MICHAEL ANSARA

... Defended

Mrs. L. L. J., Highgrove

I think J.N.K. of Monterey Park is absolutely crazy, thinking that anyone could play Cochise any better than Michael Ansara. I'm a serious fan of Broken Arrow and will stand ground for both actors. Remember J.N.K., you have a channel selector, so do less griping and use it.

Mrs. M. A., Thousand Oaks

We weep, as do many of our friends because "they" took Noah's Ark away. It was the best program we viewed and, we felt, a fine influence for youngsters as well as grownups. We have so many "people" programs! We need our four-footed friends. Here's hoping we have Noah's Ark back!

H. K., Manhattan Beach

Why, oh why will people go out of their way to criticize a TV performer, when so much more good could be accomplished if they'd spend that time writing to the ones they do like, giving them a boost? Sure, there are some on TV that I don't like, but I've more and better things to do than try to run them down.

If the O'Brien family in Banning doesn't like Alice Lon, why complain? There are other shows on at that time. It's easier to turn the dial than write a letter. I happen to think that little Alice Lon is doing a grand job, and judging from the size of the fan club, I'd say there are a lot of others who think the same thing.

JOI LANSING

... Praiseworthy

A. C. F., San Bernardino

That was certainly a wonderful feature story of Actress Joi Lansing. She states that blondes are a dime a dozen in Hollywood, but in my opinion she is away above that class. Her story is very unusual. How often do you find a good looking actress that doesn't smoke or drink. I think that is a wonderful record and I wish her all the good things that any girl could wish for in this world.

NAT "KING" COLE

Mrs. K. S., Whittier

What is wrong with the sponsors? A wonderful talent like Nat "King" Cole is let go by! Someone better get on the gravy train. Ouch!! I have never written you before, but after reading your letters for years, I couldn't resist.

So please—can't someone get in back of that guy?

B. C., Santa Ana

I think L.B. of L.A. is wrong about Disney having prize dolls in Annette and Darlene. I think he has prize dolls in Annette, Darlene and Doreen. All three do a wonderful job. Would like to see more of them.

Mr. F. C. H., Riverside

I read where Mrs. W. F. of North Hollywood thinks that Noah's Ark was "real corn!" I feel sorry for her. Somewhere along the way she's missed the boat. (No pun intended.) When the relationship between humans and animals become corny—then I hope I'm not around. I hope my children won't think it's corny or square to show love for their pets. How can the love of a man or woman or child for a dog, cat, or even a squirrel be considered "corny?" Mrs. W. F. must be a very unhappy person.

IS RAYMOND BURR Gambling WITH HIS CAREER?

Some say he is because the new CBS-TV Perry Mason series . . . a one-hour mystery show . . . has never been attempted before.

By Ted Hilgenstuhler

RAYMOND BURR as he appears in court as "Perry Mason." Seated is co-star Barbara Hale. Part of intrigue in hour-long CBS-TV show is the "inductive" process, whereby the audience learns the clues the same time as attorney Mason.

EVER HEAR of a fellow who gets younger as he grows older? "It can't be done," you say. Well, then, listen to the tale of Mr. Raymond Burr, one of Hollywood's finest actors and the star of the new hour-long KNXT-CBS-TV Perry Mason series.

Altogether the husky, square-shouldered star has appeared in ninety different motion pictures, and in dozens of TV shows, both film and "live." Just a few of his outstanding film roles were the district attorney in "A Place In The Sun" who sent Montgomery Clift to the chair; the traveling salesman-murderer in "Rear Window;" and the psychopath in "Cry In The Night."

"Until recently, I've always played character roles. Usually of someone who is older than myself. Why, when I was 25 years old, I was portraying people twice my age. Now I'm playing leading men more my age. And I hope to continue to do so for quite some time. Maybe 10 or 20 years from now, I'll go back to character roles."

And here we see one of the main reasons why Raymond Burr decided to do the Perry Mason series.

Tired of Old Men

In his own words: "I think this series will definitely put me in the leading man category. Right now I'm tired of playing old men.

"With the tax structure the way it is, the only way an actor can make money these days is by forming his own company. I now have my own company, and we have five shows ready to produce. The exposure and reputation I get from the Perry Mason series will help a great deal when I finally come out with my own productions."

"So you see," the manly, dark-haired actor smiles, "no one has more to gain—and no one has more to lose—than I have on this TV series."

While Raymond's reputation as an actor may be at stake in the 39 hour-long productions, financially he's already well ahead of the game.

He didn't care to state exactly how much he's making for this grinding series, but he did say "it's the best deal, I think, that anyone has made in TV so far. I have no complaints about the financial arrangements," he smiled again.

The impressive looking, distinguished, and completely friendly actor smiled quite often during our interview. And well he should. Because it was the first day off he had had in several months.

Finest Crew

"We've already completed 12 of the 39 shows, and it's without a doubt the toughest assignment I've ever had in my life.

"Believe me I couldn't do the job I do without the help of every single person at the Western Avenue studios.

I've made quite a few movies since I've been in Hollywood, and have worked on a lot of TV shows, but this bunch is undoubtedly the finest all-around crew I've ever known."

"They think of everything for me—from coffee in the morning, to a special chair they chipped in and bought for me. Sometimes I work from 2:30 in the morning until 11 or 12 o'clock at night. Because the audience uncovers all the clues in each case with Perry Mason, I have to be on camera practically all the time."

To give the reader an idea of how much CBS-TV is depending upon this new series and Mr. Burr, the weekly budget for the hour-long drama runs between $100,000 and $125,000 per program.

So now we all have a pretty fair idea of why an established actor like Burr decided to gamble his career on this new series.

The pay is tops.

The role is challenging.

The crew is the finest he's ever known.

The network is sparing no expense to make Perry Mason a first class production.

And the future for Raymond Burr's career as one of Hollywood's outstanding leading men looks brighter than ever.

So Mr. Burr is really not gambling at all. He's holding a Royal Flush—in spades.

