The Permanent Remedy for Unemployment

By CHARLES P. HOWARD

President of the International Typographical Union

THE condition from which the workers, business and industry is now suffering constitutes a most serious inactment against our industrial leaders. While there were being developed methods and machinery by which one worker would produce as much as many who had been previously employed, those who control industry resisted reduction of the work day and the work week. Their failure to recognize the simplest and most obvious economic truth is largely responsible for the present condition of depression, bankruptcy and unemployment.

Refusal to deal upon a collective basis prevented complete organization of the workers. Now that all elements are confronted with a condition, the seriousness of which but few recognize, the agencies through which the necessary remedies might be applied are lacking. In industries which are unorganized there is not the machinery for co-operation of all elements so essential to success. Industries in which the workers are partially organized presents a problem equally difficult. We are without the one agency through which it is possible to establish and maintain conditions which prevent destructive competition with its inescapable effect upon elements which must be fixed.

Criticism Will Not Solve Problem

It must be realized that criticism will not solve our problem. It is apparent that machines are "producers," but they have not the ability to purchase and consume that which is produced. The people are the consumers, and a vast majority are workers who can consume only that which they can buy with the wages for which they can sell their labor.

Through the development and use of machines in almost every line of production one worker engaged eight hours per day six days per week will produce more than two workers could under methods previously used. In the domestic and export market it is not possible to dispose of that which is produced by the more than forty million wage-earners working a full week. As a consequence, with their machines and modern methods, it requires the services of but one-half the number of workers to produce the same quantity as was formerly produced by all those engaged in the industries.

Some of those displaced by machines have been absorbed by newly developed lines of industry. Those who could not be absorbed have involuntarily enlisted in the army of unemployed. Not being able to sell their labor they were unable to buy and consume that which was being produced by their more fortunate brothers and the machines they operated. This resulted in reducing the "domestic demand" upon which the prosperity of the nation rested. Because of the inability of those displaced to buy, other industries were unable to sell and discontinued or curtailed operations. This added more workers to the lists of the unemployed and continued the operation of the vicious circle which has brought loss of profit or bankruptcy to the investor, hard times to management, and hunger, misery and suffering to the unemployed millions and their dependents.

Few Have Courage to Deal With the Question

Conferences have been held under federal, state and municipal direction to deal with the problem. Officials of high and low degree have discussed and deplored the condition. But few have had the courage to deal with the question in other than generalities and fewer have expressed a willingness to apply the only remedy which will permanently improve the condition.

In the enjoyment and practice of our perity's sunshine. They comment that we have suffered panics in the past and in due time prosperity returned.

But what must be the feeling of the unemployed husband and father who is willing to work but unable to sell his labor for money with which to buy bread. What must be the workings of his mind as he walks the streets half fed and poorly clad looking into the glowing windows of comfortable homes, the occupants of which know nothing and appear to care less about his condition. How long will he and the millions suffering from involuntary unemployment remain true to American ideals and satisfied with the conception of industrial liberty now practiced when he thinks of a wife

Consumption the Gauge of Production

By JOHN J. MANNING

THERE is considerable confusion of mind on the part of many of those who are now discussing unemployment and its causes. Those who are writing on this subject for the magazines and the newspapers; the economists who are discussing it; the office holders and the politicians who are continually referring to the problem generally, fail to make the necessary distinction between production in our industries and the capacity of the mass of the people to buy what is produced.

There are a number of those who recommend the dividing up of the work—part-time employment—so that the unemployed may get their share.

This would be helpful to those who had no work. It would keep dire misery and suffering from many thousands of homes, but it would not relieve the unemployment caused by the people's inability to buy what is being produced. What is most necessary now is to have the mass of the people buying, and buying sufficiently to bring production back to a normal point.

If a workman receiving a salary of $60 a week should agree to work half time so that some other unfortunate could get in three days, there would still be only $60 with which to buy goods. What is needed is something which will change the $60 into $70 or $80, and in that way increase consumption.

We are altogether too prone to think of ourselves as producers. That is the way the employers, the public, and most of the economists have thought of us. We are just beginning to insist upon being recognized as consumers, and it is because we have failed as consumers that the present depression has come upon us. Taking the wage-earners as a whole, we have been producing a great deal more than the wages we received enabled us to purchase.

In discussing the causes of unemployment and the steps necessary to re-establish normal conditions, we must think of ourselves as consumers as well as producers, and never forget that the hours of labor relate to the amount of production, while the wages we receive regulate our capacity to consume, for hours of labor and the wage rate while closely related to production as well as consumption, are two entirely separate factors.

If the hours of labor were reduced so that every one had employment but wages did not increase in proportion to the per capita production in industry, we would not be any better off except for a few weeks. Because of this economic truth, the fact that as wage-earners we are both producers and consumers, it is necessary at all times to plan for the future so that shortening the hours of labor will be accompanied by increasing wages.

democracy the control of industry has remained autocratic. Not even the federal government can require our industrial captains, either individually or collectively, to do the one thing that will substitute prosperity for bankruptcy. The responsible head of each industry ignores the situation or naively suggests that some other line should apply the remedy. Apparently it does not occur to them that the co-operative system as practiced in America is facing its severest test. They recognize that American ideals and institutions are on trial. Resting in the security of full stomachs and satisfying their desires from accumulated profits they are content to "let the clouds roll by" and await the return of pros-and children at home suffering because of insufficient food, clothing and fuel? Is it possible for those who know not the pangs of hunger, or the suffering from cold, to understand what it means? Winter and unemployment means just that—and nothing less—to millions who are willing to work but unable to find it. Under such a condition in the richest nation in the world, where there can be no question about the ability of industry to meet the needs of all, are we not justified in asking: Is business and industry serving the people or have they become the master of our workers?

Twenty Per Cent More Workers Employed

The remedy should be apparent. To meet the immediate need governments, corporations and individual industries should create every job possible. Opportunity for employment should be extended to the greatest number of workers by the adoption of the five-day work week. We are not suggesting that industries should close down one day during the week other than Sunday. Such a plan of operation would not bring best results. In one establishment which comes to our attention recently 500 workers were employed six days per week. This meant the use of 3,000 days of man-power. The operation was organized upon a five-day basis. One hundred additional workers were employed making 600 working five days. The result was the same—3,000 days per week. One hundred workers were off each day during the week in addition to Sunday and the industry operated six days with 500 workers each day. In thus staggering the work week 20 per cent more workers were employed. The same system can be applied to industries employing a larger or smaller number with the same result.

