Little Nell Is Dead

A study of Dickensomaniacs and Dickensophiliacs by Robert Wardle, who is both

(Originally broadcast on "University Talks")

"EVERYONE that talks about Heaven ain't goin' there," says that famous negro spiritual All God's Chillun Got Shoes, and everyone who talks about the late Charles John Huffam Dickens isn't a whole-hearted admirer.

For there are Dickensomaniacs—a new word that I have just made up ("An ill-favoured thing, Sir, but mine own," as one of the late W. Shakespeare's characters says), and there are Dickensophiliacs—another ill-favoured word of mine own. Dickensomaniacs are interested in Dickens mainly as a fascinating example of a thorough-paced heel. Dickensophiliacs are usually relics of the old Victorian belief that he was the finest tear-jerker that ever lived.

Dickensomania is a sort of archaeology for digging the dirt about Dickens—for uncovering scraps of marital scandal, for collecting valuable First (and usually unread) Editions of his books, or for collecting locks of his hair—of which there are enough in existence to make snuggies for a gorilla. The Dickensomaniac should once in a lifetime make a pilgrimage to Rochester in England, where at the Bull Inn in the High Street, Messrs. Pickwick, Snodgrass and Winkle spent the first night of their travels, and from there he or she must visit what the tourist agencies gleefully call The Dickens Country. Your Dickensomaniac likes to paw through the books and letters and biographies of Dickens like a bum raking through a garbage can, seeing scraps of evidence to show that the fellow had a suppressed Freudian complex or an inflated ego.

The Dickensophiliac, or Dickens addict, on the other hand, is usually an old man who as a lad in Good Queen Victoria's time was made to read the adventures of Oliver Twist, David Copperfield, and Nicholas Nickleby under the threat of a thrashing because they were considered wholesome reading—good for him, like rhubarb and asafoetida—and anyway the only alternative was a volume of sermons, Carter's Principles of Household Medicine or Enquire Within Upon Everything. Actually he would much rather have read the adventures of Buffalo Bill, Nick Carter, Jesse James, Sexton Blake or Ally Sloper. So he became a Dickens addict much as a man can become a rubbing alcohol addict in default of more exciting stuff. He learned to take his Dickens neat, or just watered with tears, and he wouldn't have offered you a brass farthing for a double handful of Dickens' hair or for a trip to The Dickens Country. So the Dickens addict today has less regard for the memory of Dickens than he has for the memory of his mother-in-law, and cares no more whether Dickens was a saint or sinner than he cares for the private lives of Haig and Haig or whether the hen that laid his breakfast egg was plain or speckled.

Now I qualify as a Dickens addict for I had read and re-read most of his books under duress, before I was twelve, and I have seen much of the Dickens country. But I am also something of a Dickensomaniac in that I have read most of the debunking biographies, even Edgar Johnston's two-volume biography, the little book by Julian Symons that shows Dickens to have been only a hop, skip, and jump ahead of the loony doctor, and the little book by my old university colleague George Ford that shows that many people in his own lifetime had their suspicions about him. So when I open my mouth on the subject of Dickens let no dog bark.

I say that Charles Dickens was a typical Victorian—by our standards, underwashed, overdressed, and shockingly under-barbered.

“Points West” Describes Search For Identity of Mystery Ship

By DAVID QUINTNER

MAN'S PROGRESS through history is closely linked with his ability to overcome the hazards of his environment—in particular, the sea.

But if the sea has held the fates of past humanity in its sway, it yields its clues grudgingly.

In the storm-tossed waters off the west coast of Vancouver Island, seaweed clings tenaciously to the masts and spars of a cemetery of rotting hulks. In these waters many of the great seamen of the last three centuries have dropped their anchors. Some went ashore, laid claim to the land for their sovereigns, and left their mark in the names the land still uses. Others met with a fate common to trail-blazers, and their bones may still be sought by the curious.

It is a rare, if not unique, occurrence for the Canadian Navy to investigate the reliability of Indian legends in the line of official duty. But recently near Nootka Sound, site of Captain Cook's first landing in the New World, the R.C.N. did this in probing a wreck for clues as to its origin, and at the same time used the operation as a naval salvage exercise.

The story of the navy's undersea search and its attempts to identify the wreck, situated about 150 miles northwest of Victoria, will be told on CBC radio's Points West this

AT THE SCENE OF THE MYSTERY WRECK in Sidney Inlet a group of skin-divers prepare to salvage relics from the sunken mystery ship.

Sunday afternoon. The program will be produced by John Robertson of the CBC's Outside Broadcasts department in Vancouver.

The wreck was discovered almost a year ago by Dr. G. Cottrell of Portland, Oregon, a yachtsman and amateur skindiver. For many years Dr. Cottrell has gone to the west coast to hunt for wrecks of old vessels. In particular, he has searched constantly for a trading ship, The Boston, which disappeared off the B.C. coast in 1790, leaving no trace of its crew and contents.

After years of patient negotiation with the Indians on the west coast of Vancouver Island, Dr. Cottrell learned last year of a wreck which the Indians believed was lying at the bottom of Sidney Inlet. After initial dives, Dr. Cottrell believed he had indeed found the wreck of The Boston, but further examination revealed the wreck to be that of a three-masted Barquentine, which likely sank at the spot more than 100 years ago.

Beyond noting the site, nothing further was done about the discovery until March of this year when the RCN and the Operation Clearance Diving Unit No. 2 of HMCS Naden at Esquimalt combined archaeology with Aqua lung operations.

The crew of the minesweeper HMCS Miramichi, stationed at Esquimalt and commanded by Lt. Cmdr. Ben Ackerman, spent six

LATE NOTES AND CORRECTIONS

WEEK OF APRIL 10-16

Because each issue of the CBC Times must be mailed so far in advance of the program week covered in it, some changes in scheduling and in program content are inevitable. These are noted below.

MONDAY, APRIL 11

TELEVISION

Fibber McGee and Molly

"The Perfect Game." Fibber is crushed when Doc Gamble tells him he is to be replaced by a better bowler for an important match. McGee bowls eleven strikes, then gets his hand jammed in the ball and is given 24 hours to complete his game—and possibly win $500.

Don Messer Jubilee

Today—Marg Osborne returns to the show following the birth of her daughter on March 27. (Named Melody, weighed 5½ pounds.) Marg's songs will include E-A-S-T-E-R, Peter Cottontail, Calvary Covers It All, and Ivory Palaces. Guests will be fiddlers Ned Jandry and Ed Gyurki.

TUESDAY, APRIL 12

TELEVISION

Mantovani

This week's guests—singer Adele Leigh, skater Belita and the Spencer Dancers.

Susie

This week—"Lady from Paris." Susie mistakenly signs a French singing star for the Sands Agency and when her boss decided he wants an authentic Parisian singer Susie discovers that her "and" is from Brooklyn.

Friendly Giant

Today Friendly reads "Brave Daniel," the story of a boy who does things that turn out to be less brave than he thought.

Chevy Show

Dinah Shore will present a South American Carnival with many top entertainers from South America, including her special guest Lucho Gatica of Peru—"the king of South American singers."

days probing the hull of the wreck in 40-degree water. What has been brought to the surface by the divers provides some of the answers to the ship's identity.

It is now known that she was 130 feet in length at the water line, had a beam of 28 feet and drew 14 feet lying in 10 fathoms of water. The hold and decks of the vessel were piled high with hundreds of logs. The coast nearby had long been regarded as a source of trees for masts and spars.

Divers, some with self-contained equipment and others in helmeted suits, went down to investigate. Using high-pressure hose type water diggers, they soon began to bring bits of the vessel to the surface. (The diver pictured on the cover this week is Leading Seaman Charles Greengrass of Winnipeg).

An old naval custom may provide the outstanding clue to the ship's age. For hundreds of years shipbuilders have placed a newly-minted coin at the base of masts during construction. A heavily corroded pure copper coin the size of an English penny was found, and is now in the hands of experts at Washington's Smithsonian Institute.

It is known that no English coins were made of pure copper after 1859. If a date can be found on the coin it will provide the true clue to the ship's age.

Another clue: A large windlass hauled to the surface was found to bear the name of "Tyzak, Dobbinson and Robinson." Inquiries were made of the many firms in the north of England which bear the name of Tyzak. One of them, Tyzak Sons and Turner Ltd. of Sheffield, said they were descended from the old firm named on the windlass and investigated further. They reported that the windlass was constructed to a patent issued in 1829. The firm, which went out of business in 1844, carried on a large export business and shipped its products to all parts of the world.

The Disordered Mind

A four-part series on CBC-TV's "Explorations"

A WISE OLD GREEK once advised: Know thyself. In that suggestion lies one of the best ways of preventing and curing mental illness, the name for a group of disorders that can flare up from nervous and emotional upsets.

