LES McKEOWN

McKeown charged

LES McKEOWN, lead singer with the Rollers, was charged in Edinburgh last Friday with causing the death of an elderly woman in a car accident.

About 50 fans waited all day outside the Sheriff Court for McKeown to appear for the private hearing - on petition charged with causing the death of 76-year-old Mrs Euphemia Clumie in Corstorphine Road, Edinburgh, on May 2 this year, by driving a car recklessly.

During the 40-second court appearance, McKeown was also charged with driving at speed and in a manner dangerous to the public. He was granted £100 bail to appear at a further hearing at a later date.

McKeown, who arrived at the rear of the court almost unnoticed in a white Rover, was shielded from photographers by Rollers' manager Tam Paton. Extra police maintained tight security around the court all day, and stopped traffic to allow McKeown's car a clear passage after the hearing was over.

FOOTNOTE: Under Section One of the Road Traffic Act 1972, a conviction for causing death by reckless or dangerous driving by a court in Scotland carries a maximum penalty of two years in jail, with obligatory driving disqualification and endorsement.

NEW YORK WIRE ★★ NEW YORK WIRE ★★ NEW YORK WIRE

Suddenly it's the Hudsons

SINCE SIGNING for Elton's label, Rocket Records, life has really been looking up for the Hudson Brothers. While in New York this week they sold out at the Bottom Line for three nights, jammed with Muddy Waters for one and had nearly 2,000 fans waiting on line for their autographs at a midtown record store.

Ace had their plugs pulled out on them during a concert in Little Rock, Arkansas. It seems that most of the audience had kept their July 4 firecrackers especially for the event; the concert hall management didn't appreciate the gesture and thus ended the gig.

The rise and rise of Manhattan Transfer continues. They are now replacing Cher as host on a nationwide TV show for the month of August.

Barry White had a party thrown for him at the infamous Le Jardin discotheque. Two fans took the request on the invitation to wear white a little further than expected and arrived without a stitch of clothing... they were covered in white paint. Lynyrd Skynyrd have both good news and bad news. Firstly their album, Nuttin Fancy, has been certified gold but secondly the ad for their new single, Saturday Night Special, has been getting banned in many of the southern and Midwestern states. It depicts a lady lying down with a large gun in what could be described as a rather compromising situation. Personally I'm all for it.

HUDSONS Bill, Brett and Mark with Muddy Waters

LYNYRD SKYNYRD's offending ad

The Pointer Sisters turned in a great show in Central Park and at their photo session the next day, the familiar faces of Slade were to be seen. They were spending a few days getting acclimatized before journeying on out to the great Midwest.

People here are beginning to wonder if the B in AWB stands for brewery. It remains to be seen how long the New York police can put up with Scottish reels along Fifth Avenue in the wee hours of the morning.

Roller mania is being predicted here, starting in the fall.

Tickets for Elton John's week long engagement at the Troubadour in L.A. go on sale soon, opening night being $300.00 each. This isn't as bad as it first seemed as the money is all going to charity. Stephen Morley.

Featuring her chart single
'IT'S IN HIS KISS'

THERE ARE three little bits of silliness on Lyn Paul's single It Oughta Sell A Million, which might have escaped the attention of people who already own a copy of that winsome tune.

Scratched into the run-off on the A-side are the words "It's the real thing", which will tell you (as if you didn't already know) that the song, like I'd Like To Teach The World To Sing, was born out of a Coca Cola jingle.

Now turn to the B-side and scratched into the run-off there are the words "Mum's the word" and that tells you that the B-side was written by none other than Lyn's mum.

For one more 'in' joke, go back to the A-side and read the publishers' credit, which is Turn Music / Intersong Music. Intersong are well-known, but Turn is a new invention, so-called because Lyn is invariably referred to by her managers as "The Turn".

At around five o'clock last Wednesday, The Turn was to be found on a rostrum in BBC TV Centre's Studio Three doing her final rehearsal for Top Of The Pops. She looked as cool as a cucumber and most attractive, with a new heavy-fringed hairdo and dressed in a pastel green trouser suit with knee-length brown boots.

Ten minutes later, she was to be seen back in her dressing room, quaking with fear and sniffing suspiciously at a glass of champagne.

"I'm shaking like a leaf," she said, starting incredulously at her trembling fingers, "I've never been so nervous." But why on earth...? "It's peculiar. I haven't done a Top Of The Pops for a year now and, although everyone's been very nice to me, I feel very out of it - as if I'm a bit past it."

Invading

It might seem strange for a fresh-faced girl in her twenties with a hit on her hands to be feeling like a grandmother invading a teenagers' party, but that's how she does feel and there's no talking her out of it.

"I've worked so hard and waited so long for a hit," she says, almost desperately. "Oh I DO hope it is going to be a hit."

But it is a hit, love. It's at number 37 in the charts already.

"Yes I know, but a BIG hit. I'd give anything, ANYTHING for it to get into the top twenty."

Her sense of urgency is understandable, because ever since The New Seekers split up a year ago she's been hovering

It oughta sell a million, but the top twenty will do

by Ray Fox-Cumming

on the brink. Her first solo single, for example, called Sall The Summer Winds, hovered in the breakers for an incredible 17 weeks and at one point reached number 51, one place shy of getting the big Top Of The Pops push.

"The three singles I had out before It Oughta Sell A Million never even got on to the BBC playlist," she says.

To get that elusive hit, Lyn has had to go back to what she was always known for in the New Seekers and she explains how it happened.

"Five years ago we recorded about half a dozen jingles for Coca Cola. The tune of I'd Like to Teach The World To Sing was one of them and the tune of It Oughta Sell A Million was another."

"Only a couple of months ago I was watching TV and was flabbergasted to hear the Oughta Sell A Million tune dug out after all this time. So then we approached Roger Greenaway to write special lyrics to the tune and I went and recorded it with help from Peter Doyle, who was one of the original New Seekers."

So what do you follow it with for the next single?

"Oh, something in the same vein - definitely I firmly believe in sticking with a winning streak."

Will you dig out another old Coke jingle then?

"Oh no, that would be too much. I'm hoping that having given me the words for this one, Roger Greenaway will write me a song for the next one. I shall ask him anyway, because at worst he can only say 'no'."

Flattering

"The last three singles I put out were all very pretty songs, but somehow I don't think that they were really me. It's very flattering for people to associate me with a certain kind of music and to want me to go on giving them that music."

As well as the single, Lyn has just released her first solo album. "I'm very pleased with it, because it is my first album," she explains, "and the arrangements are wonderful - you have to admire them. Sometimes though, I think that my voice has become secondary to the arrangements and that's a pity because I think it ought to have been more of a singer's album."

At the end of the interview Lyn is still as tense as she was at the beginning. "My big fear is that my throat will close up. It has a habit of doing that when I'm nervous." She glares sceptically at her almost untouched glass of bubbly. "They say that champagne's good for the throat, but I can't see that it can be. Maybe I'll go and have a glass of port instead."

PUTTING WIGAN ON THE MAP

WIGAN'S OVATION are four nutters whose bizarre antics would make even the most hard-core journalist sweat like a piglet and declare: "Am goin wum for me jake bit" - which, when roughly translated means, "I'm going home for lunch because I've had enough!"

Alf Brooks, drummer and group jester, has brought with him one of those invisible doggies, the harness of which is equipped with a water pistol type contraption which serves as the animal's, shall we say, bladder.

Thus walking along the streets of London with Alf and one invisible dog has to be funnier than any Candid Camera sketch.

Two lady traffic wardens pass us on their round. One bellows with delight: "Arl seen it all now!" Alf, sniffing sporting game, runs after the bellower, doing the most impressive canine barks this side of Battersea Dogs' Home; then at close range squirts the pistol (or bladder) all over her foot, to which she responds with a blood-curdling screech. For a moment she thinks that this naughty pup has peed all over her leather pumps.

This, plus being chased by coppers in Swinehead for having a dangerous vehicle on the road, are just some of the inadvertent giggles the group delight in.

Another fascinating fact is that Wigan's Ovation are unique in that they are the first successful group to come from their home town of Wigan which to date has been famed for its pier and c-c-c-casino.

Wobbly

When the lads are spotted on home soil, buses stop in their tracks, women go wobbly at the knees and friends are proud to point out that they either lived next door or went to school with one or all the band's members.

"We always receive a real hero's welcome," boasts vocalist Jim. "But I still go to me local working men's club whenever I can. I like to have a few ales with me mates."

"If I go in there on a Thursday, and they're showing us on Top Of The Pops, then the Bingo stops, the snooker stops round of applause. It's a marvellous feeling."

The band's personnel are: James MacClusky, singer; Alfred Brooks, drums; Philip Preston, bass and brother Peter, guitar.

Says Jim: "We're the only English group who plays Northern Soul, but I believe that in six months from now it will be popular everywhere in this country. Northern Soul is basically old released black soul music or if you like anything which is fast enough to dance to."

"I mean, we get our inspiration from watching the Wigan Casino kids dancing and clapping. This way we pick up the rhythms and the general feel of the music. After all, we've had no one to follow, or to imitate, we've had to use our own designs."

In actual fact, Wigan Casino popularised Northern Soul. The kids who attend this dancing haunt love the raunchy, quick swirling music, and the more oblique the records are, the better.

The phantom star of the Casino, Dean Parrish, whom nobody has ever seen; is considered the Messiah. One of his songs, I'm On My Way is the Casino's National Anthem.

Jim points out that there's rather a sorrowful tale behind the reason for Mr. Parrish's obscurity: "We heard this story but we don't know whether it's true or false. Apparently Dean was walking on the streets of New York with his father and as they approached a building site, a large brick fell down on his dad's head, and knocked him out. It is supposed to have had an affect on Dean psychologically that is, and they say that because of the accident he hasn't been quite the same since."

