"VITAMIN LACK CAN CAUSE HAIR TO TURN GRAY" SAYS MODERN SCIENCE

Can this 2-Way VITAMIN DISCOVERY
RESTORE NATURAL COLOR to Your GRAY or GRAYING HAIR?

New Test So Easy... It's Amazing!

If your hair is gray, graying, streaked or off-color due to vitamin deficiency, this test of the original PANATES double-action VITAMIN treatment offers you amazing new hope! You have read about the scientific vitamin tests that, while too recent for conclusive evidence, have shown startling signs of results. It has been proven beyond doubt that a lack of certain vitamins in the daily diet may be a contributing cause for hair to lose its natural color and turn gray. Simply by improving your diet and by taking the harmless, concentrated food vitamins in PANATES each day, you may check the gray spread . . . you may actually see gray, old-looking, streaked, fading hair change back at the roots, temples and parting to normal, original color, natural color! But first let me tell you what the original PANATES double-action vitamin method is, how PANATES differs so drastically from other anti-gray hair vitamins and why so many of the thousands of women and men who once accepted PANATES on this same trial offer now continue with it because of the amazing change in hair color they testify as taking place before their very eyes!

Panates Is NOT A HAIR DYE
Nothing to Fear . . . No Mess, No Fuss

Panates supply not only the "anti-gray" hair vitamins, but give you the "staff of life" wheat germ oil (Vitamin E) as well. Absolutely harmless. Panates actually is a healthful food supplement. Panates gives your system a source for the hair color vitamins that may be lacking in your daily diet and, if so, should literally feed natural color into the hair roots to check gray spread, to help the hair to new, lively lustre and to bring new hope for restoration of normal hair color once again.

tamin E, feeds your system from within. If you now dye your hair, you may notice you need less and less artificial hair color. If your hair is just starting to turn gray, you may notice the graying process is checked and soon the gray strands may be less and less pronounced. That's one of the wonderful things about the "anti-gray" hair vitamins in Panates . . . the action is natural. No one need know you are doing a single thing for your hair. And ladies, Panates will not hurt or interfere with permanents.

yourself to see what Panates two vitamins may do for you in your fight for the happiness of lovely-looking, natural hair color beauty. You take no chances. You can test Panates in the confidence these vitamins are taken daily by countless thousands the nation over. Our money-back guarantee is your protection against loss of a single penny. Now, today, mail the coupon. Who knows . . . perhaps your hair is gray or graying because of vitamin deficiency and perhaps gloriously soon your hair will show first signs of being restored to its original, youthful color. It's up to you.

NO MATTER
WHAT SHADE YOUR NATURAL HAIR COLOR
MAY BE . . . BLACK, BROWN,
AUBURN OR BLONDE . . .
Make This Convincing Test

1943 Star of Stars Poll

EVEN though all Americans are concerned with fighting the war and winning through to lasting peace, we felt that they should be given this year—as in the past—an opportunity to vote for their radio favorites. For that reason MOVIE-RADIO GUIDE decided to hold its annual Star of Stars Poll for radio, giving you, as a listener-reader, the chance of expressing your loyalty to and appreciation of your favorite stars and programs during the momentous year of 1943. For even in war, praise and gratitude for the hours of enjoyment radio stars have given you help to lift their spirits and give them courage to carry on. Too, your own favorite may be the Star of Stars—the topnotcher of all radio entertainers—and it may be your vote that will decide this honor. Besides the Star of Stars, this poll will reveal what most of our listener-readers consider to be the best of all radio programs, as well as giving servicemen an opportunity to say what USO program they enjoyed most. Furthermore, you undoubtedly have favorites also among the actors, singers, orchestras, serials and quizzes. The ballot below gives you a chance to vote for them and for other artists and shows in the Star of Stars Poll. So use this ballot. Let your choice be heard through it. Help your favorite get on top. If your allegiance clings to a veteran personality or program, your vote may be the one it takes to keep it on top for another year. If a new love merits your appreciation, your vote may be the one needed to boost it to the top for the first time. And if your preference leans to performers and programs you feel merit more attention than they have received, by all means vote for them. Remember, every single ballot counts! Only one ballot will be printed—the one on this page. And you MUST mail it before April 15. True, there are many polls, surveys and awards. But MOVIE-RADIO GUIDE's Star of Stars Poll is the voice of the listener. Let your voice be heard. Fill in the ballot below and mail it—today!

The greatest star of the screen!

Playing at the Astor Theatre, the motion picture showcase of Broadway, is a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer film that—even as we go to press—is shaking the grapes on the vine with tremulous excitement.

It has a big title—"The Human Comedy"—and it is a big picture.

★ ★ ★ ★

No—it isn't a "Gone With The Wind". It's physically smaller but humanly larger. It isn't about who kissed who or who stole the papers.

★ ★ ★ ★

It's about people—real people—human people—American people—all people.

★ ★ ★ ★

Involved are adventure, romance, feeling, beauty, decency, understanding and all the words like that in the thesaurus.

★ ★ ★ ★

This leads us directly to that curious phenomenon of the arts—William Saroyan who wrote "The Human Comedy".

★ ★ ★ ★

He is the man who baffled and entertained Broadway with such unusual plays as "My Heart's in the Highlands", "The Beautiful People" and "The Time of Your Life".

★ ★ ★ ★

The critics shouted hosannas over Saroyan's personal plays, and this columnist ventures the statement that "The Human Comedy" is better than all his plays, better than all the Saroyan stories.

★ ★ ★ ★

Clarence Brown produced and directed the film with loving care. He says that the picture is inherently his best. Clarence doesn't boast. He meant that the picture's content inspired him.

★ ★ ★ ★

It will inspire everyone who sees it. Its story is absorbing. One feels a kinship with every character. They are neighbors.

Mickey Rooney gives an artist's performance as Homer Macauley, the messenger boy. Frank Morgan as Willie Grogan, the telegraph operator, is perfection itself.

★ ★ ★ ★

One could tell about the entire cast; tell about every single episode in the film. It's that interesting and true.

★ ★ ★ ★

May we suggest that you write this column a letter after you've seen the film. We hope it is playing in your town today so that we'll hear from you soon.

★ ★ ★ ★

Someone once criticized the films for not giving the true picture of the best side of American life. We'd like to hear from that chap after he sees "The Human Comedy".

★ ★ ★ ★

We laughed—we cried—we cheered.

★ ★ ★ ★

Even a lion is human.

MOVIES AT WAR

TODAY war is being fought with cameras as well as cannon. General Dwight Eisenhower, in command of the North African front, confirmed that when he said: "Motion pictures are of utmost importance, providing entertainment and building up morale. Newsreels especially are of tremendous value, providing for the soldiers the means of keeping up with their friends in other theaters of war and with their families at home."

Film and smokeless powder both come from the same ingredients, and both are fighting for the freedom of all people today. Already a million feet of 35-mm. film, showing coastlines, harbors and other topographical features of present and future combat areas, have been turned over to our military and naval intelligence services by the motion-picture industry. The material collected by Hollywood camera crews is proving invaluable to the Office of Strategic Services in this global war.

Through orientation films, recruits to the service learn the nature of the enemy and his blind obedience to dictators. They explain, too, basic issues of the war through dramatic use of news shots and confiscated Axis pictures. For the films offer a combined appeal to the eye, ear, head and heart of American youth, schooled in the ways of peace, and give them a weapon against Axis fighters taught to believe in a world in which man is without dignity and human life without individual significance. To quote President Roosevelt, "Motion pictures is one of America's most effective media of information."

The MOVIE FRONT

By FRANCES LONG

"The End of a Perfect Day." Eighty-year-old Carrie Jacobs Bond was a guest at the Hollywood Canteen recently. When servicemen learned that the composer of "The End of a Perfect Day," and "I Love You Truly" was in the audience, they insisted that she come to the piano and sing "The End of a Perfect Day" for them. Soldiers and sailors rushed to help her to the platform, and when Miss Bond finished the number, the applause was deafening, for the men simply went wild with delight. Immediately after, a long line of autograph-hunters formed to get her signature, among them many young and lovely film stars . . .

Teamed again. Greer Garson and Walter Pidgeon, who did such fine work together in "Mrs. Miniver" and "Blossoms in the Dust" that Mr. and Mrs. Public have been rooting for them ever since, have been teamed again in "Madame Curie" . . .

Greased beans and eighteen-carat hash: Nelson Eddy was rummaging through an old desk of 1840 vintage that's one of the props on "The Phantom of the Opera" set where he's working and brought forth a yellow, age-worn Miner's Hotel menu dated January, 1850. It read: Bean soup—$1.00; Baked Beans—75 cents—Greased—$1.00; Low-grade hash—75 cents; 18-carat—$1.00. So—it seems that present-day food prices aren't so exorbitant after all!

Chuckle of the month. An eight-year-old coming out of a theater with her mother, after seeing a Veronica Lake picture, surprised Mom by asking, "Mommy, is there really a man named Hitler who wears a lock of hair over one eye?" Assured that there was, she retorted, "Then why doesn't he come to America and marry Veronica Lake?" My, my, maybe it's a good thing that Uncle Sam made one of his prettiest nieces get rid of her famous bang! . . .

Disappearance insurance. Lloyds of London, who will insure anything from a battleship to a flea circus, has just written a disappearance policy on Eddie Albert at Paramount. Officials took it out because of Eddie's habit of disappearing into thin air between pictures . . .

Jottings from Movietown. Spencer Tracy will dance in his next picture, "A Guy Named Joe"; had to use the 17 stamp in his ration book to buy a pair of dancing pumps . . . Joe Louis, world heavyweight boxing champ, now in the armed forces, will appear in the screen version of Irving Berlin's "This Is the Army" for Warners . . . Gary Cooper's secret ambition is to own and operate a small-town newspaper when he retires from the screen . . . Veterans of Foreign Wars have selected Irene Manning as their 1943 Poppy Girl . . . In our March issue we stated that Robert Taylor was about ready to bolt pictures for military service. He did, and joined the Naval Air Force . . .

—Jack Albin

SLATED to do the role of Madame Curie in the movie version of the famous scientist's life, no film star is climbing the ladder of success faster than Greer Garson. As to La Garson's romance with Ensign Richard Ney—that seems to be at a complete standstill at present time

ON his first leave, Ty Power, now in the Marine Corps, visited his wife on the set, made the rounds to say hello to his friends at 20th Century-Fox. Ty came through boot camp with flying colors, was happy to get leave, and so was Annabella (Mrs. Ty), shown with him above

INDEFATIGABLE Lou Costello, shorter half of the ace comedy team of Abbott and Costello, is never at a loss for a gag. When he and Bud were making "Pardon My Sarong" for Universal, Lou, above, imbued his two youngsters, Patricia, age five, and Carole Lou, age three, with the spirit of the film by dressing them in grass skirts just like grown-up lassies wore who appeared with him in the picture. Outside of radio and screen chores, Lou works tirelessly at benefits, war-bond sales

"I HAVE A HUNCH I'VE STARTED SOMETHING"

says

Hunt Stromberg

THE first few pages of Gypsy Rose Lee's "THE G STRING MURDERS" convinced me that there was something new in screen material. The farther I read, the more excited I became. The story had pace, excitement, and a robust humor. Above all, it had colorful characters that were made to live on the screen. The burlesque background was different, intriguing, and lustily alive.

Wait till you hear her sing "Take it off the E-string, play it on the G-string".

Newcomer to watch
MICHAEL O'SHEA as the Burlesque Comedian

SO I've made the picture and you'll be seeing it soon under the title "LADY OF BURLESQUE".

THE mystery murder plot has something of the quality that made Nick and Nora Charles your favorite people in "The Thin Man." When I produced that picture I had a hunch you'd want more "Thin Man" pictures—and you did. And now when you see Barbara Stanwyck as Dixie Daisy I think you'll want more of the same. Also there's a newcomer named Michael O'Shea who looks like a find to me. As a matter of fact, there are three or four who'll bear watching.

OF course every producer gets enthusiastic about his latest picture—but please take my word for it—"I have a hunch I've started something".

Bob Hope's Famous Proboscis
Now Graces Forecourt of Fame

HOLLYWOOD'S unique Forecourt of Fame at Grauman's Chinese Theatre on the boulevard has added the clover-shaped imprint of Bob Hope's ski-slide nose to other celebrity prints there. Bob, assisted by Dorothy Lamour above, went through the cement-dunking ceremony for the opening of their latest picture, "They Got Me Covered"

AFTER Dottie had stuck Bob's beak in the wet cement block, especially prepared to receive it, he came up for air with a huge blob of clay and sand on his schnozzle, and a joke bubbling for utterance. "Critics always called me a putty-nose comedian," Hope chuckled, "and they were certainly right. Anybody got a chisel? I'd like to sneeze"

THERE weren't any chisels forthcoming, but Bob got first aid from Dorothy and the artist who always officiates at these ceremonies. Dottie helped Bob clean off the gooey clay that had him gurgling. When he saw the impression made by his internationally famous schnozzle, Hope quipped, "Now I know it takes sand to get in the hall of fame"

NEW YORK

By E. KAY

Raymond Johnson, "Inner Sanctum" host to radio listeners, and Ed Jerome, the menace of "Mr. District Attorney" and "Crime Doctor," are now being addressed by fellow actors as "Mr. President." And for good reason: Ray's playing the role of Thomas Jefferson in the Broadway stage production "The Patriots," newest stage hit, and Ed plays George Washington. House Jameson, Sam Aldrich of NBC's "Aldrich Family," plays the part of Alexander Hamilton . . .

Funsters of radio and screen Abbott and Costello were kept as busy as cranberry merchants at Thanksgiving during their recent visit to New York; managed to keep on the beam with a steady round of visiting broadcasts and doing shows for servicemen, and had only one near calamity. Both are rabid fight fans, and on Friday night they decided to take time off and relax. They sat through the preliminary bouts and were settling themselves for the main event, when someone tapped Lou on the shoulder and a voice hissed, "You're due on the 'Camel Caravan' program in fifteen minutes." And before you could say "Yehudi!" the pair was heading down to the street. They arrived puffing and panting at the broadcast just as their names were announced—went in fighting and scored a knockout with the visible—and listening—audience! . . .

Along Radio Row: Ann Thomas of CBS' "Easy Aces" has received a citation from the U. S. Treasury Department for work selling war securities . . . Lillian Leonard, who replaced Beatrice Kaye on "Gay Nineties," is MIGHTY CAREFUL of his shoes these days is comic Red Skelton, who demonstrates (right) his own novel way of eliminating the wear and tear on shoe leather. When not using his size twelves, he drapes them around his neck. "Shoe-rationing's a wonderful thing," says Red. "It put me back on my feet!"

HOLLYWOOD

By AVERY THOMPSON

It's "Westward ho!" for more big radio productions. After the conferences held in Hollywood by the network heads, it was disclosed that CBS plans to bring many more of their well-known eastern shows to the West Coast. Not only that, but more big-time programs are to be inaugurated here. More and more movies and radio are joining forces to bring America the best in entertainment, making Movietown the hub of activities. M-G-M has lined up the airlines' "Duffy's" for a movie version; Columbia has signed Bob Hope's genius for dumbness, Vera Vague, for a series of short comedies; and "One Man's Family," which has built a listening audience of 25,000,000, will be brought to the screen with original author Carlton Morse doing the screen play . . .

Red Skelton was found to be head man on the Hooper Poll Pacific ratings recently, and even though he and wife Edna are now divorced, she's still devoted to him and deeply concerned over his welfare, both personally and businessly. From observation, it would appear also that Red, underneath the layer of whatever difficulties led to their divorce, has a deep regard for Edna. Their attitude toward each other is both puzzling and confusing. But—well, people are funny! . . .

A distinguished-looking gray-haired woman sat in the front row at the Lionel Barrymore air show and listened intently to every word. It was Lionel's equally famous sister Ethel, who was in Los Angeles with her own stage show, "The Corn Is Green." Immediately after the broadcast, Lionel accompanied Ethel to the theater, saw his sister for the first time in her latest and—many say—her greatest performance . . .

Abbott and Costello are developing what they call "laugh therapy," with the approval of some outstanding psychiatrists. They are experimenting with their laugh routines at Army hospitals, feel that they are just what the doctor ordered for mental hygiene.

CHICAGO

By JAY ALLISON

Ruth Perrott's very happy about her new Dottie Brainfeeble role in the "Vic and Sade" scripts, claims it's easy to do "because Dottie's a little bit like I am." President Roosevelt, she says, is responsible for her entrance into radio. The wife of George St. John Perrott, consulting economist to the President, Ruth moved to Washington with her husband in the early New Deal days. As she already had an enviable stage and stock-company career behind her, it was quite natural that she applied her talent to radio in her new surroundings. Thus, reasons Ruth, "the President was instrumental in bringing me to radio." In 1937 she went to New York and the networks, and in 1940 came to Chicago.

