A SKIN FOR WEDDING BELLS!

This is MRS. CORNELIUS LORENZEN, Jr., the former Barbara Jean Shaw of New Jersey—a lovely Camay Bride!

There's an ingenue's fresh appeal about
Barbara Lorenzen—a "little girl" charm that wins you from the first meeting. Her coloring is in soft pastels—her complexion, suffer than satin itself. Barbara's first cake of Camay made her a gift of new beauty.

When friends inquire about her beauty care, Barbara has a ready answer. She says, with conviction: "At last I've found a beauty soap that's made for my skin—
Camay. When I changed to regular Camay care, my first cake of Camay brought a fresher, clearer complexion."

There's new beauty waiting for you, too—with your first cake of Camay. Change to regular care—use only mild, gentle, rich-lathering Camay. Never use a lesser soap—and Camay will wake the sleeping beauty of your skin!

All your skin's lovelier!

Yes, all your skin gets a rewarding beauty treatment—when you use Camay in your bath, too. A daily Camay Beauty Bath brings arms and legs and shoulders that "beautifully cared-for" look. It leaves you lovelier from head to toes—touched with Camay's flattering fragrance.

You're snubbed, Honey chile . . . definitely and deliberately . . . by the very man who, last night, simply begged to be introduced. You don't like such treatment? Of course you don't. Men usually stick around. But this one didn't. What did you say or do to antagonize him as you danced the night before? Whatever it was, you certainly are off to a bad start on your vacation.

That's All, Sister!

It can happen to you...any time

No matter what other charms you have, they're likely to be forgotten if you're guilty of halitosis* (unpleasant breath). And, don't forget, halitosis may be absent one time and present the next—without your realizing it.

Why risk offending needlessly when Listerine Antiseptic is such a simple, delightful, extra-careful precaution against offending? Never, never omit it, night or morning, or before any date when you want to be at your best.

To be extra-attractive be extra-careful

Listerine Antiseptic is the extra-careful precaution because it freshens and sweetens the breath . . . not for mere seconds or minutes . . . but for hours usually. So, don't trust make-shifts . . . trust Listerine Antiseptic before every date.

*Though sometimes systemic, most cases of halitosis are due to the bacterial fermentation of tiny food particles. Listerine Antiseptic quickly halts such oral fermentation, and overcomes the odors it causes.

Every year medical men are learning more about the large part music plays in the healing of the mentally ill. They might do well to consult with disc jockey Bob Swan of WORL, Boston, who has had considerable success on his own in bringing peace of mind to both hospital patients and everyday listeners.

The Armed Forces Radio Service carries Bob's Swan Boat to Army veterans at a hospital near Boston. Last year the Canadian American Writers Association took note of his work with their Radio Achievement Award for musical entertainment. Figuring largely in their presentation were numerous letters from patients of TB sanitariums commending his program.

That his show may have some therapeutic value pleases Bob, but he has no idea of entering the field of medicine beyond curing the blues. The title of doctor is strictly informal and was conferred upon him by affectionate listeners. The stethoscope is reserved for the romantic heartbeats of his wife.

The music Bob plays is slow and quiet. After experimenting with all types, he found that a steady diet of loud brassy music disturbed his nerves, while soft, dreamy numbers were soothing and relaxing. Listeners welcomed the change of pace from the hammering beat of the boppers, radical progressives, and hillbillies.

Boston audiences agree—a visit to "Doctor Swan" is often the best prescription for a case of "Worryitis."

AUGUST
—to start off I can freely predict, without recourse to my faithful friend The Old Farmer's Almanac, that we will have heat in August by day and by night. Shim-mering, fry-eggs-on-the-pavement hotness, so thick you ought to be able to cut out a hunk and put it away for next winter. That's a good way to get through the dog days—remember how you slipped and slid on the ice last winter, how your toes tingled and your nose grew rosy, and decide August isn't such a bad month, after all. Having got that off my chest, I'll now take a peek at the Al-manac and see how Link's predictions stack up with those of the gents in the predicting business. What d'you know—rain, it says here. First week, fine. But not the last two weeks; they'll be wet ones and no mistake . . .

August also brings along with it the sneeziest of the assorted hay fever seasons, when ragweed comes to its own, and goldenrod lifts its yellow head. There'll be running noses and weeping eyes and ka-chooing and bless-youing a-plenty . . . The August flower-of-the-month, gladiola; the birth-stone, peridot or sardonyx. Now I know what a sardonyx is, but what in tunket's a peridot? Time out for consultation with Mr. Webster, unabridged, who says: "A deep, yellowish-green variety of crysolite." Sounds pretty.
Speaking of August, I'm sure it could win a walk as The Month In Which Men Like Not To Wear A Necktie Most. Which thought led to a little research on the subject of woman's favorite Christmas present to the male. Did you know that there's a Man's Tie Foundation—to which, incidentally, I'm indebted for the following tidbits... The Paisley pattern was brought to England from Persia by Sir Francis Drake's sailors in 1580. They used pieces of the gay material to tie up their pigtails—standard maritime equipment then... Undisputed leader of London fashion in the early seventeenth century was Beau Brummell, who dressed each morning as if it were a sacred ceremony, the climax of which was the reverent knotting of his white tie. Protective collars and ties of steel were issued to officers of the U.S. Marines in the early 1800's. Enlisted men were issued leather collars—from which came "Leathernecks."... In the late eighteenth century, red faces were considered a sign of health. Men pulled their ties tight to make their faces flush—which also, unfortunately, made them pop-eyed.

Art Linkletter emcees House Party, Monday through Friday at 3:30 P.M. EDT, over the Columbia Broadcasting System; sponsored by Pillsbury Mills.

CHARLES DICKENS SAID IT:
"When Death strikes down the innocent and young, for every fragile form from which he lets the panting spirit free, a hundred virtues rise, in shapes of mercy, charity and love, to walk the world and bless it."

IT HAPPENED ON HOUSE PARTY

Linkletter (to school-girl Sandra): What do you do—have you any hobbies?
Sandra: I'm interested in rocks.
Linkletter: Say, you're ten years old—don't you like boys?
Sandra: Well, a little—when they're away from me.

PAUSE AND CONSIDER DEPT.
You may not have realized it, but a group of people has been working on you. They've spent over half a million dollars through promotion, displays in grocery stores and restaurants, and through advertising campaign in some of the biggest magazines and in newspapers. What are they aiming for? They want to convince you that you ought to drink iced tea! As for me, I don't need any urging. Give me a hammock, something interesting to read and a nice, tall glass, and I'll slip through August's dog days with hardly a protest. Lois dolls up our iced tea in various ways—sometimes with a piece of lemon or lime to squeeze into it, sometimes with the lemon or lime juice stirred right in, making a sort of lemon-iced-ade-tea. Sometimes she spikes it with a juicy finger of fresh pineapple and a cool sprig of mint. Sometimes a clove or two gets steeped with the tea before the ice is added. In fact, I suspect that Lois regards iced tea as the French peasant woman regards the stew pot—anything and everything you have on hand goes into it. As a matter of fact, if my family had the slightest consideration for its husband and father, toiling here over a hot typewriter, someone would rush me in a long, cold, refreshing glass right now. What does a fellow have to do to get service around here, throw a tantrum?
International circus

• If you're somewhere between the ages of four and ten, it doesn't matter whether you come from Afghanistan, India, China, Russia or Yugoslavia—the circus is the only show on earth. Eighty-six excited youngsters, children of United Nations delegates from all over the world, recently spent an afternoon full of balloons, dolls, puppets, ice cream, clowns and animals, as special guests of TV stars Howdy Doody, Bob Smith and Clarabell.

Nasrine Varasteh of Iran summed up the general delight: "I'm so glad I'm going to see the circus because I won't be able to see it when I go back to Iran. I like New York very much and will be sorry to leave because in school we are going to learn many things about many people in other lands." Nasrine may not be here to have the rest of her lessons, but she had her first lesson in international understanding that day.

Howdy Doody Time is 5:30 P.M. EDT, Monday-Friday, over NBC-TV. Participating sponsors.
Almost too excited to pose for their pictures, are representatives of Belgium, Pakistan, Poland, Afghanistan, Ecuador.

Home was never like this! Alicia and Carmen Albornoz, young delegates from Ecuador, display their Howdy Doody dolls.

Clarabell has a man-to-man talk with Alan Dessault of Belgium. Alan is in the costume of a miniature palace guard.

Vivienne Yu of China doesn't know what to do first—cuddle her new doll, eat ice cream, or gape at circus antics.

Are you in the know?

If you and your pal are smitten by the same Sigh Man, should you—

☐ Date him
☐ Bow out nobly
☐ Suggest a double date

Let’s say you and your best pal are vacationing at a Dude Ranch. Girls meet cowboy—and you’re both “gone” doxies! If you are the one he favors, why bow out? Suggest a double date; your femme friend may have a pleasant change of heart. Whatever the plans, you needn’t cower in a corner just because it’s that time. Come slacks, jeans or daint' duds, no one will know, with Kotex—for those flat pressed ends prevent revealing outlines—shore 'nuff! And that special safety center gives extra protection.

With sleeveless dresses, which goes best?

☐ A stole
☐ A razor
☐ Long gloves

Daintiness—and sleeveless frocks—call for underarm contact with the razor’s edge. Keeps you out of the untidy bracket. Promotes poise. Self-assurance at calendar time calls for just the right answer to your sanitary protection needs. So Kotex gives you 3 absorbencies to choose from (different sizes, for different days). By trying all 3 you’ll learn which one’s exactly right for you.

When hiccups heckle you, what helps?

☐ Change your makeup
☐ Court "Old Sol"
☐ Shun the sun

If your complexion’s an oil gusher—it’s boom time for hickeys! To dry ’em out, sun bathing’s good, but don’t get sizzled. Change your makeup to calamine: a flesh-tinted lotion that helps conceal and heal breakouts. Fine for problem day blemishes, too. Kotex helps keep you confident, at ease, because Kotex is made to stay soft while you wear it; has softness that holds its shape.

More women choose KOTEX* than all other sanitary napkins

3 ABSORBENCIES: REGULAR, JUNIOR, SUPER

Have you tried Delsey*? It’s the new bathroom tissue that’s safer because it’s softer. A product as superior as Kotex. A tissue as soft and absorbent as Kleenex.* (We think that’s the nicest compliment there is.)
Batting practice can be fun when your dad is a sportscaster. WPEN’s Matt Guokas gives son a few tips.

Matt Jr. sneaks a bite of cake while Mom isn’t looking—so he thinks. Sister Mary finds it amusing.

Had it not been for a serious automobile accident in 1946, Matt Guokas might never have entered radio. Up to that time Matt was headed for an active career in basketball; afterwards, with extensive knowledge as a participator in every sport behind him, he turned to broadcasting sports events. The ex-ace of the National Basketball Association soon became the ace sportscaster of WPEN in Philadelphia. Instead of playing basketball, he started to describe the game with the authority of one who really knows it.

Well-known in the world of sports, Matt became a basketball sensation while still in college. Once out of school he continued his sports career, mixing professional basketball with soccer and baseball. Even the Army did not stop Matt, and the team he coached and played for won the West Coast title.

In January of 1949, after several years as a free lance sportscaster, Matt joined the WPEN sports staff. It was only a few months before Matt became Sports Director for the station. Besides his play-by-play accounts of all major sports events, Matt also transfers his vast knowledge of sports to listeners in a nightly round-up of local sports news each evening and comes through with the Pre-Game Warm-Up before all the Phillies’ games.

Strictly a family man, Matt spends whatever spare time he has with his wife, Joan, and his family. Relaxing the Guokas way usually means a swift catch or some batting practice for Matt Jr. His daughter, Mary, while far from being a “tomboy” excels in school sports and studies ballet as well.

In spite of their many extra curricular activities the children are both “A” students. Matt takes great pride in the sport activities of Matt Jr., and tries to develop not only sport technique in the boy, but a true spirit of sportsmanship which Dad believes is of utmost importance. Matt also takes his son with him when he broadcasts a ball game if he doesn’t believe the game will run too late, because, of course, school work must come before play.

Matt is a living example of a true sportsman who can never say die. In spite of his serious accident which prohibits his active participation in sports, he still maintains an active interest in all sports and will always do what he can to further the goal of the various sport organizations to which he belongs, and to encourage youngsters to play “good” ball.
Television's sharp-tongued Eloise does a surprising turnabout.

The song we're singing for September is a merry one—and why not what with all the exciting features lined up for next month's issue? One of the most exciting is Eloise McElhone's own story on why she turned from man-hater to matron. The solution is simple, according to Eloise—all you have to do is choose a dreamy guy. And that's exactly what she did. Eloise will tell you all about it in September's Radio Television Mirror, on sale at the newsstands Friday, August 10.

Looking at matrimony from an entirely different viewpoint is hickory widow, Mrs. Al Helfer, who certainly doesn't deny that Mr. H. is a dream guy. But she has plenty more to say about life with Mutual's bigtime baseball broadcaster. Mrs. H., you may remember, used to be known as Romona when she was with Paul Whiteman's band.

Is it fifteen years since Pepper Young's family first took to the air? It certainly is, and Radio Television Mirror is celebrating Pepper's radio milestone with a special six-page section devoted to the history of this long-loved daytime serial. You'll find color portraits of the Young family and a fascinating album of through-the-years pictures. Speaking of pictures, don't miss the ones of Dave Garroway and his "Dial" gang. They're all there—Connie Russell, Jack Haskell, Art Van Damme, Charlie Andrews, etc. And speaking of special sections, be sure to see the Fun Round-up feature—you'll find a collection of games and quizzes from all the best radio and TV panel and participation shows. Try some of the 'specially picked stunts at your next party.

Art Linkletter's Nonsense and Some-Sense, daytime fashions, Who's Who In TV and all the regulars, including the second in the new solve-it-yourself Mystery Mirror series, will be in September's issue, too. Remember August 10—that's when you can buy September's Radio Television Mirror.

1. ANTISEPTIC (Protection from germs)

Norforms are now safer and surer than ever! A highly perfected new formula actually combats germs right in the vaginal tract. The exclusive new base melts at body temperature, forming a powerful, protective film that permits effective and long-lasting action. Will not harm delicate tissues.

2. DEODORANT (Protection from odor)

Norforms were tested in a hospital clinic and found to be more effective than anything it had ever used. Norforms are powerfully deodorant—they eliminate (rather than cover up) unpleasant or embarrassing odors, and yet they have no "medicine" or "disinfectant" odor themselves.

3. CONVENIENT (So easy to use)

Norforms are small vaginal suppositories that are so easy and convenient to use. Just insert—no apparatus, no mixing or measuring. They're greaseless and they keep in any climate. Your druggist has them in boxes of 12 and 24.

Lovely Leona Fredericks rose from beauty contest fame to a top-notch modeling career! Miami’s Queen of Beauty says: “No girl is really beautiful unless she’s exquisitely dainty! That’s why I love to powder myself with Lander’s flower-fresh talcs after every shower. You’ll love them!”

Duets of velvet bows: For that special touch, Faye Emerson takes two of her tiniest bows and sets them snugly at the side of her chignon.

Back interest bow: A summertime specialty—to be cool and chic at the same time, Faye uses one huge black velvet bow in place of a hat.

Side clasp bows: At right, Faye models two large bows on each side of her fashion-right chignon. Note unusual placement along the side.
Vivacious Faye Emerson seems to have that certain flair for setting styles. She's the gal who first popularized the chignon coiffure. All Faye had to do was to explain to the viewers of her CBS evening television show that the puffy chignon she wears is not her own hair. “When I want to change my hairdo,” confided Faye, “all I have to do is take off my chignon.” That statement helped to start a fad, practically overnight, and the demand for hairpieces was on. Every woman loves to change her hairstyle and the chignon is the quickest and easiest way to effect a new style.

Now glamorous Faye has another beauty secret to share with you. She predicts that bows are definitely top beauty news this summer. Leading hairstylists are already creating coiffures especially for them. Bows of all sizes are being used, varying in size from tiny “kiss” bows to large “hug” bows. They help you to create whatever impression you desire on that extra-impressionable man—cute, sophisticated, or merely well-groomed.

The chic chignon, because of its sleek simplicity, is ideal for dressing up with gaily-colored or dark, contrasting bows. Faye has a selection of many bows in different colors, sizes and fabrics, and wears them in place of a hat in the summer. Sometimes she adds an eye-piece veil trimmed with matching bows.

“The most important beauty advice I can give you is to call attention to your hair with every trick in the book,” says Faye. “All smart girls know that nothing is lovelier than clean, neat hair, groomed to perfection in a flattering style. One of the first things a man notices about a woman is her hair. That’s why it pays to take special pains. You know what that means; a weekly shampoo and set, daily brushing, a good cold wave permanent that holds a loose, natural-looking wave, plus a touch of lacquer to keep stray hairs in place, and brillantine or a hairdressing to add luster. Then you are ready to highlight your hair with an attention-getting bow that will be both a beauty and fashion accessory.”

Faye Emerson posed for these pictures so that you could get a close-up view of some of the various ways of wearing bows. But there is no limit to the variety of effects you can achieve with a little experimentation—and imagination.

You, too, could be more charming, attractive, popular

SUMMER FUN DRIES your skin

Sun-basking coarsens skin

TORRID SUMMER SUN tends to bake the outer layer of your skin—make it look coarser, summer-dry.

HERE IS A QUICK UN-DRIER to soften and relax your summer-dried skin.

After you've been out in any strong summer sun or dusty, drying wind—smooth your hot, parched face with soothing, softening Pond's Dry Skin Cream (hands and arms, too). Don't be stingy. This rich, rich cream spreads easily. Your dry, thirsty, tight-feeling skin will "soak it right up"—become softer, moister, more comfortable at once!

3 features

Three features make Pond's Dry Skin Cream effective. 1. It is very rich in lanolin—most like the skin's own oil. 2. It is homogenized—to soak in better. 3. It has a special softening emulsifier.

See its effects on your skin. At night—work in richly for extra softening. By day—use lightly for a smooth look under make-up. And all summer—use immediately after any sunny, windy exposure.

You can be generous in using Pond's Dry Skin Cream—it is so sensibly priced—55¢, 31¢, 15¢, and 9¢ for the extra-generous biggest jar (all plus tax).

Security begins at home

BY TERRY BURTON

- A recent Family Counselor was the psychologist Dr. Henry C. Link. Dr. Link has been worried about the sense of insecurity among the people of America and has recently written the best-selling "The Way to Security."

Dr. Link defined "security" for us, by saying that it is a set of principles or standards that a person clings to. "The trouble today," he said, "is that too many of us have become unfastened from these principles, and that's the reason we have investigations like the Kefauver one and basketball scandals. We've been putting too much stress on social security and dollar security and not enough on personal and spiritual security."

Dr. Link went on to say that social security is what a government does for its citizens or what a family does for its children. When a family gives a regular unearned allowance to a child, that's a kind of social security. Spending that allowance is supposed to teach the child the value of money, but it doesn't. When a youngster has to work for his allowance, then he is learning. He is developing skills which make for personal security.

When I asked Dr. Link whether he thought that parents today tend to give their children too much, he said, "Definitely, yes. Parents feel that because they had nothing when they were children that they should give their children all the luxuries they were unable to have. By doing this, parents tend to make the youngsters dependent and insecure."