Another employer who recognized the seriousness and danger of the present situation declares: "The only way to remedy the present economic depression is to remedy unemployment. And the best way to remedy unemployment is for American employers to accept the five-day week."

Official spokesmen for both the Republican and Democratic parties have declared that the five-day week must become permanent and universal for workers in America. And in giving its endorsement the Scripps-Howard newspapers declare there is evidence of a "revolution in American economic thought" and asserts "that machine production must be kept in relation to mass purchasing power."

There is no problem of greater importance, or more dangerous to established order, than unemployment when it affects millions of citizens of a nation. In those industries where the workers have been able to establish and maintain effective organizations the situation has been relieved by dividing employment and payment of out-of-work benefits from funds created by the union assessing its members who remain at work. In the unorganized industries nothing remains for unemployed workers but charity.

Responsibility Cannot Be Evaded

We repeat to add force to the statement. The present condition constitutes a serious indictment against business and industrial leaders. The responsibility cannot be evaded or the consequences avoided. Immediate inauguration of the five-day week offers the only lasting relief. This change permanently established will return the necessary balance between production and consumption to place the economic situation upon an even keel. In a nation of intelligent people it should not require a revolution to distribute the benefits resulting from invention and mechanical progress.

"BUILT-TO-FIT" MOUTH-PEACE

HERBERT L. CLARKE, the greatest cornetist of the century, wrote in the January, 1930, issue of a familiar music magazine as follows:

"I have used a 'custom built' mouthpiece for over twenty-five years, and the latest one was made especially for me by Harry Jacobs of Chicago, Ill., from the formation of my teeth. I have used it constantly for the past twelve years, and have derived much satisfaction and comfort from it, both in my practice and solo work. I certainly do advocate such a mouthpiece."

"BUILT-TO-FIT" mouthpieces are the ONLY remedy there is for lip ailments! That statement is not exaggerated in the least. Send the coupon below and learn something about this wonderful work. Do your work in comfort!

A BIT OF CHEER

If I were an artist I would use the mighty instrument Music, God has placed in my hands and heart to make my audiences happy. I would strive to bring them into a paradise of love, peace and good will on earth.

I would fill the earth with beauty, harmony and contentment and soon there would be no room for strife, greed and unrest.

I would be a messenger with a mighty power. I would take my audiences with me on travel journeys.

I would commune with the morning sunbeams at the break of day and with the stars at eventide.

I would be a part of the gentle rain-drops, come to freshen and purify the earth.

I would be a part of the storm, as an example of how terrible is strife and discord.

I would be a rainbow, reminding the world that God is still in heaven.

I would dance with the children at play. I would love with the youth and the maid.

I would bring a sense of peace and quiet to the aged and make them glad that they had lived.

With the mighty force of Music I would take my audiences high unto heaven and we would commune with God and the angels. I would be the connecting link between heaven and earth.

How glorious are the privileges of the artist.

How marvelous his or her possession—the Art of Music.

Your possession is too precious to be canned or boxed in a machine, if such a thing is possible, for your art then loses its greatest asset—Charm.

To appeal, to enjoy and to have force, Music must be expressed by the artist and received by the listener, though personal contact.

The machine cannot charm its audiences; so the much sought, much prized requisite called charm is within the artist. It cannot be photographed. It cannot be canned. It is an invisible, intangible power. It is your unparalleled possession—the ability to charm with your art, Music which is utterly impossible to approach by any human invention.

Professional music is a great industry, with some 140,000 artists. Among them we have the finest in the world.

We have had a slump in the music business.

There is now as great a demand for music as ever.

There is more music being distributed at the present time, for we now have the radio and the synchronized films, and yet there is a slump. What is wrong? The market is flooded with second-hand music.

Our music when first sold is genuine, but when canned and re-sold, it becomes second hand. The second-hand article has a place in our industry. We must label our production.

Living Music—The Genuine. Canned Music—Second Hand.

What are second-hand wares of any description? Commercially speaking: loss of original value. What is the ultimate end? The junk heap.

Printers' Errors

The flower show had been a great success, and a few evenings later Mr. Blank, who had performed the opening ceremony, was reading the local paper's report of it to his wife.

Presently he stopped reading, his justifiable pride turning to anger. Snatching up his stick, he rushed from the room. Amazed, his wife picked up the newspaper to ascertain the reason of her spouse's fury.

She read: "As Mr. Blank mounted the platform all eyes were fixed on the large red 'nose' he displayed. Only years of patient cultivation could have produced an object of such brilliance."—Ex.

Notable, But Not Final, Victory

IT is important and tremendously good news that there will be more friends of labor in the coming Congress.

But right now is a good time to cool off and form a balanced estimate as to what the election means.

Among things it does not mean is this: The new Congress will not cure unemployment. Perhaps a lot of hope went into the casting of votes, but realization is always several jumps behind hope.

The big thing is that there are more friends of human liberty and of the rights of man in the new Congress than are in the old one.

That is of enormous importance. It may have its effect internationally as well as within our borders.

But trade unionists need to keep this safely under their hats: No political result can achieve for them those fundamental measures of progress that must, by their very nature, be taken within industry through economic organization. And if it were possible it would be highly undesirable.

The election has not lifted any of the load from the trade union organizations of the United States. Nor should it. To organize wage earners is the big, continuous job, if industrial justice is to come.

We rejoice in a notable victory—but we don't quit working at the real job!

The American Route to Final Cure for Unemployment

HOW to find the road through industrial maladjustment to real and continuous prosperity is engaging the attention of the world today as never before.

Every kind of nostrum and proposal has its adherents.

Among other things the clamor for remedy through political schemes continues.

However, it happens that labor, in a world sense, has more political party power than has been thus held in any other industrial crisis.

Labor holds political party power in England and its methods of grappling politically with unemployment have brought no success. The stinging defeats administered to the British Labor party in municipal elections last week must mark, at least to some extent, a disgust with political action as a remedy for unemployment.

