revere. A Paramount production, directed by Norman Taurog, produced by Fred Kohlmer. Screenplay by Tess Slessinger was written from the novel "Mr. & Mrs. Cugat," by Isabel Scott Rorick.

Type of Picture: Domestic farce filled with more petty crises than Carter has pills. You'll have to answer the question the title asks for yourself.

This Is the Story: Ray Milland, married to Betty Field, is a rising young bank executive. Everything's serene until Betty decides to adopt a baby. On that trail, Betty probes into husband's financial affairs, insists that his boss give him a substantial raise. In fact, she gets rabid about it. Patricia, as the other woman in Ray's life, sails in with pointed and downright dangerous intentions. Consternations pile and lead to pandemonium when Milland makes a fool of himself at a costume ball. Prospect of a baby via ways of nature and not adoption causes Betty and Ray to turn sensible. Which isn't a bad idea.

Verdict: Frothy movie fare and completely escapist.—Family.

PHIL SPITALNY'S GALS WANT TO JOIN THE WAACS . . . VALLEE ENLISTS

Beer Sponsor for "This Is the Army" Radio Show Rejected; Hanley Stafford's Son Is a Hero; Radio's Linda Lee Plunges to Her Death

WASHINGTON

By LT. COL. CURTIS MITCHELL

As far back as we can remember, the first radio program to achieve a prominent place in a daily newspaper comic is the "Army Hour." Joe Palooka fans have seen several references during the past fortnight and there are more to come. Which is just one more tribute to the greatest program on the air, the only program which gives every listener an intimate acquaintance with his Army.

Your Army—the Army you hear on the "Army Hour"—is the only material force standing between any citizen and slavery. Your faith in that Army is an absolute requisite for victory. Your knowledge of that Army and its soldiers and its weapons is a vital necessity. If generals fail, new ones can be appointed. If weapons wear out, new ones can be built. But soldiers are our last line of defense and the foundation of all our defenses. If we don't believe in them, we believe in nothing. Listen to them on the "Army Hour," know and believe in them, and they'll bring us victory . . .

If you have seen "Yankee Doodle Dandy," the picture-story of George M. Cohan's life, you can guess what the movie version of "This Is the Army" will be like. Warner writers and directors huddled with Irving Berlin recently, and the plan now is to use much of Berlin's own amazing life-story, with his participation in two world wars as the climax. "This Is the Army" goes on tour shortly, and it looks as if that proposed radio program will not materialize. A beer account offered $10,000 a week to Army Emergency Relief for radio rights, but it was felt by Berlin as well as the War Department that it would not be fitting to use soldiers to advertise an alcoholic beverage. The first out-of-New-York date is Washington, D. C., after which the soldier show will appear in most of America's larger cities. The President and Mrs. Roosevelt, by the way, are expected to see it in the capital . . .

I wonder what inspired press-agent persuaded Phil Spitalny to offer his all-girl band to the Waacs, the Army's women's corps. The news was published the other day, shortly after it became known that the Waacs were creating a band of their own. The only string to the Spitalny offer was that it should be permitted to continue its "Hour of Charm" broadcasts for General Electric, with profits going to the new WAAC Relief Fund.

Come to think of it, the Waacs out in Des Moines could embarrass Phil by accepting that offer. He would then either have to resign or don a wig and skirts . . .

The time is coming soon when soldiers will not be permitted to broadcast on regular schedules. Ezra Stone, who was Henry Aldrich, is a recent casualty. Soldiers must be under military orders to move quickly and secretly. It is obviously impossible to take any soldier away from his regular program without millions of persons knowing about it. Sergeant Gene Autry of the Army Air Forces is still on the air, but he is still in training. The Navy policy is best illustrated by Lieut. Commander Walter Winchell, who says he has been ordered by the Navy to continue his broadcasts.

The problem of the star who becomes a soldier or sailor is difficult. We can sympathize with persons like Winchell and Stone, who can give their own greatest service in those jobs at which they are the world's best. But we must admire men like Jimmy Stewart and Clark Gable, who went in as privates.

CHIEF RUDY VALLEE is his title now—and that's no gag. Rudy (right) has enlisted in the U. S. Coast Guard and holds the rank of chief petty officer. He receives his first orders as a Coast Guard bandmaster from Lieut. M. A. Sturges. Rudy has permission to continue his radio show Cocktail-drinkers on the St. Moritz terrace saw crashing death mark the end of a radio and stage career on August 24. Linda Lee, beautiful twenty-seven-year-old singer, well known on the airways, plunged seven floors from her apartment overlooking Central Park. Her husband doubts the singer committed suicide . . .

Bert Lytell is setting a pace these days that would put Nurmi to shame. The veteran stage and screen actor is m.c. of the Stage Door Canteen program, president of Actors Equity, a member of the board of directors of the American Theater Wing, sponsor of the canteen, a board member of the USO and also coordinator of entertainment for embarkation ports for that organization. It is Bert's job to see that the boys remaining aboard ships that have returned from convoy duty get their share of entertainment . . .

Seaman First Class George Donald Shaw had a very happy birthday though far from home. George, one of thirty-nine survivors of a torpedoed ship adrift in the Atlantic for five days, appeared on "Listen, Neighbor." He was asked the usual question about his thoughts before he was rescued. Shaw answered he couldn't get his mother's delicious chocolate cake out of his head. As he left the studio after the broadcast, his shipmate handed him a package. That's right—his mother had mailed him a cake and it arrived on his birthday . . .

The old-timers of show business no longer bemoan the fact that vaudeville got the air. "Star Spangled Vaudeville" has given the show folk a new lease on life, and today you're a hit if you play studio 8H at NBC (the Palace Theater of radio), where this program is aired. The performers who used to meet at the theater are now getting together backstage of the studio. Here you'll find the stars appearing on the bill that evening plus song-writers, agents, gag-writers, singers and dancers. Radio has proved itself a boon to the entertainment industry, and the popularity of "Star Spangled Vaudeville" proves that America wants to hear the acts that used to "lay 'em in the aisles!" . . .

What's in a name? Plenty when you answer to Hildegard, Vivien, Maxine, Evelyn or Rosa Linda. Hildegard, of course, is our Milwaukee chanteuse who made good in a big way—the others are members of Phil Spitalny's group. These one-handle ladies do okay. We mustn't forget Cugat's Margo, and Horace Heidt has his Donna—and we'll take pistachio! . . .

FEUDING'S FUN when these able comedians spat on "The Great Gildersleeve" program. Gildersleeve (Hal Peary) is the open-mouthed arguer at the right, while his gray-haired adversary is Judge Hooker (Earle Ross). The show is back on the airways Sundays after a summer vacation plate. A team of three handles the broadcast: Bob, WGN sports editor Grayle Howlett and engineer Marsh Jewell.

Bob handles the game itself without relief. He keeps his own scorecard and flavors his deft play-by-play reports with just a touch of anticipation about the play to come. Grayle bolsters him with an endless chain of typewritten personality notes, statistics and sidelights. These help Bob fill in the actionless gaps between innings and when rows with the umpires slow up the game. They also make it possible for the announcer to supply the batting-average, number of home runs and former affiliation of the humblest rookie at a moment's notice. Marsh sets up the technical side of the broadcast.

Bob Elson is a real baseball fan and former ball player. His voice training came when he served with the Paulist Choir. The day I visited him he needed that perfect voice control because he was on the air for six hours, with only a single ten-minute break. Six hours of broadcast tension—to say nothing of voice strain—is a real endurance feat. Sitting next to him, I could see him wilt as the second game went into extra innings. His head was deep in a tired hand, his shoulders were bent.

But when real action was taking place, when hits hammered the outfield wall or base-runners dove into the dirt, Bob's voice would rise to a keen excitement and enthusiasm, smooth, easy, controlled. It wasn't till he was off the air that he leaned back, groaned, stretched. Right then, I think, he was the tireddest man I've ever seen in radio. Trust he recovers in time for the MBS World Series broadcasts!

By the way, don't pester your local baseball announcer for a perch in his booth. It's a bad seat for a real ball fan, for you can't cheer, and, above all, you can't boo the umpire. I found such restraint hard on the nerves! . . .

The Army War Show opens in Soldier Field, Chicago, September 2, stays through September 12. The two-thousand-man task-force putting on the show has air and ground forces of almost every type, and each performance is climaxed by a sham battle with all the fierce trimmings of modern war. Don't miss the War Show. Profit goes to Army relief . . .