Dr. Link's parting words are an example of basic belief: "We have trusted too long in the dollar instead of in God. The most interesting thing to me about modern psychology is that it shows that personality and character depend on the Commandments and God's moral laws. The insecurities of war, crime, gambling, divorce, high prices, personal difficulties, can only be met with spiritual weapons."

Is it wise for a man to fall in love with a woman much younger than he?

Dr. Jim Brent is heard on Road of Life, Monday through Friday at 3:15 P.M. EDT, NBC. Sponsor: P&G’s Crisco.

Here are the names of those who wrote the best letters of advice to Dr. Jim Brent in May’s daytime radio drama problem.

In May Radio Television Mirror reader-listeners were told Dr. Jim Brent’s story and asked if it is wise for a man to fall in love with a woman much younger than he. The editors of Radio Television Mirror have chosen the best letters and checks have been sent to the following:

TWENTY-FIVE DOLLARS to Mrs. Myrle Lewis, Winston-Salem, North Carolina for the following letter:

In rare cases, yes. Age, in years, is not always the determining factor in one’s mental and emotional make-up. In some individuals youth or age is innate so that they are attracted to younger or older companions who balance their inner nature. Environment also plays a vital part in age development.

In my opinion, Jim’s age and Jocelyn’s youth complement each other. The fact that Jocelyn was denied a normal youth would make her an eager, responsible mother to Jim’s child. Take Jocelyn to your heart, Jim, for the delightful companionship you both need on your Road of Life.

FIVE DOLLARS each for the five next-best letters in answer to the problem has been sent to:

Mrs. Lillian Adele Ball
Arlington, Texas

Mrs. Arlen Arveson
Goodridge, Minnesota

Mrs. Harry Farlow
Newington, Conn.

Mrs. Robert F. Everest
W. Hartford, Conn.

Mrs. Betty Toles
Colorado Springs, Colo.

Does your daughter have truths she can trust about these Intimate Physical Facts?

WHATS ALL THIS I HEAR ABOUT MARRIAGE HYGIENE, MOM?

MANY THINGS, DEAR, AND FIRST I MUST WARN YOU ABOUT A GRAVE WOMANLY OFFENSE...

Modern mothers will make sure their daughters have the latest scientific information on this intimate subject...

When your grown daughter wants to know more about the intimate facts of life—what a relief it must be to know that you can give her the most modern scientific knowledge because you, yourself, have kept up to date.

You certainly will tell her how important it is to put ZONITE in her fountain syringe for complete hygiene (including internal feminine cleanliness)—you will explain how no other type liquid antiseptic-germicide for the douche of all those tested is so powerful, yet safe to tissues as ZONITE.

Your daughter will appreciate knowing how important douching often is to health, daintiness, and always after her periods. She will welcome the warning about a womanly offense graver than bad breath or body odor—an odor she seldom detects herself but is so apparent to others. And she will thank her modern mother for explaining about ZONITE.

The ZONITE Principle Developed by a Famous Surgeon and Scientist

The ZONITE principle was the first in the world that was powerful enough yet positively non-irritating, non-poisonous.

As a result, modern women no longer have to use dangerous products, over-strong solutions of which may gradually cause serious damage. Nor will they want to rely on weak, homemade solutions—none of which have ZONITE’s great deodorizing and germicidal action.

And remember, despite its great germ-killing powers, ZONITE is positively safe to tissues. You can use ZONITE as directed as often as you wish without the slightest risk of injury.

ZONITE’s Miracle-Action

ZONITE dissolves and removes odor-causing waste substances. It promptly relieves any itching or irritation if present. ZONITE helps guard against infection and kills every germ it touches. You know it’s not always possible to contact all the germs in the tract, but you can be sure ZONITE immediately kills every reachable germ and keeps germs from multiplying. Be modern—use ZONITE!

nobody can “tell”
when you use *Tampax

What a pity it is to let fear of embarrassment keep you out of the water on “those certain days of the month.” Hasn’t anyone ever told you about Tampax for swimming? With Tampax monthly sanitary protection, you can throw to the winds all the nagging worry that something may possibly betray the situation.

Tampax is simply ideal for bathing and for beach—with suit wet or dry. It is an internal absorbent, worn internally. Nothing at all outside. No external pad. No belt. An invention of a doctor, Tampax is made of extremely absorbent surgical cotton compressed into slim applicators. Easy to insert. Quick to change. No trouble to dispose of.

Wonderful to think about—no odor forms with Tampax! No chafing is possible. No bulging bulk will bother you and no sharp edge-lines will “show,” no matter what you wear. Tampax is sold at drug and notion counters in 3 absorbency-sizes (Regular, Super, Junior). Average month’s supply slips into your purse. Tampax Incorporated, Palmer, Mass.

Hordes of fans descend on Ralph Flanagan wherever he goes. George Simon, editor of the dance band musicians’ magazine, Metronome, caught these candid shots of Ralph as he tried to answer some of the questions which were shot at him. Simon put these pictures, as well as many others, in a book called “The Bandleader.” With a face like Ralph’s who needs words to answer questions?

Ralph Flanagan’s Let’s Go Show is on ABC Mondays at 10:00 P.M. EDT under the joint sponsorship of the Army and the Air Force.

For half an hour every Thursday night on Father Knows Best, Norma Jean Nilsson (left) and Rhoda Williams are sisters.

Father’s children

The two daughters of the Anderson Family on NBC’s Father Knows Best, both began their professional acting careers almost in infancy.

Norma Jean Nilsson, who portrays Kathy, first stepped before the microphone as a sophisticated three-year-old. During the war she furthered her show business career by playing Army camps around the country. She has had so many radio roles that she is a charter member of the Five Hundred Club, an organization of children who have appeared on five hundred or more radio broadcasts. One of her favorite and most challenging radio appearances was on the Bob Hope Show.

Today, a pretty, hazel-eyed twelve-year-old, she attends junior high school in Hollywood. Living in Los Angeles all her life, she has become a good swimmer and is fond of the latest craze of roller-skating. Her main hobby, however, is coin collecting. Besides radio work, she has also been seen on television and appeared in several movies.

Rhoda Williams, who plays the part of Betty on the show, had a slightly later start in radio than Norma Jean did. She was already five years old before she made her first appearance. Born in Galveston, Texas, in 1930, she moved with her family to California when she was three. There she did her first microphone stint on the Kraft Music Hall, and liked it so well that she has been in radio ever since.

After graduating from Hollywood High School at the astonishing age of fourteen she continued her studies at the University of California, where she received a degree in theatre arts. Rhoda has also appeared in a number of motion pictures, one of the most recent being "Mr. Belvedere Goes to College."
THE TINKER MAN

The day was June and the sun was high
When the roving tinker man came by
With a Gaelic tune and merry eye,
The laughing tinker man.

I set the kettle and took the broom,
I brewed the tea and swept the room
The tinker sang in the twilight gloom,
The singing tinker man.

He mended kettle, he mended pan,
He said beware of a tall, dark man,
Then he drove away in his gypsy van,
The roving tinker man.

When cows bed down by the pasture bars
And soft winds talk in the oak tree spars,
Then I dream of a road beneath the stars
And a lonely tinker man.

—Alma Robison Higbee

SUMMER'S LASS

With wanton eyes 'twixt narrow streets
She fled with sheer delight,
And though destruction followed close
She laughed with all her might.

She waved at every passerby
And shrieked a frantic plea
For age had slowed a sprightly step
She hoped they would not see
The faded braids and shabby robe
Of which she once was proud,
And since the leaves were drifting
They soon would be her shroud,
And summer's lass just hung her head
Retreating from the crowd.

—Hazel Boyett

FISHING VILLAGE

Picturesque shanties, sprawling awry,
Cocking jaunty roofs at an aching blue sky,
Disorderly rows of mis-shapen piles
And deep water chuckling through their shadowy aisles.

Lobster traps bleaching in monstrous heaps Fantastic chrysalis of the silent deep,
Fishing nets swaying with subtle grace
Like languorous hours suspended in space.

Red and white fish boats alive on the swell
To th' rise of the buoy and the sound of its bell,
Myriads of seagulls shrieking with glee
At the splash of an entrail into the sea.

Hip-booted fisherman ladling catches
To glittering tubs from slithering hatchets,
Ripples and sunlight and seaweed and sand
And just a hint of the peace of the promised land!

—John Mantley

They call me the Human Alarm Clock, Jr.," says John A. Gambling, twenty-one-year-old son of WOR's veteran waker-upper John B. "But if the truth be known, for many of the twenty-six years my father's been doing the sunrise stint on WOR waking up New Yorkers, I was the one who woke him up to go to work!"

The reason WOR listeners refer to the youth as "the junior alarm clock" is that while John B. Gambling is on his month's summer vacation, his son has taken over the 6 to 7 A.M. Rambling with Gambling show.

Young John, however, is no stranger to the faithful and large Gambling audience. Ever since February 5, 1930, when John A. made his first sound in this world, the WOR family of listeners have been given daily progress reports on the youth's growth to manhood. And John A. is no stranger as a radio performer, either, having made his first appearance on his father's morning show at the age of three. He has subsequently appeared every Christmas Eve for the past ten years on his father's show reciting "The Night Before Christmas."

Gambling Junior attended the famous Horace Mann Preparatory School for Boys in New York City where he was a star halfback on the varsity football team. Entering Dartmouth College in the fall of 1947, he soon became an announcer on the undergraduate radio station, WDBS. He became station manager of WDBS in his senior year, was elected a member of the Undergraduate Council, and graduated this June with a Bachelor of Arts Degree in English Drama.

But the younger Gambling did not confine his broadcasting activities during his college years solely to the campus. On summer vacations he got jobs in New Hampshire as replacement announcer at WKBR, Manchester, and at WTSV, Claremont. And during his senior year in college, young John got his real baptism by fire for early morning radio broadcasting when he landed a full-time job from 7 to 9 A.M. as disc jockey for the local station in Hanover, WTSL.

John is married to Sally Loppacker Gambling of Glen Ridge, New Jersey. The younger Gamblings have lived in Hanover since July, 1950. John's hobbies are sailing his sixteen-foot "Comet" Class sailboat, building model railroads, and amateur photography.

And following in the true Gambling tradition, young John A. has a little "human alarm clock" of his own. This one is just a year old, and is named John R.
Who is Hare?
Dear Editor:
Could you tell me something about Will Hare, an actor on TV? I seem to think he went under the name of Oliver Thordike some months back. Is this the same person? Is he married and where did he start his career?

Miss M. M., Harrison, N. J.

Will Hare and Oliver Thordike are two different people. Will Hare was born in Elkins, West Virginia and attended high school in Baltimore. Later, he worked with a little theater group, on local radio stations and in summer stock. In 1939 he appeared in Railroads on Parade at the World’s Fair. His first Broadway performance was in “ Eternal Light.” He is not married.

Lost Tracer
Dear Editor:
Please advise why Bennett Kilpack does not appear as Mr. Keen on the Tracer of Lost Persons.

M. M., Philadelphia, Penna.

Bennett Kilpack had to give up his role as Mr. Keen for reasons of ill health.

Gilt Parade
Dear Editor:
What is done with all the gifts Ted Mack receives when The Original Amateur Hour honors a certain city? To whom do they belong now, and are they ever on display?

Miss L. E. M., Mohnton, Penna.

At present the majority of the gifts received are in a warehouse being catalogued. At some future date they will be put in a museum on display for the public, but the exhibition will not be ready for quite a while. Ted Mack will publicly announce the time and place in which they will be shown.

Dimension X
Dear Editor:
Can you tell me what happened to my favorite NBC program, Dimension X?

R. H. C., Indianapolis, Ind.

The last broadcast of Dimension X was heard on January 29, 1951. Although it is off the air now, there is a possibility that it may be brought back in the future. As yet no definite plans have been made.

Bill’s Other Daughter
Dear Editor:
I would like to know who is playing Just Plain Bill’s daughter, Nancy, now, and what happened to the actress who played the part for many years?

Mr. M. S., Chicago, Ill.

Toni Darnay is now playing the role of Bill’s daughter. Ruth Russell, who formerly had the part, had to leave because of her health.

Voice of Your Show
Dear Editor:
Could you please give me some information on Jack Russell, the singer on Sid Caesar’s Show of Shows. He really has a beautiful voice and is just perfect for television.

J. R., Manhasset, L. I.

Jack Russell started his career at the age of six in a Florida minstrel show. After studying voice for many years he finally made Broadway. His first important role was as the featured baritone in “Alive and Kicking” in 1949. When that musical closed, he was signed for Your Show of Shows. Now thirty-two, Jack is married and has two children.

FOR YOUR INFORMATION—If there’s something you want to know about radio and television, write to Information Booth, Radio Television Mirror, 205 E. 42nd St., New York 17, N. Y. We’ll answer if we can either in Information Booth or by mail—but be sure to attach this box to your letter along with a stamped, self-addressed envelope, and specify whether your question concerns radio or TV.
Born in the shadows of Hollywood's motion picture studios, Wendy Drew had to travel three thousand miles across the country before receiving recognition as one of the outstanding young actresses of the day. Wendy wanted to give up California and try her luck on Broadway, but her family felt that at thirteen she wasn't quite old enough to live alone in New York. Instead she turned to the Air Force, and at fifteen became a member of the Special Service Department, helping to put on shows.

Wendy finally made Broadway, but after a grand whirl found herself without a job. To help make ends meet she became a cigarette girl and turned to modeling. At the ripe old age of nineteen Wendy entered television, forgetting half of her two-line part on her first show. It wasn't until she auditioned for a part on Lux Video Theater and left the directors weeping with her big scene that she really got a break. Although she is now recognized as one of the leading ingenues on TV, Wendy would like to give the legitimate theater a try next season.

One of the most arresting facts about Arnold Stang is that he is perfectly happy with the role of Gerard on NBC's Henry Morgan Show. Unlike many actors and comedians who have climbed to fame with one particular role, Stang isn't afraid of becoming "typed." The small, economy-size, twenty-eight-year-old comic, who has been likened to a near-sighted chipmunk dragged out of the rain, has dispensed laughs on shows with many top comedians; yet every time he appears on a new television show, he points out with dismay, both the critics and the public "suddenly recognize me as 'fresh new talent.'"

Stang's career in show business began at a radio audition when he was eleven. Wearing heavy horn-rimmed glasses, and speaking in a voice somewhere between a quaver and a croak, Arnold began a serious recitation for the directors. They could not take him seriously. When they had recovered from spasms of laughter they signed him up on the spot for a comic role, a "type" of role which Stang has been handling ever since.

Maria Riva, talented daughter of Marlene Dietrich, came to the United States from her native Berlin at the age of six. Three years later she was seen with her famous actress-mother in "The Scarlet Empress," her only screen appearance. At fifteen Miss Riva enrolled in the Max Reinhardt Academy in California, remaining there as a teacher after her graduation. With Jack Geller, she later helped organize the now famous Geller's Workshop, and then came to New York to appear in "Foolish Notion" on Broadway.

The blue-eyed, titian-haired actress joined the USO in 1944 and trouped for six months in Italy and Germany, appearing in "The Front Page" before she returned to New York to resume the private teaching of dramatics. In 1947 she was married to William Riva, instructor of scenic design at Fordham University where she was a summer-session teacher. The couple now have two young sons. Miss Riva is already committed to twenty-eight CBS television appearances, among them starring roles on Studio One, Danger, Suspense, Big Town and Crime Photographer.
Ed McMahon, whose flashing nose and lettered wig open each week's performance of CBS-TV's gala circus review, The Big Top, is no stranger to television or circus life. During "vacations" from Boston College, McMahon worked as a sound truck announcer and Barker for the "Tunnel of Love" at an amusement park. Later he joined a circus to run a bingo game.

Shortly after this Uncle Sam beckoned and McMahon joined the Naval Cadet Corps. After leaving the service he won his B.A. from the Speech and Drama School of the Catholic University in Washington, D. C. Again he put his vacations to good use doing everything from dry cleaning to selling gadgets as a pitchman.

After graduation he applied for a job at WCAU-TV in Philadelphia. He was auditioned, hired and appeared as co-emcee of a three-hour variety show all on the same day. Of his five present TV shows he says his most enjoyable role is the clown on Big Top. "Like every American boy I always wanted to run away and join the circus. Big Top is a combination of two loves—circus and television."

Delora Bueno, a Brazilian beauty from Iowa, is currently conducting a one-girl television campaign to bring the music of Brazil to the people of the United States. Ideally suited to the task, Delora was born in Iowa and reared in Brazil. Living in small communities she learned the songs that fishermen sing and the lovely lullabies of the native Brazilians.

In high school Delora discovered that folk music was the same the world over, that only the rhythms were different. Music became, to her, a key for world-wide understanding. Coming to New York she studied at the Juilliard School of Music and found her Brazilian folk songs in great demand. After graduation she brought her songs to night clubs.

Television and Delora were made for each other. To television Delora brings her dark beauty, rich voice and unusual songs. To Delora television is the best medium for inter-American understanding. She has had her own TV show and was seen on Flight To Rhythm over DuMont. Since then she has made many radio and TV guest appearances.

It is quite fitting that one of the outstanding champions of American music and musicians should be Howard Barlow. Barlow made his modest debut at the age of six at a Sunday School social. Several years later he started studying piano, cello, trumpet and tympany. Although the family envisioned a business career for the lad, young Howard had other ideas.

After studying music at Columbia University he turned to choral conducting and soon directed small instrumental groups to accompany the singers. In 1923 he founded the American National Orchestra, composed entirely of American-born musicians and featuring American-composed music. With radio in its infancy, Barlow was one of the pioneers to put classical music on the air, at a time when such a move was considered impractical. He brought to the vast radio audience for the first time compositions of native Americans. Today, as musical director of NBC-TV's Voice of Firestone, he is bringing the music he has championed to television audiences throughout the country.
Talent seems to run in the WGR family. Whether you want the best in news reporting or the best in music, you'll have to go far to beat this Buffalo trio.

WGR Chief Announcer, Allan Lewis, is one of Buffalo's leading newscasters, best known, perhaps, for his daily 6 P.M. and 11 P.M. news summaries. Allan's clarity and businesslike reporting make news items easy to understand, easy to remember. As a tribute to his consistency, it might be mentioned that one of his news sponsors has been with him for over six years. A Detroiter, Allan made a courageous switch to radio in 1942, leaving behind a successful career in the clothing business. The gamble paid off for Allan, and for news-hungry Buffalonians, too.

For twenty years as Music Director of WGR, the only Buffalo station maintaining a full-fledged orchestra, Dave Cheskin is by far the most popular conductor in western New York. If there's a big function, be it college prom or convention ball, the odds are Cheskin will be there supplying the music. Dave came to WGR from Rochester, when he was only sixteen and a violin virtuoso. An all-high centerfielder in his early days, he still maintains a tremendous interest in baseball. But music is really his first love, as shown by his highly-rated shows, heard Monday through Friday at 6:30 P.M.