Do you remember how you felt the last time you were extremely happy, violently angry or scared stiff? Those emotions, rising to terrific peaks, were quite natural at the time. One of the differences between you and your mentally ill neighbour is that you simmered down afterward, while he continued to feel, act and think in a disorganized manner, even when the logical reason for it had gone.

And it could happen to you. Statistics show that one out of 10 persons on this continent is or will be mentally ill, that one out of 20 will require hospitalization, and that the illnesses of 80 per cent of all patients in doctors' consulting rooms have been triggered by emotional upsets.

If that's frightening, it should be. But it does not prove that there are more mentally ill people today—although the rush and drive of modern living might explain such a conclusion—but it shows that now more illnesses and ailments are known to be tied in with the emotions in some way. And, of course, the wonder drugs are prolonging our lives so that more people are reaching the ripe old age when mental problems sometimes show up with loss of memory, confused thinking and childish behaviour.

The dividing line between the normal and the abnormal, the mentally ordered and disordered, is so thin that no psychiatrist can pin it down. Many normal people occasionally act in neurotic ways under stress, think too much about themselves, and worry about things that never happen, but usually they are mature enough to face their problems before too long, and solve them. Their springs of adjustment are strong. It is when these springs are weak and snap easily that mental illness strikes. Whether you become mentally ill or not depends to a large extent on the kind of person you are, where and how you live, and the kind of people you live among. To know yourself and where the end of your tether is, is one of the first steps on the road to good mental health.

Fortunately, today, the old taboos about mental illness have lost a lot of their force, and the general public is not only better informed about the nature of mental illness, but far more understanding of emotional disorders. So it has been possible to film four case histories for this Explorations series, with the patients themselves talking to psychiatrists about their conditions and their treatment. All four patients did this in full knowledge that their revelations were being filmed for use on TV, and with the hope that their experiences might help others. In many respects most of these people will appear to you as far more normal than abnormal, far more ordered than disordered. Yet each is undergoing psychiatric treatment.

Producer and host of The Disordered Mind is Robert Anderson, who made The Feeling of Hostility and other films on mental health. His consultant was Dr. H. E. Lehmann, clinical director of the Verdun Protestant Hospital and associate professor of psychiatry at McGill University. Dr. Lehmann is responsible for the pioneering work on this continent in the use of the new psycho-active drugs, for which he received the Albert Lasker Award in 1957. He appeared recently as an expert before the U.S. Senate Committee investigating drugs.

The series was planned by Eric Koch of the CBC talks and public affairs department, and was pro-

Web Of Life

Today — "Hot Shores" (Mexican Coast and Portuguese Bend). A keen interest in wild creatures of all kinds makes every trip, long or short, a most exciting adventure. Even if you are thoroughly familiar with the animals of one region . . . there will be different ones just over the hill. Last summer, Dr. Ian McTaggart Cowan had the opportunity to visit Mexico and Southern California and, as luck would have it, during a period when there was excellent low tides in the daytime. Here is an opportunity to see on their native shores, creatures previously known to man only as museum species.

G.M. Presents

"Mr. Sycamore," based on a short story by Canadian author Robert Ayre, starring William Needles and John Gwilt. In the small Ontario town of Smeed, postman John Gwilt, has been plodding his familiar route on foot for the past 20 years. One beautiful spring morning, the vicissitudes that beset him as a public servant overwhelm him. Weary of life, and the world around him, he announces to his astonished wife Jane that he is going to "plant" himself in the back yard—and turn into a tree. Borrowing his idea from a Greek legend he has read, John asks her to accompany him in his fantastic scheme. She refuses to take him seriously. When John heads for the back yard to "plant" himself, his wife runs to a church meeting to enlist the minister's help—and the whole town becomes involved.

Jack Benny

Jack Benny takes his best girl for a stroll in the Easter parade and almost turns Beverly Hills inside out. Jack and his girl, Mildred Myerhouser, played by Barbara Nichols, encounter the most improbable set of characters ever to inhabit Wilshire Boulevard when they embark on their holiday stroll. Among them are Jack's violin teacher, Professor Le Blanc (Mel Blanc), an unlikely sidewalk photographer (Frank Nelson), an outrageously disguised Don Wilson and the leaders of Jack's Pasadena Fan Club (Madge Blake and Jesslyn Fax). Dennis Day and Rochester also are featured, and Dennis sings "Easter Parade" to climax the show.

The Twentieth Century

Presents—"Paris in the Twenties," the story of the City of Light during a decade in which art, literature and music flourished on the Seine's left bank. The program will unfold a kaleidoscope of glittering talents that brightened the Paris scene in the twenties—such soon-to-become-famous individuals as Jo Davidson, Beatrice Lillie, Ernest Hemingway, Harpo Marx, James Joyce, F. Scott Fitzgerald, and Alexander Calder, all mingling with the already-famous Gertrude Stein, Pablo Picasso, Maurice Chevalier, Mistinguette, Josephine Baker, and Colette. There are also glimpses of another Paris which hailed Lindbergh, Gertrude Ederle and Madame Curie for their achievements.

CBWT—Fighting Words

Nathan Cohen's guests this week are Ralph Garry, an educational psychologist at Boston University and one-time prison psychologist; Toronto Telegram columnist Frank Tumpane; Toronto actor George Sperdakos, and TV personality Charles Templeton.

In most countries one will find plenty of people who are willing to work harder to achieve a higher standard of living. Perhaps the greatest difficulty is the world shortage of efficient organizers—people who can manage the factories, make the most of the country's resources and give the consumer what he wants. And that, too, calls for a great deal of skill. So we needn't look down on that side of the job as we quite often tend to do.—Alan Day, Reader in Economics in the University of London, on BBC.

Let's Look

Let' Look . . . at dinosaurs. In today's program, viewers will learn about the prehistoric monster that once ruled the earth. They will see models of the various types of dinosaurs in realistic settings, and explore the mystery of why the dinosaur became extinct.

Mickey Mouse Club

Today's program will include another Spin and Marty episode and a cartoon titled "Army Mascot."

Quick Draw McGraw

Today—"Gopher Goofers." Snooper and Blabber take a case involving the ridding of a millionaire's estate of an extraordinary gopher which resides in the garden. Everything from a mouse trap to a helicopter to dynamite fails to evict the little animal from his garden home.

Music '60

Today, Toronto-born musician Percy Faith will be guest conductor of the Music Makers. Guests will be singer Sandy Stewart, singer-pianist Buddy Greco and vibraphonist Hagood Hardy. Percy Faith and the Music Makers will play the current top hit Theme From a Summer Place. Sandy Stewart will sing Fever and Born in a Trunk. Buddy Greco will hold an "after hours session" in a night-club setting, when the patrons have left and the musicians really swing. Hagood Hardy will play a vibes duet with—Hagood Hardy. duced by Robert Anderson Associates Limited. Each of its four case histories deals with a specific field of psychiatry.

The first case (this Wednesday on CBC-TV), sub-titled Psychosomatic Conditions - a Coronary, was filmed at the Jewish General Hospital in Montreal. The patient is a young man of 34 with a driving ambition, an insurance job at which he excels, a happy home. One day - it seemed to him at the time that it came right out of the blue - he had a severe coronary. Like many people he had thought it could never happen to him. In the program you will see and hear him describe the way it happened, exactly how it felt through its various stages, his emotional reaction at the time, how he was treated, and the steps he is taking now to avoid a recurrence. He tells his story in a very informal, appealing way, but graphically, so you cannot fail to experience with him the sudden shock of the attack, the bewilderment and the eventual acceptance. He is a very restless man, and at first he broke some of the rules laid down for victims of coronaries, but in so doing gave his doctors the chance to learn much about what will and will not hinder the return to health of a coronary victim.

The physical facts of a coronary are discussed on the program by a heart specialist, Dr. H. N. Segall, who tells what happens to the heart when a coronary strikes, using a heart model to illustrate his remarks. He discusses the kind of people who are likely to get coronaries, and the role heredity plays in them. And with the patient he goes over experiences during the two weeks before the bad attack, looking for and finding indications that trouble was brewing. Dr. N. B. Epstein, a psychiatrist and analyst, discusses psychosomatic conditions in general. Then another psychiatrist, Dr. H. Kravitz, and the patient take a look at the emotional side of a coronary, and with the doctor's sympathetic guidance the patient looks back over his life—opens it up like a book to show his whole life pattern - childhood deprivation, driving ambition, restless weekends, all of which helped to trigger off his coronary. And he sees that if it hadn't been a coronary it might have been another organic disorder of emotional origin.

