We Applaud Jeanette MacDonald . . .

JEANETTE MAC DONALD has earned new honors. She has earned them on frame stages in backwoods Army posts. She has earned them in dingy day-coaches, bumping buses and snorting jeeps. She has proved herself a first-class troupier and a first-class patriot by her work in recent months.

When some of us were taking life easy at the beach or chasing little balls around golf courses, Jeanette braved the worst heat of summer to bring music and pleasure to one hundred thousand servicemen. She asked no favors—no cool northern tour. She sang for one hundred thousand servicemen in the blistering summer weather of mid-America: Texas, Oklahoma, Missouri, Arkansas, Tennessee, Kentucky, Illinois.

She sang twenty-six to thirty songs a day when the temperature crowded 110. She deserted the main-line, air-conditioned Pullmans to seek out camps far off the beaten track. She found her reward in the soldier-voted title, "The Army's Best Sweetheart."

As soon as her camp tour ended Jeanette launched an eleven-state concert tour, the proceeds going entirely to Army emergency relief.

Yes, the red-headed star of the forthcoming picture "Cairo" has earned our heartfelt and enthusiastic applause.

Gold-Digger for Uncle Sam

HEDY LAMARR is after your money! She's sold millions of dollars' worth of war bonds, and is still going strong. That's why she says proudly, "I'm just a plain gold-digger for Uncle Sam!"

Where We Might Be

Attacked!

An Enemy Bomb Dropped in Oregon, Paramount's "Forest Rangers," and MBS Commentator John B. Hughes Combine to Bring America This Warning

"FOREST RANGERS," produced in Technicolor by Paramount, is great entertainment; but its real significance lies in its timeliness in pointing out the grave danger to our national forests during war-time. When movie-goers see the picture, we ask them to bear in mind the warning given by John B. Hughes, MBS "News and Views" commentator, on the serious situation that now exists in our national forests; to remember that one-third of the nation is wooded, and that fires in those areas represent a grave menace to our war industries. As he pointed out, California alone has eighteen million acres of forest land. The Pacific Northwest many more. That we might be attacked in that way was proved on September 9 of this year when an incendiary bomb, presumably from a Jap sub off the coast, was dropped from an enemy plane on Mt. Emily, near Brookings, Oregon, and burst into flame. Had it not been for the constant vigilance and quick action of forest rangers, this blaze would have grown into a conflagration injuring and killing thousands of people and costing millions of dollars in property, as well as seriously sabotaging vital industries. Protecting our forests always has been a tremendous problem, particularly during those seasons when rainfall is light and underbrush becomes tinder dry. Now that we are at war, it assumes even greater proportions; for they could be a focal point of attack. "Forest Rangers" should bring that fact home to every person who sees the film.

CAST OF "FOREST RANGERS"

Fred MacMurray, Paulette Goddard, Susan Hayward, Albert Dekker, Lynne Overman, Eugene Pallette, Regis Toomey, Robert Kent, James Brown, Clem Bevans, Rod Cameron, Chester

Clute. Made in Technicolor, "Forest Rangers" was directed by George Marshall, from the screenplay by Harold Shumate. Dramatization was made from an original story by Thelma Strabel.

WHEN fire is reported, ranger (Robert Kent) takes reading on finder (left), calls another lookout to establish location of the blaze. Above: The crew of fire-fighters rushes to the scene, works furiously to put fire out, keep it from spreading

RANGER Don Stuart (Fred MacMurray) calls a meeting (below), makes plans to track down person guilty of starting fire. When another blaze is reported, he spots area from a plane, uses the parachute (above) to reach the fire. Peril increases as trees grow drier from lack of rain

RADIO phones used by ranger pilots, checking fire's path from the air, are invaluable in the fight, save millions of feet of timber every year. Below: Here's how "smoke-jumpers" (parachutists trained to bail out of forest ranging planes over points where fires break out) look as they prepare to leap

RANGER Don finds fire-fighting easier than trying to keep peace between two girls who love him when trio finds themselves stranded for the night, forty miles from the station, with one lone blanket. Below: Tana (Susan Hayward), lumber-mill owner, pits wiles against Celia (Paulette Goddard), right

LATER, when two girls are trapped alone by menacing fires, Don finds Tana hurt and Celia (above) with clothes and face black trying to put out fire with pump and hose

GINNY SIMMS: Rancherette

Star Songstress Finds
Happiness in Hard Work
on Her New Ranch Home

GINNY SIMMS, the ranch-girl who became one of radio's top singing stars, is a tradition-breaker. By all the rules of Hollywood, she ought to spend her spare time as the pampered great lady in gleaming night-clubs or an uncomfortably gorgeous boudoir.

Instead, Ginny spends her "leisure" working on her ranch, where her family is seriously engaged in raising alfalfa, hay, citrus fruits, a victory garden and a thousand chickens.

The star of "Johnny Presents Ginny Simms" has two trophies which share equal rank as her most cherished possessions. They are the award she won for being radio's outstanding girl singer and the plaque won by her farm at the Kern County Fair.

Ginny's ranch home is brand new. She and an architect worked together to create the American farmhouse, the huge white barn, the Dutch doors. Even the smallest interior details bear the touch of the singer's personality.

Ginny is forced to forego the pleasures of farm life for long stretches. Her radio and recording dates keep her on the go, and the boys in military camps deluge her with requests for appearances at their shows.

JACK-O-LANTERN in the rough is this pumpkin Ginny picked from her victory garden (below). Miss Simms is heard in her own NBC show every Tuesday

GINNY'S PAL is the smiling hunting-dog above. He wouldn't give up his soft seat to pose, so the blue-jeans-clad singer joined him in the hay

GLAD-RAGS, western style, are Ginny's choice for riding. The slim frontier pants and western boots are topped by a hand-embroidered gabardine shirt. The red kerchief completes the costume. But Ginny's visits to her ranch aren't just pleasure-journeys. There's plenty of hard work around the place and the singer does her share of the chores

DR. THORNE'S LOST MINE

Apaches and a Canyon of Gold Do
Strange Things to a Young Doctor
In This Tale by the Old Ranger

GOLD works strange tricks on 'em as don't guard against its magic. I've in mind what it did to a young army surgeon, out here in these desert parts, many years ago. So now pull up your camp-stool nearer the fire, while the Old Ranger spins you the yarn.

'Twas back on a burnin' summer afternoon in the 1850's at a remote U. S. Army post, somewhere in the wilds of New Mexico. A troop o' cavalry'd brought in a young Apache warrior, proud with war-paint. But he kept his eyes covered with his hands. The Colonel called young Dr. Thorne, the post surgeon, to make an examination. The warrior was sufferin' from dread trachoma, slowly goin' blind.

"What a pity," said Dr. Thorne sadly. "He's young an' strong—a warrior. It's terrible to think o' a man like that spendin' the rest o' his life in darkness, sittin' with the old men and squaws when I could so easily save his eyes."