WGR's morning news voice is David Getman, who lives up to a rugged work schedule six days a week. Up at 4 A.M., Dave is at the station by 5:30 each morning to "sign on" and begin a series of five newscasts: the first at 6 A.M., the last at 9:50 A.M. As if these rather gruelling hours weren't enough work for one man, Dave has been studying in his spare time at the University of Buffalo, majoring in Political Science. A native Buffalonian, Dave is an ardent golfer and finds some compensation for his odd schedule in the fact that his afternoons are free.
Burns and Allen Show
George Burns: The person I get the most mail about is Jack Benny. And everybody asks the same question—is Jack really as stingy as they say on radio? Well I just wish you could see the Johnnie Walker Black Label he gave me for Christmas. How he got it off the bottle I'll never know.
Burns and Allen Show: Alternate Thursdays, 8:30 P.M., EDT, CBS-TV.

Life With Luigi
Luigi: It's funny about sitting in the park in America. If a man sits on park bench to enjoy the sun, he's called a sun bather. But if he sits on that park bench all year, he's called a bum.
Life With Luigi: Tues., 9:00 P.M., EDT, CBS.

Rate Your Mate
Says emcee Joey Adams: "My grammar school teacher used to hit me on the head with a ruler. But I got the highest marks in the class. They were all on my scalp."
Rate Your Mate: Sun., 4:00 P.M. EDT, CBS.

My Friend Irma
Jane: Listen to this, sweetie. "Broadway producer loses twenty-five thousand dollar suit."
Irma: Well, if he paid that much for it, he probably has an extra pair of pants.
My Friend Irma: Mon., 10:00 P.M., EDT, CBS.

You Bet Your Life
Groucho Marx asked an opera teacher, "Suppose I wanted to get up a lady quartette, could you find me one that sings bass?"
"No, the contralto is as low as a lady goes," was the reply.
After a long, raised-eyebrows-look, Grouch remarked, "Obviously, we don't know the same kind of ladies."
You Bet Your Life: Wed., 9:00 P.M., EDT, NBC.

Vaughn Monroe Show
Ziggy Talent, comedian-singer on the show, defines honor among gagwriters as a steal trust.
Vaughn Monroe Show: Tues., 9:00 P.M., EDT, CBS-TV.

We Take Your Word
Lyman Bryson: "Social lion" comes from the old phrase, calling a person a lion if he was a person of great social importance, somebody that a hostess was very likely to go after to get to a party.
John McCaffery: Why was that kind of a person called a lion?
Lyman Bryson: Well, the lion is the king of the beasts, and there's nothing more beastly than the average social lion.
We Take Your Word: Fri., 10:00 P.M., EDT, CBS.

Talent Scouts
"Don't get me wrong," says Arthur Godfrey, "I'm proud to be paying taxes in the United States. The only thing is—I could be just as proud for half the money."
Talent Scouts: Mondays, 8:30 P.M., EDT, over CBS and CBS-TV.
WAS GRANDPA CORNY?

When I was young, grandpa was so embarrassing...

If anyone questioned his pet brands, he'd take it as a personal insult.

Once, when an old crony made some slurring remarks about grandpa's favorite brand of pipe tobacco, he refused to speak to the man for two years.

But he was most embarrassing about that car of his. He'd bought it back in 1919... and from that day on, he took full credit for everything about it.

Whenever he saw another car of the same make, he'd go up to the owner like the fellow was a long-lost brother. He'd button-hole perfect strangers, and practically kiss 'em!

To a small boy it was agony... could anything be cornier?

As I grew older, I began to see that having brand names you could look for and trust, wasn't a bad idea at that.

Maybe it is "corny" to think of familiar brands as old friends...

But it's good to know exactly what you're getting. It's reassuring to realize that most manufacturers of brand name products spend money for research and quality control to make their brands live up to their name.

They know the best way to make money is to make friends!

Every day thousands of these brands are fiercely competing for your friendship... trying to give you more and more value and quality.

If value, and better products, and better living are "corn," let's have more of it.

As you study the ads in these pages, remember... brand names are names of friends you can count on!

Whenever you buy—

Army Hospital
Fort Dix, New Jersey
Dear Friends:
I am writing this to all of you who’ve so kindly thought of me and written CBS and RADIO TELEVISION MIRROR for some news. Most of you know I’m in the army but there are still many who haven’t heard that I’ve been in the hospital since the day I was inducted. This is a sorry state of affairs and I haven’t been able to do justice to my correspondence, although my mother and Janette Davis’s sister, Carolyn, have tried to answer many letters. Right now, though, I’d just like to write an ordinary letter, and if you don’t mind, pass on a few words of advice.
My luck has been bad since I was sworn in a few months ago. The very first day a case of flu sent me to a hospital ward. That was followed by a severe strep throat and I am now suffering, and I do mean suffering, with yellow jaundice. It hasn’t hurt me to lose thirteen pounds but I can think of easier ways to do it. But the doctors and nurses have been swell. That’s one side of (Continued on page 73)
Here’s Mary Margaret

She came from Missouri with one shining dream—that she exchanged it for another has meant more than anything else she could have done

BY JO PEARSON

Mary Margaret and Eleanor Roosevelt have known each other since FDR was governor of New York. “She’s the world’s greatest woman,” says MM.

Two girls from Missouri talk things over. Mary Margaret interviewed Margaret Truman on TV the night her father won the 1948 nomination for President.

Mary Margaret drew almost as many people as a World Series game when her fifteenth year on the air was celebrated at Yankee Stadium in 1949.

The day was like any other. Fifty to sixty women, their flowered hats bobbing cheerfully, stood in the hallway which led to the studio. Waiting at the entrance, as is her pre-broadcast custom, was Mary Margaret McBride, her warm handshake extended to them one by one. Then out of the line tottered a tiny, elderly lady in well-brushed black relieved by worn but carefully-pressed touches which were as white as the neat bun visible under her black straw. She thrust a tissue-wrapped package into Mary Margaret’s hands and darted away. In the swirl of handshakes and greetings, no one noticed that she hadn’t returned to her place in line.

The tissue fell away under Mary Margaret’s round hands to reveal an exquisite cut-glass bowl. The note attached to it read:

Dear Miss McBride:

This is the last of my wedding presents and I want you to have it. They are taking me away to the old people’s home today. Goodbye, and thank you for the many hours of pleasure your program has given me.

“Well, goodness!” said Mary Margaret. “Where is she? Where is she? Stella, please find her!”

Stella Karn, Mary Margaret’s good friend, manager, and “no” woman, raced to the elevators. No little lady. The operator remembered seeing such a person going down a few minutes before. He sped Stella to the main floor. The starter, too, remembered seeing a little old woman hurrying down the crowded RCA Building halls. Stella raced up and down the corridors but the little woman was not to be found.

Mary Margaret’s disappointment was genuine when Stella reported back. She is used to such devotion from her listeners but it never fails to move her.

“That poor dear woman!” she exclaimed. “She didn’t even leave her name.”

Most McBride admirers do not prefer to remain so anonymous, as Mary Margaret and her staff, who faithfully acknowledge tons of letters and thousands of gifts annually, well know.

Since starting on the air in 1934 as Martha Deane, Mary Margaret has become one of the most beloved women in America, second alone, perhaps, to Eleanor Roosevelt, who is an ardent McBride fan as well as a devoted McBride friend. Mrs. Roosevelt publicly confessed to having been so engrossed while listening to Mary Margaret’s commercials when she was a guest on the program one day, that she had a hard time getting back to the United Nations matters they’d been discussing.

To the millions of women who drop less ponderous problems to listen, Mary Margaret’s commercials are often as fascinating as her daily interviews with the world-famous. Listeners are quick to sense her belief in a product and equally quick to adopt it for their own. She is as convincing as the chat across a supermarket pushcart or the confidence exchanged on a back stoop. No one doubts for a minute that the rolls she extols aren’t the most delectable ever baked, that the ice cream doesn’t have a truer flavor than any other, or that the bargains in the chain store aren’t the most incredible ones in town.

Part of Mary Margaret’s ability to convince lies in her own delight in good food; the rest in an unshakable belief in the simple but seldom adhered to adage that honesty is the best policy. She accepts no sponsor whose product does not pass her rigid standards for quality. Knowing this, more than one woman believes that if Mary Margaret says it, it’s so.

Unlike those of radio row who regard sponsors as an evil, no matter how necessary, Mary Margaret gives as much affection and loyalty to her sponsors as she receives from her fans. When she switched networks last fall, not one of her sixteen sponsors considered remaining behind. Such accord didn't always exist between Mary Margaret and the people who wanted to buy time on her program. In her early days of radio, the very idea of a sponsor terrified Mary Margaret. She preferred doing and saying things in her own unorthodox way, and she didn't want anyone around cramping her style. When sponsors did buy time on her show, she was firm in keeping them away from the studio. To one who insisted on attending a broadcast, she said, "Listen, I'm Irish, and when I tell you not to come around, don't come around!" It was six years and many contracts later before the man summoned enough courage to attend a Mary Margaret McBride broadcast.

From the very beginning, Mary Margaret took the stand that radio is no different from newspaper work for a reporter—which is what she had been and which is what she has remained. Few things distress her more than being called a commentator.

"I DON'T comment," she says with good-natured emphasis, "I interview. And I don't editorialize. I only try to tell about the interesting things people are doing."

More often, Mary Margaret manages to get her celebrated guests to talk about themselves. Rodgers and Hammerstein come in to discuss their new musical, "The King and I," bringing with them its sparkling star, Gertrude Lawrence. General Omar Bradley and his wife reminisce about Missouri—Mrs. Bradley and Mary Margaret were childhood playmates. The Dionne Quints, on their first trip to New York and with just one radio show to make, make it with Mary Margaret. Betty Smith returns as a guest, this time to tell Mary Margaret about the musical made from her famous book, "A Tree Grows In Brooklyn." The circus doctor from Barnum and Bailey's tells about his patients. Mary Garden recalls the glory of her singing career.

"There's hardly anyone we haven't had," says Stella Karn.

A frequent guest before he had his own program was New York's former mayor, the late Fiorello H. LaGuardia. His appearances (Continued on page 85)
Phil's family

Sons, daughters, grandchildren—the Regans have every good reason to believe that more is very much the merrier

BY FREDDA BALLING

The home of Phil and Josephine ("Jo") Regan is situated on a quiet, secluded street in Pasadena, the city which is, you will remember, the home of the Tournament of Roses and the New Year's Day Rose Bowl game.

Geographically, Pasadena is some twenty odd miles from Hollywood via the Arroyo Seco Freeway, but emotionally the cities are poles apart. Hollywood is glamour, hotcha, roaring talent, overnight success and overnight heartbreak; it is the Broadway, plus Coney Island, plus Tenth Avenue of the west.

Pasadena is the Civic Auditorium, the Huntington Memorial Library, California Institute of Technology, tradition, pomp, and circumstance. In the jewelry trade diamond choker necklaces are called "Pasadena dog collars." Pasadena is also Going to Church, Maintaining Tradition, Clinging to Modesty and Sensible Behavior, Revering the Family. It is Southampton and Bar Harbor—with palm trees.

The Regan house is—like the majority of Pasadena houses—old, vine-grown, shrub-surrounded, and dreaming in the sunlight. It rambles. Its 'dobe-colored stucco walls are cool in the heat of the day and warm in the moonlight.

How much faith should a woman have in her husband?

Once a man has made a mistake is he forever after unworthy of trust? As Bill leaves, Rosemary searches her heart for the answer.

Bill Dawson left Springdale some time ago in search of an advertising career in New York. He soon became involved in an affair with Blanche Weatherby, daughter of his boss. Although Rosemary knew what was going on, she kept her knowledge to herself for a while. Finally, however, the problem was brought out in the open between Bill and Rosemary. Bill, very much upset, went out for a walk in an attempt to get things clear in his mind, and was hit by a truck. He was badly hurt. It was when he was on the road to recovery that he realized that he loved Rosemary and must forget Blanche.

Rosemary and Bill returned to Springdale and for a while all was well with them. But a short time ago Bill quit his job and told Rosemary he was going back to New York to make another attempt to find his life work there. He would send for her when he had found a job and a place for them to live. It was then that the question began to torture Rosemary—how far could she trust Bill, how much faith could she have in him? He had made one mistake—would he make another? Was it unfair of her to suspect his motives.

From your own experience, from that of your friends and family, what is your opinion? How much faith should a woman have in her husband?

Radio Television Mirror will purchase readers' answers to the question. "How Much Faith Should A Woman Have In Her Husband?" Writer of the best answer, in the opinion of the editors, will be paid $25.00; to writers of five next-best answers will go $5.00 each.

What is your answer to this problem? State your views in a letter of no more than one hundred words. Address it to Rosemary, c/o Radio Television Mirror, 205 East 42nd Street, New York 17, N. Y. The editors will choose the best letter, basing choice on originality and understanding of the problem, and will purchase it for $25.00. They will purchase five next-best letters at $5.00 each. No letters will be returned; editors cannot enter into correspondence about them. Opinion of the editors will be final. Letters should be postmarked no later than August 1, 1951, and should have this notice attached.

Does a secretary's viewpoint differ from everyone else's? Not in My boss,

"The whole MacRae family is in the terrific class anyway," says Betty Cooley, meaning Sheila,

A secretary looking at her boss—any secretary, that is, not just me looking at Gordon MacRae—gets a pretty good, honest picture of the man she works for. A better all-around picture than, say, his wife—who's pretty much predisposed to see only the good in him or she wouldn't have fallen in love and married him. Better than his mother, who perhaps still thinks of him as her little boy. Better than the one-sided picture you get from friends who see him only at his best.

With a calm, dispassionate eye a secretary can view her boss, assess his faults and his virtues. Being handy with a typewriter, she can put them all down on paper. And there, if you want a really well-rounded picture of the man, you have it. A well-rounded picture but a pleasant one—after all, if she didn't like the guy she'd go off and get herself another job, wouldn't she?

Since October of 1948, when The Railroad Hour first went on the air and I first began to work with Gordon MacRae, I haven't had the slightest desire to go off and get myself another job. So I'm in a pretty good position to give you that well-rounded picture of a guy who's a very good guy.

Sometimes your first impressions don't hold up on longer acquaintance. My first impressions of Gordie were that he was completely down-to-earth, unaffected and good-natured. (And awfully handsome, of course, but who doesn't (Continued on page 79)

Dick was extremely handsome, dated so much, Betty didn’t consider him good husband-material. She relented when he assured her he’d only been shopping for the right girl—and the moment he saw her he knew that his shopping days were over!

On their wedding day Dick and Betty had tea with Bride and Groom’s John Nelson. Now there are twosome meals three times a day for Betty and her husband. Betty’s a good cook, Dick says. She adds, “Maybe he’s a little bit prejudiced?”
Wasn't it a lovely wedding?

By BETTY BAKER

If you watch Bride and Groom, you'll remember the day that "Mrs." was added to Betty's name.

Isn't that a pretty name... Betty Baker? Mrs. Betty Baker, if you please. I'm so proud of it.

Of course, I haven't been Betty Baker very long; only since last March 20th. Before that I was Betty Mitchell, Miss Betty Mitchell. I acquired the Baker name along with Dick, my wonderful husband. Lots of you know how handsome he is, too, because you saw him at our wedding. Remember? It was on the Bride and Groom television program. And wasn't it a lovely wedding?

I know you'll forgive me if I dwell on how handsome Dick is. Actually, it was his good looks that almost kept me from becoming his wife. I thought he was conceited when I first met him—which he wasn't—and I also thought he was a playboy—which he was. It seemed as though he never dated the same girl twice. Dick says that's because he always felt that when the right girl came along he'd know her immediately, and he was always looking for that girl.

The very first time I met him, Dick said to me: "Betty, I've always known that when I met the girl I was going to marry I'd recognize her. And you're the girl." Of course, I thought that was just a "line"; I had figured him as a wolf!

Ours was a stormy romance at first, but once I discovered how wrong my appraisal of Dick was, the thunderclouds disappeared and everything has gone smoothly and happily ever since.

We're very lucky in having had the chance to be married on Bride and Groom. So many people who attended our wedding through the magic of television have written to us, telling us little things that have made their own marriages happy and successful over many long years, and others have told us about their own romances, which started off as stormy as ours and developed into lifelong wedded bliss. Through these letters from Bride and Groom viewers (Continued on page 82)
On being a person

BY LARAINÉ DAY

A philosophy for popularity: think of others first and you’ll never have to worry about yourself

The top interest in my life is the Giants—the Giants baseball team. I have a husband who manages it, a son who sleeps and breathes it, a daughter who loves the excitement of it, and a television show built around it!

Come to think of it, perhaps right there I have my first tip on developing a personality—but I’m getting ahead of myself, for you can’t very well develop one unless you decide first just what the word means. You’re not born with personality—like Topsy, it just grows. It’s called by various names, such as charm, poise, self-confidence, and it all boils down to one fundamental trait: you like people, and people like you. At least, you do and they do if you have an interesting, attractive personality.

We all think we like people. But is that strictly true? The girl who acts superior to her gang at school (that was I to a T) or Mrs. No-One-Likes on your block, are cut from the same cloth. They say they like people but they don’t like them well enough to give them a chance to be friendly. I know because, very frankly, I’ve been that way myself. I wish I’d been smart enough in school to realize that I was only cheating myself—only hurting myself. Deep down I wanted to be every bit as popular as the girl who got asked out every night and I’m sure Mrs. No-One-Likes envies Mrs. Popular because she’s in the thick of her P.T.A. work and gets invited to more kaffee-klatsches than any woman in the neighborhood. Everyone pities Miss Superior in high school and Mrs. No-One-Likes, yes, but (Continued on page 84)

If there's a man with more mothers than Dennis James, let him come forth and make his claim. But Dennis' activities aren't all on the distaff side—the ladies' husbands know him for his ringside announcing of the prizefights and the wrestling bouts.

If you have watched Okay Mother, a DuMont daily television program, or listened to the many Dennis James television and radio assignments, you know what Dennis means when he tells you, "My mother says I was vaccinated with a victrola needle." He can talk, either in prose or poetry, as fast as any record can play it. His rhymes are always spontaneous, and always fun, especially when he plays the Line and Rhyme game on Okay Mother. "You supply the line and I'll supply the rhyme," he announces to the studio audience, and they're off.

Now we are turning the tables and asking Dennis to supply the lines and let our readers supply the rhymes, for prizes of course. (See Dennis' lines and details of the contest on the next page.)

Dennis himself has rhymed as many as twenty-five lines on one program. People sometimes throw him curves, like the word anti-disestablishmentarianism, which so caught him by surprise at first that even, he was silent. Then he gave it a little thought, came up with the rhyme, "prism." A pretty young matron recently insisted, "A word that sticks me quite a bit is the one called hospital," but Dennis was equal to that too. "I had a bite but it wasn't from a wasp at all," he assured her neatly.

Dennis has talked in spurts of verse since he was in grammar school. His public rhyming started one night when he was announcing a wrestling match and there was an interlude to be filled with talk. Referring to a fighter, Dennis suddenly said, “He’s out of the ring, but he’ll be back, and when he does, two heads will crack.” The crowd cheered, and that was all the encouragement he needed. He’s been rhyming ever since.

Here are the six lines for which you’ll supply rhyming last lines. The last word in your line must rhyme with the last word in the given line.

1. A fancy name for TV is video,
2. My favorite pastime is the crossword puzzle,
3. I come from the banks of the Mississippi,
4. Our American rights will be inalienable forever,
5. Wrestling has always been a big hit on TV,
6. A lot of guys on TV are mighty suave,

You’ll find a list of prizes in the column at the right. And be sure to read the rules before sending in your entry.