OVER THE YEARS, Raymond Burr has established himself as one of Hollywood's top "Character" actors. Here he is as he appeared as a padded, aged, white-haired salesman-murderer in "Rear Window."

JOAN CAULFIELD looks very oo-la-la in this pose from her new series which has her scampering over Europe with madcap Marion Lorne.

MR. FRANK ROSS AND MRS. ROSS
(Joan Caulfield)

Frank Ross got himself all tangled up in television because of a lady.

By Evelyn Bigsby

I DIDN'T WANT TO, but I did — to keep my wife quiet." Speaking was well-known motion picture producer Frank Ross. The thing he shied from doing was TV — but he succumbed to keep Joan Caulfield happy.

Joan was bitten by the TV bug some three years ago when she co-starred with Barry Nelson on My Favorite Husband. Other career activities, travel and building and decorating the new Ross home kept her occupied until recently when Frank noticed that she was reading and mulling several television scripts.

"I asked her if she was getting serious again about TV and when she said 'Maybe,' I decided I ought to do something. Some of the scripts she was reading were not good."

Thinking that he would find the suitable format for his star-wife, Ross proceeded to crystallize the NBC-KRCA series, Sally, cast it, obtain writers and plan schedules. "I thought I would produce the show for about three months," he explained later, "but frankly I got hooked."

"I have found television hard work. I had to analyze and digest it and see what makes a TV show. TV is not the same as the movies. No matter how busy I was in pictures I always had time for my golf. I had never worked fourteen hours a day before but now I have found there are certain kicks in being that busy," Ross summarized.

Time Is Essence

Principal difference between picture and television production he found to be the time element. A 30-minute film show, to stay in financial bounds, must be brought in for around $50,000. This means stepped-up production all down the line. In contrast Ross recalled that his picture, "The Robe," had one half-hour scene which cost a million dollars.

The accelerated pace helped to make TV an enormous challenge to Ross. Before he knew it he was automatically planning a year ahead, juggling his motion picture commitments with his TV even before he openly admitted that he was eager to continue with the Sally series.

August 23 he completed TV shooting, left the same day for Europe where he is producing "Kings Go Forth" with Frank Sinatra starring. Two weeks after he returns to Hollywood he will start TV again on October 15. November 1 he will begin on the body of the motion picture.

"No time for golf" sums up the situation. "TV has jointly usurped both Joan's time and mine," he complained pleasantly. "She is up at 6. We are both busy all day. We have dinner between 9 and 10 p.m. When I decided to produce Joan's TV series, we both laid out a set of rules. One was never to bring home our work. We found this impossible. After a short time we agreed to forget the rules."

They had found that frustrations from the work day inevitably had sneaked into dinner conversations. Often instead of dropping off into quick sleep the producer and star found themselves mentally and sometimes literally walking the floor.

Difficult

Another rule impossible to observe was that Miss Caulfield was to come to the TV studio as a performer, not as the wife of the producer and that Mr. Ross was to come to the office as the producer and not Miss Caulfield's husband.

This was equally as difficult to carry out and as quickly discarded. "If Joan were not my wife, and as the star was wearing a hat which I did not like, I would simply tell her not to wear it. Under the circumstances with Joan my wife, I use another approach. 'I wonder if that hat is characteristic of Sally,' I might remark, And my comment would probably meet with a blank stare. Then I would add that the 'dangles distract from your eyes' — to gain my objective, I would have to detour by way Schemectady."

Frank Ross claims he would not dream of producing a TV series for any star other than his wife. She is completely happy with his television venture. As for him, "I like to kid myself that the show couldn't get along without me."

IN HER NEW SERIES, SALLY, JOAN CAULFIELD plays the role of a salesgirl who happily becomes companion to a wealthy screwball. (Played by Marion Lorne, right, formerly of the Peepers Show). The two women start travelling around the world, a circumstance bound to provoke hilarious situations.

Make Way for Polly

Polly Bergen was once finding the road tough. Now she can write her own ticket after the Helen Morgan Story.

By Jack Holland

WHEN POLLY BERGEN appeared on CBS-KNXT's playhouse 90 production of the Helen Morgan story, a new star was born.

Not that Polly wasn't doing all right before this in night clubs, TV, and in other fields of entertainment. But this was the turning point. This was it.

Polly had been appearing regularly on To Tell the Truth and has sparked the proceedings considerably but this Playhouse 90 show was such an unqualified success from all counts that it was almost as though Polly had never been seen before.

"After I had been rehearsing the Helen Morgan show a few days I was aware that this was the one that could make me or break me," Polly said when I saw her in New York. "Yet I was afraid it had been publicized too much, that I was being press-agented right into a hole, that people would be expecting a remake of 'Gone With the Wind' from me.

"The first script I read was much different from the show that went on the air. In fact, the script I had a week before we went on was different. From the beginning, though, I was sure I couldn't do the part. I hadn't worked with the director, George Roy Hill, before, and I thought I couldn't do it without a director who would really help me. George and I worked together every day, apart from rehearsals, and by the time we had been rehearsing two weeks I felt confident I would do a better than average job. But I still had no idea how I'd be accepted by the public — if at all.

"My main concern was that I didn't want this to be a kind of copy of 'I'll Cry Tomorrow.' In fact, up to three days before the show went on I wasn't playing any drunk scenes at all. We finally decided we had to do one drunk scene if we were to correctly depict the life of Helen Morgan. That scene was the one which took place after Helen had lost the baby. In spite of such care to avoid any similarity between 'I'll Cry Tomorrow' and our show, we were still compared to the movie.

Turning Point

"This Playhouse 90 show was the turning point for me. It's the peak of my career. I'd been interested in doing the Helen Morgan story for some time and had been doing research on it for five years. My company bought the rights at last — but not until Warners had turned down the chance to buy the property. I know statements have been made since that the TV show was a deliberate slap at the picture, that the TV program would hurt the chances of the movie Warners finally made on Helen Morgan, but the facts are still that the studio had the chance to buy the rights to the story and didn't. And I am still convinced that the program we did will only help the box office future of the movie."