In Australia, where labor controls politically, a most acute situation exists. South Australia was saved from bankruptcy because of money contributions from the other states. A super-council rules and there seems no hope of finding a way out from under the load of doles and fixed indebtedness.

Some twenty-nine nations have unemployment insurance.

But unemployment does not yield to the political treatment of those who have the greatest stake in effecting a cure—unemployment does not yield to purely political treatment.

There is fascination in the business of proclaiming what could be done "if we had the power"—"if we controlled government"—but there is little to show for it after the power has been gained. And meantime great numbers of the ablest trade union leaders find themselves taken from industrial activity and generally made unfit for a return to their trade union posts.

Governments can help, political wisdom is valuable, political power is an asset and a necessity. But political power can be had without turning the labor movement into a political machine and governments are as unlikely as ever to apply the final remedy for unemployment. That is, unless peoples are determined to go the route of state supremacy and take all that goes with political bureaucracy, oligarchy and dictatorship. And even then there is no guarantee of cure. Abundant proof of the dubious quality of the effectiveness of the state as the boss of all things and the healer of all ills is found in Russia and in Italy.

Democratic nations, if democracy is to survive, must turn to a development of democratic practice within industry. The autocracy that persists in industry must break down and give way to the methods and practices of democracy, so that there may be that measure of check and balance within industry necessary to sane operation. There appears no other way to safety and sanity.

The effort to reach an industrial ill through the democracy of political life is an application of the right cure through pretty much the wrong channel. When industry learns to develop within industry those measures of democratic practice that are necessary to regulated conduct and when those measures are related properly to the democratic political life of the nation, real remedy will be in sight.

Meanwhile we are tinkering, perhaps with success for the time being, but not with any finality of effect.

Facts About Unemployment

NEVER since 1919 has the number of workers employed in industry been as high as it was that year.

The number of workers has dropped away since that year, which was the year when mass production really got into full bloom. Until then, while mass production was being developed, employment gained.

Since 1919 wages per employe have gained a little, output has gained enormously and numbers of unemployed have grown. The machine has been pouring out its fruits—to those who could get them.

Last week this issue was discussed at length. We shall continue its discussion, adding facts to the record.

Always we come to this: Permanent remedy lies in thorough organization of industry to the end that industry may be conducted in such a manner as to prevent the abuses of the past, while realizing all the blessings of the machinery at hand and to come.

Left to go its way, as in the past, we can look forward to evils multiplied. With proper direction we can look forward to such a realm of well-being as the world has never known or dreamed of.

Why not do the right thing?

Out Beyond the Surf--

Where thought, unhastened by necessity or trepidation, sometimes penetrates to truth. Here, where the shallows throw no spray, let us ponder and enjoy the lessons of the art and the work and play of life.

Politics makes strange bedfellows — and it puts strange folks next to each other in the United States Senate.

Politics giveth power and it taketh it away.

There was Nick Longworth, a man of extreme power in the House—until the election raised the shadow of possible loss of his power with the winter session.

Come March 4 and Nick's power may be shorn away from him, except that, of course, he will continue to have power within his party. But he may cease to be Speaker of the House.

So with the trio—Longworth, Snell and Tilson. They were, among them and between them, the rulers of the House—until election day.

Come March and they may be just three members of the House.

Some other man may be the Speaker of the House and maybe some other trio will hold the reins of power.

The important thing is not that so much power can be so easily transferred, but that so much could be held by so few.

The rules of the House, the rules that gave these three so much of power, will be equally potent—at any rate they can be—in the hands of another three.

Another Speaker can be as much a czar as a Longworth.

It is one of the tricks of politics that a change of men doesn't always mean a change of ways, or of institutions.

Under the present House rules, condemned by the American Federation of Labor for their autocracy, no member could get far against the wishes of the powerful.

Unless the rules are changed the status of members will not change to any marked degree.

It seems, at times, as if it were the studied design of politics to be deceptive, like the visions of water and green trees in deserts where there are no trees and no water.

It seems, at times, as if there is a will o' the wisp in politics that lures folks along and never gives them the substance they seek.

But hope springs eternal, it is said.

It is well that it is so, for, despite all sham and pretense and despite all the trickery, the institutions of privilege and of autocracy do crumble away, little by little.

The race does enlarge the horizon of its liberties.

In the long run history laughs at the pomp and circumstance of those who bask for a moment in the might of monetary power.

As the world wags it is only a moment since Cornwallis gave up his sword. But compare the ties!

Of course, we move forward. Our task is to keep moving, so that the banner, when it is passed to new hands, shall be a little nearer full freedom than when it was passed to us.

Will Stabilization Help?

STABILIZATION schemes are based on less workers. Where an employe, by speed-up methods, can do the work of two men, this is called "elimination of waste." The social effect is ignored.

Theoreticians insist that if output is stabilized—if production is based on day-by-day consumption—prices will be reduced and greater consumption and more work will result.

Stabilization advocates do not point out that scientific processes, automatic machinery and speed-up methods are continuous. These processes enlarge the unemployed army and reduce the number of buyers.

The job seeker is not interested in prices. He wants work to secure purchasing power to take advantage of lower prices.

President Green reminds stabilizers that higher wages will permit disposition of output and shorter hours will lessen unemployment. If these facts are ignored, the forces that brought the present crisis will develop another.

Stabilization is a phase of the movement toward automatic machinery, scientific processes, chain stores, mergers and a general lessening of employed.

Stabilization and relief for unemployed are opposites.

Products of convict labor have been stopped from entry into the United States. This prohibition is made effective through Treasury Department regulations enforcing the old tariff law.

THE PIED PIPER TODAY

THE false music of the wicked Pied Piper of Hamelin lured the children who followed him to disaster.

Shall the children of today be lured away from true musical appreciation by the false Robot of Canned Music in the Theatre?

One cannot learn to love real music without occasionally hearing it.

THE IRON MAN BY GERTRUDE MUNTER

I heard a word the other day, that puzzled me a lot.
 'Twas one I'd never heard before, R-O-B-O-T Robot!
 I wondered what the darned thing was, so my dictionary sought;
 I couldn't find it anywhere, made up my mind 'twas naught.

But still, I wasn't satisfied. I went out on the street,
 With mind made up that I'd inquire of the first man that I'd meet!
 A motorman, I came upon. "I know just what you mean;
 It's called an iron man," he said, "a powerful machine."