Well, the upshot was that the Colonel permitted the doctor to treat Na-Pas, the young Apache warrior, on promises o' keepin' him isolated so the disease wouldn't spread through the post. Thorne cured the Injun, but if you think the Apache acted grateful, you're mistaken. When at last he was set free, his eyesight restored, he left without expressin' one word o' thanks. The rest o' the post forgot Na-Pas, but not Thorne.

Months passed, an' then one day Na-Pas came back to the post. With him were two other warriors. They wore no war-paint and dust o' long travel was on their bodies.

"Our people—Apaches—in trouble," said Na-Pas. "Darkness fall over their eyes. Suffer much. Apache medicine man can do nothing. You burn evil spirits from my eyes—bring back light. You do same for my brothers."

An epidemic o' trachoma had spread through the tribe—all o' 'em faced blindness. Now, Thorne was a doctor who took his medical oath seriously. Despite the Colonel's warning that the Apaches lived in a country practically unknown to the white man, a region north o' the Gila River, Thorne said he'd go back with the warriors, the white man's most deadly enemies.

The next mornin' they started. They rode silently, two warriors in the lead, the doctor behind 'em, an' the third Injun bringin' up the rear with a pack-mule. On the fourth mornin' o' the journey, the doctor was blindfolded with his own bandanna and his horse was led by his guides. He had no way o' seein' the landmarks pointin' into the Injuns' stronghold.

Toward evenin' o' that day, he heard the murmur o' many voices, an' suddenly the horses stopped. Thorne's blindfold was removed. He was in an Apache rancharia—the end o' the trail. He looked down into the faces of the Injun men, women an' children. Nearly every pair o' eyes was infected with trachoma. The next mornin' he went to work, but only a few—a very few patients appeared. When they had gone, no more came in their place. The cause o' that was the tribe's medicine man, who was afraid the doctor would turn the tribe from him. Thorne took Na-Pas aside.

"You tell medicine man I give him medicine—show him how to put it into sore eyes of your people so he can make them well himself. Tell him if he do this I will leave him much medicine."

Thorne waited in his wickiup. At sunset, the medicine man in a big headdress o' eagle feathers came. Nothin' was said, no explanation was given, but the doctor understood. The medicine man was on his side!

For the next four months, Thorne drove the infection from the tribe. Finally came the day he felt his work was done an' he told the chief he was ready to go home. The next mornin' at dawn, he found his pack-mule an' horse before his wickiup an' his three guides waitin'. All the tribe was there to bid him good-by, an' there was gratitude in their eyes.

Once outside the camp, the guides grinned an' pointed to the doctor's bandanna. He nodded, tied the handkerchief over his eyes. He expected to wear it for a whole day, but in less than an hour the horses stopped an' the blindfold was removed.

Thorne rubbed his eyes an' looked around him. They was in a canyon with high walls—walls of rose quartz flecked with somethin' that glittered in the sunlight. The Injuns with him were grinnin' an' pickin' up big chunks o' yeller rock from under their feet. Gold! The ground was covered with the nuggets. The horses were walkin' all over them, kickin' 'em with their feet!

"Pesh-la-che!" Na-Pas said. "Yellow

Na-Pas pointed to Thorne's bandanna and the doctor laughed queerly. As though fumbling, he let the handkerchief drop, and while Na-Pas stooped to retrieve it the doctor took a quick look around. His hands trembled so much that Na-Pas had to tie the blindfold for him . . .

A week later, Dr. Thorne told the Colonel about the canyon o' gold. He said he was going back.

"Before they put the blindfold on me," he said, "I took in all the landmarks. There was a high mountain in the distance. It had a rocky formation on top, shaped like a sombrero. Most distinctive. I'd recognize it anywhere!"

"I still can't understand why you threw away the nuggets they offered you," the Colonel said.

"I told you. I didn't want them to realize I was interested . . ."

The Colonel looked at Thorne queerly. "You don't talk like the same man who left here four months ago, Thorne. Well, maybe I'd change, too. Who knows? Gold does strange things to men—strange things."

Thorne and three prospectors started out in the desert when Thorne's resignation from the army was accepted. They rode westward to find the canyon o' gold. On the fourth day, they found themselves in the heart o' the Apache

1 EARLY shopping by Eloise Kummer includes gifts and wrapping materials. Books are favored gifts for our servicemen overseas

2 PRACTICAL kit, cards, tobacco, pipe-cleaners, games are wise choices. Perishables, liquor and inflammable materials cannot be sent

3 STUDY of guide tells Eloise how to mail soldier's gifts. Package should be no larger than shoe-box, not more than eleven pounds (six is better). Gifts are wrapped individually for greater protection

5 SECURELY tied and properly addressed, Eloise's package will arrive safely before Christmas, for she mailed it before November 1

CHRISTMAS, 1942, finds our men scattered across the earth. Santa's sleigh is replaced by steamers that sail sub-infested oceans, and seamen will die to get your gifts through. So keep them small, practical, useful. Don't send food, perishables or inflammables. Package well and be sure to address properly, according to the prescribed form set up by the post office. For additional tips, study these pictures posed by Eloise Kummer, star of NBC's "Guiding Light" and "Right to Happiness." Eloise's own Christmas package went to Iceland, where her husband is on duty as an Army captain.

country. Around 'em, on all sides, they seen smoke signals, but nobody molested 'em. They kept ridin' . . .

For several days they searched. Finally, they spied a mountain shaped like a sombrero an' galloped hopefully toward it. They found canyons a-plenty, but none o' 'em the missin' canyon o' gold. More days passed. The search became more feverish. Dr. Thorne spied another mountain resembling a sombrero . . . an' another. But all empty o' treasure. The prospectors begun to grumble an' quarrel. The smoke signals all 'round gave 'em the jimmies.

"You had a pipe-dream, Doc, an' jest imagined you seen that canyon," they said.

"I did see it," Thorne said stubbornly. "I swear I saw it. Its wash was yellow with gold . . . covered with nuggets . . . the horses walked right over them. An' in the distance a high mountain shaped like a sombrero . . ."

"Yeah, Doc. Sure there wasn't pearly gates too?"

So the little party returned empty-handed. Thorne organized a second expedition. But 'twas a failure, too. After that folks begun to laugh an' tap their heads significantly. Try as he would, Thorne could persuade nobody to go with him again in search o' the missin' mine.

Well, sir, the years passed. Years o' disappointment an' disillusion. But through it all, Thorne still clung to his belief. A party o' emigrants travelin' westward by covered wagon, drew up one day by a water-hole an' found an old man camped there . . . an old man whose mouth was set in bitter lines an' whose eyes, as he turned toward 'em, held tragedy. The settler needed a doctor. One o' the kids'd had an accident. Tumbled off a wagon a piece back. The old man asked if he could help, said he'd been a doctor once. The settler looked skeptically down at the old man's gnarled, tremblin' hands and the old man followed his glance.

"No, no," he said. "These hands weren't always so stiff like this. There was a time when they performed operations . . . healed the sick." He looked up an' smiled. "They healed a whole tribe o' Injuns once—saved 'em from blindness."

But the settlers moved on, leaving the broken old man standing beside his campfire. The old desert rat watched the wagon creaking away an' talked to himself like men do who live alone in wild, desert places.