Ruth's work in radio, as on the stage, has been confined chiefly to dialect and character roles. Recognizing her versatility, Chicago friends refer to her as "the female Bill Thompson." She's a talented and busy woman. Besides her radio chores, she writes poetry, is proud of her ability to cook and to make her own hats. She is an air-raid warden and has written a play for the Red Cross which is presented throughout Chicago by clubs and schools in the interest of first aid . . .

More than ten years' continuous service as announcer on a commercial network show is the record held up by Jack Holden, commercial spieler on the "National Barn Dance" since its pre-network days on station WLS. His cohorts at WLS think that's quite a record and are wondering if any network radio announcer can beat it . . .

The John Larkins' new daughter has been named Kathleen . . . Jane Webb ("That Brewster Boy," "Bachelor's Children") was voted "the girl we'd like most to be caught in a parachute with" by cadets at the Glenview Naval Air Base . . . LA FIELDS describes her home as a regular "You Can't Take It with You" place. It shelters her parents and various other relatives. Gracie likes a "coop o' tea" at song practise

CALIFORNIA home of Miss Fields follows rambling style of Spanish architecture with some special features dreamed up by the Fields Clan, including the colorful canteen, above, which they named "Gracie's Cantina"

AT AN Army camp in Arizona last summer, hot, homesick soldiers perked up and donned clean uniforms upon hearing that a famous star was to entertain them. Necks stretched to glimpse some Hollywood chassis, then drooped visibly when an unglamorous, fortyish blonde strode out on the stage. Resentful whispers of "Who's the dame?" went through the crowd. Ten encores later, the cheering, stomping, whistling men were supporting England's Gracie Fields, the world's highest-paid entertainer, in the style to which she's accustomed.

To her millions of admirers in Britain, the singing ex-millworker from Lancashire is known simply as "Our Gracie." To Americans she has become John Bull's best good-will ambassador.

Since she came to this country in 1940, she has raised a half-million dollars for British war victims and has brought joy unalloyed to thousands of American boys in camps. In recognition whereof German propagandists have declared that Gracie Fields should be considered a "British war industry."

"Now I'm a blinkin' military hobjective," exclaimed Gracie.

People who expect to see a ruddy, horse-faced buffon are surprised to find that the fair-skinned, five-foot-five Miss Fields is downright handsome—when she's not making faces. Off stage, her normal stride is strongly reminiscent of a commuter going hell-bent for the 7:55. As a friend once said, "Gracie always looks as though she'd just slid down the bannisters." Her own idea of a chic ensemble is to grab whatever is handiest in the closet.

She has a salty good humor, an honest preference for every-day people, and a stubborn dislike of "puttin' on airs." In conversation, she says exactly what she thinks, and lets the raised eyebrows fall where they may. Once on tour, when a fluttery female marveled that England's top star was traveling without a maid, Gracie smiled dangerously. "Yes, isn't it vulgah?" she said.

"I even wash me own pants." On stage, Gracie admits her age (45) blithely to audiences and says, "Me hair is blond, but I touch it up, I do." She punctuates her songs with a rowdy high-kick or a cartwheel, groans loudly after telling a corny joke, and does a ribald imitation of a coloratura soprano hoisted on her own bridgework.

From a shilling a week to $780,000 a year is a nice jump, if you can make it. Gracie made it. She was born January 9, 1898, in Rochdale, Lancashire, the oldest child of Fred and Sarah Stansfield. Her father was a local mechanic and handyman; her mother, incurably stage-struck, did laundry for theatrical troupers and taught Gracie, her two younger sisters and brother to sing almost before they crawled out of the cradle.

At the age of twelve Gracie toured the provinces briefly as one of "Clara Coverdale's Dainty Dots." Truant officers caught up with the troupe, however, and sent the under-age songstress back to school. Soon afterward she went into the Rochdale mill as a cotton-winder. This job provided invaluable exercise for her lungs, as she sang above the screech of machines to entertain co-workers. When she was caught giving an all too realistic imitation of the foreman, the mills of the gods ground fast, or, as Gracie placidly puts it, "I was asked for me resignation." The Lancashire Lark next got a job dancing in the chorus of a vaudeville troupe. One night she was given a solo turn, mimicking popular stars. Her number stopped the show, and it wasn't long before the lusty-voiced youngster was picked for the lead in a musical revue to play the provinces. The name of seventeen-year-old Gracie Fields went up in modest lights.

Then Archie Pitt, the comedian playing opposite Gracie, wrote a revue especially for her. Mr. Tower of London was a seven-year smash hit, and its star ditto. In 1923, after touring the provinces at a cozy salary of $500 a week (and marrying Archie Pitt en route), the lass from Lancashire opened in London's smart West End, with results like spontaneous combustion. Wooed by a fancy sum and urgent cables, Miss Fields appeared, in 1928, at New York's big-name vaudeville mecca, the Palace. Her first American audiences sat on their hands during most of her two-weeks engagement. "I was tryin' to be a bloomin' American instead of bein' meself," she told a friend gloomily, on her return home. Bein' herself in England continued to pay handsomely. At the Paladium and Coliseum, London's fanciest music-halls, her salary hit $5,000 a week. Besides giving two vaudeville shows a day on tour, she sang at prisons, hospitals and veterans' homes, and gave impromptu performances from her hotel window at midnight, when crowds gathered below screaming "Gracie! Give us a song!"

In 1931 her first movie, Sally In Our Alley, hit the jackpot all over the British Empire. Rochdale held a celebration when her four-millionth phonograph record was made, and proud home-town citizens presented her with "The Freedom of Rochdale," which entitles the holder to a silver burial casket and free tram rides. The delighted Gracie reciprocated by hiring a hall and inviting 500 of the townspeople up to London for high tea. It was very high indeed.

Probably her most spectacular honor came in 1938, when, at Buckingham Palace, King George presented her with the rose-colored ribbon and badge signifying "Commander of the Most Excellent Order of the British Empire." Later Gracie, having picked up a bit of American slang, remarked to friends, "I'm glad they didn't make me a Dame. It would sound a bit racy, it would."

Gracie Fields' father, who had warned her sternly, "Lass, whatever you do, don't be gettin' stook oop," must have been gratified at his offspring's democratic ways. Once, heckled by "me fast-talkin' in-laws," she purchased a maroon Rolls Royce, complete with liveried chauffeur. After one ride in this splendor, she told her husband morosely that she "felt like Marie Antoinette makin' ready to get me neck chopped." After that, neighbors enjoyed watching Miss Fields' relatives riding magnificently down the street in the Rolls, while behind it came a second-hand Ford, with Gracie at the wheel.

About the time that her income from vaudeville, movies, and recordings went above $750,000 a year, she boarded a bus late one evening in London. The driver, recognizing his famous fare with "Gor, if it ain't Gracie," solicitously inquired her destination. Then he faced the other passengers. "We're goin' to turn off at the next corner and take Gracie home," he announced. "Those not in favor will git off the bus." At three a.m., all twenty passengers and the bus driver were draped around a piano in her Charing Cross home, indulging in melodious part-singing.

In the summer of 1939, while war clouds closed down, London newsstands carried huge posters giving daily bulletins on Gracie Fields, who was dangerously ill. Anxious friends thronging the hospital corridors included a top British industrialist, a busboy, and Queen Mary. When war broke out, her doctor warned her, "You won't be working for another year, young lady." A month later she was singing lustily at eight or more Army camps a day. On Christmas Eve, she sang the songs of England for homesick men in France and Belgium.

After Dunkirk she sailed for this country to tour for British war charities. In addition to working without salary, she paid the expenses of an accompanist and secretary. Before her first concert, in Salt Lake City's Tabernacle, British advisers filled the air with cautious murmurs of "Mormons, you know, may not laugh at the same things," and cautioned her to choose her songs with care. But Miss Fields said, "If these Americans can take Bob Hope, they can take me, they can." A Salt Lake City reporter next day wrote in his column: "If England wanted to borrow fifty destroyers, why did they send diplomats? Why not just give us Gracie Fields, and they can borrow our whole Navy."

Last spring, after more than two years of singing at Army camps and hospitals, plus "doin' me bit" for British causes, the world's highest-paid entertainer found herself flat broke. She took a lucrative fling in Topnotchers, a Schubert revue on Broadway. Reviewers exclaimed with surprise that "her voice has great sweetness and range." (It makes her mad when Americans try to pigeon-hole her as a

THE DEBUT

Jane Russell Makes a Long-Delayed Screen Bow!

JANE RUSSELL, who stars in Howard Hughes' "The Outlaw," holds a unique position in Hollywood. For Jane is the only girl who's been a star for three years without the public at large seeing her on the screen. When "The Outlaw" was premiered in San Francisco on February 5 of this year, it gave Jane her long-delayed debut in pictures. A million-dollar production, the picture in which Jane co-stars with Jack Buettel was begun in November of 1939; but a series of complications kept the production on the shelf until 1943. In the meantime, producer Howard Hughes has kept Miss Russell on his payroll at $300 a week, refusing to loan her to any other studio until "The Outlaw" was released. And the publicity the sultry star has received has kept her well before the public. Proof of that lies in the fact that a secretary is kept busy all day sending out personally autographed photos of Jane, and she has received thousands of letters from men in America's armed forces telling her that she was their favorite actress. In March, 1942, Jane was adopted by two units of the armed forces, and in April of the same year was elected honorary hostess at Camp Roberts. Just recently U. S. sailors voted her the girl "we'd like to have waiting for us in every port." All this without ever having seen Jane on the screen! Her one ambition is to make another picture, truly prove her ability as an actress.

JOEL'S genius for math became evident at the early age of three. He went to the grocery store with his mother and proceeded to add up items faster than the clerk. From then on, his greatest sport was working with numbers and figuring out short cuts to arithmetic answers. His first appearance on the "Quiz Kids" program was made at the age of five. At that time he almost needed a mike strapped to his chest, for sitting still was more difficult than answering knotty problems. Now, back on the program at the ripe old age of six, Joel is the only child on the show who makes monkeys out of the brainy research staff that furnishes all the answers for director Joe Kelly. On one occasion, Joel worked out the answer to a math problem that Kelly counted wrong. But a check-up later revealed that Joel—not the research staff—was right. He is now in second grade in the Chicago public schools, and has one of the highest I. Q.'s on record there. Yet he is as normal as he is precocious, and popular with his classmates. His bubbling enthusiasm includes everything he contacts in life. He does his second-grade arithmetic with the same gusto that he works algebra and geometry. To Joel, being a Quiz Kid on Sunday nights over the Blue Network is just a wonderful game, a circus and party all rolled into one!

VERONICA LAKE, the Beautiful Little Turnip

By Carl A. Schroeder

THE collective mental power of Hollywood beauties could not be counted upon to solve more than a second-rate cross-word puzzle.

You can quote me on that statement, leaving out the person of Veronica Lake. The fact that she won first and second place in two Florida beauty contests does not seem to have petrified any portion of her thinking apparatus.

To illustrate, there is the inside story which causes many a chuckle when told in Hollywood. Legend or not, it is recounted that upon completion of "I Wanted Wings" Veronica was called to the office of an important official. Beaming broadly, he announced that her salary of $250 a week would henceforth be $750 as a reward for her spectacular work. Not beaming at all, Veronica is said to have retorted, "Don't insult me—it's $1,250 from now on or nothing!" She walked out, slamming the door, and after a few days of dire threats her bosses gave in.

You must not conclude from this that Veronica is a hard and grasping female. She simply loves life and intends to get everything that's coming her way. I call her "Turnip" because she is tiny and pert, and in her wry smile that accompanies a running commentary on her surprising activities is considerable delectable nourishment.

I relish particularly the thought of the pompous hotel manager who missed the eight-foot-long rubber mat in front of his swanky hotel and in his wrath never dreamed that it was swiped by Veronica on her way to a rubber-salvage party.

Now that some days have passed I

This is a Hunt Stromberg production which will be released through United Artists. Screenplay was written by James Gunn and is based on the best-selling novel "The G-String Murders," by Gypsy Rose Lee, famous ex-burlesque queen of the Gay White Way. Time: 1940. Locale: Columbus, Ohio; the Old Opera House, New York City. Director of the picture: William A. Wellman.

THESE shots from "Lady of Burlesque" have been sorted from the rushes that star Barbara Stanwyck and the cast watched in the projection-room after the day's work was over in order to see how the scenes were stacking up to a completed whole. The pictures shown here give movie-goers some idea of the utterly hilarious comedy they can expect when they see the movie. But it also ranges from slapstick to brittle, streamlined satire, expressed in an entirely new language. For as drama it is filled with suspense and breath-taking excitement.

Starring Barbara Stanwyck
With Michael O'Shea and a
"Magic" Pickle Persuader!

As a musical it goes from the ballad So This Is You and the snappy song introduced by Miss Stanwyck, Take Off the E-String, Play It on the G-String to a bright Irish theme for Michael O'Shea, then climbs to lusty burlesque-show music and romantic ditties with singing strings. Based upon the novel G-String Murders, by Gypsy Rose Lee, the picture introduces many new stars in support of Miss Stanwyck, all with stage and radio experience. To record a widely varied musical background, a sixty-four-piece orchestra was assembled. From start to finish, the picture is rich in the traditions of the old-time concert hall.

As for star Barbara Stanwyck, she has never had a more active role in her whole career. Babs worked every day the film was in production. She sings and does about every type of dance ever dreamed up by a zany toe-tapper, including tap steps, jitter-bugging, boogie-woogie, splits,

of LADY of BURLESQUE

and cartwheels. And the costumes in which she does them are eye-filling, to say the least!

One of the funniest sequences is where Michael O'Shea as Biff Brannigan, a lonely burlesque comic who plays the romantic lead in the film, dickers with Frank Fenton (Russell Rogers) over the sale of a magic pickle persuader. The gadget costs a lot of money, but Biff is willing to pay the price in order to win Barbara (Dixie Daisy). Biff thinks his troubles are over when Russell accepts a small deposit with the understanding that Biff will pay off the balance pronto. But, unknown to him, they are only just beginning when he meets Dixie and begins the initial tryout of the magic gadget's charms on the lady of burlesque. Fact of the matter is, Biff builds up to an awful let-down. For just at the moment when he's sure that Dixie, her love and her money are all his for the asking, she responds to his overtures with a blow that sends him sprawling on the floor, and his magic pickle persuader sails merrily over the footlights into the orchestra-pit.

If pickle persuaders are something new and strange in your life, you'll at least understand their workings from Biff's point of view after this sequence. And you'll be convinced of the salty moral, "Never be too sure that a pickle persuader has magic, even though it does produce laughs galore."

1. LONELY Michael O'Shea (center) wants to meet Barbara Stanwyck, and persuades Frank Fenton to introduce him to Babs—"The Lady of Burlesque"

2. CONFIDENTLY Mike wafts his pickle persuader (a pickle on a string), which he has purchased from Fenton after much dickering, under the nose of Burlesque Lady, and gets a shy smile in return

3. ELATED over fact that persuader holds magic, Mike asks Barbara for a loan, watches intently as she takes the money from "bank" and gives it to him. Mike thinks it's a miracle, gets bold

4. DELIRIOUS with success, Mike asks Babs for a kiss, doesn't wait for her to make up her mind as he hugs her to him and kisses her soundly. "Ah, what magic in my persuader," he sighs, when—

5. WHAM! "Lady" Barbara struggles from his embrace and swings a hefty right uppercut that sends him sprawling and his persuader sailing into orchestra-pit. Right: Babs in title-role togs

Dick Jurgens*

DIETRICH (Dick for short) JURGENS and his men have disbanded to join America's armed forces. Listeners, who have tuned in on his music from Chicago's Aragon Ballroom since 1937, won't be hearing him again until victory for the allied nations. That Dick and his orchestra were popular was especially evidenced last spring when WGN announced that he would broadcast from the stage of the Chicago Civic Opera House. With only two days' advance notice, four thousand persons packed the place to hear him. And the fact that he was signed for a return engagement at New York's Paramount shows that Manhattan liked his music too. As a director, two distinctions mark Jurgens: He is a left-handed baton-wielder, and since his orchestra was formed fourteen years ago there have been only six changes in personnel. Now we give our readers Dick's last message to his airplane listeners—"Good-by until VICTORY!"

