Mrs. Z. W. Logan, Radio Chairman, Los Angeles Tenth District, California Congress of Parents and Teachers, Inc., 499 California Street, Los Angeles 12, Calif.

Sirs: Some Americans were no doubt sincere in defending the shipping of scrap iron to Japan in the critical days before Pearl Harbor. Many more, however, were influenced solely by the money to be made in such dangerous traffic. There truly was "gold in them thar hills." The fact that the scrap iron was likely to return as shrapnel to sear and ruin the bodies of our own American boys was not to be considered.

Likewise, today, in spite of reams of convincing evidence that radio crime stories are harmful to our children, some writers continue to pour out ingenious arguments in their favor. These crime stories are sources of untold wealth to those who sponsor them. These sponsors, no doubt, mean to be good American citizens, and they certainly are respected leaders in our fabulous American industry. But they and their advertisers and their apologists cannot fail to hear the appeals of the parents and the warnings of the medical profession that these stories are having a deadly effect on our youth.

The great majority of doctors, psychiatrists, and psychologists consulted declare that the child's character and mental powers are threatened, as well as his body.

It's smart and easy to compare these serial crime stories with the forbidden books of a bygone age. But the similarity is very limited.

As the child listens with bated breath to the story of danger and crime and violence and perhaps murder, he identifies himself with the hero, struggling to free himself from the dangers hemming him in. The day's installment closes at the moment when emotion, suspense, excitement and fear are at their highest pitch and the youngster feels that he, too, is facing a terrible fate unless he can be rescued in tomorrow's chapter.

He eats with the shadow of suspense hindering the proper digestion of his food. Then he goes to bed to dream about the story; and he wakes to dream again in school of what is really going to happen in the next installment.

The child's mind is full of thoughts of evil doings, of "virtue" fighting for its life, and of people dying from poison or knife or gun. But by far the worst element is that of suspense. And that, of course, is the secret of the success of the radio thriller for children.

No writer would excuse anyone who would hand a child a gun to play with or place a bottle of poison on the table before him; but there are many, evidently, who encourage

Jan Crary, 205 Chestnut, Long Beach, Calif.

Sirs: How about an article and picture of that new singing sensation on CBS every Sunday morning at 11:30, Bob Reid? He really has everything. Is he on at any other time?

Bob Reid has his own "Fair Weather Hour" over a local Kentucky station, WHAS, but in Los Angeles he is heard as a sustaining feature and we rather hesitate to storyize unsponsored pieces until networks assure them a more permanent basis. But here are some facts to accompany your requested picture: Bob was a lieutenant in the Louisville fire department before he joined the Air Force. Since his return to civvies he has sung with Del Courtney's band at Chicago's Black Hawk Restaurant, and in the Los Angeles Biltmore's Rendezvous Room. His first performance on a network broadcast was late last July on "Arthur Godfrey's Talent Scouts." He owns a 300-acre farm in the bluegrass country west of Louisville, where he breeds fine horses, so the "Blue Grass Baritone" title is no misnomer.

handing him a more subtle killer of mind and body and soul.

Yes, it's probably true that some children are not harmed by the repeated doses of story poison, but the evidence is overwhelming that the results are damaging in the great majority of cases.

An occasional short crime story might prove comparatively harmless, but that would not secure enough users of the sponsor's product. Adults, too, like excitement and suspense and they can well understand the lure of the story "continued" tomorrow afternoon or evening. So the game goes on, with millions of children rushing home to listen in and to urge their mothers to buy such and such a product so that they can send away some part of the package and secure a proffered reward. It is as simple as that.

There are new stories coming into radio—beautiful, inspiring stories for children, and yet stories which will hold the children's interest just as well as do the harmful ones. It may be more work to produce them and it may take a time to acquire so large an audience, but it can be done. It is being done, more and more every day.

Parents are being aroused and the managers of radio are hearing from them. A change is coming. Radio has brought so much pleasure and comfort and happiness to adults that it has justified its existence in an abundance of ways. Now it is beginning to face its real duties and opportunities regarding youthful listeners. Surely the sponsors and their writers will follow along the new and saner path.

Youth needs its drama and its thrills and its sense of conflict, and it will always find them, no fear of that. But, more than anything else in this fear-ridden, puzzled world, it needs a sense of balance, of values, of ideals, of courtesy; a sense of humor, of beauty, of faith, and of hope. It deserves years filled with laughter and fun, blessed with growth and achievement and seasoned with love of country and one's fellow men.

Let's stop pretending and face the truth. Let's stop selling the children down the river for the money they will bring. Let's acknowledge that America's greatest wealth is in its young people; and let's try to spare them all the unnecessary evils we possibly can.

Mrs. K. G. Greenmyer, 117 Bimini Place, Los Angeles 4, Calif.

Sirs: Another bouquet to your fine and informative publication, Radio Life. Never are we without it, purchasing one at our market every Monday for the following week.

Also a wreath of orchids for Sheila Graham, whose quiet, well-modulated voice gives more potent, interesting movie gossip in two minutes than all the open-lettered Fiddlers and guest-starred Parsons programs put together. Also the Rayve Shampoo commercial is an intelligent, short one, not one of those violent, rammed-down-your-throat deals other sponsors use.

Re Lolly Parsons: I read her column regularly and have for years, and grant she is a fine newspaper woman and writer. She may be the best known, best loved and most distinguished . . . but she should be read and not heard. If she must have an air program, let her do as another reader suggested. Have her daughter Harriet read her script for her.

I also dislike to see Groucho Marx, a terrific comedian, put on a quiz show. His Pabst Blue Ribbon show with Leo Gorcey was great and gave his comedy talents the abandon he needs.

E. Peters, 2704 South Delta Street, Garvey, Calif.

Sirs: I have felt like writing you many times regarding Louella Parsons. I think she has the most disagreeable voice of anyone on the radio. I don't know how she keeps on the air. Another of my pet peeves is Bob Hope, I can't for the life of me see what there is to laugh at on his programs. There are many very good comedians these days. I enjoy Milton Berle, also Frank Morgan. And, though it is crazy, "It Pays to Be Ignorant." "Leave It to the Girls" is good, but I think Eloise talks too much without knowing what she is saying. She certainly does not mean half she says.

"Trained Cormorants of Glendale," Robert Patrick, "Politician of the Lighthouse," 1435 North Pacific Avenue, Glendale 2, Calif.

Sirs: Many thanks for your splendid piece on the "Sherlock Holmes" show (RL November 16). Yes, the "grand-daddy of all detectives still packs a punch," and a punch that completely flattens most of the carbon-copy "defectives" also on the air.

No, Mr. Shirley may not put the humor into "Watson" that Nigel Bruce did, but to this I can only say "thank goodness." Mr. Shirley returns the good doctor to his true character — a stolid Englishman showing little humor, but much courage and intelligence.

Your reference to the "Baker Street Irregulars" brings up an interesting point. There are now four California chapters of the rapidly expanding "Irregulars":—the "Scowers" of San Francisco; the "Seventeen Steps" of Los Angeles; the "Diogenes Club Alphas" of Pasadena; and the newly-organized "Trained Cormorants" of Glendale, on behalf of whom this request is made. Please give us some pictures of Mr. Stanley and Mr. Shirley. If possible, please give us a story like the one last year on Mr. Tom Conway.

Here's that requested photo of Alfred Shirley and cohort John Stanley. We'll comply with your story request on the pair when feasible with presently crowded schedules.

Bertha Collins, 1277½ West 37th Place, Los Angeles 7, Calif.

Sirs: Enjoy Radio Life very much, and wish to add my regrets to those of Mrs. H. H. M. that Stuart Hamblen's "Cowboy Church" is off the air. And hope to hear it on Sundays again, soon. I like his programs very much.

As for an article expressing a wish that Wendell Noble stick to playing records, I really don't like that, as I have heard Wendell's singing and I like him. I liked him and Steve Allen in "Smile Time." And I still listen to Wendell on the air. But I, too, wondered about Steve Allen, so thanks for the information about him and where I can hear him. What happened to June Foray ("Junie, the girl friend") of "Smile Time"?

"Junie the girl friend" is co-star with Steve Allen on his new "It's a Great Life" show at KNX. And, incidentally, have you heard Wendell Noble as commentator of KHJ's "Newscope" Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday at 9:45 p.m. and Sunday at 5:45 p.m.?

California Radio-gram Co.

Mrs. J. W. Cecil, 2457 Hyperion Avenue, Hollywood 27, Calif.