"You simply cannot tire it out, 'twill work both day and night.
 Pretty soon we'll lose our jobs, the end of work's in sight."
 "Oh, terrible," I cried. "I must be on my way
 To find some other workman, and learn what he will say."

The next one was a carpenter. He sadly shook his head.
 "They're building houses by the yard. Robots set them up instead.
 Of us who used to do it all. We'll soon be down and out.
 This thing's a dire calamity, and should be put to rout."

And then I saw a factory, with people hanging 'round.
 "What's wrong?" I asked. The answer was "A new machine they've found That does the work of ten of us. Whatever shall we do?
 They call the Robot 'Progress.' To us it's just 'Hoodoo!'"

By this time I was tired, so to a show I went.
 I found a seat, bewildered, my courage sadly spent.
 The music started. I looked about. From somewhere in the rear,
 Came rattles, bangs, unearthly squeals that filled my soul with fear.

"That Robot thing again, the Iron Man," I thought.
 The definition I had found, the one I vainly sought.
 A soulless piece of mechanism, with sorrow in its wake.
 We must protest it loud and long, the earth's foundations shake!

As a viper that has reared its head, 'tis something to be fought
 Until it's finished; fangs are drawn, and we can say,
 "It's Not! ! !"

Re-Telling a Joke

"If you took a magnifying glass," he said, "and looked into the lungs of a dog what would you see?"
 Everyone gave it up, after being told that "air" and "lungs" were incorrect answers.
 "You would see," he told them, "the seat of his pants."
 Loud guffaws followed this, and Uncle Dick was particularly amused. Next day he asked the question at work. No answer was forthcoming, so he cleared his throat for the laugh.
 "You would see," he said, impressively, "the seat of his trousers!"—Ex.

Ambition

The young Italian immigrant and his wife had just arrived in New York. While walking down the street they were amazed to see a fire engine go racing past, with smoke and flame pouring forth from the funnel. The Italian eyed the departing monster for a moment then, turning to his wife, exclaimed: "Looka, Rosa, that's the kinda of peanut roaster we have some day."—Ex.

A Misplaced Compliment

A chorus girl, deliciously pretty but decidedly lowbrow, somehow found herself at a very select party given by a famous society woman.
 The girl, lonely and uncomfortable as a fish out of water, was leaning against the wall, framed against the dark oak, when the hostess took pity on her.
 "My dear," she said, kindly, "you look just like an old Rembrandt."
 "Well," retorted the damsel, sharply, "you don't look too darned snappy yourself."—Ex.

WHY NOT MOTION PICTURES AGAIN?

By WELFORD BEATON Editor and Publisher "THE FILM SPECTATOR" (Reprinted by special permission of the author.—Editor.)

Film papers that live on the hush money derived from the producers' advertising are shaking their heads gravely and announcing solemnly that exhibitors would be enjoying more prosperity if there weren't so many miniature golf courses in existence. This alibi for poor pictures is accepted generally throughout the industry. Efforts are being made in some localities to have those popular little courses declared nuisances. The industry should get behind this movement. And it should not stop there. Take bridge whist, for instance. Undoubtedly there are many millions of people whose enthusiasm for screen entertainment has been exhausted and who have deserted the cinema palaces to seek diversion at bridge tables. It is outrageous. Bridge whist should be declared illegal. The beaches, too, should be closed to the public. And night baseball should be abolished, and hundreds of other things that keep people out of motion picture houses.

However, it is doubtful if such sweeping reforms could be brought about successfully in time to stave off the crisis the motion picture industry is facing. The campaign would be long and expensive. It might not be a bad idea for the industry to try something else. For instance, it might try the novelty of getting back to the making of motion pictures. For nearly thirty years motion pictures have competed successfully with all other forms of entertainment, and there is no reason to believe that they could not do it again. In any event, it is the most promising experiment that could be suggested. The owners of the miniature golf courses and those who patronize them might object to having them closed by law. Some people are so utterly unreasonable. If these courses, by providing better entertainment, are putting picture houses out of business, it would serve them right if pictures reversed matters by providing better entertainment than the courses.

It is too bad that the industry as a whole is devoid of a sense of humor. If it were fortunate enough to possess one it would get a good laugh out of the efforts of its sycophantic press to attribute the alarming falling off in box-office receipts to the popularity of toy golf courses. Since the world began human beings have patronized the form of entertainment that entertained them most. For three decades nothing pleased them as much as motion pictures. For the past two years those who supplied the motion pictures have been trying to force a substitute on the public and the result has been that, by the industry's own confession, the public can get more fun out of trying to knock a golf ball through a length of sewer pipe. For these two years the public stubbornly persisted in its support of the kind of entertainment it was getting, but the limit of its endurance has been reached. The panic which I predicted for last February is now on. I missed it by five months, because the public proved to be more stubborn than I thought it was.

Fundamentally, artistically and technically the screen possesses the inherent qualities to nullify the effect of any kind of competition. If it had remained true to itself as an art, it today would be suffering nothing more serious than the usual summer slump at the box office. The important thing now, however, is not to waste time worrying over how it got into its fix, but to seek the best manner in which its inherent qualities can be marshalled to be of greatest service in putting the industry once more in a satisfactory financial condition.

The first move that an industrial concern makes when it finds its receipts dwindling is to seek means of introducing economies in the manufacture of its product. Obviously, exhibitors would be making more money, even with today's lowered receipts, if they did not have to pay so much for their pictures. Both artistically and financially the screen has made itself ill trying to swallow the sound device. Exhibitors found themselves paying more for pictures that drew less. The only solution to their problem is to pay less for pictures that will draw more. It would not be difficult for Hollywood to make such pictures.

Although I do not believe that dialogue has a place in screen art, I do not advocate the immediate and complete return to silent pictures. The wholesale reversion to the business that built the industry is something that will take care of itself. If ever Hollywood learns how to make motion pictures, its progress toward perfect understanding will be marked by the gradual elimination of dialogue and the growth of the true art of telling stories by motion. As I have said many times, there always will be a place on the screen for some photographed plays, but they should not be confused with motion pictures, for the true motion picture, the product upon which the industry must depend for whatever degree of prosperity it will experience, is that which does not rely for dramatic effect upon the audible expression of its characters.