An English Intelligence Officer Matches His Wits Against Those of Axis Henchmen

IT WAS among the rocks below the craggy headland from where they were to signal to Halvord's trawler that they found him. That in itself was suspicious despite the fact that the unconscious, white-faced stranger seemed only an object of pity. But in Norway since the invasion everything had changed—human sympathy had been modified by the necessity for self-protection.

Lars Jorgensen, the wind ruffling his blond hair, was for letting the stranger die by himself where the North Sea had washed him up. But old Thor Halvorsen and his daughter, Bretta, disagreed with Lars. Maybe, though, it was only Bretta whose tender sympathies not even the Nazi peril could touch. It was natural, then, that Bretta should influence her father. In any event the stranger was carried secretly to the Halvorsen home and nursed back to health.

The man's story was simple. He told them that his name was Fred Gaines and that he was an officer in the Royal Air Force.

"I was on reconnaissance out over the North Sea," he said, "when those Messerschmitts spotted me and brought me down. I managed to swim to shore . . . and that's where you found me."

Lars rubbed his chin thoughtfully. "Very convenient for you," he said, "but what about the Halvorsens? It'll mean the firing-squad for them if you're caught here."

The Halvorsens waved the danger aside. Their only worry seemed to be the best way in which they could help Gaines escape back to England. But Gaines had something to say about that.

"Suppose I don't want to escape?" he asked. "Unless the Commandos stage a raid near here, it'll be practically impossible for me to get away. Why not let me stay here meanwhile and help you in your fight against the invaders?"

Gaines looked at the others. Lars and Thor exchanged suspicious glances. They said nothing. Even Bretta was silent. Gaines laughed a bit self-consciously and continued talking.

"I think you understand me even though you pretend not to. We in England know about your underground fight here—the sabotage, the hundred and one ways you've got of making the occupation of Norway uncomfortable for the Nazis . . ."

Although Lars still remained suspicious, the Halvorsens were convinced that Gaines was what he said he was—an English air officer. They accepted his suggestion and Gaines was introduced to the Norwegian underground that night.

A few days later Bretta, dressed in a pretty red jacket, her head bare and her blue eyes flashing, took Gaines up in the hills to show him the Heikennen Coal Works. It was while Bretta was explaining how Halvord was to bring explosives in his trawler to blow up the mine that the German officer interrupted. Kommandant Krueger was instantly suspicious of Gaines.

"My cousin, Chris Halvorsen, is visiting us from Oslo," Bretta explained. "He had never been here before, so I was—"

Krueger disregarded the girl's explanation. He looked at Gaines with fierce eyes. "Your papers."

He thrust out his hand, snatched the papers and handed them to his aide, Hans. Bretta, worried that the Germans might discover Gaines' papers were counterfeit, kept up a stream of chatter.

"I was not aware that we were breaking regulations by being here, Kommandant Krueger," she said.

The German frowned. "You will remain silent until spoken to! Those papers, Hans? How are they?"

"They appear to be in order, Herr Kommandant." Hans folded the papers and gave them back to his superior officer. Bretta took her companion's arm and prepared to leave.

"Not so fast, Fraulein," Krueger said. "I have some questions to ask you at my office, questions about this 'cousin' of yours!"

Gaines took a step forward. "I'll answer any questions necessary," he said. "Go ahead, Bretta. Go home."

Krueger's voice became sharp with anger. "You are daring to countermand my orders? We shall have no further discussion. You will—" he reached out and grabbed Bretta's arm before Gaines could interfere—"come with me, Fraulein."

Gaines tried to strike Krueger's hand from Bretta's arm. Krueger pushed Gaines away and Hans raised his service pistol, bringing it down sharply on Gaines' skull.

"Oh," cried Bretta, "you have killed him! You have—"

"Nein, Fraulein, he is not dead. But perhaps he will wish he was before we are through. Take him to headquarters, Hans. As for you, Fraulein, I shall speak to you later." Krueger turned sharply on his heel. "All right, Hans, mach schnell! I am going to teach this Norwegian dog a lesson he shall never forget!"

At the Germans' headquarters in the commandeered city hall, Krueger dismissed Hans, saying he would question the prisoner himself. Hans reluctantly withdrew after protesting the man was dangerous. For a time after Hans had left the Kommandant's office was quiet. Then slowly the unconscious Gaines raised himself from the chair in which he had slumped. He rubbed his bruised head and smiled ruefully. Abruptly he seemed more awake. He came to his feet, clicked his heels together and raised his right hand in the Nazi salute.

"Ober-Leutnant Ganz reporting to Kommandant Krueger!"

Krueger soberly returned the salute and motioned Gaines back to his chair. Both men sat down again, Krueger behind his desk.

"I have been informed of your arrival by Gestapo headquarters in Berlin, Leutnant." Krueger paused. "They recommend you highly. Their confidence in you appears justified. Apparently you have completely fooled these Norwegian traitors."

Gaines nodded. He explained that he was supposed to be an English pilot shot down over the North Sea and that he had joined the Norwegian underground.

"The local heads are Thor Halvorsen and Lars Jorgensen," he said. "Their immediate plans are to destroy the Heikennen Coal Works."

"The coal works?" Krueger appeared startled. "They would dare—I—when is this sabotage to take place?"

"Within the next week. I have not yet learned the exact date or the manner in which they are to receive the explosives. I will be returned to the Halvorsen home and report to you later. Those Norwegians shall learn what happens to those who stand in the way of our glorious Fuehrer's plans! A toast, Herr Kommandant Krueger, a toast to Der Fuehrer!"

Gaines rose to his feet, clicked his heels together, raised his hand. Krueger duplicated the action.

"Heil Hitler!" they said in unison.

GAINES, a beaten, broken figure, was tossed on the floor of the Halvorsen's neat living-room floor later that night. Bretta bent over him sympathetically as soon as the Nazis had gone. Gaines tried to discount the beating. Lars Jorgensen was suspicious.

"What did you tell them?" he asked Gaines. "What do they know about us?"

"Nothing," Gaines said. "I didn't tell them a thing. I can keep my mouth shut, Jorgensen."

"I knew it," said Bretta simply. "I knew he wouldn't say anything."

After that they had more confidence in Gaines than ever before. That night he and Bretta walked out to the high headland to watch for Halvord's trawler. Above the roar of the sea, Bretta explained.

"There is the fjord below us, Fred. We can watch for the fishing-trawler from up here. Arrangements are all made. Halvord will contact the British destroyer, get the explosives, and bring them here."

"This is the first night of the black moon," said Fred. "He should be showing up tonight."

"That is not necessarily true," Bretta replied. "The moon will be hidden for three nights. We have no information as to which one of those it will be. But we're here to watch each night. Halvord will let us know by signaling with a lantern."

Gaines touched Bretta's arm. "I just happened to think of what would happen to you, your father, all the people in the village if the Nazis find out about all this—"

"They won't until after the coal mines are destroyed," Bretta said quickly. She let Gaines' hand remain on her arm.

"Bretta! Bretta!" he cried, holding her closely all of a sudden. "You can't do it. This underground work is for men, not women! Not a girl like you! Fight in other ways, Bretta. This way is too dangerous." Gaines paused. "I see that you'll go ahead in spite of everything. I only mentioned these things because—because, Bretta—oh, I know I haven't the right to tell you I love you now. The road ahead is too uncertain, but when this is all over, when things turn out as they're going to, then maybe you'll listen to me then. Will you?"

Bretta pressed Gaines' hand against her warm cheek. "Yes, Fred. Yes. When this is all over I will listen to you."

The next afternoon, Gaines went for a long walk by himself. He skirted the little fishing-village, taking great care that he had not been followed. At dusk, he glided through the deserted streets and covertly let himself into German headquarters. He made his way to Kommandant Krueger's office.

"So, Leutnant Ganz, you have come here again. You have news for me?" Krueger looked across the desk on which he had been busy with his reports. Gaines came to the point at once.

"The Norwegians make their move tomorrow night! They received the signal early this evening. The boat with the explosives aboard will put in to shore tomorrow night!"

Krueger's voice was filled with satisfaction. "That is good news, Leutnant! Excellent news! You have a plan?"

"I have," Gaines said. "Is our submarine off the coast?"

"Ja. The U-127. It has been out there for two days now."

"Good! At the proper moment I shall signal the submarine from the headland. It will destroy the fishing-ship, and at the same moment our troops can surround the traitors on the shore!"

Both men stood up, saluted solemnly. Gaines left by a side door opening into the darkened street. He was so preoccupied with his own plans that he did not notice the silent figure of Lars Jorgensen melting back into the shadow of the alley. He had no way of knowing that Jorgensen had followed him for most of the day.

The Halvorsens were alone when Lars gave the secret knock at their door and Bretta let him in. She noticed his excitement at once.

"There's plenty wrong," Lars said. "Do you know where the Englishman is?"

Bretta's voice was frightened. "Fred? Has—has something happened to him?"

Lars was stern. "Just answer my question! Do you know where he is?"

"Of course we do," Thor said quietly. "He went to the village to apply for a clothing-rationing card. Why do you ask, Lars? What's the matter? What's wrong?"

Lars voice became bitter. "You might be interested in knowing that your British ally did not go to the village on rationing-card business. He went to the Nazi headquarters! He isn't an ally. He's another Quisling! If you require further proof, a little trip to the headland above the fjord will convince you. He's there now, signaling out to sea!"

"Signaling?" cried Thor. "He's contacting an enemy ship—a submarine!" "There's no other explanation," said Lars.

"But there must be," cried Bretta, tears in her eyes. "I tell you there must be. There—"

Thor Halvorsen walked toward the great black chest that stood in a far corner of the room. He opened it slowly and began taking out the old clothing it was packed with. At the bottom of the chest, however, he found what he was searching for. It was a high-powered hunting-rifle, his pride in the days of peace.

"If what Lars says is true," he said grimly, "we've only one course open to us. If he's a traitor to Norway, he must die—"

Lars and Thor let themselves out into the night, leaving Bretta alone in the silent living-room sobbing to herself.

BUT Bretta didn't stay at home. She was made of sterner stuff than that. She remembered a short cut to the headland and hurried through the darkness to the man she loved. She had not believed Lars; Fred could not be a Nazi spy! It was impossible. But a shock awaited her at the headland. Scarcely had she arrived to warn Fred than she saw lights out over the sea.

"Fred—that light? What is it?" "The sign I've been waiting for," he cried. "They're acknowledging my message!"

It was like a slap across her face. "Acknowledging your—then Lars was right! You are signaling to a ship out there?"

"Yes," Gaines said quickly, "but it's all right, Bretta. It—"

"You mean it's all right for you and your murdering kind!" Bretta's voice rose above the wail of the wind. "It's all right with you that Norwegians are going to be slaughtered in cold blood because of what you've done tonight!"

Gaines came to the girl's side, tried to take her in his arms. She pushed him away. "You've got things wrong, Bretta. I'm not your enemy. I'm trying to help Norway."

"Don't talk any of that lying Dr. Goebbels propaganda to me!" She shrank away from him. "Don't touch me! Get your hands off of me—you—"

There was the sound of running feet. A dim shadow of a man moved swiftly across the face of the rocky headland. It was Lars with a gun raised over his shoulder. He brought the gun barrel down on Gaines' head with a sickening crunch. Gaines fell at Bretta's feet.

"Maybe that will teach you a lesson," Lars said.

Bretta quickly explained that she had believed Lars had been wrong and had come to warn Fred.

"But you weren't," she said in tears. "He was signaling. I'm afraid his message got through. I saw the acknowledgment flash back." She went to her father. "Maybe, Father, we're not too late. The Nazis expect us to move tomorrow night. Why not take Lars' boat and meet Halvord at sea tonight and bring back the explosives. The Nazis won't be ready for us if we act earlier."

"By thunder, Bretta, you hit it!" Lars cried. "But what of this so-called Englishman?"

COMING EVENTS

Philharmonic Finale

The current series of Sunday afternoon concerts by the Philharmonic-Symphony Society of New York concludes its 1942-1943 season in April. Fritz Reiner will conduct the April 4 program, which will have Gregor Piatigorsky, cellist, as soloist. The concert for April 11 will have Bruno Walter as conductor and cellist Joseph Schuster as soloist. Walter will also conduct the Palm Sunday concert on April 18, when Bach's "St. Mathew's Passion" will be presented.

The Columbia Symphony Orchestra, directed by Howard Barlow, begins a series of summer concerts on April 25.

(The New York Philharmonic Orchestra may be heard Sundays over CBS at 3 p.m. EDT, 2 p.m. CWT, 1 p.m. MWT, 12 noon PWT. Beginning April 25, the Columbia Symphony Orchestra will be heard at the same time.)

NBC Summer Symphony

If advance plans materialize, the NBC Summer Symphony takes over in the regular NBC Symphony spot on April 18 for a series of summer concerts featuring well-known conductors.

(The NBC Summer Symphony Orchestra may be heard Sundays over NBC at 3 p.m. EDT, 2 p.m. CWT, 3 p.m. MWT, 2 p.m. PWT. Beginning April 18.)

Carlton Morse "Mystery" Returns

"I Love a Mystery," featuring the adventures of Jack, Doc and Tex, returned to the air on March 22 as a five-a-week thriller, occupying the nightly spot vacated by "Amos 'n' Andy." Carlton E. Morse, of "One Man's Family" fame, writes and directs the programs.

("I Love a Mystery" may be heard Monday through Fridays over CBS at 7 p.m. EDT, 6 p.m. CWT, 8 p.m. MWT, 8 p.m. PWT.)

Drama—Music by Goodrich

Goodrich Tire and Rubber Company premieres a new series over NBC either March 30 or April 6. The program will have Raymond Paige's all-young orchestra, a girl vocalist and a dramatic spot for guests each week.

(The Goodrich Program may be heard Tuesday over NBC at 7:30 EDT, 8:30 p.m. CWT, 10:30 p.m. MWT, 9:30 p.m. PWT.)

Ralph Edwards on Tour

Ralph Edwards is on tour with "Truth or Consequences," with the sale of $20,000,000 worth of war bonds as his goal. This cross-country hop will keep his show on the road for the balance of the season, which ends for "Truth or Consequences" on June 5. April itinerary as follows: Indianapolis, Ind., April 3; St. Louis, Mo., April 10; Omaha, Nebr., April 17; Denver, Colo., April 24. Tip: Get tickets early.

("Truth or Consequences" may be heard over NBC Saturdays at 8:30 p.m. EDT, 7:30 p.m. CWT, 9 p.m. MWT, 8 p.m. PWT.)

Groucho in "Blue Ribbon Town"

Groucho Marx heads a new Saturday night variety program scheduled to premiere over CBS on March 27 with Barbara Stanwyck as guest. In the regular line-up is Virginia O'Brien, dead-pan singer of screen fame, Donald Dickson, baritone, and Robert Armbruster's orchestra. Guest for April 3 will be Bob Hope. Title of show is "Blue Ribbon Town."

("Blue Ribbon Town" may be heard over CBS on Saturdays at 10:15 p.m. EDT, 9:15 p.m. CWT, 11:15 p.m. MWT, 7:15 p.m. PWT.)

"Carnival" Moves to CBS

Effective April 14, "Cresta Blanca Carnival" switches from a Wednesday night spot on MBS to CBS. The revised format will include Morton Gould and a fifty-one-piece orchestra.

("Cresta Blanca Carnival" formerly on MBS, switches to CBS on April 14 and may be heard at 10:30 p.m. EDT, 9:30 p.m. CWT, 11:30 p.m. MWT, 7:30 p.m. PWT.)

Benny: And, Don (talking about Fort Meade), come here a minute . . . Do you know what they've got here?

Wilson: What?

Benny: Waacs . . . And beauties, too . . . I know because I went over to visit 'em.

Wilson: Now wait a minute, Jack, you couldn't possibly have visited the Waacs, because they're quarantined.

Benny: Quarantined?

Wilson: Yes, they've all got measles.

Benny: Well, these spots on my face aren't ketchup, brother.

There's the sad tale of the dentist who wanted to get away from it all. So he enlisted in the Engineering Corps. Now all the poor guy does is drill and repair bridges. When he complained, they gave him K. P. and he spent the week-end cleaning plates...

If the RAF bombs Italy again, Mussolini threatens a drastic reprisal. He'll make another speech...