"He didn't believe me. He thought I was lyin' . . . they all think I'm lyin' . . . that I'm an imposter. But I'm not. I did see that canyon. I was in it." His voice became low, husky, almost a whisper. "My horse walked on a pavement o' gold!"

The Old Ranger says he came across the best account of this true story in The Arizona Highways Magazine. To the Arizona Writers Project, which collected the facts, and to the editor of Arizona Highways, he expressed his gratitude for permission to use the materials. This thrilling story by Wiley S. HOLLYWOOD By FRANCES LONG

Let's be fair. Criticizing stars who collapse on bond-selling tours and inferring that the job is play rather than work is pretty unjust, to our way of thinking. Those who think so might try it themselves. If they did we believe they would soon find that living on trains, getting up early, making appearances before noon, going to luncheons that drag into the late afternoon, and dinners that are endless isn't all beer and skittles. Joan Leslie, Greer Garson and Rita Hayworth are three who found it too much for their strength. Latest to wear herself to a frazzle is Bette Davis, who's been working like mad for the Hollywood canteen in addition to appearing at camps and "Command Performance" broadcasts. So let's be fair and give the stars credit for cramming in every effort for victory! . . .

When her guests left they found neatly printed requests stuck on the windshields of their cars to appear at the local police station for parking on the wrong side of the street. Maria collected all the tickets, hid herself to the designated place, and forked over enough money in fines to repave the block, which needed it badly. When the transaction was completed, Maria said sweetly, "And now, Judge, would it be possible to call the street Montez Park?" . . .

Red Skelton wows the British. Even the censors over there write to him. Proof? An ardent admirer of Red's, now a private in the American forces in England, has been writing the comedian for some time. The last letter, however, contained only "Dear Red—Sincerely, Jack Greenenthau." The body of the letter had been blacked out by the censors. At the bottom, Red was surprised to find a postscript from a British censor which read: "Dear Mr. Skelton: As is easily understandable, this young man admires you and your work greatly. The only trouble is he says too much" . . .

After thirty-three years as a top character actor Alan Hale has requested that Warner Bros. revise his straight acting contract, make it a two-way deal which would permit Hale to direct as well. In the silent era, Alan was associated with Cecil B. DeMille as actor and director. Since then he's been too busy acting to consider direction. Now he feels that long experience might be applied to both fields. Hale, who's just finished a fat supporting role with Errol Flynn in "Gentleman Jim," and another with Fredric March in "The Adventures of Mark Twain," says he has no idea of retiring from the screen. Which is good news, for he has won a lasting place in movie-goers' hearts . . .

Ray Milland turns strategist. Making a scene at Paramount for "The Crystal Ball," stage crew of set on which Ray Milland was working got all steamed up when a stray kitten strolled onto the stage and began to meow just when Milland started to deliver his lines, causing havoc on the soundtrack. Efforts to get her off just caused a retreat to a catwalk thirty feet overhead and renewed meows. Finally, workmen started chasing her with a net. That only increased her protests. Meantime, Milland sent to the commissary for a bottle of cream and a saucer, then climbed aloft, gently calling the cat. In a few minutes he descended with the purring quarry. Said Mr. Milland: "All you have to do is feed 'em. A lady likes to cat" . . .

This and that: Brenda Joyce is elated that husband Owen Ward has been promoted to lieutenant at Camp Roberts . . . Soon as he finishes his role in "Princess O'Rourke" with Olivia de Havilland, Robert Cummings goes on active duty with the Civilian Air Patrol . . . Mr. and Mrs. Jack Oakie still love each other, even though they have decided to part . . . Paramount has made provisions to tack a new ending on "Wake Island" film, at any time, should the Marines retake the territory. Newsreel department is all set to produce necessary prints in jig time . . . While Hedy Lamarr was on her bond-selling tour, someone stole her car right out of her garage . . . Richard Denning has been suspended from Paramount, but not for the usual reasons. In this case it was to join the Navy, where he is now a third-class yeoman. So Paramount simply suspended his contract for the duration . . . Lew Ayres (Dr. Kildare) has asked to be shipped overseas for combat duty with the medical corps, and his request has been granted . . . In RKO's "Stand By to Die," starring Rosalind Russell and Fred MacMurray, movie-goers will see a unique type of plane; in fact, the only one of its kind in existence. "SPOTLIGHT BANDS" SERIES OPENS AT PARRIS ISLAND MARINE BASE

Entertainment for our boys in the armed forces and for those who produce the equipment for the use of these men is the sincere purpose of the new Coca-Cola "Victory Parade of Spotlight Bands," now heard over the Blue Network. We were among those present at the opening broadcast from the Parris Island Marine Base in South Carolina, and it was there we learned what this entertainment means to the men in remote spots. Two shows were put on by Harry James and his crew at this, the opening show. One was held in the early evening and witnessed by some nine thousand marines; the other broadcast was attended by two thousand more. We can readily understand why the Government is insistent that some of our headliners do not join the colors because of the work they are doing to sustain the morale of those who have. A case in point is the September 29 broadcast by Abe Lyman, who was flown to Island X (Shangri-La?), somewhere in the Pacific, in an Army bomber. These shows originating in camps and bases are reminders for those in uniform that we on the home front are in there pitching . . .

Lovely actress Naomi Campbell, daughter of Sir Gerald Campbell, former British minister to Washington, has returned to London. Naomi was doing a fine job on "Young Doctor Malone," but recently left for England and work as a member of the Wrens . . .

You can always depend on Orson Welles for colorful copy. Orson and Ann Shepherd were rehearsing a love-scene for the "Treasury Star Parade" under the able direction of Bill Bacher. Ann was giving out with some fine emoting but the Welles insisted on clowning. Bacher turned to Orson and said: "C'mon, Welles, make love to that girl. She's reading with fervor." The unpredictable O. W. turned to another actor and said: "That Bacher with his theatrics. Trying to get at the audience with all this cheap sentimental overacted stuff . . . But, O Lord, how I love it!" Deep in the heart of Welles, eh? . . .

Mercedes McCambridge, the new Rosemary of "Abie's Irish Rose," is having trouble making people recognize her, because of her hair-dos. Mercedes is one of those now-it's-up-now-it's-down people. Dick Coogan, the new Abie of the same program, is a young defense worker, who is allowed to take time off for the program because he has piled up a number of "premium" hours by working fast and accurately . . .

Oh, the life of a conductor is all glamour, huh? Lyn Murray received the following mood-music order from Norman Corwin, writer-producer: "Twenty seconds of endless mathematical figures, eighteen seconds of time motif, fourteen seconds of moon music, a heroic finish—something on the order of a song the morning stars sing together—and some lonely music, twenty-two seconds of it, but it must be heavenly." All this and heavenly too?

Chester Lauck and Norris Goff are great checker fiends in their "Lum and Abner" broadcasts as well as in real life. For years the two have owned a checkerboard, over which they have spent many a happy hour, each trying to outdo the other at the game. Now the boys have given up their old treasured checkerboard. It has been sent to Des Moines, Iowa, at the request of city officials there, who think it will stimulate the sale of war stamps and bonds in that city. The person who purchases the greatest amount of stamps or bonds on a given date will be presented with the board as a memento from Lum and Abner. Incidentally, during the next four weeks their broadcasts will come from the middle of the movie lot at RKO, where they are working on their new picture, "Two Weeks to Live" . . .