Dr. I. Q. (Jimmy McClain) expects another addition to his family. Already has a two-year-old gal . . . Joe Kelly, Jr., son of the "National Barn Dance" and "Quiz Kids" emcee, is an NBC page here. His ambition is to be a sports announcer . . . "Housewives' Protective League" and "Sunrise Salute," long popular on the West Coast, hit town over WBBM, with transcriptions scattered through Midwest stations. Products plugged must have been approved by eighty percent of "testers bureau"—a large group of housewives who try the products . . .

Recently I reported that Bill Jones was "eased out" of "National Barn Dance" in a shake-up. Further check-up with all parties concerned indicates that Bill left under his own steam to set up his own radio producing organization. He's readying some shows for fall airing. Sorry, Bill.

Rudy Vallee's now a chief petty officer in the Coast Guard, with a bandmaster's rating. Rudy isn't a landlubber. He served in World War I as a Navy gob. At one time he held a Naval Reserve honorary commission, but his present more modest title is real—and well earned. Vallee will be stationed at Long Beach, Calif., and will continue his Thursday night broadcasts—with his entire pay-check going to the Coast Guard Welfare Fund . . .

It isn't that the Merry Macs don't like "Jingle Jangle Jingle." After all, they introduced it on the air and gave it a mighty boost to its number-one-song-hit rating. But when a group of singers heads for Lake Arrowhead, bunks in a cabin, they want peace and quiet. And to have their own baby, the same "Jingle," blare at them till 4:00 a.m. from neighboring radios is too much. Like having your pet dog turn and bite the hand that feeds him. The Macs departed from Lake Arrowhead at 6:00 a.m. to go home to the quiet clatter of city streets for rest . . .

New York World-Telegram Music Critic and Associate Program Annotator for Philharmonic-Symphony Society of New York

A SENSATION is in process of birth. It is almost certain to have wide repercussions in the fields of entertainment, and especially, I should judge, on the radio. The story is that Bizet's opera "Carmen," written, as we all know, in extreme operatic good faith, is about to be launched on Broadway in an English version and with an all-Negro cast.

Oscar Hammerstein II is the man responsible for this modernizing of a repertorial standby. You will remember Mr. Hammerstein as the very gifted librettist and lyricist of so many successful operettas, many of them written in collaboration with Jerome Kern.

The thing that Mr. Hammerstein stresses most in this unusual venture of his is that the music shall not be tampered with. Outside of a few strengthenings here and there, and possibly a judicious cut or two, the score will be presented as is. And it is interesting to note that the man who will do the slight adaptations of the music is Robert Russell Bennett, as steadfast a lover of "Carmen" as you'll find anywhere. So there do not seem to be any worries on that score—pun or not.

Here is where the radio enters into the picture: The arias in "Carmen" undoubtedly will be given much attention on the air. But what is amusing is the very strong possibility that the bandleaders expected to play dance music will be supplying us copiously with rhythmic versions of the Bizet score. So that, while the adapter has had too much admiration of the music to alter it, it will nevertheless take the same road that certain fragments of Tschaiakowsky's, Debussy's, Ravel's and Rimsky-Korsakoff's compositions have taken in recent months—the jazz road.

Undoubtedly we shall also be hearing on the radio the Hammerstein-Bennett version itself, so that all around it's going to be an interesting fall and winter on the airwaves.

Mr. Hammerstein told me the other day that he got the idea of an all-Negro "Carmen" some time ago. He heard a concert performance of the opera at the Hollywood Bowl, and he was struck with the beauty of the work's construction, its marvelously pat music without benefit of costumes or scenery. He decided then and there that if opera could make such an appeal to listeners of whom only a small percentage understood French, then, certainly, a translation of a libretto or perhaps an adaptation struck in vernacular might do so much more for the cause of Bizet and his collaborators, not to omit the amount of good it might do for the cause of music in general.

Mr. Hammerstein is a tall, athletic-looking man in his middle forties. He admitted that he has always loved good music, that he listens to it as often as he can, that with a name like Hammerstein—which goes back to the fantastic Oscar Hammerstein of the golden age in opera fame—he would be more or less expected to like good music.

"The Bizet rhythms," Mr. Hammerstein said, "are hot in themselves. That's why we won't have to give the music the caloric treatment. I suppose the moment you mention all-Negro cast everyone thinks in terms of jive. Well, we'll let the bandleaders do all the jiving of Bizet's music they like. As far as we are concerned, however, we'll stick by Bizet."

THE opera in the new version will have a South Carolina locale. There are cigarette factories in South Carolina, so that rather coincides with the original idea. The four acts have been reconstructed into three, the last two being treated as separate scenes of a third act.

"Carmen, the gypsy girl in the Merimee story, becomes Carmen Jones in our production," Mr. Hammerstein said. "Escamillo becomes Hep-Cat Miller—notice the similarity of sounds—famous bandleader. He and his band are supposed to be starring at a very swanky night-club frequented only by whites. Incidentally, there will be but one white performer on the stage; that will be a policeman, who makes

OSCAR HAMMERSTEIN II was struck with an idea at a performance of "Carmen," came up with an English all-Negro version a brief appearance. And the Don Jose becomes just a guy named Joe.

The bull-ring of the last act in the original has been changed to a scene which shows a parking-lot in front of the night-club Mr. Hammerstein spoke about. The other scenes have been changed to suit the present needs of the story.

"You'd be surprised at how well Negro voices, solo or chorus, can sing the Bizet music. I mean it has such a wonderful elasticity that it could easily have been 'spiritual' music. Of course, it isn't exactly blues, but when you hear negroid pronunciations on the Bizet notes you feel that there is an affinity between them. I've enjoyed writing words for the notes particularly because of that feature of the thing.

"The well-known Flower Song, sung by Don Jose, now has become 'Dis Flower Dat You T'rew My Way.' The flashing Seguidilla, which the heroine sings, has for the first line of its text 'There's a Cafe on the Corner.' And Carmen's other song, the Habanera, comes through the editorial fire with this initial line, 'Love's a Baby Dat Grows Up Wild.' The honeyest of them all, however, is the Quintet, which starts 'Would You Like to Make Some Dough-Re-Mi?'"

"I believe so much in popularizing opera through the translation or adaptation method that I'd like to take up that work seriously after this production gets under way," Mr. Hammerstein declared.

"I know that there would be much more enjoyment for me in listening to an opera in my own language. And I feel that that applies generally. It's all right, I suppose, for sake of art to give opera in foreign languages, since the texts in some of the works are beautifully wedded to the music. In most translations that I have seen, though, that is not the case. Translators, I'd say, have been more concerned with emphasizing the right accents. That can be done even with a better choice of lines. The trouble is that you have to dig for the right effects of meaning and sound.

"The Metropolitan has had success with a couple of excellent English adaptations recently. The thing could be done wholesale. If there will be a great resurgence of opera in this country it will be because of first-rate translations of the librettos. I'm convinced of that.

"Truthfully, I've had more pleasure in doing the 'Carmen' than in anything else I've done before. It's been fascinating. I see so many possibilities in that kind of work. It's a great field and maybe I'll be in it up to the hilt some day."

Marion Hutton, songstress, to be movie queen

EVER since Alice Faye, once a soloist singer with Rudy Vallee, crashed through the sacred Hollywood portals to screen success, the young ladies who sing with dance bands have all had their eyes in the direction of the film capital. Another who has made the same sort of grade is Ginny Simms. But in this piece we are concerned with Marion Hutton, who dispenses choruses, as well as blond charm, as a member of the Glenn Miller orchestra's solo section.

Miss Hutton has been a Miller constituent for four years. Recently when the band went to Hollywood for the film "Orchestra Wives" the young woman's photogenic qualities were not overlooked by either producer William Le Baron or director Archie Mayo. Accordingly, Miss Hutton's part in the 20th Century picture was "built up," as they so succinctly put it in filmland. That's why you will be seeing her rubbing elbows on an elevated plane, for a beginner, with such stars as George Montgomery, Ann Rutherford, Lynn Bari and Carole Landis. The leader, of course, is also featured; but we were considering strictly film notables.

A series of very intricate and elaborate tests are now taking place and the word is that there is a long-term contract in view for the personable miss.