Polly may soon start another program of her own, but this is uncertain for now. NBC wanted her to do a show to alternate with Dean Martin's but she turned that down. Interestingly enough, her contract with CBS allows her to make outside appearances, so she has appeared on more NBC shows than she has on CBS.

"I'd frankly rather do a show every other week — or better yet, one a month — instead of a weekly one," Polly said. "I don't go for too much exposure. I've had several chances to do a series but I couldn't find the property I wanted. Everyone is having her own show this fall. If I don't do one too, I'll be the only female guest star in the business," Polly laughed.

To Tell the Truth

"I've enjoyed doing To Tell the Truth because it has given me a chance to be myself. The first few weeks I wasn't too sure of myself. I felt like a lost man. I was certain I was the stupidest panelist on TV since I didn't get one right answer. I even went to the producer and told him I should leave, but he said he hadn't hired a mental giant — he had hired an entertainer.

"I have a ball on the show now. It's a chance for me to be me off the cuff. I have no time to stop and think of being someone else. I get so engrossed in the proceedings that I actually get furious when the contestants are lying to me, even though I know they're supposed to lie. It's part of the game.

"Somehow people identify themselves with me. People stop me on the street and say that it was amazing I couldn't tell that number 2 was the correct contestant — that they knew it all along, I can only tell them that they may be right but I'm getting paid for guessing."

Polly is now a confirmed New Yorker, living in an apartment which she and her husband, Freddie Fields, just bought. Their ten-year-old daughter is another reason for Polly's happily settled state.

"I won't do any pictures or anything else that takes me from my New York and my family," Polly remarked. "I don't have enough time with my husband and daughter as it is. I see no chance of my changing this resolve either since now I can pick and choose what I do. Before Helen Morgan I had to do things I didn't really like because I needed the check. So many fine talents are clipped in the bud because of the financial necessity to do jobs that are often had for them. A few years ago, I did a benefit for a person on TV on whose shows I had appeared quite often. I hadn't sung for a while before that benefit, I was rusty, and the man didn't like what I did on the program. As a result, it was two years before I was on his TV show again."

Now, with her TV success, her Columbia albums of "Bergen Sings Morgan" and "The Party's Over," Polly is resting cozily in clover. She's probably the hottest star on TV today, and she looks like a sure Emmy contender.

This young lady has arrived.

JON SHEPODD HAD A right to be all smiles this week. He was signed by Jack Wrather Productions to play the father in the new Lassie TV series. Contract runs four years. He'll be seen for first time in mid-November on KNXT.

THE LOS ANGELES RAMS are happy about a lot of things these days. The team seems to be coming back from last year's slump—and so is Quarterback Norman Van Brocklin (right). In addition, Norm congratulates Kent Goodman, president of Advertising Agencies, for picking up sponsorship of Rams' games on KMPC radio for Volvo, the Swedish-built family car. Will Sherman, center, looks on.

THIRTEEN MILLION SIX HUNDRED THOUSAND WORDS

That's what Art Baker voiced on his Notebook, this week celebrating a nineteenth anniversary

ART WAS A RADIO LIFE FAN way back in the early days of radio and Radio Life. (Note 1c price on magazine cover.)

SLIGHTLY delayed (from Sept. 8) because Art Baker has been honeymooning and working in TV abroad, the 19th celebration of Art's Notebook will be observed on KFI, Thursday, Sept. 26. There will be a special broadcast to highlight the anniversary.

This will be the first gala observance since 1948 (the 10th birthday) when even Art admits "we really had a show". Appearing on it were Lionel Barrymore as emcee (who also sent the cake), Fanny Brice (who insisted on calling the program "Art Baker and His Cookbook,"), Jimmy Durante, Meredith Willson and his Talking People, Donald Duck, and Rochester, who answered the telephone. There were greetings from top showbusiness and civic leaders.

Art, who is heard twice daily on KFI (11:30 a.m. and 6:45 p.m.), has built an admiring following, men as well as women. By request his Notebook has been sent, for the past eight years, to our armed forces, whose members are avid letter-writers attesting Art's popularity.

Nineteen years on radio is a chunk of time with which to reckon and none knows this better than Baker. He often meets a young matron who says, "When I first heard you I was in junior high school. Now I have three children."

The white-thatched Baker, asked why he was celebrating his Notebook's 19th anniversary with a splash (instead of saving up for the 20th), chortled, "In shaving, I was chagrined to find a few white hairs creeping in, so I thought I'd better get at it!" E.B.

CO-WORKERS LOOKED ON with anticipation as Art slashed into his Fifth Anniversary cake in Sept., 1943.

WHEN ART APPEARED in the movie, "Farmer's Daughter," star Ethel Barrymore admitted she was one of his ardent radio fans.

AT THE CONCLUSION of six years of his Notebook, Art again cut a celebration cake at KFI. Here station staffer Rosalie Grainger waited for first slice. Art figured that at this milestone he had spoken 6,788,000 words over the air.

ART AS HE LOOKS TODAY, ready to talk to KFI listeners. He estimates that by now he has reeled off 13,600,000 words. He often reads the Sermon on the Mount and the Gettysburg Address.

PRESIDENT LLOYD A. MEAVEG (RIGHT) AND COMMISSIONER CHARLES H. TANNER (left) of the Los Angeles Board of Harbor Commissioners present an engraved ship's bell and a commodore's headpiece to Carl Bailey, the sea-going disc jockey, as they commission him "Commodore of the Port of Los Angeles," in appreciation of his publicizing the facilities and activities of the port.

KBIG COVERS EVERY REMOTE POSSIBILITY...FROM SHIP TO SHORE

By Jean Corlis

THIS summer KBIG's famous mermaid has been splashing along happily beside the S.S. Catalina, while on the top deck, starboard side, "Commodore" Carl Bailey, the sea-going disc jockey, takes his listeners on a Catalina Cruise.