730 SHAVES FROM 1 BLADE
 AMAZING NEW
 BLADE SHARPENER
 New sharpener for all makes of double-edge razor blades performs miracles! "Not necessary to change blades, writes one user. Another says,
 "I have used 1 blade over 700 times."
 RAZOROLL
 really sharpens blades because it strokes on 100 lb.
 or gives them smooth shaving edges. No pressure. Blade held at correct angle and proper pressure - automatically. Just turn crank to sharpen blade. No gears. Will shave. Handsome, compact, sturdy.
 Write for catalog. RAZOROLL COMPANY
 420 North Michigan Avenue, Dept. 104, Chicago, Illinois

SEND NO MONEY! Write today. Pay postman only
 $1.00 plus few cents postage. Use RAZOROLL for 8 days and if you're not delighted with smooth, velvet shaves you get, return RAZOROLL and we'll return your dollar. Hurry - order today. RAZOROLL COMPANY

Czar's Token Is Thibault's Reward

Not long ago, Conrad Thibault, star of "Manhattan Merry-Go-Round," received what appeared to be a routine request for Love's Old Sweet Song. He included the song in his next broadcast and promptly received a token of thanks, a small pin bearing the Imperial Russian crest. An accompanying note explained the listener (a little old lady) had been given the pin by the Czar of Russia, and, since she would be bedridden for the few remaining years of her life, she wanted Thibault to have this precious possession for the enjoyable moments his singing had given her.

Mummy's Always Right

The Sphinx warned Rommel he was on the way out. And as Rommel went backward, the Sphinx rubbed it in, singing, Your Mummy Done Tole You.

—As broadcast by Bob Hawk on "Thanks to the Yanks."

Meet John Londoner

IN THE several years that it has been on the air, one program that I have seldom missed listening to is the BBC program "Meet John Londoner." It is really a sort of British "Vox Pop." In this program you hear ordinary John Londoner in the street, on the train, or in the factory canteen talking to you in his own words and in his own way. He's not reading a script, for there's no such thing in a John Londoner broadcast. Lately Stewart MacPherson, who handles the interviews, has been taking his microphone around to the factories. Since nearly every John and Jane Londoner is now engaged in war work, the factory is the best place to catch them if you want a really representative cross-section of London character and opinion. A new note of cheerfulness and confidence has been evident in recent interviews on the John Londoner show. At first, even when the Eighth Army began its great advance, John Londoner was inclined to be a bit skeptical. Now he's convinced that great things are in the offing. All regard 1943 as the critical year. Half believe it will be the year of victory; others think we may have another year or even more to go. But all are eager to make a tremendous spurt and "finish the job." Many hope for the opening of another offensive front, but are willing to leave the time and place to the leaders. On one point all, whatever their political views, are unanimous—complete confidence in Winston Churchill.

One amusing thing Stewart MacPherson has noticed is that John Londoner is apt to be embarrassed and "mike-shy" until he's told that he will be heard in America. Then he magically loosens up. And that—"loosening an Englishman's tongue"—is a miracle, according to MacPherson.

You can hear "Meet John Londoner" every Tuesday at 5:45 p.m. PWT (repeat at 8:45 p.m.) over London stations GSC (9.58), GRH (9.83), GSL (6.11).

Post-War Television Networks

In a recent address, Niles Trammell, president of the National Broadcasting Company, ventured to predict Coast-to-Coast networks for television after the war. "Television will emerge as one of the great post-war industries," he said. "It is now technically ready and acceptable. We are ready to go ahead when we can get the necessary materials after the war. And we expect television to be networked. That is, we will start on a regional basis, building networks out of New York, Chicago and Los Angeles, and then we will combine the three into a national network." Mr. Trammell also

CURRENTLY working with the Australian Commonwealth overseas broadcasting service, Geoffrey Sawyer, former lawyer and university lecturer, hopes some day to teach and study law in America touched on the role of radio in the international post-war picture. He said NBC may have as many as twenty or thirty short-wave transmitters presenting American news and views to the nations of the world in all languages.

Best Heard Soviet Transmissions

4:40-5:20 a.m. on 6.03 or 9.545, 9.86, 10.445, 15.11, 15.85.
6:15-6:30 a.m. on 15.75.
7:15-7:30 a.m. on 9.545.
2:15-2:40 p.m. on 15.11, 15.23.
3:48-4:23 p.m. on 5.44, 6.98, 9.86, 12.19, 15.11, 15.23.
5:00-5:50 p.m. on 5.44, 9.86, 12.19.
6:15-6:50 p.m. on 15.11, 15.23.
8:15-8:40 p.m. on 15.11, 15.23.

Finland to North America

Because of Finland's steadily decreasing interest in the Axis struggle, her obvious attempts to promote more cordial relations with this country, broadcasts from Lahti are of considerable current interest. Finland's English broadcasts for North America are transmitted as follows (PWT):

6:15-6:48 a.m. over OIX4 (15.19), OIX3 (11.785).
5:25-6:10 p.m. over OIX3 (11.785), OIX2 (9.495).
8:05-8:50 p.m. over OIX3 (11.785), OIX2 (9.495).

English newscasts are broadcast at approximately 6:15 a.m., 5:30 and 8:10 p.m.; Finnish newscasts at approximately 6:38 a.m., 5:40 and 8:25 p.m. PWT. Prior to the opening of each transmission from Finland an identifying signal consisting of a nine-note musical melody is repeated several times.

Personalities of Short Wave

Rooney Pelletier, who came to London as head of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation's London office in the summer of 1941, has been appointed program organizer of the BBC's North American Service. Pelletier, a French-Canadian by birth, with a real understanding of both Britons and Americans, was connected with the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation for nine years. . . . H. C. Ferraby, one of the BBC's leading naval commentators whom I have often quoted on these pages, died recently in an accident at the age of fifty-eight. . . . John Daly, CBS news analyst and narrator on "Report to the Nation," is the new CBS short-wave correspondent in London. Winston Burdett, CBS correspondent in Cairo, has returned to New York for a vacation, his assignment there being taken over by Farnsworth Fowle, formerly the Ankara, Turkey, contact for CBS.

W. A. Sinclair, who has been exposing and explaining Axis propaganda from London since 1939, has discontinued the series. In his last broadcast he stated that everyone now knows that the Axis broadcasters are liars and that they have failed miserably in every attempt to sway or influence English-speaking listeners.

Shorts From the Short Waves

(London's Radio Newsreel)—A Russian detachment recently overtook a peasant walking west and carrying all of his worldly possessions in a huge bag swung over his shoulder. They asked him where he was going. He replied, "To my home at Poltava." "But, comrade, we haven't retaken Poltava yet," the soldiers answered. "That's all right," the old man answered, "you will have taken it by the time I get there" . . . (London's Radio Newsreel)—The Archbishop of Canterbury recently said he was deeply impressed by the piety and devotion of the United Nations' soldiers in his congregations. "They are a real inspiration," he stated . . . (Melbourne)

—Field Officer J. Stewart, the American Red Cross representative who established the Port Moresby depot and who carried Christmas presents to Americans fighting in Papua, is on leave in Australia. He told reporters some of his adventures. He said that seven loads of Christmas presents were delivered by plane to the Buna area. Stewart personally delivered these presents to the American soldiers who were sent in to relieve the Australians' right flank in the Buna area. He traveled by jeep, and four times was tipped out on the journey. Native carriers took the Christmas freight across a river just near the Americans. Although the Allied positions were under machine-gun fire, Field Officer Stewart went through from one to the other, distributing the gifts. He returned to his base with an armful of messages, which the Red Cross arranged to transmit to America . . . (Rome)—

A German U-boat of very unusual type has been carrying out successful night raids on Allied shipping. It is painted silver and you can hardly see it in the moonlight . . . (Moscow)—

The Germans have plundered and destroyed the Kiev Museum of Ukrainian Art, which had one of the finest collections of Ukrainian art treasures. The museum, founded in 1896, had among other things ten thousand pictures by Ukrainian masters in the Division of Painting . . . (Montreal)—As of January 1, 1943, the strength of the Royal Canadian Navy was more than 49,000 men, operating more than five hundred ships; at the outbreak of war the service was composed of 1,700 men and there were only fifteen vessels in operation. Canadian seamen and officers have served in every British naval engagement of the war; they have been in North Africa and with the Americans in the Aleutians. They are sailing the seven seas and they have been conveying goods to Britain since the sixth day that they (Canada) were at war . . . (Berlin)—Tokyo has announced a new alloy which is thirty-three percent lighter than pure aluminum; very elastic and it does not rust. It will be used in the manufacture of Japanese planes. Japan now has an ample supply of both crude and raw material necessary for the manufacture of both military and domestic planes.

Notes Concerning the Stations

AFRICA—When broadcasting to France and the French Empire, the Algiers station is now identified as "Radio France." It transmits on 12.12 daily, 11:00 p.m.-1:00, 4:00-6:00, 10:30-11:30 a.m., 12:00 noon-2:00 and 2:15-2:40 p.m. PWT. News periods in French are broadcast at approximately 11:45 p.m., 4:05, 10:35 a.m., 12:05, 1:55 and 2:15 p.m. PWT. Using the identification AFHQ (Allied Force Headquarters), the Algiers station may still be heard week-days approximately 3:30 to 4:45 p.m. PWT; Sundays, 11:30 a.m. to 12:00 noon PWT. "Radio Congo Belge's" French transmission, 11:30 a.m.-1:30 p.m. PWT, is broadcast from Leopoldville, Belgian Congo, on the following frequencies: 17.775, 11.72 and 9.62 megs.

EUROPE—Radio Denmark (9.71) is said to be operating again daily from 12:15 to 12:35 p.m. PWT. "Radio Eirean," the Irish short-wave station, is still operating daily, 5:00-6:30 a.m. and 10:30-11:00 a.m. on 17.84, 2:05-2:25 p.m. PWT on 9.595 megs. News in English is given at 10:45 a.m. and 2:10 p.m. PWT. Berlin is broadcasting an extra English news period now daily 12:00 noon-12:30 p.m. PWT over DZC (10.29). The Vatican transmissions to North America are now broadcast Sundays and Thursdays, 6:30-6:45 p.m. PWT, over HVJ on a frequency of 5.970 megs. London's North American Service is now heard best over GSC (9.58) but it can be expected that GRG (11.68) will provide increasingly good reception with the approach of spring. GSD (11.75) will probably be put back into operation in the North American Service before long. On evenings when European reception is poor, GRH (9.83) often provides the best program service from London.

ASIA-AUSTRALIA—VLW6 (9.68), Perth, West Australia, rebroadcasts the BBC news in English at 6:00 a.m., followed by Australian news at 6:15 a.m. PWT. The Chinese station on 6.105 which is broadcasting daily to 5:50 a.m. PWT, has been identified as XGAP, Peiping, formerly on 10.24 megs. News in English from India, of considerable importance at the moment, can best be heard at 5:00 a.m. on 9.67, and at 6:45 p.m. PWT, on 9.59 or 7.26 megs. The latter portion of Tokyo's daily broadcast to Europe, 12:00 noon to 3:30 p.m. PWT, over JWV (7.257) and JLG2 (9.505) is being heard with increasing signal strength. The English news bulletin at 3:00 p.m. PWT is usually quite intelligible.

THE AMERICAS—The new Bermuda station, ZFA2 (6.122), broadcasts Thursdays only, 5:00-5:45 p.m. PWT. The programs of "Radio Nacional," Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, are broadcast currently, 12:00 noon-2:35 p.m. to Europe, over PRL8 (11.72) and 2:40-8:05 p.m. (7:00-8:05 p.m. in English to N. A.), over PRL7 (9.505). An unidentified Latin station (thought to be in Uruguay) is broadcasting on 11.84 megs nightly. It seems to relay the programs of Buenos Aires standard band station "Radio Belgrano" (LR3).

HUB (4.76), San Salvador, El Salvador, broadcasts an English program Wednesdays, 7:30-8:20 p.m. PWT. Associated Broadcasters of San Francisco have asked for a permit to build a second 50,000-watt short-wave station. They operate KWID at present. The Crosley Corporation of Cincinnati wishes to build a 200,000-watt short-wave station.

Bob Hope Variety Show

BOB HOPE'S radio variety show for Pepsodent is the gipsy of the airlines. It travels the nation, then jumps to Alaska. And for a definite purpose — patriotism! Long before America was actually at war, Bob and his gang sensed the servicemen's need for entertainment; and they were among the first to hit the road and play Army camps.

To Bob, these camp tours are a series of Shangri-las because of the men's enthusiastic response. And they are that also to the men hungry for fun in the midst of war's grim business.

Behind the fun, however, lies an almost unbelievable amount of hard work. Hope writers pound out gags on trains, buses and planes. Rehearsals have to be conducted on the road, and guest stars must travel to the point where the program will be broadcast. When Bob took part of his troupe to Alaska, the rest of the cast jumped to Seattle and awaited their return. But ask the boys in uniform who's helping to win this man's war. They'll shout in chorus—"Hope!"

AIRMINDED is Frances Langford, songstress on Bob Hope's radio show. After the war, she intends to own and operate her own plane. Already has forty hours of flying-time to her credit as a co-pilot. True southern belle, Frances is as lovely as the songs she sings. When you hear—and see—her give "White Cliffs of Dover" you are sure you've found the bluebird of happiness

WHEN bigger and broader highways to laughter are built, Bob Hope will undoubtedly have a share in their building. 20,000,000 persons listen regularly to his broadcast for Pepsodent. And to date, 3,000,000 more have bought his book, "They Got Me Covered." As for traveling, Marco Polo was a piker when it comes to the number of trips Bob's made to entertain U. S. servicemen

FIRST love of Jerry (Yehudi) Colonna was the trombone, for his parents were music-loving Italians. A guest appearance on Fred Allen's show brought his comic talents to light. After that he matched wits with Walter O'Keefe and Bing Crosby, finally landing his present berth on Bob Hope's show. Jerry's a native Bostonian

ANTEDILUVIAN headgear, outlandish clothes and a mobile face that can look as sharp as a lemon and twice as sour, are the props that Barbara Jo Allen used in originating her famous Vera Vague personality on radio and screen. Her Vague characterization was born after watching and mimicking chairman of a woman's club

FRIDAY'S child and born on the thirteenth to boot hasn't been any handicap to Skinnay Ennis. In fact, he's one of fortune's favorites. The late Hal Kemp was his roommate at the University of North Carolina, where he started on his musical career. Skinnay accompanies Hope on all his camp tours, including one to Alaska

ON visit to husband Oleg Cassini at Fort Riley, Kansas, 20th Century-Fox star Gene Tierney didn't wear tailored suits all the time. Left: Glamour pose taken at camp

GENE'S smart black frock made a hit with men at Saturday night canteen dance. Above: She poses with one of the Fort's canteen mothers, Mrs. Brown

BECAUSE of her friendly manner, men and girls at camp made her one of them, called her by her first name, forgot she was a star. Above: Gene poses with Corporal Ben Morison, camp photographer HAPPIEST man at Fort Riley was Gene's husband, Oleg Cassini, the day Missus arrived at camp for a visit. Right: It's a toss-up as to which looks the happier!

If Your Man's in Camp-

Star Gene Tierney Gives Girls Some Timely Tips

WHEN Gene Tierney, 20th Century-Fox star, returned from her trip to Fort Riley, where her husband, Oleg Cassini, is stationed, we asked her for some do's and don't's that we might pass on to other girls who are planning similar trips. And here are the big things that Gene stressed:

1. Never be embarrassed about paying your own way with a serviceman. It's done in the best of circles.
2. Be true to your man in service. Keep his spirits up by letting him know you are. That tip came to Gene from a man who had seen action at Pearl Harbor. He told her it was the best morale-builder in the world.
3. Remember that accommodations for women who visit camps are simple. Don't expect hotel service. If emergencies arise, be prepared to do your own laundry and your man's too.
4. If your man has managed to secure a makeshift apartment, be prepared to cook meals for him and his buddies. The simplest home atmosphere, where they can sit around and relax, does wonders for them.
5. Take some pretty dresses and high-heeled shoes. The men are tired of suits and brogans.
6. If you're smart, you'll take work to occupy your time while your man is busy.
7. No matter what you see and hear at camp, don't talk about it. Keep your own counsel.
8. Don't ask for special favors. Be a good scout, and be sure you have money enough for expenses and, if possible, some to spare.
9. Go with the one idea of bringing him happiness. Write daily when you return home.

WHEN gang asked Gene to do something special for them, she stepped to mike, sang with Cavalry Recruiting Training Center Band. Maybe you think Oleg wasn't proud of her!