On April 27 the program investigates a case of anxiety. Filmed at the Montreal General Hospital, it presents the story of an office worker who was unable to handle his hostility and lives now with a persistent sense of terror and panic. Seven years ago he had a good job with a certain amount of responsibility, felt pretty sure of himself, was active in sports and community work. Then came his first attack, and now for nearly three years he has been unable to work, has cut himself off from practically all social activity; sometimes even to walk to the corner letterbox is more than he can attempt.

To the casual observer he might appear just self-indulgent, undisciplined. But he has a definite neurosis that needs psychiatric

Mantovani

Mantovani will play the music of Italy. His guests will be singers Vic Damone and Jacqueline Delman.

CBWT—Mary Liz Show

A musical and pictorial essay on Israel is featured on "The Mary Liz Show" today. Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Brightman present highlights of the history of the state of Israel with Mr. Brightman telling the story, and Mrs. Brightman singing some of the great songs of her people. Mitch Parks accompanies the soprano singer. Cynthia Coop concludes her current series on interesting surfaces and coverings.

Susie

Today—"The Old Soldier." Paunchy but stouthearted Peter Sands can't wait to start flying jets when he gets an invitation to the Pentagon from his old squadron leader. He goes into a tailspin when he learns the airforce wants him to take a desk job. Then co-plot Susie McNamara takes over the controls to right her boss' course.

Friendly Giant

Friendly's book today is "The Tiger Hunt," about a small boy who goes hunting tigers with a camera instead of a gun. It turns out that Jerome is also an amateur photographer, and he shows Friendly and Rusty a scrap book of his pictures to prove it.

Maggie Muggins

Fitz buys artificial snow from Miss Merriweather's toy shop and makes a ski slide in the meadow. He and Reuben try jumping, and Reuben jumps so far he knocks over Leo the Lion's cage and Leo gets out. Maggie uses a trick to get him back in.

Sportstime

With host Doug Maxwell. In today's program, Doug talks about games such as table tennis and shuffleboard and a group of high school boys and girls demonstrate. Another film on the 1956 Olympics in Melbourne, Australia is shown.

Sky King

Today - "Uninvited Death." An enemy agent tries to plant a bomb on a test plane. The agent hides the bomb in Major MacKay's car and is then captured. After Penny and Mrs. MacKay have driven off in the MacKay car, Sky learns where the agent has secreted the bomb, which is scheduled to explode shortly.

CBWT—How About That!

Today Jim Mitchell presents "The Mackinac Bridge Diary," a pictorial story of the conversion of 67,300 tons of steel, 41,000 miles of wire and 440,000 yards of concrete into the world's longest suspension bridge. An added short subject, "Ski Tricks," features famed water ski expert Bruce Parker explaining the "how-to's" of advanced water skiing tricks and jumping. Unique microphone hook-up gives on-the-spot account of action.

Chevy Show

Today's theme—"The Children Are People." The program will feature a cast of children all under the age of 12. Jay (Dennis the Menace) North, Jerry (Beaver) Mathers and Angela (Danny Thomas' youngest daughter) Cartwright will act as co-hosts. Two hundred of Hollywood's young variety and circus performers will be featured. Even the announcing and "cross-plugs" will be done by the children. There will be a circus sequence, a segment titled "A Day at the Playground" and a part called "Big Little World." A boy's choir number leading into an Easter finale will round out the show.

Ford Startime

Sir Thomas Beecham Presents Lollipops. Sir Thomas explains his program of "Lollipops" and the meaning of the term, with the following comment: "A 'lollipop' in accepted English terminology is a species of sweetmeat or candy. I have used the word in connection with music played by me in my concerts for the following reason. For many years past my audience at the close of a performance has had the disconcerting habit of remaining in its seat and declining to depart until, emulating Oliver Twist, it has obtained an extra helping. As in the majority of cases the usual program ends with a grand bang or explosion of sound, my practice has been to play an encore which is in complete contrast. The piece selected has generally been of an essentially syrupy, soapy, soothing and even soporific nature and the effect upon the audience has been that its emotional temperature, raised to a high point at the conclusion of the actual program, is gradually reduced to the normal so that everyone walks out happy and comfortable. The idea is not wholly original for it is to be found in the old Athenian drama, where tragedies were followed by satirical comedies or other forms of fooling. Of course, when, as in the case of a symphony such as the 6th of Tchaikovsky, there is a quiet ending, the character of the 'lollipop' suffers a slight change and the former 'tranquilizer' is replaced by something of a more genial type. But in every instance these little epilogues, corollaries or afterthoughts are short, taking and popular in style. In other words, a musical sweetmeat or, to make use of a Transatlantic idiom—a "candy." From Toronto.

The musical selections in this 60-minute concert will be:

Morning, Noon and Night In	Suppe
Vienna Overture	Saint Saens
Le Rouet d'Omphale	Sibelius
Karella Marche	Massenet
Last Sleep of the Virgin	Rossini
Overture—La Gazza Ladra

POINTS WEST

Naden, said the vessel is of the finest possible construction. Much of the ship had been built of gumwood, teak and mahogany, indicating that it was built in the Far East, perhaps Bombay, to British specification. An Indian manual of ships' registry is being sought to confirm this theory.

One of the old ship's masts, the mizzen, has been brought to the surface in fair condition and is to be erected at the naval technical school at Esquimalt as a flag pole. Other trophies from the wreck include a capstan, a gudgeon pin, and the stern post. The figure head, which divers have particularly searched for, has not been found.

There is a grim side to the story of the mystery ship. At the presumed time of the vessel's arrival on the west coast of Vancouver Island, the Indians were in an angry mood at what they believed to be their ill treatment at the hands of the white man. The vessel still shows signs of extensive damage by fire. All signs of occupation aboard are gone, the rotting remains of cabins are stripped bare, and the captain's cabin is empty. Perhaps the crew was slaughtered, the ship plundered and then set on fire. Only further investigation can close the gaps in our present knowledge of the mystery ship.

The navy says it has finished its job of salvage. It remains now for other seekers to finish the job.

Supervising producer of this Sunday's Points West feature on the mystery ship is John Edwards.

MARY HUMPHRIES REPORTS. Mary Humphries has been looking around at some of the new kitchen gadgets on the market which she'll show to viewers this afternoon.

P.M. Party

With emcee Alan Millar, singers Donna Miller and Allan Blye, Rudy Toth and his orchestra, Rex Loring, Daniel the Spaniel, and today's special guest John Nimmo, private investigator and a former inspector on the Toronto police force, who discusses some of his famous cases, and questions television's interpretation of the life of a private investigator.

CBWT—Ladies First

Pianist Jose Poniera and announcer Ken Dunstan welcome a special guest singer to entertain the ladies.

Friendly Giant

Today's book is "Flip in the Morning", about a little colt who lives on the farm. A rooster crows and wakes up the farm, but Rusty—asleep in his book bag—needs an alarm clock.

Uncle Chichimus

Today's program entitled "Doctor, Doctor," concerns a plot by Holly and Larry to make Chich share a box of chocolates. Holly arranged for a famous "doctor" from Vienna (Larry in disguise) to come and tell Chich he is ill and mustn't eat chocolates. But the plot backfires.

Huckleberry Hound

"Pet Vet." Dr. Huck Hound, the finest veterinarian in the world and an especially skilled dental surgeon faces his toughest case in a lion with a toothache.

R.C.M.P.

Today—"Number Thirty-four." Jack Reardon, convinced that society is conspiring against him, picks up his rifle and makes "his stand." Joseph Boley appears as Reardon.

One Step Beyond

Today—"Image of Death." A marquis plans to marry a commoner shortly after the death of the marquessa. The ambitious commoner jibes her future husband about how she revealed his plot to poison his wife to the woman herself. A spot on the wall appears and grows in size daily. The marquis confesses his dark deed to one and all and then goes to bed and awaits the arrival of his new wife with a cup of chocolate he knows will be laced with poison. Then, the marquessa gains her revenge in a strange and inexplicable manner.

Explorations

First in a new series of four half-hour psychiatric case histories titled "The Disordered Mind." Consultant for the series is Dr. H. E. Lehmann, clinical director of the Verdun Protestant Hospital, and associate professor of psychiatry, McGill University. Actual patients are seen and heard relating their problems to their psychiatrist. Today — "Psychosomatic Conditions: A Coronary." The case of a successful 34-year-old insurance salesman. His coronary is traced to inner tensions and conflicts. Filmed at the Jewish General Hospital in Montreal. Commentator is Dr. Nathan B.

help. As you watch, a psychiatrist will take his emotions apart. You will hear the patient describe how he felt, physically and mentally, when his first attack hit him. He will tell of the little things that have brought on subsequent attacks, each as frightening as the first. Then, to help you understand what has been happening to this man, Dr. N. B. Epstein will discuss the general field of psychoneuroses, in which anxiety is only one aspect. Then, as viewers watch, Dr. Epstein will face the patient with some hard questions about himself. What does he think of himself and of others? What is he holding in and covering up? What is he afraid of? What does he do when he feels angry? What does he feel is wrong with his personality? How does this illness affect his family? The patient will describe some of his irrational impulses tell how he avoids showing hostility, and discuss the treatment he is receiving.