Sirs: Three big cheers for Mrs. Miller's "Letter of the Week" and one long "Phooey" to Barr Sheets' reply. Thank you, Radio Life, for printing both.

Mrs. Miller's letter is the "voice" of many, many people who are complaining and provoked with the seating arrangements at "Lux Radio Theatre" and "Screen Guild Players" broadcasts. May I suggest that Mr. Sheets check the so-called reserved ticket-holders? Plenty of them are "regulars" and not those he stated. I know that to be a fact. But if he says it's true, I should think five rows center at Lux and four rows at the CBS studio would be enough to take care of those that are connected with the shows or the "press."

There's a strong feeling about this seating affair, and I'm sure the big shots wouldn't approve.

Bonnie Foster, 1028 West 8th Street, Los Angeles, Calif.

Sirs: I've noticed that most of your letters are from married women, and would like you to know that we teenagers read and enjoy your magazine very much, too. Could you tell me what happened to Vic Damone? He was discovered on Arthur Godfrey's talent show, and during the summer I enjoyed hearing him on the air very much.

I disagree with Mrs. F. R. Crunk (November 30) about the picture situation. I, for one, like to see several pictures of the different stars. I also disagree with her about having movie stars as guests on programs. Most of the stars of radio, or at least many of them, are also stars of the screen.

I don't think people should complain about commercials. After all, if it weren't for the companies being advertised, we wouldn't be able to enjoy many favorite shows.

You can still hear Vic Damone on the KNX "Saturday Evening Serenade," 7 p.m.

Pennies for Heaven

WHEN Mutual's "Heart's Desire" program awarded a steeple bell to the Community Church of Palisades, Colorado, and asked its listeners to contribute a penny to it if they wished, that everyone in America could have a part in the gift, little did they dream that those listeners would respond with well over 250,000 pennies.

The remarkable part of the response was that most of the listeners stuck to the letter of emcee Ben Alexander's announcement and sent in one penny apiece. One letter, for instance, contained 185 pennies—but the letter was closed with 185 signatures.

Some listeners, in order to get around that restriction and send more money, contributed on behalf of anyone and everyone they could think of. Fitz and Witz, clowns, and their trick dogs, sent in nine cents—one each from the clowns and one each from the dogs. One woman sent a penny for each member of her Sunday School class. Another sent one for each state she had lived in or traveled through. A man sent "a penny for myself, a penny for the fellow who forgot, a penny for the one who put it off, one for the one who lost the address, and one for Ben Alexander." Twenty-three pennies came from "two ducks, two chickens, ten cats, six cows, and three old hens."

The fact that the penny was to be used on a church bell of a different religion than theirs made no difference to most senders. "I am a Catho-

ON THE second floor of Columbia Square's handsome modern building is a neat series of offices that houses writers who daily turn out the staff comedies, documentaries, and dramas carried by the West Coast Columbia stations.

One of these busy creators of ether entertainment is small, pert Kathleen Hite, who arrived from Wichita, Kansas, in 1943, amid circumstances that sound like one of her own comedies.

The departure of this energetic five-footer from her snug berth with NBC's outlet in Kansas, where she had been writing continuity and voicing a woman's commentary, occurred when, as Kathleen puts it, "I became terribly preoccupied with seeing life. So preoccupied, in fact, that I left for the West Coast with no job in sight, certainly no available lodging in the midst of the war years, and no knowledge whatsoever of Los Angeles. I had the magnificent sum of fifty dollars to my name, and a strange idea I wouldn't be striking out on my own if I accepted aid from my father.

THE BIG JOB of penning much of CBS's house-written entertainment is filled by dark-eyed, curly-haired Kathleen Hite, who is a perfect size nine! (CBS photo.)

Up to that time I'd avoided like the plague anything that might enable me to fall back on secretarial work. I knew no shorthand. My typing was only sporadically good. But somehow, that next Monday, I found myself back at CBS as secretary to the very woman I'd interviewed."

Kathleen kept that job a day and a half. Then came a shift that took Kathleen away from her typewriter. "The change pleased everyone!"

"Well-meaning family friends met me at the station when I arrived here, and following the pattern older people do, assumed I was as financially established as they. The lodging they had secured for me was nice all right . . . a suite at the Town House! As graciously as I was able in the face of this blow, I took the suite, watched my kind friends' departing backs out of sight, then checked out. That took care of exactly half of my little capital."

From less pretentious lodgings Kathleen sailed out next day, determined to find a job.

"Radio stations seemed the logical place to look, and alphabetical order threw CBS first. I managed to secure an interview with the personnel manager, and first thing she asked me was 'what do you do?' With much digging of toes into the carpet I lamely explained I was a writer from Kansas. This was greeted with the comforting explanation that there wasn't a hope in the world of getting into the writing end of Hollywood radio . . . that I'd better come back Monday and take the secretarial position open there.

quips the writer. She was sent down to work for the production department, protecting the casting worthies, by means of a firm tone over the phone, from the hordes of aspirants seeking radio roles.

Kathleen had been at this work only five months when the fates relented and an opportunity arose. One morning she arrived at the office to be greeted by the announcement she was to have her chance at filling an opening in the writing department. Relief and terror took turns at prodding her up the stairs toward the scripters' sanctum.

"I must have been awfully funny those five months I existed on hope, pride and peanut butter sandwiches!" Kathleen laughingly rues.

Show Credits

But that was four years ago. CBS listeners who have heard "Behind the Iron Curtain," last season's excellent documentary designed for further public enlightenment concerning Russia; "The City," popular dramatic documentary on the undercurrents of a typical metropolis as they touch the lives of its dwellers; or the situation comedy, "The People Next Door," have all heard Kathleen credited with the scripting, in whole or in part.

If you've ever tried, in letter-writing or conversation, to turn characters, action and surroundings into narrative dialogue, you know of the difficulty. Even Kathleen fumbles at an explanation of how it is done.

"The best thing to do, I find, is familiarize myself so completely with a story's characters that their speech is as natural and real to me as that of any people I know. If you know your character well enough, you'll figure out easily what he or she would say in any situation," is her sound writing advice.

"The absolute 'must' about radio writing is to make the dialogue seem natural to the listener. If it's so far-fetched that Joe Doe can't identify himself with the spoken line . . . it's just wasted effort and air time."

Under Pressure

When the press of work makes it seem impossible for the young writer to meet a deadline, Kathleen staves off panic and the dreadful prospect of an unfinished job that would mean empty air time at CBS, by means of her "safety valve."

"It's the simplest device in the world. I announce loudly to myself 'time has been shorter than this before and somehow I've managed to get the work out. I'll do it again today . . . but just this once. Then tomorrow I'll stay home and sleep all day!'

"With the pressure relieved, of course I get the scripts out in plenty of time. That means I never do take that promised day off," Kathleen laments, "for the next day, with a clean slate and a relieved mind, there's no point in an escapist thing like staying home!"

Relaxes on the Links

Week-ends see the mental kinks and cobwebs banished by a brisk eighteen holes on the Griffith Park golf courses. An ardent sportswoman, tiny Kathleen enjoys any game or exhibition, whether or not she's participating.

Spieling: His Specialty

KECA's Hank Weaver Has Pulled Rabbits Out of Hats to Interview Roosevelt, Joe Louis, Willkie, and to Describe Thrill-Packed Flag-Raising Ceremony at Suribachi

By Virginia West

Monday-Friday, 11:00 p.m.
KECA

HOW WOULD YOU like to tackle broadcasting a bullfight, though you'd never seen one, except in a movie—and under the added handicap of knowing only a few words of Spanish? Well, that's the kind of spot a sportscaster and special events man is likely to find himself in from time to time.

Hank Weaver, veteran news, sports and special events man, recalled such an incident in his career when the announcement of his appointment to KECA's news and special events department was made recently. Hank, who started out as a newspaper reporter and fell into radio broadcasting quite by accident, has been engaged in his profession for somewhat over fourteen years, except the more than three years when he was on duty with the United States Marine Corps.

"I've covered all kinds of sportscasts and news stories in my time," said Weaver, "but that bullfight assignment was unique, to say the least. I was hired by Mexican radio station executives to broadcast the bullfight meet in the border town of Tijuana, over Mexican stations which were supposed to cover the eleven western states, their purpose being to interest the American tourist trade. Knowing very little Spanish, I arrived at the arena to learn that my 'partner,' the Mexican announcer, knew no English. This and the fact that I was viewing my first real bullfight—my previous contact with the sport being the motion pictures I'd seen and what I had learned from reading Ernest Hemingway—added to the problem. I was told never to mention the goring or the actual killing of the bull, because this might offend some people. But handicaps and all, the job must have been acceptable, for I was hired to broadcast a second meet."