MAKING friends easily is a priceless gift to have on a camp visit, and it's one of Gene's chief assets. Above: She enjoys a joke with camp hostess, Mrs. Buffington

AT HOME AGAIN

WHILE on her visit, Gene managed to rent a makeshift apartment, cooked meals for Oleg, several of his pals. When she went back to Hollywood (above) star invaded kitchen, tried camp recipes on cook

BUT cooking without her man to appreciate meals served isn't so good. After studio chores are done, Gene putters about house, tinkers with clock, makes plans for next visit

BEDTIME, above, finds La Tierney in a mellow mood. She has just finished her daily letter to Oleg, now relaxes, tries to read, but dreams mostly of day when peace will bring her husband home

"I was a 'single' wife"

HOW A YOUNG MARRIED WOMAN OVERCAME THE "ONE NEGLECT" THAT OFTEN WRECKS ROMANCE

1. Ours was the Perfect Marriage . . . at first. But slowly, gradually, a strangeness grew up between us. I couldn't believe Jim's love had cooled so fast!

2. One day, Miss R., a nurse from my home town, found me crying and worried the whole thing out of me. "Don't be offended, darling," she began, shyly. "I've seen this happen before. Many wives have lost their husbands' love through their neglect of feminine hygiene (intimate personal cleanliness)."

3. Then she told what she'd heard a doctor advise. Lysol disinfectant. "You see," she went on. "Lysol won't harm sensitive vaginal tissues—just follow the easy directions. Lysol cleanses thoroughly and deodorizes. No wonder this famous germicide is the mainstay of thousands of women for feminine hygiene."

4. Ever since, I've used Lysol. It's so economical, so easy to use, gives me such a wonderful feeling of personal daintiness. And—here's the most wonderful thing—Jim and I are once again happy as doves.

Check this with your Doctor

Lysol is NON-CAUSTIC—gentle and efficient in proper dilution. Contains no free alkali. It is not carbolic acid. EFFECTIVE—a powerful germicide, active in presence of organic matter (such as mucus, serum, etc.). SPREADING—Lysol solutions spread and thus virtually search out germs in deep crevices. ECONOMICAL—small bottle makes almost 4 gallons of solution for feminine hygiene. CLEANLY ODOR—disappears after use. LASTING—Lysol keeps full strength indefinitely, no matter how often it is un-corked.

Art Baker's Popular Radio Program Proves

SUCCESS of the "People Are Funny" show has been built largely on director Art Baker's warmly human approach to the public. Born in New York's teeming Bowery, he was a choir leader at sixteen, learned early about putting an audience at ease. Right: Mr. Baker introduces Army and Navy men before they begin "outside-man" duties

TEX COOPER, a movie cowboy in youth, wasn't a bit averse to posing in role of strong man. Donning the Napoleon tricorne above, Tex struck a stance he considered typical of strong man, and was thrilled at opportunity

PEOPLE ARE FUNNY —

"PEOPLE ARE FUNNY" is probably the most unique show on the airwaves today. Reason for this is, it creates funny situations to test people's reactions. Furthermore, the funny situation isn't the end of the gag, but just the beginning. By the time the show is over, those who hear—and see—it are convinced that people ARE funny! Presented every Friday night at 9:30 EWT over NBC by makers of Kool Cigarettes and Sir Walter Raleigh Tobacco, the show is the brain-child of John Guedel, who owns, writes and produces it. Guedel proceeds on premise that all people do extraordinary things when faced with extraordinary situations. Fifteen minutes before airtime, three members of the audience, headed by Irvin S. Atkins, quizmaster psychologist, are asked to take part in performance by acting as outside investigators in whatever wild and zany stunts have been secretly planned. Once the show hits the airwaves, Art Baker is in charge of all that transpires. Baker not only proves that people are funny but that they are a heap of fun!

Photos by Bruce Bailey and NBC Hollywood

ATKINS finds girls a little more shy about posing, finally persuaded Rosalie Grainer (above) to give her version of a glamour girl before camera. "I guess all girls like to think they are glamorous," she said when queried

Men in the armed services are buying more Pepsodent than any other brand. It takes over one-fourth of all the Pepsodent we can make just to supply these men in uniform with their favorite dentifrice. They come first—and rightly so—and they will continue to get all the Pepsodent Paste and Powder they want, even if the rest of us have to use it more sparingly for the duration.

The biggest number of civilian users in history want Pepsodent, too. But wartime limitations on production make it impossible for us to make enough Pepsodent to supply this record demand. So there's a shortage—temporarily, at least. Don't blame your druggist if you can't get Pepsodent the first time you ask for it. Try again in a few days when his next allotment comes in.

Keep your smile bright . . . but

DON'T WASTE PEPSODENT

1. MEASURE out only as much Pepsodent Paste as you need—about 3/4 inch is enough. Squeeze end or roll tube from bottom. Save Pepsodent from washing down the drain by moistening brush before applying paste.

2. POUR Pepsodent Powder into palm of your hand. Do not sprinkle it on the brush. Enough powder to cover a five-cent piece is plenty. Then dab (don't rub) moistened tooth brush in powder to pick it up.

3. KEEP your tooth brushes serviceable by hanging them up to dry after use. Wilted, soggy tooth brushes are inefficient, waste dentifrice. Use a good tooth brush, take good care of it.

4. DENTAL science knows no more effective, safe ingredients than those in Pepsodent. They are so safe, so effective, in fact, that only a little Pepsodent is needed to make your smile far brighter.

WHAT'S COOKING

By Georgia Scott

SORT of work turned out by defense worker, above, depends in a large measure on what goes into the lunch-box her mother packs for her daily

HEARTY sandwiches with varied fillings, appetizing salads made with real mayonnaise, soup, fruit dessert and beverage give balanced diet

REMEMBER the good old school-days when you trudged merrily along carrying lunch-box under one arm and schoolbooks in the other. When lunch hour arrived, chatter began in earnest with, "What are you having for lunch today?" or "I'll trade you an oatmeal cookie for a piece of your mom's delicious chocolate layer-cake." If your mother was a good cook you were always the favorite with the gang.

Today, however, the big 'uns as well as the children are members of the lunch-box brigade. Men and women workers in defense factories located in out-of-the-way districts must carry their lunches with them. They must have foods that are nourishing and digestible.

If you're the lady of the house who must make the lunches, it's up to you to see that those lunches are varied, tempting and nutritious. Don't throw a hunk of meat between two slices of bread and let it go at that. You wouldn't enjoy eating it, would you? Keep in mind that the food that goes into that lunch-box is necessary to keep our men and women well and strong, so they can work efficiently to produce the materials Uncle Sam needs for victory.

Plan every lunch with the same care you'd devote to a full-course meal for a special guest. Wrap all foods neatly in wax paper. Rule out delicacies that are too moist or contain unnecessary frills. Cut sandwiches in easy-to-handle sizes, and above all strive for variety—you know how tiresome it is to eat the same dull foods each day. Put some hot soup in the thermos one day. Then another time, make a tempting salad—put salad in a glass jar that can be tightly covered. Use different kinds of bread for the sandwiches—enriched white, sour rye, all bran, whole wheat, or as a change from the ordinary, try the orange honey bread recipe given herewith.

Cookies and candy are energy suppliers, too, so be sure to add a "sweet" touch to the meal. Here's a recipe for macaroon peppies that provide just the right finishing touch for a hungry worker's dessert. Put a few extra in the box—to munch on during the long afternoon.

Macaroon Peppies (Sugar Saving)

- ¾ cup white corn syrup
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- ¼ cup flour
- 1 cup shredded coconut
- 1½ cups vitamin fortified wheat flakes
- 1 cup chopped nutmeats

SAFE NEW WAY IN FEMININE HYGIENE GIVES Continuous Action For Hours!

It is appalling that so many women still risk happiness—even health—because they do not have the up-to-date facts about modern feminine hygiene!

Many who think they know, have only half-knowledge! And so, they make the mistake of relying on weak ineffective home-made mixtures. Or worse, they risk using over-strong solutions of acids, which can easily burn and injure delicate tissues.

Today, well-informed women everywhere rely on Zonitors, the new safe-convenient feminine hygiene way!

Zonitors are dainty, snow-white suppositories! Non-greasy. They spread a protective coating and kill germs instantly at contact. Deodorize, by actually destroying odor, instead of temporarily "masking" it. Give continuous action for hours!

Powerful, yet so safe for delicate tissues! Non-poisonous, non-burning. Zonitors help promote gentle healing. No apparatus; nothing to mix. At all druggists.

TIPS ON TEETH

By Edith Hampton

BEAUTIFUL teeth are not altogether a matter of luck. You may be one of the more fortunate femmes who have been blessed with pretty white porcelains, but take our word for it, you and you alone are directly to blame if your teeth are not in the best of condition. Those teeth represent the food you eat, your general health and the care you give to them. So take heed while we go on a tangent that will help you "win the cup" through the medium of mouth loveliness.

With so many different, pleasant-tasting dentifrices on the market today, it's fun, not duty, to care for teeth the right way. It doesn't matter whether you use powder, liquid or paste, the important item is that you do the brush-work regularly. Not so long ago dentists complained that people didn't clean their teeth regularly. Now their cry is "Don't scrub too hard." Teeth are sensitive, and to clean them properly you must be gentle. Use the shimmy method in brushing. Shimmy down on the upper teeth and upward on the lower. Start at the gum-line and gently shimmy the brush to the biting surfaces. To be sure you clean each and every tooth, think of each individually rather than as a whole set. It is sometimes difficult to clean between teeth; so to make your clean-sprees complete, make dental floss an important step. Use it gently, too; don't yank the string or you'll only injure your gums and bring on recession. After you've thoroughly cleansed your teeth, swish some refreshing mouth-wash around in your mouth to insure a sweet-smelling breath and to clear away the last vestiges of food. Keep a small bottle of mouth-wash with you during the day to refresh your mouth after meals. Chewing-gum is another breath sweetener, so if you can chew quietly, go ahead.

As we told you previously, the food you eat determines the strength of your teeth. For strong, healthy teeth, you need fats, minerals, proteins and a minimum amount of carbohydrates. Raw fruits, vegetables, whole-grain products, dates, raisins, honey and other natural sweet foods are necessary for continued tooth health. Be sure your diet contains plenty of milk, butter, eggs, liver and other meats. If your teeth are the "soft" kind, go easy on pastry, candy and the like.

Just because you haven't a toothache and do give your biters all the care in the world is no reason to shun the dentist. You should visit him at least every six months regardless, just to ease your mind about cavities. It's pleasant to hear that teeth are in perfect condition. A little time in the dentist's chair may save you worry and money later. With so many dentists gone "to the wars" it's important that you keep in touch with yours. When he does leave, you can be certain his practise will be left in capable hands, so don't be afraid to make an appointment with the man he suggests.

By Robert Bagar

AN INTERESTING story came through the Associated Press wires recently. The piece, by the press service's Tom Chase, begins, "Serge Koussevitzky can look at a picture of himself conducting and tell what composition is being played."

Then Mr. Chase goes on to say, "The world-famous leader of the Boston Symphony Orchestra studied a series of pictures in the backstage Green Room at Symphony Hall (Boston). The gray-haired head was down-bent, and the marvelously expressive hands slowly turned toward the snapshots."

It develops that the pictures had all been made unknown to the maestro, but he scanned every one and told exactly what work he was conducting at the time it was made and, in fact, what part of what number. That is an accomplishment.

Yet if that is an accomplishment, I can think of others still greater. I know a trumpet-player's wife, for instance, who can tell what her husband is playing even if he doesn't blow notes. All she does is look at his face. The secret, she tells me, lies in just how much he puffs up his cheeks.

Only once did she make a mistake. She had been away visiting friends for a week. On her return, she walked into the living-room and there was her husband going through a routine of "silent" playing. She tiptoed up to him, and before he had a chance to greet her, she said, "Darling, that was the big, rising crescendo in 'Cloudburst' from Ferde Grofe's 'Grand Canyon Suite,' wasn't it?"

Friend husband put down his trumpet, looked at his wife with a resigned air and said, "No, darling, that was a pair of abscesses, one on each side of my face, see? Tomorrow I go to the dentist." Well, you can't be always right, you know.

Sometimes this lady could even tell when her husband was blowing wrong "silent" notes. There would be something unnatural about his facial stance, so to speak, something awkward. Once, she prides herself in relating, she told him off for missing one single note in a long passage of thirty seconds. But by that time she had become quite expert. She could practically hear the notes before he played them, even though he "played them silently."

The writer has the greatest admiration for the eminent conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Certainly he is one of the greatest conductors in the world. And that elite society has a very limited membership, very limited.

But it does seem a little implausible for a conductor to know just what music he is playing by merely looking at pictures of himself. Think how many gestures such a conductor would have to have memorized. And, in the first place, how many gestures can he think up, anyway? Wouldn't some of these gestures be the same in the Debussy "La Mer" and the Wagner "Siegfried Idyll"? Maybe they would be the same—and the laws of probability are certainly with the writer on that one—for many parts of many numbers. How good would Dr. Koussevitzky's powers be then?

As a matter of fact, I have seen—as well as heard—the noted batonist on too many occasions not to have learned that he has his clichés in podial deportment. How much can you vary in position and gesture and manual and facial nuance on the podium? I have always thought that simplicity, clearness of beat, getting over your intentions to the musicians in the simplest possible manner were the major aspects of a conductor's performing equipment.

At any rate, I wasn't there when the picture in question was made, nor when Dr. Koussevitzky played auto-interpret. All I can say now is, "Could be."

The Maestro's Return

Arturo Toscanini closes the winter season of the NBC Symphony with the concert of April 11. The Maestro actually conducts the last two concerts of the orchestra's series. This particular season the events have been divided evenly between Mr. Toscanini and Leopold Stokowski, each of whom has done twelve performances.

In previous years the NBC band used to have many guest conductors, with Mr. Toscanini functioning as chief director. Some of the well-known musicians who have led the organization are Pierre Monteaux, Desire Defauw (recently appointed conductor of the Chicago Symphony), Adrian Boult, Artur Rodzinski, Bernardino Molinari, Georg Szell and others.

The concerts of the NBC Symphony, on the whole, have been eminently rewarding affairs, proving that the orchestra deserves an important place among its fellows. Not a few of them were given in Carnegie Hall, Mr. Toscanini conducting, of course, and these, as well as those coming from Studio 8-H of the NBC, were treated by the New York critics as regular music events, despite the fact that they were essentially directed to a huge radio audience.

In so far as can be told from the present set-up the NBC Symphony is here to stay. Its function is a noble one. Its purposes serious. The music it has performed is on a par with the best that one hears in any symphonic auditorium throughout the land.

An Opera Season Closes

The Metropolitan Opera Company will broadcast from Chicago on April 3, which city it will have visited for the first time since 1910. This year's tour of the company, by the way, is less extensive than formerly, transportation problems being what they are. There may be one more broadcast after that, when the company plays its extra-season week at Easter time.

In any case, the operatic season has been a highly successful one, undoubtedly the best given under the present management. There have been operas that have won extraordinary praise, like Richard Strauss' "Salome," Verdi's "La Traviata," Moussorgsky's "Boris Godounov," several of the Wagnerian music dramas, and so on. All in all, the Metropolitan can look back on this season's achievements with justifiable pride.

POPULAR MUSIC

THAT well-known mixed choir heard on NBC's "Your All-Time Hit Parade" Friday evenings, the Lyn Murray Singers, once started out as a male chorus. That was several years ago. However, when many of the pieces they performed called for the tone colors obtainable through including women's voices, the male group was augmented gradually until it achieved its present size.

The director of the gifted group was born and also educated in London. His father, a violinist, started him out on music. It is said that the elder Murray, a stern, if precise, man, used to inculcate principles of rhythm in his son by tapping him on the head with his bow.

That, of course, might easily have been interpreted as being disciplinary. But the youngster developed a fine sense of rhythm, anyway, which proves the sagacity of his parent's methods.

Young Mr. Murray began his musical career in Philadelphia. He had had, mind you, quite a fling at the sailor's life, voyaging around the globe as an ordinary seaman. Right in the middle of advanced studies in navigation he switched to newspapering when he took a position on the Philadelphia Public Ledger. Not too much later he joined a song-and-dance act there. Then he put in a number of weeks as an actor, and finally he arrived at Newport News, Va., where he suddenly broke out as a radio man.

The radio studio was located in one of that town's hotels. Whenever Mr. Murray and his collaborators lacked the rent money they would invite the manager of the hotel to sing a number over the air. He was so grateful each time that he forgot to ask for his rent.

If his schedule were not such a busy one, he would surely—he says—devote himself to composing. But despite all the work he does, he has found time to initiate a string quartet and an orchestral suite. He promises to complete these one day. In the meantime, he bounces around trying to keep up with himself, as well as his choral work. He is pretty sure that he doesn't want to write things of no permanent value. He is in dead earnest about his creative ability. When his work schedule slows down, as it will some day soon, he will turn all of his attention on the writing of new pieces. As for now, he says, "I don't want to write things that are merely 'off the cuff.'"