The May 4 program is about psychotic conditions—in particular a depression that had the most turbed child. They will tell Anna how they came to adopt their young son and the problems they have to cope with until the boy really settles down, mentally and physically. From one of the agencies, a Social worker will discuss some of the problems in placing these children, and in helping restore them to a normal happy childhood.

IN YOUR GARDEN. Gardening report by Thelma Boucher, with some tips on Spring gardening.

CBC Film Playhouse

Today—"A Walk in the Wilderness." A Canadian test pilot, badly disfigured in a disastrous air crash, strives to overcome a sensitivity to the outside world and finds a new way of life. Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., stars.

CBWT—Mary Liz Show

Today, Miss Beth Douglas describes the work of the Canadian Music Educator's Association, and we meet an expert in music for young people. Dr. William Sur, of Michigan. Rev. Herbert Barbour explains the history and beliefs of the Pentacostal Church in our regular religious series. Frances McKay brings us her weekly market report and selects the buys of the week.

The Millionaire

Today—"Margaret Stoneham." Margaret Stoneham (Mona Freeman), a female attorney, faces the dilemma of whether or not to re-open a murder case which would implicate her fiance in a city government scandal. James Franciscus plays deputy district attorney Tom Doane. Marvin Miller plays Michael Anthony, who gives Margaret a check which enables her to search out a key witness in the case.

Just Mary

Today's story is "The Princely Pig," about a pig who wins the blue ribbon at the county fair and who convinces himself he is a real prince turned into a pig by a wicked spell. Setting out to find his rightful kingdom, he comes to the realm of King Leander, who can't stop laughing, much to the consternation of the Queen, their daughter the princess, and her fiance Prince Hubert. The pig accuses the King of casting a spell, and the King is so shocked he stops laughing and offers the pig his kingdom. Off-camera voices: Jack Mather, Doug Master, Winnifred Dennis, Roberta Maxwell and Douglas Rain. Puppet characters by John tragic beginning and a very happy ending. It was filmed at the Verdun Protestant Hospital and at the Queen Elizabeth Hospital in Montreal. New drugs are largely responsible for the spectacular recovery of the patient from an extremely serious and dangerous condition. One day a Montreal newspaper carried an item to the effect that "an apparently crazed man attempted to murder his wife and child and take his own life in a Montreal home Thursday." Within a few months this man was leading a perfectly sane, normal life with his family. You will see him both at the time of his admission to hospital and eight months later — a happy, outgoing man, back at work, enjoying life again.

You will hear a policeman tell of his experiences when he answered an urgent call and rushed to the scene of the patient's attempted murder and suicide. Dr. Breen Marien, the surgeon who treated the patient in the Queen Elizabeth Hospital, tells of his attitude immediately following his admission to hospital, and of his further attempt at suicide. On the sixth day he was transferred to the Verdun Protestant Hospital, where you will see him being queried by Dr. H. B. Durost about how he feels about himself and his future, about why he attempted to murder and Linda Keogh. Narrator: Mary Grannan.

Roy Rogers

Today—"Outlaws of Paradise Valley." Roy comes to the rescue of archaeological explorers who are seized as hostages by a gang of outlaws. One of the hostages manages to signal Roy and Dale who, with the sheriff, try to overpower the bad men and release the scientists.

his wife and child, and about his dreams. He recalls when things first began to go wrong, tells how he felt then, physically and emotionally, and why he believed, like most people, that he had to cure himself of his depression. Dr. Durost will describe the dramatic way the new drugs worked with the patient, and will look at the whole mental illness situation and what drugs and electro-shock therapy can do for it. Later the patient and his wife discuss signs of his illness and how they plan to watch for them in future.

The case of an intelligent, charming young man suffering from a complete absence of moral sense—a man without a conscience—will be presented in the May 11 program. Psychiatrists call him a psychopath, and his anti-social personality disorder has kept him in trouble with society and the law from an early age. Filmed at the Verdun Protestant Hospital, the program poses the question: if a man is unable to distinguish right from wrong, should he be sent to hospital as a sick man, or to prison as a criminal?

The patient in this case has served a term in the penitentiary, has been treated in a psychiatric ward, and is known by the police as a convicted burglar. He seems to know all about himself, but he is a very complicated puzzle which doctors, psychiatrists and social workers are trying to unravel. Through some of the people involved in the checkered career of this engaging but sometimes dangerous young man, his contradictory behaviour will be examined. Dr. Durost, heard from earlier in the series, will question the patient about his childhood and the beginning of his trouble. The doctor will ask him about his lack of conscience, and what he thinks his chances are of getting into further difficulty.

A detective who investigated the patient's burglary of a post office tells his story, as do the director of the Catholic Rehabilitation Service who has found the man various jobs, the deputy warden of the Federal Training Centre where he Audience-participation program for women with emcee Alan Millar, singers Donna Miller and Allan Blye, Rudy Toth and his orchestra, Rex Loring and Daniel the Spaniel, with today's special guest, Alex Barris, columnist of the Toronto Telegram, who talks about a wine festival.

This Is Alice

Today—"Pig in a Poke." Alice and Soapy buy Mrs. Abercrombie a spotted (painted) pig from a hobo and plan to enter it in a county fair pig contest. Stingy Jones arrives with a policeman looking for his prize pig, Mrs. Porky, which has been stolen, but doesn't recognize his animal with the spots painted on it. At the fair the pig gets doused with water and the truth comes out.

Pictures With Woofer

Woofer and Patty (Donna Miller) introduce films entitled, "The Elephant," "Lullabyland," and "I'm No Fool Having Fun."

Minnow On The Say

In today's episode, "Folly Mill," Adam tells the man (Mr. Smith) that he is Miss Codlings nephew and Mr. Smith becomes all charm. He tells them the property is his, if they find anything of value, and the boys are convinced he knows about the treasure. Finding nothing, they decide to try their luck farther along the bank, by Folly Mill.

Follow Me

Today—"Himalaya." A small boy talks to the Captain and Executive Officer of the ocean going liner Himalaya showing the use of stabilizing fins.

Fury

Today—"The Strong Man." A giant former seaman buys a ranch and is branded a coward when he refuses to stand up to one of the community leaders. Joey's friends turn against him because he has befriended the "coward". The seaman rancher gets a chance to prove his courage when a young lad becomes trapped on a ledge beneath a teetering rock.

Four Just Men

Today—"The Grandmother." American correspondent Tim Colier (Dan Dailey) sings a song, is shot at, and gets beaten when he becomes involved with a prominent French was sent to serve out his sentence while being retrained for life in society, and Dr. Gordon Cassidy, a neighbourhood practitioner who took a personal interest in him and tried to help him help himself.

Dr. Durost questions the patient about his suicide attempt, his private fears, why he can't settle to a job, his plans for the future, his interest in history and his ability to write. Later the doctor discusses general problems of dealing with psychopaths, the outlook for them, and other criminal conditions with personality connotations.

family and some faulty ammunition issued to a French battalion in Algiers during the Second World War. Honor Blackman appears as Nicole.

Flying Doctor

Today—"Wrong Medicine." Graham receives a call from a chemist who says he has given the wrong medicine to a patient. Graham tries to locate the patient and her husband who have been seen heading for a vast open space to do some prospecting. Both the woman and her husband take some of the poisonous medicine, as Graham searches frantically for them.

Cavalcade Of Sports

This week—Willie Pastrano of Miami Beach, Florida, vs. Von Clay of Philadelphia in a ten-round light-heavyweight bout from Miami Beach Auditorium.

• • •

The fact that Father Knows Best has stopped production doesn't mean we'll never see it again. Somebody will probably buy the whole series and start showing it all over again. And fifty years from now it will probably be the first series to go on the air over the newly-formed network of the Imperial Abyssinian Broadcasting Corporation, with subtitles in Coptic and Arabic—Kildare Dobbs, on "Critically Speaking"

ODDS and ENDS

Nycole Fortier, French Canadian vocalist, is the first performer to be booked for a third guest appearance on Music '60. She will be seen for the third time this season on April 25. Comedian Jonathan Winters will appear on the same show.

Three youngsters have now been found to play the roles of Juliette, George Murray and Jan Rubes on "An Hour With Juliette" April 13 (see last week's "Odds and Ends"). Ten-year-old Diane Mate is Juliette, Bob Smith, 13, is George Murray, and Bill, 14, is Jan Rubes. Both boys have had previous television experience—Bob on "Junior Magazine," and Bill in CBC opera series.