Well, there's one press agent with an over-active imagination! But anyhow, while Dean is still the King, Wigan's Ovation are very much his unofficial successors as far as the Wiganites go.

Flourish

However, the South in particular aren't cottoning on to N.S., as quickly as the boys would like.

"I think a lot of you Southerners are frightened of it," says Alf, with a flourish of his hand.

"Unless some popular DJ risks his reputation and plays it, you don't really hear much of the stuff down here. In the North, Northern Soul has been around for quite some time, but you Southerners are a little bit apprehensive about it."

Jim interjects: "You should come up to Wigan Casino and watch the kids dancing; they're just phenomenal. For hours on end they just dance, dance, dance. Some of them won't even touch a cigarette or a drop of ale in case it mars their performance."

Meanwhile, back at camp, Wigan's Ovation are having their fair share of popularity. They profess to having at least seventy fan letters per week to answer... Answer? I ask bewildered!

"Yeah, we answer the lot," Jim informs me. "We also give them badges and stickers, or other bits and pieces. Our fans have been good to us, so why desert them now?"

Says a rather hot-tempered Alf: "What gets our backs up is that some people don't believe us. This guy from a newspaper turned round and said: 'Huh, who are you lot kidding, you don't reply to all those fans,' and he actually went on to say that he was going to write to us, masquerading as a girl, to see if he would get an answer."

Jim: "I said, you can flippin' well write fifty letters because everyone of them will get a reply."

Wigan's Ovation will talk (or even write to anyone) but anyone who's ostentatiously cocky, will make even these good lads grit their teeth in annoyance.

"Our first appearance on Top Of The Pops was a nerve - racking one," confesses Jim.

Nowadays the boys have become initiated into the showbizzy way of life. Due to their single successes - Skiing In The Snow and Per-so-nally - they've been given the job of supporting the Stylistics on their British tour, beginning in July.

"We'll be doing our album in between touring, so the next few months should prove to be very hectic," Jim says undauntingly.

"I for one am looking forward to the tour, I've always been an ardent Stylistics fan. I know they're very popular in this country, but let us hope that the audiences will enjoy our music too!"

ESSEX:
 Back to basics

Hats off for the Rubettes

THERE COMES a time in every Rubette's life when each feels they are being unjustly left by the wayside in terms of getting decent press coverage.

Alan Williams, the Rubs' lead vocalist hasn't got a chip on his shoulder, but feels that too many people are falling to believe (or accept) that the band have agile, creative minds underneath their silly-boy hats.

"We've never been the music papers' blue eyed boys, and it's ridiculous when you consider that the Press won't touch us unless we have a single in the charts."

He emphatically points out that although the likes of the Rollers are sweet, boyishly goodlooking and appealing to all young girls, they should give someone else a look in from time to time.

"I understand papers want to boost their sales, but surely there's a limit to what they can say about the same old band?"

"I personally think the Rollers' latest single is terrible, but I've noticed reviewers have been treading ultra-lightly in their criticisms and saying things like: 'Well, there's a good base line here, or a good drum solo there'."

John Richardson, a more outspoken person who ne'r - beats - about - the - bush, shouts: "I think the single is really ... excrement!"

A lot of cynics might be forced to say 'speak for yourself, mac,' but in all fairness the Rubs aren't just a bunch of poleurs who churn out moronic, mundane singles in the hope that their sex appeal will take them to the top of the charts. The proof of that last statement is in their last two singles - I Can Do It and Fo - Dee - O - Dee both of which are lively of' shake - rattle - and - rollers.

by Jan Iles

Impetus

Alan, who is now sweating heavily in the midday heat wave admits: 'Fo - Dee - O - Dee has now lost its impetus. It entered the charts at a very high position but had moved only four places per week for several weeks. Though I'm not blaming the Rollers for this," he jibes, chuckling in his Southern Comfort. Isn't he? Well maybe not. It is rather puzzling however that the above mentioned singles both of which have been twice as Sugar Baby Love or Juice Box Jive, weren't as successful. Understandably the boys are scratching their heads in astonishment but are coming to the conclusion that hit records aren't tasty as the quasi - bopper always works of art. "I still believe our newer stuff is a step in the right direction," Alan opines. "We realise that our younger fans are buying our records purely for the picture on the sleeve. We also like to think that we have some fans who appreciate us for our musical abilities. "I doubt very much whether progressive or rock fans listen to our stuff - unless they do so secretly behind locked doors. It just seems to me that a lot of people are like sheep; they just go along with the crowd and like whatever's hip at the time." Although they aren't the most sought after band in this country they are most certainly more popular on the Continent than the likes of the Rollers - even! "We're perhaps the most popular British pop band in France today, where we well in the region of 800,000 records. I Can Do It sold something like 120,000 in one week! "Mud and ourselves are joint fabs in most European countries; but we're more popular than them in outer Mongolia!" Alan has the notion that all is not well with the British chart. Could it be that the popular old-fashioned art of payola still pays a major part in chart postionings? "Let's just say I believe they convey a different picture to what's really happening," he says, like a man under pressure. "Our last album sold more than another particular album which I won't name - and yet that was in the charts and our's wasn't! "And a similar thing happened to our first album, Wear It's 'at. Although it didn't reach the charts it need only sell another 1,000 copies to go silver. Strange eh?"

Meanwhile the Rubettes are undergoing certain visual transformations. They are discarding their silly boy lemon image for a more casual, up-to-date look. "We're getting rid of the hats," he declares. "I mean they were becoming more popular than us - so they'll be going solo. "In the past people have knocked our style of dress. Like one particular journalist once said we looked like stupid men in little boy hats. But we ourselves can't really knock 'em. I mean they sold us lots of records. But it's no good dwelling on the past, the change of style will be for the best. We've got to progress, it's no good looking like we did three years ago. It's a bit like a World Champ - it's best to knock it on the head while you're on top!" Other hot - shock news is that Alan and drummer John Richardson are planning to do their own thing. Whilst the other members sun themselves in tropical climates, Alan and partner will be busy working in the studios on their weird 'n' wunnerful projects. "Before I go any further the Rubettes aren't splitting up or anything as drastic as that. It's just that John and myself will be working on our own stuff which hopefully will include a single and an album for Christmas. We're also producing a new band, called Snatch, who have their first single out in August, which is written by ex-Glitter Band member John Rossall."

No Nose". The story is fundamentally about a little girl named Pia who had her nose stolen by an evil Jackdaw, but all is saved when the hero of the book, charmingly called Donny Do Good manages to redeem Pia's nose. The book contains endearing jungle book type characters and could well become a best seller among Enid Blyton's under elevens' audience. Alan continues: "John and I are hoping to make it into a cartoon also, which will cost in the region of a million dollars. The cartoon also includes six major songs, some of which ought to make very commercial singles. "The next few months will be hectic ones for Alan and John, but if their work ever sees the light of success, they could be on the way to making a small fortune. Alan readily agrees: "We could become very rich men, which means we'll have to watch out for the tax man - I hear there are a lot of them about!"

Cartoon

If that doesn't titillate members of the Rubettes Appreciation Society, read on. The two whizz-kids are also working on a children's book and a cartoon. Alan explains in more detail: "John writes short stories in his spare time and he's very good at it. It just so happened that one evening, when he was putting his daughter Pia to bed, he told her a bedtime story which sparked off the incentive to write a book about Pia

A Touch Of Class

THE FRUITS of success have at last brought about a change in Bryan Ferry's life-style. The bleak West London flat, which he never really made into a home, has now gone to Roxy's drummer, Paul Thompson — "We might as well keep it in the family" — and Ferry has moved to a much grander residence, still within spitting distance of signs pointing to Slough and The West.

At 11.30 am there's no discernible sign of movement within the house and Ferry takes ages to answer the doorbell. "Another late night," he says by way of vague explanation.

It began with a visit to the West End musical hit A Little Night Music. "I fell asleep in the first half but awoke to enjoy the second. The theatre always tends to make me feel sleepy. Would you like some coffee?"

Bryan Ferry — our man in West London

He deposits me in his drawing room and disappears off to the kitchen. The room is on the first floor, large, light and airy with huge windows looking out over an attractive walled garden on one side and partition doors leading to an office on the other.

A heavy scent pervades the whole room — emanating perhaps from an elegant vase of white flowers in one corner? Are those camellias? I ask when Bryan re-appears.

"No, gardenias. They're not real, but they're rather good, aren't they?"

A little discreet sniffing diagnoses the aroma as Ferry's after shave, but apart from that expensive-smelling touch, he is not his usual suave self. His attire consists of a pair of unfashionably baggy grey trousers and a rumpled short-sleeved white shirt over a plain white T-shirt. This, apparently, is the kind of gear he puts on and abouts in off-duty. "If I'm scruffily dressed and preferably unshaven, I tend not to get recognised."

Havana

In public too though, he has recently forsaken Savile Row and knife-edged creases. The ill-pressed suit, in which he's been seen on TOT and elsewhere over the last week or so, has, for example, aroused much disparaging comment in the Record Mirror offices.

"Has it?" Says he, much amused. "That's my crumpled Man In Havana look — best worn," he adds for the benefit of fashion students, "with a starched white shirt and a tie. I like taking part of an image and mixing it with something else."

It's not as yet possible to tell if he intends bringing the same policy to bear on the decor of his new home. "I know it's underfurnished as yet," he explains, "and I could go out and buy everything I need at once. If I did that though, I know I would end up hating things in no time."

Perhaps Bryan's favourite feature of his new home is its music room, which has hand-painted Chinese wallpaper. He's clearly an Englishman proud of his castle. "If I were married with a family and dogs etc, I would probably prefer to live in the country, but as I'm still a single man I like to be in London where I'm more in touch with all the lively goings-on. This is ideal — good shops nearby, handy for the West End..." he grins at his own estate agents' patter.