FM Helps the Law

FREQUENCY modulation, as most FM devotees know, counts versatility among its other merits. The noise-free, crystal-clear broadcasting that thousands of listeners enjoy daily is only a single aspect of this new radio system which today finds many jobs to be done in the field of war-time communications.

Aside from its military uses where small, powerful transmitters must be shifted quickly from place to place or installed in moving vehicles, FM is also helping to preserve law and order on the home front. The police of many cities and even a number of states have adopted FM during the past two years. The latest large installation to begin operation is now functioning for the state police of Michigan. Every patrol car on the state highways has been equipped with FM transmitting and receiving units.

Because of this new two-way system, officers traveling anywhere within Michigan's 56,000 square miles can now flip a switch and talk, via FM, with their nearest post, even though it may be forty miles away. The conversation is as clear and swift as if the men on either end were riding side by side. It makes no difference whether the car is standing still or pursuing bandits at seventy miles an hour. The contact is perfect and, if circumstances require, several moving patrol vehicles can even talk among themselves, thus making for ideal coordination.

Ways That It Helps

Before FM made such instantaneous communication possible, the Michigan police radio system was a one-way affair that used a high-powered AM transmitter to relay orders to police cars without any assurance that they would be able to carry them out. Even after the assigned mission had been completed, it was necessary for the police officer to spend a certain amount of time hunting up a telephone over which they could report back to headquarters. Michigan officials estimate that the adoption of two-way FM has brought about a thirty percent increase of service to the public without any enlargement of personnel.

In the words of Oscar G. Olander, Michigan state police commissioner, "the system places a communication station right at the scene of every crime, automobile accident or serious fire."

Proof of FM's value, not only in Michigan but wherever such two-way installations are functioning, is found in the lives saved at serious auto smash-ups, simply because police officers were able to summon medical aid in time. Arriving at the scene of an accident, the police immediately determine whether an ambulance and doctors are needed. If so, their dispatch is requested at once by FM radio. Formerly much time was lost in reaching a telephone, or by attempting to move severely injured persons to the nearest hospital, sometimes with fatal results.

Not only are all posts and mobile units of the Michigan state police linked by FM but key war plants are also hooking their protection departments in on the system so as to bring aid more readily in the event of disaster or sabotage. It is important to note that the transmitting-receiving equipment in the patrol cars operates from batteries and can be made to function perfectly from the scene of any disaster which may have Michigan is not the only state to use FM in this fashion. Connecticut led the way in 1940, changing its entire radio installation over to FM, so that any patrol car on any road in the state is able to converse two-way, whenever necessary, with the state capital at Hartford. Recently eleven more towns and cities in Connecticut purchased FM equipment for local police communications. They will also be linked up with the state police system.

Education by FM

Last month this page commented on the special educational FM stations that the Federal Communications Commission permits schools, universities and similar institutions to operate in the regular FM band, and which may be heard by any local FM listener. Five special channels have been set aside by Washington for the use of these non-commercial stations.

One of the pioneer educational FM outlets in the country, WBOE, operated by the Cleveland board of education, has supplied us with an up-to-date list of authorized school FM transmitters.

In addition to WBOE, it includes KALW, San Francisco schools; KSDS, San Diego schools; WBEZ, Chicago public schools; WIUC, University of Illinois; WMBE, Memphis public schools; WNYE, New York City board of education; and the Buffalo (N. Y.) public schools, whose call letters have not yet been assigned. A number of other educational groups throughout the country are seriously interested in the establishment of their own non-commercial stations, but, because of war-time equipment shortages, must defer their plans.

The Cleveland board of education, commenting on the operation of WBOE, states: "Because we have FM radio sets in every one of our 150 schools, thus blanketing the Cleveland area, we have had an unusual opportunity to test the quality of FM in a variety of situations, and, having broadcast on AM earlier, we can make a reasonably objective comparison. The comments we have received from teachers and principals concerning frequency-modulation reception would indeed make FM boosters blush."

The New York board of education, when announcing the debut of its FM facilities, declared through a representative, "We have high hopes that after victory we shall be able to develop our potential facilities for the schools and people of the city."

Women's Work

Little by little, women have been taking over more and more of the jobs in FM stations throughout the country—everything from program-planning and announcing to the technical operation of studios and transmitters. Now, however, comes word of an FM station run entirely by two women.

W67B, the Westinghouse FM outlet at Boston, boasts Miss Ruth Sherrill as its program director and announcer. She sits inside the FM studio with a big glass panel separating her from the control engineer, Miss Muriel Kennedy. The two girls keep W67B on the air for six hours a day, 3 to 9 p.m., offering noise-free programs for listeners throughout eastern Massachusetts. Miss Sherrill, formerly on the stage, has filled roles in NBC daytime serials and was a member of the cast of the Broadway hit "The Man Who Came to Dinner." Miss Kennedy, a licensed radio engineer, began her technical career with a firm manufacturing radio tubes. Since then, she has studied electrical engineering at Columbia and Harvard universities. Three years ago she took a secretarial job at WBZ, Boston, and in short order became one of the station's regular studio engineers. When WBZ opened its FM adjunct, W67B, Miss Kennedy was given her new assignment.

Women are today needed for many posts in the field of radio communications. Most important, of course, are radio jobs in war industry. Information on training and available opportunities can be secured from your local office of the United States Employment Service. The engineering departments of the major networks are also glad to hear from women with any radio training.

W47NY Asks Questions

Because of the response to a recent questionnaire sent by W47NY, New York City, to its listeners, the station has announced that beginning with the March issue it will expand its monthly program booklet to include detailed information on musical selections and composers presented on its daily broadcasts. Listeners have indicated willingness to pay a one dollar subscription fee, partially covering the annual expense of preparing and mailing the booklet.

W47NY reports that "confirmation of what had been only a belief about FM listener preferences was brought out by the questionnaire returns, namely, that good music holds first place, with light classic and symphonic programs in first and second positions, and instrumental, dance and operatic music following in that order.

"Because W47NY is the only FM station in New York City broadcasting full time (15½ hours daily), the strain on its equipment during present times, with priorities on critical materials what they are, has raised the question of the advisability of continuing these hours. But, if the remarks by its listeners as set down in the questionnaire are to be heeded, W47NY will remain on the air full time as long as its equipment will function properly."

Mary Margaret McBride's Rebellion at Being Typed Opened a New World of Adventure and Travel to Her Invisible Audience of the Airwaves

"CHARM—that indefinable something. If you have it, you need nothing else; if you don't have it, it doesn't much matter what else you have." That best describes radio's gift to the noonday world. Mary Margaret McBride! Each day at one o'clock EWT countless persons settle themselves in a quiet corner to have their "Lady Aladdin" bring to them the modern wonders of the world over the ether waves.

Pretty, pink-checked Mary Margaret, as everyone in the NBC building calls her, is a plump, jovial woman, whose sparkling spontaneity has brought her those millions of loyal listeners. Her program, famous for its informality, has been achieved sticking to her "stock in trade," newspaper work. No rehearsals, no script, she keeps an extemporaneous bubbling tempo day after day. So rare is she in quality, and so unusual in treatment of her radio public, that the University of Missouri presented her with an award for Distinguished Service to Journalism—for preserving newspaper traditions in radio.

Mary Margaret has no act—she is completely natural. She gestures with her hands and uses them to show how big or how small something might be. Only television really could bring this sparkling woman completely to her audience. She's as individual as the manner in which she came to be on the air. Trying to recover from the depression's grasp, Mary Margaret accepted an offer to be auditioned along with forty other writers for a sustained program. Her unusual voice and manner of speech attracted the studio executives and they decided to try a new type of program. She was engaged to play the role of an elderly type of doting person. She wouldn't broadcast under her own name, because at the time she was woman's editor of a newspaper syndicate. She was afraid radio work might interfere with her career as a writer. After deliberation, the studio gave her the name of Martha Deane. Martha for the Biblical character who sees and talks about everything, and Deane for baseball's remarkable "Dizzy," who at that time was hurling his famous curves.

After the fourth program of telling the radio public anecdotes and trivia about her children and grandchildren, she rebelled and, in a dramatic and memorable moment, greeted her invisible audience with, "Stand by and listen, all of you! I have no children and no grandchildren! I am killing off this bogus family they have given me. Instead, I am going to tell you about the places I have seen and the people I have talked to. I'll probably be fired before the next broadcast, so if you don't hear me again you'll know why."

The control-room went into a buzz, frantic signals to Martha Deane went unheeded, studio personnel mopped their brows, but on and on she went telling about interviews and celebrities. Before the studio got around to its own type of court-martial, letters were pouring in and, amazingly, most of them from men. Husbands wrote from near and far telling the studio how wonderful it was for their wives to have new conversation. What a welcome change from the usual reports of troubled children and household woes. Adventure, travel, listening to the great and near great had brought her listeners a new world.

When Miss McBride changed networks in 1940 she began using her own name, Mary Margaret McBride. Six years ago, when she went to Europe on the airship Hindenburg, thousands of her followers called the studio often and frantically until her safe arrival was announced.

Vincent Connelly has been Mary Margaret's announcer for eight years, and he is her perfect partner for balance. He listens to her experiences and genially reminds her what they are on the air for when she lets her enthusiasm forget the clock or her sponsors.

Almost every Mary Margaret fan knows she is a product of the Middle West. Born on a farm near Paris, Missouri, she was taught Latin and Greek by her grandfather, a Baptist minister. She went to William Woods College, an institution endowed and named by her aunt. After a year her aunt laid before her a plan for educating her for the position of dean. But Mary had other plans. She told her aunt about the journalistic career she had dreamed of. Disappointed and unhappy, Mrs. Woods withdrew her support, and Mary worked her way through the remaining college years. When she graduated she took a job on a Cleveland newspaper but before long found herself in New York.

Her unusual brightness soon drew big assignments for her. She had an unusual knack of meeting people and getting them to talk about themselves. Soon she was meeting all the celebrities visiting this country. Her magazine writing was beginning to reap large rewards and before long she was devoting all of her time to those fields.

Miss McBride went to Europe some years ago to interview royal personages. She made her headquarters in Rome, and often at dinner several ex-kings and crown princes would be seated at her table. She did a story called "The Greek Royal Family." Prince Christopher of Greece was her collaborator. She also wrote "Paris Is a Woman's Town" and "London Is a Man's Town." Her book "Beer and Skittles" was a German story.

Mary Margaret had her mother with her on these trips. She always delights in telling her friends how this charming, devout little lady, who never before had left her native state, was quite unimpressed by all the celebrities and the places she visited.

Hollywood has not seen much of Mary Margaret. She did go out and write pulp-paper biographies of all the famous stars. Millions of copies of these were sold. Her latest book, "America For Me," contains much about her methods and experiences as an interviewer.

THE MARY MARGARET McBRIDE ROSE, the "All-American Winner for 1943," was named after NBC's "Columnist of the Air." Only two other women have been so honored. They were the late Amelia Earhart and Pearl Buck

Enormously sentimental, she cuddles her various tributes close to her heart. Shyly she admits that when the Government asked for waste paper she went to the storage-house and turned over three million fan letters that she had been saving. But it's Stella Karn, her lifelong friend and business manager, who reveals the honorary awards that have been paid Miss McBride. MOVIE-RADIO GUIDE presented Mary Margaret with a bronze award and issued a special edition in her honor. Her statuette is among her most valued possessions. Tears come to her eyes as she recalls the emotion she felt when this magazine considered her "Lady number one of the air."

Governor Lloyd Stark of Missouri proclaimed November 22 "Mary Margaret McBride Day." It was the first time a day was named for any living person. This honor was bestowed upon her for writing her favorite book, "How Dear to My Heart." With loving hands she wrote the story of life on the Missouri prairies and her childhood memories.

Her radio listeners were delighted but not surprised when the flower voted All-American Winner for 1943 by the All-American Rose Council was named "Mary Margaret McBride."

Mary Margaret McBride may be heard Monday through Friday over WEAf at 1:00 p.m. EWT.

Love, Laughter, Thrills and Tears—All Co-Mingle in These Spring Entertainment Features From Hollywood

ROY ROGERS and Virginia Grey (above) are tops in "Idaho," a musical western starring the King of Cowboys. The picture is chock full of thrills that will delight all youngsters; but grown-ups who love this land of America will find much that has brought it present-day world leadership

"IDAHO"

Cast: Roy Rogers, Smiley Burnette, Bob Nolan and the Sons of the Pioneers, Virginia Grey, Harry J. Shannon, Ona Munson, Dick Purcell, Onslow Stevens, Arthur Hohl, Hal Taliaferro, and the Robert Mitchell Boychoir. A Republic picture, produced and directed by Joseph Kane. Original screenplay by Roy Chanslor and Olive Cooper.

"IDAHO" has all the flavor of a fine western, plus some good singing, and a well-defined plot that holds the interest right up to the last fade-out. Judge Grey (Harry J. Shannon), a reformed ex-bank-robber, makes a hobby of rehabilitating wayward kids from the tough gangs of cities on his J-Bar Ranch in Idaho. Terry, his daughter (Virginia Grey), has two friendly rivals for her affections—Roy Rogers, state ranger, and Bob Nolan, his superior officer. Things commence to pop when two crooks, Spike (Arthur Hohl) and Duke (Dick Purcell), find the judge at his ranch and confront him with his past as Tom Allison, ex-badman, demanding that he give them shelter. When the judge refuses, they knock him out and escape, with Rogers and his Rangers in hot pursuit. Frog (Smiley Burnette) aids crooks unwittingly when they flag him on the trail, and he takes them to Belle Bonner's (Ona Munson) notorious gambling dive. Trouble stacks up when the crooks tell Belle who Judge Grey really is, for Belle has long feared the judge, who is attempting to put her out of business because of the bad influence her resort has on the town and countryside. Belle uses her knowledge of the judge's past as a whip, offering to keep his true identity a secret if he will abandon his reform campaign. When he refuses, she decides to frame him. The final trick that brings the scales to balance for justice holds a breath-taking thrill.

WHAT MOVIE-GOERS CAN EXPECT: A top Western that combines admirably old-time days and tactics with the present.

"THE HUMAN COMEDY" is a timely view of American life today, seen through the eyes of a telegraph messenger-boy and his family. Below: Mickey Rooney, star, gets a message from his brother

"THE HUMAN COMEDY"

Cast: Mickey Rooney, Frank Morgan, James Craig, Marsha Hunt, Fay Bainter, Van Johnson, Donna Reed, Henry O'Neil, Dorothy Morris, Alan Baxter, Darryl Hickman, Barry Nelson, Katharine Alexander, Rita Quigley. A Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, directed by Clarence Brown. William Saroyan wrote the screenplay from his own novel by the same title.

WILLIAM SAROYAN, author of "The Human Comedy," now a private in Uncle Sam's Army, is said to have remarked that if he were granted two weeks' leave from duty he could write six more wonderful stories. Maybe so, but we doubt if he'd write another as fine as this one. The story centers around Homer (Mickey Rooney), a telegraph messenger-boy, and life as he sees and lives it. It's a picture that marks Mickey not as a kid comedian but as an actor of talent bordering on genius. His brother leaves him and goes to war just after high-school days are over, and Homer faces the unspeakable sorrows of war, growing to manhood before his time. The drama of his life is one that will touch the heart of every American. There is a poignant love between a boy and a girl in "The Human Comedy," but it is not the threadbare love that Hollywood movie-makers always have told. In it there is much for true Americans to ponder, much to urge our fighting men to a more gallant stand, and folks on the home front to consider no sacrifice too great for the winning of peace in this war. For here is a picture that plumbs the heights and depths of humanity!

The screenplay was written by Saroyan from his own novel, a Book-of-the-Month Club best-seller.

WHAT MOVIE-GOERS CAN EXPECT: An amazing new Rooney and a magnificent job of direction by Clarence Brown that should spell Academy Award honors for him next year!

"THE OX-BOW INCIDENT" is the screen version of Walter Van Tilburg Clark's novel. Story, laid in a Nevada cattle town of 1885, portrays the grim hardships in building of the West. Above: Scene with Henry Morgan, Henry Fonda (c.), Ted North

"THE OX-BOW INCIDENT"

HERE is a picture which for two years Hollywood was afraid to make, probably never would have had not Henry Fonda, star of the piece, and William Wellman, its director, fought for the right and won. The story from which the film was made has a western setting but none of the usual situations. One reviewer noted that every critic of worth had saluted the author as the creator of a new and higher kind of melodrama, as a man who had taken the thriller and lifted it to the level of literature. The story concerns an early Nevada cattle town in 1885. Twenty-eight men ride out into the hills to avenge the death of a friend. They find three murder suspects. Though a few of the lynching party voice objections, these three are hanged. Henry Fonda, now in the U. S. Navy, is listed as the star of the picture, but he is the first to admit that the real stars of the cast are the three ropes with nooses knotted at the ends. Rough and genuine as the days that saw the building of the West, it is grim and powerful film fare. But then law was a lot more than words in a book, and Gil Carter (Fonda) brings that fact home to other men when he reads from a letter, "Law is the conscience of humanity. Civilization will disappear when people no longer have a conscience."