When the industry learns how to make pictures properly it will find that it is making them more cheaply. It will find that it is a waste of money to spend huge sums in bringing to Hollywood famous authors and playwrights, who know nothing whatever about screen art. It also will cease to pay enormous sums for books and plays that have no cinematic value. It already has spent several million dollars on composers and their works, with the result that picture patrons have been driven from picture houses to miniature golf courses.

When Warner Brothers first substituted the sound device for brains in making their motion pictures, I said that a phonograph of a person singing never would be accepted by the public as screen entertainment. If the Warners knew anything, they would have known this, but they went ahead with their policy of photographing every variety of stage entertainment to make up the programs of the houses they controlled until the folly of it was reflected in the box offices.

The ramifications of the lobby in Washington are so complex that only political veterans have any idea of their extent. Charles A. Beard, former president of the American Political Science Association, and William Beard assert in their book, "The American Leviathan," just published.

Adoption of a five-day working week is announced by the Hudson Motor Car Company, Detroit, Mich. "The change is the result of a long study of the economic and employment situation and close observance of the results obtained by other manufacturers now operating on a five-day week," the statement said.

Calling for non-partisan consideration of unemployment relief legislation in the coming Congress, Senator Robert F. Wagner of New York recently asserted in a radio address that industry and the government must adopt a definite program to prevent a repetition of current distress.

Unless the medical profession organizes a centralized system for selling professional services to a greater number of patients for smaller fees than are charged now, physicians and surgeons face the possibility of State administration of their work, Health Commissioner Wynne of New York City said in a recent address.

In contrast with the grave unemployment situation in many foreign countries, brought on by the general economic depression, industrial idleness is virtually unknown in France, according to a report from E. A. Masuret, assistant trade commissioner in Paris, made public by the Department of Commerce.

Measured by the official calculations of the American Iron and Steel Institute, the steel industry of the United States operated in October at 50.32 per cent of rated capacity, while the total ingot production of all companies was 2,720,414 tons, or 147,564 tons less than in September.

British labor lost a seat in Parliament and the Conservative party gained one as a consequence of a bye-election in Shirley after the death of the sitting member. J. H. Lockwood, Conservative, was elected, receiving 15,238 votes against 13,573 votes for W. A. Robinson, Labor, and 12,785 for A. Davy, Liberal.

Facing increased unemployment and continued economic depression, the British government has launched an attempt to control food prices, the move following similar legislation in Germany, where the government has appointed a food controller who recently influenced bakers and butchers to reduce the price of their products.

With the ending of big strikes in Madrid, Barcelona and other large cities, the Spanish government announced on November 23 that it had started a series of public improvements to relieve unemployment, which it believes is responsible for the widespread labor troubles in Spain recently.

Plans for the establishment of loan funds to sustain those completely out of work or whose incomes have been reduced greatly will be drawn up as rapidly as possible, it was announced at the conclusion of the first meeting of the enlarged committee on the stabilization and regulation of employment appointed by Governor Roosevelt of New York.

A refusal to interfere with the Baltimore & Ohio's bus line operation for passenger transfer from trains into New York City has been announced by the Interstate Commerce Commission, in dismissing a petition by the Pennsylvania Railroad, which asked an investigation into the Baltimore & Ohio arrangements and alleged that they constituted a discrimination under interstate commerce law.

Michigan has fixed a minimum wage of 35 cents an hour for laborers employed on highway projects and directed that all contracts awarded contain this specification. The action was taken by Governor Green and members of the highway committee of the State Administrative Board when they learned some contractors were paying 20 and 25 cents an hour to laborers. The Governor declared that this is "not a living wage."

SOME BOSTONIAN HANGOVERS

(By Chauncey A. Weaver)

One of the quatrains memorized in youthful days taught the lesson:

You may rend, you may shatter
The vase if you will;
But the scent of the roses
Will cling to it still.

We know of no better poetic sentiment with which to express or outline one's experience in perigrinating around Boston and the eastern parts of New England. You enjoy yourself immensely while there; you come away with regret that the visit should end so soon; you revel in a cluster of glorious memories afterwards.

We are glad that some of the Henry Ford millions have been devoted to other purposes than the creation of devil-wagons with which to chase well-intentioned pedestrians off the country highways and public streets. It was a fine and wholesome gesture when the automobile plutocrat conceived the idea of purchasing "The Wayside Inn" and surrounding acres, and placing the same in charge of a competent staff, doing all things necessary or possible to restore the colonial atmosphere, and creating a shrine to which thousands of pilgrims with a thirst for historical research make their way every year. The Inn is still the old style Tavern. Fine meals are served. The same timbers beneath which Washington and Lafayette sat and dined bulge from the ceiling and walls. The kitchen utensils shine through cupboard doors which the fathers and mothers handled in that far-away day. There Longfellow found inspiration for those "Tales of a Wayside Inn" which are a permanent part of the literature of a period which no subsequent day has been able to surpass. The admission fee is 25 cents. Who would not be glad to pay? There are seventeen fireplaces in The Inn and the wayside traveler seeking accommodations may remain three days and nights if he so desires—then give way for the next comers. There are ballrooms in which a "fiddling trio," the favorite Ford instrumental ensemble, occasionally appear, and with sturdy cat-gut and highly rosined bow, rapsidly perpetrate the Monie Musk and Virginia Reel—"just as they used to do." The opportunity for this delightful diversion visit was one more McSheehy contribution.

The Boston Labor Convention proved to be a liberal forum in many ways. All economic creeds had a respectful hearing. Not the least interesting character to appear upon the platform was General Jacob S. Coxey—the mild-mannered and peripatetic old gentleman who once led a motley aggregation of picturesque tatterdemalions across the country to the White House during the "depression" which characterized a former day in our national history. Coxey makes an interesting character study. No immoral charge is ever made against him. He is simply a man with an obsession—an obsession which a certain type of American mind has always possessed, namely, that paper may be stamped by governmental fiat and immediately invested with a monetary value which would relieve all kinds of financial distress—regardless of all the gold and silver standards maintained elsewhere throughout the world. His proposal for a non-interest bearing bond bill as a means of bringing "perpetual prosperity" actually elicited prolonged applause.