Miss Hutton, a native of Detroit, had had scarcely any professional training before launching out on a singer's career. As you may remember, Mr. Miller signed her up right after an audition. All that she could claim for singing experience before that had been several appearances at local functions.

One of the better Decca albums is that starring Bing Crosby and Fred Astaire in a collection of songs sung in the Paramount picture "Holiday Inn." Mr. Crosby's work we all know; in which case it might be best to say merely that he is himself. You'll hear him sing such Irving Berlin tunes as "Happy Holiday," "Be Careful, It's My Heart," "Abraham" and others. Mr. Astaire sings two numbers, "You're Easy to Dance With" and "I Can't Tell a Lie," he also appears with Crosby and Margaret Lenhart in "I'll Capture Your Heart"—he does some tap-dancing in that, too.

Let 'em Participate

My job calls upon me to provide entertainment for all classes of persons—civilians, white-collar defense workers, war-plant workers, soldiers, sailors and marines. Since December 7, however, I've been especially interested in arriving at certain conclusions regarding the type of entertainment appreciated by the latter group—by the men who wear the uniforms of the armed services of the United States.

I have talked with servicemen on trains and buses and planes. I've interviewed them at Army camps, recruiting stations and induction centers. I have had talks with officers of the Morale Division of the Army, and as a result of these probings there is one conclusion which stands uppermost in mind. Namely, the new recruit in uniform is a much different man from the one who attended high-school dances last year, who drank chocolate sodas across the fountain of the corner drug store. He acts differently, he thinks differently and he feels differently. The things that he liked last year are in a different world today. And so the entertainment you would have provided for his dollars last year cannot be the same as the entertainment you provide for his morale today.

The soldier in the Army camp is an interesting fellow. He is receiving, in many instances, his first real taste of discipline. For the first time, perhaps, he is being told exactly what to do, how to do it and when to do it, with no argument and no comeback! The feeling of regimentation, of being an infinitesimal part of a much larger and more important community descends upon him with all the effects of an M-3 tank. To counteract the ill effects of this upon his ego, and at the same time to prevent destroying the good effects of this discipline is the job of the morale officer. The answer is found in the words of a very good friend of mine who is morale officer at Fort Riley, Kansas. "Let the boys participate, Dr. I. Q. . . .," he said to me the other day. "Let 'em let their hair down for a change, and let 'em feel that their former individuality is not lost to them. Let 'em participate in the entertainment in some way to make them feel that their former individuality is anything but lost to them."

There you have the secret! "Let them participate!" All day long they listen to lectures in classrooms, all day they study military tactics and RADIOMEN make good soldiers, Col. George W. Teachout tells Dr. I. Q. (right) during a variety show at Camp Crowder. To prove his point, he has three specimens. drill. All week long they are made to feel themselves insignificant to the "whole." This is part of their basic training to make them capable of taking orders without questioning, without thinking, to save precious time that in itself might save precious lives. It's tough training for your highly individualistic American youngster who has always been made to feel that he was the center of attraction in a free, liberty-loving country. It's tough, but it's important. And so, when these young men gather for entertainment, many of them are temporarily starved for self-expression. If they are allowed to participate, to "let their hair down," as the Captain says, they will entertain themselves. But there must be a leader. With proper leadership, inhibitions vanish and the grins appear.

In the quiz program method of participation anything can happen when a soldier is at the mike. At Camp McClellan, in Alabama, we asked a young corporal to imitate an animal for us. We gave him his choice of a cow, a dog or a weasel, thinking he would choose the cow or the dog. To our surprise he said, "I'll imitate the weasel, Doc!" Imagine our surprise when he very loudly popped his chewing gum and said, "There you are, Doc, pop goes the weasel. Pay me off!" We did.

At the officers candidate school in Aberdeen, Maryland, we conducted a quiz show for some four hundred officer candidates in the Ordnance Division. We asked one young man if he could tell us the difference between a woman and a submarine. He piped up, "Doctor, ordnance has to do with artillery and shells! None of us ever fooled around with a submarine!" Now, in a theater audience of average civilians that gag would hardly be worth a grin. At the Army camp it brought down the house.

Over at Fort Wayne, at the Quartermasters Corps depot in Michigan, the lid went off when we asked a mess sergeant what he knew about etiquette.

We quizzed him as follows: "Sarge, if you were left-handed and seated next to a right-handed person, would it be proper etiquette for you to stir your coffee with your right hand, or should you use your left?" The sergeant grinned. "Well, Doc, I don't know much about Emily Post, but offhand I'd say it would be a doggone sight better whether you were left-handed or right-handed to use a spoon!"

Over in Des Moines there's an induction center called Fort Des Moines, where they recently sent the new recruits of the WAAC. But when we were there nearly a year ago there were no Waacs . . . only a few thousand young men who were tickled pink at the opportunity of expressing themselves in a quiz show participation. We asked one young cowpuncher from west Texas if he could tell us the principal use of cowhide. His answer was in the friendly drawl of the western prairies. "Wal, Doc . . . I reckon you'd find the principal use of cowhide is to hold that there critter together!" We paid him off and the boys loved it!

These little anecdotes are related to demonstrate the fact that the serviceman, when allowed the opportunity to participate in his own entertainment, can come out with some of the cleverest bits of individual showmanship imaginable. Because his life is so taken up with subjugating his own personality and individuality in the primary training for war, your buck private in the service of Uncle Sam finds welcome relaxation and welcome opportunity for self-expression in any form of participatory entertainment. Sometimes I ask the boys to perform stunts, to sing, to do acrobatics, to jitterbug for the crowd, and in each of these endeavors he and his comrades have a barrel of fun.

I think the key-word in entertainment for the serviceman is SIMPLICITY. He wants no fancy staging, no artistic accents, no elaborate stage sets. These things belong to another world

. . . a world he misses, perhaps, but one to which he has said a temporary goodbye. What he wants today is to be able to maintain his individuality in the different world of military service.

How to do it? Any good kindergarten teacher could answer that one. When that young man was five years old, and entering the strange new world of facts and ideas to which he would later become so accustomed, his kindergarten teacher said, "Let the boy participate . . . let him make things . . . let him build blocks and draw pictures and learn to express himself." That was years ago, but today that young man is in kindergarten again because his new world—MILITARY—is just about as strange and different to him as the other world was at the age of five. And that is why community sings, athletic events, amateur contests, quiz programs and all sorts of participation activities are best for the entertainment of the boy in camp!

Another rather interesting fact has been disclosed to me through experience in Army camp entertainment. Contrary to popular belief, the average soldier-recruit is not as pleased with the night-club floor show type of entertainment and smutty stories as many would suppose. Certainly he is lonesome. But that doesn't mean he is lonesome for the local burlesque house or the corner tavern where the latest stories are making the rounds. He may have been quite a rounder in his own home town. But from what I can gather in talking with him, when he gets lonesome it's for his home, and his folks, and the sweethearts who used to walk with him out there under those big oak trees in the park. And frankly, he's just a little embarrassed and irritated with any efforts by well meaning but ill-advised performers who attempt to bolster his "morale" with the latest Broadway gags and gals. He'll enjoy the night-club floor shows when he gets back to civilian

Boston Boy, Somewhere in Pacific, Gets Message; Louisiana Listener Is Go-Between for Boys "Down Under"; British Children Better Fed

By CHARLES A. MORRISON

President, International DX'ers Alliance

PRIVATE Warren Altman of Brookline, Massachusetts, now some place in the Pacific, fifteen thousand miles from home, experienced the "miracle of miracles," he declared, when he heard his mother's voice sending greetings to him in a short-wave program originating in Boston and broadcast over the General Electric short-wave stations in Schenectady. This was one of a series of weekly salutes from different cities being arranged by newspapers all over the country.

Private Altman did not know in advance his mother would speak on this program. He had been notified by the War Department, as have all camps of American soldiers in foreign service, that Boston would be included in the series of salutes. He had hoped only to hear a voice from his home town and, according to a letter just received from him, "it was the wonder of all wonders when I heard my mother say, 'Hello, Warren, this is Mother.' Here I am fifteen thousand miles away listening to a short-wave program and who do you think I heard? It was my mother and I've never been so thrilled in my life. All the other boys with me got a big kick out of the program too."