WHAT MOVIE-GOERS CAN EXPECT: Gripping drama against a background of stark realism for adults only.

"WATCH ON THE RHINE"

Cast: Bette Davis, Paul Lukas, Geraldine Fitzgerald, Lucile Watson, Beulah Bondi, George Coulouris, Donald Woods, Henry Daniell, Donald Buka, Eric Roberts, Janis Wilson, Mary Young, Kurt Katch, Irwin Kaiser, Robert O. Davis, Clyde Fillmore, Frank Wilson, Clarence Muse. A Warner Bros.-First National picture, produced by Hal B. Wallis and directed by Herman Shumlin. Screenplay was written by Dashiell Hammett from the stage play by Lillian Hellman.

THE story opens when Kurt Muller (Paul Lukas) and his wife Sara (Bette Davis) with their family of three children enter the U. S. by way of Mexico. Poorly dressed and showing the manner of the hunted and driven, all reveal signs of having been victims of outrages under the Hitler regime. Once on American soil, they head for Washington, D. C., where Sara, who is American-born, has a mother living. Her mother is a woman of means and has a large home in which she plans to house daughter Sara and her family, along with a number of other house guests. Kurt suspects intrigue as soon as they arrive, especially after observing the general set-up of the place. And he is proved right when, shortly after the family's arrival, there unfolds a gripping drama woven around the nefarious schemes of the Fascist and Nazi movements, counteracted by anti-Axis activities. Paul Lukas, star of the Broadway stage production, gives a fine performance as Kurt Muller, and Bette Davis, as usual, is excellent as the thirty-eight-year-old mother. Sara. Movie-goers who have heard and read of the play and its tremendous success on the stage, but who have not had an opportunity to see it, will not be disappointed in the screen version. Many places and events that could only be talked about on the stage are shown in the screen version. It's splendidly done!

WHAT MOVIE-GOERS CAN EXPECT: A fascinating cross-section of Nazi-dominated persons' lives.

CARY GRANT, below, as a bigshot boss gambler, teaches Laraine Day, in role of Park Ave. debutante, how to speak Australian rhyming slang in "Mr. Lucky," a comedy full of satisfying chuckles

"MR. LUCKY"

"MR. LUCKY" is a movie that takes theatergoers on a tour of New York City just before the bombing of Pearl Harbor. The varied backgrounds include a war-relief headquarters, Park Avenue society, the New York docks, and a charity bazaar at one of Manhattan's swank hotels. The tension that gripped the nation at that time lends thrills and dramatic import to the sequences, yet it is in no way a war picture. Cary Grant, in the role of Joe Adams, a bigshot gambler, is trying to avoid the draft. He and his partner Zepp (Paul Stewart) receive Uncle Sam's call at the same time, and just when they have succeeded in getting their gambling ship ready for a kill. Cary (Joe) evades the draft by gambling for the 4-F card that belonged to a member of his crew that dies. He wins and assumes the identity of the dead man. Needing a bank-roll to start operations on his gambling ship, Joe sees a chance to raise it by inducing a Park Avenue war-relief organization to let him conduct the gambling at their charity bazaar. At first Dorothy Bryant (Laraine Day) opposes the idea. To overcome her opposition, Joe joins the organization, and the fun starts when Dorothy puts him through the stiff service routine, including a course in knitting. From then on drama and comedy wage an even fight as Joe gets patriotic fever.

WHAT MOVIE-GOERS CAN EXPECT: A carload of laughs delivered by Cary Grant and his aids, plus a tremendous surprise in the excellent performance of Laraine Day.

LOVABLE little Judy Garland sells a song—a Russian melody sung in all the trappings of the gay costume shown above—for her latest picture, "Presenting Lily Mars." Film has touching and dramatic moments that make it as warm and human as the Booth Tarkington novel from which it is adapted

"PRESENTING LILY MARS"

Cast: Judy Garland, Van Heflin, Richard Carlson, Spring Byington, Fay Bainter, Marta Eggerth, Connie Gilchrist, Leonid Kinsky, Ray McDonald. A Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture, produced by Joe Pasternak and directed by Norman Taurog. Screenplay by Richard Sherman, Fred Finklehoff and Sid Silvers was adapted from the Booth Tarkington novel.

JUDY GARLAND gets a fine chance to display her talents as the teen-age Lily Mars, and rollicks through a series of hilarious situations, mixed with touching dramatic moments. As a stage-struck Lily, Judy sings, dances and emotes. In this picture Judy is teamed with Van Heflin. Together they make one of the most pleasant screen twosomes of the year. And one sees an exciting version of how a star is born. Van Heflin, as John Thornway, a theatrical producer, does everything in his power to discourage Lily in her determination to become an actress, but nothing he can do dampens her ardor to succeed. She does everything from climbing walls to crashing the "right" parties and popping up at unexpected moments to sing songs with orchestras to prove her point. Finally, Thornway establishes Lily in a theatrical boarding-house for women, and gives her the small role of chambermaid in the play. This arouses the jealousy of the star in the piece, and she throws a tantrum, threatens to stage a walkout. In the meantime, Thornway finds his interest in Lily turning to love, and more complications loom when Lily is asked to sing at a night-club and does a burlesque of the jealous star. How Lily finally achieves stardom makes a most entertaining picture.

WHAT MOVIE-GOERS CAN EXPECT: Music, drama and comedy in beautifully balanced doses that add up to good entertainment.

VERONICA LAKE, The Beautiful Little Turnip

can laugh at being wakened from a sound sleep by a voice shouting outside the bedroom window, "Wake up—this is your air-raid warden. All your lights are on!" It developed that Veronica, sitting at home with her mother and dad, felt the sudden urge for company at midnight, so chose this method of waking a journalist and his wife. "You can depend on me not to breathe a word of this," she said when I came to the door. "If it gets out that you were sleeping and not eavesdropping on movie stars at Mocambo at this hour, your bosses will be getting themselves another boy."

Revelations such as these could easily lead to the conclusion that Veronica is something of a slap-happy creature whose idea of fun is to give someone a double hotfoot. This is definitely not the case. She is exceedingly feminine and normal by nature, putting all else behind love for her baby and family. The child, now eighteen months old, is named Elaine Keane Detlie, Keane being a family name and Detlie Veronica's missus title in real life, she being wed to a certain captain in the Army.

I have heard the inevitable movie-star rumors concerning Veronica's marriage. I have also heard her speak of "John" in a manner that denies that she will eventually follow the Hollywood divorce patterns. The rumors about Veronica stem mainly from the fact that she does not stay home every evening because her husband is stationed in Seattle. If she has heard what "they" say, she gives no indication, and as I write this has just telephoned to say that she is on her way north. She has a small, rustic five-room house up there on Mercer Island on Lake Washington. When she has enough time between pictures she takes the baby along; otherwise it's just a flying trip, Elaine staying home in care of her mother and father and Clara, the wonderful colored servant who was with John before their marriage.

What I am driving across is the picture of a twenty-four-year-old girl not too far removed from appreciation of the commonplace life she knew as a youngster back in Lake Placid, New York. Veronica is well aware that she has been considered a "freak" in the movie business. Until recently she believed just that, and there you have the reason why, aside from normal instincts, she took time out to become a mother at the beginning of her career.

Consider yourself with a career problem such as faced Veronica. The Keane family dad was a newspaper artist, and good one on a New York newspaper. He needed a mild climate for his health and found it in Florida. Then when Veronica grew out of the tomboy stage and became a more than average attractive girl they all figured she might get on in the movies. They migrated to Hollywood and Veronica was financed for a course at the Bliss-Hayden little theater. A movie scout soon signed her to a $50-a-week contract to work in a picture called "Forty Little Mothers." She soon discovered that she wasn't "in." Her contract was simply a way to get an actress for the run of the picture for less than dress-extra salary.

"You learn soon enough that stories you read about benevolent executives and big salaries are not to be had for the asking," Veronica says. "There's nobody as lonesome as a starlet. She is as unwanted as an insurance agent. Her ambitions die an agonizing death as all the rosy promises she hears are forgotten by everyone but herself. Only an accident can save her from getting the ax at option time."

No accident saved Veronica at M-G-M. She made a test, which no one saw but producer Arthur Hornblow, who was on his way to Paramount. When he switched studios he remembered the diminutive young lady, remembered her more because of a darling dress a friend had made for her than for her hair. He showed the test to other Paramount officials and they came out raving about the way her hair fell over one eye, leaving the other to peep out a grave and vague feminine invitation.

This gave Veronica the career she wanted. It also started a fad which recently reached a crescendo when Government officials realized that over a million women in this country and England were running around with their vision half obscured. It is no press-agent fancy that one agency in the war effort communicated with Paramount and asked that from now on wouldn't it be possible to do Veronica's hair up, else thousands upon thousands of hours would be lost by women taking time out to push back their hair in war factories.

"To tell the truth," Veronica told me recently, "that hair-do or undo is a darned nuisance. You know that I never wear it that way outside work."

I think I can be forgiven in the interests of the war-working females if I add a few new Veronica hair-slants at this point. The other evening Veronica showed up at a cocktail party wearing a magnificent little Lily Dache hat, bangs peeping out from the front. Her hair was brushed up the back, disappearing beneath the hat.

"That's cute," I ventured. "Something new of Westmore's?"

"No," she answered smartly, "something new of Lake's. I was in a hurry, so I just brushed my hair up over the top of my head, slapped on the hat and let the end curls stick out the front."

How's that, you women war workers? You can probably do the same stunt when you are in a hurry to get to work, just substituting a bandana for the hat.

Now we leave the bright mountainous subject of hair and return on our wandering trip through the rare scenery that is Veronica Lake to additional genuine facts known to friends of the Little Turnip.

"Miss Ronnie," as Clara calls her, may seem temperamental to her bosses on occasion. She has had some swell run-ins with co-workers like Dorothy Lamour, Claudette Colbert and Paulette Goddard. I happen to like all three of these beauties, but it is Paulette who was first to join the Lake fans. When Ronnie, a little tired after being up late working phones for the Interceptor Command, as she does twice a week, squabbled with a director and walked off the set, Paulette talked to her. "Do anything you want in the line of temperament," was the gist of Paulette's advice, "but never commit the cardinal sin of walking off a set. Everybody from propboy to electrician gets his nose out of joint over a thing like that."

I don't want you to get the idea that Paulette is Veronica's sister confessor from that. She comes as close to being a personal friend of The Turnip as the girl has among players. Veronica's friends are the workers you seldom hear of but are "big-shots" in their own right. For instance, you might bump into her of an evening out at the "Tie him up and take him with us. Let his shriveled Nazi soul learn how little he's accomplished—just before he dies."

Later, in the boat, Bretta shivered with fear and sorrow. It was hard to believe she had been betrayed by this unconscious man in the cabin beneath her feet. She heard her father and Lars moving about above the creak of the rigging, the slap of the canvas and the swishing and sucking of the waves. Abruptly Thor called out softly in the darkness. He had sighted a ship ahead. Was it Halvord's trawler?

"Lars, get the lantern under the tarpaulin. We'll signal to Halvord that we're about to—"

"Wait," cried Bretta in excitement. "Leave that lantern where it is. We can't use it. Do you want to notify the enemy, too? Look there—" She pointed off the stern of the small boat. "See it breaking the surface of the sea."

A submarine! They all saw it plainly, glistening like something evil in the strange, dark light on the water. A Nazi U-boat!

"It's following us, using us as a shield to close in and destroy the trawler," Lars said. "We're lost. Our job can't be done. But there's another job we can do—that Nazi."

"Don't bother, Lars." It was Gaines' voice cutting across Lars' excited one. "I found that fishing-knives can cut rope. Where's that lantern you were talking about? We've got work to do!"

"Stay away from that tarpaulin," Lars said sharply. "It won't do you any good to let your friends on that U-boat know you're here."

Gaines laughed. "Don't be a fool, Lars. We've got to let those men aboard the ship know that the submarine's about to attack!"

Bretta spoke. "It's too late for a change of front now," she said flatly. "You've done your work too well. Halvord and his men can't possibly escape!"

"But, Bretta, that's not Halvord's boat out there! That's a British destroyer!"

"A British destroyer!" Thor exclaimed.

"That's right! That's the ship I was signaling to."

Lars was skeptical. But Bretta argued that it wouldn't make much difference now if Gaines still lied—and there was the chance that he was telling the truth. She told her father that she would read the code message he'd send with the light and that they could kill him instantly if he betrayed them—again. Gaines snatched up the lantern, which he covered and uncovered alternately with the tarpaulin in a series of dots and dashes.

"Sub . . . four . . . hundred . . . yards . . . off . . . our . . . stern!" Bretta slowly read the message. "Attack . . . at once! Gaines!"

There was the creak of spars and slap of canvas as the small ship came about. A few seconds later a great flash of light broke from the shadowy ship out ahead in the darkness. The light was followed by the sound of an explosion. A six-inch gun. The four persons in the small boat heard the shriek of the shell, saw it hit the gleaming submarine. There was another terrific explosion and a blinding light. The destroyer had scored a direct hit.

Quiet once more. Gaines broke the silence to remark that the destroyer was coming toward them to make sure of its job.

"Then," said Thor slowly, "then you're not a Nazi!"

"No," Gaines said laughing. "I'm English all right. Army Intelligence." He turned to Bretta and Lars. "It's simple enough. We'd captured the Gestapo agent who was being sent here to break up your underground work. He told us all the details, and I took his place. I learned about the submarine at Nazi headquarters and arranged for the destroyer to be here. But that's not all of it. There's a Commando detail aboard that ship! As soon as they finish off the sub, we'll put in to shore and get to work at the coal mine without risking the lives of civilians like you, Bretta, and your father and Lars. And then, Bretta—"

"Then, Fred?"

"That'll be my last job in Norway. When it's over we'll all sail for England." He put his arm about her shoulders and drew her closer. "Don't worry, darling, we'll all come back to Norway and your home some day. And when we do, all of your friends, all the Norwegians, all the captive and down-trodden everywhere—they shall be free!"

OUR GRACIE—

"fall-on-me-be'ind" buffoon). Then she dashed off for a victory-loan tour of Canada.

She is now heard over the Blue Network fifteen minutes a night, Mondays through Fridays.

At the start of the broadcasts, last October, agency executives called at her hotel room for the first of what they planned as a daily series of program conferences with their star. In no time they were engulfed in a bedlam of visiting British tars, benefit committees, song-writers banging out their wares on the piano, and in the midst of it all Gracie, beaming. "After a week, we just abandoned the conference idea as unfeasible," one executive has said with restraint.

There are those who say that Miss Fields, like all natural phenomena, must be seen to be appreciated. Radio listeners thought not. When she began her broadcasts, she was on the air only five minutes a night. Listeners lost no time in demanding more. One woman wrote tartly, "She's a wonderfully talented girl, and if you can't afford to give her a longer program, somebody else will."

The sponsor, a practical man who can also read, pondered this state of affairs briefly, and then upped the five-minute show to fifteen. Grateful listeners promptly wrote Miss Fields to offer congratulations and good advice. One hospitable soul, after inviting the singer "to drop in any time for dinner," added, "You're so natural and unspoiled, dear. Just don't let success go to your head." As a press-agent said with awe, after dipping into a pile of this mail, "My God, most of these people don't even know who Gracie Fields is. They just like her."

As a singer who made more money than the King of England, the star's spending habits are magnificently erratic. Plus a villa in Capri and two houses in England, and an orphanage of which she is the sole support, she has recently acquired a rambly, handsome place in Santa Monica, California. To furnish this, the canny Gracie haunted local second-hand stores for bargains. "I got this couch, the lamp, and two chairs all for fifty-nine dollars," she brags. When she shops for a purse or a lipstick, clerks are often bug-eyed at her casual request to "wrap up three dozen more just like it"—for friends and relatives all over the globe. Indifferent to jewelry, she quivers like a bird-dog when she gets near fine China.

"Oh, oh, Dugan's corner throws in the towel—a dirty, dingy towel that can be made clean and fresh with Sudy-Wudsy Soap Chips, folks!"