Another Tight Spot

Broadcasting bullfights may have been an unusual experience, but Hank counts as his toughest sportscast a three-hour broadcast of mixed doubles play at the Pacific Southwest Tennis Tournament at the Los Angeles Tennis Club. Frank Bull, whom he was scheduled to assist at the mike that day, had a Pacific Coast Conference football game to broadcast, so Hank was stuck at the mike for three hours during which he had to describe some mighty fast tournament play. He thinks this was a tougher assignment than the Mexican bullfight, because his audience in the U.S.A. knew a great deal more about tennis than bullfighting!

Young Weaver first set out to be a newspaperman. He hounded the managing editor of the old Los Angeles Record until finally told to report for work the following Monday. When he reported, he found the paper had been sold to the Daily News, and he was fired before he started to work.

However, soon Matt Weinstock of the Daily News called and asked if he could do re-write—to which the aspiring newspaperman answered in the affirmative. Hank now admits he knew very little of what a re-← KATE AND HER MANAGER, TED COLLINS, sit at the keyboard while looking over sheet music. They've worked together almost seventeen years.

My high school days. I had a great deal of fun. It seems to me that school days are the most nostalgic in most people's lives.

5. What is your favorite food? Your favorite exercise?

(a.) Roast beef, medium rare, if you please. (b.) Swimming, which I do plenty of at Lake Placid every summer.

6. What's the biggest fish you ever caught on one of your famous fishing outings?

A fifteen-pound rainbow trout, and will I ever forget the thrill!

Kate Smith Answers 20 Questions

Names Favorite Record, Food, Song, Vacation, Famed Person

1. Is it true that you have the neatest handbag in existence, and if so, how do you keep it that way?

You flatter me. Firstly, I like to carry a small bag, not a bulky one that sometimes looks like a traveling case rather than a purse. I carry a bag just large enough to hold bare essentials, such as my purse, keys, cosmetics, comb and mirror.

2. Who is your favorite woman vocalist?

Well, that's a hard question to answer. I was very fond of Grace Moore, and was deeply shocked by her untimely death in a plane accident.

3. What song is your all-time favorite?

I would give my vote to "God Bless America," which I had the privilege of introducing in 1938. Irving Berlin wrote it. The song has a stirring quality that is very stimulating. I've sung it more often than I can remember, but still get an enormous thrill out of singing it.

4. What period of your life do you recall with the most nostalgia?

7. What popular song would you pick as representative of the great American expression of gaiety and heart?

"Take Me Out to the Ball Game."

8. What performers have you discovered and helped toward fame?

Abbott and Costello, Henny Youngman, Aldrich Family, "It Pays to Be Ignorant."

9. What is the nicest tribute you've been paid by your fans?

There isn't one particular tribute that stands out, but I am continually thrilled by the loyalty expressed in the fan mail. It's very heartening to realize that you have so many friends.

10. Which is your own favorite record?

Here again I will say, "God Bless America." I originally recorded it for Victor, but recently made another recording for MGM records which has just been released.

11. Can you brook criticism on something you feel very deeply about?

Constructive criticism is always welcome.

12. Where and for whom was your most thrilling performance?

For President Roosevelt at the White House.

13. What one thing have you had to give up because of your career that still causes you regrets?

Nothing. If I had it all to do over again, I would do it all over again.

14. What professional criticism has helped you the most?

That given me by Ted Collins, who gave me an opportunity to go into radio in 1931 and who has managed my career ever since.

15. What is your idea of an ideal vacation?

Camping in the mountains—and I do mean camping.

16. What is the most interesting locale you have visited in your various journeys giving performances?

Banff, Canada. The scenery is breathtaking in its beauty.

17. What is your greatest extravagance?

Buying antiques. I became interested in antiques by accident a few years ago, and have been a fanatical collector ever since.

18. Who is your favorite character in history?

Joan of Arc, because she was so unselfishly devoted to her people.

19. Do you think one can become a successful singer without training?

Well, I never took a singing lesson in my life, but the right kind of training can do much to help a singer to success.

20. What do you want to be doing twenty years from now?

The same as today.

NBC-KFI-KFSD

JEFF ALEXANDER, new musical director for NBC's "Amos 'n' Andy" series, has the distinction of having been the first conductor to broadcast a swing chorus.

"The old Camel-sponsored 'Oakie College' was a lively, elastic show that allowed room for a little experimentation. I saw no reason a group of voices couldn't do the same things as a group of instruments. So, I got together some good voices, and that was that," Jeff explains simply. Some of those "good voices" belonged to Jo Stafford, Martha Tilton, and "Six Hits and a Miss."

Anyone starting to talk to Mr. Alexander about his work might be a little startled by the mixture of complete abstraction and matter-of-fact straightforwardness. But he speaks more fluently than most writers, and dresses up his bluntest conversation with a sincere smile. Being Jeff Alexander, he wouldn't bother with that smile if it weren't genuine.

Ask him a polite question concerning music generally, and he's likely to suggest a book for your greater erudition on the subject. But ask a specific question and Jeff gives a complete, well-stated reply. He likes things right to the point, employs that line himself, and admits that his weariness with trivia sometimes occasions caustic replies he later regrets.

The same practicality has been applied to Jeff's artistry. Lured from a childhood ambition to become a doctor, Jeff studied music under the late Edmund Ross, and with Joseph Schillinger, teacher of his own musical course (so puzzling to laymen) founded on the theories of harmony, mathematics and physics.

Jeff detests what he calls "phonies," and harbors a tremendous respect for anyone who is a perfectionist.

Cold Business

"Music is a business, just like anything else. If there is no market for whatever a man composes, then he should fit his work to the existing market, and do as good a job as he is able. The outlet is to create the things he likes for himself—'art music' is the technical term—and if that is good, he'll find someone who wants it too. You've got to face commerciality or get out of the field."

Jeff's practicality has expanded his own radio career from choral director and arranger to orchestra conductor and composer. Compositions by Alexander have been performed by symphony orchestras, including the Columbia Symphony, and at Town Hall in New York, where the select "Arrangers' Society Concerts" adopted outgrowths of Jeff's serious hobby for their program. Several of these are poems, taken from the Elizabethan period and set, by Jeff, for voice and orchestra. Best known is the "True Love Hath My Heart" and a William Blake poem, "The Fly."

A credit list of names for whom Jeff has arranged and composed, covering the period from 1937 to 1947, holds such names as Andre Kostelanetz, Raymond Paige, Leopold Stokowski, Mark Warnow, Lyn Murray, Benny Goodman and Georgie Stoll.

He's done extensive commercial recording for the record companies, and background music for a half dozen motion picture companies.

Jeff's current commitment of creating the interesting arrangements for "Amos 'n' Andy" harks back to his original swing chorus. But now he's waxing enthusiastic over the harmonies made by the "Jubilaires," famed colored quartet, against a background of eight other vocalists. The octet and quartet not only blend, but the vocalizing is so skilfully led in and out of the actual orchestration that no break in musical continuity occurs. Fans who have heard the two or three weekly numbers performed by this vocal-instrumental aggregation have to be on their toes to know where the call of a trumpet and the lift of a voice join. The arrangement is quite a trick . . . and Jeff Alexander is just the one to do it.

Finis to Contest

Yes, folks, we're glad it's over—the contest, we mean. You would be, too, if you had insisted on reading all the hundreds of entries we received. We could have farmed the job out, but we here at Radio Life would rather struggle through cartons of your letters and learn first-hand, for ourselves, what radio means to our readers.

We learned a lot, about both you and contests. Some of you found radio indispensable because it had broadened your outlook, especially on world affairs. Some appreciated the priceless entertainment it offered so reasonably. Others valued radio because it was salvation from boredom and loneliness. As a whole, your answers were intelligent, sincere, and to the point.

However, we felt that many of you would have submitted better entries had you answered in less than the maximum wordage allowed. Some of you, in fact, spoiled the effect of a very punchy idea by tacking on a weak conclusion.

What we're leading up to is this: you were all such swell people to write us that we'd like to send all of you a prize, but that of course is ridiculously impossible. We know some of you will be disappointed because you didn't win. Please think of it this way: that someone else said the same thing you did, only better.