One of the General Electric stations at Schenectady, WGEO, is now broadcasting with a full power of 100,000 watts. This powerful new transmitter was recently put into operation, replacing one of equal power released at Government request last year to KWID, San Francisco. The new WGEO transmitter is, according to reports, well heard "down under" in Australia and New Zealand.

Shorts From the Short Waves

Radio Tokyo is doing its best to incite the natives of India to open violence against the British in that country. Several times each day something of this nature is broadcast from Tokyo: "India, now is your chance. Unite to fight British oppression and tyranny. India's independence from the British can only be won by a strong and determined fight. Don't lose this chance for independence . . ."

It surprised me to learn, on authority of Sir Frederick Whyte of London, that India is the eighth industrial nation of the world; actually manufactures over forty-five thousand of the sixty thousand articles needed for war . . . A list of "Thou Shalt Nots" for Poles, in German Poland, was given in the BBC "Radio Newsreel," as follows: Attend divine service in a church where there are Germans, or listen to a sermon in Polish, or practise any of the rites of his religion where the Polish language, and not Latin, is used; take part in any collective, social or professional movement, trade union, political party or choir; speak Polish in public; go to any opera, to any theater, movie or any place of amusement; visit a museum, library or scientific institute; visit restaurants or cafes where German customers are served; buy new clothing, except workmen's overalls and wooden shoes; practise any profession except the medical profession, as doctor, to attend Polish patients . . . Frederic Kuh, head of the London branch of the Chicago Sun, related the following story over the British short-wave station recently: It seems a magician was giving an impromptu performance aboard a ship traveling through enemy waters. For the grand finale he promised to make a parrot vanish. Leading up to the big trick, he did several minor stunts such as pulling a rabbit from the hat, producing a snake from Lady Throttlepuss' purse, etc. Just as he was about to make the parrot vanish, a torpedo struck the ship, and the next thing the passengers knew they found themselves swimming around in the water. Next morning the first mate saw a log floating around in the water with some sign of life on it. Upon closer inspection, he found a parrot walking back and forth on the log. The parrot's wings were clasped behind his head, and as he paced up and down the log he could be heard to mutter, "Mighty clever, mighty clever!"

World Series for A. E. F.

American soldiers throughout the world will hear half-hour dramatizations of the World Series baseball games scheduled for the first week in October, according to plans just completed by the English section of NBC's international division. The dramatizations will be heard on the American and English hour, broadcast over WRCA, WNBI and WBOS, assuring complete coverage of our fighting forces all over the world.

Messages From A. E. F. in Australia

Some weeks ago I told about A. J. Bergeron's (Houma, Louisiana) hobby of listening in to messages from our soldiers in Australia, broadcast by short-wave to their friends in this country, then writing a personal letter to the relatives of the soldier including the message. Mr. Bergeron now writes that he has finally reached the goal of sending messages to parents, wives or sweethearts in every one of the 48 states. The two most extreme points to which he has relayed the messages are Tacoma, Washington and Portland, Maine. Not only has Mr. Bergeron obtained the gratitude and lifetime friendship of the recipients of his letters but he has also received letters from the soldiers in Australia thanking him for conveying their messages to their parents here. He has compiled a huge scrapbook, alphabetically arranged, in which he keeps the many personal letters, photographs and press clippings he has received in the course of pursuing his commendable and unselfish hobby.

British Menu

According to Lord Woolton, British Minister of Food, broadcasting recently from London, the following is about the picture of the food situation in Britain.

Principal Rationed Foods (Approximate amount allowed per person, per week)	Semi-Rationed Foods (Obtainable on points system)
1 lb. of meat	canned meat
3/4 lb. of bacon	canned fish
1/2 lb. of sugar	dried beans
1 egg	peas
2 ozs. of butter	lentils
6 ozs. of margarine or cooking fat	rice
3/4 lb. of cheese	sago
2 ozs. of tea	tapioca
3/4 lb. of jam	prepared breakfast cereals
	canned or dried fruits

Unrationed Foods
Include fresh fruit, cocoa and coffee, bread, potatoes, carrots.

Note: The above are rationed according to the points-rationing system so that people can take their pick of the things they like best. For example, one might use twelve points in canned meat, or six points each in rice, and tapioca.

Anyone who has to eat away from home gets food which is additional to his domestic ration. Those sitdown canteens, snack-bars or pithead canteens catering to workers in very heavy industries allow double meat allowance to their customers. Children are probably better fed than ever before. They get first claim on all milk. Babies under one year are given two pints of milk per day. All in all the people of Britain have plenty of simple, healthy foods, even though they do lack some of the variety and choicer foods of prewar days.

Important Changes to Be Made in the Style of Listing Programs in Next Week's Issue of Movie-Radio Guide

The editors of Movie-Radio Guide are happy to announce that effective with next week's issue the program listings will be published in a more serviceable and convenient form, listing each day's programs separately. In other words, the issue of Movie-Radio Guide for the week of September 12-18 will contain a NINETEEN-PAGE program section with all programs for each day of the week listed separately as a complete unit for the hours from 7:00 a.m. to 12:00 midnight, inclusive.

All improvements made in the past several months, such as special program detail, music listings, best-listening boxes, cartoons and pictures, will continue to be a part of this new, bigger-and-better-than-ever program section. We believe you are going to like it—this easy-to-follow program section designed especially for better listening. Reserve a copy of next week's issue of Movie-Radio Guide at your nearest news-stand today. On sale Wednesday, September 9.

HOW TO USE THIS SECTION

All daytime programs for Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday between the hours of 7:00 a.m. and 3:45 p.m., inclusive, are listed in this section.

The daytime programs listed under the heading "Monday Through Friday Programs" are all programs broadcast Monday through Friday at the same time each day.

Half-way down the same column and under the same time-line you will note the word "exceptions." All programs listed under this heading are those which are not broadcast at the same time Monday through Friday but are different every day or broadcast in a series of two or more, such as Monday-Tuesday, Monday-Wednesday-Friday, etc. In other words, if you are looking for a news program or a dramatic serial broadcast at the same time each day it will be listed under the "Monday Through Friday" heading. All other programs will be found under "Exceptions."

Air Patrol Lures Actress

An aviatrix' helmet will soon cover the beautiful blond head of Bess Johnson, NBC daytime serial star. She, like the "Story of Bess Johnson" author, Peggy Mayer, is scheduled to take flying lessons, hoping to qualify as a Civilian Air Patrol pilot.

Busman's Holiday by Wire

Peggy Mayer, who scripts "The Story of Bess Johnson," decided to "get away from it all" for a short vacation in Connecticut. She wasn't going to have anything to do with the show for two weeks, by golly! When she checked out of the hotel to come home last week-end, they presented her with a $64 long-distance telephone bill—for her daily chats with the director!

ARLENE FRANCIS

—Seymour

SHE wanted to be an actress, but her parents said "No!" They sent her to school at a convent, topped off her education with a trip to Europe, set her up in business, all with the idea of steering her away from the acting profession. But Arlene had different ideas. She studied under Ruben Ramoulian, now a screen director. She impressed Daniel Frohman, the veteran producer, and finally made her stage debut in "La Gringo," in which she played a nun and understudied Claudette Colbert. A part in "Street Scene" followed, and then a role in the motion picture "Murders in the Rue Morgue." Her radio break came in 1933, and since that time she has appeared on a great many programs. At present she has the star role of Linda Emerson Harper in the NBC serial "Helpmate," heard five times weekly at 10:30 a.m. EWT. Arlene's real last name is Kazanjian.

BETTY LOU GERSON

DIXIE'S gift to the daytime serials is Betty Lou Gerson, native of Chattanooga, raised in Birmingham. Betty Lou is descended from a long line of continental opera stars, but her dramatic work omits the singing that was part of the family tradition.

Betty Lou trained at the Goodman Theater in Chicago, then went back to Birmingham as a dramatic coach.

While she was still in her teens she gave up teaching to go into radio work in Chicago, and soon won a very important place on the networks. The list of programs on which she has starred is long and distinguished. One of her most important roles today is that of Marilyn Larimore in "Lonely Women," heard over NBC at 2:15 p.m. EWT five times a week. Betty Lou's main nonprofessional interest nowadays is the new dairy farm she and her husband, Joe Ainley, radio producer, have bought.

Promotion for Victor Borge

Victor Borge, Danish-born comedian-concert pianist on the "Kraft Music Hall," is slated for promotion next month in the California State Guard, vital Coast defense unit. He's now a master sergeant.