At 10:00 A.M. Tuesday through Sunday, when the Catalina's whistle blasts away to signal that she's about to get under way with some 1900 passengers aboard, Carl begins his running commentary on the sights and sounds of the Los Angeles Harbor; the names of interesting foreign ships in port, their cargo and destination; describes passing yachts and fishing boats and identifies their owners and home ports. As the steamer leaves the harbor and increases speed from 5 knots to 15, the "Commodore" uses his binoculars to scan the ocean for other boats. Since passing vessels do not come by with the speed of cars on the freeway, there is time between reports for musical interludes, news, and a few commercials from KBIG's studios on Catalina or in Hollywood.

The ability of KBIG to transmit from the ship, while keeping in constant contact with Hollywood and Avalon, is an unusual feat, accomplished by the diligent work of the KBIG engineering staff.

High Frequency

"The broadcast from the ship," explained Carl as we sat beside him in the glass-enclosed booth at the foot of the Captain's ladder, "is relayed to KBIG's transmitter on Catalina Island by a high frequency transmitter in the 450 megacycle band here in the Marine Studio. Receivers at both Renton Pass and Mount Ada on Catalina Island are connected with the main KBIG transmitter by line. I do only the commentary and live commercials from the ship. Musical portions of the program, as well as news and Sigalert bulletins originate in either the Avalon or Hollywood studios. I'm able to keep in constant communication with my engineers and the newsrooms by means of another short wave frequency on the 153 megacycle band.

"Here is the equipment," Carl pointed out, "two transmitters, two receivers, one speaker, an amplifier for shipboard listening, three microphones. I have five different call letters, and last, but by no means least, this pair of headphones rigged so that I can listen to what is going out on KBIG with one ear, and to my engineers at Avalon and Hollywood for production and technical direction with the other ear!"

In spite of the split-second timing necessary to carry the program along, Carl finds time to report on passing boats, describe the water-skiers who put on a show for the passengers as they ride the waves alongside the steamer (powered, of course, by a speed boat), and joke with young people who gaze intently at him through the window. He will cut in for an interview with a celebrity, or perhaps a honeymoon couple or anniversary celebrants making a "sentimental journey" to Avalon. For a job like this you have to think fast and talk fast and Carl is a past master at this from his long experience with his dry land mobile studios, the familiar Volkswagen or Corvette seen at the Sportsmen's Show and the Pomona Fair.

As the boat docks at Catalina and Carl signs off and leaves the ship until the return trip at 4:00 P.M., the disc jockey on duty at the Avalon studio takes over.

High Altitude

At KBIG's model station, 1500 feet above sea level, equipment is kept in topnotch shape by engineering supervisor Harvey Haas and his assistant engineers, Glen Covington and Mel York. Since the station is one of the points of interest to tourists who stop there on the bus trip around the island, Mr. Haas and his staff have become expert hosts. Visitors are permitted to watch the disc jockey as he makes his selection from KBIG's extensive record collection and observe the engineer as he operates various gadgets behind his streamlined control panel. Of special interest are the flashing lights on KBIG's impressive and powerful 10,000 watt transmitter which occupies one wall of the studio. To the layman it's all pretty complex, but Mr. Haas and his assistants are most gracious in answering questions, even anticipating them.

Outside the studio Mr. Haas introduced us to the station's mascot, a talking Mynah bird, who gave us a very human-sounding wolf whistle. We suspected that the engineers might have a microphone in the cage, but were assured that they didn't have time for such pranks.

Back on the S. S. Catalina for the return trip, with Commodore Bailey again broadcasting from the Marine Studio, we were conscious of the strides made by KBIG in answering today's demand for on-the-spot coverage from every location—first with their Volkswagen and Corvette mobile units at fairs, home shows, sports shows and other public events, and now with their sea-going studio. Radio is on the move!

Pick OF THE Pix

BY AUBREY DAHL

I UNDERSTAND that Channels 5 and 9 are discontinuing their weekly fight telecasts in a few weeks and substituting old movies for the manly art. Gentlemen, I watched those fights, do you understand? I watched them. Now, put them back on, immediately.

"Anthony Adverse." (2) Sept. 21, 10:00. 1938 (I think). Hervey Allen's massive best seller has here been made into a picture that necessarily is able to encompass only a portion of the book. Fredric March is the central figure, a moody product of an ill starred love between Anita Louise and Donald Woods, and after he is bilked out of his rightful heritage, he roams the world in search of wealth. An epic production featuring Claude Rains and Olivia De Havilland.

"Three Men On A Horse." (5) Sept. 23, 7:30. 1936. This riotous George Abbott has been transferred to the screen with humor and fidelity and should stand up in spite of its age. Frank McHugh is a greeting card verse writer who has devised a surefire system for beating the races. Three sharks, Sam Levene, Allen Jenkins and Teddy Hart, discover his gift and his life becomes a turmoil. Wife Joan Blondell tries to get him back to home, hearth and career while the three horseplayers try to get him to continue the assault on bookies. A funny piece, which was recently done live on TV.

"On An Island With You." (11) Sept. 27, 8:00. 1948. Naval officer Peter Lawford is in love with movie queen Esther Williams, even though he has met her only once. He wangles a job as technical advisor on her new picture and then spirits her away to a desert island in an attempt to make her fall in love with him. Does she? Gosh, I don't know. It sure will be interesting to watch and find out.

"Trail Street." (9) Beginning Sept. 23, 9:00. 1947. In keeping with the current trend toward westerns on TV, Channel 9 this week presents the cattlemen versus the farmers in Liberal, Kansas, where Marshal Randolph Scott and land agent Robert Ryan combine forces to defeat bad guy Steve Brodie.

"Young Mr. Lincoln." (11) Sept. 22, 7:00. 1939. Touching only lightly on the more noted aspects of Lincoln's youth, this Lamar Trotti screenplay deals mainly with his activities on behalf of the Clay brothers, who were accused of murder and whom Abe defends in a bid to supplant mob rule with law and order. The picture ends with Henry Fonda, as Abe, trudging to the top of a hill with the rain pelting him and the music swelling and I guess that lets us know all right that there are great and terrible things awaiting him.