As far as keeping house goes, Bryan's an archetype useless bachelor.

"I generally eat out, so cooking's no problem. Sometimes though someone will come round and volunteer to cook me a meal, which is nice."

How about the garden? "I know virtually nothing about gardening. A New Zealander comes in once a week to deal with it."

And cleaning? "It's very hard to find a good cleaner."

Delights

The 'lively goings-on' he so dearly wants to be near, include the usual theatrical delights that the West End has to offer, those meals out, the odd music business function — and the occasional spot of gambling.

"I know Lord Lucan vaguely," he says in the course of conversation, "but I haven't seen him... er... recently."

I didn't know you were a member of the Clermont set.

"I'm not, but I have been seen there."

Do you gamble a lot? "No, I shouldn't like to become obsessed with it. We do play the occasional game of backgammon on tour though."

For high stakes? "No, for very mean ones."

In keeping with his superior residence, Mr Ferry has got himself an impressive car. Some time ago he graduated from a beaten-up white Renault to a BMW, then swapped that for his present Daimler.

"We don't get on with each other very well though and I'm thinking of going back to a Mini."

He fell out with the Daimler for good and all recently when driving down Chelsea's King's Road. "It was all 10cc's fault. I bent down to turn up their single I'm Not In Love on the car radio and, while doing so, went straight into the back of a Rover."

Switched

In between refurbishing his new home, Bryan has somehow found time to promote his new single, write or co-write and record half the tracks for the fifth Roxy album, due out in October, and also make a start on his third solo album.

"You Go To My Head," he professes, "is the smoothest, most sophisticated single I've done. People tell me that it takes a few plays to register and perhaps that's because the tune isn't as obviously strong as the last one's.

"I like the B-side very much too. At one point we nearly switched it in the interests of having something a little more uptempo."

The B-side is Remake / Remodel and it's the third time that Bryan has taken and redone a track from the first Roxy album to use as a B-side.

"I hope eventually to get through the whole of that album. I like the songs on it very much, but the production leaves a lot to be desired, so as long as I can make improvements I shall do so."

On the subject of the next Roxy album, Bryan will say little. "It's a development on what's gone before."

Once the new Roxy album is out, the band will tour to promote it — first in Britain, then America with Europe to follow in the new year, all of which leaves precious little time for Bryan to work on his solo album.

"I hope to build it up over a period of time," he says and he really hasn't any other option.

"I dislike the pressure," he admits, "and if I had my way I'd much rather only do one album every two years."

He hastens to add though that he is not work-shy: "I believe in hard work — and in playing reasonably hard too..."

Now there's a remark that would surely go down well with the Lucan set. By the way Bryan, do you think he's still alive?

"I don't know," says Ferry, surveying his domain from a balcony, "but it would be... The sentence remains uncompleted."

BODY 'n' SOUL

'The only problem
at the moment is I'm not sure exactly what my market is'

"I REALLY didn't think they were that fickle," says Nosmo King in between puffs on a king-size cigarette. The they in this case being the Northern Soul audiences who only a few months back were hailing Nosmo as their hero.

"But don't get me wrong, I'm not knocking the kids - after all, if they hadn't bought the records in the first place I probably wouldn't be in the position I am today."

On the other hand, Nosmo did find it a bit depressing that his earliest fans should abandon him just

AIN'T NO SUBSTITUTE FOR NOSMO

by Giovanni Dadomo

Controlled

"Of course the scene's controlled to a large extent by managers and deejays but Top Of The Pops is really no different - it's still a case of a few people giving everyone else what those few people think their audiences want."

Okay, so let's forget Northern Soul then; doesn't the fact that you no longer have to aim for a specific (and limited) market give you a lot more creative freedom?

"I hope so. The only problem at the moment is I'm not sure exactly what my market is," Nosmo begins, explaining that over the last few months he's played everything from universities to Bailey's circuits. He enjoyed and was well-received at both: "The colleges are great because people there are willing to listen to new things as well as familiar material whereas in the smaller clubs you always get this element that heads for the bar as soon as anything new is introduced.

"At the Bailey's clubs it's a different kind of buzz because you get a complete cross-section of people who've come out to have a good time, and so far I've always been able to give them their money's worth."

Nosmo's equally eloquent regarding the greater freedom he's gained as a writer now that he's free of the Northern pigeonhole: "It means for example that I can get a lot of things out I couldn't before. Like at the moment I've been really affected by Allen Toussaint's Southern Nights album.

"And as a result of really getting into that New Orleans sound I've found that my writing is getting a lot simpler and more basic - a good feeling rather than the sort of thing people know me for." He adds that he's also trying to put more variety both into his writing and his stage act: "At the moment I'm working with about four different co-writers, which gives me a chance to learn a lot of new things and it also gives me a new slant. That's probably the biggest way the music's changing."

But most of the aforementioned plans are still at the formative stage. In fact, Ain't No Substitute For Love, Nosmo's new single, isn't one of his own compositions:

Change

"It's a Roger Greenaway - Geoff Stephens song," Nosmo explains. "I found that I had nothing strong enough of the kind of thing that was expected of me and I chose Substitute. He adds that it's the last song he'll release along the lines of his Goodbye, Nothing To Say hit: "I thought I should give it another try - but the next one will see a big change. I feel that it's time I took a step forward because by then I'll be bored and there'll be a need for a change."

Meanwhile Nosmo's also making plans for his first album: "We've been putting a couple of extra things down every time we do a single and I've got a lot of new things ready recording so that hopefully there'll be an album in the shops before Christmas."

And will it be a Soul album - say blue-eyed as opposed to Northern?

"Yes and no. Actually I don't like the word Soul very much - I much prefer the term R&B because that rolls everything - Rock & Roll, Blues etc - into one.

"I've been listening to Leiber and Stoller a lot, and that's very inspiring because here were two white guys aiming at a totally black market with an incredibly wide range of material. And even when they started to make it with things like Spanish Harlem they were doing songs that were undeniably soulful but that anybody could sing.

"And, of course," he concludes, breaking into broad docker Cockney, "I wanna go to the States don't I?"

"Like I wanna do some big gigs there like Madison Square Gardens, go an' ave a paddle in Miami then come back and write a loader songs, like Know wot I mean John?"

Misses Warwick, Warwick, Warrick — or Schwartz

HAVING a famous sister can make life tough rather than easier — at least that's what Dee Dee Warwick has found out. So from now on, she'll be known as Dee Dee Schwartz, no less!

"Over the years my various record companies have been on at me to change my name but I've always flatly refused. Now, though, I wanna change it," the charming Miss Warwick said over tea at her London hotel.

Note that, unlike her sister, Dee Dee spells it Warwick, not Warwickie: "Neither way is actually correct," she smiled. "My dad spells it Warwick!"

Dee Dee was in town as a "passenger" on Dionne's tour: "I wasn't doing much at home so when she asked if I'd like to come along for the trip I just jumped at the chance."

Dee Dee hasn't really done any live work on her own behalf for a couple of years: "I've just done back-up work with people like Dionne, the Detroit Spinners and Dawn and spent most of my time concentrating on records." — Not, let it be noted, as a back-up singer for others, as so often in the past, but in her own right.

Back-up

"Oh yes," she recalled. "I've sung back-up work for so many people — Elvis, Aretha, most of the Atlantic people. Soul, pop, everything."

Dee Dee packed up session work at the end of 1970. Since then her career has brought some moderately successful singles for Atlantic and Mercury, including the delicious Suspicious Minds — "Elvis's hit had been some time before and we thought it would work well tackling it from a girl's standpoint" — and Foolish Heart which made number one in the

DEE DEE WARWICK

R&B charts and sold close on a million copies.

Dee Dee is still fighting against the tag of being "Dionne's kid sister": "We get on really well, but I have my own identity, I don't want to live in her shadow."

"It's stupid really because our voices and the kind of songs we sing are quite different but people still insist on linking us and hence the name-change decision.

"Schwartz' is German / yiddish for black, which is appropriate, so that's what I'll be from now on in."

Dee Dee's first record was You're No Good on Jubilee Records back in 1965, a song which Betty Everett also did and which Linda Rondstadt has just revived.

"Then I went to Mercury as a solo artist and later to Atlantic. Currently I'm singing with Private Stock and I've got high hopes for my upcoming album."

Dee Dee's singing career started alongside Dionne in the Drinkard Singers, a popular gospel group run by their mother (and which has issued many fine records over the years).

Dionne took up the story: "Drinkard was Mom's maiden name. We also sang in another gospel group called the Gospelaires and Cissy Houston, mom's sister, who later became one of the Sweet Inspirations, then went solo, also sang with us."

The break into secular music came when they were appearing with the Drinkard Singers at New York's famed Apollo Theatre.

"A record producer came in. He was desperately looking for two girl backing singers for a recording session and Dee Dee and I volunteered."

It was in New York that she was discovered by one Burt Bacharach, a white songwriter / arranger already famous on Tin Pan Alley for his work with Perry Como and others.

Hottest

With his lyricist Hal David, Bacharach signed Dionne to Florence Greenberg's Scepter Records and she soon became the hottest girl singer in soul music, thanks to Don't Make Me Over, Anyone Who Had A Heart, Walk On By, and a string of other hits featuring superb Bacharach / David songs and orchestrations and Dionne's immensely appealing, plaintive voice.

But as Aretha Franklin and Diana Ross arose to usurp her position as black music's leading lady, Dionne was also hit by the declining standards of the material which Bacharach and David gave her as they seemingly were intent on changing her into a strictly cabaret artist. Worse followed when the two writers split up.

"Burt and Hal fell out over something really trivial and it was a tragedy because I'm convinced they still had many more hits in them. Somehow, they needed each other to spark off that touch of genius. Oh there's no doubt in my mind that they were the greatest writing team ever."