Delegate Charles L. Bagley went back to Los Angeles and wrote a very fine and readable account of the Boston Labor Convention for the Overture—official organ of Local No. 47.

The advertising admonition to "Buy your Christmas presents early" will have a rather mocking sound for the thousands who are still looking for a job.

Puzzle: Find two men who can agree on just what the November election decided.

In the days of our early advent into the realm of band music activity we observed the name of a publisher which attracted our attention. It was "Jean Misud, of Salem, Mass." The first impression was to place accent in the last syllable of the name. We guessed wrongly. It was a real privilege to meet the bearer of this name at the Boston Labor Convention. He is still a publisher and bandmaster and an active figure in the Salem and eastern Massachusetts musical field. He has written some fine band marches in other days and we doubt not that he could yet touch the chords of real creative melody if so disposed. Having known him so long by reputation we are glad of having had a chance to meet him face to face.

Very soon now the United States Congress and the legislatures of forty-eight States of the Union will be busily engaged passing a lot of more laws for everybody to break.

One-half mile from The Wayside Inn we found a country schoolhouse—in no way strikingly dissimilar from the type which dots the rural highways from coast to coast. On a big boulder in the schoolhouse yard is an iron-plaque inscribed with a poem, the first stanza of which will carry you back more years than some will be willing to confess:

Mary had a little lamb,
Its fleece was white as snow;
And everywhere that Mary went,
The lamb was sure to go.

Sure enough, here was the schoolhouse where Mary attended, together with the lamb whose antics also "made the children laugh and play." McSheehy has a verse or two which do not appear in the original version and which we may ask him to recite at the next national convention. Nevertheless, we cordially applaud the foresight which brought about the preservation of a spot which added something simple but beautiful to the traditions of American childhood.

On my last Saturday afternoon in Boston there was one particularly revered spot unvisited and that was historic Faneuil Hall. By repeatedly asking the same question every block, I made my way through Boston's labyrinthian streets and eventually reached my destination.

The first impression is one of dismay. Located on what is now an extremely busy corner or intersection, the dingy exterior of the structure, rising above a market emporium surrounding all sides below, a visitor wonders what there can be actually worth seeing.

However, up the broad stairway my wearied footsteps carried me. Through the wide-open doors one sees at first glimpse the colossal painting by George P. A. Healy—"Webster Replying to Hayne," and suspended above the platform. This picture was painted in Paris, required seven years in its production and was purchased by the city of Boston for $40,000. On this canvas, in size 30 by 16 feet, appear portraits of more than 150 persons, most of them drawn from life. The painting itself portrays one of the most dramatic scenes in American history. When, with uncovered head I studied the picture, gazed upon the walls and recalled that from that platform not only Daniel Webster, but Edward Everett and Wendell Phillips had spoken, the reverential utterance of one in the long ago came to mind—"Take out thy shoes from off thy feet; the place whereon thou standest is holy ground."

We wish to say of the Boston police that our observation was they gave a good account of themselves during the convention period. They had many trying situations to cope with. If upon some occasions they appeared to act under restraint, they were unquestionably obeying the orders of "higher-ups." The police parade on Columbus Day was a magnificent spectacle.

History sometimes slips a cog. Bunker Hill monument is erected on Breed's Hill where the battle was actually fought, but Bunker Hill gets the immortalization.

Resolution No. 33, written by President Joseph N. Weber, endorsing Appeal of Actors and Musicians for Support of Popular Movement Against Mechanizing of Cultural Arts, appears in the official proceedings of the Boston Labor Convention as follows:

Resolution No. 33—By Delegates Jos. N. Weber, Chauncey A. Weaver, John W. Parks, Chas. L. Bagley, Edward Canavan, W. Ralph Fetterman of the American Federation of Musicians; Paul Dulzell of the Associated Actors and Artists of America, and J. W. Fitzpatrick of the Waterbury, Conn., Central Labor Union.

WHEREAS, Historic and Musical Art is a cultural agent of unquestioned value in the progress of all nations; and

WHEREAS, The perpetuation and the further progress of this Art depend upon the professional actor and musician and the continued development of young talent to professional proficiency; and

WHEREAS, The mechanizing of these Arts is destroying all incentive and opportunities for young actors and musicians to develop their talent by centralized employment opportunities; therefore, be it

RESOLVED, That the American Federation of Labor deprecates the tendency and purely commercial motives that are undermining and destroying the foundations of our cultural structure and that are debasing the arts of our people, that we approve the undertaking of musicians, actors—indeed, all employed in the theatrical, entertainment and musical profession, in arousing the people to the dangers involved in placing these arts upon the altar of greed and under the guise of scientific and mechanical advancement are destroying the very soul and life of the human qualities and opportunities that have made for these higher and finer sensibilities of mankind and that we call upon all wage-earners as well as all others deeply interested and seriously concerned in the preservation and further development of these arts to join in this appeal against the dehumanizing of the arts and for the enlargement of opportunities and incentives to the youth of our land for a constantly higher and finer cultural life by preserving for all time the very spirit of soul and of the fine human attributes and qualities involved in these arts and which so greatly contribute to the enrichment and enrichment of life itself.

The above resolution was referred to the Committee on Resolutions, reported favorably and adopted by the Convention by unanimous vote.

Delegate C. L. Bagley of Local No. 47, Los Angeles, the "Ridpath" of the American Federation of Musicians, devoted his spare moments, as usual, in exploring dusty archives, tracing historic threads, revitalizing book-lore intangibles, interviewing oldest inhabitants, and harvesting facts which we expect him some day to weave into an edition de luxe, and which every A. F. of M. member will desire for his own private library. Before leaving Boston we understand he had secured information of the entire instrumentation of the band which came over on the Mayflower and had discovered the original manuscript of the "Dance of the Salem Witches." May Delegate Bagley be long spared to gratify his discriminating passion for historical research!

As was the case with the Coolidges, so it is with the Hoovers—where the President is, there will the wife be also. Mrs. Hoover accompanied the President in visiting the labor convention. President Green introduced "The First Lady of the Land" to the delegates, who gave her a most cordial greeting. To this she made gracious acknowledgement, after which Mrs. T. A. Rickert, wife of the second vice-president of the Labor Federation, presented Mrs. Hoover with a beautiful bouquet of pink roses.