A lesson in the fine art of the barbecue by Jack Bailey, your Queen for a Day emcee

1. First—the costume: What's a chef without an apron? Besides, his wife gave it to him so he had better wear it!

2. To build the fire: Douse kindling well with gasoline, throw in a match, and pray that the party does not end right there.

3. Breathes there a man with soul so dead who doesn't try to carry all the equipment in one unmanageable load?

4. Time out while the chef checks the cook book. Jack never can remember—does salt keep the flavor in or let it out?

Jack Bailey is heard on Queen for a Day, M-F, 11:30 A.M. EDT, MBS, sponsored by Old Gold and Kraft Foods; on Comedy of Errors, Sat., 7:30 P.M. EDT, MBS.
5. Like a finicky old maid trying to put a worm on a fish hook, the master attempts to make the spit and steak meet.

6. Somehow wife, Carol, remains unimpressed with Jack's lecture. Demonstration ends with slightly burnt finger.

7. Lovingly, chef Bailey prepares to carve. Hmm—must be a dull knife. Doesn't anybody sharpen these things?

8. A little well done, but wonderful flavor. Oops! Oh well—the dentist said I should have had that tooth pulled anyhow.

9. Certainly it's not tough. You simply can't get into the spirit of things if you use a knife and fork on a good steak.

10. What a feast! Just can't eat another mouthful. Come here Chi-Chi! Leave it to a dog to know a fine piece of meat.
Sometimes a real life story parallels the most exciting fiction on television or radio, and in many ways exceeds it in drama, sentiment, courage and humor. Such is the story of Susan Peters, young motion picture actress who was paralyzed from the waist down as the result of a hunting accident in January 1945, and who is now giving a glowing performance five times a week in the daytime serial drama, Miss Susan.

In a Philadelphia television studio the real life Susan sits in a wheelchair and portrays the fictional Miss Susan Martin, a youthful lawyer who had been crippled seven years before in an automobile accident in which her parents were killed.

That much of the script, of course, had to be planned. It was obvious that the girl Susan Peters played would have to be in a wheelchair, because Susan is. But the show’s writer had no idea when it was decided to make Susan Martin a lawyer that the real Susan was planning to take a law course. Planning it so definitely that “I’m saving my money like mad so I can go to school and I’m already studying by myself,” she tells you.

Her interest in law began when she helped another paraplegic prepare for his legal examinations and then took an aptitude test herself. “I got a rating of 97, and was told by the examiner, ‘You’re in the wrong business. You have the mind of a lawyer and business woman.’ I hope some day to be both,” she adds.

Successfully playing Miss Susan would appear to be the right business for Susan Peters right now if the fan mail is any indication. And “right now” is the only time that matters, in her philosophy. “I live each day as it comes,” she says, and as her gray eyes look straight into yours you know these aren’t empty words. “I think I always did, even before my accident. I learned that from my grandmother, a Frenchwoman of such strength of character and originality of mind that

How to be a hostess

Mrs. Roosevelt was Dorothy's idea of a perfect guest. "She found each person she talked to stimulating. She was poised before the cameras, and she didn't feel that she had to arrive fashionably late—in fact, she was a half hour early!"

When someone compliments you, don't apologize," says Dorothy. "You insult your guest's taste when you point out something that's wrong in face of a sincere compliment." Dorothy's work on the loom is toward a huge hooked rug.

Little more than three years ago I found myself in front of a television camera for the first time, introducing Joan Blondell to an audience of hundreds of you critical viewers. Suddenly my knees turned to jelly, as I thought, "Dorothy, your manners are showing." Hardly had the camera been capped on that initial program than the telephone rang and a polite but puzzled woman was proving my worst fears were justified.

"Why didn't you show your guest to the door when you said goodbye?" she inquired. Ashamed of the fact that in working out the program I hadn't thought about the rudeness of such an omission, I stuttered through an excuse, mentally making a note that this would never again happen on my program.

The next day, I followed my listener's advice and the results were (Continued on page 74)
Vanity Fair's Dorothy Doan finds that being a good and gracious hostess is easily accomplished. Her four rules can add up to happy guests for anyone.

Dorothy Doan daily invites from two to five famous persons into her living room, located at CBS where Vanity Fair is telecast Mon., Wed. and Fri. at 2:45 P.M. EDT. Dorothy's own graciousness is more than enough endorsement for her advice.

When your husband's boss comes to dinner," says Dorothy, "do invite people whom you know he'll find interesting." Dorothy finds the rules she follows on TV are equally applicable to home. Husband Richard is a TV executive.

Sally Victor, above left, brought along some of her millinery creations to be modeled on the day that she was a guest on Vanity Fair. Dorothy's variety in guests is infinite—she's had everyone from Dali to Dewey appearing on her program.

Ellen’s love and courage are sorely tested in this episode from the life of

Young Widder Brown

Not long ago, at a time when Ellen Brown’s engagement to Dr. Anthony Loring had been broken as the result of a misunderstanding, Horace Steele, a wealthy widower, came to Simpsonville to live. With him he brought his daughter Jacqueline. And with him, too, he brought trouble and anguish for Ellen and Anthony. The pictures on these pages tell the story of that episode in the life of Young Widder Brown.

In these pictures, as on the air, the cast of Young Widder Brown: Ellen Brown, Florence Freeman, Anthony Loring, Ned Wever, Horace Steele, Horace Braham, Jacqueline Steele, Elaine Rost, Lita Haddon, Sarah Burton, Ralph Jordan, Lauren Gilbert

Conceived and produced by Frank and Anne Hummert, Young Widder Brown is heard Mon.-Fri. at 4:30 P.M. EDT over NBC stations; sponsored by Bayer Aspirin and Phillips’ Milk of Magnesia.

Unaware of the tragedy which newcomer Horace Steele will soon bring into their lives, Ellen Brown and Dr. Anthony Loring welcome the rich widower to Simpsonville, wish Steele and his daughter Jacqueline good luck and happiness in their newly chosen home.
Unrest begins when Horace falls in love with Ellen. No longer engaged to Ellen, Anthony resents Steele, wonders if Ellen returns his love.

New York socialite Lita Haddon calls on Ellen, warns that she is going to marry Steele—Ellen's friendship with him must stop or there'll be trouble!

Lita's jealousy prompting him, Horace comes to ask Ellen to marry him. Anthony, sensing the reason for the visit, leaves with a heavy heart.

A little later Anthony is called to Steele's home—and finds him dead! Lita Haddon accuses Anthony of murdering Steele in a jealous rage.

Ellen comforts Steele's daughter but her thoughts are with Anthony, who has been arrested and faces trial for murder. Ellen loves him, will stand by him.

Talking to D.A. Ralph Jordan they know that together they can brave this test of courage, confident that at the end Anthony will be cleared!

price tags! So—the line forms on the left for mid-summer cottons to wear now and into fall, dark calico prints equally smart in town or country, doubly smart because they have that extra Paris something! In the color picture Elaine Rost, who's heard on Aunt Jenny, models a Dior adaptation. It's a one-piece dress with a flattering U-neckline, chicken-leg sleeve, and double-breasted with large, important bone buttons. The skirt, softly full; the hip pockets, smartly cuffed. There's a self belt but we—and you could, too—have added a black patent one. Color combinations are black with blue, red or green print. Sizes: 10-18.
And price? A mere $12.95! On this page Elaine models a Balenciaga adaptation. There's up-to-the-minute news in its brief jacket with all the flattery of a cape and the practicality of a tiny wrap. Under it, a wonderfully draped bodice—strapless, boned at the sides—is truly figure flattering, and the skirt is so gracefully full! In black, green or brown print, sizes 10-18, priced at $14.95. Both dresses by Gracette, at stores on page 83.
Pretty complements for either dress: complexion-flattering pearls by Richelieu, brief gloves, black or white as you choose, by Grandoe.

Aunt Jenny is heard Monday through Friday, 12:15 P.M. EDT, over CBS stations, sponsored by Lever Bros' Spry.
WE ALWAYS serve cream with peaches. Heavy, cold and rich. It can be whipped, frozen or just plain. But the fruity, sharp-sweet flavor of peaches needs this rich touch. My family is particularly pleased when I whip cream just thick enough so that it pours slowly from the pitcher. Try this on a bowl of peaches, sliced and sweetened, and garnish with blueberries.

MOCK PEACH MELBA
(Makes 6 servings)

- 3 fresh peaches
- 1/2 cup heavy cream, chilled
- 1 cup water
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 6 slices plain cake

Peel peaches, cut in half; remove pits and turn in lemon juice to prevent darkening. Combine water and sugar. Stir over low heat until sugar is dissolved. Bring to a boil. Add peaches, cover and simmer only until peaches are tender. Remove peaches from syrup. Allow to cool. Combine chilled heavy cream with confectioners’ sugar. Beat until stiff enough to hold its shape. Use a pastry tube with a rosette tip to make mounds of whipped cream, or shape with two teaspoons. Drop onto freezing tray. Place tray in freezing compartment of refrigerator. Chill until firm. Cut cake slices into 2 1/2 inch rounds. Place in serving dish. Rest a peach half on each piece of cake. Just before serving place a whipped cream mound in the center of each peach. Pour on raspberry melba sauce.

RASPBERRY MELBA SAUCE
(Makes 1 cup sauce)

- 1 teaspoon cornstarch
- 1/8 cup brown sugar
- 1/2 cup lemon juice
- 1/4 cup water
- 3 tablespoons butter
- 3 tablespoons flour
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 3 tablespoons cookie crumbs
- 1/2 teaspoon nutmeg
- 1/4 cup water
- 1/2 cup fresh raspberries, sieved

Combine cornstarch, sugar, flour, cinnamon and lemon juice. In saucepan; mix. Cook, stirring constantly, over low heat until mixture is thick, about 5 minutes. Pour through sieve to remove seeds. Cool.

DEEP DISH PEACH PIE
(Makes about 6 servings)

- 1/2 cup sugar
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon nutmeg
- 1/2 cup lemon juice
- 1/4 cup brown sugar
- 6-8 fresh peaches, peeled and sliced
- 2 tablespoons butter
- 2 teaspoons lemon juice

Combine sugar, flour, cinnamon and lemon juice. Sprinkle half of mixture into shallow baking dish. Add sliced peaches. Sprinkle remaining flour mixture over peaches. Dot top with butter. Cover dish with baking sheet. Bake in a hot oven (400°F) 25 minutes. Cool before serving, cover with baked pastry wedges.

(Makes 6 servings)

- 1/2 cup brown sugar
- 3 tablespoons butter
- 3/4 cup heavy cream, chilled
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon nutmeg
- 1 1/2 cups fine bread crumbs or graham cracker crumbs
- 1 tbs. lemon juice
- 1/4 cup water
- 4 fresh peaches, peeled and sliced

Combine sugar, salt, nutmeg, lemon juice and water. Mix butter with crumbs. Grease 6 custard cups lightly with butter. Fill with alternate layers of crumbs, peaches and sugar mixture. Top with crumbs. Bake in 375°F. oven 25 minutes.

VERY PEACHY!

RADIO TELEVISION MIRROR FOR BETTER LIVING
Pretty Pat Crowley finds that playing teen-aged Judy is not really acting at all—she just has to be herself for Saturday's date with the TV camera.

Flopit, who brings acting Crowleys up to three, likes to be in on things, especially Pat's phone calls. He's his fluffy Maltese self in "Seventeen," the B'way musical in which Pat's sister Ann stars.

Pat memorizes scripts rapidly and works right up to bedtime. She loves to tease her sister by reading Ann's scripts aloud in a phony British accent. Ann doesn't always think it's funny, but then what can you do with a kid sister?
ANY similarity between A Date With Judy and a day with winsome Pat Crowley is purely possible inasmuch as this pert just-seventeen brunette lives at a lively pace parallel to the impish teenager she portrays on television. Over a double-scooped chocolate chip ice cream Pat will tell you breathlessly—and Judyishly—about her home town of Scranton, Pennsylvania, ballet, white rain slickers, Earl Wrightson’s songs, cashmeres, and the works of Thomas Hardy. Another scoop and she’ll continue on her two favorite topics, the success of her older sister Ann, and her unbounded delight in winning this starring role in ABC-TV’s sprightly dramatic series.

Actually, it was sister Ann who led the Crowley caravan to New York and thus made Pat’s career possible. Ann, at fifteen, nabbed the ingenue lead in “Oklahoma!” Mrs. Crowley followed to be with her and brought along eleven-year-old Pat who found the big city quite unappealing until she began juvenile modeling and was enrolled in Professional Children’s School. She idolized her sister’s stage work, and her greatest pleasure was her walk-on part in the musical “Carousel” in which Ann was featured.

Producers took notice and soon were making calls to the Crowley home for both Ann and Pat. Gaining dramatic experience touring in “Philadelphia Story,” Pat returned to play on Broadway and now TV.

A Date With Judy is tele-cast Saturdays, 11:30 A.M. EDT on ABC-TV. Sponsored by McKesson & Robbins, Inc.

Pat considers blue jeans the world’s greatest garment, but she’s not averse to the pretty clothes Mrs. Crowley turns out.

Pat’s early love was ballet and she still practices it about the house. Bric-a-brac damage, say the Crowleys, is slight.

Piano practice for Ann must end when Kukla, Fran and Ollie begin, but she’s enough of a TV fan not to mind. Ann’s career inspired Pat’s; both are viewed with quiet pride by Mr. and Mrs. Crowley.

... the cock-eyed carnival...
... the million dollar midway...
the concrete crater of pandemonia.
Times Square, where something is always happening, and when it does, I'm the boy who's got to know it first...
because when I know it, you know it... you read my column... you see it on your ABC-TV screen. You'll find action is my by-line... such as the saga of Big Joe, the man who came back.

I Cover Times Square: Alternate Sat., 12:30 P.M. EDT, ABC-TV: sponsored by Air-Wick.

1. Tips move fast along the Main Stem, and when Big Joe got out of jail sooner than anyone expected and immediately visited the artillery department of a pawnshop, I had it in the column but quick.

2. At the swank Satyr Club manager Mike Dato clutched the column with a chewed manicure. Mike had put the finger on Big Joe, then taken over Joe's rackets, I advised him not to start any continued stories.

3. Before the trigger work started, I needed Big Joe's story. His daughter turned on the tears and refused to believe Joe was in danger from his old friend Mike. That left just one source of information.
4. Union Square specializes in free speech, but Times Square talk comes just in shades of green. A ten spot eased the tonsils of Mousie to confirm Mike's boys were looking for Big Joe. Mousie spilled they also knew where Joe's daughter was.

5. When the Pulitzer committee makes an award for the hundred yard dash, I'll dust off the mantel. I skidded back to the girl's apartment just in time to shove her out onto the window ledge before some of Mike's hoods broke in to grab her for live bait.

6. I got her in a cab then zoomed back to the Satyr in time to see Big Joe saunter right into Dato's office to brand him a double-crosser in front of his trigger men. He added "Gutless heel" and spun contemptuously away. Dato gunned him in the back.

7. I caught Joe as he fell. Mike sent his boys for the car; Joe slipped his gun to me. Flashing it, I backed Dato to the wall and dialed homicide. I told Big Joe, dying, that this murder rap on Dato squared his old frame-up, but it was the hard way.

8. Joe's last words were "Not so hard, Johnny. Y'see, I got my parole because my heart went bad. I only had a month to live." Big Joe paid off in spades—with a heart. A big story. They're all big stories on my beat because...I Cover Times Square.
Two girls named Peggy are the two girls named Smith: Peggy French of Broadway, and Peggy Ann Garner, a Hollywood actress since she was four. Assembled Smith cast, left: George Petrie, Reedy Talton, Peggy F., Peggy Ann, Richard Hayes.

Two girls named the "Sleepies," for noontime viewing for you means the dawn's early light for them.

Ups and downs of big city living for small town girls make up the antics on Smith. Joseph Buloff, here with Peggy Ann and Richard, plays neighbor Mr. Basmany, the jovial mountebank whose well-meaning advice often backfires.
PRODUCING a major dramatic show at midday is a new and successful concept in TV, but it involves a pace that would stop a clock. The after-hours marathon for Two Girls Named Smith is just beginning at the time most TV viewers are tucking their picture tube to bed. On Friday evening at 10:30 the stage hand squad descends upon Studio #4 to strike the set from the preceding Pulitzer Prize Playhouse. By midnight the stage is bare, and they start setting scenery for “Smith.” Aptly enough, the streets are still dark at 3 A.M. when Dave Adler, the lighting man cometh, and it’s still blackout when the camera crew yawn in. The sound technicians arrive even before the first milk bottle clinks outside on 66th Street. Director Charles Dubin checks in at 4:10 when his fellow directors are just leaving Lindy’s for bed. Working regulations are scrupulously observed, and at 6:30 the technicians knock off for, you should pardon the indigestion, lunch. The cast, with lines memorized during the week, are in place by 7:30, and before you have sipped your second cup of breakfast coffee, final rehearsals are in full swing. And the “Sleepies” do a wide-awake job.

These are hours to paralyze seasoned trouper, but staff and stars Peggy Ann Garner and Peggy French take it right in stride, aided and abetted by untold gallons of coffee.

SATURDAY VIEWING
UNTIL THEY read this, the cast of a recent drama on The Faith Baldwin Theatre of Romance won't know that their script girl was a RADIO TELEVISION MIRROR writer getting first-hand knowledge of how this polished half-hour dramatic program gets on TV every other Saturday. Actual camera rehearsals begin on a Friday afternoon but by Thursday, the cast is supposed to be letter-perfect in their lines. This is the day the script girl does her hardest work. Actors, concentrating on the role itself and deprived of script, frequently blow their lines, and it becomes the script girl's job to decide whether to sing out the forgotten words or to hold her tongue and let the actor reach for them. Maybe he hasn't forgotten but is timing his speech to the emotion he is trying to put across, or maybe he prefers to remember by himself and thus impress the elusive line on his consciousness. Before the day was over, the script girl had developed a kind of sixth sense about these things. On Saturday morning, telecast day, the script girl calls the star and makes certain he'll be on the set by 8:30 A.M. He answers sleepily at 7 and is in the studio by 8:15, fortifying himself with black coffee. Costumes and accessories have to be checked, too. A fabulous fur cape arrives for one of the girls to wear in a restaurant scene. A negligé has to be hurried to the cleaner because there's a spot on it the camera might pick up. The sound effects man makes ready such details as the chimes of a clock or the sound of a popping champagne cork. In the last flurry of directions, a voice comes over the loudspeaker, calling "two minutes," then "one," then "thirty seconds."

The real star of the show, the woman whose stories are dramatized bi-weekly, sits at a desk and introduces her characters to the TV audience. Her name, of course, is Faith Baldwin, well known to readers of light romance as the author of fifty-five novels and innumerable short stories. Miss Baldwin, the mother of four children, including twenty-three-year-old twins, lives in an enormous Connecticut farmhouse whose name derives from her own career—Fable Farm.