Ezra Stone Held Over

Ezra Stone will continue to be a part of the Broadway scene for at least another month. Although no longer in radio, the all-soldier show "This Is the Army," which he directs and in which he has a featured role, has had its run extended to cover the month of September.

Phil Spitalny Visits Soldier

Seaman W. Dudley Lutton, winner in the recent "singers in uniform" competition conducted on NBC's "Hour of Charm," was flown from the Naval Air Station at Jacksonville, Fla., to the Brooklyn Navy Yard hospital recently to undergo an emergency operation.
Calling, on arrival, for Phil Spitalny, he was visited by the "Hour of Charm" conductor before the operation.

Imitating the sound of an electric drill was a puzzler for Tommy Brashaw, sound-effects man for NBC's "Bachelor's Children," but not for long. He came up with the answer by placing a piece of sheet metal in a wooden trough. Then he took the clapper from an electric doorbell and tapped it against the metal with an electric buzzer. Result? Perfect.

Fibber "Theme" Exclusive

Theme song used by Billy Mills and his orchestra during their summer network airings from West Coast ballrooms is the perennially popular "Billy." The familiar "Fibber McGee and Molly" theme, which was written by Mills and is untitled, is used only to introduce the top-flight comedy airshow.

From Strip to Script

Abbott and Costello, former burlesque comedians, are doing fine in radio so a sponsor (not theirs), evidently feeling that others from the same field might do the same, is now angling for the services of Ann Corio for a new fall series. She's an ace strip-teaser who turned actress on stage and in pictures.

life, but right now he's being taught that he's got a plenty serious and terribly important job to do, and the less distraction from this job, the better he likes it. He doesn't want to be reminded of the things he is missing. He wants to feel he is having a wonderful time doing his wonderful job.

As a matter of fact that soldier boy would much prefer to gang up with the other fellows in his outfit and try to out sing the fellows in the other outfit. Community sings are very popular at Army camps, sports events, even outdoor contests such as barrel races and the old games we used to play on Sunday afternoon picnics in the park. He has lost his sophistication, this lad of ours in khaki uniform, for the hard work has cured his worldliness and the bright warm sun has put a healthy coat of brown on his smiling face. He has little use for "celebrities" until they prove themselves "regular guys," and he is the most critical audience in the world of anything he thinks is high-hat or patronizing. He'll cheer his lungs out when you call out the name of his home state, and he'll give you a royal razzberry just as quickly and just as energetically if he thinks you're talking "down" to him. And so, to the sincere performer, to the showman who understands him and loves him and respects his feelings, he is the grandest audience in the world and he'll clap his hands until they drop from the wrists. He is the typical American boy who is learning how to live a new life, who needs that precious feeling of stability that comes with true maturity, who loves a good time, but knows that he has a man-size job to do . . . an American-size job to do . . . and who is going to do it!

Remember the tow-headed, twenty-one-year-old youngster in the dingy little restaurant in Ohio back in October, 1940? Yes, he was Private Donald McClain, newly recruited from Louisville, Kentucky. Dr. I. Q.'s kid brother. He was a mighty lonesome youngster that afternoon two years ago. But the Army Morale Division and the American entertainment world understood that boy. They understood his problems and they knew the answers to them. Today Donald is a mighty different boy. Thanks to the Army's skill in urging Don to expand upon his own ability and ambition, and at the same time enjoy himself and the job he was doing, it has taken a raw recruit who didn't even want to be a soldier, and it has made a MAN and a soldier. For today he is Lieutenant Donald McClain, Camp Sutton, North Carolina.

(Tune in "Dr. I. Q." on NBC Monday night.)

Keep 'em Sinking, Mature

on, you were having too much fun when you had no money and just as much when your salary jumped to $1,250 a week. You had too little reserve, respect for the "big people." You were, in a word, doing just what most other men would like to do—if they had the nerve.

It is hardly fair for us editors to expose your personal feelings. For the purpose of making a point, we'll do it gently. People didn't know that behind all this bravado you were afraid—that when you appeared on C. B. DeMille's "Lux Radio Theater," the radio mike you faced for the first time gave you the shakes. Your voice quavered, and only iron determination kept you from tossing your script in the air and rushing out of the theater. The public didn't know that every time you waved a handful of insulting critics' notices in one fist and chortled with glee, exclaiming, "See how obnoxious I am!" that those acid comments cut you cruelly. And no one knew that once having attained what is known as stardom, a big bank account and the freedom to do anything you wanted, you found this ideal situation as empty of real satisfaction as a soap-bubble.

You found that it wasn't the having, but the fighting for the having that kept you living in feverish delight. You found that Victor Mature was, after all, only a name.

That's all changed now.

"Victor Mature is all out for Victor Mature," you used to say. People believed that because you didn't give them anything else to believe. The bosun who ordered you to clean out the bilge-head on your first day in the Coast Guard may have felt that Victor Mature needed some iron treatment, but ninety-nine chances to one he was simply putting you through the routine, and your name might have been Joe Smith for all he cared.

MATURE and Genius, Jr., in RKO's "Seven Days Leave"

Now, by your own admission, Victor Mature is relegated to fourth place in your scheme of things. Number one man is Uncle Sam. Then comes the Coast Guard, which you have sworn to serve and honor with your very life. After that, your buddies, and then Vic Mature, his loves and his hates.

Already you have shown that you not only can take discipline and hard work but you can take it and ask for more. Some of your Coast Guard buddies have told us that. "Just wait until Mature gets into the service," we used to hear the Hollywood folk say. "He'll really take a beating!"

Up until now, and undoubtedly from now on, they have been dead wrong. The editors of MOVIE-RADIO GUIDE think it's time someone made that admission publicly, not so much for you as for the Coast Guard, which to the last man is revered in American history for heroism and devotion to duty.

We know that you are ruthless in a fight, loyal to your friends, capable of any device to defeat your enemies. You, who followed a lone path in Hollywood, now find yourself in the position of representing the name of a strange city, some of whose citizens have been accused of devious means to gain their own softly upholstered chairs in the war effort.

You are to be congratulated upon your enlistment in the United States Coast Guard, the nation's oldest armed sea force, and one that has never failed a mission in war or in peace. You won't fail yours, and when it comes to enemy subs—Keep 'em sinking!

THE EDITORS.

Entertainment a la Carte for the A. E. F.

out of hiding? So Judy did her famous "Minnie from Trinidad." Brenda and Cobina gave the boys their own special slant on news from the home front—how the girls are retreading their girdles, for instance.

These are soldier shows, of pungent flavor.

Bob Hope told about working in a new picture with Miss Lamour.

"We had dressing-rooms just across the way from each other," he explained. "Every time she went to change her costume I went to change mine, too. But she was always a shade ahead of me."

Robert Benchley, however, lectured soberly and morally, warning sailors that "fish are very poor examples of the facts of life, because they work under water—and don't know anything."

The boys ask for the darndest things —and get them! A marine suggested rowdy Milton Berle ought to play a love scene with Hedy Lamarr. Berle borrowed a vitamin tablet and proceeded to oblige.

Jascha Heifetz and that other virtuoso of the violin, Jack Benny, came to play on the same program. Heifetz got to the mike first. When he had finished Benny complained that Heifetz had done the selections which he (Benny) had expected to do.

Benny then suggested that they do a duet. Heifetz suggested Paganini's "Perpetuum Mobile."

"Oh, that's been done to death," said Benny. "How about 'Love in Bloom'?" Heifetz protested that he had never heard of Benny's favorite tune. Finally they compromised on MacDowell's "To a Wild Rose." They started bravely enough but after a few bars Benny drifted off into "Love in Bloom."

A Hoosier at a far northern outpost wrote that he was homesick for the tanagers that woke him up back home. He got his bird song at dawn, faithfully recorded, with Fred Allen tossing in a Bronx bird-call for Hitler.

Four ex-Yale men, stationed on India's coral strand, yearned for some touch of New Haven. Rudy Vallee sang them the "Wiffenpoof Song."

A homesick New Yorker called for the honk of a taxi-cab. He got it. Another who yearned for the organ-grinder got an earful of the hurdy-gurdy man with Bob Hope at the crank.

"If you're looking for the monkey," Hope said, "he's on the radio Thursday nights selling cheese." He referred, of course, to Bing Crosby.