If misery loves company victims of economic depression should be able to find some comfort in studying the map of the world.

American labor refuses to press the cup of any communistic cure-all to its lips.

Boston has now entertained three national conventions of the American Federation of Labor. The first was in 1889, and the second in 1903. The funds on hand at the close of the 1903 convention amounted to $86,013.12. The Federation funds on hand at the end of the 1930 fiscal year were $363,721.38—with a special fund of over $100,000 with which to erect a monument in Washington, D. C., to the memory of the late president, Samuel Gompers.

The American Federation of Labor owns its own headquarters at Washington—a seven-story building with a valuation of not less than $500,000.

The officially reported membership of the American Federation of Labor is 2,961,096, which, however, does not include those exempt from paying dues, those in arrears, honorary members, etc. It is estimated that these would add at least 500,000 to the list given in the official proceedings.

The American Federation of Musicians has a voting strength of 1,000 in a national convention. Only four organizations exceed this voting power—United Mine Workers of America, 4,000; Carpenters, 3,032; Electrical Workers, 1,420, and Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers, 1,062.

The Indians called the place "Shawmut," but the New Englanders, always partial to euphony, changed the name to Boston.

There were twenty rules of order for governing the deliberations of the convention. Comparatively few knew what they were, yet each one was implicitly obeyed.

There are times and occasions when we seem to get the impression that the Eighteenth Amendment has already been repealed.

There is an agitation on for more federal judges, but the demand for federal court labor injunctions should experience a rapid decline.

Hotel space was at a premium, but the A. F. of M. delegation was nicely taken care of at the new hotel—The Bradford—formerly the Elks, with the exception of President Weber, who was housed at the Hotel Statler, with the Executive Council of the A. F. of L., of which organization he is now a vice-president.

during convention week was the telegraphic dispatch that the wife of Mayor Bill Hale Thompson had been held up and robbed on the streets of Chicago. The Mayor's family had been away all summer and the local banditti were evidently determined to make them feel at home once more.

The Volstead act is another of those rules of human conduct honored apparently more in the breach than in the observance.

One fellow did a land-office business selling Charles River water at three dollars per bottle. Old-fashioned Yankee thrift has not yet been entirely obliterated from the New England make-up.

We wonder if the Battle of Bunker Hill was a nosier affair than the Convention Week of the first week of October, 1930, in Boston?

If Boston were not quite so far away we would enjoy the practice of trying to find our way from place to place along her circumlocutionary streets.

We had been disposed to doubt the story about boneless codfish, but we find they do exist.

The Labor Movement has found a permanent place in the sun of progress when a President of the United States is willing to travel from Washington to Boston to avouch its character as a vital and wholesome force in the economic evolution of our time.

October is not sectional in the display of her charms. She adds her crimson touch to the mountains of the Pacific states, to the valleys of the Mississippi River and to the New England hills. As a month for American travel, she stands alone in the irresistible character of her appeal.

Fifty annual conventions of the American Federation of Labor! Who could begin to visualize what another fifty years will bring forth in the evolution of the Trades Union movement?

Delegate John W. Parks of Dallas has one of the most mathematical minds we ever met. This accomplishment has been brought about through a unique system. He takes Texas as the unit of magnitude. Upon entering a new state he can instantly tell, with lightning-like calculation, just how many states of that size would be required to equal the Empire Commonwealth of Texas, of which "Ma" Ferguson was once queen, but isn't now. Parks was in especially hilarious mood when he reached Rhode Island. He nearly made a Pullman dining car waiter drop a bowl of hot soup in explaining that Texas could swallow Rhode Island if one hundred and sixty times its present size and still have internal capacity for holding Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont,

Massachusetts and Connecticut without danger of contracting stomach-ache or lock-jaw. Those Texans can certainly "figger."

Officers and members of Local No. 9 were constantly alert to see if they could be of service to the members of the A. F. of M. labor delegation. The spirit of hospitality and good-will, so bountifully manifested at the June Musicians' convention, was still in evidence. The delegation, however, insisted that no further program of entertainment be undertaken, as we were all of us still living in glorious memories of the last convention. All musical features incidental to the Labor convention were furnished under Local No. 9 auspices and reflected high credit as usual upon Boston musicians. Boston bands and orchestras are high grade. We all hope for a prosperous future for Local No. 9.

Our idea of an opportunity and some place to go, is for a westerner, after having waited a lifetime, to visit Boston twice within a single year. For this luxury, our never-ending thanks to the American Federation of Musicians.

Merry Christmas and Happy New Year to all!

About Labor Events

BUILDING PERMITS IN OCTOBER—There was an increase of 1.0 per cent in the estimated cost of new residential buildings for which permits were issued in October as compared with those issued in September, according to reports received by the Bureau of Labor Statistics from 286 comparable cities. There was, however, a decrease of 27.5 per cent in the estimated cost of new non-residential buildings and a decrease of 14.6 per cent in the established cost of all building operations, comparing permits issued during these two periods.

CZECHOSLOVAKIA PLANTS ON FIVE-DAY WEEK—Announcement that the big Bata shoe plant at Zlín, Czechoslovakia, had adopted the five-day working week was made a few weeks ago by the United States Department of Commerce. Now the department reports that other Czechoslovakia plants are going on the shorter work week: The Busi shoe factory in Trebic, after an agreement with Czechoslovak Leather Workers' Unions, has decided to adopt the five-day week system. The reason for this change was the same as for Bata, who adopted the 45-hour week instead of the 48-hour week, when the Ministry of Social Welfare began enforcing the regulation which prevents women from working on Saturday afternoon. It is reported that the Konkol & Michera chocolate factory in Kutna Hora and the Mnichovhradiste shoe factory are also changing over to the new system.

RADIO COMMISSION EXTENDS WEVD LICENSE—A 90-day extension of license was recently granted radio station WEVD, New York City, by the Federal Radio Commission following its threat to close the station October 31 upon the expiration of its license. Letters from friends poured into the commission's office requesting that the station be allowed to continue in view of its service in expressing the views of the Socialist party and other groups.