Only woman newscaster on the Coast, Elizabeth Bemis, has found she has a priceless record of pre-World War II events in Europe. During the dark days of 1937, when Elizabeth was touring the Continent, she wrote weekly letters to her family, describing in full detail the situation in Europe. Fortunately, her letters were all kept. Now this brilliant writer has had several offers to combine them all in book form. The letters, containing over 270,000 words, are a complete chronology of history's most earth-shaking crisis . . .

While Sergeant Ginny Simms carries on with the Army, Navy and Marine guests during the "Johnny Presents" program, censors who represent each branch of the service sit in the control-room of Hollywood's Radio City listening avidly. Should there be danger of any military secrets being divulged unintentionally by the war-hero guests who make telephone calls on the show, all of these censors are prepared to take the show off the air in a split second. So far there have been no mishaps! . . .

Hodgepodge: Eddie Cantor, fresh from his vacation at Palm Springs, is going great guns on his "Time to Smile" show. Planning all future broadcasts from Army camps and naval bases, the comedian will of necessity confine his camp treks to southern California area while working on his new picture for Warners . . . Ken Niles has just returned from his Idaho vacation, where he spent all his time at his favorite sport, hunting . . . "Woman in White" fans can follow their favorite characters, even though the serial has folded up. The lead part, that of Karen Adams, is moving over to "Road of Life." Karen's a nurse, and "Road of Life" is about a hospital, so the shift is easy. Loretta Hendrick becomes Dr. Brent's ("Road") patient when the script puts Dr. Kirk Harding ("W. in W.") into the Army. She demands Karen's services, and Dr. Kirk may appear in "Road" too, to remarry Karen. All this finagling between shows is possible because both serials are written by the Irna Phillips office . . .

Speaking about script changes, there's a rumor that the much-loved, never-married Helen Trent is about to be scripted to the altar. At one time or another in the show's ten years on the air, Helen has had well over ten heart-interests, but this will be her first marriage . . .

Here's a new way to help our fighting men. The cast of "Road of Life" has just "adopted" Ward A of the U. S. Naval Hospital at Great Lakes. The performers have taken up a collection to pay for subscriptions to nine national magazines for the use of sailors in this ward. They expect to follow up this gift with visits, cigarettes, perhaps a portable radio and other gadgets. The Navy has expressed its warmest gratitude. How about your bridge club or sewing circle? Somewhere not so far from you there's an Army or Navy hospital, temporary home of many swell young fellows who have anything from the measles to fractured skulls. Just a little group effort can brighten their glum, bed-ridden days. To start the ball rolling, contact the public-relations officer of the post at which the hospital is located . . .

NBC SERIES TO FOLLOW DEVELOPMENT OF MUSIC IN THE AMERICAS

Gigout, Reubke Compositions Scheduled for CBS Organ Series Sun.;
Hoaxed to Hollywood, Dave Rose Arranged His Way to Film-Radio Fame

By ROBERT BAGAR

New York World-Telegram Music Critic and Associate Program Annotator for Philharmonic-Symphony Society of New York

WHAT seems to be an interesting project is in process of realization by the National Broadcasting Company. The idea is the launching of a new and long-term series of musical programs, collectively grouped under the title "New World Music." This series is, in effect, a second course added to the curriculum of NBC's current program, "Inter-American University of the Air."

Planned by Dr. Carlton Sprague Smith, chief of music for the office of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs, the series purposes to survey the development of music in the two Americas, extending from the pre-Columbian era to the contemporary idioms from sambas to symphonies. First program comes on Saturday, October 10, and the others will be broadcast thereafter on Thursdays, the initial one of these taking place on October 15.

The inaugural broadcast, which will deal with Indian pre-Columbian music, will be given before a Radio City session of the Institute of Inter-American Affairs, jointly sponsored by Columbia University and NBC's "University of the Air."

Dr. James Rowland Angell, NBC's public-service counselor, commenting on the forthcoming series, says, "Effort will be made to show the vital part music plays as a social expression in the life of a people. The NBC Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Dr. Frank Black, will provide the orchestral framework, within which the varied types of music that have emerged in the Americas will be presented. Each broadcast will seek to gain audience interest by approaching the historical material from the bases of modern examples and derivatives of the music of the past."

In the ensuing programs the following topics are to be taken up: The early music of the Catholic church brought to the New World by Spanish and Portuguese missionaries; music of the Huguenots, the Dutch, the Pilgrims; vice-regal music of the period of "The Bridge of San Luis Rey," and music of the eighteenth-century colonial era. Still later the programs will consider such themes as sea-chanteys of both continents, folk-songs, minstrels, band music and contemporary symphonic works.

Thus NBC carries on with its plans for a cultural exchange between the two Americas which was launched formally last July when its program "Lands of the Free" made its bow.

Besides being aired over NBC's domestic network, the series of sessions will be given in Portuguese and Spanish through the 136 outlets in the company's pan-American network.

The good that such programs can do must not be underestimated. Outside of the purely contemporary cultural and social benefits to be reaped by the Americas, there are outlets being opened for the propagation of a future inter-American music.

In the past few years this country has known the growth of a tremendous interest in Latin-American music, chiefly with respect to the more popular forms, such as rumbas, congas, sambas, guarachas, tangos, paso dobles and the like. That must be considered education. The point is that cultural exchanges have already been afoot among the countries of the Western Hemisphere.

American composers, serious ones, have looked deeper and deeper into Latin-American rhythms. They have been amazed at their complexity, their freshness (for us), their vigor and sparkle. And the melodic idioms have won accolades of the same sort.

It goes without saying that the Latin-Americans, meanwhile, have not been neglectful toward our own idioms—chiefly jazz, I suppose. The future situation, given present impetus by such ventures as that projected by NBC's "University of the Air," looks rosy, indeed. Of course, all this is a kind of building for a post-war world. While the minds and hearts of millions of people in this hemisphere are practically filled with thoughts of destruction for the Axis, there is still room in them for the reception of valid cultural ideas.

(The premiere of "New World Music" will be broadcast Saturday, October 10, over NBC.)

Music for Organ

The moment you mention organ music, the name of Bach leaps to the mind. It seems that it should be so. But other composers have written for the organ—men whose names are not the daily bread of musical menus. Two of these, for instance, are to appear in the program of E. Power Biggs, noted organist, who plays over CBS on October 11. They are Eugene Gigout and Julius Reubke.

Gigout, a native of Nancy, France, was born on March 23, 1844. He studied at the Niedermayer School in Paris and later with Saint-Saens. In 1863 he became the organist at the Church of St. Augustin, holding that post for some time. Subsequently he toured Europe in concert tours that were as successful as they were artistic. He founded an organ school of his own in 1885 under government subsidy. Gigout wrote numerous compositions, among them over three hundred Gregorian and plain-song pieces. He received many high honors during his lifetime. He died in Paris in 1925. Mr. Biggs will play Gigout's Scherzo in E Major.