Attractive leads on an early T of R story were Bill Eythe and Betsy Von Furstenburg. Authoress Baldwin gives prologue and epilogue on each presentation.
How would you like to make a saxophone out of a soda straw? It's easy, and it'll only take a couple of minutes. But first let me tell you what makes it work. Every sound you hear comes from something vibrating—that is, moving rapidly back and forth. For instance, when you hear the buzzing of a bee you're actually hearing the vibrations that are made in the air when the bee flaps his wings. You might wonder why you can't make a sound the same way, simply by flapping your arms up and down. The only reason you can't is because you can't flap your arms fast enough. You'd have to beat your arms up and down about fifty times a second before you could make a sound. And a bee's wings move much faster than that. To take another example, middle "C" on the piano is the sound made by the vibration of a string inside the piano. It's been tightened so it vibrates exactly 256 times a second when it's struck by the hammer attached to the key. If the string were tightened more, so it vibrated faster, the note would be higher.

All other musical instruments—or any other sounds you hear—work the same way. Take a saxophone. You blow on the reed which is fastened to a mouthpiece on the saxophone. This reed starts the air in the saxophone vibrating and you make different notes by pressing
Mary Dell Martin's engagement to William E. Gill (now in the Army) is exciting news to her many friends in Michigan and Florida. A beautiful diamond shines on Mary's finger—stars shine in her eyes. At her wedding in Grace Episcopal Church, four bridesmaids will walk down the aisle with Mary—a gloriously happy bride.

Mary's sunny hair falls in soft waves to her shoulders. Her wonderful complexion has a satiny smoothness. A charming smile twinkles in her eyes, about her lips. Her face gives out a bright picture of her captivating Inner Self. You see Mary and you know you will like her very much.

Mary Dell Martin’s Ring

A wonderfully sure, confident feeling comes to you when you know you are looking your sweetest and prettiest.

Mary thinks every girl’s most important beauty asset is sparkling-clean, soft skin. “I wouldn’t miss my nightly cream-cleansings with Pond’s Cold Cream,” she says. “It’s simply tops for keeping my skin smooth and soft.”

Cream-cleansing with Pond’s can help your skin, too—it’s beautifully thorough and never drying. Every night (and for day cleansings) cream your face with Pond’s as Mary does. This is the way:

Hot Stimulation—a good hot water splashing.

Cream Cleanse—swirl Pond’s Cold Cream over face and throat to soften dirt and make-up, sweep them from pore openings. Tissue off.

Cream Rinse—more Pond’s to rinse off last traces of dirt, leave skin immaculate. Tissue off.

Cold Stimulation—a tonic cold water splash.

Now—doesn’t your mirror say happy things about your face? It’s so alive, rosy! It’s not vanity to help your face look lovely. When you look your nicest, a bright confidence flashes out from the real you within—wins others to you on sight!

Start now to help your face show a lovelier You!
PHIL'S FAMILY

(Continued from page 34) exterior architecture is Mediterranean; there are grilled iron gates and iron railings and wrought iron doors onto a tiled corridor which, dividing like a cool, dark stream, flows both to the north entrance of the house, and to the drawing room (it used to be; it's now a chummy living room) at the extreme south end of the house.

Once the visitor has entered the house, it is obvious to even the most untrained eye that the interior decorating scheme adopted by The Regans is pure Happy Family. Every room is filled with family mementos; every room is brightened by objects about which there is family history. Take the den, for instance—the room in which you would be ushered by Phil the moment you arrived.

Probably Phil would be wearing his favorite leisure output: a pair of brown loafers, a pair of brown gabardine slacks, and a bright red shirt. "How about this shirt?" he would observe, laughing. "If anybody had asked me about my willingness to wear a red shirt, I would have said, 'Not unless I was out of my head.' However, Jo bought this for me in Palm Springs and I certainly enjoy it. It gives me a big lift."

The den is compact, probably the smallest room in the house, but it is obviously used, lived in, enjoyed. There is a fireplace in which a fire crackles every morning and evening, and above the mantel are two large framed pictures. One contains Phil's engraved invitation to attend the inauguration of President Roosevelt in 1933, and it is flanked by portraits of Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Garner; the second contains Phil's invitation to the 1945 inauguration, flanked by portraits of Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Truman.

To the left of the fireplace is Phil's gun collection. Because Phil served with New York's 30th Ranger Battalion, he possesses much as been presented in firearms, particularly any weapon having a history. He likes to tell the story of the most interesting guns. For instance, there is a specimen with wooden stock and short barrel which was manufactured by a criminal who ingeniously sawed a .22 rifle down to revolver size. Purpose: to make use of loophole in New York law about what constituted a murder weapon. The result was that the criminal was brought to justice and the leaky law mended.

In this trophy case of the Regans there is also a derringer, probably owned by a Mississippi River-boat gambler. There are guns from France and Italy. There is a lethal fountain pen which seems entirely innocent when worn conventionally in a gentleman's coat pocket. It fires a .22 slug and is fatal at close quarters.

Also occupying a conspicuous position in the case with the gun collection is a Pepsi-cola bottle filled with a daily-laid egg-looking fluid. The appearance is deceptive. The bottle contains crude oil, that lovely stuff which makes Texas the home of the billionaire. Several years ago, a friend of Phil's asked him if he would care to invest some of his hard-earned show business salary in oil. Being an Irishman, Phil kissed a short cock and signed a check.

As a direct result of this action, a series of wells were spudded in and Phil became one of the stockholders in a highly profitable oil development. Phil regards this with the same amount of good things in his life. He says quite simply, "God has been very good to us." And so, every time a member of the family happens to glance into the gun cabinet, he or she is reminded of the bounty of earth and the goodness of God.

On the east wall of the den there are three large photographs of three beautiful women: Joan Crawford, Irene Dunne, and Ruby Keeler. The pictures are at least ten, perhaps fifteen, years old. Phil made a picture with each of the actresses and cherishes each as a friend.

The west wall of the den is as crowded with souvenirs as the walls of the grandstand at the Brown Derby are. There is a 1938 shot of Phil with two senators: Truman of Missouri and Barkley of Kentucky. Beside it is another candid, taken in 1948, showing Phil standing between President Truman and Vice President Barkley.

There is a picture of Phil greeting President Truman after the opening of the 1949 inauguration, singing "The Star-Spangled Banner" while half a million people crowded frothy Pennsylvania Avenue and listened in patriotic awe.

In the northwest corner of the den there is a small desk at which Josephine Regan does her writing and keeps her accounts. One of Jo's notable accomplishments is a slender volume entitled "A Child's Magic Key to Heaven" and is a child's version of the ten commandments.

Originally, Jo formulated this guide for her own grandchildren: Phil Regan, Jr. (called "Bud" in the family), Joseph, Marilyn, and Joann. All four are now grown. Joe is married and has three youngsters. This array of grandchildren made Phil Regan a grandfather at the sprightly age of thirty-seven.

Bud and his wife, Loanne, were married on February 13, 1951, in Palm Springs. Joan and Marilyn live at home, of course; Joe and his family have a house only a short distance from the family home; Bud and Loanne are living nearby.

The result of this integrated family situation is that the parental door bangs all day and half the night with the goings and comings of the clan. Joe never knows when a luncheon will be served for two or twelve.

Naturally, this sort of thing takes planning. Joe bakes a ham once a week, then puts it in the deep freeze. Often she also roasts a leg of lamb and a rolled roast of beef. For luncheon, these can be sliced in amounts extensive enough to serve all guests, and later, when unexpected, for dinner, they can be heated and served as necessary. At all times, Jo likes to serve a salad such as shredded cabbage, apples, and pineapple (all ingredients which can be kept on hand ready to stretch a menu) and she keeps ready-to-bake rolls in the refrigerator, and corn bread mix in the cupboard, so that any sort of unexpected can be thrown together in a fruit compote or strawberry shortcake.

All of Jo's planning is done at the desk in the den, where she also keeps her household accounts, and does her creative writing. The desk is also famous for the fact that it was here where one of the great decisions of the Regan family was made.

While Phil was in New York, where he had been highly successful in show business, and try his luck via screen test in Hollywood, he and Jo discussed the move far, far into the night. First, they analyzed the family bank account: four hundred dollars. Then they discussed Phil's need (as he had been told) for an ex- tinasive wardrobe. He would have to buy white tie and tails, black tie and dinner jacket; riding clothes, tennis flannels, several standard business suits.

Jo made a neat list. She arrived at an estimated total. She and Phil agreed on a plan: they would borrow enough to buy the wardrobe, and they would split the bank account. Phil would take two hundred dollars and assault Hollywood. Jo would keep two hundred dollars and maintain the family in good condition until Phil could send for them.

As everyone knows, Phil was an immediate click. He puts it this way, "All I can say is that God was very good to us."

There is one amusing highlight on those Hesitant Days. When Phil signed his contract, he did so knowing that there was a clause in it which forbade him to marry. He appended his signature with a clear conscience. He had no intention of marrying; he was already set for all time and eternity. He was already the father of four children.

When press agents felt it would be wise to conceal this fact, but Phil made no real secret of it and all of his friends knew the truth. Gradually word leaked out, so one enterprising newspaper man approached Phil: "I hear that you're married and have five children. How about it?" "It isn't true," explained Phil. "I have only four."

The newspaper man laughed, fully satisfied with this denial. "Isn't it a kick—the way rumors get started?" he observed. He printed a denial of Phil's marriage and fatherhood, missing the honesty of Phil's statement entirely.

In the northwest corner of the den, the lower floor of the Regan house consists of a comfortable living room (in which choice specimens of Phil's Toby Mug collection are displayed), an airy solarium, a banquet hall of a dining room, the usual butter's pantry and farm-house kitchen. Also, off the main corridor, there is a music room.

In this chapel there is room for only a small bookcase, an old, well-worn but totally comfortable armchair, and a prayer bench. Around the walls are the fourteen stations of the cross, and against the east side of the room there is a modest altar. Jo spends many hours in this restful sanctuary reading and meditating.

Next to the den in usefulness, the most lived-in room is the solarium with its split bimboo chairs, lounges, and chaises longue, with its reed screens, and its bamboo milk bar. Phil and the boys built the bar and their stories of its construction are hilarious. As you may not know, bamboo must be worked while wet. However, it dries rapidly with the result that the deliberate workman finds himself half-done and stymied by a length of dry timber.

Phil soaked the bamboo in the bathtub in the service porch bathroom, then trailed it through the kitchen, and dining-room before using it in the sun porch. Placing the bamboo footrail was the final, trickiest stunt; just as Phil had it fitted into three of the rests extending from the semi-circular face of the bar, the bamboo rebelled, tossing Phil as if he had been riding a broncho. The boys laughed until they cried, and Phil hasn't yet lived down his rough-riding carpentry.

There is a great deal of laughter in the Regan house, a great deal of conversation, and much high planning. There is that rare and wonderful thing, a sense of dedication. Nowadays, no one can talk to Phil for long without getting onto the subject of his radio program and what he hopes to accomplish.

He was semi-retired until last spring when Mr. Alfred Steele, president of the Pepsi-cola Company, and a long-time friend of Phil's, accompanied Phil to an Army base where Phil had agreed to sing. This trip persuaded both men that, once again, this country is in a shooting war of desperate proportions. The lethargy of the country has astonished Phil. Millions of Americans seem oblivious to the fact that there are many government hospitals to which men are brought direct from Korea, blood still fresh on their bandages.

Phil worked with Roy Topper, a gifted writer and ex-newspaperman whose beat was Chicago, to perfect a format for the show. Roughly it is this: in advance of Phil's scheduled show, the men at the base to be visited select a man to star on Phil's program. This man is given one hundred dollars in cash, plus a five hundred dollar war bond. In some cases, this recognition will eventually pave the way to a career.

Phil has been astonished at the swift appreciation of the program evinced from bases throughout America. After hearing the first few shows, boosters began to send telegrams. A group in one camp wired, “If you think that man on your Sunday show was a singer, just come up here and listen to our boy.” An Air Force base announced, “No Marine ever sang as good, as high, or as loud as a mechanic we have; he's practiced against a B-29 warming up.”

AFTER Phil has completed his show at a base, he goes to the nearest hospital and walks through the wards, chatting with the men. In many cases he is the first American civilian with whom they have come in contact since being shipped overseas; Phil tries to bring them word of the appreciation extended by all freedom-loving people.

And so that is how the Regans will be living when you read this; they will be traveling by plane, train, and car over fifty thousand miles and forty-eight states. When that mission is accomplished they will return to Pasadena to plan other helpful excursions for groups of people in need.

Because the Regans are grateful to God, and they intend to show that gratitude.
LIVE EACH DAY

(Continued from page 46) I have never met quite her equal. Ma Mere, as we called her, never postponed anything pleasant or anything difficult. If the day was bright and sunny she would put everything aside to take me on some jaunt she suddenly decided would please me. If she had something hard to face she never put it off in the hope it would get any easier. When she didn't like the way things were, she did her best to change them, and refused to worry. 'Tomorrow,' she would say, 'will take care of itself."

There's another parallel in the story of Susan Peters and Susan Martin besides their interest in law. On television, Susan is extremely fond of her brother Sam's young stepson, who is played by nine-year-old Ralph Robertson. In real life, Susan adores five-year-old Timothy Richard whom she and her ex-husband Richard Quine adopted a year after she was hurt. Timmy was ten days old.

With Timmy, it was quite a household that Susan transferred to Philadelphia from her pretty house in the San Fernando Valley section of Hollywood. It includes her nurse, Mrs. Stearn, who has been with her since she got Timmy, and the couple who act as her chauffeur and cook. They all live in a rented furnished house that makes them more than a little homesick for their own well-equipped place in California. Susan had been offered a choice of doing her show from Chicago or Philadelphia because of its nearness to New York and the fact that friends could occasionally come down for a weekend. Little did she know then what a fifteen-minute five-day-a-week drama would mean in time and energy consumed, and that friends would have to be gently asked to "hit the road," as she puts it, before too late on Sundays, so that their hostess could memorize next day's script.

Susan is up and dressed at 8:30 to have breakfast with Timmy before he goes off to the Oak Lane Country Day School. By 10:30 she's on the set, going through the first run-through of that day's episode in the life of Miss Susan Martin. There's a break during the morning for the commercial run-through, but Susan stays on the set and watches everything. She will move her chair off to one corner and read dialogue with Natalie Priest, who plays her companion and confidante, Daisy; or with Don Hamner, who plays her brother Sam. She's a perfectionist, and wherever there's a bit of dialogue or business that needs some extra work she's eager to keep at it. She's vitally interested in everybody's share in this miracle of getting a television show on the air.

At noon the run-throughs commence again, continuing with brief rest periods until 2:00 when every line has been polished and every scene timed. Dress rehearsal is from 2:05 to 2:20. Then make-up. At 3:00 Miss Susan goes on the air, at 3:15 the day's story is finished—and at 4:00 rehearsals for the next day begin.

At 6:00 Susan gets a thirty-five minute cooling drive home through beautiful Fairmount Park, along the quiet Schuylkill River (twenty-five minutes, if Susan herself takes the wheel, because she likes to move along at the full legal rate of speed, and she handles her manually operated car with precision and assurance).

Timmy is waiting for her at home, eager to have her share his favorite Western on television. Sometimes he lures her out in the yard for a fast game of ball—the way which Susan can't keep Susan from being a first-class catcher—before she even has time to take off her make-up. After dinner the inevitable script comes out, to be memorized for next day's rehearsals.

Saturday is Timmy's own day. They go fishing. They go to the circus or a carnival. They play baseball. Sometimes the gang from the studio asks Susan to umpire their games and Timmy helps along. They're trying to get permission to use the Police Gun Range so Susan can get in some target practice, for in spite of the fact that she shot herself accidentally while out hunting, Susan has no complex about guns or shooting and no one has to be careful about mentioning either in her presence. Quite the contrary—she still thinks it's great sport.

Keeping up with Timmy is an important part of Susan's job, because of his alert inquiring mind and his capacity for getting into mischief.

The gang at the studio hands Susan its

YOU Can Have A Lovelier Complexion in 14 Days with Palmolive Soap, Doctors Prove!

NOT JUST A PROMISE . . .
but actual proof from 36 leading skin specialists that Palmolive Soap facials can bring new complexion beauty to 2 out of 3 women

Never before these tests has there been proof of such sensational beauty results! Yes, scientific tests on 1834 women—supervised by 36 leading skin specialists—proved conclusively that in 14 days regular facials with Palmolive Soap—using nothing but Palmolive—bring lovelier complexions to 2 out of 3 women.

Here's the easy method:
1. Wash your face three times daily with Palmolive Soap—each time massaging its beautifying lather onto your skin for sixty seconds.
2. Now rinse and dry—that's all.

Remarkable results were proved on women of all ages, with all types of skin. Proof that Palmolive facials really work to bring you a lovelier complexion! Start your Palmolive facials tonight.

DOCTORS PROVE PALMOLIVE'S BEAUTY RESULTS!
Charlie Wild was dictating a little essay on murder the day Police Sergeant Keough came into his office saying he'd been suspended from duty on a frame-up. Keough claimed he'd caught the assailant of a lady in distress only to find him badly beaten and without the purse the lady said he'd stolen. She disappeared, and at headquarters, Matejka, the assailant, charged Keough beat him. Keough insists he doesn't know Matejka, and Charlie agrees to help him. Meanwhile, in another part of town, Matejka's name means trouble to Jean Bannion and disbarred lawyer Andrew Voelker whose behind-the-scenes help Jean is counting on to free her husband, Carl, from a murder charge. Matejka demands more money for his part in the Keough "frame-up," but Voelker balks.

Keough visits Charlie again, hears the inspector wants to see him. "Let him come and get me," says Keough, who admits that he knows the payroll was never found. Later, Charlie waits outside Voelker's apartment for Jean. Voelker knows Charlie saw Jean leaving Matejka's room, warns her Charlie will want money for keeping quiet. "Pay off Wild and let me take care of you."

On her own, Jean decides to see Matejka and come to an agreement. Charlie, there for reasons of his own, meets a shaken Jean coming out of Matejka's room. Charlie finds him dead. The police suspect Keough, knowing he had it in for Matejka. And Charlie knows it was he who arrested Jean's husband in the payroll-robbery murder—and that the $40,000 payroll was never found.

Jean, fearful that Charlie will tell, agrees to give him the money which, at her husband's advice, she had hidden in an accordion and put in a pawnshop after the robbery. The night before, Keough had suddenly warned Charlie to drop the case. Disregarding him, Charlie meets Jean in the pawnshop. As they are about to retrieve the money-stuffed accordion, an armed man enters the shop.

In the struggle that follows, Charlie wrestles with the gunman, a person known to both him and Jean. Is it Voelker who was merely stringing Jean along until she revealed the hiding place of the money? Or is it Keough who was playing a waiting game until the Majetka "frame-up" spoiled his plans? Solve it yourself, then turn to page 96 for an explanation of "The Air-Tight Frame-up."
A LETTER FROM BILL LAWRENCE

But the crazy part of it all is that I've got nothing to talk about but Army hospitals. I don't even know what branch I'll be in. Or even, if I have any, how hard luck, whether I'll be in the Army by the time you read this. But now I'm Private Bill Lawrence, all right. And frankly, it was a relief to find out the old Army joke about a private having no privacy was true. Without the constant companionship of my Army friends, I'd be feeling pretty low. Even in the ward, reveille is at seven and lights out at ten. It wouldn't be much fun if you had to spend those fifteen hours alone.