PRINTERS TO VOTE ON MOVING HEADQUARTERS—The membership of the International Typographical Union will vote on December 10 upon the question of removal of headquarters from Indianapolis. If the vote favors removal, nominations and endorsements of other cities will be made in the manner explained on the ballot and a new headquarters city determined by vote of the membership next May.

LOANS FOR HOMES HELP BUILDING WORKERS—The United States Department of Labor reports that the commission of the Government of the Saar, France, has authorized the savings banks and other credit institutions to loan money to individuals desiring to build homes, as a result of which more construction work has been done since the extension of the loan privilege than formerly; and, in general, men engaged in the building trades have but little difficulty in finding work.

SPANISH WOMEN STRIKERS CAMP IN FACTORY—Two hundred women workers in a match factory at Sevilla, Spain, are engaged in a unique form of strike, according to Associated Press dispatches. In protest against the suspension of one of the workers, the women decided not to abandon the plant until she is restored to her former job. Also not wishing to abandon their labors, since they need the money, they are continuing at their posts, eating, sleeping and receiving their families and visitors.

CITIZENS APPEAL FOR STRIKING TAILORS—The Citizens' Emergency Committee, formed to assist the New York City striking ladies' tailors, of which

Dr. E. C. Lindeman is chairman and John Fitch, treasurer, has issued an appeal to "all public-spirited citizens to join in giving the utmost support, moral and financial," to the strikers. In the appeal the committee denounces the attitude of the Couturiers' Association for refusing to accept the compromise proposal of Miss Frances Perkins, industrial commissioner.

Comment and Criticism About Things Doing in the World

Trade unionists all over the country are being named on boards and commissions appointed to act on unemployment, racketeering and other big problems. This is as it should be. Trade unionists can bring ability and experience of great value to bear on the solution of national problems. They represent the views and aspirations of the great masses of the people—views and aspirations which have not always been represented in efforts to remedy national evils.

The community or nation which fails to take advantage of the help of organized labor in dealing with industrial, social, health and other problems is losing an opportunity.

The Evening Star, Washington, D. C., says that one of the conditions contributing to child delinquency and high death rates among children was briefly summarized by President Hoover in his address to the White House Conference on Child Health and Protection, as follows:

"In the last half century we have herded 50,000,000 more human beings into towns and cities. . . . Perhaps the widest range of difficulties with which we are dealing in the betterment of children grows out of this crowding into cities. Problems of sanitation and public health loom in every direction. Delinquency increases with congestion. Overcrowding produces disease and contagion. . . . Home life becomes more difficult. Cheerless homes produce morbid minds."

"Every one recognizes the problem. Few agree on the solution, for it is doubtful if there is any practical solution now applicable to the problem as a whole," the Star comments.

There is one solution which the Star forgets. People don't live in crowded, unhealthy districts because they like to. They live in these districts because they can't afford to live anywhere else. Pay them fair wages and congested regions, a menace to children and adults alike, will disappear. This is trade unionism's remedy for overcrowding—a remedy which can be applied by organization of the workers. It is not a quack remedy, but a practical remedy, the one practical remedy which the Star fears does not exist.

There was once a joke that the packing house industry had gone so scientifically into the matter of utilizing all the material in the animals that passed through their grisly mill that all was being used except the squeal of the pig.

Now the oil industry has about reached that stage. Everything is being used but the cry of the wildcat—and that is quite elusive.

Oil field brines, long a source of annoyance because of the difficulty of disposing of them without polluting surrounding areas, have been found to be a comparatively fertile source of iodine.

Research work discloses the brines contained a substantial proportion of iodine—sufficient for commercial production of iodides. It is held possible that in time this source of supply will equal national consumption.

An iodine recovery plant already in operation is producing some 1,200 pounds a day and is to be expanded. In Louisiana wells are being drilled to obtain the brine.

The Cherry Tree

Where with our Little Hatchet we tell the truth about many things, sometimes profoundly, sometimes flippantly, sometimes recklessly

Continuously the problem of unemployment presses upon the American people as the greatest issue a nation ever has been called upon to solve.

Continuously it becomes clear to men and women everywhere that THIS depression is not "just one more," but that it is definitely a new kind of depression. And because it is this new kind of depression it must be solved, for nothing short of solution will permit the achievement of the national goal, which is continuous progress and a constantly rising level of life and living.

The reason this depression is a new kind of depression is that since the old-time panics, such as that of '33, mass production has been developed. Mass production cannot continue to grow and enlarge its field of operations unless there are men and women with a constant supply of money with which to buy and likewise with a constantly growing supply of money for that purpose.

That seems to be a fairly concise and complete statement of the situation.

Gentlemen of high degree and of various degrees are ranting this way and that about what ought to be done. They are pouring over our almost helpless heads a vast quantity of the oil of loquacity, babbling much and saying little.

Scholarly professors and ponderous "economists" are orating, declaiming and getting all red in the face telling us what to do, though they themselves know not.

Newspapers are feverishly thinking to cure everything by urging us to "buy now." That is well enough and most of us want to buy now. But no superficial formula, no action that the people can take outside of the work places, will solve the problem, cure this depression and stop future depressions.

We can all "buy now" and go broke so that we can't buy tomorrow, though if we buy now we shall help revive industry somewhat and perhaps relieve the general pain somewhat.

But, unless there is fundamental cure we shall come back to depression, meeting the next one with a smaller reserve of savings and resources, and going on to the next in the same way, riding down a diminishing scale to the bottom.

That is why this new kind of depression cannot be left to itself to peter out in a glow of reviving activity.

From this point we must either definitely readjust matters and go on up to new heights, or bring about some kind of half recovery which will before long recede into renewed and more desperate depression.

The nation cannot stand many such jolts if it is to preserve the present industrial order. That's the hard truth.

We need and must have the enlivening stimulus of democracy within the work places, so that the masses may be empowered to speak with effective voice in behalf of that simple but vital thing that means cure—higher and continuously higher rates of wages per hour of work and a continuously shorter work day, so that a balance may be preserved between the growing productivity of the machine and the purchasing power of the people.

In no other perceptible manner can that "cesspool of poverty" so powerfully condemned by President Hoover be eliminated and recurring depressions be stopped.

We need organization in and around industry for the intelligent control of industry so that it may not by its very fecundity dig its own grave under a pile of surplus production.