Julius Reubke was born at Hausneindorf, Germany, in 1834 and died at Pillnitz in 1858. He was a gifted pianist and composer. Not a great deal is known about him—speaking for myself exclusively, perhaps—but he has left a number of compositions that occasionally come to performing light.

His father, Adolf, and an older brother, Emil, were organ-builders. And another brother, Otto, studied music with Buelow and Marx. The piece of Reubke's that Mr. Biggs has scheduled is an introduction and fugue.

(E. Power Biggs, organist, may be heard Sundays over CBS.)

Concert Records

Dimitri Mitropoulos and the Minneapolis Symphony converge on one of those rare birds, the Glazounov Overture on Greek Themes, and all for Columbia. The two records contained in album X-MX-228 have the power to bring much pleasure, both as regards the brilliance of the music and its brilliant performance.

If the Viennese waltz is your pleasure, then by all means get next to the Bruno Walter-Philharmonic-Symphony recording of the Johann Strauss "Emperor Waltz," which, as a piece of musical gaiety, is scarcely to be equaled. Mr. Walter's appreciation of this music is probably second to that of no other batonist. The number is played on Columbia record 11854-D, and one recommends it without reservation.

POPULAR MUSIC

Dave Rose now works for Army four days a week

DAVE ROSE was tinkling away at a piano for all he was worth with a band in Chicago some years ago. A saxophone player, during an intermission, complained that he had lost his part. The musicians all looked high and low, but no use, it was gone.

The leader of the outfit asked Rose to try to fill in the missing lines for the despairing saxophonist. He did. And so well that from that moment he became the band's arranger. He got a reputation for the unusual color-effects of his orchestrations, and soon his work was much in demand.

He went with Ted Fio-Rito's orchestra as pianist and arranger, remaining with the group for a year. After that he became a staff pianist at NBC's Chicago station. It was Roy Shield who shifted him to the position of staff arranger.

In 1938 Rose gave up his Chicago job to accept what he thought was an offer to write and arrange music for Hollywood films. However, when he got to the film capital he discovered that he had been made the victim of a hoax. There was no job. Making the best of a bad bargain, he decided to remain in Hollywood and look around for something to do. But in practically no time at all, as his fortune decreed, he was making arrangements for the well-known singing stars of filmland—Dorothy Lamour, Jeanette MacDonald, Martha Raye, Don Ameche and others.

Subsequently he was appointed musical director of a Los Angeles radio station, a post that provided him with complete artistic freedom, and that was the real beginning of his batonistic career, which is currently being sustained through his directorship of the Ginny Simms-Philip Morris "Johnny Presents" show over NBC Tuesdays.

Rose was born in London, but he came to this country with his parents when he was four. He spent his early years in and around Chicago and obtained his musical education at the Chicago Musical College. While a student there he composed three tone-poems, "Ensenada Escapade," "Shadows" and "Swing Etude," all three of which were premiered by the Chicago Symphony Orchestra.

Dave Rose is a teacher of student pilots for the U. S. Army, a job that takes four days of each week, being an exceptional flier. He composes, arranges until all hours of the morning. He hopes to write the great American symphony some day.

"READER'S DIGEST" STORIES DRAMATIZED IN NEW CBS SERIES SUNDAYS

NBC Sponsors "Spanish-Through-Music" Contest; Radio Proves Practical Medium for Spreading Word of God

The Unwritten Chapter

WHAT might be considered the most important chapter in the history of radio, speaking in the broadest terms, has never been written. That chapter tells the story of religious broadcasting.

The story of religious broadcasting will, first of all, give prominent place to the network's perennial standbys—"Sunday Vespers," "Highlights of the Bible," "Catholic Hour," "Church of the Air," "Message of Israel" and a few others. These programs, all of which have been on the air for a decade or more, follow the straight sermon-music formula. The Sunday morning program of organ music from the Salt Lake City Tabernacle and "Wings Over Jordan," which presents spirituals by a Negro choir, will also take their rightful place in the spotlight. Consideration must be given to broadcasts of special religious events, such as the inspiring Christmas and Easter programs, broadcasts from Westminster Abbey and from the Vatican.

The chapter will probably also include some very readable paragraphs on religion's "soap operas," namely, "Light of the World," the commercially sponsored daytime serial based on stories taken from the Bible, and the War Department's "Chaplain Jim," a five-a-week serial dramatization of the experiences of an Army chaplain. Bill Hay's daily Bible-reading period should not be ignored.

And there will be mention made of the significant step taken this summer by the NBC in launching the first nation-wide religious series embracing all creeds. Titled "We Believe," this series presents the best-loved hymns of the great faiths and, instead of a sermon, a narrator who reads from the literature of Protestant, Catholic and Jewish services.

The Lutheran Laymen's League, it should be noted, has found radio very helpful in missionary work. Their experiences with radio are recorded in a booklet that tells the story of "The Lutheran Hour." This program, born more than ten years ago in the studios of a small St. Louis station, today is broadcast by more than three hundred stations. In addition, "The Lutheran Hour" reaches into twenty-five countries outside of the United States by transcriptions and short wave. Radio, the Lutherans have discovered, reaches those thousands of communities in this country where no organized churches are found. Likewise, it brings the word of God to the tens of thousands who are unable to go to church because of illness, to those whose occupations place them beyond the reach of the church.

"Go ye into all the world, and preach the Gospel to every creature" is a Biblical assignment that radio has made conveniently possible. And, 'tis claimed, it costs less to bring an individual into the church by radio than by any other agency.

Radio Reader's Digest

At last it has happened. Radio finally has turned to the almost limitless wealth of fact, fiction and brilliant humor that can be found between the covers of Reader's Digest. It is very heartening to note that the series will be sponsored.

You may wonder why I say "heartening." Here is the reason. Time and time again a good sustaining (not sponsored) radio program gets so bogged down with endless changes in the day and hour of broadcast that one never is quite sure when it is on the air. And it is always the sustaining show that is cut for the so-called "special broadcast," i.e., "The program usually broadcast at this time has been canceled to bring you a special broadcast from the convention of the Hoboken Women's Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Bow-Legged Beetles." Thirdly, sustaining programs most often get the poorest spots on the air. That's because advertisers, naturally, buy the best spots. So, as I said, it is heartening to know that the series is sponsored.

Stories to be used in this series are culled from the best that have appeared in Reader's Digest since it started publication. Conrad Nagel is the narrator, and here it would be hard to make a better choice. He will be assisted by a talented cast of actors, with stars from the stage and screen taking the leading roles.

("Radio Reader's Digest" is broadcast Sundays over CBS.)

Spanish-Through-Music Contest

An all-expense round trip to Mexico City goes to the winner of NBC's Spanish-Through-Music contest. The prize goes to the non-professional singer (male or female) who has best learned one of the Latin-American songs featured on "Pan American Holiday." Entries in this contest close October 15 and contestants must be students of Spanish, born in the United States. One of the judges, incidentally, will be Vice President Henry A. Wallace, whose original suggestion inspired the idea for this series.