Mario Prizek is directing rehearsals for the May 10 Ford Startime presentation of Ibsen's "Hedda Gabler" in an adaptation by Lister Sinclair. The play will star England's Joan Greenwood, Winnipeg's Douglas Rain, and Mavor Moore, Leo Ciceri, Hilary Vernon and Winnifred Dennis.

Dr. Fred Rainsberry, CBC's national supervisor of children's programs, addressed the 36th annual conference of the Child Study Association of America in New York. Dr. Rainsberry's talk was entitled "Social Responsibility and the Use of Television for Children."

Hayward Morse, juvenile acting star, co-stars with Kate Reid in "Music in the Wall" in a forthcoming G.M. Presents program. The play will be videotaped April 12—one day before Hayward's appearance on "An Hour With Juliette."

Chick Chandler and John Russell starred in the TV series, "Soldiers of Fortune." (Dozens of people have been phoning CBC Winnipeg for this information).

Close-Up is preparing a 90-minute study of divorce in Canada and a report on the Canadian Indian for presentation during the summer months.

Five variety shows will be presented on CBC-TV this summer. Besides "Swing Gently" and "Parade" (announced in Odds and Ends last week) there will be variety shows on Tuesdays (replacing Front Page Challenge), Fridays (replacing "Country Hoedown"), and Saturdays. "Talent Caravan" will be replaced on Thursdays by a filmed drama series.

Encore, a series of repeat performances of the best Canadian TV drama from CBC Folio, Ford Startime, and G.M. Presents, will be carried on CBC-TV Sunday nights this summer.

CBWT-Music-Hall

Michelle Tisseyre's guests this week—Gloria Lasso, Jackie Lee, The Kilroys (acrobats), Claudette Bergeron and Paul-Claude Corbeil in an excerpt from "Brigadoon," and La Chanson Canadienne with Christiane Breton and Les Ballarins. (CBC Montreal film).

Junior Magazine

A film showing the story of the cartoon—its history and its artistic and technical development. To illustrate this the following cartoons will be shown. "Renaud's Early Cartoon Matinees;" "Gertie the Dinosaur;" "Max Fliescher's Cartoon" and "Bongo."

Outside Broadcast

This week—"Nature's Saltcellar." Keith Barry, Outside Broadcast producer in Halifax, is host of this tour of the surface and underground operations of a salt mine in the Malagash Salt Mines, near Pugwash, Nova Scotia. Part of the program will originate at the 630 ft. level of the mine, possibly the first time in Canadian television history that a telecast has originated that far underground. Keith Barry will talk with the mine manager, John McQuarrie, and mine engineer Don Stonehouse.

Cartoon Party

Today's cartoons: "Dinky Pinky," about a pink elephant in disgrace because he has no loud trumpet call; "Crusader Rabbit;" and "Freddy Fixit," in which Freddy tries to teach a lazy student some geography.

CBC Radio in Northern Canada

Improved service to isolated regions to whose residents radio coverage is vital

THE Canadian North covers an area of roughly two million square miles. But the population is fewer than 55,000. For many years the CBC could do little more than give these people, isolated in the Arctic, a weekly program of personal messages. (The Northern Messenger, a program begun in 1933, still going strong, and thus qualifying as the oldest continuous radio program on CBC.)

These people represent only three per cent of Canada's population not covered by radio services. Yet they are the residents who perhaps need radio coverage most: some scattered across the Arctic north, some living in the northern reaches of the provinces, and nearly 11,000 Eskimos, most of whom hear programs in their own

language only by Radio Greenland.

In 1958, with special funds voted by Parliament, the CBC began the improvement and expansion of its service in and to the North. Shortwave is necessary to cover the whole of the north, of course, and the plan of the new CBC Northern Service is two fold: first, the construction of a powerful shortwave station in southern Canada, to beam a full daily program to the entire north; and second, the establishment of small, standard-band radio stations in those northern communities which are large enough to warrant such a service.

For nearly six months the CBC International Service transmitters at Sackville, New Brunswick, have been testing transmission to the north. In May, they will begin a limited program of shortwave broadcasts.

Typical of reactions of the test was a letter from one northern listener: "I have been a seismologist for the Dominion Observatory for the last two years and will be leaving the Arctic next week after two most interesting years, and during this time there have been few CBC broadcasts I have missed. . . . Naturally personal letters and parcels from friends and family are the greatest 'morale boosters,' but I should like to emphasize how much your evening programs of news keep the men informed of day-to-day happenings of national interest."

Programs which Northern listeners hear on the small community stations are identical with programs on the CBC Trans-Canada network. Documentaries like Project '60, drama and light music will be heard. N.H.L. hockey, national news broadcasts, religious and women's programs will be interspersed with local community announcements and local weather reports.

Stations in the Northwest Territories will have a special Saturday afternoon request session called Gather 'Round. The program is special because Indian disc-jockeys will conduct the programs, speaking in their native language; at Yellowknife, the language is Chipewyan, at the Hay River it is Slavee, and at Port Smith, Dogrib.

Daily transmissions in the short-wave service (beginning in May) will be heard in six time zones across the north. This brings its problems. The ten o'clock News (that is, the news heard at 10:00 p.m. E.S.T.) will be heard simultaneously by Canadians at Goose Bay (where it will be the 11:00 o'clock news) and at Whitehorse (where it will be the six o'clock news).

Prior to 1958, the small community stations at Whitehorse, Churchill and Goose Bay were technically maintained by the Armed Services while the station at Yellowknife operated on volunteer efforts, aided by a town council subsidy. Others worked with voluntary operators and public donations. At present the CBC maintains stations at Dawson and Whitehorse in the Yukon territory, Hay River, Fort Smith and Yellowknife in the Northwest territories,

Laurier

JOSEPH SCHULL describes the two-part program he has written for CBC Wednesday Night—beginning this week

IMAGINE that anyone who attempts this form of dramatized biography works with twin devils perched on his shoulders, the one warning him constantly against boring the casual listener the other against outraging the professional historian. The writer has to condense and select and squeeze out the essence of events, has to deal honestly with chronology while at the same time he usually finds it impossible to handle it in a straight, orderly, go-ahead manner, and above all he has to form for himself a clear image of his subject amid the murk of controversy, criticism and laudation. He is straddling a number of fences producing not quite history, not quite literature and not quite drama, and he is likely to end up, I find, by wondering what he has produced.

The Laurier programs have been for me the most interesting and difficult I have attempted in this field, and I have more than the usual number of doubts about the result. There were some 50 years of Canadian history to be covered—and this, I think—one of the most complex and difficult periods we have yet known—and the man at the centre of things, for all the luminous clarity of his words and thought, was subtle and elusive in essence. At least, so he seemed to me: I had to link documentation with imagination to produce an image to work with, and I may or may not have found the real man.

He was born in 1841 at St. Lin on the Laurentian plain, a little to the north of Montreal. Eight generations of his forefathers had been settled in this same region; the first had come to Ville Marie with Mai-sonneuve. Four years before he was born and some 20 miles from where he lived, the bitterest and longest-remembered battle of the Lower Canada Rebellion had taken place between British regulars and French-Canadian patriotes. Anyone who knows that region can well imagine the bitterness that lingered among the habitants as the boy grew up. Yet the first words he ever spoke on a public platform were a pledge "to give the whole of my life to the cause of conciliation, harmony and concord amongst the different elements of this country of ours." They were perhaps, merely the set words of a boy valedictorian, pious echoings from his teachers at McGill. Yet he could quite as easily and with more applause from his hot-blooded friends, have given a pledge of exclusive loyalty to his own race.

The habitant, in the days of Laurier's youth, was no more anxious than he had been in the days of Papineau's prime to "go beyond the sound of his own church-bells." Yet Laurier, at the age of 11, was sent away from home to a neighbouring village where he lived for two years with English families—one of them a Protestant family—to learn the English language.

Obviously there was in his background something that went beyond the conventional insularity of rural French Canada. I like to think that the source of it was Grandfather Charles. Charles Laurier must have been a remarkable man, and Laurier's biographers point that out. He was a surveyor and an inventor, they tell us, who was the first man to secure a Canadian patent—for a "land-log," a speedometer of the horse age which he attached to the wheel of a gig and with which he measured very accurately the distance by road from Montreal to Quebec. This is interesting, but much more interesting, I think, is Charles' description of himself. It was shown to me by Dr. Brunet, of the National Archives. "Charles Laurier," the old man writes, "surveyor, geographer and practical astronomer, for he has never been to school except for two months at his father's house where a teacher taught him to spell, 65 evenings with a tutor, paid for by five piastres and five pounds of candles which he earned himself, and three months with a surveyor whom his father paid. But the retirement in which he has lived has given him the leisure to study nature, morality and reason; he has become a man by his thoughts."