Several stars have seized an opportunity to burlesque radio as the American public knows it all too well. Pat O'Brien and Dick Powell as the "Sunrise Kids," harbingers of early morning cheer, sponsored by "Krautbinder's contented cheese—sweet as a tropical breeze"—satirized the corny poetry and "homey philosophy" of radio's dawn patrol, then swung into a morning-exercise program: "Now, we'll all brush our teeth—one, two, brush, brush; three, four, brush, brush . . . Now you can put your teeth back into your mouths."

In one of those "intimate dramas of everyday life," the heroine brought a promising career to a sudden end at the Pomona High prom, confessing: "After eating some of Krautbinder's Luscious Limburger I'm no longer a wallflower—the wall fell down."

A corporal in the Marines somewhere in the Pacific wrote: "Tell my kid sister I'd like to hear her voice." That was easy, for the request came from Shirley Temple's brother. Shirley served as mistress of ceremonies—drawing what must have been the first fan mail she ever got from soldiers.

In a few brief months the "Command Performance" parade has lengthened out into a cavalcade of America's greatest entertainers.

Every week the line-up is changed. The stars don't just drop in for perfunctory hellos. Gary Cooper left the set of "Pride of the Yankees" to talk about Lou Gehrig and give an up-to-the-minute sports review; Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy exchanged

SERGEANT GENE AUTRY

listed man. Gene didn't seem to be much worried. "I'll adapt myself to conditions as they may be," he said. "I haven't always been where I am now. I worked for fifteen dollars and thirty dollars a month on farms back home. I can live on low pay again. I'm just an American, and if millions of other fellows can do it, so can I."

We were talking the day his rodeo closed in Chicago—the day he was to make what was possibly his last appearance on the flood-lit tan-bark. I asked if he had any regrets at leaving the show. His answer was brief, sincere, direct:

"This is the wrong time for any of us to regret any sacrifice. We seem to be on the losing side of this war, so far. We'd better all get going, or we'll be passing up plenty! Leaving the show's not important. There's a job to be done!"

Gene is frank about his ignorance of Army matters. He's never had any military experience or training. His contact with the Army has been limited to visits to camps at which he put on shows.

"You know," Gene said, "I also visited English Army camps. I was in England when the war started in 1939. I want to go back there after this trouble is over. They appreciate our western tradition. Yes, and I'd like to visit Germany, too. I want to see that country and meet the people, after we've chased out the gangsters that's running Germany now."

"But the country I most want to visit is Soviet Russia. We read so much about it, yet we know very little of the life there. From what I hear, I guess some of Russia must be a lot like our West. I want to meet some of those Cossacks. They're supposed to be the best horsemen in the world."

(And there, you Hollywood script-writers, is a story idea for your file—Gene and the Don Cossacks—scheduled for early release after war.)

None of us talk too glibly about tomorrow—and the day after tomorrow when we have peace again, but Gene Autry knows what he wants to do when the guns stop snarling. He wants to go back to western pictures.

"Yes," he said, "I want to go back. Westerns offer so much clean entertainment. They were the first real pictures, and they'll never die. They bring pleasure to westerners and to folks who never saw a ranch."

Then we talked about his own military career. I asked what kind of service he wanted. Brief and to the point, his answer came back, "My preferences aren't important. I'm a soldier under orders, and I hope I'll be a good one."

That was all, except for the hearty western handshake and the good-bys. Sergeant Gene Autry of the U. S. Army Air Forces had a heavy schedule ahead—a war-bond broadcast over his old home station, WLS, a last rodeo performance, and the job of reporting for duty at Fort Sheridan, from which he'll probably be transferred to Santa Ana, California, for his basic military training.

It will probably be from the West Coast that Gene will broadcast his "Sergeant Gene Autry" Sunday radio show, which was formerly "Melody Ranch." The show will aid the Air Forces recruiting effort, and Gene's salary will go to Army Relief.

I watched Autry as he left, and it seemed to me that his shoulders were stiffening, his pace was tightening. It wasn't too difficult an imaginative leap to replace the flashy showman's rig with olive drab and chevrons.

Base Facts

DON'T look now, but summer is doing a disappearing act! Or should we say, do look now—in the mirror—at what it has done for and "agin" your skin. Chances are the sun has tinted it to an attractive, healthy shade of tan. But what about its texture? A bit on the dry side, eh? And what about those little sepia sprinklings scattered over the bridge of your nose? It really seems as though the seasons were at cross-purposes with your complexion. No sooner have you conditioned it for one season than it's time to recondition it for the next! But cheer up—it's a comfort to think that in these changing times your epidermis, at least, is always with you. Frankly, it can be a very compatible companion if you treat it kindly.

First for the "sun-spots"—just plain freckles to you and me. If a glance in the glass gives you little in return other than dots before your eyes, don't regret time spent in the sun. Think instead of the dose of health you've reaped along with the freckle harvest.

Now, there are measures you can take to remove those tiny, tanned areas. However, we should like you to think twice before going on a purge (which, by the way, should be done only under doctor's supervision). It's a long process, an expensive one, and there's no absolute guarantee of complete and permanent removal. Science has recently revealed a vitamin known as para-amino-benzoic acid which, physicians say, will tone down the color of freckles, but its production will probably be hindered until after the war, as it requires toluene needed in the manufacture of TNT. So why not try a clever camouflage for the duration? There are certain creams on the market (one called "Hide-It" lives up to its name!) that combine the virtues of a freckle-concealer with those of a very fine powder base. When applied correctly, your pigment peculiarities become your personal secrets.

These same creams go a long way in covering up minor skin blemishes. However, it cannot be overemphasized that a skin made smooth by inner health, rather than outer camouflage, brings far more satisfactory results. It's much wiser to consult your doctor for a cure than to spend precious minutes trying to "cover up" a problem complexion. It may be that just a simple change in diet will make that all-important difference.

If you have a lovely skin to begin with, congratulations! You probably can charge it up to your excellent physical health. But you know that even a flawless skin has its seasonal toll. Right now you're probably using a powder base with a slightly oilier

FAREWELL, "MELODY RANCH"! Gene chats with the audience after the last airing of his Sunday night show under its old title. Changing its name as Gene changed his, it is now known as "Sergeant Gene Autry"

Mrs. M. C. Reas, New Albany, Ind.—Glad you think our column is "tops." Hope you continue to enjoy it . . . Here's a description of CURLEY BRADLEY: He stands six feet one and a half inches, weighs 175 pounds, has brunet coloring. Roy Shield, music director of the NBC Central Division says, "His vocal range is very wide. He has a soft voice with a great deal of charm that classes him essentially as a song stylist." For relaxation Bradley swims, rides, spins ropes, boxes, wrestles and hikes. His hobby is collecting guns. You can bet his favorite sport is polo, and he also likes rodeos. Bradley's favorite meal consists of possum, buttermilk, and corn bread; he hates Sunday drivers and still rolls his own cigarettes! Curley's hero is Robert E. Lee, his favorite author Zane Grey; in his spare time he writes Western songs, longs to be heading West again—for good. He's still shy, plenty reserved—the kind of a guy who's at home with horses and dogs.

Twentieth century's counterpart of seventeenth century's John Alden is announcer RICHARD STARK. Stark's interest in tennis took him to the courts in Denver, Colorado, one summer, where he met Caroline Babcock, then national doubles champion. A modern Miles Standish, in the person of a prominent socialite who was quite unsuccessfully wooing Miss Babcock, asked Stark for a few tips on courting. Stark's tips sounded good enough to take them himself; they proved so effective that he and Caroline were Dick's picture work occupied so much of his time that he had none left in which to go to school, though he was well instructed by his mother. However, when he was nine years old, Mrs. Stark sent Dick to school, which did not dampen the ambitions of the young actor, and during vacations Dick made enough money as an "extra" to pay his way into Cornell University, whereas working in the library paid his tuition. Practical extra-curricular work in the Cornell Dramatic Club further trained Dick for his career. Though he studied international law at school, he returned to Hollywood in 1934 for a part in "Midsummer Night's Dream," a show which toured for a couple of weeks. After some odd jobs, Dick finally landed a substantial one as announcer for NBC's "Hour of Charm." Stark doesn't like to be called an announcer, and is known as the emcee of "Hour of Charm." # WHAT'S COOKING!

By GEORGIA SCOTT

Let 'em Eat Cake!