Most of the boys I've met are regular. Naturally, the most popular GI's are the men who are cheerful. I think first of a buddy, Joe Jura of Pennsylvania, who once was in a sick bed next to me and even now comes back to give the boys some laughs. Of course, we make our own occasionally. If you hear a shrieke from the showers, you can bet someone has hidden the man's clothes. But we spend most of the day trying to sleep away the germs and fill in odd hours with cards, reading, listening to the radio and watching television in our ward. Then, of course, there are gab sessions. And what do men talk about? You guessed it—women!

Surprisingly, they don't talk about the glamour-lovelies. The boys talk about their girls back home and, believe me, they are really proud of them. Lana Turner and Betty Grable may be nice to watch on a screen, but when it comes to serious interest it's the homespun girl who heads the list. And this is where I'm going to offer some advice.

Most of the boys like to hear from home about two or three times a week. When they don't hear that often, they begin to feel a lot more sick than any germ could make them. If you could see a soldier drop everything when he gets a letter from home, reread it a couple of times, you'd understand why a letter is so important.

A cheerful letter really lifts up a GI's spirits. After all, the Army isn't exactly a picnic and whimpering about civilian hardships doesn't set right. Not that a man doesn't want to share the responsibility of any bad news. It makes him feel good to be asked to help with decisions and give some advice. So don't get me wrong when I say letters should be just cheerful. There's a lot of difference between complaining about the price of sirloin and working out a real problem.

What can you write about? It's simple. Just talk about the ordinary, every-day things. He wants to know what his friends are doing, even if it's the same old thing. If they lay some new bricks on Main Street or put a fresh coat of paint on the firehouse, that's news. He wants to know about the books you read and your favorite TV and radio programs for chances are he's seen them, too, and it gives you something in common. If you put a new picture on the wall or buy a new dress, describe it.

Tell him where you got it, why you got it. Send him a picture. He'll relish it all, but more than that he'll feel that he is still part of your personal life. Actually, a man's world is very small and his strongest emotions are tied to home and people he loves. And when you keep him informed, you're telling him that he hasn't really left so far as you're concerned.

In my letters from mother and friends, they tell me about each other. Just simple things. Janette Davis writes about all my old co-workers on the Arthur Godfrey show. Godfrey says, "I'll bet Bill is Captain of the Head," and I write naval officer Arthur, "In the Army, we call it a latrine."

Letters are the next best thing to a personal visit. Fort Dix is about three hours from Manhattan, so my mother gets down to visit me only on Sundays. But in between I have two letters from her and the usual packages. If you're ever doubtful about what to send your soldier, just think of something he can't get in the Army. For example, home-made cookies or candy. Or maybe he goes for something special like toasted almonds or olives or sardines. But you can bet it's not fried chicken he misses most.

In my case, I miss my mother and the card games we had in our apartment with my friends. I miss singing on the show with Arthur and his "big family." I miss a good show and a big mattress and the freedom to go wherever and whenever I choose. And your soldier misses these things, too, but they aren't really the most important.

What he misses most is you. And that goes for Bill Lawrence, too!

HOW TO BE A HOSTESS

A little bitterly I recall one small party given in my honor during a convention a couple of years ago. Eight of us were comfortably settled in the living room after a very nice dinner. The talk was stimulating and informative. Then the hostess announced that since I was new in town and she wanted me to have a really wonderful memory of my visit here—we would all sit down to an old-fashioned poker session. I protested that I didn't play cards, but because she thought I was just being modest she went right ahead and set up the table. I don't know a spade from a heart and after the first round of cards she was relieved when I suggested that I sit out the next few hands. My evening was spent emptying ashtrays and filling glasses. I carried away a memory but not the kind my hostess would relish. The hostess hadn't bothered to know her guests. So rule number two, in my book, is: always plan for your guest's pleasure and forget what you, as the hostess, would prefer to do.

There is one quality which all of us who want to be good hostesses can acquire—the quality of self-confidence, which in my dictionary is almost the same as self-possessed.

Right now, after three years of working with him, those first impressions are still with me only more so. What a wonderful person he is when the going gets hard, as it sometimes will on any show. Never any signs of stage fright.
He’s one of the most reliable performers
I’ve ever come across in years of working with a great many of them. Not only does Gordie keep himself and his part well in hand, but he has a kindly eye out for everyone else on the program. If an actor drops a line, misses a cue, or suffers from momentary forgetfulness, there’s Gordie, smoothing over the rough spot so beautifully that the audience never suspects.

Gordie is really serious about his work. Not that he’s a sourpuss—he believes, there’s no one quicker with a gag, no one more willing to kid. But never during working time. He’s completely—and unaffectedly—sincere about every part he plays, every song he sings. And especially about The Railroad Hour. After all, he says, it’s this show that’s responsible in a large part for putting him in the enviable position he’s enjoying today, and he never forgets that for a minute.
The lack of temperamental displays on Gordie’s part stems, I’m sure, from the fact that the high-strung, hurry-scurry-worry “artisticness” that so many performers call temperament has no part in him.
He is an artist, without any need for impressing the fact on doubters because there aren’t any doubters. He’s relaxed, sure of himself, Gordie is. If he makes a mistake while singing, he knows it and doesn’t try to brush it off lightly or lay the blame on any convenient pair of shoulders.
He’s the first to admit it, because mistakes bother him a lot.

So there’s not a temperamental bone in his oogy. Nor a jealous bone, either—and that’s pretty rare in this business, too. It’s nice to hear the respect in Gordie’s voice when he speaks of the work of others. If he thinks you’re good, he’s thoroughly sold on you—and loyal. For instance, the MacRae’s are a home-loving pair, not given to nightclubbing. But let a performer Gordie knows about, has faith in, open at a local spot and there are Gordon and his pretty Sheila on hand with applause and general moral support.

There’s such an abundance of energy wrapped up in Gordie! He’s the first to start, the last to run down, during rehearsal. He, simply wouldn’t understand what it would be to rest on his laurels.
His excess energy he applies, when he’s not actually working on rehearsal, to vocalizing. You never lose Gordie—you can always tell, by the vocalizing, just where he is at any given moment. And his en-thusiasms are as many as his ability is great. There was the recent Railroad Hour performance of “Madame Butterfly” for instance. The lead, Lt. Pinkerton, is written for tenor—but baritone MacRae car-rried it off with great verve all the same,
and it was terrific!

For my money, the whole MacRae family comes right up in the terrific class, anyway. Sheila, a tearing beauty even in this town where beauty comes by the bushel, is also a wonderful person. It won't be long before Sheila and Gordon celebrate their tenth wedding anniversary, and celebrating with them will be their three delightful children, Meredith Lynn, who's seven, Heather Allison, five and two-year-old William Gordon, called Gar.

Sheila and Gordon met when the Millpond Stock Company, of which Sheila was a member, held tryouts for new actors. Privately surveying the field that was waiting to audition, Sheila spotted Gordon and, she tells me, didn't think much of him. There he was, filling in the waiting time humming and trying out a soft-shoe routine. Obviously he didn't have his mind — Sheila most emphatically did. At the moment—on Higher Things. He didn't take his Art seriously. He was, Sheila decided, a low-brow, and as such she didn't make much headway when he began trying to date her.

I MEANT to be a great star," Sheila says. "All I thought about was the theatre, except," she confesses, "when I thought about myself—and how terribly talented I was! As a matter of fact, I first dated Gordon because he seemed like a good person to fritter away my time while I was trying to recover from the loss of the Great Love of my Life."

Fortunately, Sheila's parents, when she brought Gordie home to meet them, took to him at once. For a while Sheila convinced herself that she only tolerated Gordie for her parents' sake, but pretty soon she forgot all that nonsense and decided that her own sake was a better—and more honest—reason for liking to have Gordie around.

Probably you know the story of Gordie's big break—it's the one they tell of a lot of stars, but in his case it's really true. When the Millpond Stock Company broke up at the end of the summer season, Gordie got a job as an NBC page boy in New York, and he sang and he buzzed around Radio City. And yes, you guessed it—a big-timer heard him, liked his voice, asked him if he wouldn't like to stop paging and take a job with his band. In this case the big-timer was representing Horace Heidt, and, as in any other cases of the sort on record, the page boy said a bit and sign "Why, the salary was the stratospheric sum of fifty dollars a week—even though Gordie hadn't thought much about singing professionally, who wouldn't jump at such an offer?"

It was that very night, after the historic Heidt meeting, that Gordie proposed to Sheila. He said, "Sheila, why don't we go to dinner together and he could tell her her wonderful news. But when they met he led the way, instead of to a restaurant, to a little jewelry shop. There Gordie bought a diamond and put it on Sheila's finger. The smallest one in the shop, and Gordie was months paying for it," Sheila tells you, "but it was all worth it. Sometimes, it is, the most beautiful of jewels to me."

Gordie went to Cleveland with the Heidt orchestra. They wrote every day, and Gordie telephoned long distance whenever he could, but it wasn't enough. Gordon, the cheery one, moped until the Heidts took pity on him—or, maybe, on the rest of the members of the company.

Anyway, Mr. Heidt telephoned Sheila's mother, begged her to allow Sheila to visit with them, promised a careful chaperone for still-teen-aged Sheila. That was in the spring, and everyone knows what spring does to young love. Sheila and Gordie were no different from any other in-love youngsters. It wasn't long before they were hunting a minister. And like Sheila tells about their wedding. Although they were in a strange city, so of course the minister they found was a stranger, he wasn't the kind who marries a pair of young people unless he's sure they know what they're doing, sure that they are really in love.

"He told me," Sheila says, "that no contract is necessary, that if a man and a woman are in love, then they must be married. I thought it over and I realized how important a step this was. I told him how very much in love I was, which seemed to me a complete answer to the question. But it wasn't, and I've never forgotten what he told me then. You have to be more than in love, he told me. You have to be willing to give up every other thing that's important to you, if necessary, to make your marriage succeed. You have to make up your mind that your husband will come first in your thoughts, that you're prepared to serve and cherish him all your life." Sheila must have convinced the wise and kindly old man that this was what marriage meant to her, because Sheila and Gordie were married that day. Nowadays, no one who knows the MacRaes could help but be convinced that this is exactly what marriage still means to Sheila. And to Gordon, too. With them, their marriage comes first.

Sheila is a better rememberer of specific appointments than Gordon is, but he's one of those rare and wonderful men who never forgets an anniversary or a special occasion. He remembers all the little days, the small remind-when occasions, as well as the more obvious birthdays and holidays.

The best important-occasion celebration from the MacRae children's point of view is the one they're allowed at such times as birthdays. Then they attend the Railroad Hour show, and how they love it! And how I enjoy seeing Meredith and Heather, sitting in ladylike decorum in the client's box, with Daddy in wide eyes and undisguised admiration!
Itary, as be to reason they were thoughtful person.

Sometimes good account. And if they don't continue to love him won't say there. And so, he loves them in return. He never brushed aside the crowd outside the back door—the artists' entrance, it's called—at NBC. He stops to talk, to give autographs, to make the youngsters know he's their friend.

In case you've decided by now that Gordon MacRae is just about perfect, let me hasten to correct this. He's not—that would be awfully dull. He has faults, sure, like any normal human being. For instance, there's that forgetfulness of his I mentioned before. I have to keep extra-good track of appointments, because Gordie doesn't. He has to be reminded. Sometimes he's late for rehearsals on account of he's got himself involved in an exciting golf game. But he's never late for a show, and has never missed a show.

I have a special reason for thinking of Gordie—and of Sheila, too, for that matter—as a really kind and thoughtful person. A little while back I was rushed to the hospital with an attack of appendicitis. That was the afternoon of the show, the last one to be recorded before Gordie left for a trip to New York. When I swam out of the ether, minus my appendix, next morning, there was a phone call from Gordie and Sheila, who absolutely refused to leave town until they were sure I was out of danger!

I don't think you'll find it hard to understand why, when people ask me, "Bet, don't you want to quit your job and be a housewife?" I shake my head and answer most positive, "Not for me!"

Sure, I'm happily married—but my husband, Howard Cooley, doesn't stay home to be a housewife, either, and the only reason I can see for staying home would be to be with him. Howard does his job as an NBC engineer—and I'll keep right on doing mine. The Railroad Hour secretary, thanks! What could I find to do at home that would be half so much fun?

"I've really got to reduce!"—how many times have you promised yourself that and then kept putting it off. Delay no longer—let Sylvia of Hollywood tell you how to reduce The Common Sense Way. There is no magic at all about The Common Sense Way to a beautiful figure. But if you follow the suggestions Sylvia of Hollywood has for you in her book No More Allibis you may, perhaps, challenge the beauty of the loveliest movie star!

Sylvia of Hollywood
Names Names
Sylvia of Hollywood has reduced scores of famous stage and screen stars—successfully. In this book Sylvia tells how she helped many of Hollywood's brightest stars with their figure problems. She names names—tells you how she developed this star's legs—how she reduced that star's waistline—how she helped another star to achieve a beautiful youthful figure. Perhaps your own figure problems are identical to those of your favorite screen star.

(Continued from page 39) we've made many wonderful friends with whom we still correspond, although we haven't even met most of them.

I suppose every girl dreams of a big, big wedding, with literally thousands of people on hand. I'm one of the fortunate few who has been able to share the happiness of my life's biggest moment with so many. And it was such a beautiful wedding. The quiet dignity of the wedding chapel where we were married and Groom producers have built as a setting for the program; the warm, pleasant friendliness of John Nelson, the master of ceremonies; and the cordial, sincere attitude of the Rev. Harold J. Quigley, who officiated, all combined to make my wedding a memory which Dick and I shall cherish always.

I think there's something appropriate in our being married on Bride and Groom, with people in many cities in many parts of the country among the viewers. You see, Dick and I come from widely-separated places, Vermont and Texas.

I went to Wheaton and Simmons Colleges, then to M.I.T. Massachusetts Institute of Technology to work as a secretary. Dick came to M.I.T. to do graduate work. He's now working for the Air Force in electronics at M.I.T.

We met at a party given for the M.I.T. laboratory where I work. There were many people there, but I noticed one particularly handsome man surrounded by a crowd of girls. I couldn't help noticing that he was making dates with many of the girls, and I made up my mind he was a wolf.

A few minutes later, someone introduced Dick to me, and he immediately asked me for a dance. He told me he had been asking girls, but I'm beautiful, you know! The price of this new edition is only $1.00 postpaid. Order today while supply is still available.

PAstry
1 cup sifted flour 3 tablespoons cold
1/4 teaspoon salt water, about
1/3 cup shortening
Measure flour and salt into a bowl. Cut in shortening using a pastry blender or 2 knives, until mixture resembles coarse cornmeal. Sprinkle cold water over mixture. Blend lightly with fork until pastry forms a ball, leaving sides of bowl clean.
Roll into circle 1/4 inch thick on lightly floured board. Cut pastry into circle 3/4 inch less in diameter than baking dish used for peaches. Cut pastry into 5 wedge shaped pieces. Prick wedges with fork.
Place wedges on baking sheet. Bake in hot oven (450°F.) about 10 minutes, or until lightly browned. Place pastry over baked peach filling before serving. Garnish with whipped cream and blueberries.

PEACH BAVARIAN CREAM
Makes about 6 servings
1 tablespoon gelatine 1/2 cup sugar
2 tablespoons cold 1/4 teaspoon salt water 1 cup heavy cream
4 fresh peaches, peeled and chopped lemon juice Soften gelatine in cold water.
Place over boiling water and stir until dissolved. Add chopped peaches, lemon juice, sugar and salt. Mix thoroughly. Chill. When almost set, fold in whipped cream; chill. Serve in sherbert glasses. Garnish with nuts.

(Continued from page 41) but we certainly don't want to copy the poor dears! The first step to popularity then is liking people. And the perfect example of this is my husband. He likes people. He enjoys them. They can feel that he likes them. I remember walking with Leo on Park Avenue one day when a young man stopped Leo and introduced himself. He said that he didn't want to intrude on Leo's time, but if Leo could possibly stop by the hospital where the young man's father was seriously ill, the young man felt it would do his father a world of good. The next day Leo went in and talked to the boy's father. Leo genuinely liked him, too, and as a result when Leo needs friends he has them.

Just learn to think more of other people than you do of yourself and you've tackled rule number one away. Right now is the time to explain to yourself that shyness is natural to everyone. But when shyness interferes with your making friends, it is a form of selfishness. You are using it as an excuse. Here are some practical hints that I can pass on to you. I've watched others use them.

As an example we will use Gall Patrick Jackson. She was an actress and now runs a darling children's shop in Beverly Hills. She is married to a successful advertising executive and is one of the most charming hostesses in all of California. I know because I've been her guest innumerable times. Whenever she enters a room full of people she greets those she knows and then plunges into the really difficult part — introduces herself to those she doesn't know. You can do it, too, once you see how successful you can be. Who knows, perhaps you'll meet your dreamboat of all times just by extending your hand in friendly greeting.

Don't hesitate to ask help when you need it from those you trust. When I was approached to do a TV show, I was frankly frightened of the idea. I'd never appeared in public as Laraine Day. Always I was an actress playing a part. So I started my first shows with people I knew very well. They helped me get over my first hurdle, and gave me the chance to achieve success and self-confidence. Then I found myself able to cope with strangers.

At first I was timid about asking directly what a stranger did or was interested in. But I found it was really easy. Remember that the other fellow wants to make a good impression on you, and usually the things nearest and dearest to his heart make the easiest conversational pegs. I found that nearly everyone was interested in baseball so I had a conversational handle and once I grabbed that, I was in.

This goes hand in hand with listening intelligently. The perfect example of that is the motion picture actor. The first thing you learn in dramas is how to listen because your reaction to the other actor's lines is what counts in dramas. It takes time for you to give up the habit of considering yourself first and your partner in conversation second, but once this is reversed, you're won. Your confidence in the person speaking makes him think he's great and isn't that what we're after?

Don't be afraid to express an honest opinion—but do be tolerant of the other person, too. Remember we live with all sorts of people. For instance, in our household our daughter, Michele, isn't interested in baseball. She prefers concerts, children's plays, her ballet lessons, music. On the other hand, Chris, our son, is not the least bit excited about anything except sports, and particularly baseball. He's in heaven when he gets into his uniform (a small-scale version of my husband's Giant uniform number 7) and sits on the Giants' bench.

Here's one very nice thing about personality—it has little to do with being beautiful. Some of the women to whom we'd never think of giving a beauty prize are the ones we admire most. But there's one thing they all have—good grooming. And every woman can, with effort, have it.

You'll find that life's fun, too, if you develop a variety of interests. For example if you can draw a little, show your talent to advantage by making gay party invitations or birthday greetings. Not long ago I took up weaving as a hobby, and I can't tell you what pleasure I get from making things, rugs, other gifts for my friends. After all, things like that are a little bit of you and your time that you're sharing with others.

And that brings us right back to rule number one. So, be yourself—but your very best self, remember—and have fun!

HERE'S MARY MARGARET

Always with an urgent message for New Yorkers, the small and fiery mayor would arrive at the studio without having given Mary Margaret an inkling of what was on his mind. "Mary," he'd say when they went on the air—she was always Mary to him, never Mary Margaret. "I think the people of New York ought to know about this!" Then he'd launch an impassioned plea for attention to some civic problem. Once it was for a personal cause.