"To study nature, morality and reason . . . he has become a man by his thoughts." There seems to be here a breath from an intellectual climate strange to the rural Quebec of the 19th century, a hint of the world of Rousseau and Voltaire, of the cool, questioning rationalism which was so detested by extreme churchmen and racialists, and equally detested by their more violent opponents. How much it amounted to, and how great its in-

PROGRAM NOTES

SUNDAY SCHOOL OF THE AIR

Second of two programs titled "The Communion of Saints." This lesson will show the oneness of the Christian church throughout the ages. Rev. Douglas Lauchlan quizzes the panel; Norm Micklewright tells the Bible story, and Gertrude Lowery conducts the choir. Harry Randall, producer. From Winnipeg.

W-9:15 am K-9:30 am X-9:30 am

MATINEE HIGHLIGHTS

The Little People. Ann Moray is a Washington woman with a variety of interests and more than a nodding acquaintance with the elves and fairies that inhabit the Washington woods. She talks about them with Maud Ferguson, former CBC commentator in Ottawa, now married and living in Washington where her husband is press councillor at the Canadian Embassy. (Repeated from Trans-Canada Matinee 17/3/60).

At Home With The Ancient Aztecs. George Woodcock, editor of the University of British Columbia quarterly, Canadian Literature, is the author of several books about ancient civilizations. In this talk, he discusses the home life of the fabulous Aztec empire before the destruction of the magnificent city of Tenochtitlan. (Repeated from Matinee 19/11/59).

Fatness. Dr. E. W. McHenry is professor of nutrition at the school of hygiene of the University of Toronto. He discusses some often-misunderstood aspects of food nutrition, particularly fatness and its causes and prevention. (Repeated from Matinee 17/3/60).

W-10:30 am K-10:30 am X-10:30 am

PROJECT '60

This week—"The Ballad of John Axon," a story of a railway engineer who died trying to stop a collision.

On February 9, 1957, John Axon was at the controls of a locomotive near Manchester, England, when the main brakes failed. The 33-car freight train gathered speed and Axon ordered his crew to jump. He stayed with the train in a vain attempt to avert a collision with an oncoming express. Axon was awarded the George Cross posthumously.

Folk singer Ewan MacColl wrote the song, "The Ballad of John Axon" and will sing it on this program. Ronald Scanlon, the fireman on Axon's train, gives an eyewitness account of what happened. (BBC transcription).

POSTMARK U.K.

This week - "Dogs in Britain." Arthur Bush went to the famous Crufts Dog Show recently, he discovered that the British dog breeding "industry" is flourishing. He talked to breeders, judges, and show officials, and learned, to his surprise, that British dogs are in such demand that one in every 24 puppies bred in the U.K. is exported. To find out more about this demand for British bred stock he broadened his enquiries and visited British breeders and others concerned with the export of dogs.

MUSIC ON RADIO

By BOYD NEEL

More about pops concerts and about music from Winnipeg

LAST WEEK, you may remember, I was speculating on the exact meaning of the term "pop" concert and I asked if readers could help me. My thanks to one of you who has come up with the most unexpected explanation, and that is that the "pop" refers to the opening of the champagne bottles at the celebrated Boston Pop concerts where they serve refreshments during the music. I must say I was astonished at this because I always imagined that "pop" was an abbreviation of popular, but maybe I have been wrong all the time. If this explanation is correct, it would account for my mystification when examining programs of various pop concerts in different countries. I could find no thread of similarity running through them and it was this that led me to ask the question. We have certainly reached a stage today where anything seems to "go" at a pop concert and it appeared hardly worth retaining the title if it implied "popular." Who is to say what is "popular," music anyhow?

UNIVERSITY OF THE AIR

Dr. W. G. Hardy, head of the department of classics at the University of Alberta, continues the series titled "The Greek and Roman World." Today—"Roman Luxury and Poverty." After a consideration of the conditions of living among those "on the dole", there will be a description of the almost unbelievable luxury of the wealthy. As an example of state expenditures there will be an analysis of the Roman "games"; those spectacles presented in the theatre, the circus, and the amphitheatre with such prodigality that one may find here one of the factors in the fall of Rome.

On Sunday evening (CBC Concert Hall) I see we can hear "Four Songs for voice, viola and piano" by Charles Loeffler. This interesting composer is not often heard today. He was a member of the so-called "Boston Group," or "Boston Classicists," who were the followers of Edward MacDowell. Their leader and chief spokesman was Daniel Gregory Mason, and the ideals of the group were expressed in the famous couplet which he wrote to a fellow composer:

"One truth you taught us outlived all the rest;
Music hath Brahms to soothe the savage breast."

Loeffler certainly fitted in well with the group, as he was very much at home in the German romantic tradition, having been born in Alsace, and only coming to the United States when he was twenty years old. He was one of the original first violinists of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and after he resigned from it, he retired to a farm at Medfield, Massachusetts, where he spent the rest of his life composing.

Probably his best known work is the Pagan Poem for full orchestra with piano obbligato. This extraordinary piece, based on Virgil, has three trumpets obbligato, heard at first off stage and then gradually drawing nearer, finally merging with the orchestra on stage. All

UNIVERSITY OF THE AIR

Third program in the series by Dr. W. G. Hardy, of the University of Alberta, titled "The Greek and Roman World." In this lecture we will stroll through the streets, the houses, and the shops of the Athenians. We will consider the occupations of the people, the methods of production, the wages, the living conditions, and so on. Then we will follow a middle-class Athenian through the routine of an ordinary day.

PRAIRIE PLAYHOUSE

"Opus Three and Four" by Norman Bortnick. Two short plays by Medicine Hat writer Norman Bortnick.

"Opus Three" is concerned with a sensitive young boy whose nature revolts at the thought of slaughtering farm animals. "Opus Four" is a kind of variation of the Faust theme.

Norman Bortnick

George Erresman, farmer, makes a bargain with the devil to give him heavy crops even when his neighbours are suffering from drought and misfortune.

PROJECT '60

"Castro's Cuba." As the revolution goes on in agrarian land reforms, in the attack on illiteracy, in housing, in medicine, now the ideals of the revolution are becoming practical reforms and economic survival has replaced physical survival in this island of constant revolt. This is Castro's Cuba, as reporters Lloyd Chester and Tony Thomas found it.

this is supposed to indicate the incantation of a sorceress gaining in passion and potency as she weaves her spell.

Loeffler never really became absorbed into the main stream of America's musical life and it is hard to classify him. He was certainly always interested in the macabre and the mystical. His music has at different times been said to show Russian, Irish and Spanish influences. Whether the reader can imagine the sound of his music from this description, I have not the slightest idea, but it is the only one that has ever been attempted in words.

CBC IN THE NORTH

Churchill in Manitoba and Goose Bay in Labrador. Low power relay transmitters exist at Fort Nelson, B.C., and Watson Lake in the Yukon. It is planned this summer to build a station at the new town site at Inuvik, 35 miles northeast of Aklavik on the eastern channel of the MacKenzie. Together these community stations service well over half of the north's population.

In the Canadian south, landlines carry programs from the point of origination across the country. Consequently, programs can be heard live along the network. The same applies to the Whitehorse community station, which is linked by landline with Edmonton, but the other northern stations have no such link. They therefore pick up news and topical features from other CBC transmitters.

Other network features which are not so affected by immediacy are recorded on tape in Montreal and flown to the station concerned. Altogether, 70 hours a week are recorded. After their use on CBC stations, the Armed Forces and various mining companies use the tapes. In this way CBC programs like Rawhide and Toronto Pops Concert are heard by listeners only 400 miles from the pole at Alert, Canada's northernmost settlement. They are also being heard at Resolute Bay on Cornwallis Island, Gunnar and Eldorado Mines in Northern Saskatchewan, Port Radium on Great Bear Lake, and Schefferville in Quebec.

fluence on the young Laurier, no one can say. Certainly it never alienated him from his environment, his people or his faith. But just as certainly there was something, not only in his upbringing but in the man himself, which detached him from the extremes of any position—from the mystique of race, from religious bigotry, and perhaps from any hope of absolute perfection in anything.

"He never asked what is ideally best, but merely what is the best that will work." The words were not a criticism; they came from an ardent admirer, and they were true. Not by any very deliberate choice, but by that combination of opportunity, ability and inclination which is so often a kind of trap (or a kind of fate), Laurier found himself a politician. He had not the health for it; he was a frail man all his life, and many times, with more or less sincerity, he sought release. But he probably never expected, nor could he have endured, release. He was a born leader of men, and being a very great one he was never tempted to seek for absolute perfection in men or policies. "The best that will work," the way that would tend toward "conciliation, harmony and concord"—that was what he looked for and fought for in the long series of battles which were really one battle for a unified nation.