You will recognize "Pan American Holiday" as the Saturday afternoon dramatic program built around the travels of a fictional music-research student in Latin America. The program is an attempt to acquaint U. S. listeners with Latin-American culture, songs and customs, thereby attacking the biggest barrier to mutual understanding between the peoples of the United States and the Latin-American nations; namely, that we do not speak the same language.

War Scripts for Schools

The "War Script of the Month" service has captivated the interest of many schools. Following mention of the project in this column, many inquiries were received here, indicating a misunderstanding about how this service may be secured. Just to keep the records straight, here are the details:

The Writers War Board, in cooperation with the Association for Education by Radio, is sending each month a "War Script of the Month" to schools and colleges active in local educational broadcasting. The scripts, which will help schools and colleges to make their broadcasting activities a contribution to the war effort, will be royalty-free for local, non-commercial use. The first script which was mailed to schools was Stephen Vincent Benet's "They Burned the Books." Others which followed are "Time Is Short," by Dorothea J. Lewis; "All Out for Davey," by Shirley Burke, and "Brothers," by Langston Hughes. In addition, scripts by Norman Corwin and Arch Oboler are scheduled in this service.

"All Out for Davey," WWB advises, is about a boy who gives his dog to the Army. The Army's need for and use of dogs will probably be in the news a great deal in the next few months, and this script ties in nicely with this campaign. "Brothers" is a noted Negro writer's view of the Negro's role in this war.

Teachers who want this service for their schools will be placed on the mailing-list to receive the scripts each month by writing to Mr. Erik Barnouw, Writers War Board, 122 East Forty-second Street, New York, N. Y.

Here and There

"Unlimited Horizons," NBC series dramatizing university research, returned to the air Sunday, October 4. Arnold Marquis continues as author of the scripts . . . Nelson Olmsted, who has read hundreds of short stories over the air, names the following as his favorites: "The Lie," by Leonid Andreyev; "The Little Wife," by William March; "The Ghost Ship," by Richard Middleton; "The Signal Man," by Charles Dickens; "The Tell-Tale Heart," by Edgar Allan Poe; "Moonlight," Guy de Maupassant; "Quality," by John Galsworthy; "August Heat," by W. F. Harvey; "The Daring Young Man on the Flying Trapeze," by William Saroyan, and "Silent Snow, Secret Snow," by Conrad Aiken . . . A second course in NBC's "Inter-American University of the Air" (to run concurrently with the first) will be a series titled "New World Music." First broadcast will be on Saturday, October 10, and the programs will be presented regularly on Thursdays thereafter, starting October 15.

DEDICATE WGEO'S NEW 100,000-WATT "VOICE OF FREEDOM"

Construction Begins on New $800,000 Canadian Short-Wave Station;
BBC Broadcast Describes British Isles as a "Land of Human Moles"

Dedicate New "Voice of Freedom"

A FEW days ago the General Electric Company dedicated a powerful new 100,000-watt voice for short-wave station WGEO at Schenectady, New York.

In officially inaugurating program service over the new transmitter, Robert S. Peare, General Electric broadcasting manager, dedicated the new voice "to truth," saying, "We speak the truth and the truth shall make you free."

A congratulatory telegram from Elmer Davis, head of the Office of War Information, said: "We salute your new station with its one hundred kilowatts of power, which will be audible to Hitler and Tojo. We hope it will keep them awake in the long winter nights to come."

The main dedicatory talk was made by Robert E. Sherwood, director of the overseas branch of the Office of War Information, who, among other things, stated that "Radio is a vital factor in this war. Our enemies recognize this fact. They started long ago to equip themselves with all possible facilities for international communication.

"They knew that words and ideas could weaken nations and render them defenseless even before a single shot was fired . . .

"This country took a position of leadership in the development of radio broadcasting, but we developed it on a peace-time basis as an instrument of domestic trade and a medium of education and entertainment. We paid but little attention to the possibilities of the radio as a weapon of offensive warfare. With the result that our enemies have far exceeded us in their short-wave radio power. They have been all too successful in poisoning the airwaves of the world with their propaganda of deception, corruption and demoralization. Our own American voice—as it has been broadcast overseas from here in Schenectady, from Cincinnati, from Boston, New York and San Francisco—has been sincere and honest, but it has been feeble as compared with the blatant voices of Germany, Italy, Japan and their satellites.

"But we have one form of strength which our enemies do not possess—and that is the power of truth," Mr. Sherwood continued.

"Nineteen centuries ago the Governor of Judea asked, 'What is truth?' And men have never been able to agree on the answer to that question. In Germany today the truth is what Hitler says it is—and Hitler has said that if you tell people a lie that is big enough they will believe it. Therefore, in Germany, the truth is a monstrous lie.

"Here in this country—and among all free men everywhere—the Nazi formula does not work. Because we believe in and practise freedom of speech, we have the means for recognizing a liar and exposing him—no matter how big a liar he may be—whether his name is Hitler, or Mussolini, or Tojo, or Quisling, or Laval.

"The truth about this war, as we see it today, is not pleasant to contemplate.

"As President Roosevelt has said, this war is the toughest of all time, and for victory we shall have to pay a terrible price in energy and in fortitude and in blood.

"This is the grim truth, which we are not afraid to broadcast to the whole world . . ."

In concluding Mr. Sherwood said, "To all victims of oppression who may hear us; to the conquered peoples and to those millions in Germany, Italy and Japan who know now that their own tyrannical rulers have betrayed them into the agony of this war; to all lovers of freedom everywhere, we Americans express the substance of our democratic faith—that the truth is mighty and shall prevail; the truth shall make you free."

Canada Plans $800,000 Station

Construction will begin immediately on a powerful short-wave broadcasting station at Sackville, New Brunswick. This station, which will cost $800,000, will be administered and operated by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation. It will be used primarily in the psychological warfare of the United Nations against Goebbels' lie-casts.

Ali Baba's Treasure Cave

Britain is rapidly becoming a land of "human moles." Thousands sleep in underground shelters. Huge, humming plane and munitions factories are buried deep in the bowels of the earth. Broadcasts originate in studios far below street level, far removed from the noise and explosive effects of air raids.

However, one of the most interesting uses to which these underground retreats have been put was that explained in a recent BBC broadcast of "In Britain Now." It told about the hiding of the priceless pictures of the British National Gallery. When war was declared the pictures were stored in what it was thought would be suitable buildings far removed from London. When the Luftwaffe began bombing the west coast as well as London it was obvious that no building any place was safe. A secret cave seemed to be the only remedy.

After a long search some caves were found that were large enough and certainly safe enough, for they had six hundred feet of solid rock above them. To get to them was another question, for one had to go about six miles up a twisty mountain road little better than a track; then to make one's way into the side of a hill along what miners call a level, a sort of passage four hundred yards long. In places one had to bend double to get along it. Then one came to the caves, which were lit by a few flares and looked like an old illustration from Dante's Inferno. All caves are damp. These were no exception, for the humidity of the caves was near the saturation-point. Since if pictures get too damp they get moldy and if they get too dry they crack, some means of air conditioning had to be found. Houses were built in the caves and machinery installed which would keep the humidity and temperature constant. As a matter of fact, the temperature in these super-treasure vaults varies no more than a degree or two in winter or summer. The storerooms are big enough for any picture in the collection. In such a weird and thrilling secret chamber are the treasures of the National Art Galleries buried.