On Page 14 you'll find a box enclosing names of the winners. Now, before you turn to that page, please promise something: that if you've been smart enough to win, you'll contact Radio Life, 6361 Selma Avenue, Hollywood 28, at once by letter, telling us your first and second choices for tickets and autographed pictures. In case you've won second and third prizes, also kindly let us know where the gift subscription is to be sent. If you have won first prize, contact us for arrangements for your day in Hollywood.

Next, whether or not you've been a winner this time, promise you'll enter our next contest, which we'll announce in not too many weeks. We plan, as Part II of our contest season, to have a letter-writing competition on "What Radio Life Means to Me." Put on your thinking caps at once and work out a rough draft of your entry, which will probably, in view of our new experience in contests, be limited to twenty-five words.

Thanks again, every one of you loyal fans, and now turn to Page 14!

Rumors Are Flying

The David Street show goes off the air January 30 due to a shortage of the sponsor's product. Show has two potential sponsors to occupy another NBC time slot, however... Disc jockey Ira Cook is expecting to be a father on July 4!... Word from New York agencies indicates that many shows are going to take extended leaves during the summer—seventeen and eighteen weeks instead of the usual thirteen—and will ask the networks to fill in with sustainers... We don't see the reason for it, but rumor hath it that Burl Ives' sponsor is not too happy with the show and changes are in the offing later this month... Mickey Rooney's air character has been switched again. He'll play the product of a slum section when his CBS show gets under way... Bill Boyd's "Hopalong Cassidy" air show with Randy Brooks and Andy Clyde is close to being signed as a summer replacement. Boyd was a straight leading man on the stage and screen before he took to the range, so his radio click should be expected... Randy Stuart, who made such a hit on the Jack Carson show several seasons ago, has been signed by Twentieth and given the lead in "The Chair for Martin Rome"... Eddie Cantor's film bio—a la "Jolson Story"—will be titled "Banjo Eyes"... Hollywood Boulevard theaters are angry at audience participation shows that send contestants in to disturb paying customers with slapstick stunts... Rudy Vallee has written a book about radio, tentatively titled "My Friend Mike"... Don McNeill coming to Hollywood soon to confer on a film about his famous "Breakfast Club" show.

Name it and you can have it—in next week's issue!

Groucho Marx, emcee of "You Bet Your Life," lays it right in the customers' laps, according to next week's feature.

Horace Heidt says "Right this way," in his search for promising young talent.

Frances Scully describes her "Manhattan Merry-Go-Round"—New York trip to you.

"Tokyo Mose" (Hy Averbach) continues his overseas success here at home.

Jay Novello gives out with an interview that definitely tabs him "Man about Mike."

Wax whirler Al Jarvis claims disc jockeying is no cinch. Hm-m-m-m! The platter-twirlers really do earn all that dough, if what Al says is true.

"Melodies America Loves" and loves... and loves... forms basis for a fine musical feature, while Flashbacks glint merrily on their way with Number 12 of this overwhelmingly popular series.

All next week, plus the usual unmissable columns, precasts, and other "musts!"

Abbott-Costello Kid Show

Bud Abbott and Lou Costello are making radio news these days with an entirely different type of radio show than that with which the public mind associates them. Their "Kid Show," heard on KECA, Saturday mornings at 9:00, demonstrates that the two comics can handle the mop-pets with as much ease as they can the adult audience on their night-time comedy show. Broadcast from their Youth Foundation, the program is a combination quiz, audience participation and talent show, with the two emcees going to great lengths to tip off their contestants on the prize-winning answers.

Adult listeners will get their biggest laughs listening to the mad puns and strange sounds Bud and Lou make in an effort to draw the correct answers out of their young hopefuls. Eight youngsters are chosen from the audience for the "Bubble or Nothing" stunt. Child blowing the biggest bubble with his bubble gum wins a prize. Other children get prizes for answering simple quiz questions, and as time runs out, the dialogue is apt to run something like this: Lou: "What's your name?" Child: "Joe." Lou: "Fine! Here's your prize."

Two permanent child members of the show are Johnny McGovern, the eleven-year-old announcer, and Anna Mae Slaughter, a nine-year-old singer. Both children handle their chores with charm and ease.

Most constructive segment of the program (or of any program, for that matter) is the Lou Costello, Junior, Youth Foundation Award. This is presented each week to an outstanding child. The child may live in any part of the country, and the award is given not alone for heroism on the part of the youngster, but also to children who have done an outstanding job in their home life. A recent broadcast spotlighted a thirteen-year-old boy who managed to attend school while working at two jobs to support his family, cook and keep house for his ailing mother and take care of the younger children in the family. In addition to the articles presented with the Award (bicycle, radio and television scholarships, sports equipment and a gold watch engraved from Bud and Lou) the two comedians present the child with a 500-dollar bond toward his future education. This part of the show includes a dramatization of the incident or a characterization of the award-winning child.

Each week a guest takes part in a comedy spot with Bud and Lou—Peggy Ann Garner, Arthur Lake, Red Skelton and Wild Bill Elliott are some of the stars who have appeared on the program.

If your child is interested in attending this comedy show tailored to him and his contemporaries, write or visit the Guest Relations department at the American Broadcasting Company in Hollywood and request tickets.

Mark Warnow Borden Program

The music is the star of Mark Warnow's Borden program, heard on KNX, 6:00 p.m. Wednesday. Mark's talent for dressing up familiar favorites and current hits in sparkling new arrangements without losing the original flavor is well known. This program goes a step farther and gives the listener a running start on each number by prefacing it with pertinent facts about the song and its composer. For instance, did you know that Zez Confrey intended his famous "Kitten on the Keys" and "Dizzy Fingers" piano compositions as a satire on—and a tribute to—the valiant piano players who accompanied the silent films? Or that the famous Southern lullaby, "My Curly-Headed Baby," was written by an Englishman? We didn't until we'd heard Hal Sawyer's informative introductions to these numbers.

Another high point of the program is the spotlighting of five "Tune Teasers," played without name announcement. Listeners are invited to search their memories for the correct titles and compare their guess with the names revealed at the end of the melody. The numbers are usually oldies like "Margie," "I Found a Million-Dollar Baby," "Sleepy Time Gal," etc.

Vocals on the show are handled by the Borden singers under the direction of Gene Langham and by soloists Glen Darwin, Hubert Head and Loulie Jean Norman. If you like music for its own sake, you'll enjoy Mark Warnow's offerings and realize once again that it's talent, not stars, that makes for entertainment as satisfying as this.

"Surprise Theater"

Each Sunday night KNX runs its 8 o'clock show only twenty-five minutes, and allows the 8:25 to 8:30 time for "Surprise Theater." This could easily be of great damage to the neighboring stations on the dial in case of an 8:30 p.m. Sunday Hooper, for once having heard "Surprise Theater," you're likely to desert another show's ending in order not to miss this little favorite.

Narrator Knox Manning relates little-known, capsuled chapters from the lives of people about whom we all know. In the last couple of weeks, for instance, he has told us about the frustration of a boy who learned and yearned, as hard as he was able, for a naval appointment to Annapolis. The appointment came through, but by that time the boy was twenty-one years old—too old to enter. So he chose West Point as next best, and made quite a thing out of a military career. His name? Dwight Eisenhower.

More recently, Mr. Manning told the story behind Enrico Caruso's first rendition of "Pagliacci," which has been acclaimed as his greatest single performance. Caruso's wife urged him to sing the aria, but he always refused, saying he hadn't lived the part. When his faithless wife left, taking the two beloved children with her, Caruso for the first time broken-heartedly sang "Pagliacci." His wife didn't hear it.

Kathleen Hite prepares the scripts for "Surprise Theater." Few radio listeners need to be told about Knox Manning's delivery. The one-half of one per cent "Clem McCarthy" in his voice is just the right proportion to make even his counting up to ten sound interesting. The five-minute story period Sunday evenings is habit-forming.

Playbacks (Critical Comment)

"Two Sleepy People"

"Two Sleepy People" is the name of a Sunday show KHJ presents at 9:15 in the evening. The title was a little mystifying at first. Conjecture ran high as to whether it would be a mystery, a comedy, or an across-the-breakfast-table in reverse. It turned out to be the latter, and the title is no doubt derived from the show's effect on couples who listen to this fifteen minutes.