CRISS-CROSSED eating to make the mouth water is this cherry pie, product of the culinary skill of Anne Shirley (left). Anne's Hollywood friends vouch for the RKO star's first-rate technique of oven management

JOAN FONTAINE (above) is caught in the act of turning out a fine batch of tender doughnuts. Her beguiling smile seems to indicate that she's "hep" to the tricks of cake-baking, as she is to movie acting

IF YOU'VE diddled with dough and fussed with frosting all afternoon, whisked the creation into the oven with a flourish, and an hour later opened the door to a complete flop—take courage, mop your brow and start all over again! But do it only after you've studied the causes for calamity so that it positively won't happen again. It takes a lot of practise, and sometimes plenty of failure, before you're dubbed a "confectionary connoisseur."

The perfect cake is a truly beautiful thing, there's no doubt about it. It is light and tender, pleasingly moist but not sticky, and has a uniform thickness. The crust is delicate brown, thin and daintily crisp with no cracks. It has an even, fine grain, a tender, velvety texture, and a delicate flavor. That's a lot to ask for in one product, and the tragedy is that the smallest, seemingly insignificant error in the process of cake-making will cause your baking tragedy. So it pays to know all the secrets!

There's a "six-sided success story" in General Foods Corporation's invaluable little booklet, "Cake Secrets," which runs as follows:

1. A reliable tested recipe.
2. Good ingredients.
3. Accurate measuring.
4. Careful mixing.
5. Correct baking.
6. Proper care after baking.

Of course we can't tell you all the secrets here, but we'll hint at a few of the more important. First of all, be sure to measure each ingredient accurately. Even the slightest departure from the written rule may change the balance of a recipe and cause a poor finished product. And here's one about eggs—the whites help to make cakes light and feathery. So, for best results, remove eggs from your refrigerator several hours before the "beating" process. They beat up lighter and more quickly when not too cold.

When you're ready to bake, see to it that your oven maintains a steady heat at exactly the right temperature. Baking time should be divided into quarters, so that continual opening and shutting of the oven door will not be necessary and temperature will remain the same. At the end of the first quarter, the cake should begin to rise. At the end of the second, rising continues and your cake surface will begin to brown. Third, the rising has finished, the browning continues; and at the end of the fourth, the baking is finished, and you'll find the cake has shrunk slightly from the sides of the pan. You can oven-peek at the end of each quarter, and if things aren't what they ought to be, adjust the heat as required. If it's baking unevenly, you'd do well to change the position of the pan. Last, but not least, to keep your cake fresh store it carefully as soon as it's cold, in a clean well-protected bread-box.

Cake baked, let's talk about eating it! If you're planning to make it the lead play in your party, you'll want to dress it up for the occasion. This can be fun—if you'll follow a few simple rules. First, choose an easy-frosting pattern that follows the shape of the cake. For decorating, use a cone-shaped parchment or waxed-paper bag with a metal-tip sized to the pattern desired. You'll find it best to fill the decorator only half full of frosting at a time. Then go to work—with your latent artistic talent at your fingertips!

If your cake's a success, ten to one your party will be, too. But there's one way to insure it—take stock in five hundred priceless pages of Ida Bailey Allen's new book, "Successful Entertaining." Not only does one of America's foremost home economists tell you how to brighten your regular meals with new menus, recipes and decorations, but she's also plotted themes for scores of out-of-the-ordinary parties. They're bound to surprise your friends!

Incidentally, if the war has added "box-lunch packer" to the many roles you play each day, you'll help your country by helping his morale with a midday "sweet" surprise. One he'll look forward to is—

Peanut-Butter Cookies

- 2 tablespoons shortening
- ½ cup peanut butter
- 1 cup sugar
- 1 egg
- 2 cups cake flour
- 5 teaspoons baking-powder
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ½ cup milk
- ½ cup chopped peanuts

Cream shortening thoroughly, add peanut butter and cream together, then blend in sugar. Add beaten egg. Mix and sift dry ingredients and add alternately to creamed mixture with the milk. Chill and roll on a slightly floured board. Cut into desired shapes and place on a greased baking-sheet. Decorate with chopped peanuts. Bake in a hot oven (400 degrees F.) for seven minutes. Approximate yield, seventy cookies.

composition to offset dryness caused by summer heat. Creams containing lanolin, such as Miner's Foundation Cream, are especially effective for this purpose. It won't be long now before you'll be face to face with chill winds, sleet and snow—and only one who has sped swiftly down a ski slope or a toboggan run knows just how "biting" that wintry weather can be. Therefore, you know that it's not a fool's whimsy to condition your complexion for the cold months that lie ahead. "Overglo," House of Westmore's latest liquid-foundation cream, contains a vegetable-oil base, excellent for softening the skin. And for a really "camera-conscious" exterior, try Miner's Patti-Pac make-up. It literally takes the cake!

At this time of year powder practically reaches its peak in importance. Your tan, alas, is fading, and it's up to you to fade your powder-shade along with it. Right now, while you're still slightly sepien, Woodbury's new Tan and Sun Peach shades are sure tonics for an end-of-season visage. But whatever shade you choose, be sure its base is "rosy glow," a pick-up for a fading tan that tends toward the fallow side.

There was once a time when the matching of make-up was more or less hit or miss. Now, however, almost every make-up preparation on the market includes a booklet describing a color harmony that is keyed to your complexion type. If you're not sure, though, exactly what your type is, don't go in for guess-work. You owe it to your personal appearance to consult a reliable cosmetician. But don't forget that vitamins, sleep and regular exercise cast their color-reflection upon your complexion. Beauty is skin deep, true, but it definitely comes from within to boot!

ful, who lost no time in pursuing his career. He managed to do some straw-hat stock in Stockbridge, Massachusetts, appeared on Broadway, completely failed to click in an audition given him by NBC in 1929. Tenacity being one of Swenson's Swedish attributes, he kept hewing to the line, till five years later he convinced the networks they had to have a guy like Swenson to play leading dramatic roles.

In 1934 Karl married Virginia Hanscom, has since had three sons, Peter, David and Steven. Swenson prefers Swedish and Italian food, enjoys Wagnerian music, hates New York traffic, likes football, photography. He's five foot ten and a half inches tall, weighs about 165, has blond hair, a fair complexion, blue eyes... Karl's ability to simulate many accents has helped him in his radio work. His portrayal of an Italian general on the "March of Time" impressed millions; many people heard his "King Edward" speech and asked if it were not the King himself making the abdication speech; the Spanish Civil War called for an actor to play a Spanish general—done by Swenson; the war in China, the German occupation of Czechoslovakia all gave Karl opportunities to show his versatility. Today, in addition to his serial roles, he is featured on the "Cavalcade of America."

Entertainment a la Carte for the A. E. F.

the finest insults in their years of mutual slander; Bob Burns reminisced about his bucolic adventures in the Ozarks. Betty Hutton sang "Arthur Murray Taught Me Dancing in a Hurry," and the Andrews Sisters did "Boogie, Woogie, Bugle Boy" for a corporal in the Canal Zone who wrote that he was formerly known as the "jitterbug king" of Tallahassee, Florida.

If sponsored commercially these productions would cost conservatively $2,000,000 a year. And it's all provided at not a nickel's cost to Uncle Sam or the fighting men.

The shows are usually recorded following some big regular broadcast so that a technical staff and other facilities are available.

All performers give their talent without charge. Unions and copy-right groups have waived their customary broadcast regulations.

"Command Performance" grew quite naturally out of the demand of soldiers and sailors abroad for news and entertainment from home.

The Army launched the program, still supervises it.

"Command Performance" has exceeded all expectations. Additional transmissions were demanded almost weekly and soon the show was covering the world. To suit India, Australia and Pacific outposts, West Coast stations transmit the show through the predawn to mid-morning hours. Broadcasts intended for Europe, Iceland, the British Isles and North Africa are spread out from 9:30 a.m. EWT until after nightfall. Latin-American regions are serviced between 6 p.m. and midnight.

The master of ceremonies signs off the program in varied style:

"So the Japs want more room," observed Al Jolson. "So we'll give 'em all the space they want; we'll give 'em hell."

Pat O'Brien: "By the way, if you happen to bump into a certain little paper-hanger, will you give him a little paste, just for me?"

expect you to help me get out of this."

"I see," Clark said, beaten. "All right, Miss Scott—I take it your name is Miss Scott."