Unlikely

Now there's a strong possibility of Bacharach / David getting back together again and though it's unlikely that Dionne will ever again work as closely with them as in the past she says she's certain she will end up doing a lot of their material.

But the lady now pins most of her faith in the Philly genius, Thom Bell, who took her back into the charts after a long absence when he teamed her with the Detroit Spinners for the highly catchy Then Came You.

Now Bell is getting a whole album together for Dionne, writing some fresh songs with his partner Linda Creed. "Warner Bros. have tried hard to find the right setting for my voice and this time I think it's gonna work."

other groups around." After that came a brief spell as a solo artist before Biddu decided to come over and suss out what was going down in England.

"The first year I was here I didn't do very much," Biddu confesses with a wry grin. "There was just so much about England to get into."

A year later he'd decided he wanted to get into producing and hired a studio to cut some tracks. The manager of the record company that owned the studio heard what he was doing and asked him to produce a Japanese group.

"I heard nothing for a while and a couple of months later I looked in the Billboard charts and found it was number one in Japan!"

This led to a lot more work at the console and eventually Biddu met up with Carl Douglas for the first time.

"That was in 1970 and we did a record that never came out and also the title song for the Richard Roundtree film Embassy. After that we went our separate ways."

"I realised very early on that everything I was writing and producing had a definite disco sound to it and I decided I should try and concentrate on working with black singers."

He succeeded via a reunion with Carl Douglas that spawned the eleven - million selling Kung Fu Fighting and the equally successful album that was to include the germ of what would eventually result in Blue Eyed Soul.

"What I wanted was to get across good strong melodies with a very strong backing rhythm coming through," says Biddu, explaining that the drum sound is particularly important to him: "I think that if there is a difference between what blacks and whites can do it's in the rhythms."

Surely, one retorts, Biddu doesn't subscribe to that hoary old 'all God's chillun got rhythm' notion? In a way he does, and he has a very convincing argument to back up his beliefs.

"For example, I was watching a cricket match the other day and I kept getting distracted by the way the Jamaican fans tapping out rhythms on their Coke cans. Now when you go to a football match and people sing We Are The Champions or whatever it's nowhere near as complex rhythmically."

"Of course this doesn't mean they necessarily make better music," he adds, "but they've definitely got the rhythms."

soul gossip

THE FORTHCOMING Labelle album Phoenix just completed in New Orleans by producer Allain Toussaint who also worked on highly successful Nightbirds. Al Matthews, The Pool currently topping lotsa air time down London way and could just be a biggy. Liverpool trio, The Real Thing, currently touring and recording with David Essex. Apparently David reckons he would not consider working with anyone else now. The Three Degrees have finally split from England for a while. Have no fear, though, fans. The girls will be back in March for at least two months of tours and concerts. Things all quiet on the Motown front at the moment as the London office prepares to go independent as of August. Things will pick up in the autumn, however, with tours from the Supremes (uhu) and Junior Walker and The Allstars (hooray). The Sharonettes, who enjoyed considerable disco action just recently with Papa Ooh Mow Mow, look well set to break into the national charts with their revival of Going To A Go Go. An album is currently being recorded by the group in Los Angeles for Autumn release via their Nottingham-based Black Magic label. Expect new material soon from the Ad Libs, whose classic Boy From New York City is currently enjoying a well deserved umpteenth revival.

The Impressions: First Impressions (Curton CU5003)

They were there right at the start and as this album so delightfully proves, the Impressions are still right at the top of the vocal group pantheon. In fact, listening to this record along side the original line - up's recently re - issued Big Sixteen classic one finds they have had to make remarkably few changes in their music to keep on the ball. Sure, there's splashes of wah wah here and there and some of the arrangements have a touch of Philly about them but what really counts is the song these guys sing and the impeccable way they go about doing it. Try Sooner or Later, Groove, or the title track and see if you're not completely entranced. What it is, is magnetic music for the body and soul, and the Impressions are amongst its finest purveyors. Or to put it another way, this is one damn fine record. G. D.

ALTHOUGH the exotic name probably rings a bell in a lot of folk's heads the mention of Biddu doesn't readily conjure up any specific image. In fact most people wouldn't know Biddu if they bumped into him walking down the street.

He's one of those shadowy figures in the wings, a respected and very successful producer whose work covers the vague territory that is home grown soul — particularly the block-busting Kung Fu Fighting.

Until recently, with the exception of a couple of only moderately successful singles at the very start of his career, Biddu's been quite happy to stay out of the limelight. Things are about to change however, for Biddu's just released an album of funksome instrumentals under the somewhat tongue in cheek title of Blue Eyed Soul and a single drawn from the album, Summer of '42, looks like it may well hustle its way chartwise.