He would be the last to believe, I think, that he ever attained any complete victory or final solution. That satisfaction was denied him by his temperament. Yet the same (Please turn to page 33)

Help for Sick Children. During the Royal Tour of Canada last year, the Canadian government marked the tour, at the Queen's request and instead of loading her up with miscellaneous gifts, by setting up a fund of $10,000,000 for research into children's diseases. The fund is called "The Queen Elizabeth Fund for Research into Children's Diseases," Dr. John McCreary, dean of medicine at the University of British Columbia, was appointed chairman by the Queen. In this interview with Vancouver freelance broadcaster Grace Shaw, Dr. McCreary talks about the fund's plan to carry out the aims for which it was established. Today is Queen Elizabeth's birthday.

The Metre Reader. Verse, humorous and pleasant, is the metre reader's stock-in-trade. Tommy Tweed is a Toronto actor who has long been a favourite with Matinee listeners.

For Consumers. Jean Morrison, Ottawa housewife and broadcaster who also does research for local television programs, returns with news about new developments of interest to consumers.

Daily features . . . News commentary by Isabel Wilson of Toronto, recorded musical selections by David Murray of Halifax, and Tony Van Bridge will read "The Adventures of the Veiled Lodger," a Sherlock Holmes story by Conan Doyle, adapted for radio by Edith Fowke.

Room For Argument

A new series featuring "good conversation on matters of continuing importance"

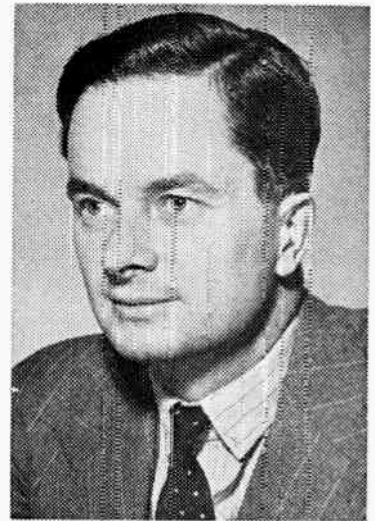

"THE ART of good talk is something very precious and rarely heard these days," remarked Murdo Mackinnon in a recent edition of CBC radio's Critically Speaking. While critic Mackinnon allowed that "panels, interviews, clashes of viewpoint are common enough," he bemoaned the lack of "genuine discussion carried on by mature and articulate persons who have respect for ideas and each other."

He may find what he is looking for in a new radio series which starts this Thursday evening on CBC Trans-Canada. The title of the show is Room for Argument. A. Davidson Dunton, president of Carleton University, Ottawa, will play hosts each week to two or three guests who will meet by radio-link to exchange views on subjects close to their hearts.

The show's title may be misleading. The producers warn that it is "not a battleground—rather, an opportunity for good conversation on matters of continuing importance. To the listener it offers the stimulus of hearing thoughtful men and women comparing ideas, questioning accepted attitudes, and bringing special knowledge to bear on the topic under discussion.

On the first program, this Thursday evening, two men—a physicist and a psychiatrist—talk about faith. Dr. K. C. MacDonald, a brilliant physicist on the staff of the National Research Council and honorary head of the department of physics of the University of Ottawa, is a sceptic. Dr. Karl Stern, a Montreal psychiatrist who teaches at the Universities of Ottawa and Montreal, is a Catholic. Dr. MacDonald was seen last year in the CBC-TV program Belief, in the Explorations series. Dr. Stern was recently interviewed for television by Nathan Cohen.

In their conversation together, Mr. Dunton and his guests delve deeply into the meaning of "belief," of "truth," of "values" and try to define the areas of life to which one can apply the scientific method. The result is a moving and eloquent discussion which is likely to remain in the mind of the listener long after the half-hour is over.

• • •

Over and over again, a scientist has studied a problem simply because he was interested in it—then quite by accident he has stumbled on something of enormous practical importance. Two of the most sensational discoveries of this century were more or less accidental—Sir Alexander Fleming's discovery of penicillin, which has revolutionized medicine; and Professor Hahn's discovery of nuclear fission, which has led to the atomic bomb and the atomic power station. Neither of these men was trying to achieve anything practical—they were just trying to find out how nature works.—John Davy, Science Correspondent of "The Observer," on BBC.

TRANS-CANADA MATINEE

At The United Nations. Kathleen Teltsch is The New York Times correspondent at the United Nations. She reports regularly to Matinee listeners on the activities of that world body.

Guest Of The Month. This week, Matinee welcomes as its "Guest of the Month" a well-loved writer and broadcaster who is known by hundreds of Canadian children. She is Mary Grannan, writer of the CBC's children's programs "Maggie Muggins" and "Just Mary" and author of 26 children's books published in three countries. Miss Grannan retired from the CBC this year after 21 years of service as a writer, broadcaster, producer and program organizer. She hasn't really retired, though, for she is preparing another of her "Maggie Muggins" books for publication and she's continuing to write the Maggie Muggins series on television and preparing a Just Mary series for television this spring. Miss Grannan will talk about her career with another popular CBC performer, J. Frank Willis.

All About Mermaids. Some people take up nationalism, some take up heroin. But Alice Pinney, Vancouver writer and broadcaster, has taken up mermaids; has, in fact, done a great deal of research into this fishy, or maidenly, subject. Miss Pinney shares some of the fruits of her research with Matinee's listeners today.

Daily features . . . News commentary by Gerard Pelletier of Montreal, recorded selections by David Murray of Halifax, and another Sherlock Holmes story, read by Tony Van Bridge, "The Dying Detective," adapted for radio by Edith Fowke.
W-2:03 pm K-2:33 pm X-2:33 pm

CBX-YOUNG ARTISTS

Series designed to introduce talented young Edmonton artists and to give them an opportunity to gain some experience in broadcasting. This week pianist Dennis Ball will play Mozart's variations on the folk song Ah Vous Dirai-Je Maman, Schumann's Prophet Bird, and Mendelssohn's Caprice (Op. 16,

No. 2). Commentator for the series is Herbert Turner, secretary of the Alberta Musical Festival, who co-ordinates the series, and, working through Edmonton's music teachers, selects the artists. Duncan McKerchar, producer.

CBX-5:00 pm

TRAVELLIN' BALLADEER

Folk singer and guitarist Stu Phillips of Calgary. Today's program will include such songs as The Kissin' Tree; The Wild Rose; Cowboy Jack; Railroad Corral; Trail of the Lonesome Pine; and Skip to My Lou.

K-6:45 pm X-6:45 pm

POST-NEWS TALK

Joyce Irvine of Winnipeg talks about the pleasures of Income Tax.
W-9:20 pm K-8:20 pm X-8:20 pm

temperament made him philosophical in defeat, and permitted him to die an optimist when the work of his life seemed to lie in ruins around him. For if there are no absolute victories there can be no absolute defeats. He had achieved neither conciliation, harmony nor concord among the two great races of this nation. Indeed at the last he was made to seem the principal agent in destroying them—yet the work of his life had made it unthinkable that either race should follow any course but the groping back from compromise to compromise toward real union.

His place in our history, I think, stands higher than Macdonald's; and perhaps there will be some justification for that view in these programs. As I worked on them it seemed to me that Laurier, though perhaps the best-known name in our political gallery, was the least-known man; certainly I had never understood the complexity of the issues he dealt with, nor the central purpose which gave his life both its unity and its element of tragedy. I hope I understand them now, and that I have been able to convey at least an impression of them without distorting either history or the man.

I have of course drawn very largely on the official biography by O. D. Skelton in the course of the work, and to a somewhat lesser extent on the work of Sir John Willison. Another very important work to which I am much indebted is Mason Wade's The French Canadians. The works of David and Rumilly were the principal French sources; and of course for the other side of the picture one turned naturally to Professor Creighton's great biography of Sir John A. Macdonald. Among the lesser printed sources I am particularly indebted to Laurier - A Study in Canadian Politics by John W. Dafoe, and to the delightful reminiscences of Peter McArthur in his little book, Sir Wilfred Laurier.

Professor Frank Underhill, curator of Laurier House, not only gave me very generously of advice and assistance, but also provided from his own store of knowledge a number of invaluable insights. He also introduced me to Professor H. Blair Neatby, whose thesis Laurier and a Liberal Quebec was the principal guide in the field of Quebec politics. For much other help I should like to thank particularly Mr. Dan McArthur and Miss Jacqueline Nigneau and the staff of the National Archives in Ottawa. It only remains to add that neither the books nor the people consulted can be blamed for the shortcomings of the finished work.

(Laurier will be presented by a distinguished group of Toronto and Montreal actors. The title role will be played by Henry Ramer; for full cast of part one, see Wednesday radio notes, page 29.)

Boatbuilding is surprisingly like dressmaking. In both cases one starts with a flat material which must be cut and fixed in such a way that the final shape curves in the right places.—Vera Hodges, on BBC.