"Mary, it's that house they've given me. It stinks!"

DURING his second term in office, the City of New York had bought an historical mansion as official residence for its mayor. "Oh, you mean Gracie Mansion?" Mary Margaret asked.

"That's what they call it," he answered. "And they expect me to live in it. But I tell you, it stinks! The rugs haven't been cleaned. There's grease all over. My wife can't cook a meal, the kitchen's so filthy. It hasn't even been painted. Now, Mary, I don't think the people of New York want their mayor living in a place like that!"

As a result of the broadcast, a group of women formed a citizens' committee for the purpose of renovating Gracie Mansion. What probably would have taken months of snail-like legislation was accomplished in only two weeks.

Much as it annoys Mary Margaret to be called a commentator, it annoys Stella Karn even more to hear Mary Margaret referred to as a phenomenon.

"She has tremendous ability," says Stella, "and she's a hard worker. Where's the phenomenon? I've known Mary Margaret for thirty years and I always knew she was going far. There was never a time when I or anyone else thought differently. Even as a youngster, she had a respect for work. And she gets a great deal of pleasure out of it. What's more, I don't think she's changed much in the years I've known her. I always say to her, 'Mary Margaret, they can take you away from the country, but they can't take the country away from you.'"

Life for Mary Margaret began on a farm in Paris, Missouri, November 16, 1899. Her father, Walker McBride, was of Irish descent and known as one of the best farmers and traders in Monroe County. Her mother, Elizabeth Craig, whose Scotch ancestors had been in America since the Revolutionary War, was the typical, tireless farm woman of that era. For her, the word leisure had no meaning. The rooster's crow at four was her alarm clock and her day began with the building of the fire, the feeding of the chickens and the preparation of enormous breakfasts for her husband, children—Tommy, Mary Margaret and later, Buford, Milton and Boone. Sweeping, churning, bathing the babies, preserving, baking, sewing, gardening—this was her routine. It never varied the seven days of the week except for Sunday church-going. Religion was important to the McBrides. Grandpa Craig, Mary Margaret's beloved "Pa," was a Baptist preacher who served the little prairie churches without regard for personal reward. Sometimes he took his grandson on his rounds. Memories of sitting with Pa in the rickety carriage behind the mire, Bess, are precious to Mary Margaret. Pa was her confidant, her inspiration and the first to recognize that the bright-eyed little girl was destined for a life beyond the farm.

"You'll be famous some day, Daught," he'd say.

"Really famous?" she'd ask, wriggling with delight.

"Yes, Daught, really famous."

As difficult as life was for the wives and mothers of those days, it couldn't help but be a happy one for the young. Mary Margaret and Tommy, close in age and allies in mischief, knew every honest excitement that farm life affords. Under the great oak, Pa the swing whose swift flights revealed vistas of golden fields. There were the journeys with Papa to the sheep in the salt pasture. There was the smelly, ill-tempered goat, Oscar, that Mary Margaret and Tommy nevertheless adored. There were popcorn parties around a great fire. Best of all, there were the splendid tables set by Mama.

"When I first came to New York," says Mary Margaret, "I hated the food. It's a wonder I didn't turn thin! The chicken wasn't fit to eat and the mashed potatoes were full of lumps. How I used to long for my mother's meals. And my aunts were the best cooks in Monroe County."

The produce of that fertile county overflowed the McBride's table: the slices of fried ham with rich, red gravy; enormous Ponderosa tomatoes; crisp brown chicken; hand-beaten mashed potatoes which Mary Margaret describes as "fluffy as a cloud;" potato soup heavy with cream and onions; cabbage pudding from the farmyard; the lemon and lime. The accent creations from Mama's oven—bisquits, rolls, Southern corn bread, chocolate-blanche mangum, thick pies oozing golden juices. Little wonder that Mary Margaret's New York diet seemed palid by telling her that she had no intention of becoming the "lady principal" of William Woods College.

"If you don't do... what I tell you," stormed Mrs. Woods, "I won't give you anything!"

The threat did not daunt Mary Margaret. She worked for a year on the Mexico, Missouri, Ledger—"I did everything on that paper except set the type!"—and then went back to Columbia for another year-and-a-half at the University. She took as many courses as possible a term and attended summer sessions, thus getting her journalism degree in a total of two-and-a-half years. Such a schedule may have been possible for any brilliant girl, but, cut off from her aunt's support, Mary Margaret struggled to make it on her own way.

She solved this by doing part-time work for the Columbia Times. Often she worked nights. If she was paid, she ate. And getting paid depended on the amount of copy she supplied. A big source of her copy was a little delicatessen store run by a German woman. There the ladies of Columbia ordered their luncheon rolls or party ice cream or company salads. By finding out who ordered what, Mary Margaret was able to get leads on social functions for the paper.

The little woman who owned the store played another important role. Sensing that Mary Margaret wasn't getting enough to eat, she'd say, "Mary Margaret, here's some chicken salad that was never picked up. If you don't take it, it'll go to waste." There was always an excuse to press Mary Margaret with food and the work. She used the enthusiasm of the defeated Mary Margaret's youthful pride.

In 1940, when the University gave Mary Margaret its annual award for achievement in journalism, the delicatessen owner was present in the scholarly hall. She remembered Mary Margaret and asked her about the award. Unable to leave New York, Mary Margaret accepted the award over a special hook-up with the University, and paid special tribute to the proud little woman who helped her to get through college.

After graduation, Mary Margaret had no job. Who's the lady who's wielding her immediate goal? Every year, the editor of the Cleveland Press picked the prize graduate from the Missouri journalism school for a cub reporter's job on his paper. Mary Margaret was it.

As is standard newspaper procedure, Cub Reporter McBride was allowed to write whatever he pleased, but the more experienced reporters hate to be bothered with. But when Mary Margaret turned in a lengthy, enthusiastic, and finely detailed story of what under any other cub's coverage would have been a brief notice of a Baptist Church convention, the editor recognized the wealth of material in full. Nor was he the only one impressed by it. No less a personality than John D. Rockefeller, Sr., indisputably the world's richest Baptist, read the story and brought it to the attention of the Interchurch World Movement in New York.

"Who's the lady who wrote such a fine story on the convention?" he wanted to know. Officers of the Movement were quick to find out. They offered the lady a... job writing publicity at the New York office. Mary Margaret, her dream realized sooner than she'd expected, didn't have to be asked twice. She arrived in New York in 1924.

The Interchurch World Movement was not destined to last long. But its importance in the life of Mary Margaret McBride was great. There at the Movement she met Estella Karn.

Stella, who'd come from the South, was young, eager and ambitious, and she, too, was determined to conquer the big city. It was natural that the new copywriter should become friends.

"She was sitting in the press room," says Stella, remembering her first sight of Mary Margaret. "And press rooms—even religious press rooms—can be pretty dingy places. It was noisy and dingy and cloudily with cigarets, and when Hor tense sat down on the stairs, I thought to myself, My God, there's a studious gal."

In those days, Stella teased Mary Margaret by calling her a white ribboner because she was wrong for temperance.

"She still is," says Stella. "She won't accept liquor or cigarette ads on her show. But she's gotten over some of her early extremes. Three of us had an apartment in the Village and I came home once to find her shaking some peaches over the drain. They were brandied peaches which I'd bought to impress her, but they were coming. She certainly spoiled that idea."

Greenwich Village in the Twenties was, as Mary Margaret puts it, "like a nice little country town where you were trusted at the corner grocer and where the iceman would take the mice out of the traps." Young people could live cheaply while trying to launch their careers, and it was exciting, too, for you never knew when you were going to catch a glimpse of one of your idols in the streets. To read an Edna St. Vincent Millay sonnet one day and to encounter her in the bakery shop the next was a great event to impressionable, literary-minded young no impressionable Mary Margaret certainly was. New York, for her, even exceeded expectations, and being poor didn't stand in her way.

She and Stella and their roomate, Hortense, were much too bright and resourceful to let the lack of money limit them. Food, the ever-present problem, was partially solved by the creation of a dish which they called "Chao!"

"Chao," Mary Margaret recalls, "usually had a corn or tamale base which we'd flavor with tomato sauce. Then we'd add to it whatever we had around. It rarely tasted the same twice! We'd make it in individual caserroles and—"

"We never owned any caserroles," Stella is quick to remon.

"Well, it was the same thing. Any odd dish that could go into the oven was used. There was one for everybody."

"Sometimes there wasn't," says Stella. "One evening two cousins of Hortense came unexpectedly. We'd already invited other guests so I said, 'Mary Margaret, you'll have to go to bed. There simply isn't enough Chao.' She was furious! Hortense and I told everybody that she was ill, and there we sat commiserating on poor Mary Margaret at the very moment she came bumping up the steps, rustling a paper bag full of food she'd gone out to buy. From where we sat we could hear her steps from the stairsway to the bedroom, and they certainly didn't sound like those of the deathly ill girl we'd pictured to our guests."

Inventive as they were, the girls, especially Stella, now and then succumbed to store delicacies that wreaked havoc with the budget. Hortense would come to Mary Margaret and say, 'Let's eat brandied peaches. How can I go to get money for new ones if Stella spends it all on pate de foi gras and peaches in glass?'

Hortense once had an even more valid complaint against her roommates.

'We desperately needed an icebox," Mary Margaret recalled. 'Stella and my suitor asked us what she wanted for her birthday, Stella and I said, 'An icebox! She wants an icebox more than anything!' You should have seen Hortense when the icebox arrived. She'd been hinting for a jade necklace."

W hen the Interchurch World Movement disbanded, Mary Margaret heard that the New York Evening Mail wanted a girl who could cover fires dramatically. She flew down to the city room, got the job, but never expected she'd have a chance to cover a hurricane at all. But its impor tance, too, was a destiny to last.

"I tried my best to be dramatic," says Mary Margaret, "but I didn't think my story would get much space in the paper. I remember stopping with Stella at a newsstand on the corner of Sixth Avenue and Forty-Second Street, and looking through the Evening Mail. No story. Then we spotted it on the front page. And there was my big, black by-line. I didn't come down to earth for days after that."

Writing for the newspapers was not Mary Margaret's ultimate aim. One day when the newspaper was sitting at her desk, staring out at a feature story, the awful possibility that she was never going to become a great writer occurred to her.

"I nearly had a nervous breakdown on the spot," she says.

Stella found her crying in front of a Western Union office on Seventh Avenue that very evening.

"What's the matter with you?" she demanded.

"I'm going back to Paris, Missouri," she sobbed. "I'm sending my mother a telegram."

"Look . . . " said Stella. She led Mary Margaret into the nearest Schrafft's, ordered something smothered with whipped cream, nuts and chocolate fudge, and convinced her that she should stay on. Sometimes later the same feeling of desolation came over her. She fainted at the newsroom door a few days later.

"That must have been the time I really knew I'd never become a great writer," says Mary Margaret. "Anyway, they got me home and the doctor who was called in recommended a sea voyage. Now, a sea voyage was as far out of my reach as the next month's rent. But Stella and Hor tense decided that my health must be restored. They took me on a voyage all right—on the Sandy Hook day boat!"

The sea’s the sea, isn’t it?” asks Stella.

Later, there was a period of Europe every year. But she’d yet to come into that kind of money. Hortense left to be married, and Mary Margaret and Stella moved to a smaller walk-up in the Village.

“We counted pennies and sometimes we didn’t even have those,” says Mary Margaret.

“There was a time when we were so broke that it was a major tragedy when pos¬ cookie tins didn’t have the number in we’d counted on. Cocoonut Dainties were especially irregular, I remember. But there was always Chaos. And we usually managed to have hearts of lettuce. Often we budgeted meals down to twenty cents.”

Mary Margaret read as much as she could in her spare time and worked hard on the job. She knew her career was progressing nicely when the Evening Mail put her under contract. She became its chief feature writer, doing a page three story every day. But when the Mail was sold to the Globe, with most of the women writers dismissed and Mary Margaret’s being offered the chance to do regular features only, she told the editor she didn’t want the job.

“I want to write,” she announced.

“Why don’t you?” he asked, not unkindly.

Then Stella, who was managing Paul Whiteman, persuaded Mary Margaret to write a book with Paul on the man which gave its name to that era. “Jazz! The Story of Paul Whiteman,” was bought by the Saturday Evening Post.

“To me, that seemed like the most magical thing in the world,” says Mary Margaret. "The Post ranked with the Best and the Select. So I took the money wherever I came from. To have my first stuff in it was like a dream.”

Next she discovered the women’s magazines. It was a lucrative discovery. Until the early 1930’s, the name Mary Margaret McBride appeared over stories in almost every important publication. She became the highest paid woman magazine writer in the country. And in collaboration with Helen Josephy, she wrote a series of best-selling travel books.

THERE was more for everyone then. Mary Margaret fulfilled a lifelong ambition by taking her mother on a tour of Europe. Stella, by some judicious speculating in the stock market, managed to make two years’ rent in two days’ time. This was used to get the luxurious apartment they’d been coveting.

“Even I had a period of going out a lot, that’s what Marthe found,” Mary Margaret says.

“But an awful lot of the nice men I met were married. Besides, I was still careerbound and fiercely ambitious.”

When Mary Margaret was in college, there was a young man, a medical student. They were very much in love. One soft spring evening after the Easter holidays, he’d proposed.

“As much as I loved him,” Mary Margaret says, “I can remember thinking to myself, ‘I’ll never marry you. I’m going to New York and become a great writer.’ Once, after I’d been in New York, I did go back to see him. We met in Kansas City but it just wouldn’t work out.”

Other men sought pretty young Mary Margaret McBride, but she was never able to relinquish the idea of a career.

“Edna Ferber and I talked about that once when she was on my program,” says Mary Margaret. “She said people always asked her why she had never married. She doesn’t regret it. She feels she was kind of born for work and that work had been enough. My dream of writing was like that. I always wanted scoops. I always wanted my by-lines to be in big type possible. I’d actually suffer if someone did a story I thought I should have thought of.

“I’d call that having too much ambition. And that can be deadly. Ambition should be tempered with reason. Then you have more self-assurance and a defense against your sufferings. But I suppose I’ll always be a sufferer.”

MARY MARGARET McBRIDE as a sufferer is a possibility that probably has never occurred to those who think of her as a warm, winning woman whose very appearance of serenity can invest others with that quality. But Mary Margaret, as every other mortal, is not entirely free from fears and insecurities.

“If I have a good show, I’m walking on air,” she says. “But let me hear it on record and all the glow is gone. My reasoning tells me that I could not have remained a major figure in the media after two decades without being good, but I really cannot believe it. I don’t feel that I ever measure up to the standards I set. I fear people will find out that I’m not really as good as they think I am. That’s why hearing those records nearly makes me lose my mind.”

Puise pen letters have the same effect. Mary Margaret claims she can repeat verbatim every one she’s received, and that one bad letter can wipe out the satisfaction of a thousand good ones.

The good letters, however, helped Mary Margaret achieve the kind of radio program she thought the women of America needed. When her magazine magazine market had vanished, Mary Margaret still received assignments, but the checks were slim for one who’d collected some of the fattest in the field. When Station WOR auditioned people for a new woman’s program, Mary Margaret was invited to try out.

“I didn’t get the job because she didn’t mention money,” says Stella.

The broadcasting company barely mentioned it, either. Mary Margaret McBride, radio novice, received twenty-five dollars per week for six hours of programs.

What the station had in mind was a half-hour of household hints with a little green fairy story tacked on in between. Information on how to make last year’s draperies into this year’s dress. Mary Margaret, as Martha Deane, cheerfully invented a family for herself, played the role of grandma with great gusto—and tired of it within a few weeks.

“Losing my audience, “I am now going to kill off my family. Radio is fun but all this stuff they ask me to say is a lot of rot. I’m a reporter and I think you’d like to hear about things that actually happen.”

She then described a fleas circus she’d seen the night before and on successive programs talked about everything she’d seen, done, or eaten. Listeners were delighted. They wrote letters to the station.
Mary Margaret, by giving her listeners intimate conversations with all kinds of "doing" people, helps broaden their horizons and gives them a more vivid sense of participation in the world.

Authors are by far Mary Margaret's favorite guests and she reads over five hundred of their output every year in pursuit of material for her program. Books line almost every wall of her Central Park duplex. They overflow into the foyers and pile up in Stella's 45th Street office. They are the only possessions of a woman who detests possessions.

"I don't own a house or jewelry or a car," she explains, "I just can't be bothered owning things."

She does have one symbol of success—the mink coat.

"Stella made me buy it," she says, "We were going out to Missouri for Mary Margaret McBride Day in 1940. Stella had a mink of her own and she said to me, 'Look, you'd better get yourself one or people will think I take all your money.'"

Stella, who gets a third of Mary Margaret's income, has a brief definition for their success: "It's based on Mary Margaret's ability and my bad disposition," she says, referring to the Karn talent for saying "no" at the right time. "But," she'll add, "ability is ability and you can't take that away from her."

Stella occasionally has to restrain Mary Margaret's estimations of her own abilities. In 1944, at the Madison Square Garden celebration of her tenth anniversary on the air, Mary Margaret decided she wanted to shake hands with each and every comer, just as she does at the studio. Stella was appalled. The Garden was filled to capacity. Thousands had been turned away.

"You'll wear yourself out," Stella warned. "Imagine wanting to shake hands with 20,000 women!"

"But they're my friends," insisted Mary Margaret, and "we've come to see me."

She soon realized the impossibility of her intention and gratefully allowed Stella to shoo her up to the platform, which was flanked by assorted dignitaries waiting to pay her tribute.

Five years later, for the celebration of Mary Margaret's fifteenth year on the air, Stella made certain no such limitation as capacity would stand between Mary Margaret and her admirers. She hired Yankee Stadium with its 65,000 seats. No one bothered to count the empty ones, but it could have been done very easily—there were that few. The New York subway system ran special trains to the stadium from Brooklyn and Queens. Some women, bound for shopping, found themselves caught up in the jam, but they stayed on. Bargains in Macy's could wait; it was more fun to help Mary Margaret celebrate.

Mary Margaret McBride's programmes are broadcast from a pleasant book-lined room overlooking Central Park. Busier than ever with her new network commitments, Mary Margaret finds she saves three hours a day by not going to the studio. ABC sends a control man, and Vincent Connolly—who has been Mary Margaret's announcer from almost the beginning—and to whom Mary M. Margaret is devoted—comes to do the hour-long show heard in New York. The program is revised for its a.m. transcription to Chicago, then condensed for its half-hour on the network.

"Of course, my friends in the studio audience protest," she says, "but when I tell them I don't have to get into my corsets this way, they understand."

Mary Margaret's corset was once the cause of considerable anguish not only to herself, but to those who were waiting for her to go on the air. When the scheduled hour came and Mary Margaret did not, Stella went on.

"Probably a traffic jam," explained Stella to the waiting audience.

It turned out to be more serious than that. The zipper on Mary Margaret's corset had jammed, catching her skin and refusing to budge. Mary Margaret's maid called a doctor, but his equipment was useless against the stubborn zipper.

"Call the janitor," he said to the maid, and tell him to bring all his tools.

Under pressure from various saws, files and pliers, the zipper gave. Mary Margaret forgot her pain, rushed to the studio, and took over for the rest of the broadcast.