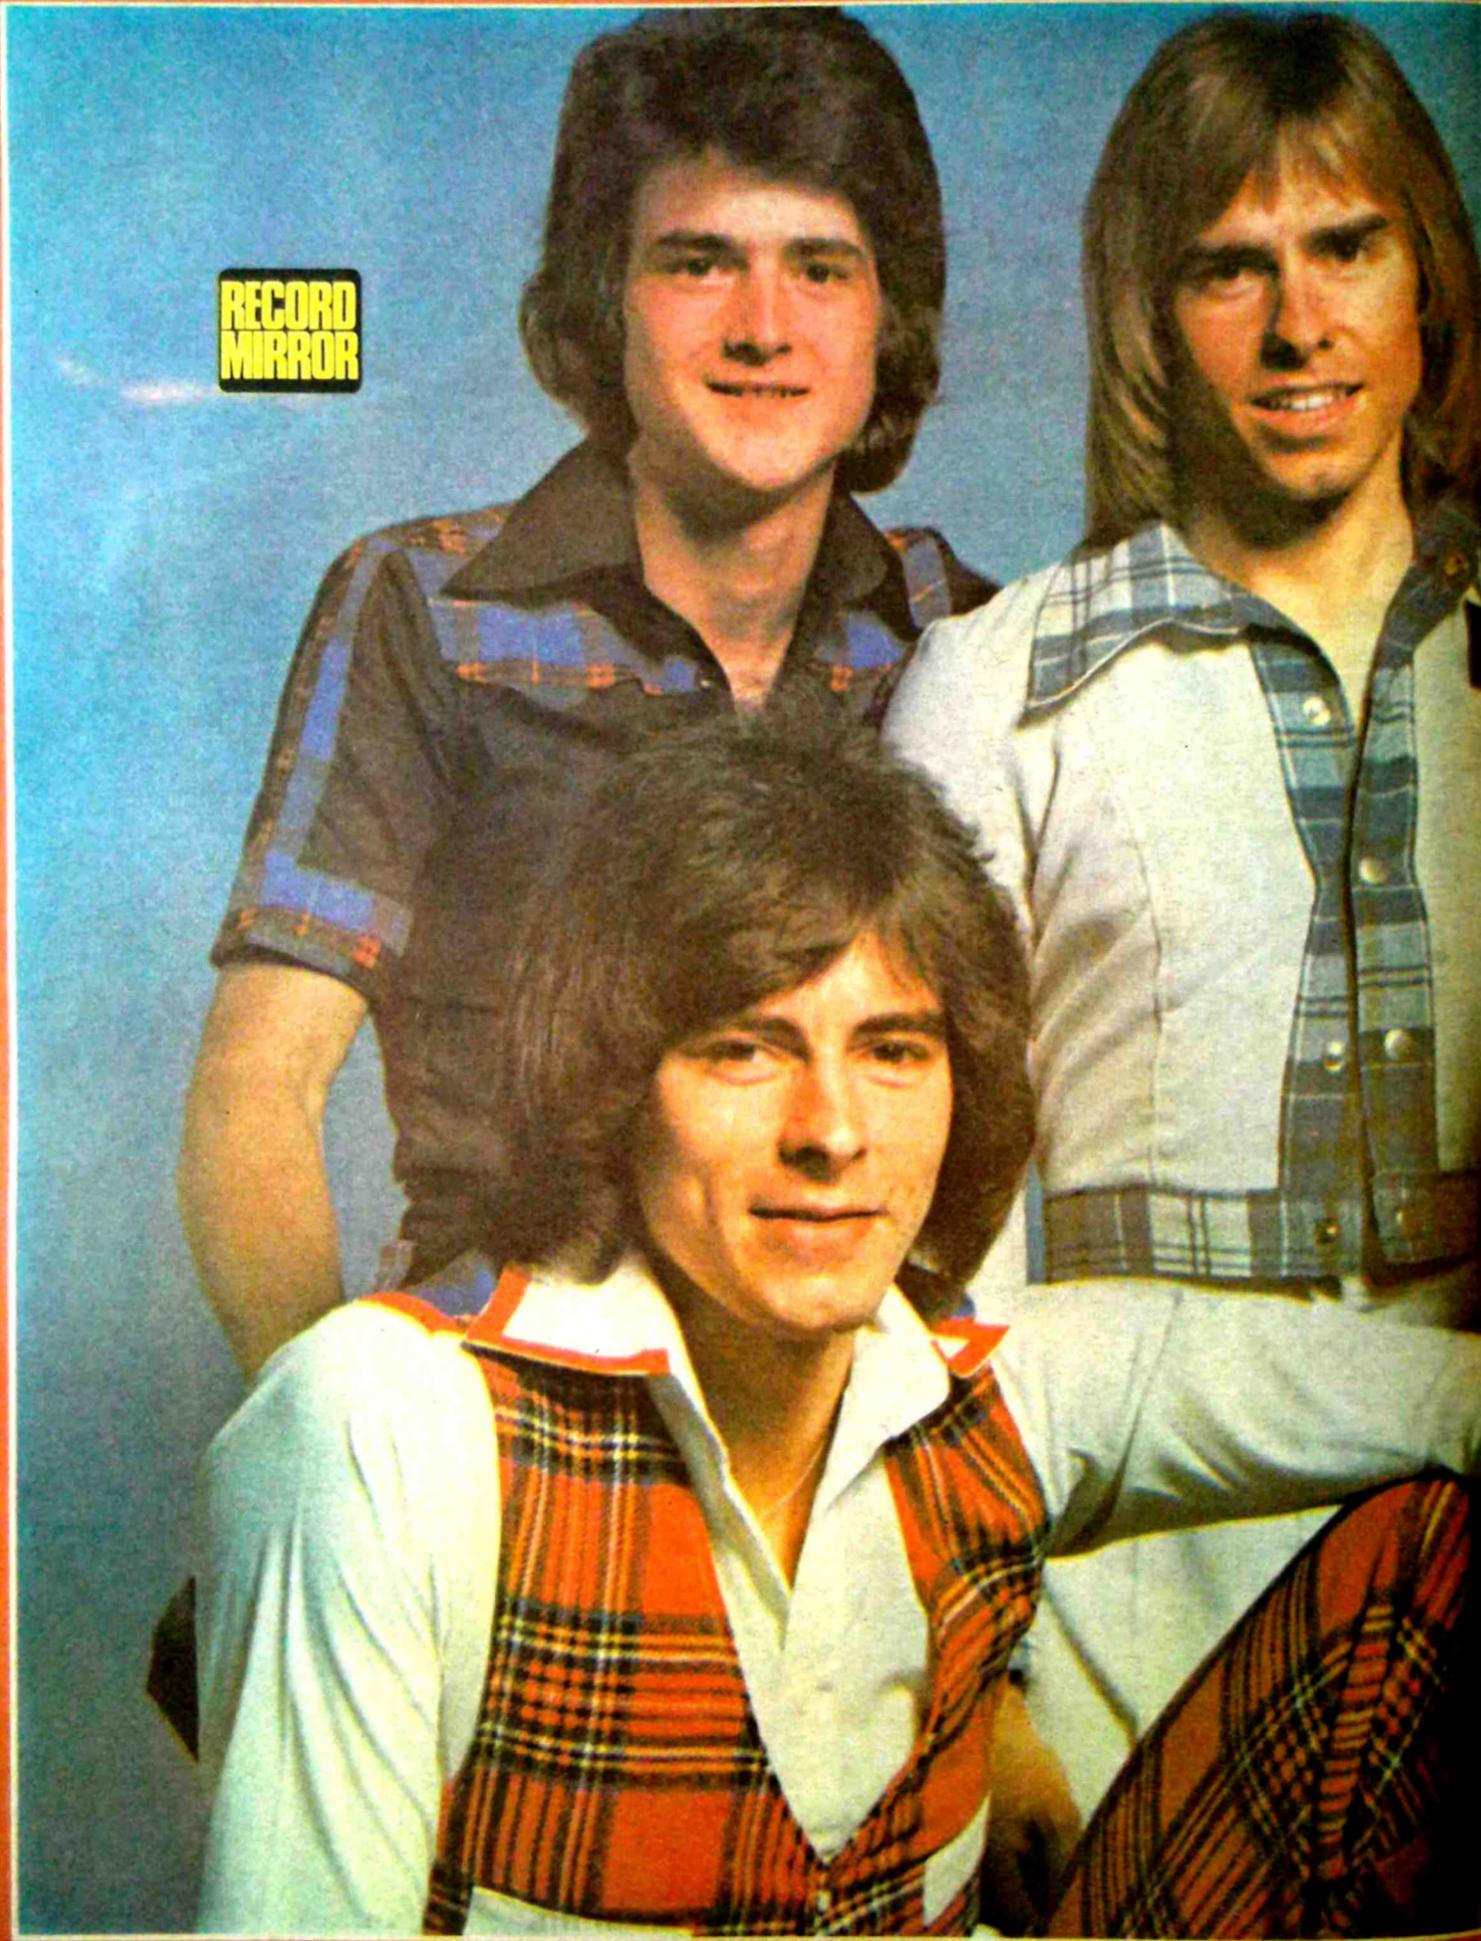

"The way it came about," Biddu explains, "is I'd put an instrumental track on the Carl Douglas album and it was getting a lot of attention, particularly in America so it seemed a good idea to put an album out along the same lines."

Biddu's career began in his Indian homeland back in the early Sixties: "I had a group that was aping the Beatles and we used to do well simply because there were no

IT'S GREAT to see how many mobile jocks are prepared to please more than just the kids.

Tom Waller (operating from 45 Argyll Place, Aberdeen) has plenty of good hints to pass on: "One mistake Mobile DJs make is to shine their lights into people's eyes — not really a good idea at bookings like wedding receptions, as most older people will only grumble. Try reflecting light shows off the walls or even the roof!" I agree, and have myself made a big thing out of lighting flower displays — about which, more another time.

Tom continues: "Mobile operators should play some slowies during a party, as nothing is more frustrating than being unable to dance up close to a beautiful girl because all the DJ plays is ravers." On the other hand, I find it's good not to get too slow as not everyone who's dancing necessarily feels that way about their partner! Tom

new spins

CLIVE BALDWIN: Now it's Paul McCartney, Stevie Wonder, Alice Cooper, Elton John (Mercury 6187170). Dawn's old Levine & Brown team have tied their yellow ribbons round the sound of Al Jolson and his Mammy on this very Dawn-like happy bouncer all about an old codger coming out of a 25 year coma and finding himself badly out of touch with contemporary music. Can't fall MoR, and I fear it's a serious rival to Harry Hastings's other bit of summer madness.

HARRY HASTING'S PALM BEACH ORCHESTRA: She's A Great Great Girl (Bell 1434). OK, enough teasing - it's rush-released this Friday! An old 1920s ditty of uncontrollable jollity, done up with synthetics and a crazily treated vocal at the very end, this is MoR silliness of the Who's Been Pollishing The Sun/The Sun Has Got His Hat On variety. Amazingly it's Phil Cordell and not Jo King who's behind it all.

ROY ORBISON: Oh Pretty Woman (Monument MNT 1054). One of the greats, from 1964 and in stereo. I nearly always segue it out of the false fade in the Beatles' Get Back, and synchronize my lights to the stomp bits.

JACKIE WILSON: Reet Petite; Whispers (Brunswick BR 23). Jackie's first, and actually far bigger here than in the States back in '57. Perfection in rhythm. Typical of Decca to make hackneyed Whispers the plug side.

LENIS GUESS: Just Ask Me (Route RT 11). Produced by Frank Guida with traces of his US Bonds sound amidst the murky churning fast excitement, this archetypal Northern classic should sell like Blackpool Rock. Lenis sings well, too.

JACKIE WILSON: perfection is rhythm.

ROY ORBISON: one of the greats.

ERNIE BUSH: Breakaway (Contempo CS 2060). Remixed within the Contempo family - a tag almost as spooky as the witchy woman words and swamp waltz strings sound - the instrumental flip version has an up-front drum kit and mandatory hi-hat chinking. Ernie walls and both decks have it.

MFSB: Sexy (Philadelphia Int PIR 3381). How long before strings and hi-hats become passe? The old payola roll blues team have given MFSB every ingredient that spells a disco hit today, but the result doesn't inspire me personally.

Straight from the States

RALPH CARTER: When You're Young And In Love (Mercury 73695). Van McCoy's song gets a busily hustling thump tempo with strings carrying the melody whenever young Ralph stops warbling (which is often, on the 5:04 disco flip). Huge in New York, maybe even bigger here.

THE JONESES: Love Inflation (Mercury 73689). Skipable CTI-type intro, then a shimmering build into pushalong rhythm and mellow vocal group work. Part 2 gets down even more and seems faster. Pussy price going up? FAMILY PLANN: Sexy Summer (Drive 6342). Stevie Wonder-type noises and herky-jerky rhythm make a bumpy ride on this TK-distributed label's Soul hit. Family Sissy? LOLEATA HOLLOWAY: I Know Where You're Coming From (Aware AW 060). My, but that's like Loretta Holloway - thinks I, without looking - is it her or her sister, maybe? Gritty then soaring soulfulness on a chix-backed medium clomper by Sam Dees. Wall on!

Re-Valli-

FRANKIE VALLI is one of those guys who is consistently hitting the charts both in this country and in America. For over a decade this slick well-groomed guy — who would make an exceptionally good Burton's mannequin — has had more hits than some poor folks have hot meals.

If you're too young to remember such smashers as Rag Doll; Silence Is Golden (also a British hit for the Tremeloes); Sherry; Let's Hang On and Big Girls Don't Cry, it's a dead cert that Mum or your trendiest Auntie will have known, loved and possibly hummed these respective bathtub tunes in their younger days.

Presently Frankie's been having monumental success with his latest records (which still carry the indelible Four Seasons style). Swearin' To God and The Night proved that Frankie has never lost his finest form and even two of his oldest — but — goodies had no trouble getting in this year's chart: the Osmonds had a hit with the Four Seasons' The Proud One and The Rollers put Bye Bye Baby into the number one slot.

Invasion

Frankie himself is most delighted about his sudden invasion of the British charts and said: "I'm very happy that these groups have covered two very fine Four Seasons' records; especially since Bye Bye Baby got to number one in the British chart."

My Eyes Adored You was part of the last session tapes the Four Seasons did for Motown and, as their contract drew to a close, Frankie decided it was time to set about finding a company which wouldn't bamboozle them.

"I took the tapes to Larry Uttal, head of Private Stock Records, who was so overwhelmed or waking up to Frankie in 1975

that he signed me up and almost immediately afterwards released My Eyes Adored You."

Although the record has only Frankie's name stamped on it, the Four Seasons are still very much in evidence.