Virginia Gregg, prominent radio and motion picture actress, plays the role of the talkative but sleepy young wife, and Reed Hadley co-stars as the bored young husband. The resemblance between them and the "Bickersons," a snapping twosome on another network at a different time, is vague but still there. These two Sunday nighters are presumably half-asleep. Tiny plots, situation comedy, we guess, are dimly visible through the fog of abstruse dialogue.

Miss Gregg is a very competent young lady who once played the role, on a different show, of a Japanese character, born in Japan and educated in Boston. She had to sound like an Oriental, yet without an accent. Virginia's that good.

We can redeem Reed Hadley's Sunday night role with mention that he has done numberless terrific parts on the "Red Ryder" show.

Occasionally, flashes of good dialogue creep in to startle listeners into complete wakefulness, and when that happens, it's fun. But we think that the rest of the time the show is as tiresome as the bedtime near-bickering of two people really would be.

On Mike (About Studio Happenings)

Peering at Peck

Someone earlier in the week had described him as "an acting machine." The description probably would have flattered him. Obviously, unlike so many other Hollywood stars of less stature and talent, he was not preoccupied with his own greatness. He was currently starring in two pictures under serious consideration for Academy Awards, and during that week, his familiar face had made the cover of Time Magazine.

Conscientious enough about his craft to justify being described as an acting machine, he was neither a dull nor grim visitor to Miss Parsons' program. When the broadcast was over, he posed for pictures with Miss Parsons. To the photographer he said, while exposing his right profile, "Do you want the other side? The other side is much better."

Accustomed to such requests from film stars, the cameraman said, "Any way you like, Mr. Peck."

Peck's cheeks flushed. "Heck, I was only kidding," he said, visibly embarrassed that the shutter man should have taken him seriously.

He arrived at the ABC studios dressed neatly, but not gaudily. He wore ordinary brown shoes that obviously had been to the shoe repair shop many times. His gray suit had seen much service, too, and it hung loosely. His black and red tie likewise had the dull finish that comes from many wearings. Greg's cheeks were pinched and red, apparent earmarks of his strenuous schedule. He watched the broadcast preparation with the quiet interest of a boy pressing his nose against a bakery window.

He suffered a bad case of mike fright, and he admitted it. He reared back and roared with laughter when Louella, in a falsetto voice, read the commercial announcement in the dress rehearsal.

Louella's male guests invariably take notice—albeit polite notice—of stunningly dressed, attractive script girl Marie Mack, a former model, but Peck, the number one glamour boy of the screen, actually was too concerned with his script to notice.

Yet none—whether a king or queen of the silver screen—ever has been less aware of his own importance, or more aware of how much there was to learn.

To the case-hardened radio personnel in the ABC control booth, who have seen them all come and go, Gregory Peck was a breath of fresh air in a sometimes stale life.

Hawthorne to KRNO

The easiest way to avoid confusion is first to delineate the change. KRNO just moved to 1140 on your dial. KFXM moved into the 590 slot. Jim Hawthorne moved into KRNO for thirty minutes of his regular evening show. This will be heard from 10:30 to 11:00 Monday through Saturday nights.

Jim is also bringing a new show, by direct wire, to KRNO. This daytime stint will be from 10:00 to 11:00 six mornings a week, and will follow the Hawthorne-favored format of a musical department store or the like.

It's with great pleasure that we add . . . Mr. Hawthorne's present air time is undisturbed by all this San Bernardino activity. We will continue to hear all that mad stuff from KXLA at the same mad hour of 10:30 p.m. Monday through Saturday.

Youngest Old-Timer

Though Hal "Gildersleeve" Peary celebrated his twenty-fifth year on the air January 21, he is still under the age of forty. Peary was not quite fifteen when he made his radio debut as a boy soprano over an Oakland, California, station on January 21, 1923.

The day marking his twenty-fifth air anniversary passed with little ado, because Hal was busy at the NBC mikes in "The Great Gildersleeve."

Third Stint

When vocalist Eileen Wilson of Les Brown's band made her January 13 appearance on Bob Hope's program, it was her third warbling on the show within an eight-week period. Customers must like her.

RECORD NOTES TO YOU

By ANDY MANSFIELD

1 note—fair
2 notes—pleasing
3 notes—very good
Chord in G—tops

KWKW, 12.45 p.m. Daily

ALBUM OF THE WEEK: The Delta Rhythm Boys have always been outstanding artists in the vocal group field, but it took their "Dry Bones" album of eight sides to show what a really versatile group can do when they tackle the lovely "If You Are But a Dream," the jumpy "Take the 'A' Train," and the boys' vocal trademark, the spiritual "Dry Bones," and do a bang-up job of harmonizing in as many styles . . . Easily this week's Chord-in-G topper! (RCA-Victor)

RECORD OF THE WEEK: Not only tops this week, but what might well turn out to be the record of the year is the Bing Crosby treatment of the lovely Maori farewell song, "Now Is the Hour." . . . Backed by the stellar Ken Darby singers in a top arrangement, Bing has never sounded better and gives the song just what it needed — the old Crosby nostalgia — and as Mansfield dreams of a South Sea isle, faintly through the palm trees comes a haunting Chord in G. (Decca)

HARRY JAMES ORCH.: If you want to hear the rejuvenated James Boys, get a big earful of "Lone Star Moon" . . . The band really jumps as in days of yore and there's some mighty fine trumpet work to boot . . . reverse "Forever Amber," with a Marion Morgan vocal, is in decided contrast with emphasis on power and dramatic big-band arranging . . . for the three-note department. (Columbia)

JO STAFFORD: Showcased by the lush strings and harp, Jo has another potential hit in "Haunted Heart" . . . but flip it over and Jo's back in them thar hills agin in the slightly confusing but bouncy "I'm My Own Grandmaw" — and this pair of extremes in opposite directions gets the gal an easily deserved three notes. (Capitol)

FRANKIE LAINE: It's about time somebody dug up the hardy perennial, "Shine," and when that somebody happens to be Frankie, let no one else try it, 'cause they're treading on dangerous ground . . . Laine gives the old standard new zip, partly provided by Carl Fischer's arranging and band — but it's Frankie's best to date for a BIG three notes. (Mercury)

TELEVISION TIPS

By Jane Pelgram

The discussion among Hollywood Advertising Club guests Edgar Bergen, president of the Academy of Television Arts & Sciences; Ronald Oxford, executive producer of KFI-TV; Dave Crandall, program director, L.A. Times television; Hal Bock, director of west coast television for NBC; Clint Stanley, Philco television producer; and Paul E. Bryant, television merchandising executive, can't be reported in cold figures. Programming is an ephemeral thing whose composite shows aren't all, as yet, even written. That, incidentally, was one of the points most discussed. Writers were stressed as being in great need. Attention, hopefuls!

Showmanship in programming came in for its proper share of attention, and the realization is apparently strong that there is a need for co-operation from other branches of show business in order that the different mediums not hamper one another in the drive forward.

A highly significant step toward the implementation of at least one type of television programming occurred in the signing of an agreement between a television network and an independent motion picture producer, calling for the production of motion pictures especially for television. Under the terms of the agreement, Jerry Fairbanks Productions will produce for the National Broadcasting Company, during the next five years, feature films of all types and lengths. The films, to be produced on NBC's order, will be made primarily for television showing, and will incorporate special film techniques developed by Fairbanks for television. The network will specify the types of film desired, and will acquire all distribution rights. Fairbanks will be responsible for production under NBC's general supervision.

write job meant. However, he was fated to learn quickly, for about the time he reported for work, a big fire occurred on the Police Pistol Range, and everybody went to that, literally leaving Hank to make up the whole front page. He says he thinks the copy men rewrote practically everything handed them, for the front page, he was sure, looked a lot better than what he'd written.

On the Daily News, Hank met Ken Frogley, then radio editor, and now public relations chief for American Airlines, who heard KHJ and the Mutual network needed a publicity director. Frogley sent Weaver out to apply, but fortunately, says Hank, he didn't get the job. The man to whom he applied was an old college friend of his mother, and so knew Hank's youthful limitations!

Born Henry A. Weaver III, in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, thirty-odd years ago, Hank also lived in Virginia and Kentucky before coming to Southern California. He says that his schooling was "spotty." He attended many different institutions of learning, and what he remembers most from that period is some teacher impressing upon his youthful mind that cucumbers are very bad for you—and now his favorite food is cucumbers with sour cream!

At last young Weaver actually started his radio career when he was hired to do some work for Frank Bull, who was then covering the hockey games at the old Polar Palace. He liked the work, and the radio bug had another victim.