"Dancing Coed." (11) Sept. 24, 10:30. "I wish I coulda seen your sofa more, June." "You're fresh, man." (Senior, sophomore, junior, freshman... new policy of explaining puns.)

"On Camera"

by Bill Weber

Lassie —
Sunday, 7 p.m.,
KNXT, Ch. 2

Canine and child stars have always posed formidable threats to the human actor, for no matter how high the degree of histrionics of the adult actor, a dog and an appealing child will steal the scene every time.

It is evident by this time that Lassie has established a niche that will find an audience as long as collies produce collies and the human race continues to beget appealing children. This looks pretty permanent. I would hesitate to say just what generation of Lassies is now appearing. But whatever the number in descent from the original Lassie, the present incumbent is doing as much or more than could be expected of any dog actor. Lassie's appeal, of course, is due in large measure to the remarkable training of owner-trainer Rudd Weatherwax.

Of a somewhat more variable aspect is the selection of the boy actor who co-stars with Lassie. To those who may have been holding their breath as to the youngster who will succeed Tommy Rettig in this role, they may rest assured that Jon Provost, the chosen successor, can more than hold his own as Timmy and should delight for several years until overtaken by the rigors of adolescent age. Since Jon is all of seven, the prospect is encouraging.

The child actor has a difficult time of it, for the adult professional world in which he moves often gives the child a pseudo, super-sophistication which veers the excitingly wondrous world of the child. He ceases to become a child, but exists, or performs, in a world neither of childhood nor adulthood, losing any positive identification with either age. Thus, in effect, the child ceases to be, and too often serves only as foreign intrusion in many scripts.

Few child actors survive the ordeal and the few memorable ones may be counted on one hand. The Provost boy, however, seems to carry all the qualities that distinguish him as being a "natural" with a good bit more to recommend him than a great deal of appeal and boyish attractiveness. He possesses a sure instinct, simplicity, and a wistful quality that is sure to register strongly with all generations of viewers.

Gifted though this boy may be, a large measure of credit must also be given to the writing and direction that elicits such a heartwarming performance.

"DON'T BUY CHILI WILLY NILLY"

THE Los Angeles County Fair is wonderful! True — true that the horse track and the circus and the buffalo races will prove the main attractions, but there's much more to our county fair than that.

On display will be prize-winning rabbits, prize-winning home-made jam and prize-winning wines. Ah yes, the fine wines of California, some proudly adorned with gold medals.

Several weeks ago the wine judging took place. Sixteen carefully chosen qualified judges sipped and smacked for four days, sampling some 900 entries and choosing the best in class.

The 15 men (and one woman) who judged the wines do not select their personal wines willy nilly. They choose with expert care. These gentlemen of refined taste are regarded as highly competent . . . and what do you think one of these men has to say about KoldKist Frozen Cooked Foods and Meat Products? What does the owner of a trained palate say of, for example, KoldKist Chili Con Carne?

I say (for I, Beck, am none other than that man) — I say that KoldKist Chili Con Carne deserves a gold medal!!

Fred Beck says:

Choose your chili the way experts choose wine and you'll choose KoldKist. DON'T BUY CHILY WILLY NILLY. Get KoldKist . . . rich and full-bodied and sprightly, beautifully balanced with just the right blending of herbs and seasonings with big tender flavorful red beans and savory cooked meat — frozen ready to thaw, heat and eat.

You try it Milly. Yum!

And for some good suggestions on fancy ways to serve chili con carne and 10 other KoldKist Frozen Cooked Foods and Meat Products, let me send you the KoldKist recipe file . . . free.

BY EVELYN BIGSBY

THE MOTION PICTURE ACADEMY is making a smart move in direction of sponsoring its own Oscar awards telecast. I firmly favor the TV Academy doing same. It would stop all this nonsense of stars backing out of appearing or performing due to sponsor or network conflict. Commercials would be eliminated and time thus spent could be utilized for further building the industry. How about it?

JOHNNY WASHBROOK HAS LANDED a plum part (Pauper) on DuPont's second "special," "The Prince and the Pauper," in which Rex Thompson will play the Prince (October 28) . . . Ed Sullivan to Hollywood to do a brace of shows and Look Over the Situation . . . Shirley Temple again the focus of press eyes at an Ambassador reception to introduce the 1957 version of the Shirley Temple doll. It is made by Ideal Toy, which is sponsoring the screening of four of the child star's greatest movies on KTTV—beginning Oct. 20 with "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," and including "Captain January," "Wee Willie Winkie," and "Heidi." What, no "Little Miss Marker?" Re-screening of early Temple films at this time of year is shrewd planning for toy sponsor, saleswise and publicity, too, for the petite star's NBC series will have a big push for its January 12 debut. I've seen Shirley several times the past 10 years, so she looks much the same to me, but those who haven't think the greatest difference in her is the color of her hair, now a rich, dark brown.

AND WHILE ON THE SUBJECT of dolls, Gale Storm introduced seven-months-old Susie to the press at a luncheon aboard the Ocean Queen at the Hal Roach Studios. Susie is "working" in one of Gale's shows to be screened later on, but not as Gale's child.

MOTHER GALE CARRIED THE BABY around to visit guests but Baby Sue was more smitten with Gale's "diamond" necklace than with the scribes. "I can't understand it," Gale puzzled. "Of course mommy always wears diamonds at home!"

THAT THE FALL TV TREND is Western is no longer a secret. In fact this fashion has been followed to such extremes that the stalwart comedians still holding forth are said to be planning a panning campaign against the sagebrush heroes. As mentioned here previously, Burns and Allen will do a Western takeoff early in the season. Others are mapping similar poke-fun campaigns.

ANOTHER TREND FOR AUTUMN is the musical or musical-variety headed by a name star like Sinatra, Pat Boone, Patrice Munsel, Polly Bergen, or Guy Mitchell.

GUY, WHO'LL BE ON ABC-TV, is the top record-seller in England. Starting Oct. 7, he'll host a musical half hour with guests — Marguerite Piazza and Leo Durocher on the opening stanza, then later he'll have Peggy Lee (who is doing an unusual amount of guesting this season), Dorothy Shay, Peggy King and other warblers.