CBS publicist Helen Bratrud was startled on duty when, listening to the "News of the World" report by Winston Burdette from Cairo, she heard that Colonel Joseph M. Colby received the award of Member of the British Empire for setting up tank-repair bases in the Middle East. He is her cousin, and attended the University of Iowa before going to West Point. She hadn't heard from him in months.

Dangerous House Furnishings

Ian Martin, who plays Nathan in "Against the Storm," is recovering from a bad case of fright incurred recently when a painter at the Martin homestead accidentally snagged himself on a poisonous spear among the collection of East Indian weapons belonging to Ian's wife.

Those weapons are supposed to be fatally poisonous despite the wear of time, so Martin and his wife, Inge, who was born in Sumatra, immediately applied first aid to the painter.
He's okay.

Anxious Moments at the Border

Don McNeill and his barnstorming Breakfast Clubbers had a few bad moments at one stage in their recent personal-appearance tour of eastern Canada and the United States.

They were crossing the border into the U. S., and the customs inspector was going through the troupe's luggage. He was so gruff and suspicious that, innocent though they were, the stars became very uneasy. Just about the time they reached the nail-biting stage, the inspector broke into a broad smile.

"Don't worry, folks," he said. "If it hadn't been for you, I'd still be in a hospital." It developed that "Breakfast Club's" traditional early morning cheerfulness had helped keep his spirits high and speeded recovery when the customs official was seriously ill in a hospital recently.

Trend of the Times

One of the biggest pieces of news that Harriet Hilliard and Ozzie Nelson, man and wife musical combination on the Red Skelton show, report of their summer vacation is that their younger offspring, Rick, has started to talk. The youngster's first distinguishable word was "bomber."

Chester Stratton walks warily these days. He has a letter from an irate woman listener who says she'll have her husband beat the stuffin' out of him if he doesn't go back to his serial wife—Peggy O'Neill Kayden. Chet plays Monte Kayden, the lawyer, in "The O'Neills."

A Good Example

Sound-effects man Mike Eisenmenger is one who believes in observing the new speed limit of thirty-five miles per hour for automobiles. He even went so far, when a "Lonely Women" script recently called for an automobile driving along a highway, to hold the "sound of the speed" down to what a motor might sound like at thirty-five m. p. h.

Gag of the Week

Trophy for the gag of the week was currently awarded to Percy Faith, conductor of the Carnation Contented orchestra, who was staggering along the NBC Chicago corridors burdened with an armload of record albums. "Gee, Perce," said trumpeter Johnny Wolf catching up with him, "let me help you with that stuff. They must be heavy."
 "Think nothing of it, Johnny," gagged Percy, "they're all light operas."

FEMININE FORUM

By EDITH HAMPTON

Nail That Job

HEAR ye, hear ye, we've just received a flash from an authoritative front! You gals who are on the search for a new job will do well to give your hands special attention. For it seems there is far more truth than fiction to the old question, "The face may deceive, but the hands never!"

During a recent conversation with the personnel director of a large corporation we learned that hands play an important role in the final selection of prospective employees. "You see," he said, "a woman's hands are amazingly expressive. They reveal her character, health, personality and fastidiousness." This connoisseur of human foibles casually directs the conversation toward generalities while he carefully observes the applicant's hands—then he makes a final decision!

So how did you rate on that last interview? Did you carelessly flaunt peeling tips, a fringe of hangnails—or a pair of exquisitely groomed hands? Although Mother Nature originally gave you those translucent little horns for a very practical purpose, you can—and must—turn them into a veritable salesman. So give them some care!

Your nails, as you know, are often considered a barometer of health, and a peeling condition tells your personnel man that you are not up to par. It's a good idea to check with your doctor for a possible deficiency of calcium, nervous or glandular disturbances. Health is your one-way ticket to beauty—and even the most clever camouflage is a poor substitute.

And beware of the hangnail, for it denotes carelessness and predicts pain. When the skin is allowed to be carried forward by the growing nail it gets thinner and thinner—and finally breaks. Hangnails can lead to trouble—some infections, so keep your cuticle carefully pushed back. But don't be too enthusiastic, for a slight injury will leave a white mark.

Then go in for harmony. Shape your nail to your fingertip and match your Dura-Gloss polish to your make-up and costume. Strive for an oval shape of medium length—and avoid pointed tips and excessive slimness, for they are definitely out for the duration! In case you have trouble finding the proper shade of polish to blend with your colors, consult this chart:

Dress Shade	Harmonizing Lipstick	Harmonizing Polish
Blue
Purple	Blue-red	Blue-red
Blue-green
Yellow	Orange-reds	Orange-reds
Brown	or	or
Green	Brown-reds	Brown-reds
Black
Clear Red	Clear red	Clear red
Navy Blue
Gray

Once you have chosen the proper shade for your own individual needs, apply the polish to dramatize your particular type of nails. If you were fortunate enough to be blessed with naturally oval nails, you need leave only a small moon and a narrow tip. However, if your nails tend to be exceedingly round, give them a long, slim appearance by polishing from the cuticle to the tip with one wide stroke, leaving a small margin at the sides. And spade-shaped nails call for the tiniest of moons plus the narrowest of tips; but do accentuate all curves for the "oh-too-square" nails.

Then—with your hands in order and your confidence riding high—you can calmly meet the most critical eye. So it's up to you to "nail" that job!

Pretty Margaret and Marilyn Rick of Palatine, Illinois.

They captured the gleam of an electric eye

Rick Twins discover Pepsodent Powder can make teeth far brighter to the naked eye, too!

Photoelectric eye proof of Pepsodent's superior polishing ability convinced scientists. But not the Rick Twins. They wanted to see just how good Pepsodent was without scientific gadgets—when it was used in the practical way—the way anyone would brush teeth. So they tossed a coin to see who would use Pepsodent, and Margaret won. Marilyn chose to test another leading tooth powder.

People always had a hard time telling them apart . . . they were that alike. But that was before the test started. Then, admitted Marilyn, "Did I learn about tooth powders! Our dentist was skeptical at first . . . then amazed that Pepsodent made Peg's teeth twice as bright as mine! He said he never saw anything like it. Neither did we! Pepsodent showed us how really bright teeth can be!"

... and the Rick Twins' dentist says:

"Of course, I was skeptical. Pepsodent's claims sounded just too good to be true. However, this Rick Twins test convinced me that the statement of The Pepsodent Company is accurate and truthful."

Rick Twins Confirm Laboratory Findings

Independent laboratory tests found no other dentifrice that could match the lustre produced by Pepsodent.

By actual test, Pepsodent produces a lustre on teeth Twice as Bright as the average of all other leading brands!

Pepsodent Tooth Powder makes teeth twice as bright

Question Service

Mrs. Erma Strickler, Penryn, Pa.—By no means are JACK BAKER and his wife parted. The "Breakfast Club" star is still very much married to his wife. Just ask him.