"Yeah, I know the record featured only my name but I'm still working with the Four Seasons. I've been with them for something like 13 years and I think they're more professional than they've ever been."

Since Private Stock has brought about a revival of public interest in Frankie Valli, the maestro is getting his fair share of new followers, some of whom may never have heard his golden oldies.

"It's nice to know that a lot of young people are enjoying my music; after all I do not consciously cater for any specific audience, I want everyone to enjoy my records. Music is a universal communication and it should appeal to lots of different people, no matter what creed or whatage."

Will you then be changing your stage by Jan Iles repertoire so that it becomes more up to date?

"No", he said firmly and indignantly. "I don't think I'll change anything. I believe it's important just to be yourself. If you start to worry about your appeal and thinking you must change things to keep up with the current trends or whatever, then I think you destroy what you had."

Indeed, the mighty philosopher knows exactly what he's preaching. You can't be in this business for over fourteen years and not have been affected by the perpetual coming and going of talent.

Since Frankie's high school days as a good clean all Yankee kid, he has always been involved with music. He has used his inimitable golden larynx for many moons and still it sounds as fine as ever.

Charisma

"I think voices improve with age, just the same as wine. Take a look at Sinatra, his voice is just as pleasing to the ear as the day he started. OK it may have got slightly deeper, but because of this there's a richness that wasn't apparent before."

"Provided you leave the cigarettes alone and don't keep late hours you've no need to worry about losing your voice or your appeal or whatever. I also think that a lot of individual love and caring about what you do plus an incredible amount of looking after yourself is all you need."

And here endeth the first lesson.

Action with Sweet

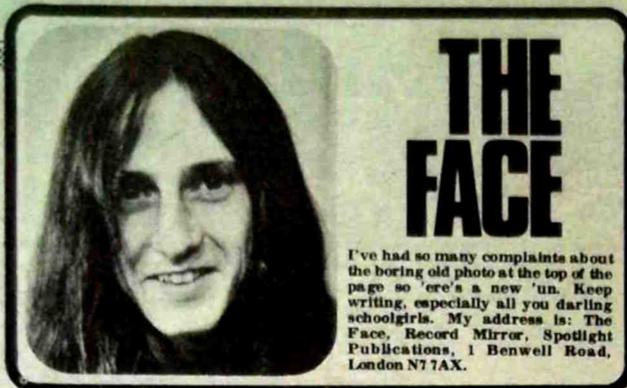

Spot the boob

Dear Face,
Why in this week's American Charts (July 5th) have you got a heading Albums with the singles underneath it and the heading Singles with the albums underneath it?
Capital Radio Fan, Barnet.

You completely fell for our deliberate mistake. We thought we'd make a mistake so all you intellectuals out there could waste your money by writing in and pointing it out.

Sensible

Dear Face,
Well said!! I am referring to the letter from Jane Gadd, Southend in the July 5 issue of Record Mirror. How right she is and I would like to congratulate her for being sensible. I was beginning to think that there was no one left with any sense. The Rollers will never reach the same standards as Quo, Zeppelin or The Pretty Things. For a start they can play music!!! There is nothing to the Rollers' music and if those children would stop screaming and listen then they would realize that for themselves.

I've had so many complaints about the boring old photo at the top of the page so 'ere's a new 'un. Keep writing, especially all you darling schoolgirls. My address is: The Face, Record Mirror, Spotlight Publications, 1 Benwell Road, London N7 7AX.

Tricia, Warwickshire
I'm surprised that people who read Record Mirror remember The Pretty Things. Mind you it's a good job they do.

Shut up

Dear Face,
Why oh why, on the programme Shang A Lang do the girls scream and shout? If they like the Rollers music that much then they should shut up and listen.
Carol Jenkins, Glamorgan.

I saw the programme for the first time last week and quite agree with you. I was amused by Derek Longmuir trying to interview Russell Harty.

Miles apart

Dear Face,
Having just heard some new Sutherland Brothers and Quiver tracks on John Peel's thingy on Radio 1, I have come to the conclusion that the group have surpassed their highest expectations. In fact, they are so talented they can play 300 miles apart, in Newcastle and Uxbridge, on the same night! At least that's what your Who When and Where guide said in the June 28 issue.

OLIVIA NEWTON-JOHN
Olivia Newton John fan, Blackburn.

You've got me there. Gig compiler please explain. "Och well, its quite simple really the noo. Just a mental breakdown an all that och aye!"

Wembley twit

Dear Face,
How dare an Elton John fan write to you saying that the aforementioned twit put the rest of the Wembley bill to shame, especially the Beach Boys who were playing gigs before Elton John was heard of. The twit who wrote in was probably still wetting his / her nappies when the Beach Boys first arrived.
Beach Boys fan, Luton.

Okay cool down, that's enough letters about Wembley, how about picking on Knebworth?

Smelly

Dear Face,
Answer these questions if you dare. Why do heavy rock fans read Record Mirror? Are Roller slagers really ego tripping child bashers? Why is an intellectual pop hater doing the Record Mirror letters page? Do I smell a conspiracy?
Alex Harvey fan, Brighton.

In case they run short of loo paper: don't know ask me mum; because I like getting letters from schoolgirls; maybe I should change my deodorant.

Currying favour

Dear Face,
I think that pop stars with curry stains over their shirts are fab. Hear the album Eddy And The Falcons to find out what I mean. I also think you should go on parade in panties, a girdle, a garter and a scarf with Elton John on it.
Mrs Jullay, No Address.

Supply the goods darling, and I'll wear them.

Psychic

Dear Face,
How kind of Miss Jane Gadd to enlighten us with her astounding knowledge and psychic powers and letting all us stupid Bay City Rollers fans know that the Rollers have only another year to go as a top group. I hope she'll forgive us for insulting her obvious intelligence, for obviously only intelligent people like, Floyd, Zeppelin, Pretty Things (whoever they are) and Quo. My advice to Miss Gadd is to crawl back into the hole from whence she came.

A devout stupid Roller fan, Stockwell.

For your information the Pretty Things have been around since 1963 and were one of the founder members of the British R&B boom.

No chance

Dear Face,
My life was dull and boring, as dull as dull can be. Until a friend did lend me the magnificent Led Zep Three.

I listened to it every night, the music knocked me flat. And then 10 months later, I had to give it back.

I saved up week after week, until I was almost poor. But now the time now had come, And I bought Led Zep 4.

Wow, great fab, superb. I liked it by the way. It was really great of Zep, to come and save my day.

I'd like to get their new one, that great new double L.P. But yet again I'm short of money. So I'd dig your £2.50. Tony Horkins, Middlesex.

I don't allow ligging in this column so no £2.50 for you, mate.

Alvin

BUZZING AGAIN

by Ray Fox-Cumming

A STAR, says Alvin Stardust, should never believe what's written about him or her in the Press.

"If it's good publicity," he reasons, "it makes you too cocky, and if it's bad, you get depressed."

There was one unfavourable article on Alvin, however, which appeared in a music paper a couple of months back and did him a lot of good.

"This girl reporter came to see me and when she wrote up her piece, she said that I'd been very disappointing to talk to and far more interested in my chicken sandwich than in making conversation.

"That was good journalism, because she'd written what she honestly thought and she was dead right — I was more interested in my sandwich than talking to her. I'd been working non-stop for too long and I was tired, jaded and bored."

So when Alvin read the plain unadorned truth as the lady presented it, he decided to do something about the situation.

"That article made me realise that it was time to call a halt. There are one or two isolated dates left, but otherwise I shan't work again — on the road, that is — until October."

Already he's found time for a spot of holiday and, just back from Majorca, is looking suntanned and extremely fit. Mentally too, he's feeling in much better shape.

"I'm buzzing again and I'm slightly off-balance because I'm talking too much."

Alvin's new state of euphoria is in no way blunted by the slow progress of his latest single, Sweet Cheatin' Rita.

"No, I'm not worried about that at all, because, when it came out, we decided to let it ride for a week or two before doing any big promotion on it. It's made the breakers without any help so really it hasn't done too badly."

Now, with a string of TV appearances, Alvin's busy giving Rita the big push.

Previous Alvin hits

have been both written and produced by Peter Shelley, but this time Roger Greenaway and Geoff Stephens have done the honours instead.

The retiring Mr Shelley, who always seemed as if he wished the ground would swallow him up once a record of his made the charts, has now apparently decided to set seriously about carving out a career for himself as a performing artist — and even plans to do a tour.

Pressure

He remains a close friend and adviser of Alvin's, but clearly wants to shed the pressure of always being responsible for giving Alvin the songs and producing them for him.

"A new writer and producer brings a fresh approach to things," says Alvin. "I was asked who I'd like to work with and I said 'Roger Greenaway', although I never imagined he'd have the time spare to do it. Luckily though, he did and was enthusiastic about the idea."

Alvin says that he is intending to get into production himself and is busy looking for bands to work with, but he is not likely to produce his own records.

Alvin's most immediate task is to record a new album. "I'm very excited about it, because we'll be attempting some different things this time." He is also going to record some of his own songs, although he doesn't know whether they'll ever be released either on singles or albums.

While Alvin is busy in the studio, his group, The Heartbeats are touring without him right through the summer.

"My band is the best on the road for my kind of music," he proclaims. "You know, people think I'm very flash, but we're a very straight group live. We have perhaps the smallest lighting rig on the road today, and a modest PA — there's not loads of echo and there's no special mixing. I don't go on all in leather doing the arms bit either."

Off-duty, Alvin claims to be a bit of a loner. "I like spending a lot of time by myself. Not many people say that and mean it, but I do. I like the togetherness of relationships, but I like to be able to step away from it all sometimes."

But doesn't that work out rather hard on your family?

"Yes," he admits ruefully. "I think it does."

In an attempt to sum himself up, he says: "My main interests in life are music, my mates and women — in that order."