PHIL COHAN, FOR YEARS JIMMY DURANTE'S guiding mind, will produce Guy's musical. Phil likes to call his star a "happy hobo," indicating that relaxation and easy versatility will predominate on this program.

THE REV. BOB RICHARDS, guest of honor at a California Club luncheon preceding kickoff of his new TV series, held his audience from the second he opened his informal talk. He surely is dedicated to the best interests of our youth, ROME . . . Television in this fabulous city is not much better than it was in France. Programs start around five o'clock in the afternoon and are mainly children's shows until 7:30, when all TV goes off until 8:30. Night-time fare is pretty sad — with an occasional variety show, an old movie (and they're really old), sports, news. There is also a program like our $64,000 Question, only the top amount given away is no more than 5,000,000 lira. With about 615 liras making up a dollar you can see the prize is much less than it is in the States. Another show is called Twin Souls, in which a husband and wife win money by telling what they know of each other.

But to get to Rome itself: I've been at the Hotel Eden, which is undoubtedly the friendliest place I've encountered in all Europe — due mainly to the warmth and kindness of several people here — Antonio Di Scullio, Silvio Gelain, Nicolo, and Treviso Sachetta, all employees of the hotel. Also, Rene Stapfer, a waiter in the dining room who is only 24 and speaks four languages. These men have really been so very kind. They are also further examples of the many Europeans who know so many languages. Anyone who comes to Europe should have a nodding acquaintance with the languages because the European's understanding of our tongue only makes our lack of knowledge that much more embarrassing. With the little French I knew I've been able to stagger through, but could I ever use a course in Italian!

In Rome you are overwhelmed by one beautiful sight after another. The old, the ancient, and the modern all meet together here. On one side you have the awesome ruins of the Coliseum and the Roman Forum, the Catacombs, the magnificent fountains and statues, the works of art, the breathtaking luxury of inspiring St. Peters, St. Mary Maggiore, St. John Latera and other churches. On the other hand you have the most modern and elegant shops and the pace of a big up-to-date city. The little, narrow, winding streets that are hidden away and suddenly come on to a big square or boulevard, the shops that are nestled away on these streets — these are wonderful memories. As are the art galleries and a big city's impressive reverence for its history and its beauty. Rome is unforgettable!

From Rome I went to Naples to take a two-day trip to Pompeii, the Amalfi Drive, Sorrento, and Capri. Naples, with Mt. Vesuvius in the background and with its Bay of Naples is lovely, but there is such poverty here it is largely depressing. Little boys come by the waterfront cafes to beg for money or food. You can't walk down the street without being hounded by racketeers selling no-good watches to tourists at fantastic prices; by beggars; by post card salesmen. In the cafes — as everywhere else — everyone wants tips and more tips although you've already paid 18 percent service charge on your bill; Italy, at least in the south, is tip-crazy and this gets annoying after a while.

Off to Pompeii, a completely fascinating trip and one that defies description except to say that so real is Pompeii that the ruins seem to come alive and you imagine life here again. After Pompeii you start on the Amalfi Drive, which goes along the sides of mountains above the Bay of Salerno. This is a scenic wonder of the world and one of the most harrowing drives you'll ever take. With roads so narrow two cars can barely pass and with little or no protection on the sides of the road bordering a drop of thousands of feet, and with the bus drivers driving as though no one else was on the road, you have your store of thrills. But the scenery is

SKIPPER FRANK'S SCAM-O-GRAM

Hil:

Now that all the gang is back in school it is time to amaze them with your magical mind reading powers. The trick that we are about to explain can be done with any kind of watch or clock. If one of your pals is sporting a new wrist watch or time piece you will find that this feat will leave them completely puzzled.

We call this trick the "Tell Tale Watch." Ask your spectator to look at the dial of nearest watch or clock. He is to mentally select any number on the dial and secretly write it down. Next you explain that you are going to start tapping numbers on the dial. He is not to concern himself with the numerals that you tap but is to count the number of taps. He is to start with one number above the one he selected and as soon as the count reaches 20 the spectator is to call "Stop." At this point the performers pencil will be on the number that was secretly selected. For example if the spectator selected four o'clock, on the performers first tap he would mentally say "five," on the next tap "six" and so on until he came to twenty.

SECRET: You as the mind reading magician start by tapping any seven numerals at random, but on the eighth tap have your pencil on the figure twelve. Continue to count around clockwise on the watch dial until the spectator calls stop. No matter what the selected number was, your pencil will come to rest on the secret number. At first this may sound very complicated. However, you will find that the effect is very clean cut and effective. Practice it several times until the secret and formula is clear to you. This is one of the few magic tricks that will bear repetition and becomes more baffling each time you perform it for the same folks. Hope you enjoy getting back to School and remember to start the year with our "Cartoon Carousel" Magic Formula that produces top rated report cards... What is it?... just two words... Pay Attention!

whom he is able to reach through sports. Bill Thompson, well known actor on the Fibber McGee show, now works for Union Oil, the company sponsoring Bob Richards' program. Bill is doing public relations work — and inasmuch as he has for some time been interested in young people, his efforts should dovetail perfectly with Richards'.

SITTING ACROSS THE TABLE from me were Dick Gottlieb and Axel Gruenberg of This Is Your Life. I was curious as to types of personalities they'd "do" on the program this coming season. They thought it would stack up 50-50 — stars and "little people." They said that little people always bring in mail, that they have many suggestions for big personality profiles. I asked if they'd ever considered re-warming a show which had never made the air due to the subject's finding out beforehand. They said yes.

HEAR TELL THAT FRANK SINATRA'S premiere "live" performance may be quite a classy affair, full dress and the red carpet treatment.

At last you reach Sorrento, a resort town, crowded but picturesque, where the sea is so clear you can see to the bottom in many cases. Here is real beauty, a restful kind of beauty. Went swimming at the beach and was quite surprised to learn later that the hotel where I was staying charged you for the use of its wooden pier and its part of the sea. The tourist gets it for sure.