An old hand at all kinds of sports broadcasting, during the course of his career Hank has reported auto racing, baseball, boxing, football, track meets, ice hockey, polo, six-day bike races, air races, speedboat and aquaplane races—and bullfights.

Weaver has conducted more than 1500 radio interviews, including some with such prominent figures as Franklin D. Roosevelt and his son James, Wendell Willkie, John Barrymore, Joe Louis, Orson Welles, and many, many other national and film celebrities.

Hank counts his interview with Wendell Willkie as one of his luckiest breaks. Mike in hand, he waited on the City Hall steps, along with reporters from other radio stations and newspapers, for the arrival of the then candidate for the Presidency of the United States. Finally a cop tipped him off that Willkie would not get out of the car. Pushing through the crowd, Hank was at the curb when the big open car bearing the candidate pulled up. Mrs. Mary Briggs, then postmistress, and Mrs. Fletcher Bowron, wife of the mayor, were there to hand Mrs. Willkie a bouquet of flowers. Hank remembers that in the push he must have knocked those good ladies' hats awry, but he got the interview with Willkie, the only reporter to reach him with a microphone during his brief stop at the City Hall that day.

Memorable Interview

He interviewed President Franklin D. Roosevelt during one of his West Coast tours, also the late President's son James, at the airport one day. But he remembers with the most pleasure an interview which he had with the late great thespian, John Barrymore, in the forecourt of Grauman's Chinese Theatre. Hank wanted a fifteen-minute interview with Barrymore, and had five prepared questions—because Barrymore's attorneys (he was flanked by a battery of five lawyers, for it was at the time of the actor's last marital troubles) had warned him to ask nothing about the star's personal affairs. Hank asked one question, and Barrymore talked for forty-five minutes—one of the most brilliant autobiographies he had ever heard or read, says Weaver. Ad lib and straight from the heart, the famous star reviewed his whole life for the young reporter. He went back to his boyhood and told of a tour he had made with his father in England many years before, right down through his stage and picture career, and freely talked about his current marital difficulties. Hank says that forty-five-minute record is one thing he wants to locate, for it is one of the most terrific stories on Barrymore in existence.

Another highlight of his special events career was the time he obtained an exclusive interview (Hank was then with KEHE, now KECA) with Joe Louis. It seems that once a good while before, Hank, then a punk reporter, had interviewed Joe in the old Main Street gym, when the champ was on his way up. Later Louis came out to fight Jack Roper at Wrigley Field. He had refused to give interviews or make personal appearances, even though he had been offered $5000 to appear on one network broadcast. Hank called Jack Blackburn, Joe's trainer, explained who he was, recalled the incident of his previous meeting with Joe, and the champ and his trainer agreed to come to the station for the interview on a certain day at a certain time. From there on, neither could be reached by phone. The station had thoroughly publicized the fact that they were going to have the only Louis interview to be given before the fight, and KEHE's manager told Weaver if Joe didn't show up as promised, he, Weaver, would be out of a job effective immediately. A quarter-hour before air time, Joe and Trainer Blackburn put in their appearance!

Planning to pull a Paul Gallico, Hank arranged to go down to training quarters and spar with the champ, so he could tell the fans what it felt like. But it so happened he was in a serious auto accident the night he was due at the Louis gym, and next day when he reported for work, swathed in bandages, no one would believe he hadn't been boxing with Louis.

Hank has covered all kinds of catastrophes — the earthquake which shook the All-American Canal, Brawley and El Centro several years ago, and one of the San Fernando Valley's serious floods — as well as several ship launchings and maiden flights, but once he got lost at the Rose Bowl!

With pack transmitter, his helper monitoring the station with a portable radio, which was the only means of contact in those days, he walked the line of the Rose Tournament Parade along Colorado Boulevard. Climbing on floats interviewing the pretty girls, describing the color of the event and weaving in and out of the throng, he lost his helper and so his contact with the station. When they did get together, the station was broadcasting an appeal for aid in locating "one fat blond with a pack transmitter on his back, somewhere along the parade line on Colorado Boulevard in Pasadena!"

So goes life with a news and special events man in radio! And events such as these would probably have gone on and on in unbroken succession had it not been for Dec. 7, 1941. Early in '42, Hank decided to join the Marine Corps, and from there on, for the next three years and some months, he took a very active part in the biggest "special event" of our time. Hank went from private to PFC, and came out with five stripes—tech sergeant to you. He served in a guard battalion, public relations, advanced training, and finally got a combat correspondent warrant while in Kamehala on Hawaii, and so started 35,000 miles of travel by air in the Pacific. He visited twenty-seven islands and spent five months aboard troop assault transports reporting the progress of the war. He saw action aplenty, from the securing of Peleliu to the assault and capture of Iwo Jima, where his report of the flag-raising ceremonies at Suribachi was the first filed and carried by Associated Press.

In Japan

Weaver covered the initial occupation of Japan with the second and fifth Marine divisions. He was with the first landing force to go ashore on Kyushu. Planning an inspection tour of Sasebo, third largest Japanese naval base, Hank's jeep was nearly submerged in a "launching" accident, and he says one of his most satisfactory moments of the war followed when he had the pleasure of steering the jeep while seven officers pushed him up out of the sea!

Hank found that his jeep had been stripped of rifles, and he went ashore on his inspection tour armed only with his forty-five and his knife. He carefully removed the clip from the revolver because he didn't want to get nervous and shoot a citizen. He found the streets deserted, with only the Japanese civilian police in evidence, and they saluted him properly and often, having been instructed to salute all Americans.

Hank was on occupation duty for six months before being ordered back to the States. He was most impressed by the respect of the Japanese for law and order. It was this characteristic, he thinks, which helped to

Pint-Sized Scribe

Kathleen lives alone in a Hollywood apartment, does her own cooking and housework, and still finds time for an indoor hobby.

"Luckily, reading is my favorite pastime. I think a writer must read continuously and broadly in order to avoid a repetitious use of the same words in her own writing."

Kathleen particularly enjoys Arthur Koestler, Thomas Wolfe and Somerset Maugham.

The scripter admits that she listens to her own air-borne efforts only when it's something she's particularly pleased with, and adds grinningly that she's come in for a shock or two in the hearing.

"I'd introduced a Dutch character named 'Maxim' into a 'City' script on one occasion. The role was that of a not entirely honest art dealer . . . a 'fence' is the proper term, I guess. While writing his dialogue, I'd stayed away from making him seem especially evil. In imaginary form 'Maxim' was a cherubic-faced, definitely Germanic, rather cultured crook.

"I was feeling pretty smug about the whole story, and wanted to hear it on the air because one of the best character actors and dialecticians in the business was doing the part. Why I'll never know, but both the actor and the producer interpreted 'Maxim's' role as that of an Oriental! Hearing my apple-cheeked little 'Maxim' hiss away in the most sinister chop-suey fashion turned one of my favorite dramatic efforts into perfect low comedy . . . at least for me."

lic—I imagine it is to be in a Protestant church by the name of the letter writer, but that makes no difference, it's a worthy cause, and we all worship the same God." . . . "As an orthodox Jewess, I am pleased to join in this goodwill army, with the hopes of a better world." . . . "May each chime be a prayer for peace especially in religions." . . . "I am a person who does not believe in religion as such, but who does firmly believe in the power of people's combined faith."

Pennies came from all sorts of organizations and businesses—from the girls in the collar department of a shirt factory, from an American Legion auxiliary, from the staff of radio station WROX in Clarksdale, Mississippi, from nine girls in the kitchen of Mt. Clemens General Hospital, Michigan, from the code room of the Air University, Maxwell Field, Montgomery, Alabama.

The letters that accompanied the pennies told all sorts of stories, expressed all sorts of reasons. One woman who sent a zinc penny got Page Thirty-two worried for fear the metal wasn't right for the bell—followed it with three coppers. A woman with six girls and two boys, who had been living in a deserted boxcar for 18 months with barely enough to eat, sent in nine pennies. Three Norwegian airmen visiting in New York heard the program, contributed. A fireman wrote, "I do nothing but listen to bells all day. I'm glad to be part owner in a different bell." Another contributor said, "Being Scotch, I couldn't waste a three-cent stamp to send a penny. So I'll send ye twenty-five cents and one cent." With an invalid daughter to support, a poverty-stricken woman, herself ill and out of work for three months, sent one of her last remaining fourteen pennies. And a man who had had no work for over nine months and who was living with friends found a penny on the street. "Without a doubt God must have placed it there so that I might have a penny to send in on the bell. I could have asked for a penny of my friends, but I wanted one I felt was of my own."