In addition to Gracie and her second husband, actor-director Monty Banks, the household consists of her parents, two secretaries (one British, one American), a chow dog, and a procession of house-guests who stay from a month to a year.

Her mother likes to warn her, "The public's fickle, Gracie," on the theory that this helps keep a girl on her toes. But still it takes both secretaries to handle the fan mail arriving daily from all over America and England.

During a recent flying trip back to England, at Churchill's cabled request, she sang in war factories all over the British Isles, then paid a visit to a big naval base. Before her concert, officers lined up sixteen warships in a row, facing one small launch which served as a stage. While thousands of sailors hung over the ship's rails, Gracie, standing below in the tiny boat, belted out their favorite songs. It is rumored that even the Germans across the North Sea heard her that day, singing the most popular of her songs: "They're going to hang old Hitler from the very highest bough of The Biggest Aspidistra in the World."

Gracie Fields may be heard over the Blue Network Monday through Friday at 10:15 p.m. EWT, 9:15 p.m. CWT, 8:15 p.m. MWT, 7:15 p.m. PWT under the sponsorship of the American Cigarette Company in behalf of Pall Mall Cigarettes.

Mrs. A. J. Schmidiger, Morgantown, W. Va.—"Bachelor's Children" is heard Mondays through Fridays over CBS at 10:45 a.m. EWT.

D. Hill, Long Branch, N. J.—You can hear "Lone Journey" at 10:45 a.m. EWT Mondays through Fridays over NBC.

W. F. Boswell, Decatur, Ala.—The address of "Mr. Keen, Tracer of Lost Persons" is the Blue Network, RCA Bldg., New York, N. Y.

A. M. Baker, Spencer, N. Y.—

CHARME ALLEN has the part of Mother and PARKER FENNELLY is Dad in the CBS show "Mother and Dad." Charme started her career as a musician, but parallel with her musical development grew an irrepressible desire to become an actress.

Charme Allen, ideal "mother"

While at dramatic school, she chose the parts that required the most talent. In the early nineteen-twenties, she branched to radio as an accompanist for her husband, Joseph Allen, a concert pianist. Then she read poetry for crystal-set listeners. During this time she worked sound-effects, wrote scripts and did everything there is to do on the production side of radio. Her latest big part is that of the kind, understanding "Mother" and is an example of type-casting to a "T."

Floyd Coulsen, Yankton, S. D.—In the "Sea Hound," KEN DAIGNEAU has the part of Captain Silver, BOBBY HASTINGS is Jerry, JANICE GILBERT plays the role of Carol Anderson, ALAN DEVITT is Kukai, and WALTER VAUGHN has the part of Tex.

Miss Esther Ricketts, Kokomo, Ind.—MARY SMALL sings over CBS on Sundays at 7 p.m. CWT. The program is called "Only Yesterday." JERRY WAYNE is now on "Your All Time Hit Parade" Fridays, NBC, 7:30 p.m. CWT.

Evelyn Theiss, Louisville, Ohio.—GORDON GOODMAN, the "stratosphere tenor" of Fred Waring's Pennsylvanians, started his career as a boy soprano in Salt Lake City. After graduating from the University of Utah, Gordon went to San Francisco and got a job at the Golden Gate Theater, singing solos in the stage presentation that preceded the film feature. He remained there for seven years as featured soloist. When in 1937 Fred Waring and his Pennsylvanians appeared at the theater during a tour, Gordon sang for him and was offered a place with the gang. He is nearly six feet tall, weighs 150 pounds, has brown hair and eyes. He is married and has a year-old baby.

BRIEF PICTURE GUIDE

EXPLANATION: Rating of pictures are "in V" for "Victory"—and VVVV, a four-V rating, is accorded only a top-ranking, almost perfect film fare; VVV is a winner, excellent film fare; VV is average, and V, unfortunately, is below average. Natural-color films are so indicated as "in color" right after the title, and ALL films are judged as "adult," "family," or simply "juvenile" fare. —THE EDITORS.

OUTSTANDING

AIR FORCE (VVVV): Authentic drama taken from logbooks of our fighting aviators. Don't miss it!—Family.

ARABIAN NIGHTS (VVVV): One of the thousand and one magical tales gloriously filmed in color.—Family.

CASABLANCA (VVV): Ingrid Bergman gathers more laurels in tale of French Morocco.—Adult.

COMMANDOS STRIKE AT DAWN (VVVV): A must see for every adult is this war film.

GEORGE WASHINGTON SLEPT HERE (VVVV): Laughter hodge-podge with Jack Benny and Ann Sheridan.—Family.

HEART OF THE GOLDEN WEST (VVV): Roy Rogers and his horse Trigger in their first super-duper special. Fast action and good music combined.—Family.

IN WHICH WE SERVE (Special) (VVVVV): Noel Coward's movie bombshell. A must see for all adults.

RANDOM HARVEST (VVVV): Beautiful and stirring love-story. Greer Garson stars.—Family.

TALK OF THE TOWN (VVVV): Cary Grant, Jean Arthur, Ronald Colman in a gripping drama spiked with wit and a purpose.—Family.

THE MAJOR AND THE MINOR (VVVV): Ginger Rogers at her best in a comedy with a keen twist.—Family.

MUSICALS

SILVER SKATES (VVV): Superb skating by Belita, and good music by Kenny Baker.—Family.

THE DESERT SONG (VVV): Technicolor. Sigmund Romberg's lovely music comes to the screen.—Family.

COMEDIES

DU BARRY WAS A LADY (VVV): A fun parade in Technicolor led by Lucille Ball, Red Skelton.—Family.

MY SISTER EILEEN (VVVV): The Broadway hit comes to the screen with Rox Russell, Janet Blair—and even more laughs. A-1 movie for the whole family!

ROAD TO MOROCCO (VVVV): Crosby, Hope, Lamour hit another uproariously funny trail.—Family.

THE MEANEST MAN IN THE WORLD (VVV): Jack Benny and Priscilla Lane come to blows in a zany comedy.—Family.

THE PALM BEACH STORY (VVVV): Nonsense with a punch delivered by Claudette Colbert, Rudy Vallee.—Family.

OTHER FEATURES

CORREGIDOR (VVV): Tense drama portraying how Americans fought and died on an island outpost.—Adult.

FLIGHT FOR FREEDOM (VVV): Reminiscent of Amelia Earhart's tragic fate. Co-stars Fred MacMurray and Rosalind Russell do a fine job.—Family.

KEEPER OF THE FLAME (VVV): A thrilling mystery yarn starring Spencer Tracy and Katharine Hepburn. Top entertainment for the family.

NOW, VOYAGER (VVV): Heavy drama and Bette Davis. Both are good. Paul Henreid, Gladys Cooper, Janis Wilson give fine support.—Adult.

ONCE UPON A HONEYMOON (VVV): Cary Grant and Ginger Rogers star in comedy-adventure tale laid in war-torn Europe.—Family.

THE AMAZING MRS. HOLLIDAY (VVV): Reveals Deanna Durbin not only as a singer but a fine actress as well.—Family.

THE MOON IS DOWN (VVV): Realism as only Steinbeck can portray it of a people humbled but unconquered in Norway.—Adult.

THE TRAITOR WITHIN (VVV): World War I veteran gets a chance for revenge twenty years after conflict. Donald M. Barry and Jean Parker.—Family.

WESTERNS

RIDIN' DOWN THE CANYON (VVV): Roy Rogers traps a music-minded gang who use radio to send subversive messages. Plenty of action.—Family.

THE SUNDOWN KID (VVV): Don "Red" Barry, a gambler himself, halts a crime wave with fast shooting and tough fighting.—Family.

THUNDERING TRAILS (VVV): The Three Mesquiteers, as Texas Rangers, protect gold shipments in the territory.—Family.

VERONICA LAKE, The Beautiful Little Turnip

Joe Lilley's in North Hollywood. Joe did the music for "Jingle, Jangle, Jingle," and knocks out many of those out of this world music arrangements you hear with Paramount pictures. You have not heard anything until you hear Veronica warble Joe's burlesque of a college hymn, which goes something like this:

On the shores of Lake Grodjmyer

Neath an ivy-colored cloister,

Stands our dear old alma mater

Like a pearl within an erster . . .

Frankly, Veronica hasn't much of a singing voice, but it's good entertainment.

Personally, I should dislike very much ever to have to eat a meal prepared by most movie stars referred to in their biographies as "good cooks." However, I could put away a marine's share of the stuffed bell peppers she makes. Southern mummies who brag about their fried chicken wouldn't after tasting Veronica's milk-soaked variety, and her Welsh rarebit would pass at the Brown Derby.

Everyone should be allowed to make a crack about someone they like very much. It proves you aren't kidding when you say the good things. Veronica has holes in her head sometimes when it comes to handling money. I do like the way she feels about jewelry, though. She has just one good set of aquamarine clips and earrings. She has no hunk of ice for an engagement ring; instead, the Little Turnip just wears a simple Panda platinum band.

Panda is not a fancy name for a new stone; it's what the word indicates—a bearish-looking animal with white face and black circles under his eyes. In Veronica's house there are Panda ash-trays, lamps, cigarette-boxes and a mob of Panda dolls. She thinks there's something human about them and they keep her company.

The most enviable thing I know about the girl is her knack for keeping going. On a recent trip to New York she hit rehearsals for the Kate Smith show at ten in the morning, worked all day, rushed to her hotel at eight to put on a dinner gown for the Artists' and Writers' Ball. Then she appeared on Kate's show, from which she went to the ball, danced $1,600 worth of war bonds, got back to her hotel in time to change and catch the 1 a.m. train for Washington. Here she put in two appearances at parties, talked at a luncheon and got back to New York at one the next night, all with very few yawns in between. I don't know the names of any other stars, with the exception of Bette Davis, who showed up at the Hollywood Canteen to entertain soldiers on both New Year's and Christmas Eves.

Not bad, considering some trouble with an impacted wisdom tooth, an annoying appendix that wound up with an operation as she kept on running her own home and preparing to work in "So Proudly We Hail."

Of course I've gone way overboard for Veronica. Why not? I love her like my young sister. Besides, any girl who can sell one lock of hair from behind her left ear for $180,000 worth of war bonds is worth a favorable blast.

Anyone sitting in front of this page who dares to disagree?

WHAT'S COOKING

degrees F.) about fifteen minutes, or until delicately browned.

Beat eggs well; add sugar; corn syrup, flavoring and salt gradually and continue beating until mixture is light and fluffy. Mix remaining ingredients; stir into egg mixture. Spread evenly over previously baked crust. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) about twenty-five minutes. Cut into bars while still warm.

Yield: Twenty bars (eight-by-twelve-inch pan).

Orange Honey Bread

2 tablespoons shortening

1 cup honey

1 egg

1½ tablespoons grated orange peel

2½ cups sifted flour

2½ teaspoons baking-powder

½ teaspoon soda

½ teaspoon salt

¾ cup orange juice

¾ cup chopped nuts

Cream shortening and honey together thoroughly. Add well-beaten egg and grated orange peel. Sift flour with baking-powder, soda and salt. Add the flour mixture to the creamed mixture alternately with the orange juice. Add the nuts. Bake in greased loaf pan in moderate oven (325 degrees F.) for seventy minutes.

Variation: Omit nuts and substitute three-fourths cup candied orange peel cut into bits. This is an ideal lunch sandwich with cream cheese and orange marmalade as a filling.

FEMININE FORUM

Now that you know all about caring for your teeth, do you know how to use them? When you smile, make sure you don't display too much gum. Some people think that because their teeth are a thing of beauty, everyone must be aware of them. Half the time the result is all teeth and gum and no smile.

Forget about your teeth. If your eyes twinkle and the laugh is genuine, your exquisite teeth will be noticed, never fear. Even if they're not too straight, don't worry. Smile naturally and don't try to cover them up. A tight-lipped smile only makes the situation worse. If, on the other hand, you are anxious to have even teeth, see a reliable orthodontist and let him analyze your mouth. Sometimes just removing one tooth and the help of a brace worn at night will help make your teeth seem more even.

Above all, keep smiling. Just recently, we overheard a girl say, "I'm not going to laugh so much any more, I've just noticed a few lines around my mouth." That's just about the silliest way of coping with the situation. Laugh-lines give expression to a blank face, they make that face seem more jolly. You wouldn't stop seeing if you didn't like the color of your eyes, would you? Then don't stop laughing because you're giving life to a dead pan.

Remember, laugh a lot, talk animatedly, give your teeth the best in care and attention, and your smile will be the winsome kind that attracts. A cheerful grin, milady, opens the door to success.

If You Lack Vigor . . . Feel Tired Weak . . . Rundown . . . Nervous . . . Discouraged and Depressed because of Vitamin B Complex Lack

Be Sure to Read WHY
WE MAKE THIS AMAZING OFFER

Does your mirror reflect a YOU that is old and haggard looking instead of the man or woman you ought to be? Well, leading physicians, hospitals and scientists have spent years of research and millions of dollars working with vitamins so that you—yes, you, too, may be helped by these miraculous vitamins. Yes, if you are nervous, run-down, weak, discouraged and depressed—if you have physical and mental dullness, neuritis-like aches and pains, low resistance to coughs and colds, poor digestion, lack of ambition, cranky disposition, failing appetite . . . if you are tired out before your day's work is done . . . the difference between these symptoms and a feeling of buoyant health may be extra daily B COMPLEX Vitamins. Well, here is a way you can test for yourself what real, honest-to-goodness VITAMIN B COMPLEX may quickly be able to do for you. This gift offer costs you but a few pennies for mailing and it may show you an easy way to improve your nerves, your energy, your health, your looks, your work and your joy of living, particularly if in conjunction with vitamin enriched diet.

PROOF GALORE!

First, here is proof of what may happen to health from lack of a single vitamin, the all-important Vitamin B<sub>1</sub>. At Rocheater, Minnesota, in a world leading hospital, six healthy people were given every food element necessary to health . . . except Vitamin B<sub>1</sub>. After they were kept on this diet lacking Vitamin B<sub>1</sub> for 88 days, they became depressed and discouraged. They complained of dizzy spells. They developed neuritis-like pains, backaches, sore muscles. They spent sleepless nights. They lost appetite, became nervous and quarrelsome. But when these same people were given enough Vitamin B<sub>1</sub>, all six of them quickly recovered all the health and vigor they had lost. These Vitamin capsules we are giving away contain a powerful supply (in fact, more than the full daily minimum requirements) of Vitamin B<sub>1</sub> and daily minimum requirements of other B Complex Vitamins per label. These gift vitamins are a special vitamin formula, authentic, as good as any B COMPLEX Vitamins no matter how high the price. So make up your mind to test Vitamin B COMPLEX today while we are making it so easy for you to find out what B COMPLEX Vitamins may do to help you.

Millions May Be Taking Wrong Vitamins; Millions May Be Paying Too Much. Forget fancy vitamin prices. Find out for yourself what these B COMPLEX Vitamins may be able to do for you and for your family. Hardly a day goes by but what we don't receive many letters telling how fine these vitamins are, telling how much money these vitamins have saved. Truly, there are no better B COMPLEX Vitamins in all the world . . . we have proved to tens of thousands that no longer need the very best vitamins be expensive.

Vitamins the Year 'Round at Comparative Gift Prices

There's no catch to this offer. It's a straightforward, fair-play business proposition. Once you mail the coupon for your gift vitamins, you immediately become eligible to EXTRA PRIVILEGES AND SAVINGS. We reserve for you and your family a supply of these B COMPLEX Vitamins. You can, of course, cancel this reservation after receiving and trying your gift vitamins at any time you wish. It's your choice completely. You will receive your B COMPLEX Vitamin supply each six weeks in fresh shipments. But you will not be charged for these vitamins at the high price of other nationally known brands—you get full advantage of the savings possible by elimination of retailers' profits and extra selling expense through VITAMIN CLUB MEMBERSHIP . . . a price so low you know you have discovered how to get your B COMPLEX Vitamins almost as a gift. Remember, these are the most important vitamins of all, B COMPLEX Vitamins, given to you by the only VITAMIN CLUB in America. There are genuine B COMPLEX Vitamins ordinarily selling in stores at prices too high to be within the reach of the average family. These are vitamins every man, woman and child must have daily for real health—vitamins so many millions will never get enough of without vastly improving their daily diet. These are the vitamins that any doctor will tell you can mean the difference between feeling fit as a fiddle and trying to go or feeling nervous, tired, weak, run-down, aching, discouraged and depressed. Now, at last in this offer so sensational it's amazing, these valuable B COMPLEX Vitamins are in your reach.