"I'm not an ordinary guy. I do a lot of things most people don't do and I don't do a lot of things most people do do." Then, as an afterthought, he adds: "Personally I think I must be a bit kooky. Anyone must be kooky to stay in this business."

Osmonds get stuck in the dark ages

DONNY AND MARIE OSMOND: Make The World Go Away; (MGM SUPER 2315343).

Donny and Marie sing a variety of by-gone hits in their own syrupy style that Uncle Walf crooned and mooned in June 1948. It seems that sis and bruv perpetually get stuck in that old-fashioned groove even though they are fundamentally catering for people under twenty. Me thinks that youngsters should be treated to slightly more contemporary sounds. I mean Make The World Go Away; It's All In The Game and I Will surely must have gone out with high hats. JL

THE STYLISTICS: Thank You Baby (Avco 9109 005).

Their recent album, The Best Of The Stylistics, stayed at the top of the album charts for quite a few weeks, and is still up there. Already nuzzling it, and likely to go up to the top as well, is this new collection of songs, including Sing Baby Sing, all arranged and conducted by Van McCoy, now also a hit artist in his own right. The Stylistics are a great sounding band whether they're singing ballads or up-tempo numbers, and on this album they've come up with a mixed selection of moods and tempos that work perfectly. Can't Give You Anything is a good example of the band at their partying best. Whilst the title track which opens the first side shows their slower pace. SB

PETER SKELLERN: Hold On To Love (Decca SKL 5211).

A massive and deadly dose of Skellern as we know him on singles. His thick as pea soup voice sighs its way ponderously through song after oh so similar song with just the occasional desultory lunge at a high note. The brass sounds as if it scarcely had the energy to drag itself out of bed to attend the session and the strings are fairly bleary too. Taken one at a time, Skellern's songs can be haunting, but strung together on an LP they are merely soporific. RF-C

FRANK ZAPPA AND THE MOTHERS OF INVENTION: One Size Fits All (Discreet K59207).

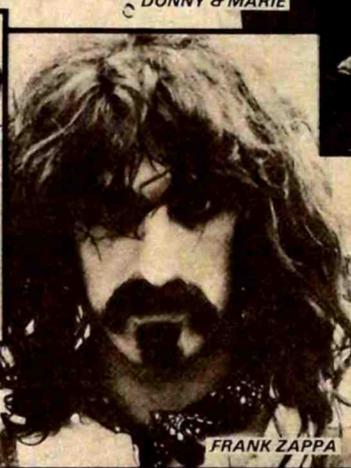

Well wadya know? Zappa can still do it. Instead of churning out another morbid mess like Over-Nite Sensation and Apostrophe, he's used the breather that the live double set gave him and managed to come up with the goods, swiping at UFOs, the recession, and people who wear pyjamas. Zappa's back to his cynical amusing best. The new Mothers are

Jr WALKER

JR WALKER & THE ALL STARS (Tamla Motown STML 11274).

Alright howdy fancy Stevie Wonder playing along with the superior sax of Junior Walker? There are three Stevie Wonder toons and Stevie plays on two — Sunshine Of My Life and All In Love Is Fair. But the first side tracks which follow don't reach the same standard. Walker's arrangements included here, contains lovely crystalline high hittin' oohs and arrhs which would even put the likes of Minnie Rip in the shade. Although Linda has penned only four of the ten tracks, her writing is still bouncing with wit and vitality, as demonstrated on My Grandaddy Used To Reggae. Go home and play her LP sometime, you'll be nicely surprised. JL

JACKSON 5: Moving Violation (Tamla Motown STML 11290).

Dependent on how much J5 material Tamla have in the can, we might well hear a different sound from the group in the future. With the exception of Jermaine, they have signed with a new recording company. This album is pretty much an up-tempo one, lots of fast funky numbers, with a couple of slower songs to cool things down. Somehow, Michael's voice sounds higher than it has done recently, which if anything, dates the sound by taking it back to ABC days. There's nothing fundamentally wrong with the overall sound of this LP, but perhaps there could have been a bit more variation in tempo and pitch. It's a marking-time album, rather than a progression. SB

ROCK FLASHBACKS: Focus (Polydor 2384 070). ERIC BURDON AND THE ANIMALS (Polydor 2356 142). FAIRPORT CONVENTION (2384 047). PINK FAIRIES (Polydor 2384 071). MEDICINE HEAD (Polydor 2384 069).

Second set of flashback albums with not so impressive line-up of artists, but still fine value. The Focus album contains tracks culled from the band's first three albums — In And Out Of Focus, Moving Waves, Focus 111 — which means tracks like Hocus Pocus, Focus, House Of The King and Sylvia. The Animals album isn't as impressive. All the songs instantly identifiable as Animal music are missing, but there is a pretty good version of CC Rider and a powerful, more than wonderful version of River Deep Mountain High. Though rough in places, that Animal strength is present throughout. Fairport have been through a lot of line-up and musical changes since the tracks on their flashback album were first laid down. The music on the album bears little resemblance to their current work, but tracks like Chelsea Morning are enjoyable folkies. This is Fairport playing comparatively simple stuff, but it's how the band began. All albums sell at £1.47. MT tighter and even more energized than ever and the vocals, with lotsa answer-back lines, are right back in the classic Mothers' tradition. No one who has ever enjoyed Zappa's music can fail to like this LP — and from the same session, there's another LP to come. Hold On To Love. PH

RON WOOD: Now Look (Warner Bros. K56145).

Here is it then, number two in the Wood session series. Usual line-up: McLagan, Weeks, Newmark, a little of Richard, and a lot of funk merchant Bobby Womack. And there's a lotta funk both slow and fast. Great musicianship, little rehearsal, mainly untegether throughout. First side better than the first, I Can't See The Rain the best track. Nothing revolutionary overall. But Ronnie had a good time. MT

DEAN FORD: Dean Ford (EMC 3079).

This man used to sing with the Marmalade and also wrote a few of their hits. He's in a difficult position 'cause it's been a year since that band broke up and not too many people are going to remember him. His voice, though, is memorable. He sings with a lot of charm and though the songs are too laid back for most, there's real quality in the production. But that doesn't make up for Dean's lacklustre songs. Individually they're OK, but an LP's worth merges into a dull blur. PH

JAMES TAYLOR & THE ORIGINAL FLYING MACHINE: Rainy Day Man (DJM 2007).

Before anyone thinks this is a hasty follow-up release to the Gorilla album, it is in fact, an album of material recorded by Taylor and friends in his pre-Apple days. Musicians who play on this collection include Danny Kortchmar and Al Gorgoni, and apart from their musical abilities, you can also hear them chatting and looning about in the studios while actually recording. It's a bit on the short side, which is why it's going out for £1.75. As a collector's item, it's obviously of interest, and tracks you'll hear, apart from the title track, include Night Owl and Something's Wrong. SB

SOMEONE SAVED MY LIFE TONIGHT

When I think of those East End lights
Muggy nights
The curtains drawn in the little room
downstairs
Prima Donna Lord you really should have been there
Sitting like a Princess
Perched in her electric chair
And it's one more beer
And I don't hear you anymore
We've all gone crazy lately
My friends out there
Rolling round the basement floor.

Chorus:
And someone saved my life tonight
Sugar bear
You almost had your hooks in me
Didn't you dear
You nearly had me roped and tied
Allar bound hypnotised
Sweet freedom whispered in my ear
You're a butterfly
And butterflies are free to fly
Fly away
High away
Bye bye.

Words by Bernie Tanpin
Sung by ELTON JOHN

I never realised the passing hours of evening showers
A slip nose hanging in my darkest dreams
I'm strangled by your haunted social scene
Just a pawn
Outplayed by a dominating queen
It's 4 am in the morning — damn it
Listen to me good
I'm sleeping with myself tonight
Saved in time thank God my music's still alive.
(repeat chorus)

And I would've walked head on into the deep end of a river
Clinging to your stocks and bonds
Paying your HP demands forever
They're coming in the morning
With a truck to take me home
Someone saved my life tonight . . . (repeat five times)
So save your strength and run the field you play alone.
(repeat chorus and fade)

Outside the hall there were ambulances, police — and the tartan hordes, ready to make up for having had to wait.

Federation, a local band, opened the concert, and did themselves proud. They presented a good set of well-known material, but also showed a strong leaning to soul, with a Stevie Wonder medley as well as numbers like Labelle's Lady Marmalade. The crowd, who can easily dishearten any band when all they really want to see are the Rollers, gave them a good reception at the end, and then it was settle - down time: scarves out and ready to wave.

A clever intro tape by compere Dave Eager had the fans exposed to a fearful form of torture — snatches of Rollers' records interspersed with much longer snatches of the Blue Danube! Still, they'd have swayed along to Teddy Bears Picnic that night.

Then, to a deafening roar, Derek clambered onto his drum stage, and they were on, with Les skipping about to Shang-A-Lang. From that time on, it was bedlam all the way, but controlled bedlam. The group were obviously in very good humour, with Les pouring coke down one of Derek's boots during one number, and much grinning at each other. Whilst it's now generally accepted that no-one gets to hear much during a Rollers' concert, it was evident to us at the back at least, that there were some awful feedback problems during the set.

Far too soon for the crowd, Les told them it was time for the last number — appropriately enough, Bye Bye Baby. A quick bow at the end, and then a running trot off stage, leaving the road crew to pick up the scarves and teddies that cluttered the stage. When the fans were finally convinced that they weren't going to get any more, they made their dazed way outside, comparing tear stains and memories. One girl who's had her hand kissed by Les during Give A Little Love, stood staring with total disbelief at her fingers, and had to be led gently outside. She stood there, while another not-so-gentle fan was delivering the coup de grace to a poor St. John's Ambulance man by way of a quick knees up to a crucial area. The poor lad dropped to his knees, and had to be hastily administered to by a colleague. They're dedicated these fans, that's for sure. SUE BYROM

Welshum squelshum

10cc / Cardiff Castle
WHOEVER SAID: "It never rains but it pours" was a Welshman and what's more, he'd just been to 10cc's Cardiff Castle gig on Saturday. 15,000 amazingly patient fans dripped and squelched their way through four hours of music and three hours of waiting round between sets.

