CJDS is the authority in seamless automation for the business of media. CJDS is the only company offering end-to-end technological solutions to buyers and sellers of advertising time within the electronic media marketplace (broadcast, cable, wireless, and DBS). Through our unique array of software applications, connectivity products, consulting services, and media know-how, we are positioned to assist clients to develop business strategies and processes for the industry of the 21st century.

A client roster of nearly 2000 includes a global list of television and radio stations, television networks, cable networks, cable MSOs and interconnects, advertising agencies, media buyers, and national reps.

Products include solutions for single sites and corporate groups, and address the areas of sales and traffic, master control, media demographics, finance, archiving, programming, and administration.

Our consulting services facilitate the implementation of computer technologies and industry-best practices across all segments of the electronic media business. We offer comprehensive plans to clients on everything from top-down design of a startup media operator to complete review and re-engineering of existing operating practice. We are available to assist with "hands-on" services that include workflow analysis, installation of computer systems and software, training, temporary staffing, and system start-up. From a LAN of WAN environment setup to custom designed software, we bring all the resources of a powerful media organization to bear in developing the solutions to today's media challenges - and tomorrow's.

HE ELECTRONIC NEWSROOM REVOLUTION BEGAN HERE.

Comprompter was the first PC based newsroom system in the industry and the only pioneer electronic newsroom system with its original developer still at the helm of the company.

Comprompter ENR is the industry standard for Electronic Newsroom systems.

The power of Comprompter lies in the fully integrated software: on-camera prompting with machine control, wire capture, scripting, tape time computation, video instruction input, archiving and rundown.

And so the revolution continues. Now ... Windows 95.

Books on Broadcasting, Cable and Mass Media An Annotated Bibliography

Compiled by Christopher H. Sterling, School of Media and Public Affairs, George Washington University.

This bibliography organizes and annotates recent (generally published in the last five years) books on bostg, cable, other electronic media and related topics. Books are listed once within one of the subject headings under either United States, or Foreign/International. Citations are current to January 1997. Consult previous Broadcasting Yearbooks for earlier titles.

United States

Titles are listed once under one of these headings: general and reference; history; biography; organization and economics; journalism; entertainment; pub (noncoml) systems; audience; policy and regulation; newer media systems; technology; and production and performance.

GENERAL AND REFERENCE

Periodicals on Broadcasting, Cable and Mass Media An Annotated Bibliography

Compiled by Christopher H. Sterling, School of Media and Public Affairs, George Washington University.

This bibliography details many important English-language periodicals published here or abroad. They appear, as with the earlier book list, in sections on United States (divided into sections on trade, academic/commentary, & media law) and Foreign/International publications (divided into sections by region of the world). Where possible, year of inception & publisher addresses are provided. For yearbooks & other annuals, see the earlier annotated bibliography of books. For newsletters, most of them weekly, see the periodical list which follows.