"No," Joan replied, "it's Mrs. Scott."

Clark paused again. "My doctors," he said after a moment's silence, "allow me only one cigar a day. Do you mind if I light it now?"

Joan told her story, but she did not tell why Jeffrey had pulled the stunt. She told Clark that it would be better for Jeff to explain that himself. Clark listened in silence and then said testily that it didn't make sense to him. He couldn't understand why Jeff had to go through with it at all. Joan became angry again.

"Why he had to put that absurd announcement in the paper doesn't make any sense to me," she said.

"Well," Clark said, trying to pass that one off, "that's something different."

Again Joan let him have both barrels.

"Yes," she snapped. "Just sit there and say it's different! It doesn't matter to you. As far as our supposed engagement is concerned, that's just another one of your son's playful escapades. You—you see nothing wrong in it, do you?" She paused, but Clark was silent. "Of course you don't! You're Thomas R. Clark. You own half of this city. You can get him out of anything. Last night you spent about two hours telling me what was wrong with Jeff and how you hoped that one of these days he'd change. Now perhaps this isn't any of my business, but you're going to hear it anyhow! You're as much to blame for his behavior and his attitude as he is! Probably more! I don't doubt for one moment that as the publisher of a great newspaper and as a power in national politics you're—you're a rip-roaring success. But as a father, Mr. Clark, you're a failure!"

Joan had done what few people had ever done. She'd told Thomas R. Clark exactly what she thought of him right to his face. And, oddly enough, the old man took it. Now, it was his turn. Ordinarily, he would have roared back an answer. But not this time. Instead, he began to play his cards wisely, shrewdly, played like the crafty old fox he was. He liked Joan and really wanted her for a daughter-in-law. The more he had seen of her, the more he wanted her in the family. He thought he saw a way of getting around her.

"You've just finished doing a pretty good-sized job of talking," he said. "And I'll have to admit that a great many of the things you said are true. Right now I'm not going to try to defend Jeff or myself. I want to ask you a question: What do you intend to do about this?"

"I'm going to leave," Joan said firmly. "I suppose I should have done that the moment I saw the newspaper, but I didn't want to until I'd explained things. Now, if you'll send away those newspaper reporters, I'll go upstairs and get ready."

"Not so fast! I haven't finished with you yet. You told me that you were a widow, that you came to Chicago to find a job. Is that true?" Joan nodded. "All right," Clark continued, "I take it that you're in rather difficult straits financially. You need money. Now I'll come to the point. How would you like to earn twenty-five thousand dollars?"

"What?" Joan asked, gulping. "What—what kind of a business proposition is it?"

Then he told her. He said that he wanted her to remain in his house. Live there for three months. To all intents and purposes, she was to keep up the "masquerade" which she and Jeff had started. At first Joan refused. She said she wouldn't remain at the Clark mansion for all the money in the world. The old man told her to use her head. Still she refused. Then Clark told her why he wanted her to stay.

First, though, he confessed that it was he who had put the engagement announcement in the paper. He told her that he had realized she was different from other girls that Jeff had brought home, and he really had wanted her to marry his son. He had been afraid she might change her mind about his boy and explained that he believed the announcement might hurry the thing along a bit.

"Now," he concluded, "if that announcement means something to you, it means a lot more to me. The moment I got up this morning, the telephone started ringing. Friends, business acquaintances, boys at the club, men in politics. Everyone's been calling to congratulate me. When this little story gets around, Jeff won't be the one to suffer. I will. I will be the laughing-stock of Chicago!"

"I don't see why," Joan argued. "You're looking at it from a selfish, personal angle again."

"No, I'm not, Joan," he replied. "My name is Thomas R. Clark. That was my father's name and my grandfather's name. It's a respectable name and I want it to remain that way. Yes, Joan, I know we're not much good. Jeff's not worth anything, and there are people in this town who'll tell you that I'm worse. But it would be nice if we could keep up the illusion of respectability."

Joan was touched by the man's evident sincerity. She felt that he really did like her. But she still refused despite her sympathy for the old man's position. He apologized for putting his proposition on a business basis, then begged her to stay, if only for a month. He promised that at the end of that time the engagement would be broken, the entire affair forgotten, just as she and Jeff had planned. Perhaps, he said, the whole situation might even work out to Joan's advantage.

Joan thought quickly. Did this man know who she was, what she was? Probably not. At the same time, what he said was true. This house, these people and the circle they moved in were sanctuary, escape from Jolly Rogers, from the police who were hunting her. She couldn't accept money for such sanctuary, but she could return a favor and do herself a good turn at the same time. She found herself really liking Old Man Clark. She stood there silent, lost in her own thoughts.

"What do you say, Joan?" Clark urged the girl. "Do you think you could put up with a spoiled son and a grumpy father for a month?"

Before Joan could reply, Jeffrey burst into the room. He was filled with his own ideas of the affair, which had been suggested by Cookie, and he was determined to end the hoax at once.

"Listen," he stormed, "if this little phony here is trying to blackmail you—"

"Blackmail!" cried Joan indignantly.

"Jeffrey," the old man said, "you keep your mouth closed! How many times must I tell you that I'm handling this?"

BUT Jeff could not be quieted.

"It's all right, Dad," he said. "I'll get her out of the house before you know it." He turned to Joan. "And let me tell you something, Miss Scott. If you think you're going to get a dime out of us, you're wrong!"

"I think," Joan said after a moment's reflection, "that you're the most insufferable person I've ever known."

"I'll give you five minutes to get out of this house," Jeff cried, ignoring her. "If you're not gone by then, I'll—"

"Jeffrey," the old man roared, "will you be quiet?"

Joan turned to Jeff's father. "Mr. Clark," she said coolly, "before your son came dashing in here you asked if I'd do something for you—"

"Well?"

"The answer is yes."

"You will?"

"That's right."

"Thank you, Joan," said the old man gratefully. Then he turned to Jeff. "You can do all of your explaining in a few minutes. Right now I want to talk to Joan. Now, please get out of here—and while you're waiting, you might be thinking of a decent apology to make to Joan."

Jeffrey was squelched. He looked puzzled as he walked out of the study. Clark and Joan then discussed details of their arrangement. Joan refused to take any money, but admitted she'd probably need clothes if she were to carry off the pose as Jeff's fiancée. The only thing she really objected to was the publicity—she feared the use of her name or photograph would result in Jolly Rogers' discovery of her present whereabouts. Joan still did not know that Rogers had been taken off the insurance case. Clark pointed out that Joan's last name was fairly common and so they reached a compromise. Joan would permit the interview at some future date but would not permit any photographs being taken. Upon completion of the little conference, Clark called Brennan, his secretary, and told him to clear the house of reporters.

"Now," he asked Joan after hanging up, "does that make you any happier?"

Joan laughed. "It certainly does . . . I want to thank you for doing it."

"You know," said Clark, smiling, "for someone who's doing me a favor, you're the most thankful person I've ever met."

As far as Joan and Thomas R. Clark were concerned, everything seemed to be all set. In another part of Chicago, however, something else was being set—and the background was in one of Chicago's most exclusive women's shops, where the prices were as fabulous as the clothes it sold.

In spite of its reputation, the place gave the effect of being a small, intimate shop. Perhaps this was because of the personnel. The salesladies, working on a commission basis, were unusually charming and affable. Go into that store to buy a pair of gloves, and nine times out of ten you'll walk out having bought not only gloves but a new hat as well.

One of those wizards of feminine salesmanship had spent the better part of the morning unloading a fair portion of stock upon an attractive, if somewhat hard-looking, blonde. Miss Margie Cook, the blonde, was on a buying-spree and, since she didn't intend to foot the bill, price was no object.

Two evening gowns, two dinner dresses, four afternoon frocks—hats and gloves to match, of course. Shoes, four pairs, and lingerie. Cookie didn't stop at the fur department, only because she considered herself in a terrific hurry. But she promised the discreet saleslady that she'd be back on another day.

"Charge it all to Mr. Jeffrey Clark," said Cookie. When the saleslady looked rather startled, Cookie hastened to say, "Oh, it's all right. If you don't believe me, call the old man now. He'll okay it by this afternoon. You haven't got a thing to worry about."

After she left the shop, Cookie stepped into a cab.

"I want you to take me to the Thomas R. Clark residence," she ordered. "And make it snappy."