Back to Rome and then to Florence via Assisi and Perugia. Assisi is a small town built on a mountain and it is there you see the wonderful church of St. Francis of Assisi; it is here where the saint is buried, too. The utter simplicity of the church makes it even more beautiful than in Rome. As for Perugia, it's noted for its chocolate and rightfully so. A unique mountain town.

And then Florence — where art and culture reign supreme and where living conditions are better than in the south. There is also more friendliness and graciousness. More about this later.

KELLEY, who used to be somewhat of a baseball pitcher himself at Elkhart (Indiana) High School discusses how to throw a curve ball with ace Angel reliever, Glenn Mickens at Wrigley Field.

AROUND THE BASEBALL CIRCLE WITH BOB KELLEY

OL' KEL REVIEWS the past seasons of the Los Angeles Angels with public ty director, George Goodale. After a long campaign of broadcasting two and three games a day on KMPC, Kelley is one guy — who for more reasons than one — is always glad to have the World Series come around.

WILE, WOMEN . . .

and SUSPENSE

By Bill Weber

WOMEN AND their wives . . .? I really have no interest at all in the subject—except professionally, of course,” said Alfred Hitchcock, musing like a great kewpie-Buddha with a benign smile.

“I’m merely a normal-living person married for 32 years—an onlooker, you might say, that sees most of the game.”

Mr. Hitchcock, master of suspense, finding himself cast in a somewhat different role as a commentator on the female of the species, picked his thoughts and words with careful precision as he took the subject in stride—a change of pace from his duties as one of three executive producers of NBC’s new weekly suspense series, Suspicion, which starts Monday, September 30.

“The game, of course, is really very simple—for the female. It’s merely keeping the male off-balance by making him think he is the attacking animal, the pursuer. He isn’t. Did you ever hear of a man admitting how he was wooed and won? Of course not. He doesn’t even know it. And if he were even dimly aware of the machinations that swirl about him in the amorous campaign to win him, he wouldn’t dare admit it. Our civilization simply isn’t geared for such candor.

“Therefore any pursuit tactics of the male, however cunningly contrived, are simply an illusion when it comes to dealing with the female. This, fortunately for his own ego, he never discovers until he is engaged in domesticity on a permanent basis. I think we should be extremely grateful to the women for letting us keep our illusions—and our egos—for as long as they do.

“As to the tactics employed by the male whether on the offense or defense in these matters, I’m rather inclined to believe it’s every man for himself . . . sort of a variation on a theme which is really played by the woman. I suppose these machinations of the male could be somewhat standardized for the beginner. But, of course, no satisfaction—nor protection—can be guaranteed. And I must remind you that any comment on these matters is only as an onlooker.”

THE FRANK AND EARNEST approach of the male . . . disastrous for any man as it is misunderstood, misinterpreted, or exploited by the female. Used only by the amateur or indifferent.

THE INTELLECTUAL, put-your-cards-on-the-table approach . . . very satisfactory, but only as long as the male retains absolute possession of all his faculties. Extremely difficult to achieve.

THE PURE ROMANTIC who believes in soft lighting effects . . . excellent, of course, but the end results are dangerously unpredictable. Always worth experimenting with as reportedly highly enjoyable.

THE QUIZZICAL OR CYNICAL male approach . . . excellent in both offense and defense with the female. Difficult to maintain but worthy of a try as it keeps the woman guessing—unless she’s met it too many times before.

'Cold Countries.— Hot Women'

"Cold countries make hot women," philosophized the onlooker. "You don't know a woman just by looking at her, any more—if you'll pardon my lapsing for a moment into crime—any more than you can determine at a glance the capacity for crime of any individual walking down the street. And, of course, that degree of unknownness becomes the known only after a period of acquaintanceship. Oh, yes, I'd say there is quite a degree of sharp and prolonged suspense . . . quite a degree.

"Now, as to the 'cold countries make hot women'—the erroneous notion seems to have prevailed for some time that the women of southern Europe, the woman with the swirling skirts, the red flower in the hair, and all the rest is, of a somewhat warmer amatory nature than her sisters of northern Europe and England who are considered by the uninitiated to be cold potatoes. Quite the opposite is true, quite the opposite. The English woman, for example, is not the rigid, frigid icicle as imagined. I do not speak from patriotism.

"Stereotyping women according to their appearance is as misleading as stereotyping the criminal . . . not as they actually are, but only as we suppose they look. The flamboyantly "sexy" type apparently so popular in this country is actually more or less fraudulent in her obviousness; the creature who flees, without making good her promise.

THE LONG-SUFFERING UNDER-DOG . . . sure to gain the sympathy of any woman, but very tricky unless played by an expert. The danger lies in the grave possibility that the male winds up as he began — a long-suffering underdog.

A Subtle Force

"But the quiet, undemonstrative woman . . . ah, there you have something, a subtle, challenging unpredictable force . . . a woman of flesh and blood. And in dealing with this woman, man finds the eternal suspense story of humanity.

"I don't think you can classify the American woman as something different from any other woman, particularly so since the American is made up of the nationalities of the world. No, I shan't fall into the trap of making sweeping generalizations about women. However, when I see the color combinations of some of our cars, and hear the comment of our motion picture and television audiences I realize that this country is run for women.

"The American woman's weakest point is her respectability, that is, her fear of adverse comment from friend and neighbor—and I'm very much afraid her respectability is the cause of our high divorce rate. Since she regards herself as the sole possessor and proprietor of the American male, she regards any brief change of allegiance on the part of the errant male as a signal for a complete and permanent change. And I'm afraid the American male is an equal offender on this score. Love has become somewhat confused with ownership.

"But please remember, of course, that any of my comment is purely from the standpoint of the professional onlooker. It's really every man for himself."

THE HAPPY, INNOCENT . . . extremely vulnerable, no stress, no strain. Well worth considering because no matter what tactics, this is the basic nature of the male — which every woman knows all too well.

THE INDIFFERENT, rugged individualist . . . frightfully obvious, frightfully dangerous. Easily seen through by any female since every male considers himself the indifferent, rugged individualist when it comes to these things.