Mary Margaret's apartment is simple and comfortable. On the first floor is the studio, a sitting room from which she broadcasts, and the kitchen—the domain of Myra, her maid. upstairs is Mary Margaret's private sitting room with its plant-lined windows and books, books, books. Covering the walls of her bedroom is the collection of samplers which are made by listeners. Her favorite is the tiny square of linen with the dainty inscription: Two of friends
And a cup of tea,
One of them you
And one of them me.

Today, at fifty-one, plump and rosy, her unique, squared pompadour now white, Mary Margaret McBride begins her eighteenth year of broadcasting with little more than fleeting regrets for not having become a twentieth-century Bronte.

"It's been completely satisfying," she says about radio. "But I suppose TV has to come. Women write to me all the time wanting to know when I'm going on TV. But I don't want to be on display. I want to make faces and grotesque gestures when I feel like it. I just want to be myself."

Mary Margaret had a brief, not entirely satisfying bout with television in 1948. But she's game to try again. And, as always, she'll be giving whatever she attempts all her energy, enthusiasm, and famous capacity for hard work.

"She'll just be Mary Margaret McBride," says Stella.

I was tired last night, so tired that I didn't even bother changing from my uniform to street clothes before I left the hospital. So tired that later, resting in the dim coolness of the living room, I half dozed, and came awake suddenly to hear myself say, "That was lovely, Suzanne—play something else now."

Even as I spoke I blinked myself fully awake and knew that I spoke into an empty room. Suzanne wasn't sitting there at the piano gleaming in the shadowy corner. It was many months since she had shared the apartment with me. Then, listening, I realized that there was music drifting in to me from somebody else's radio, and I knew why the illusion of Suzanne had seemed so real to my relaxing mind.

I clasped my hands behind my head and leaned back, thinking of all the evenings Suzanne had played to me to ease away the tensions left over from Page Memorial. At (Continued on page 92)

Suzanne asked about him once or twice, for he had frightened and intrigued her too. But in normal people hysteria doesn't last forever. I was sure that time and travel had softened the grief of losing his father, and that Tom was beginning the good life I suspected Big John had died to give him. So it was a shock when Charles told me bitterly that Tom was now living with Morley in a cold persistence. Tom had found the key with which he planned to unlock all sorts of trouble for Charles. He found it in his father's office safe—a check signed by George Stewart, Charles's brother, which Tom said that he could prove was a forgery. Special Prosecutor cannot have a brother under suspicion of forgery. Tom's plan moved smoothly right from the start, for Charles felt he had to resign. He began at once to set up a defense for George, but I saw him growing more harassed as his hopes for a good case weakened. Tom held all the cards—the check, the proof, and the whole of Big John's history, which had sometimes taken him close to the line between legal and illegal activities. The fact that he had been working for Big John Morley was enough to damn him in the eyes of any intelligent jury.

And the worst of it was that George wasn't really guilty of the forgery. Everybody believed that—he was only Tom could prove it. In all our faces he flaunted his power, even going to the trouble of coming up to our apartment one night to make it perfectly plain that if he chose to he could save George. He came in and sat down as nonchalantly as though we were all good friends, he talked about art as if it were something he simply wild, you know," he said, looking pleasantly from me to Suzanne, "She knows my father tricked George into signing that check, and Dobbs knows it too—and they can't do a thing." With an effort I kept expression off my face, but Suzanne didn't even try. "You're unbelievable," she said, "You're the most contemptible creature I've ever known.

Tom looked her up and down. "You're so young, Miss Turrie—you haven't really known so many people, now have you? You're really very naive. You must be, because you've swallowed Miss Drake and Mr. Dobbs so thoroughly. They sound so nice, and everything they say is simply wild, you know," he said, looking pleasantly from me to Suzanne, "She knows my father tricked George into signing that check, and Dobbs knows it too—and they can't do a thing." Without Nagging Backache Nagging backache, loss of pep and energy, headache and dizziness may be due to slowdown of kidney function. Doctors say good kidney function is very important to good health. When some everyday condition, such as stress and strain, causes this important function to slow down, many folks suffer nagging backache—feel miserable. Minor bladder irritations due to cold or wrong diet may cause getting up nights or frequent passages.

Don't neglect your kidneys if these conditions bother you. Try Doan's Pills—the mild diuretic. Used successfully by millions for over 50 years. It's amazing how many times Doan's give happy relief from these discomforts—help the 13 miles of kidney tubes and filters bush out waste. Get Doan's Pills today!
There was more practicing after that, and almost a return to the old, quietly happy Suzanne. Except that she wasn’t happy. When the phone rang she was always right there, but she made no secret of the fact that when it was for her it was usually Tom. I think she wanted to know. But by that time I was afraid of what she might want.

The date of George’s trial came closer and closer, and Suzanne grew increasingly nervous. Then one Saturday morning, when neither of us had the excuse of work to take us away from the breakfast table, she looked at me with desperate determination in her gray eyes. "Help me think, Nora," she said. "I’m in love with Tom Morley, you know. And yet I can’t be in love with someone I can’t respect." She laid it before me as though those few words had given me all the knowledge I needed to solve the problem.

I asked, "Do you want to tell me about it? I know you’ve been seeing him.”

Suzanne frowned. "That’s all of it. I can’t believe how I came to let myself in for such a thing—with both of us really hating one another. We understood that it wasn’t hate but something else. And now I don’t know what to do with it. I can’t stop seeing him. I’ve tried. He’s already too important.”

"Then what’s the problem, Suzanne? With most people it’s the question Am I, or Am I Not, that causes the trouble. You seem to have worked out your answer.

"What’s the problem?"

"Weren’t you listening, Nora? How can I love him when he’s still as insane as ever about you and Charles? He hasn’t stopped praying that he’ll find ways to make you suffer for his people’s death. How can I love a man who has such a bitter loathing of the two people who are my dearest . . ."

Her voice shook, and she stopped. I said, "attacked, at the intensity of emotion she had carried around inside her for so many weeks. Attacked too at my own helplessness . . . for she asked a question I didn’t dare to ask. To myself I said, "You can love a man you can’t respect. Not forever, perhaps, but for long enough to learn just how much self-deception and shame you’re capable of suffering. And it’s a kind of love I pray you’ll be spared."

"It’s his father, Suzanne was saying. "He’s had an influence on him. He can be so wonderful, Nora. If only there were some way to divorce him from the memory of that wicked man. Something he had to see, something he couldn’t call a lie as he does everything you have told him . . ."

Suddenly I remembered—the brown manila envelope. The innocent-looking envelope that held all the dynamite. Charles would have needed to blow the kingdom of Big John Morley into a million bits and pieces. Where was it now—lying uselessly in Charles’s safe, perhaps? Or no—he had given it to Dorothy long ago to see if she wouldn’t persuade Tom to read through what he might have done. Suzanne was in the picture at all; and that was why I had forgotten it. When Dorothy failed, as Charles and I had failed, we put the envelope away and out of our minds.

But Suzanne was in the picture now. I told her about the envelope, and what was in it—jovials, dates, names, places, proof beyond question that Big John Morley had stopped at nothing short of murder in his greed for power and money.

"But that’s it," she said. "So far it’s been words, all words! If this is what you say, Nora, he must admit it. He can’t shrug it off a fact by calling it a lie."

"He can refuse to read it," I reminded her. "All of us tried once before to show it to him. He just wouldn’t listen to us.

"I can," she said. "He’ll read it if I take it to him. He knows I want nothing but what is right for him . . . Oh, he’ll read it now, Nora. This is all we need!"

On the verge of warning her that it might not be quite so simple, I held back. Suzanne was going to have her way. The mere falling in love of Tom and Suzanne was strange enough.

On the phone, I tracked the envelope down at Dorothy’s apartment, and arranged for Suzanne to pick it up on her way to her luncheon date with Tom. A radiance shone from Suzanne when she went dashing out shortly afterwards. I sped her with a silent hope that all would go well. Then I gave myself time off to go shopping.

I wasn’t gone very long, so I startled when I came back to see Suzanne flying about her room, throwing clothes on the bed and opening drawers with rough urgency.

"What in the world?" I asked faintly. "Never mind. Never mind!" She came out of her closet and tossed her overnight bag on the bed. "Don’t ask questions. I’m too young, I’m a fool, I’ve made a mistake. I want to get far away from here."

"Where are you going to go? Have you chosen this?"

"Oh, don’t worry," she said. Straightened up and gave me a thin smile. "I’m not doing anything desperate. Durosha asked me last week if I’d substitute for Carla Monteggio, the pianist—you remember, she got appendicitis. I’m only going down to Baltimore for tomorrow."

Without actually looking, I saw that she was taking more clothes than she would need for one day. She tucked them almost furiously into the bag. "I may stay a couple of days. I told Durosha last week I didn’t want to go, but he made an issue of it so I thought I’d better—"

Our eyes met and with appalling abruptness she collapsed on the bed.

What happened? I asked gently. "Do you want to talk about it?"

She nodded toward her desk, where I saw now that the brown manila envelope lay unopened as the last time I had seen it. Nothing had happened to it.

"He laughed in my face, Nora. He said—Oh, I don’t want to remember. That I was one of you instead of being with him. How I’d been sly and sneaky, how I’d only pretended to be falling in love with him. If he knew! If he had the wit and sense to know how I’m feeling about him!"

There was no comfort to offer. She wouldn’t have heard words anyway. She had had the whole retribution! This is what we wanted to make him go through—Tom. Just as my belief in him is shattered, we were all trying to shatter his belief in his father! He was right to defend himself!" She stood up swiftly and walked away from me, as if she couldn’t bear to be near. "If this is what you want, then I’m failing in someone you love, then Tom was right to
It's not quite the whole story, Suzanne. There's more involved. I think Tom is justified in punishing George for something he knows George didn't do? Have you decided that it's right even to hurt others in order to protect yourself?

Suzanne stared at me from strained, tearless eyes. “Who can help me now? Who can make me feel better except myself? In the long analysis everyone must look after himself—”

“Oh, Suzanne—this from you? After—”

“Yes, after everything!” She pressed her hands over her eyes feverishly. “After all this I can only help myself, I can’t look to anyone else! That’s why I’m going away. Nobody can give me back my faith or my love—nobody can do that to her. I can only make myself well again—. I’ll be sorry about all this one day, Nora—you know that, don’t you? I’ll want to apologize, ask you to forgive me and forget all these mad things I’m saying. But you’ll have to allow me to get it out of my system.”

The phone shrilled, galvanizing Suzanne into action. She threw the rest of her things into the suitcase and loaded wildly around for forgotten items. “Bag,” she muttered. “Cloves—wallet, here it is—Nora, if that’s Durosha will you tell him I’m already gone, please?”

Obediently, when Durosha’s assertive voice rolled richly through the receiver, I told him Suzanne had already left.

“Excellent, then,” said Miss Drake. “Let her keep her moving, eh? Keep her so busy she drops from exhaustion. Many broken hearts I have cured this way.”

I spoke softly, so Suzanne couldn’t hear. “I gather you know about her trouble?”

“How avoid knowing? The little face is pale, the figure droops, the hands are uncertain—and he talks of suicide. You think, my impulse is to apply the type punishment one would give to, say, a three-year-old.” He chuckled. “A fine mess, is it not? But I will not have this career ruined! Not for a dozen young men with tempers—or whatever is the trouble, I don’t know. This love . . .” He made a peculiar sound halfway between a snort and a laugh. “And yet no artist can do without some. She has it now—the love, the suffering—so she gets over with it for the next five years.”

“I hope you’re right,” I said.

“No, I’m not right, Durosha’s voice became suddenly impatient. “With Suzanne is different. This is not to be got over in five years or ten. Tell me, Miss Drake, is it not possible to find this young man and perhaps beat him gently with a whip until he consents to make Suzanne happy? When she is unhappy she cannot play.”

“I wish it were possible. But it’s—well, even more involved. It’s not just Suzanne and Tom—and the boy.”

“Don’t tell me,” he pleaded. “Enough that I have already watching after the music. Ah, these children?” Out of the corner of my eye I saw Suzanne hurry from the bedroom. “I’m off,” she hissed. “Wish me luck.” Then the door closed behind her.

From the other end of the phone, which I had almost forgotten I was holding, came a rambling, “So . . . o . . . o. She has left, has she. Miss Drake, they are corrupting you! Take shame!"

Poor Suzanne, I was thinking as I cleared up the debris of her whirlwind departure. I felt too remote from whatever had been going on with her and Tom to have any notion that I could help. George’s trial was coming up the very next week; Charles was so harassed he couldn’t be spoken to; Tom had now made tragedy ineluctable by refusing to have anything to do with the proof of his father’s wrong-doing. And he had refused not only George, but Suzanne, by the refusal.

I found myself almost hating him; there was no room left for open-minded sympathy. It was the worst possible time for Tom himself suddenly to materialize before me. Suzanne had been gone about an hour when he walked in. He still walked with arrogance, but his face didn’t show it any more—” I saw that he was almost as tormented as Suzanne had been. “You might have rung or knocked,” I said coldly.

He didn’t bother to answer. Striding through the room, he peered into the empty kitchen, and turned and saw the open bedroom doors. “Where is she?” he demanded.

I said sharply, “Tom, please mind your manners. You have no rights here at all, you know, particularly what after you did to Suzanne today. I’ve never seen her so wretched before, if knowing you is going to do that to her, I’ll use every influence I possess to cut this relationship short.”

“Knowing her?” Tom said. “Didn’t she tell you I’m in love with her?”

I wonder if Suzanne knows and believes it. For that she was in love with him I knew I had realized all along.

Perhaps she was ashamed to,” I said. “You,” Tom’s voice shook with resentment. “Have you done enough to me already? I won’t let you poison Suzanne any way you’ve poisoned everything else that meant anything to me. I love her. I didn’t know it till she went out. Till she looked at me like that and just—went.”

He snapped his fingers. “That for you, Tom Morley. Do as we say, betray your father, dirty up my memory, or else I walk out. And when I wouldn’t do it, out she went. But she’ll hate me—she’s my kind, you hear me? You and your lying envelopes and faked lies—furged like that check of George Stewart’s—"

“Tom,” I cut in sharply. “Have you forgotten how that check was forged—that your father engineered the whole thing? That George signed it in ignorance, thinking it was a joke? You told Charles Dobbs that yourself.”

“What’s the difference? I’ll serve.”

"Beautifully," I agreed sarcastically. "It will serve to put an innocent man in jail. It will serve very nicely to destroy Charles Dobbs’s faith in himself. That’s a very important point to you. Not to mention the brutal offense you’ve done to Suzanne. She believed you—something you’re obviously not. Now that you’ve shown yourself otherwise, you’ve shattered her. But I suppose you know that—"

“I don’t know that. I don’t know anything about Suzanne except that—she’s in my life now and I can’t go on if she loves me. And you know, she—though it is barely a month, isn’t that strange—you know I planned all it, don’t you? You must know that, you always believe the worst of me and you’ve been so right. I planned..."
and worked to make her fall in love with me. Caught in my own trap, as they say."

"Oh, stop thinking of yourself," I burst out. "You're young and healthy—at least physically healthy. If you go on this way you won't be mentally healthy for very much longer, you know. Face life like a man. Virtue is the safest road to happiness. He is or was a very strong, ambitious man. I wonder how he'd feel if he knew that all he had for his love and plans was a—permanent infant!"

With an effort, he finally spoke. "Is it a crime to love your father? Is it wrong to look at him? Don't I have to fight for him? I'm your best friend. He's my best friend, you know. His words hung almost pleadingly in the air.

"Not wrong, Tom," I said gently. "Your love for your father is—or was—a private matter. Why should anyone try to take it from you? He loved you; he was good to you. But you must face the fact that to dozens of other people he was—a cruel." The envelope. Now, I thought—now is the right time. He'll take it now.

Still talking, not taking my eyes from Tom, like a hypnotist who keeps precarious control over his subject, I got somehow into Suzanne's bedroom and reached behind me for the envelope. I don't think he knew I had moved until I put it into his lap and closed his hand over it. He looked down at it then, and came to his feet. "No!" he said. "I won't. Nobody in the world can make me do it. I don't want to know. What will be left for me if I tear him down like this?"

For a sick moment I was afraid he was going to rip the thing in two. I reached out hurriedly, but raised his eyes. He spoke more quietly. "Suzanne. There's Suzanne, isn't there? And she won't have a—a permanent infant. She's worth more than that. You don't have to say it. I wouldn't offer her that—"

Almost dizzy with victory, I sensed rather than saw that Tom went out of the apartment. I went to the chair he'd been sitting in and looked at the table, thinking that after all he might have left the envelope behind...but it was gone. It was gone! He would read it and he would know that he couldn't go through with this trumped-up case against George, and Suzanne would be happy at last.

I suppose Suzanne knows what happened when Tom read that file on his father. I don't—and I don't want to. So, though in a way I caused it, I'm glad I didn't have the task of ministering to Tom's pain when he read that file and fell for all the false ideas about his father with which he had protected himself from the truth. Nobody saw or heard anything of him in the three days. When he appeared in the courtroom haggard and hollow-eyed, he seemed to have aged ten years.

But I had the happiness of seeing Charlie Keough take an oath, speaking with suppressed ferociously as though he were eager to get the words said and out of his mind, told the whole story of his father's plans to trap George Stewart with the forged check. He told it in such detail that there was no doubt left in anyone's mind as to George's having been not the criminal, but merely the dupe...and when I saw Charlie realize his brother would go free, I didn't try to keep the tears from streaming down my cheeks.

I suppose I would have cried at Suzanne's wedding too, if I had gone. But those two did nothing in the routine way. Suzanne flew back when we phoned and told her what had happened, though she had already seen it in the headlines. We knew that this was all she had been waiting for, the proof of Tom's fundamental straightness and courage, and I suppose it served me right for waiting so complacently for her to tell me when they were getting married. While I was waiting they drove off one night and just did it—eloped. I think myself that they had had such a tremendous quarrel that they decided if they didn't get married at once they might never do it at all.

I think Suzanne is happy, and I'm glad of her happiness; but sometimes I miss her a great deal. Like last night, with the music recalling her so vividly...but she plays for Tom now, and that's even better. As for me—I got up and put some records on the phonograph, and went to the kitchen to see what there was for supper with a Mozart sonata singing around me.

Mystery Mirror Solution

White Charlie struggled to get possession of the gun, a third man entered the pawnshop. "Drop that, Voelker!" said Keough from behind a gun of his own. Voelker swung around but Keough's trigger work was quicker, "I told you to lay off," he added grimly to Charlie as Voelker fell to the floor. "There's thirty thousand from the payroll job in the accordion, sergeant," Charlie explained. "That's what Voelker was after. He conned Jean into offering me a payoff so she'd dig up the dough. And it was Voelker who killed Matejska for fear Matejska would frighten Jean into paying more money. By trying to get Keough suspended from the force on a frame-up, Jean had hoped his testimony against her husband would not hold up in court and, instead, would incriminate Keough since he'd been the policeman who'd arrested Jean's husband. Voelker encouraged Jean in this plot, hoping not for Carl's release but for the money Jean had hidden. Voelker died from the bullet wound, Sergeant Keough arrested Jean, and Charlie Wild quickly tried to forever banish from his life that almost turned into a conclusion.