Radio Fan

• Some of us are very remiss in not writing and expressing our appreciation for the many delightful programs we get on the radio. As it is a miserable, stormy day and I am enjoying the Ottawa Philharmonic I thought it a good time to write. Our early morning schedule from Regina is very nice, but why did you replace Music in Black and White with that rapid serial, Edge of Tomorrow? It is neither interesting nor amusing (but The Archers does compensate for it). I also enjoy Bernie Johnson and the Armadale Chorus, Jean Hinds, Tommy Hunter, and John Drainie. My Word is very amusing, and a nice replacement for The Goons, which I never seemed to get in clearly. Jazz Workshop (and all other jazz programs) give me a pain, but I can suffer them as there are so many other programs I can enjoy. I don't know how I could get along without CBC. I am no TV fan, so radio is my particular interest, and may it long continue its excellent work.—Mrs. Alice Colbert, Findlater, Sask.

More Theme Music

• Recently in the Mailbag you supplied correspondents with the titles of the theme music used on Fighting Words and G.M. Presents. Could you identify the themes used on Movies With Manings and radio's Project 60?

Movies With Manings—“Jump for Joy”, included on one of Dave Brubeck's 1958 Newport Jazz Festival recordings (Columbia, CL-1249). Project '60—excerpt from William Walton's Symphony (1935); the version used is by the Philharmonic Promerade Orchestra conducted by Sir Adrian Boult (Westminster, XWN-18374).

No Life Jacket

• Please let me draw your attention to a very serious mistake you made on your Heritage program today. Your writer did not seem to know that it is not safe for young boys to go out alone in a canoe. A lot of things have been attributed to the powers of God, but one of the things He does not do is make life jackets available to drowning young boys. I hope the number of drownings next summer will not be increased by some boys trying to follow the example of what they saw on Heritage.—A. J., St. Vital, Man.

Happyland

• I am writing to say how sorry we were to notice in our CBC Times that the last Happyland program is to be on March 28. We sincerely hope it will return soon. It is one of our favourite programs.—Mrs. J. R. J., Darlingford, Man.

While “Happyland” is off TV, Jake Park's band and singers Donna Andert and Kerr Wilson will be heard every other Saturday afternoon on CBC radio, alternating with “Prairie Schooner.”

Praise and Regret

• My wife and I thoroughly enjoy CBC radio, and if I say that often it is better than the BBC I can offer no higher praise. Even the poor programs are masterpieces of their kind—good examples of how not to do it. The riches of CBC, however, are many and munificent and it is a pity to think that so much that is good radio will never see the printed page.—I. H. L., Edson, Alta.

U.S. Listener

• We like the Canadian radio programs, the dignified way in which they are presented, and the singers who do not as a rule have to “jazz it up” when presenting the grand music of years past. In reply to the complaint about having to listen to a talk on “Eastern fat ankles”, we prefer even that (or western or eastern or northern fat ankles) to the horrible noises from most of our American stations. Here one cannot listen to a program unless one sits within reach of the radio and turns it off ten or fifteen times during a quarter-hour program.—C. B. G., East Grand Forks, Minn.

Grateful

• May I express the gratitude of the many unvocal television viewers who enjoyed the expert productions of The Tempest, Manon, and Candida, even though we regret the passing of Folio, which was unmarred by intrusive advertising. Among the “unvocal viewers” I include those thousands who endure the passionately energetic advertising, the talent parades, the repetitive violent action shows, in anticipation of such genuinely artistic productions as from time to time can be considered our legitimate share of television entertainment: Close-Up, Press Conference, Newsmagazine, Art in Action, Explorations. And may I add a word of thanks for my five-year-old daughter who faithfully follows Friendly Giant, Maggie Muggins, Children's Newsreel, This Living World, and See For Yourself.—F. J. W., Regina.

More Mike Hammer

• This has gone too far! Mike Hammer is fighting crime with all he's got. He merely gives criminals and racketeers a taste of their own medicine. Isn't placing crime in its proper place moral enough? As for the actions of Mike on March 16, I'm with him 100 per cent. How would Mrs. H. P. (Mailbag, March 27-April 2) have reacted if her husband-to-be was killed a half-hour before the ceremony and she had no doubt who had killed him?—A. L., Fort Garry.
“Doubly criminal to do so Since the maid had bought her trousseau,” said W. S. Gilbert in “Trial by Jury.”
We suspect that it is lack of the latter (or of any kind of trial) that some of our readers have found objectionable.

Like all Victorians of his class, he was obsessed with eating and drinking; most Victorians dug their graves with their own teeth. Even the famous election scenes in Pickwick Papers had to take place in the mythical town of Eat an' Swill. When the Dickens Society of Hartford, Connecticut, gave a dinner to their famous visitor and namesake in 1842 they provided 72 dishes. Think of that, you modern organizers of Dickens Memorial Dinners! —72 different dishes of good things to eat and every kind of alcoholic beverage—and I'll bet that Charles tasted and enjoyed every one of them, although he went away and bit the hands that had fed him.

He knew more about booze than a Milwaukee bartender. There are in Pickwick Papers alone 295 references to alcoholic beverages. Brandy and water "the old invariable," being the most often called for and hops being the favourite flower.

He had a memory like an elephant's secretary especially for signed publishers' contracts, for he did not write for the good of his health. He collected £100,000—half a million dollars—in about thirty years from the sufferings and agonies of his characters. His heroines were pure as the driven snow, and out of their mythical vicissitudes he amassed more than enough to keep a mistress and leave her with £1,000 and a daughter.

It was safer to be a soldier in the French Foreign Legion than to be a child in one of Charles John Huffam Dickens' stories. The death of Little Nell produced more grief in Britain and America than the death of Queen Victoria. Even the rough goldminers of California were sending cables pleading with him not to kill her, but she had to go. The death of Agnes Copperfield caused Prime Minister Lord John Russell and his good lady to sob like Johnny Ray. The death of Paul Dombey caused actor William Charles Macready, the "eminent tragedian," to fling all three hundred pounds of himself on a horse-hair-covered sofa, kick his legs in the air and scream in agonies of grief. My father, who heard great Charles read the death of Little Nell in a public hall saw twelve young women carried out stiff and screaming.

I am amazed that some enterprising publisher doesn't issue a pocket book of Dickens' death scenes. Why such a book would be a must for those sick friends of yours to whom you wish to send some cheery reading matter. (Now that we have rival Stratfords in Ontario and Connecticut for the convenience of North American Shakespearians we have the right to expect that Rochester, Minnesota, will wake up and offer us a Dickens Clinic as well as a Mayo Clinic, complete with a synthetic Bull Inn where volunteers can train to visit the sick and read to them about the death of Little Nell or Little Paul Dombey or Little Joe or Little Agnes Copperfield, or all the other little wretches that Dickens slew as callously as a butcher slays lambs for the market.)

But of course Dickens catered to a class of people to whom hypocrisy and humbug were second nature, whose flinty hearts did not bruise easily, people who were indifferent to the sufferings of the chimney sweep boys and street arabs at their doors—but who could cry like onion peelers over the sufferings of mythical orphans.

Dickens had an affection for the lower classes and quite often tipped them a sixpence if they were werry werry 'umble and knew their places. But no ungenteeled language, please; even that low-browed plug-ugly Bill Sykes was clean of speech as a curate; not even a gorbliney passed his lips. His only oath—"Wolves tear their throats"—was never heard before or since in London's slums.

As a social reformer Dickens was like those people who are always grumbling about the weather but never do anything about it. The middle class Victorian believed that if you closed your eyes to unpleasant things they would go away. Dickens' comfortably fixed readers would no more have gone into the slums of Seven Dials or St. Giles Rookery than they would have entered a den of tigers.

But William Booth took the blood and fire banners of the Salvation Army into those slums, and Lord Shaftesbury, Benjamin Disraeli and Forster the Quaker went down into them, and they didn't find the lower classes quite so "werry 'umble" and comical and romantic as Dickens' readers did. It was the legislation instigated by those men between 1850 and 1890 that softened the ignorance and slums and bad housing and crime that Dickens had wailed about, certainly not the sobs and snickers of his readers.

Crude sentimentality in fiction is as dead as Little Nell, but the man who invented it and exploited it is still very much with us. Every year many of us suffer from the Dickens Syndrome—that mixture of artificial whoopee, hopped-up generosity, and subsequent deep depression that comes over us like the one during the last ten shopping days before Christmas.

Charles Dickens was all that they say he was—a domestic tyrant whose brutalities made his wife's life a hell on earth, a petty snob and social climber who despised his parents and pilloried them as the Micawbers, a man who loved the working classes so much that he was ashamed to have been one of them, a ham actor who thought he could have been the world's greatest tragedian.

But he was also the world's finest storyteller; his stories are still read in almost every language. And within limits he was the world's greatest humorist.