Viewers of KTTV's Second Show, hosted by Del Moore have found themselves taking part in

An experiment in the Small Hours

CONCENTRATE: KTTV's Del Moore gets his transmission gear into operation.

By Dave Vowell

EXTRA SENSORY Perception and experiments surrounding its theory sound very much like the practice of the occult. But what else can you expect at 2:30 in the morning?

Both KTTV and Del Moore have both gone down in the TV record books as being somewhat perceptive: KTTV for the innovation of its second showing of a feature film for swing shift and late night (or early morning) viewers; and Del Moore for his somewhat less than serious but still mystifying experiments in perception of another kind — extra sensory.

Long a subject of scientific discussion, ESP has supporters who believe in it as strongly as those who dismiss it as hocus-pocus hog wash.

"But it was left for television to have its say," — Del Moore talking.

Moore's Monologue

"When I began the show, I felt that I would use the same general approach that I had used on my afternoon show, that is, I would try to give the viewer a little extra entertainment for his time. This ESP thing happened spontaneously as a joke. One night, at the end of the movie, I told the viewers that I would concentrate on a word and asked them to write in if they got the message. The word I was thinking of at the time was 'home.' I was amazed, not at the response, but at the fact that eight people got it right! One as far away as San Diego! And there were lots more who submitted words like 'house,' 'horse,' 'hotel,' and other words beginning with 'h.' You know it sort of makes a man pause."

Del reports that he'll continue the "experiments" just for laughs, and, in fact, make a game out of it by giving those who guess what he's thinking about a free week-end for two at Lake Arrowhead Springs Hotel.

Viewers of the Second Show, which gets under way around midnight — depending upon when the First Show ends — make up a pretty sizable audience.

Early Morning Company

"We're the last thing on the air on any channel," Del reports, "and folks who stay up late or who don't get in until that hour tell us that they watch not only out of interest but also for company. This is true for a lot of shut-ins, too. And we try to give them a good show. That is, we try to keep the commercial breaks as smooth and as short as possible, and, like I said before, we hope that we give them the most entertainment that we can squeeze into the little time left."

From all indications, Del is accomplishing his purpose. At least he can be sure that he has their full attention: how else can you explain the fact that they can hear him even when he's not talking?

STAND BY: Dels' thought takes wings and is on its way.

CATCH? — DID YOU GET IT? It's an experiment, of course, not to be taken too seriously, in the art (or science) of Extra Sensory Perception. Just for fun, Del Moore does it nightly on his KTTV Second Show. He has been surprised at the results.

The Rusty Draper Show, heard Monday through Friday evenings from 8:05 to 8:30 on KNX-CBS Radio has resulted from the following slogan:

Have Guitar... Will Travel

By Dave Vowell

HERE'S THE MAN HIMSELF, Rusty Draper with trusty guitar. Rusty received his first guitar when he was eleven and he's been going strong ever since.

WHEN KNX-CBS Radio's Rusty Draper was eleven years old his father gave him a guitar. One year later Rusty, then known as Freckles, was in Tulsa, Okla., as a featured performer on a daily radio show. That's where it all began.

From Kirksville, Mo., where he was born, Rusty parlayed his voice and guitar into a successful entertainment career that has led him from Tulsa to Hollywood and a lot of stops in between. At 16, Rusty fronted his own group — The Sons of the Ozarks — with a regular radio show on WTAD, Quincy, Ill. The folks in Quincy have long memories. Rusty receives fan mail from listeners there who remember him from those early days when he was singing such original compositions as "When Beulah Does the Hula in Missoula." Which, by the way, he recorded for the old Blue Bird record label. "It didn't sell too well," Rusty comments.

The towns of Springfield, both Illinois and Missouri, remember Rusty from the days when he and his "Rhythm Rangers" rode the air waves into a two-picture contract with cowboy star Charles Starret.

Rusty has been called a lot of things, but the credits he received on the two movies he still remembers with chagrin. "Instead of Freckles," Rusty says, "they called me Spots. Sometimes you just can't win."

Although he was working as an entertainer while a teenager, Rusty still had time to go to school. In fact, he has set some sort of a record: during five years he attended 12 different high schools. But, oddly enough, he graduated from his home town high school when he was 17.

Why he went back to Kirksville can be told in a phrase: he was broke. "I had to leave my cowboy boots, my electric guitar and my amplifier in Cincinnati to pay my hotel bill," Rusty reports, "and I had just enough money left over for a bus ride back home to Kirksville.

RUSTY DRAPER, star of KNX-CBS Radio, and his wife Macia. Mrs. Draper is Rusty's business manager and handles all of the financial and business problems for the family.

GUEST MOLLY BEE appeared with Rusty and vocalist Louise O'Brien on a recent edition of the Rusty Draper Show.

When I got there, Dad told me that he'd buy me a new guitar if I'd stay home and finish school."

Rusty graduated and his father made good his promise. But Rusty had to make the payments himself, which he did by playing in clubs around Kirksville. The guitar was barely paid for when the Draper family moved to San Bernardino, Calif.

Rusty looked around, saw that there was more work in San Francisco and took off. He landed a job playing at the Barn in San Francisco's International Settlement. He was 18 years old. He made $45 a week. A year and a half later he was making $225 a week. Then he moved into the Rumpus Room, where he established another record: the longest single engagement for a musical performer. He played the Rumpus Room from 1944 to 1953. And, as if that wasn't enough to keep him busy, he also appeared in three different TV shows on three different stations in San Francisco.

Then he recorded "No Help Wanted" followed by "Gambler's Guitar." Via guest appearances on every major musical-variety show on network television, Rusty was on his way to national recognition.

Record-wise, his Mercury recording of "Freight Train" has sold well over half a million and his latest, a Hawaiian rock and roll called "No Hu Hu" is well on its way.

A family man, Rusty and his wife Macia make their home in Carmel with their two children, Johnny, 13, and Judy, 12, both of whom — you guessed it — sing and play guitar.