People sent pennies in memory of their parents, of boys lost in the service, of a policeman killed while tracking down a murderer, of children run down by automobiles, or they sent them for no reason at all. A man wrote: "In a letter from my sister from Iowa I was asked to send a penny to this name and box number. I was not told why—but if one penny means anything, maybe two pennies can mean twice as much." One woman, who heard only the part asking for the penny, sent hers, saying, "You know better than I why you want pennies, but I am delighted to heed your request."

Favorite Coins

To many senders, a penny was not enough. They sent the penny—coins which for various reasons had endeared themselves. One woman sent a whole collection of English pennies from the time of George II and George III. Good luck pennies came in by the score. A woman wrote, "Nine years ago my father died. There are seven of us children and in my father's pocket we found seven pennies, and each of us children took a penny to keep. Now I am sending you my penny so the memory of my dear dad will ring out in that bell." And a seventeen-year-old, whose ambition was to play major league ball, sent in his, found just as he stepped on the mound to pitch what turned out to be a no-hit game. "I swore I would never lose that penny, but after hearing about the bell, I felt it only my duty, even though I am of a different religion, to send that penny to you. If my future of playing ball comes true, I hope the bell will ring whenever I win a game in the majors."

But the most delightful letter of all—or so "Heart's Desire" staffers thought when they read it—the one which expressed the utmost innocence and faith—was from a woman in Wilmington, North Carolina. Very brief, it read as follows:

"Enclosed find one penny, for which please send me the bell. Am very anxious to see one and know what it is used for."

Men of Music: Jeff Alexander

joys the work immensely, and in line with that perfectionist admiration, never fails to mention Freeman Gosden and Charles Correll, who are respectively "Amos" and "Andy."

"I've never seen them build a show without meticulousness. Before anything is right . . . everything's got to be right. That's one way to stay successful for over twenty years as they have."

You can tell what those two, with their penchant for correctness and detail, think of Jeff's handling of their music by the free hand they give him.

Jeff, Constance Frost Alexander and their five-year-old daughter, Jill, live in the beautiful Bel-Air district, and while Jeffs lauds California for all-year-round living where one can play tennis and ride horseback any day, he can't quite conceal an occasional nostalgia for New York.

"Principally I miss the theater," Jeff confides, and in typical Alexander fashion adds, "If it's good, you can enjoy it. If it's bad, you can pick it apart."

The serious hobby of composing keeps Jeff relentlessly working whenever he gets a moment, and for pure relaxation he slumps by the recording machine, listening to his voluminous record collection. Each waxing has the written orchestral score accompanying it, and these Jeff follows as he listens, still terming these mental acrobatics "relaxation."

To any hint about a home hobby, Jeff bluntly disposes of such a possibility by announcing, "I'm the least active sort around the house you can imagine. If I were to attempt handiwork of any sort, I'd knock my thumb off with a hammer."

make the occupation much easier than had been expected.

While on occupation duty in Japan, Hank didn't neglect his sportscasting. He broadcast the first "Atom Bowl Game" from Nagasaki's Atom Field No. 1, on January 1, 1946, using a hastily assembled PA system.

Bachelor Hank has purchased a new home in Rancho Vista and is busily engaged in getting that in order—so busy, in fact, that he has to neglect his hobby of making ship models. It might be added that Hank's model ships are not the modern, sleek men-o'-war such as he became so familiar with during those years in the Pacific, but ancient frigates . . . seventeenth century models.

↑ WHEN "CRUISING CROONER" TIME COMES each morning on the "Breakfast Club," Jack moseys around and serenades the ladies without regard to age or beauty. The objects of his amour range from grandmothers to bobby soxers.

↑ HARMONY TIME. EVERY FREE MOMENT Jack has is spent with his family—Mary Ann, Noel and Johnny. His charming wife, a non-professional, is quite content to remain out of the limelight . . . but finds running a home around Jack's hours rather strenuous.

The Career That Jack's Built

Swooners From Six to Sixty Like the Owens Technique. Song-Writer and Plugger Jack Is Equally Popular With the Wife and Kids

JACK OWENS, the "cruising crooner" of ABC's "Breakfast Club," has written many song hits, but he, himself, recorded his latest, "How Soon," at this writing definitely destined for a "Hit Parade" top-notch.

Owens is probably one of the most mobile singers in any medium, including light opera. His "cruising crooner" title—incidentally, he was the first to use this technique—comes from the fact that he wanders through the studio audience, serenading feminine fans face-to-face. Jack is noted for many "firsts" in addition to the "cruising crooner" routine. His writing of the "Hut-Sut Song" started the trend of the glibberish-type song, and although he is not the first to write and record his own tune, he is one of the few song writers in the country capable of doing that.

That Well-fed Look

Jack's fan club, whose hundreds of members have as their slogan "It's Really Sublime at Cruising Crooner Time," is proof that to be a popular singer one need not look undernourished. He is not sad-eyed, nor does he wear drape-shape suits. Rather he is robust, chronically cheerful, handsome instead of "cute," wears ordinary business suits, and eats three hearty meals a day. The "cruising crooner" might never have embarked on the airwaves if it hadn't been for a broken arm—which just goes to prove that it's the "breaks" that count. Jack was planning a career as an athlete, when a broken arm forced him to find something less strenuous to do. His talents included a pleasing baritone and the ability to play the piano. The latter was temporarily out of use, but his voice was unimpaired, so he took a job with a radio station in his native Wichita.

That was the start of his singing career, which in 1932 led him to Chicago. A few months later he won a singing contest and became a singer with the late Hal Kemp's celebrated orchestra.

Used to "Dub" for Films

Jack joined the "Breakfast Club" in 1934, and was with them until 1936, when he went to Hollywood to sing voice doubles for James Stewart, James Ellison, and other stars. It was while he was in the film capital that he turned to song writing. His first tune, "Round-Up Time in Reno," was so successful that Jack was encouraged to write others, and "Louisiana Lullaby," "I Dood It," "Cynthia's in Love," "Hi, Neighbor," and the "Hut-Sut Song" followed. In Hollywood, Jack made his film debut with Mae West in "The Heat's On," and was starred over the Blue Network in his own program, "Song Shop Romance." In 1944 he returned to Chicago and rejoined the "Breakfast Club."

His "cruising crooner" routine began one morning when he spotted his wife in the audience. He grabbed a microphone and serenaded her on bended knee. The audience loved it so much that it became a part of his morning routine. He serenades any ladies, without regard to age or beauty.

The Happy Family

A family man, Jack and his attractive blonde wife have three children, Mary Ann, 13; Johnny, 10, and Noel, 6. Jack is a first-rate golfer, bowler, swimmer, and squash player, and in his spare time—what spare time?—he writes short stories and song lyrics at the rate of one a week. His fan club is named the "Owens Swooners."

We Took a Walking Tour of Station KFI, Peeked Into Some of the Studios and Met the Personalities Airing From There

DISPLAYED under a glass-topped table in station KFI's circular entrance hall is a small mechanism labeled as KFI's first transmitter. The comparison between the large modern broadcasting building and its modest beginnings parallels the original purpose of Earle C. Anthony's station and its eventual accomplishments.

In 1922, the little five-watter was constructed on a kitchen table. Mr. Anthony intended to link, via radio, his automobile establishments in Los Angeles, San Francisco and Oakland. Six years later the station had this imposing list of pioneer achievements to its credit: the first symphony concert broadcast in the West came from KFI in 1924; also in 1924, the first broadcast from a grand opera stage was transmitted through the station, the first West-East transcontinental broadcast (the Alabama-Stanford Rose Bowl game) originated from KFI in 1926.

Since 1939, the station has been housed in the big building on Vermont Avenue in Los Angeles. Efficiently designed, the individual studios are whimsically named. Studio C is the "Coral Studio," Studio D is the "Diamond," E is for "Emerald" while B is "Blue." In each case the room is painted to live up to its name.

Visiting the Studios

It was in the bright "Coral Studio" that we found Chuck Collins, just going off the air at 10:00 a.m. Chuck was still seated at his piano as we were introduced. After a hearty hand-shake, he settled down to answering interested questions about the mechanics of his radio show. Because he is blind, Chuck must transcribe his type-written script into Braille. Being more than triple-threat talent, the entertainer finds this easy. He writes his own show and types his own script on an ordinary typewriter for the station records. He can read Braille at the rate of 250 words a minute. Comparing this rate of speed to human speech, Chuck told us that fast-talking Sam Hayes averages about 180 words a minute. In addition to his four hours of desk work a day, Chuck manages public appearances and lecture dates at the Braille Institute. What, we wanted to know, did he do in his spare time? "Read good books—for the good of my immortal soul—do the repair work around the house and sometimes the washing."