Thin Lizzy sang up a storm or rather, through it, and bejeezus, they worked hard to get things rocking. They looked marvellous and the crowd were beginning to think "well, maybe the rain's not so wet after all" then Man came on. Playing to a partisan ground who were rootin' for them before Martin Ace had plucked his G string, they blew it. Why? They were self-indulgent musically, unexciting visually. Steeleye Span stopped the rain. Well, it ceased, cos no-one, even 'IM wants to Mess with Maddy Prior. For the first time that day we heard "More!" It was 10.45 before 10cc stormed into Silly Love after sound problems had been sorted out. Fireworks greeted the opening chords; in fact, the whole new light show was very impressive. All the guys have really got their stage act together and are visually as well as musically exciting these days. Chunks from Sheet Music, including the haunting Old Wild Men, went down a treat and that well-known French tart, Kevin Godley, excelled himself on One Night in Paris. Eric took over, still insisting 'I'm Not in Love, OK sweetheart, who loves you, baby? Three stormers closed the show Minestrone, Wall Street Shuffle and finally Rubber Bullets, extended into a rock and roll finale. And the rain? What rain? JAN ETHINGTON

YORKSHIRE'S RADIO Hallam has upped its rock programming to 12 hours each week. From Wednesday through to Saturday, three hours each night are devoted to hard, soft and heavy rock sounds between the hours of 8 and 11. Presenters are Johnny Moran

Quickies . . .

Such a wide opinion over one record in the past few days. Capital Radio chose This Pull-over by Jess Conrad as one of the worst ever records. Decca decided on the strength (or weakness?) of that to release it and hey presto it's Tony Blackburn's Radio One record of the week. Ah Ha!

Radio One highlights of the coming week: John Cale and Joan Armatrading guest with John Peel Thursday (17) while Saturday (19) presents Rick Wakeman's Top Twelve with In Concert arriving later in the day hosted by Alan Black - who introduces Hudson - Ford and a Band Called O Sunday (20). Part two of Insights' Six Days On The Road focuses on a performance from Slade at the New Victoria Theatre. Al Newman's Jazz Ensemble and the Sioux City Seven are guests on Sounds of Jazz. Pete Clayton's Sunday night look into the world of jazz.

Radios City, Clyde and Capital are increasing their advertisement rates by an average of about 30 per cent. This is probably because of possible price freezing around the corner. Capital, even with the top 40 countdown, Kenny Everett and Gerald Harper at weekends, are still thin on advertising. The other stations all have the same problem, though one station not yet on the air received a great financial shot in the arm. At Ipswich, Radio Orwells share issue went successfully following recent disappointments at Wolverhampton and Reading. £340,000 was raised with no problem whatsoever, major investors being EMI, Anglia TV and Hong Kong Commercial Broadcasting. (East meets East?) In fact so successful was the issue it was credited as such on BBC Radio 4's Financial World Programme - surely the first time the Beeb have acknowledged the existence of a commercial radio station? Orwell (when on air) will join Swansea and Tees on 257m, which for Caroline freaks could be very interesting owing to the closeness of the boat on the waves of air and sea.

Bradford's Penline I.L.R. has announced the names of On Air staff. With Adrian Mitchell and Stevie Merlake are Roger Kirk, Liz Allan, Peter Levy, Stuart Francis and stand - by for two genuine guys, Julius K. Scraggs and the Rev. Paul Needle. Penline obviously aims to have its audience rocking in the aisles. Former ITN newscaster and diplomatic correspondent Ian Trethowan of BBC Radio is to succeed Huw Wheldon as Managing Director of BBC Television at the end of this year. Because of this move other musical chairs will break into action. Director of Programming Howard Newby will take over from Trethowan. His position will be filled by the present head of Radios 1 and 2, Douglas Muggidge. The filler of that gap will be - well never mind we could go on forever!

Dave Gregory, Metro's breakfast presenter, has joined the growing ranks of early rising strugglers. After seven months of getting up early he's decided to forego the dawn chorus in favour of a 4-30 to 6-30 slot as of last Monday (14th). Bill Steel replaces Dave, who himself replaced Don Dwyer, an Australian who decided to go off on a tour of the US. Metro's audience, by the way, has increased by some 50 per cent since the last survey in 1974, and is second only to Radio One. 37 per cent of radios in the area tune in to Metro and for 7.8 hours a week as opposed to the 1974 figure of 5.6.

TAKE THE MONEY... OR OPEN THE BOX?

ALICE COOPER, king of Shockrock, has been given the Key to New Orleans. Along with the key he was also given a document, sent by the Attorney General, making Alice the first rock 'n roll star ever named as Honorary Senator of the State of Louisiana.

To make the presentation was Greater Councilman Frank Friedman, pictured with Coop.

If that ain't enough, the shrewd shark has also recently become a Deputy Sheriff of Davidson County and has been invited by the Los Angeles City Bicentennial Committee to join the Arts Team. I tell you all, this boy's even more popular than the president!

Who's who?

THERE IS a track on Roger Daltrey's new album Ride A Rock Horse called Milk Train. And there are a couple of guys called Bugatti and Musker who wrote it.

And they wrote it after seeing the Who on BBC2's Second House programme so it's fitting that Daltrey should use it on his album. But Daltrey did not hear the track until seven months after it had been written. It was after Frank Musker had been introduced to Daltrey and spent a day in the studio with him.

Telly switched off

TELLY SAVALAS and his third wife, British-born Sally Adams, have split after less than a year of marriage and, while neither of the unhappy couple have had much to say on the matter to the world's Press as yet, Savalas' 14-year-old daughter has not been silent. According to her, Daddy is "insecure, sentimental and sensitive," which makes him sound just the sort of pet you might take in exchange for a neurotic St. Bernard.

But what of the third Mrs. S? Bet she ain't feeling so "sentimental." In fact, if she's sickened, simmering and set to screw him for every penny he's got, we won't say a word against her.

REFLECTIONS

EDITED BY PETER HARVEY

Sssh..

TENNIS SHORTS were never so cool, honestly don't be surprised if Bob Marley's wearing - at what promises to be the only really hot gig in London this summer - Lycium, right? Meanwhile those Rollers are still searching for property, Epping Forest being the latest bet. But what about Showaddywaddy? Aren't they taking the revival business just too far? Dave Clarke's Bits And Pieces is next in line. And on to the Glitterband. They were heard loudly discussing the disgusting price of luxuries at Arista's sooper-champagne special at Lingfield races on Saturday. To Bell / Arista anyway, the Lig Of The Week Cornucopia Colossus award - it was too smashing! And the summer seems to be having the same affect on Gary Glitter. "I wish I could find someone to fall in love with he says" - Any offers? Certain non-starters are Gloria Jones, Diana Ross and Yoko Ono - they are all pregnant. And talking of Yoko, she and John were so pleased to be back together they sent 250 of their closest friends (yeah) bath towels embroidered with: "John and Yoko together again." Isn't love grand? John even kissed David Bowie when they met at another award presentation rehearsal in New York. David reportedly rushed to the mirror to make sure his hair was still in place. And finally, it's so hot dear, Eric Burdon - who uses to be an Animal - has a kinetic four-colour, dayglow octagonal sleeve for his Stop I.P. The package will also contain a record... BYE BYE.

ROLAN BOLAN

SINCE THE departure of his wife June, Marc Bolan has been getting pretty friendly with singer Gloria Jones - so much so that a picture of the pair of them appeared in a national paper this week with him looking like Bowie and her like a swollen black barrage balloon, expecting his child. The unfortunate offspring, when it arrives and be it a he or a she, is to be named Rolan Bolan.

Says Bolan: "Bowie called his kid Zowie Bowie and I can't let him get away with that." Nought out of ten for originality and a complaint to the NSPCC might not go amiss.

Cardiff-lock-out

ACCORDING TO one source, at least 12,000 people were turned away from 10cc's Cardiff Castle concert last week. And that includes Mr and Mrs Andrew Evans who had booked the Castle for their wedding for the same day as the concert.

However their fate was a lot better than the soaked thousands outside the concert. They finally got married at Cardiff City Hall, and amongst the greetings telegrams - yes, one from 10cc. Pic shows the queue outside the castle.

Gladiatorock

BAD COMPANY are to headline the first day of a three day rock festival at an ancient Roman Amphitheatre in France.

The festival at Orange, near Arles in the Provence region of France will take place over three days from August 15. Among other bands playing will be Wishbone Ash, John Cale, Mahavishnu Orchestra, Jerry Garcia, Procol Harum, Fairport Convention and former Animal Eric Burdon.

The promoters are hoping for a sell-out as it is to be held at the peak of the holiday season. It's one up on killing Christians anyway.

KUNG SUNG

KUNG FU star David Carridine has an album out later this year called Grasshopper. It contains self-penned material and will be backed by a promotional visit to England in the Autumn - to give sales a kick up the pants no doubt.

BIG-LADY

LILIAN BRON has been appointed managing director of Bronze Records, a move which it is thought makes her the first female managing director of a UK record company.

AND SO the story goes... watching a ladies wrestling match in Hull, Nell Innes (Bonzos, Rutland TV and now Grimes) fell in love with the Red Bombshell. He and the band just had to write a song. It's called Backbreaker and any similarity to the sound of the Beach Boys / Rubettes, is purely intentional. Oh yes, here's Nell with his new found love.