B. Kent, Syracuse, New York.—DON BROWN, Tommy Tucker's he-man singer, keeps an eye on Hollywood as he studies dramatics when not entertaining his many admirers. Don's the kind of guy who once took a first place in a state scholastic meet in pole-vaulting; he's still a crack boxer, likes to bowl and swim. He stands just over six feet, weighs 190 pounds, has black hair, brown eyes; has been married for about two years now. The one thing Don doesn't like is being called a romantic baritone.

Don Brown's at Essex House now

Miss Marie White, Houston, Tex.—Visualize any of the late Zane Grey's fictional heroes, and you will just about hit upon TEXAS JIM ROBERTSON. Born on a large ranch near Batesville, Tex., on February 27, 1909, Slim just fills the bill with his six-foot-three-inch brawn. Jim spent his early days riding the range, later his family moved to North Carolina. A friend heard the homesick lad singing range songs and suggested he try out for radio. Slim thought he was being kidded, but he tried, succeeded in securing a job with NBC. Vaudeville tours of the United States and Canada followed. Slim still is not changed by the big city—he wears high boots, a cowboy hat, rolls his own cigarettes, rides whenever he gets the opportunity.

Lois Wilkinson, Fall River, Mass.—His Spanish accent gave SANTOS ORTEGA his first break in radio when he was asked to handle the role of Don Rodrigo in the Plantation series. Sandy was born in the heart of New York, the son of a Spaniard and an Irish colleen. He's now five feet eleven inches tall, weighs in at about 165, likes all sports and enjoys a good game of bridge. He's Captain Clayton in CBS' "Joyce Jordan," and Attorney Davis in the NBC five-a-week "Portia Faces Life."

Santos Ortega's accent helped

Genevieve Worden, Eugene, Ore.—Yes, EDWARD MAC-HUGH, the Gospel Singer, is still on the air. You can hear him at 10:15 a.m. PWT over stations KGO, KEX, and KJR.

Miss Lorraine Darcy, Biddleford, Me.—BETTY LOU GERSON has the role of Marilyn Larimore in the NBC serial "Lonely Women." The part of Judith Allen is handled by BARBARA LUDDY. Betty Lou has been the star of the "First Nighter" series, has had roles in "Arnold Grimm's Daughter," "The Story of Mary Marlin," and "Woman in White." Miss Luddy may now be heard as leading lady in the Mutual Sunday evening feature, "First Nighter." She has been heard in "Woman in White" and other shows... Thanks for your nice comments and come again.

Bulls & Boners

Bulls and boners are a part of broadcasting. No matter how experienced the performer or how famous the star, chances are that he will make an occasional slip or statement with twisted meaning which is extremely funny. See how good your ears are. Try to catch broadcasters in some error—the funnier the better—and send your entry to MOVIE-RADIO GUIDE, 731 Plymouth Court, Chicago. The most humorous entries will be printed in this column. Watch for your contribution!

Tom Breneman on "Breakfast at Sardi's": "Did you ever live on a farm and milk cows and chickens?"—Dorothy Kuhn, Gloversville, N. Y. (September 15 over Station WTRY.)

WHAT'S COOKING!

By GEORGIA SCOTT

Captivate With Coffee

WHEN the crowd ends up at your house and immediately demands coffee, milady, you have mastered a genuine art! However, if your cream- or sugar-abstaining friends suddenly decide to experiment—take heed! There's something wrong with your technique.

Rich, full-bodied coffee is seldom an accident, you know, for there is definitely a method which means unvarying goodness. Even those most experienced in the culinary arts can be—and frequently are—consistently guilty of foggy or bitter brew. So look to your laurels! Do you actually captivate coffee-lovers with peak flavor and goodness? Do you win the spontaneous enthusiasm of the most cultivated and critical tastes? If not, these tips are for you!

There's a "golden rule" to every technique, and in this case it happens to be, "Start with a good brand of coffee!" This does not necessarily mean the most expensive brand on the market, but it does mean this: Your coffee should be freshly roasted and freshly ground, for the aroma and flavor drift away in the form of gas soon after the coffee bean has been ground. So in order to insure the utmost of flavor, buy a supply which will last only three or four days—a week at the very most. In this way you can cut down the length of time between the roasting and the actual brewing.

And amazingly enough, there are still some women who try to make a mellow drip coffee from a regular grind—or a fragrant percolated brew from the glass-maker grind. Wrong, indeed! So buy the proper grind for your particular method of brewing coffee. Those beans have been especially ground to give tip-top flavor during the time of contact with water. So with a good brand of coffee sitting on your shelf and your favorite pot staring you in the face, you're all set to proceed down the road of rules!

Drip coffee is the simplest method of all—and the result can be a sparkling, mellow brew. General measurements call for one rounding tablespoon of coffee to a standard measuring-cup of water. You can vary this, of course, to suit your own individual taste. Then if you are striving for the finest of drip coffee, by all means use a filter. This eliminates fogginess and makes your coffee clear and appetizing. But remember, your filter must be renewed frequently—at least once a week—and do keep it submerged in cold water while it is not being used.

Another trick of the trade calls for making the full amount of coffee that your pot will hold. Every coffee-pot is designed for a certain number of cups, and your brew will be finer and better if you fill it to the spout. However, if you must make fewer cups, increase the proportion of coffee for a truly magnificent flavor. And as soon as the water has disappeared from the top, remove those grounds immediately! If left standing, your good work will be completely undone, for moistened grounds quickly absorb all the delightful aroma. Then allow your brew to ripen for approximately five to eight minutes and serve. You'll like that rich, mellow flavor.

Percolated coffee has a deep-bodied flavor and is the favorite of many. The unpardonable sin in this method is allowing your brew to "perk" wildly for additional strength. Yes, it does the job all right, but your coffee is bitter, cloudy and tastes disgustingly foul. So vary the strength by the amount of coffee. Start with cold water and "perk" s-l-o-w-l-y! If you are using a valve type of pot, percolate gently for fifteen minutes after the sprays become steady. For a valveless pot, reduce the heat after the first sprays bubble over the grounds and leisurely "perk" for ten minutes.

However, if your fancy should turn to the vacuum type of coffee-maker, discard the glass rod for a filter cloth. It's a valuable standby for clear, sparkling coffee. And as precautionary measures, never allow an empty bowl to remain on the heat, and be sure the outside of the coffee-maker is always dry. Then keep your brew piping hot by using an asbestos mat.

But good, ol'-fashioned "boiled" coffee is still the nation's favorite. This method has been effectively used in many homes—and will probably continue to be used for years to come. Properly "boiled" coffee is really steeped and produces a mild delicacy of flavor. Pour your boiling water over the coffee and allow it to steep for approximately five minutes. Remove the grounds immediately and serve. Incidentally, this method is very satisfactory when preparing coffee for large groups.

So there you are—do's to follow and don't's to avoid. Really good coffee no longer needs to be a delightful accident. Make it a regular occurrence! Then proudly offer your guests another cup—and captivate those coffee-lovers with peak flavor and goodness!