Joan Schafer of KFI's "What Do You Think" program was busily opening some of her mail when we found her in the "Emerald Studio." Joan averages from 300 to 500 letters a day, "and they're wonderful letters," she enthused. "Women are thinking, these days." The vivacious Joan, together with husband Howard and daughter Mike, has been spending her spare time, she told us, in rebuilding and furnishing a ranch home in Fontana. "I've even been mixing cement," she laughed. Though the work has been hard, Joan has enjoyed every minute of it. "I've always lived in the city and been a country girl at heart. When I get letters now about living in the country, I can really expound on the subject."

Meeting the B's

In the big auditorium studio where "Favorite Story" and the "KFI Young Artists Auditions" are presented, we found the "Ladies' Day" gang just breaking up rehearsal. "The Four B's," Bill Stulla, Paul "Buzz" Owens, Buddy Jobe and Bob Mitchell, proved to be as congenial a foursome off the ether as they are on. Working together on the air has given their

Spotlight on Serials

No. 11 of a Series

"Ma Perkins"

AS IN ALL SMALL TOWNS, a big part of the residents' lives is the Sunday gathering of the clan at church. "Shuffle," "Evey," "Willy," "Fay" and "Ma" have their own row for the weekly services.

Who Plays the Role of "Ma" on This Serial of Long-Standing Popularity? Here's a Peek Behind the Mike

DIALERS who daily visit Rushville Center know "Ma Perkins" to be an ageless widow of sixty or so, with a heart of gold and a world of common sense. When Ma's husband died some years ago, she took over the Perkins lumberyard and has run it ever since to support herself and two daughters.

As in every small community over America, a good many situations can arise around "Ma," her family and friends, to test "Ma's" theory that people should be active, though not interfering, Christians. And this principle has never been compromised.

Story Personalities

All the "folks" in "Ma's" circle are definite individuals. "Ma's" eldest daughter, "Evey," is about thirty-five years old. She's shrewish, and likes to try to "keep up with the Joneses." Her irritation is based on striving to make ends meet—ends which are usually pretty far apart. That, and the fact that her husband is not the success he would like to be.

"Evey" has a son, a Rushville Center version of a refined "Dead End" kid. But beneath "Evey's" sharp changes of attitude from pleasantry across the bridge table with the wealthier people in town, to occasional billingsgates directed at her husband, she is a warm, kind person. Understanding and making allow-

KINDLY "MA PERKINS," central character of the serial. Everyone in town who needs a friend winds up on "Ma's" doorstep.

"SHUFFLE SHOBER" is "Ma's" business partner in the Perkins lumberyard and a devoted friend of her family. Charles Egelston plays the role.

EVEY FITZ, the elder daughter who suffers from wanting just too much, is portrayed by Kay Campbell.

MOST MODERN of "Ma's" family and friends is her daughter "Fay," played by actress Rita Ascot. (Seymour photo.)

"WILLY FITZ," who keeps his head in the clouds and a flashy tie at his throat, is enacted by Murray Forbes.

"in person" humor a sharpness and never-flagging spontaneity.

"Buzz" Owens was chided for facing the camera with us sans necktie, so he scouted around and came up with one that had been sent him by a listener. "Your 'listener'?" we wondered. "My 'other listener,'" he amended.

The "Downtown and All Around" couple, Mary and Harry Hickox, were just thanking their guest of the day, Josephine Aleman Kohn, for her appearance on the program when we met them in the corridor. "You've got to see Josephine's wonderful little car," they insisted. Outside the building was one of the tiny Play-boy convertibles which Harry had driven up on the sidewalk in demonstration. "Here come the cops!" warned Harry as the photographer clicked. It was only a gag, but the car's owner hastily returned it to the curb after the picture.

News and Records

No tour of a radio station is complete without a visit to two of the busiest spots in the organization, the news room and the record library. The former is a bustling department where the clicking of the teletypes punctuates the work of Pat Bishop, who does "Feature Wire"; news reporter Ted Myers; Jack Latham and his "Eleventh Hour News," and analysts Fleetwood Lawton and Car-veith Wells.

KFI's record library has more than ten thousand discs catalogued and filed. Everything within reason (and some collector's items that are invaluable) in the world of music is within reach, from the hottest jazz to the most austere classics. Popular record jockeys Al Poska ("Midnight Flyer"), ay-em-er Bob Phillips and George Dvorak ("Operation Daybreak"), dip into the huge collection for material for their shows.

Genial Art Baker, who dispenses some of the most popular air fare on the local scene, hardly has time these days to discuss his homey "Notebook" series. When we saw the attractive Mr. Baker he informed us that he had just finished work in one movie, "State of the Union," and would be starting another, "Walls of Jericho," the very next day. Still another, "Homecoming," has recently been completed by the actor-philosopher-commentator.

Twenty-five years has seen an amazing growth in radio generally and KFI in particular. Newest addition to the station's schedule is its FM broadcasting, especially notable for musicologist Jose Rodriguez's "World of Music" series of classical recordings heard nightly at 6:00. General manager W. B. Ryan predicts that early 1948 will see KFI's next step — television production under the supervision of Ron Oxford, well-known television pioneer who is also in charge of FM for the station. The television transmitter was recently installed on Mount Wilson. From five watts to television—that's the story of KFI!

ances for "Evey" are not hard. Her moods reflect those of millions of hearers for whom things aren't always smooth financially and socially, either.

Her husband, "Willy," is a lovable character of about thirty-eight, who likes flashy clothes and cigars, and can best be described as a "good joe." "Willy" intermittently has schemes that will make him a million dollars—but never do. He is devoid of a sense of humor.

"Fay" is "Ma's" younger daughter. She is about twenty-eight, and while essentially a small edition of "Ma," on occasion she falls thoroughly at the mercy of her emotions. "Fay" has been married, but her husband, "Congressman Paul Henderson," was killed some time ago.

"Ma's" partner in the lumberyard, "Shuffle Shober," is a bachelor, devoted to "Ma" and her family. "Shuffle" is used as "Willy's" foil, for just as the eager "Mr. Fitz" has no sense of humor, old "Shuffle" has a very good one.

Typical Village

These are the central characters among the very real people who live in Rushville Center, a town of probably 4000 or 5000 people. It has a bank and a banker; a moving picture house; Charley Brown's grocery store; Main and tree-named streets; a typical station master, Mr. Sweeney, and trains that never seem to be on time. It has, too, a wonderful intimacy, which never seems to become gossipy or back-scratching.

↑ FEATURED COMEDIENNE of the Jack Benny program, Mary Livingstone is still telling off the comedian each Sunday. In private life, Mary is happily married to the Waukegan wit—as if you didn't know.

Rushville Center celebrates American holidays vigorously. There is warmth and friendliness, and a little bit of sleepiness—except on "Ma's" part—to be found in this typical American locality.

Sponsor Procter and Gamble realizes that fondness and long familiarity with "Ma" (this Oxydol series has been on the networks since December, 1933) have made her and the warm, honest problems she deals with very real to her audience. Consequently they've never disturbed the illusion with any information concerning the able, talented woman who does the air role.

"Ma's" followers who hug the world of make-believe to them aren't going to supplant her image with that of her portrayer. But radio fans like to know about the people who provide them with entertainment, and certainly no mention of Virginia Payne, eastern actress of repute, in connection with "Ma" is going to upset the kindly old lady's image in any fan's heart or mind.

"Ma's" Creator

Her first check from radio was earned when Virginia was cast as the "speaking voice" and Jane Froman as the "singing voice" of "Honey Adams," heroine of a Southern radio drama. The production supervisor had wanted a Southern girl with an authentic drawl to play the heroine. More than forty actresses, some from Georgia, Carolina and Alabama, were tested, and Virginia won over them all. Then the manager asked from what part of the South Virginia hailed.

"I had to confess meekly that I'd always lived in Cincinnati!" laughs Virginia.

For several years she worked as radio actress. Miss Payne went to Chicago with the cast of "Ma Perkins" when the popular serial switched from WLW to the NBC Chicago studios. Now she's moved to New York with the show.

"After all this time, 'Ma Perkins' is just like my other self!"
